Originally concerned with little more than policing, they scoured the empire for shapers who, in their eyes, were abusing their powers and who had become a threat to the empire and the safety of its people. The measures by which they dictated who was at fault were largely arbitrary in this time, leading to a deep schism between them and shapers, which many historians now claim worsened the situation.

By c. 900 RM they had begun to enforce standardised teaching practices that were identical across the empire, leading to a homogenisation of many shaping traditions and the death of the shaper as an expression of individualism. Over time they would be supplanted by the more modern VÁMAN ORDER, which was formally recognised in 1196 RM and whose actions were directly responsible for the establishment of the MINASTERIA^(2,) of Shaping and the GREAT CULLING that took place between c. 1310 – 1345 RM, in which thousands of shapers were killed or forcibly put into training. The Paladins of the Shadow dwindled within decades of the Váman Order's founding.

PALADINS OF ST. ORSORA: see St. Orsora, Paladins of.

PALADINS OF THE WALL: Mil. Org. Specialised rank within the KYONI ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION, granted to individuals (typically members of the FISTS OF KYON or the GATEWATCH) who are recognised as exemplary members of the Order, and who are granted commissions in areas of strategic importance around the empire, typically in fortress cities, where they work with the local IRON GUARD as attachés, where they help to coordinate defence strategies.

PALAEST: Set. Settlement in the south west of LYRIDIA in the north of the SOLLANDITH hills. It was once home to a large stone quarry, which supplied building materials to the entire western area of LYRIDIA, though the quarry was spent in c. 3400 RM. since then the quarry has been converted to brick yards (Pop. c. 14,000).

PALAGASTAS CABAL, the: Org. Soc. VENTHIRI secret society whose members are dedicated to furthering the propaganda of QUEEN HETEPHERES outside of Venthir, particularly around the DARK SEA REGION. They cabal has agents in major cities across the region, where they pose as diplomats within consulates, subtly pushing their own agenda and aggrandising the accomplishments of Hetepheres.

It is believed that this is merely a front for a darker more secretive goal, though what that could be remains unknown.

PALARAEL: 1. Rel. An angel in the religion of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, often thought to be an unborn OTHERWORLDER, who chose to remain in the otherworld as a psychopomp to spirits, instead of being reborn on the material plane. It is seen as a guardian of the dead and the living, alike.

2. Mil. Veh. One of three battleships (the others being the ATHILIEL and the USOLAHON) that was constructed in NOAVATUR in 1303 RM, in preparation of war with KORACHAN following its declaration of independence.

PALATINE: 1. Rel. Mar. Rnk. Supreme guardians of the KORACHANI faith and doctrine as set down by the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. They are recruited from orphaned or abandoned children left with the presbyters in Imperial cities. Many such orphans die before they are old enough to walk, their ailments too much for even the priests' faith to counteract. Those strong enough go through a lifetime of training and teaching that bestow upon them an unflinching belief in the words of the Church of the Undving Machine.

Church outsiders regard the palatines with awe (due to their ties with the church) and no small measure of fear. They operate as an entity outside of the imperial army, though have access to equipment and training that rivals those of the STEEL LEGION or other elite military groups, such as the WHITE LEAGUE or the KNIGHTS FERROUS. They answer only to their direct superiors within the church, and the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR himself.

Five years of service grant palatines a title and land, making them akin to PATRICIANS but wholly different, leading to no small amount of enmity between the two groups. The position of palatine is not hereditary, so the children of knighted palatines cannot follow in their parents' footsteps.

2. Mil. Rak. PARTHISAN elite troops.

PARD: Set. Coastal settlement in the west of the PARTHISAN colony of ABDAKROS^(1.) on the island of IRUGNA^(1.). Its primary industry is fishing (Pop. c. 4,600).

PALE ONES: also 'ammasilin'. Sup. Mor. Corrupted MORTALS. Akin to ghouls, they are the remnants of inbred cannibals, native to the desert of SALITH in the north west of SAMMAEA. Oral histories of the region claim their ancestors sold their spirits to SIELLA in a distant age, though the prize they were promised (whatever it was) became corrupted by the dying world.

The ammasilin are sedentary creatures, rarely leaving their lands. They construct chalk-like huts to escape the harsh light of the white desert they call home and emerge at night, where they can scavenge for grubs and other foot. When confronted with other intelligent life they become incredibly fearful and often supplicate themselves before those they encounter. This has led to a great many of them becoming slaves in neighbouring city-states, particularly \underline{DAAZ} and \underline{RAS} .

PALEG: Set. Coastal stilt-settlement in the south west of NAARETH, overlooking the ROILING SEA (Pop. c. 8,000).

PALELING: Lan. Mil. common KORACHANI vernacular within the Korachani army for inexperienced CLONES. The term is derogatory and disliked by clones.

PALINGENESIS: also 'Physiocofermentation'. Med. Mys. Sup. The science of restoring life to individuals through a fragment of their deceased body (typically a piece of skin or flesh). Though bandied about like a modern scientific interpretation of ancient ALCHYMICAL or mystical resurrection, this is closer to CLONING than it is to ancient alchymical beliefs that bodies could be regrown from ashes. Indeed, true cloning as we know it today (the ability to artificially grow fully-functional beings from scratch) is only possible through advances made in palingenesis throughout the 2nd and 3nd millennia RM.

Palingenesis originated as the ancient alchymical belief that a plant or animal could be reborn through the ashes of its last incarnation, known as ESSENTIAL SALTS. Despite many claims and various successful displays of this being done, this primitive mystical belief is now thought to have been little more than charlatanism. However, this did eventually give rise to more scientific schools of thought that in turn led to the creation of the first HAEMONCULI in c. 740 RM – a feat only made possible through the direct application of ATRAMENTAL procedures and TECHNARCANE incubators and inceptors. Though this was inherently a different discipline to that of palingenesis – with the former being the creation of a new being through various means, and the latter being the recreation of a specific individual from its deceased remains – advances in one field fed directly into research in the other, with one advancing one step behind the other and vice versa.

All classical attempts at palingenesis, regardless of contemporary claims to the opposite, are now thought to have been fraudulent, or at the very least misinformed examples of primitive cloning. The true breakthrough came much more recently in 2153 RM, following the creation of the first LARVAE mere decades earlier, when FLESHWRIGHTS and ATRAMENTISTS in PARTHIS (then independent after many years of KORACHANI subjugation) were able to construct a large technarcane engine what was able to take parts of flesh from a deceased human and shape them independently of each other into a skeleton, nervous and circulatory systems, and organs. The result was far from what you would call a success, but it proved it could be done. Different iterations of this engine followed over the next centuries, with another breakthrough coming in 2491 RM when the engine was modified to house larvae that allowed for minute calibration of outputs that had until then not been possible.

This led to the first recorded birth in the FIFTH AGE of a MORTAL by true palingenesis in 2613 RM by the PALINGENETIST AADRO CIRRIS. Of course, by this time cloning (as the term is currently understood – VATBORN creatures made from germ bodies grown at an accelerated rate and implanted with bespoke germ organs that were harvested separately) had already become a mainstay of Korachani armies and culture, making the far more costly and risky process of palingenesis largely moot, though these palingenetic births are less prone to the rapid decay that afflicts other clones.

The process of palingenesis became popular amongst the rich and powerful, who were willing to devote ludicrous sums of money to having an identical copies made of themselves for purposes of insurance. Though bereft of the memories of the donor, the bodies could be used to harvest blood, organs or skin if needed, for instance after an accident or as part of fleshwrighting procedures. Others commission a copy to serve as a companion, or to mould into a successor, though it was soon learnt that though the body was nearly-identical, mannerisms and personality would often be wildly different. Various studies have been carried out on this to determine the reason why personalities might differ so much, though there has been little conclusive outcome.

Perhaps the most infamous example of clones incepted via palingenesis are the soldiers of the PARTHISAN BROTHERHOOD, who are all identical clones of the governor-general SASSANUS ACHALLA, who was a beloved cultural hero in Parthis.

To this day cloning and palingenesis are often used interchangeably or by those without a true understanding of the specifics of either, with the term cloning being the predominant one used. All efforts have been made in this volume to use the correct term, though in some cases (where the exact nature of the processes used are unimportant, for instance) the term cloning has been used by default.

PALINGENETIST: Sup. Med. Voc. One who carries out PALINGENESIS – a procedure similar to CLONE, where ESSENTIAL SALTS (usually derived from flesh from a donor organism) is used to grow an identical copy through a complex and costly TECHNARCANE procedure.

PALINOLA: Phil. Ascetic doctrine common in the KAZZARAN peninsula^(1.) that seeks physical and spiritual perfection through the act of repetition. Most adherents devote their lives to a specific path, be it a form or artistry or a physical pursuit such as dance or a type or martial combat, and practise it until they are deemed by their peers to have perfected it, whereupon they take on another pursuit. Despite this few if any adherents ever consider themselves experts in their chosen avocation, out of humility to Palinola, and only a handful of noted followers throughout history have studied multiple paths, with most of them being HALFBLOODS or SCIONIC CREATURES, with lifespans far longer than most mortals

PALINOLA, ORDER OF: Org. Ascetic order common in the Kazzaran peninsula⁽¹⁾, whose members seek physical and spiritual perfection through the act of repetition. The Order is based in the city of EBOZA in the south east of TATAR. The order originated in c. 3280 RM following decades of the spread of a philosophy that would serve as the predecessor to Palinola.

Its current head is a nameless otherworlder whose personality has been utterly forsaken in lieu of its pursuit of perfection, and it has completed three paths, an unprecedented task in the history of the order.

PALL MIND, the: Mys. Rnk. elite mystics amongst the followers of the MARKED PALL, in the eponymous realm. They are linked by a hive-mind called the Pall. They use humans and other mortals as dumb slaves and drone workers.

PALLADA: Mil. For. Fortress on the island of PAEL in EDICULE^(1.), in the south west of the HARÉSHK. The fortress is situated on the highest point, on the east of the island, and has unparalleled views of the STRAIT OF BOKKEA. The fortress commands a large fleet of policing ships that control traffic in and out of the SEA OF DERAEA.

PALLATANAS: Rvr. River in the ALAMANA Plains in northern JURRAS^(2.), flowing for 230-miles from sources in the SYNHODOS Mountains before emptying in the bay of MESOZ.

PALLATI: Set. Large coastal city in the south west of ALMAGEST. It is the southern-most ALMAGESTI harbour and is renowned for its slave-operated ship scrap yards where vessels of all sort are ripped apart, the remains sold as scrap (Pop. c, 380,000).

PALUS: 1. Dem. 'Palan'. Pol. One of the eight HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOMS. Its riders are considered the best in the Haréshk.

2. Pol. Set. City and capital of the eponymous CITY-KINGDOM (1.). It is a major stop along the GREAT ROAD trade-route, and received many merchant caravans throughout the year from across the INNER SEA REGION (Pop. c. 311,000).

PALLANTRAS: Rel. For. Forest graveyard in the north east of IPANAH⁽²⁾, stretching into the far south east of BASSORAH⁽²⁾ and the far west of THE OLD FOREST. The region was abused by the KORACHANI EMPIRE over several hundred years in the first millennium RM (at which time the area divided amongst SKAROS, LAASKHA, and AZAZEM) and remains now as a vast expanse (c. 19,500 square-miles) of lifeless earth and petrified tree stumps as far as the eye can see. The carcasses of trees are broken only by a handful of open cast mines, most of which are also abandoned, their bounties exhausted.

PALOSK: Set. Small coastal city in the east of the HENDECARCHY of HATON in the c north of MALAN (Pop. c. 15,000).

PALPEBRA: Set. Settlement in the region of TARACEH in the north east of THE SURRACH. The city is notable for its construction beneath a large overhang/cave in the north eastern foothills of the NGHALLEAL Mountains (Pop. c. 12,400).

PALUN: Set. Major city in the south of HOAMM, just south of lake GRESS.

Before the diminishing of ELYDEN'S seas, Palun was a coastal city, though it is now some miles from the coast (Pop. c. 237,500).

PAMEROAS: Geo. Mountain-range in the far east of THE SURRACH, bridging the NGHALLEAL in the north and GAMIGAHUA massif in the south.

PAN ABADDON: Rel. Str. Large temple-complex in the HERESIAN PLAINS in the c of KORACHAN. It is ancient, dating back to pre-imperial times, though it was restored and repurposed by early worshippers of the UNDYING MACHINE, who would become a splinter sect of what would later go on to become the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE.

This sect would become known as the CULT OF PAN ABADDON, and went on to become extremely secretive. Rumours abounded in the first Millennium RM that the cult uncovered deep chambers in which had been buried metal tablets of an ancient and blasphemous nature.

Acting on such rumours, the Church of the Machine stormed the temple in 1205 RM, slaying the cult in its entirety and destroying the ancient chambers, taking all artefacts from it and locking them up in undisclosed strongholds across the empire.

Despite many fanciful and heretical rumours as to what was contained in the tablets, none outside of the highest echelons of the church know what they contained.

Since the purging of the original cult, the temple was allowed to fall into decay, though in 3666 RM a condoned sect of the Church of the Undying Machine took up residence there. Today, the monks live as ascetes, following harsh rituals. They spend their days praying for the forgiveness of humanity and for the blessing of the Undying Machine.

PAN ABADDON, CULT OF: Rel. Org. The CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE rapidly spread across the KORACHANI EMPIRE following the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR'S return to KORACHAN in 339 RM. Many splinter sects appeared in those early decades, most of which were quelled.

One such sect took up residence in the ruins of the temple of \underline{PAN} $\underline{ABADDON}$ in around 500 RM, becoming notorious amongst the populace for its radical views. These beliefs, which many saw as blasphemous, fed rumours surrounding the possible discovery of ancient metal tablets in catacombs beneath the temple.

These rumours eventually led to the Church of the Machine storming the temple, killing the members of the sects and destroying the catacombs. The church is thought to have confiscated the metal tablets, which are still kept under lock and key in church strongholds across the empire.

PAN SAGIS: rel. Ancient temple in the c of EZASUH^(2.) dating back to its colonisation by SAGITTAARI exiles in c. 30 RM.

PAN YATIHIR: Rel. Str. Temple of ascetes in the c of EZASUH^(2.), overlooking the SEA OF MARDEN.

 $\underline{PANA\ PERH}$: Set. Settlement in the east of \underline{CHEIRA} (Pop. c. 4,000).

 $\underline{PANA\ SADRA}\!{:}\ \mathit{Set.}$ City in the c of \underline{CHEIRA} (Pop. unknown).

PANDAEMA: Mil. Str. Iron citadel in upper levels of the PRISON CARCERI, guarding one of the larger tunnels leading into PANDAEMONIA beneath the north of PELASGOS.

PANDAEMONIA: Int. Pol. Set. Capital of the PRISON CARCERI, located some miles beneath the east of KORACHAN, close to the border with PELASGOS, though with no known entrances in the vicinity. The city is built upon the prone body of the DEMIURGE VORROPOHAIAH; grown to grotesque proportions in its torpor.

The city itself is a sprawling conurbation and largely vertical, perched on the side of the cavern, reaching up the walls, and hugging the red rocks of the ceiling. Very little in Pandaemonia is comparable to a normal city, for it is a place of despair and chaos, and the heart of the domains of the ROPOHAII. Though the exact populations is unknown, it is thought to be a sprawling metropolis with as many as a million or mortals calling it home. Though ropohaii make up the bulk of the populace, it is thought that other races, including humans, can also be found here (Pop. unknown).

PANDION RATIX: Arc. Statue in the island of ZARUVA off the south western coast of GNOTH. The statue depicts two eagles in conflict with each other, in representation of the dichotomous aspects of the mortal body and the spirit. The eagles are often the first sight to anyone approaching Gnoth from the SEA OF SERPENTS.

PANEGYRIZER: Plr. 'panegyrizerin'. Rel. Rnk. Rank within the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE whose role includes the blessing and sanctifying of objects, including buildings. All buildings in Korachan are blessed before they are occupied and it is the role of the panegyrizerin to do so. Many myths and superstitions surround this practice, particularly buildings that are said to be unsanctified.

PANEN: Set. Major open-cast colliery in the south west of PELASGOS. The RED ROUTE passes close by to it (Pop. c. 6,000).

PANET: Set. City in the c of ANANTHUL, along the shore of lake TRADINE. It was once the capital of the ancient nation of PHARTH (Pop. c. 40,000).

PANGAIA, the: Int. Org. Secretive organisation whose members are drawn from PATRICIANS from across the INNER SEA REGION. Appearing in c. 3350 RM, the group became most prevalent in LLACHATULI lands of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, including AZAZEM, LAASKHA, PELASGOS, SKAROS, as well as KORACHAN itself and, later, ALMAGEST.

The group is largely concerned with the negative impact of mortal activity on ELYDEN and the declining quality of life. Its headquarters were raided and the organisation disbanded in 3791 RM by the ARÂTHUAHI SANCTIFIED ORDER OF THE INQUISITION. A few scattered cells remain, though they now have little centralised power and operate largely independently of each other. Their highest leaders are theatrically known as hierophants, with lower ranking acolytes answering to wardens.

Starting in 3791 RM, members of the group were persecuted in what is now known as the SCOURGING OF THE PANGAIA. This period lasted some three years, ending with hundreds of Korachani Patricians burnt, their estates taken by the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE and the empire.

PANKAWAN: Set. Small coastal city in the north west of CUTH (Pop. c. 31,400).

PANOIDA: 1. Lak. Lake in the c south of AHRISHEN, forming part of the ARESHI^(2.) river-system. The lake is linked to lake AMATIDA by the Panoidan canal^(2.), which stretches for over 73 miles to lake Amatida, upstream.

2. Major man-made canal in the c south of Ahrishen, connecting lake AMATIDA with lake Panoida^(L). It is over 73-miles long and is the busiest canal in Ahrishen, with around 30 locks to account for the difference in elevations of the two lakes, and sees much trade from LYRIDIA and THE HARÉSHK, moving north to the rest of Ahrishen.

PANOPLY: Dre. Flo. DREAMSCAPE in the north east of VÂRR that takes the form of a gigantic tree, the canopy stretches around it like a wide flat parasol that shrouds the land around it in perpetual darkness. Its thick rock-hard roots dig deep into the earth and sprawl around it like a labyrinth in miniature. Within its bark are etched shifting faces that whisper forgotten memories and lost dreams. ONEIRIC CREATURES born from the tree's shade crawl – half-formed and long-limbed – in the shadows, seemingly searching for something but cursed too never find it.

PANOPTICUS, the: Rui. Ancient observation post, buried beneath a temple in the west of SAMMAEA. It was likely crafted by a DEMIURGE, and is mentioned in the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN. It takes the form of a large hollow sphere (20-ft. in diameter, though in some accounts, it is claimed to be as large as 66-ft. in diameter). The interior of the sphere depicts the surface of ELYDEN in such miniscule details as to be unimaginable to mortal eyes. Various methods of magnification have been used, revealing astonishing levels of detail, making some believe that the sphere is an exact replica of Elyden, its details shifting to match those of Elyden herself as they change over the years. The sphere is thought to have been buried by an earthquake in c 1600 RM, the temple-complex surrounding it destroyed.

PANOTIA: Sea. Bay in the east of MENISCEA, to the north of CHAUTULA, to the west of the SEA OF SIPARIA.

PANTA: Set. City in the south of the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS, overlooking the SEA OF SPIRES (Pop. c. 13,500).

PANTAREDA: Sct. Large conurbation made up of eight SOULSTONE quarries surrounding a fortified settlement in the east of the TEMPLAR STATES, in the c of the region of TRISKETHIA. It is one of the most productive regions in Triskethia, and its soulstones are used in TECHNARCANA across the Templar States and beyond (Pop. c. 13,800).

PANTHALASSA: Geo. Arid inland region in the c north of EASTERN LLACHATUL, to the east of the ARGENT Mountains, occupying the north of TETHYSIA. It is thought that the region was once a forest, as attested by the traces of ancient woodlands that survive to this day.

PANTHEA: see TEMPLE OF THE FORGOTTEN GODS, THE.

PANTHEON ISLES, the: 1. Geo. Vast archipelago in the east of EASTERN LLACHATUL, forming an extension of the KOTHA ICHOLLIGHA Mountains around the KARAXHANES and BHALASSIAN peninsulas. There are many thousands of islands in the chain and many of them were catalogued by the VENTHIRI explorer BOHMIUS, who was the first recorded western man to discover the region, in the 14th century, naming them after the many deities of THETIS. The isles are of a Tropical climate, with the southern-most isles experiencing a tropical monsoon climate, and the northern-most territories, including most of their mainland territories, experiencing a tropical savannah climate.

2. Dem. 'Katobraghan'. Ntn. Situated to the east of the continent of LLACHATUL, the Pantheon Isles is a monarchy that is divided between a part of mainland Llachatul between LIMOTH^(1.) and TETHYSIA (68% of its territories), and many islands that form part of the archipelago also known as the Pantheon Isles (the remaining 32% of its territories). Its climate varies from tropical savannah in the north to tropical monsoon in the south, with little year-round variance in temperature and rainfall throughout most of the year, with a varied distribution.

In its present form the Pantheon Isles dates back to 2825 RM, when the Limothan occupation of almost 2-decades was overthrown following 2 years of fighting and the EXECUTION of its governor and staff in the capital of XAGADRRA. Following this, the resistance leader AGUBBRA ESCHA formed a new capital in the last city to be won back — YICTAIANDA. She would become the founding members of a new dynastic ruling house which survives to this day.

The islands are rich in silver and sulphur, and their mining and exportation constitute most of the local economy, though this is supplemented by selling the services of its expert marine mercenary forces to surrounding nations and private merchant fleets.

Its people are expert fishermen, and are unparalleled in their knowledge of the shallow waters of their archipelago home, deftly navigating their catamarans between the reefs and atolls of the thousands of islands. Most of the islands are uninhabited and many of those that are only pay lip-service to the ruling dynasty, which technically offers protection in return for yearly tithes and access to able-bodied men for conscription into its navy and mercenary forces. Piracy and slavery are a constant threat and only through the actions of its navy, which works alongside other member-states of the MYMEREAN ACCORDS, which ensure that the waters east of Llachatul are patrolled against predation.

Its people are also renowned breeders of MONOCEROUSES and many islands and cities pay their tithe to the ruling dynasty in the form or monocerouses, which are then either kept of exported to other nations due to their FIRMAMENTAL properties. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

PANTHEON OF NAHORIA: Rui. Ancient ruined temple dating back to the NAHORIAN empire in what is now the far north of TZALLRACH.

PANTHEON, TEMPLE OF THE: Rel. Str. Expansive temple-complex in TARTAK honouring its great pantheon of river and moon deities.

PANTHEUM, the: Rui. Ancient site in the c south of the HENDECARCHY of HATON in the c north of MALAN dominated by gigantic statues, ruined and reclaimed by the forests from a time before the rule of the LADY AEGIS, possibly dating back to the rule of LARAM⁽²⁾.

PAPAL HERESY, the: Rel. Pol. His. Period in the history of the KORACHANI EMPIRE between 1191 – 1217 RM, which ended with the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE exiling many of its DVERGAI and other fey races to the north, into what eventually become CHTHYRID.

The reason for this is largely unknown today, but it is thought to have originated with the election of a dverg pope who grew very influential amongst minorities within the empire, who came to see him as a spokesperson for their plight. The pope was assassinated, and his followers exiled, but the act was misguided at best.

Little is now known of this period, and it is believed that particular details of the conflict have since been erased from records, though for what purpose can only be guessed at.

PAPAL WARS, the: also 'the King War'. Rel. Pol. His. Period of civil unrest and war in the north of PELASGOS, between c. 225 – 228 RM, where traditionalist Pelasgosi kings warred with the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. The wars were a result of strife and unease exhibited at the absence of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR.

PAPHAS: Set. Major city in the south west of ACHAA⁽²⁾, close to the coast of ASEER (Pop. c. 880,400).

PARABLISTS: Pol. Org. Traditionalist sect active in PELASGOS throughout its subjugation by the KORACHANI EMPIRE there. Active since c. most active during the PAPAL WARS (225 RM – 228 RM).

PARADROSS: Sup. Elc. A cloud-like stone of mystical properties that is closely associated with the OTHERWORLD. The element is an igneous rock that is influenced by the otherworld (perhaps by being close to an OVERLAY) while it is formed over thousands of years. The solidified rock becomes sensitive to the MATERIA OMNA and acts of SHAPING. This makes it a prized resource in the manufacture of various of TECHNARCANE machinery, including HEART ENGINES, IRON MANTLES, SOULSUITS and REALITY SUITS, amongst many others, and it is also used as a FOCUS⁽²⁾ for SHAPERS.

Paradross is very rare, making it a highly prized and valuable commodity. It is found in large numbers scattered around the north and centre of the VESPERTINE LEAGUE, and the c east of SKAROS, western AHKA, as well as north western PHYRR in small amounts, though it is also found elsewhere in trace amounts.

PARAETA: Set. Major fortified city in the south east of the territories of ETHISTONITH in RHINOCOLOURA (Pop. c. 175,000).

PARAGA: Ser. City in the south west of PELASGOS. It was a pioneer in KORACHANI developments in the art of cloning and in 2123 RM it became the first city in Korachan to successful breed a batch of LARVAE from a singular source, and has remained one of the empires' primary cloning research regions since then. It forms a part of the RED ROUTE, and its ATELIERS buy various exotic materials from across the INNER SEA REGION (Pop. c. 23,400).

PARAHADI: Set. Major fortified city in the far north east of RHINOCOLOURA. It is home to many troops who patrol the region of SOUDAL against banditry and MULCIBIAN attention (Pop. c. 75,000).

PARAI DEIS, the: Geo. Chain of beauteous island along the south western coast of TZALLRACHI, in the waters of NÛN. The islands are famed for their beauty and though a few small coastal settlements pepper them, they are relatively untouched by civilisation, though a few ruins, presumed to belong to the early FOURTH AGE, can be found there.

PARAIYA: Dem. 'Paraiyan'. Ntn. Located north of the TROPIC OF RAH in the north of SAMMAEA, Paraiya is a land of savannahs and sparse woodland, with a semi-arid to arid-temperate climate, and were it not for the many rivers that flow through its lands, it would be largely uninhabited (indeed the name Paraiya roughly translates to 'Many Rivers').

A recently independent nation populated by indigenous peoples and the descendants of KORACHANI colonists who mined the region extensively for ADAMANTINE, Paraiya was unified under a Sultanate in 3821 RM, beginning a new phase in its modern history. Despite this, its people still struggle to shake off the two great shadows that haunt them – the memory of Korachani colonisation, and the ATRAMENTALLY-ACTIVE region of the UMBRA SOKHAR that dominates its south-western borders.

Originally known as THE PARIA, the region was subjugated by Korachani forces in c. 2090 RM following decades of conflict and war. The Korachani empire set up various industries there and pillaged its natural resources without thought for its inhabitants or culture, spending over six centuries there, eventually abandoning it to the caretaking force of the DOMNITORS in 2703 RM, under whose rule the nation effectively became self-governing with decreasing links with the heartland.

The Domnitors ruled Paraiya for close to a millennium, overseeing the slow dismantling of its old industries there, ensuring its remained productive. Under their tenure it became a major agricultural centre, rivalling AZAZEM in output, providing most of the southern vassal states of Korachan with food. The Domnitors were allowed to rule with relative autonomy as a reward for their productivity and the relative peace of their rule.

Over generations the Domnitors became more tyrannical, mingling with the upper-classes of BELUAN, creating a new culture that became more removed from the Korachani heartland with each generation. By c. 2980 RM they had divided Paraiya into various territories and were calling themselves the KESHUGHALS (meaning king in PARAIYAN) with a single Keshughal ruling each territory as a sovereign.

The city of SOPORA was resettled in 2750 RM after centuries of neglect, becoming a capital to this new ruling caste, opposing the old capital that was still home to a largely native population in BAKKOU. A centre to a traditionalist nation that abhorred the memory of the imperial occupation, Bakkou fought to eradicate cultural remnants of its Korachani occupiers, including its religion and architecture. This clash of cultures was most blatant by viewing the lower classes in each city. In Bakkou those of Korachani descent were treated as lower class citizens, where in Sopora it was those descended from the nomads who were seen as unclean.

The Keshughals slowly became arrogant in their fertile isolation, and their sense of worth grew disproportionate to their true power. The relative safety of their lands meant they did not have a need for large militaries, and they knew little of true war, with the extent of their military actions lying in the quelling of occasional uprisings amongst the RUNIC TRIBES in the great plains of the south and east of the nations.

When the WAR OF SUNDERING broke out in 3703 RM Paraiya was illequipped to deal with foreign threats and the occasional incursions across the river SHIBBOLETH^(3.) by LIDEAN forces, causing tension between the various Keshughals who were unable to mount a concerted defence. It was only through the combined actions of individual Keshughal forces supported by reinforcing Korachani forces moving each from Mharokk, and attacks from the Runic tribes that Paraiya was able to fend off most attacks, retaking the city of LOUARA on the 11th ASHTALEN 3705 RM, securing the region.

The end of the war brought renewed interest from Korachan, which had lost many of its Sammaean territories, signalling an end to the Keshughals autonomous rule. Tithes were increased threefold, leading to the region' fortunes waning alongside the influence and power of the individual Keshughals. These frictions escalated into civil war in 3792 RM, which dragged on until 3813 RM, with Bakkou losing its noble fight and the city being sacked by what would formally become known as the Paraiyan Sultanate in 3821 RM. It would claim the city of Sopora, which remains the capital to this day. Despite the relative order that the Sultanate brought to the region, its grasp over Paraiaya remains tenuous to this day.

The sultanate has worked hard to abolish old prejudices, and though it has made steps in bringing equality to its differing castes, there are many on both sides of the spectrum who do not want this, and the region remains internally unstable.

Its people are expert architects, highly-skilled in the construction of bulbous wattle towers that collect condensation in large quantities, helping to keep the air cool, and which stand guard over their cities to this day. They are also adept Atramentists, who are well-versed in ways of controlling the spread of tainted lands and caring for those afflicted by its maladies.

Travel within Paraiya is dangerous, and most merchant caravans move with armed guards to defend against nomadic attacks. As a result, few people in Paraiya travel, with most seeing little more of their homeland than their home city and its immediate environs. The dangerous nomads who proliferate the north-west are allies of KARAKHAS, and the subjects of the Sultanate trade north with MHAROKK and LIDEA, with which they are loose allies. The nomads are themselves only loosely connected and still exist in three separate tribes, with members meeting on the winter solstice to revere ancient traditions. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

PARAIYAN: Lan. Language spoken by the PARAIYAN people. It has at its root the ancient THYMI language, and uses its script, but was warped by centuries of KORACHANI influence in the nation. See Vol II: Languages.

PARAMANDA: Flo. Large succulent plant endemic to the north of SAMMAEA, in the far north of the VESPERTINE LEAGUE and the north west of KHULL, particularly in the environs of the city of PIRA TA'. The succulent lives for around 100 years, though only flowers once in its lifetime, producing a large crimson flower that has a particular smell that attracts insects and other pollinators. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

PARAMEA: For. Subpolar marsh forest in the far south of GRAMMATER. It is known for its rocky landscape and windswept trees that grow at odd angles after years of influence from south easterly prevalent winds.

PARAMETRA: Set. Major coastal city in the north east of BISBUT, known for its harbour (Pop. c. 170,500).

PARAND: Set. Fortified settlement in the c east of the tribe of DRAKAINA, in the east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. Its main industry is agriculture, and it is famed across Drakaina for its terraced fields, which are watered through an intricate system of aqueducts (Pop. c. 6,000).

PARANDIA: Rvr. River in the west of KORACHAN, flowing for 95-miles east from the ADA Mountain before joining with the river PHAIA.

PARANEET: (B. 3933 RM) Pol. His holiness, King Paraneet Bomhada. Current ruler of the city of GÂTHA, elected by the ROYAL COUNCIL OF THE THRONE OF GÂTHA in 3971 RM.

PARAPEGMISM: Sup. A SPHERE of SHAPING dealing with the heavens, stars and divination. It is most commonly practiced by FIRMAMENTISTS, though is not unheard of amongst ATRAMENTISTS. See Vol IV: Spheres and types of Shaping.

PARAPEGMIST: Sup. Rnk. A SHAPER who practices PARAPEGMISM.

PARAPHA: Set. Small city in MARACHA, in the north west of NORTHERN SAMMAEA. It is known for its love of duelling and its skilled calligraphers, whose works are prized as far afield as KORACHAN (Pop. c. 20,000).

PARATIR: Set. Small coastal city in the north east of EZASUH^(2.) (Pop. c. 20,000).

PARATOU: Ser. Small city in the c of PARAIYA, in the east hills of the URAYA Mountains. Its main industry is rock salt mining (Pop. c. 11,700).
PARDIS: Pol. 19th king of PARTHIA, who in 473 RM surrendered Parthia to KORACHAN and he became regent, serving only the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR. He was the last king of the PARTHIAN MONARCHY, and his descendants would only rule as regents and puppets of the Korachani empire. This time as vassal to Korachan lasted until 934 RM, when Parthia was handed over to the INTERREGES, whose rule ended in 967 RM, seeing Parthis left a free nation once more, the regent monarchy sundered.

What remained of the Parthisan royal line at the time was exiled into TARTAK, the supposed heir to the throne arriving there in 1003 RM, where he became known as the 'EXILED KING'.

PARIA, the: His. Ntn. Geo. Now-extinct nation in what is present-day PARAIYA. It was settled in 73 RM by an exiled prince, ABIR PARIA (his birth home remains unknown), who set up his capital in the EBON PALACE, which became an influential city by c. 300 RM. Over the centuries, the Paria became the heart of a series of loosely allied city-states, with its rulers, the PARIAN HOUSE, becoming the base of a powerful government. The Paria grew prosperous from trade (its location in the centre of NORTHERN SAMMAEA was at the crux of its success).

By 1150 RM, the KORACHANI EMPIRE had grown in the area, particularly LIDEA, and pressure form there as well as KARAKHAS and MHAROKK caused tension in the city-states, leading to a long period of hostility between states caused by lack of resources and tense diplomatic relationships.

This period, lasting until 2132 RM, was rife with wars and disputes between the states, whittling down the once proud prosperous people of the Paria, leaving whole regions and cities in ruins. In 2132 RM the Ebon Palace was sacked, and the House of Paria was left without heir, and the Korachani empire in control. It would later hand over the region to the DOMNITORS in c. 2700 RM. See Vol III: Extinct States.

PARIAH: Sup. Mor. Mortals who are unable to influence the FIRMAMENT or ATRAMENTA and are unable to become SHAPERS. Similarly, they are largely immune to the influences of the above two facets of the MATERIA OMNA, making them vital in certain roles that would others be dangerous to other mortals. They were often thought to be NULLS, but they are now known to be unrelated. See Vol IV: the Materia Omna.

PARIAH KING, the: also 'Gersham the False'. His. Leg. Pol. Supposed ancestral king (possibly a HALFBLOOD) in AZAZEM. He emerged in c. 2900 RM, claiming leadership of the people of Azazem. He gained a massive following and by 2969 RM openly opposed the KORACHANI EMPIRE with the majority of its populace and irregular troops, as well as rogue elements of the imperial armies, who all marched under his banner against KORACHAN in 2976 RM. Fighting was brutal and bloody and took to the streets of most Azazemi cities, though ended after three years of harsh conflict throughout the nation with Korachan victorious in 2979 RM

Azazem was left crippled following the war. Many of its cities were ruined and depopulated, with disease and famine rampant. In a bid to entice trade and business back to the nation, the Korachani empire gave away large tracts of land to patrician families, while ensuring a heavy STEEL LEGION presence in the area. Following the war, the Pariah-king's name removed from record, his image forevermore banned.

Though his armies were defeated, he was not killed and is said to roam the wastes of Azazem, haunting the ruins of HEDAH.

PARIAN: His. Lan. Now-extinct language that was spoken in SAMA PARIA and, later, in PARRIA and PARTHIA, before evolving into the Parthisan tongue that is spoken in PARTHIS and its dependencies. See Vol II: Languages.

PARIAN HOUSE: Pol. Soc. The noble class of THE PARIA, which occupied what is now PARAIYA. The line ended in 2132 RM with the sacking of the EBON PALACE.

PARIS: Set. Farming settlement in the PARTHISAN colony of SOTHRA^(1.), west of TAMAR (Pop. c. 5,000).

PARISH: Soc. Rel. In nations in which the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE is the major religion, a region over which a single priest and TEMPLAR act as caretakers. Generally, each parish would oversee a whole settlement but with the urbanisation of the empire, this rapidly became unwieldy. Increasingly, a large town or city would have multiple parishes, each overseeing a particular area or district.

PARISH OF ATRAMENTAL DEFENCE: Pol. Org. Governmental department in VÂRR created by the resurgent HIEROGOTHS following the departure of the INTERREGES in 3791 RM. The Parish is based in the city of SATARR and stands against misuse of the ATRAMENTA.

PARLIAMENT, the: Pol. Org. The government established by the SCION known as THE VHOCENT in 2792 RM to rule his newly-founded nation of OTINTH. The members of the Parliament were SHAPERS who over the years were indoctrinated into the secrets that the Vhocent brought with him from the north. Over the years they would go on to become tyrannical figures revelling in the freedoms the insular state that the Vhocent had forced upon the people of Otinth.

Rumours abound that they are part of a secretive cult in which the Vhocent has let them feast on his blood, granting him powers of shaping similar to his own, if not as powerful.

PARNASIA: Geo. Major mountain chain in the south west of LLACHATUL, forming the backbone of the so-called PARNASIAN STATES of AYAD, ELAT and GYZHA, which were formed in 3762 RM following the splinter of the republic of Elat the same year. The mountain stretches from the west of the SEA OF DAZHAT, north east to the northern border of Gyzha.

PARNASIAN ACCORD, the: Pol. His. Peace treaty signed between RAONGEN⁽²⁾, EZASUH⁽²⁾, and its colony of ELAT in 3141 RM, not only bringing an end to territorial hostilities, but also ratifying an alliance between the three regions, as well as codifying exclusive trade arrangements that brought trade from the INNER SEA to Raongen.

PARNASIAN STATES, the: Ntn. Common collective name used to describe the three nations of AYAD, ELAT and GYZHA, in the south west of LLACHATUL, following the splinter of the Republic of Elat in 3762 RM. The name comes from the large mountain-chain that dominates the main peninsula.

PAROU: Ind. Set. Settlement in the c east of PARAIYA, along the western shore of lake AREN. It is a major producer of mud bricks that are used by settlements along the course of the river NOTHIYA. It forms a part of the SALT ROAD (Pop. c. 8,700).

PARRAN GATES: Geo. Pass between the CAMMOREAN^(1.) and MOLOTH mountain, carven faces greeting pilgrims. A relic of some ancient empire, most of them are toppled.

PARRESA: Set. Coastal settlement in the south east of SABAISA, overlooking the BAY OF BERITH (Pop. c. 6,000).

PARRIA: His. Pol. Set. Rui. Ancient FIFTH AGE city that is now a ruin.

PARRIA, the: Soc. Pol. A loose coalition of 7 early FIFTH AGE states that emerged in c. -550 RM from the older nation of SAMA PARIA that disintegrated in c. -900 RM. The coalition formed along the north and east of the PARTHISAN PENINSULA, surrounding the BAY OF ERUISA and was named after its largest city, PARRIA.

The rulers of Parria are remembered today as PHILOSOPHER-KINGS, though little else is known about them, while its people considered themselves to be heirs of the pure mortal human bloodline. As a result, they looked unkindly upon 'mongrels' and HALFBLOODS, as well as physical aberrancy in general.

They constructed a magnificent temple known as the Temple of the Seed, in c. 20 RM in the hopes of bringing the 7 states together, though it only served to drive them apart, eventually leading to the regions' fragmentation. The location of the temple, which has since been lost, was said to have been atop the place where the first seven humans were sown.

The coalition lasted around 600-years, eventually crumbling in c. 100 RM following increased hostilities between the states over ownership of the Temple of the Seed, with its demise eventually paving the way for the rise of the PARTHIAN MONARCHY farther to the south.

The remnants of the coalition would eventually come together in c. 160 RM as PENGAR, which would fracture into the two nations of BISBUT and MECHABET in c. 250 RM. See Vol III: Extinct States.

PARROS: Geo. Highland region in the north east of PELASGOS, east of the BULOPARRI massif. Much of its south eastern portion is ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED by the CIMERRIAN PALL.

PARSACHAN: Set. Settlement in the c west of KARAKHAS and one of the few major KORACHANI settlements founded following its conquering of the nation in 121 RM. It was founded in 126 RM 85-miles west of thethen capital of SERKAN, and became secondary only to the capital, with many administrative buildings located there, including the MINASTERIA of ATRAMENTISM (which remains there to this day) (Pop. c. 25,750).

PARSHER: Edu. Set. College-city in the c east of PARTHIS, known for its ancient oral tradition, which gave rise to an academic tradition that remains to this day in the form of the GREAT PARSHERI COLLEGE. The city revolves around the maintenance of the college with most people working to sustain it or its academics and students in some way (Pop. c. 20,000).

PARSHERI COLLEGE, THE GREAT: Edu. Str. College in the PARTHISAN city of PARSHER. The college appeared in 3356 RM following an honoured oral tradition that dates back to the days of the AZERITES. Much of these oral histories have been collected and now form part of a celebrated collection that is famed across the INNER SEA.

PARSIMENIA: Set. City in the north west of the TARAHID ANNEXES, appearing in c. 1200 RM, from the ruins of AN SIMEIA, an ancient OPRETIAN ALCHEMICAL enclave. The extant city continues the alchemical tradition of its predecessor (Pop. c. 192,000).

PARSUA: 1. Geo. Region in the east of HANNAH, close to the border with QARALAM. It is known for its sparse woodlands, scrub, and open vistas. It has been a favourite inspiration to artists for many years, and the ancient FIFTH AGE ruins that dot its hills have been the subject of many paintings.

2. Set. City in the above region in the east of $\underline{\text{HANNAH}}$, known for its large domed palace (Pop. c. 32,000).

RATASHAH: Sea. Inland Sea dominating the north of GREST^(1.), in the west of BROR^(1.). The regions' history is quite tumultuous. Early 14th century accounts of early explorers from the NEAR HEMISPHERE speak of a large inland sea, reaching as far south as the extant ruined LIGHTHOUSE OF UNASTESEES.

The sea waned over the next millennia as ELYDEN'S seas diminished, until it became entirely cut off from the northern coast by the ARRAFINIAN RIDGE. With no major rivers feeding it, it then disappeared entirely, drying out, becoming a salty basin. This lasted until 2916 RM when an earthquake caused part of the ridge to collapse, allowing water to pour into the basin, flooding it. Sea levels continued to wane after this, though the sea continues to thrive to this day, with the metropolis of CYNNAVAR located at a narrow strait along the midspan of the sea.

PARTHIA: also 'Kingdom of Parthia'. His. Ntn. Early FIFTH AGE nation that preceded the present-day nation of PARTHIS. It emerged from a loose coalition of people called the PARRIA who in turn originated from the older nation of SAMA PARIA, which disintegrating in -900 RM. Parria crumbled in c. 100 RM, and its demise paved the way for the PARTHIAN MONARCHY, which, under the leadership of King PARDIS, would capitulate to the KORACHANI EMPIRE in 473 RM, after which the region eventually became known as PARTHIS. See Vol III: Extinct States.

PARTHIA APEX: Pol. Str. The palace and main municipal structure in TETHRA, the capital of PARTHIS.

PARTHIA ATEX, TEMPLE OF: Rel. Str. Temple in the ARETH valley in PARTHIS guarded by the OTHERWORLDER ABBATON. The temple's purpose and the divinity (if any) it honours is unknown. It exists outside of any Parthisan jurisdiction or institution.

PARTHIAN MONARCHY: His. Pol. The ruling royal house of the KINGDOM OF PARTHIA from c. 100 RM to 473 RM, when king PARDIS surrendered Parthia to the KORACHANI EMPIRE after a relatively bloodless war.

The monarchy continued as puppets of Korachan until 934 RM, when Parthia was handed over to the INTERREGES, whose rule ended in 967 RM, seeing Parthis left a free nation once more, the regent monarchy sundered.

What remained of the Parthisan royal line at the time was exiled into TARTAK, the supposed heir to the throne arriving there in 1003 RM, where he became known as the 'EXILED KING'.

PARTHIS: Dem. 'Parthisan'. Ntn. Situated on a peninsula in the north of SAMMAEA, Parthis is a major economic presence in the INNER SEA, and growing in power as most other nations are waning. Parthis has a long and storied past, with one of the best-recorded timelines in the ELYDEN, dating back to the early days of the FIFTH AGE, and its people pride themselves on being descended from the first humans – the children of the DEMIURGE AVRAHAM.

Evidence of its past can be seen through the etymology of the name Parthis – originating in the ancient FOURTH AGE nation of SAMMON, which fragmented ahead of the WAR OF SCOURGING, from which would emerge the nation of SAMA PARIA. Disintegrating in -900 RM, the ruin of Sama Paria would lead to the formation of PARRIA, a loose coalition of people that lasted until around 100 RM. Their demise paved the way for the PARTHIAN monarchy, which would rule for around three centuries, until King PARDIS handed over Parthia to KORACHAN in 473 RM after a relatively bloodless war.

This began a tumultuous period of Korachani rule that would last until 934 RM, when it would abandon Parthia to the INTERREGES. Their custodianship of Parthia ended in 967 RM following a civil war and internal uprisings that left them largely powerless.

Parthia – by then known by its Korachani name, Parthis – was a free nation again, embittered, and changed by the introduction of Korachani industries and nascent technarcana, which it embraced as the native populace struggled with self-rule. Korachani icons and structures were toppled or repurposed, and after centuries of troubled leadership, the Secular Republic of Parthis was born in 1296 RM, its hatred of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE and religious fanaticism in general burning fiercely.

The new republic concentrated on strengthening its own borders and protecting its people, but as those objectives were reached and surpassed, it began looking elsewhere. In 2123 RM Parthisan troops entered Korachani-occupied TARTAK, taking its capital in 2132 RM.

In 2542 RM the republic died when twin consuls claimed power, beginning a decadent period now remembered as the TIME OF TWO KINGS. They were overthrown by the beloved republican ARSACYN I and his allies 4-years later. The republican was granted executive powers to bring order to Parthis, but instead became emperor, bringing about a new age for Parthis. This marked the beginning of the PARTHISAN CALENDAR.

As an empire, Parthis continued expanding, absorbing ERUTO in 2723 RM and welcoming BISBUT as a vassal in 2861 RM. Sensing the ailing state of Korachan, it began aiding ALMAGEST in around 2990 RM until it was able to wrest freedom from its occupier in 3014 RM. After this, the two became close allies, even as Parthis grew more confident in the losses of its Korachani rival.

Following years of machinations, Tethra fell to the White League in 3406 RM. The emperor remained as a public figure with little control, while the upper echelons of the White League and the White Bank seized control of the nation, establishing a People's Republic in 3465 that served beneath them. Parthis grew wealthy under their auspices, and many League fortresses and outposts were established in this time.

This period lasted until 3701 RM, when the people ousted the Grand Prior of the League and a new republic, based on the same People's Republic established by the League centuries earlier, was established, keeping the emperor as a head of state. Today the Republic governs in the name of the Imperial house of Parthis, and the emperor acts as chairperson to the Republic Council.

Parthis continued expanding after this, taking JURRAS⁽²⁾ two years before the FRAGMENTATION OF THE KORACHANI EMPIRE, turning it into a centre of foreign propaganda and espionage through which it began sowing discord amongst foreign nations, in particular Korachan and ALMAGEST, in the hopes of keeping their growth in check, After the WAR OF SUNDERING broke out between SARASTRO and Korachan, Parthis began providing aid to Sarastro via third parties. This included humanitarian aid, providing its forces with equipment and weapons, and offering the services of the White League. Its goals were achieved as Sarastro gained its independence in 3705 RM, with VAALK, LIDEA and MHAROKK eventually following as vassals.

Following years of working closely together, KHURAUR became a willing vassal in 3752 RM following the fracture of KARAKHAS, greatly expanding the total territories that owed fealty to Parthis in one form or another. Though it is still officially known as a republic, many have started referring to the collected Parthisan territories as the PARTHISAN EMPIRE.

The abolishment of SLAVERY in 3794 RM after the COTIAN MUTINY spread across the republic, garnering the attention of many other nations, most of which were reticent to follow suit. It remains a paragon of progress to many and welcomes expatriates from other nations with the promise of a better life. Its universities are unrivalled in their access to the general populace, and its technarcana is thought to be the most advanced, and certainly cleaner than its Korachani equivalents. Its surgeons are envied across Elyden, and its cosmetic, reconstructive, and augmentative procedures are unparalleled, and it has become the mark of Parthisan nobility to prolong their lives through the most advanced techniques and to commission the birthing of bespoke FAMILIARS(2.) – tailor-made pets with human-life faces that serve as companions and guards alike.

In 3863 RM MECHABET became a willing tributary of Parthis, with the wedding of its crown prince to the daughter of a prominent Parthisan lord. It has enjoyed exclusive trade and defence rights over other nations, though it has shown signs of political unrest over recent years and whispers of emancipation are being heard. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

PARTHISAN: Lan. Official language of PARTHIS, which is also spoken predominantly in most of its colonies and dependencies. It emerged in c. 1000 RM from the earlier PARIAN tongue, which itself emerged from the FOURTH AGE SAMMONISH tongue. See Vol II: Languages.

PARTHISAN BROTHERHOOD, the: also 'Praetorian Brotherhood'.

Mil. Elite CLONE troops INCEPTED through PALINGENESIS employed in PARTHIS, acting as special forces. Unlike the STEEL LEGIONNAIRES of Korachan, who are not genetically identical, every member of the Parthisan Brotherhood is an identical copy of a single PRIMOGENITOR, in this case, the 34th century governor-general SASSANUS ACHALLA

Sassanus was well-loved across Parthis and was a hero of various wars, having been awarded the CROSS OF GALLANTRY for his actions. His death was mourned across the nation, and a great cenotaph erected outside of Tethra in his honour.

In 3382 RM, after years of lobbying, a vocal minority within the republic council was successful in pushing for the creation of cloned soldiers from the remains of Achalla. Many were against this, including members of his own family, but the vote had been cast and the process commenced less than a decade later, when the first regiment was incepted and put into active service. Public sentiment improved over the years, and by c. 3500 RM there were thousands of troops, all the image of Achalla, in active duty.

They shared his loyalty, prowess and military acumen, and over the years became celebrated in battle. Though originally envisaged to form the bulk of the Parthisan army, the inherent cost in their manufacture and upkeep prevented them from being used on a large scale, and they became consolidated into various elite forces.

Despite their elite status, individuals of the Parthisan Brotherhood are not enhanced in any way, and are just clones of a disciplined, intelligent and honourable man, whose legacy has been allowed to continue through their actions. In turn the clones take great pride in their heritage, and recognise that were it not for Achalla's exemplary life, they would not be alive today.

Over the years, some of the clones have come to suffer from a dissociative personality disorder where they believe that they are in fact Achalla, and use his name, claiming that they are him reincarnated, and that they have his memories. Tests to prove if this is in fact the case have proven inconclusive.

PARTHISAN CALENDAR: See CALENDAR, PARTHISAN.

PARTHISAN COLOSSUS, the: Arc. Soc. Massive statue along the eastern coast of PARTHIS, 45-miles west of the city of ABIMOLOCH, build during the reign of the PHILOSOPHER-KINGS in PARRIA, and completed under the rule of king SAALEM in c. –400 RM. Its feet are covered with chisel- and pick-marks of opportunists who have tried to loot the statues' material, though it is so hard that most attempts were abandoned.

Several attempts have been made by the KORACHANI EMPIRE to topple the colossus, though none were successful. The colossus has survived no fewer than three earthquakes that have left surrounding settlements damaged, and this structural stubbornness has made it all the more the centre of legends and myths that it has now become.

Standing around 120-feet tall and built from ALCHEMICALLY treated gold, the colossus was and still is a wonder of engineering and has stood since then as a symbol of the region's tenacity and today represents the independence of its people.

PARTHISAN CURATORS: Pol. Org. Governmental department in PARTHIS recruited from the best candidates from various offices and institutions, including the military. They operate independently in foreign territories as agents and spies. They are genetically-enhanced, and many have grafted organs and other enhancements to aid in their solitary work. It is not uncommon for them to live to 200-years or more, thanks to their improvements.

PARTHISAN DEATH MARCH: Soc. Funerary practice in PARTHIS, typically observed by friends, family and admirers of noted and beloved personalities. The body is embalmed in preparation for burial and placed on an elaborate wagon pulled by 4 funereal horses – gigantic black steeds with large black feathers on their heads. Mourners dress in elaborate white costumes – robes, lace masks, and tricorn hats with black and red trim; the only colour in an otherwise solid white outfit - and march alongside the wagon to the place of final repose, which for such esteemed individuals is often a private crypt or mausoleum, often on family land.

PARTHISAN EMPIRE: Pol. Many have come to refer to PARTHIS, with its many dependencies and colonies, as an empire – a term that the Republic publicly decries, though which some believe it secretly foments.

PARTHISAN FOREIGN OFFICES: Soc. PARTHISAN diplomatic offices scattered throughout foreign cities in the guise of embassies, largely around the INNER SEA REGION.

In truth, they are repatriation offices, where expats and fugitives of Parthisan descent are investigated and brought home, often against their will, or using undue force. The Parthisan government uses the excuse of bringing criminals and dissidents to justice, though it is believed that this is done to a far wider range of people, possibly at random.

The true reason for this forced repatriation is unknown, though the practice is so secretive that few even know of it to question it.

PARTHISAN LEATHER: Obj. PARTHIS is famed for the quality of its leather, particularly that found in its south and south eastern plains.

PARTHISAN PENINSULA: Geo. Landmass in the north of SAMMAEA, protruding north into the INNER SEA. It is home to the REPUBLIC OF PARTHIS, and its vassal states of BISBUT, MECHABET, and the TARAHID ANNEXES.

PARTHISAN PHILHARMONIC ORCHESTRA: Art. Org. Well-regarded orchestra based in the city of TETHRA, PARTHIS. It was based in the IMPERIAL OPERA HOUSE until 3999 RM, at which point then opera house was severely damaged by a terrorist bomb, leaving the remnants of the orchestra homeless. Since then, the orchestra has been rebuilding its numbers and is touring Parthis.

PARTHISAN ROAD, the: Com. Expansive trade-route that links the PARTHISAN colony of VARTA^(1.) with the main Parthisan territories to the north east to the capital in TETHRA. It was established in c. 3960 RM, following growing trade between the city of Varta^(2.) and THE SURRACH, allowing land trade between the two estranged political territories.

A commercial agreement with the cities of KURDA, BAHARI and YVRESSE in the Surrach, and SATTION in OPHAR⁽²⁾ allow the route to snake across northern SAMMAEA for over 1,680-miles between the cities of Varta⁽²⁾ in the west and ILKHAI in the south west of the TARAHID ANNEXES. See Vol II: Major Trade Routes.

PARTHISAN TITAN: see TITAN(2.).

PARUN: Pol. Rnk. Noble title common in the east of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, particularly PELASGOS, VÂRR and LYRIDIA DHAI. In most cases it is little different, culturally, to the term PATRICIAN, though in its classical sense it was used to denote landed gentry whereas patrician can evoke a more business-like air.

PARUS: Set. Small coastal city in the far south east of PARTHIS, noted for its OLIVE groves. It also forms part of the Red Route (Pop. c. 13,800).

PARVIS: See. Small cavern city in the east of KARAKHAS, in the plains of KREAS (Pop. c. 16,000).

PARYMESIA: 1. Rui. Ruined city in the north east of present-day ANANTHUL, atop a level mesa that is thought to be part of the great soulengine MEHARRAAT. The majority of the SOUL-ENGINE beneath the city has disintegrated, with the remnants either buried or tended to by the descendants of the ancient SEPTS, whose self-appointed task of restoring the engine to working order is futile due to its great size and age.

The ruin was, at its peak, a metropolis with as many as 5-million million IROTHANI calling it home, their sole purpose the maintenance and upkeep of the great Soul-Engine, though the wane of the irothani kingdoms at the end of the THIRD AGE, saw it wane in size. Its diminishing was exacerbated by the increased worship of the Host - the hollow vessel of NYARLOTH – above the Soul-Engine, in which his essence was interred.

- 2. Sup. Geo. Dre. DREAMSCAPE surrounding the above ruin^(1,1), with an area of around 30,000 square-miles. The dreamscape takes the form of grotesque mechanical abnormalities emerging from the land like tumours. The closer to the Parymesia one gets the more extreme this phenomenon is, with the land directly touching it comprised of unfathomable biological machines that pulse and whir to the troubled rhythms of the DEMIURGE NYARLOTH'S dreams. Few willingly enter this area, preferring to leave it to the SEPTS who tend to the SOUL-ENGINE itself.
- 3. Set. Fortified settlement in the north east of present-day ANANTHUL built around part of the remains of the ancient SOUL-ENGINE from of MEHARRAAT. The settlement is the largest known concentration of SEPTS in ELYDEN today, though there are relatively few of them. Most are guardians of the remnants of the Soul-Engine, devoting their lives to its maintenance and restoration, and worship of the torpid DEMIURGE that lies within.

The settlement is populated by devotees of NYARLOTH, and is the largest concentration of those faithful to the true Demiurge, and not an idol or hollow vessel of some sort, and many become missionaries, travelling across Ananthul, SABAISA and PORPHYR, proselytising their beliefs to any willing to listen (Pop. c. 8,900).

PASABAY: Rui. Ruined city in the east of CUTH, in the northern-most reaches of the BRAGGAY salt plains. It was subjugated by KARKAUTH in 52 RM, the last MOTANTAN city to be taken by the larger aggressor. It survived for close to a millennium after this, but was abandoned with the diminishing and later disappearance of the Braggay lagoons.

PASAMADA: Geo. Ret. Small mountain in the north east of LIMOTH^(1.), in the state of UKOLIST. It is considered holy by worshippers of KATHISIS, and it is forbidden to tread upon it. The mountain is visited by pilgrims from Thetis and Tethysia, who camp at the base of the mountain to pray and petition their god.

The mountain is guarded by a sect of austere warrior-monks devoted to Kathisis, chosen from young pilgrims who make their way there and show an interest in devoting their lives to the cause.

- PASARADE: 1. Sea. east part of the SEA OF LISASSA, off the coast of western PELASGOS, east of the island of BIGHESS. Its waters are relatively fertile and fishing is common along the Pelasgosi coast to its east.
 - 2. Set. Coastal city in the west of PELASGOS. It is best known for its SHADOWSTEEL foundries, which are amongst the largest in the western KORACHANI EMPIRE, the majority of its population is dedicated either directly or indirectly to the industry (Pop. c. 261,800).
- PASHANI: Set. Major city in the north of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES that is noted as the birthplace of the GHASHA spiritual movement in c. 3470 3540 RM. It is a centre of education and philosophy to this day (Pop. c. 200,000).

PASIDEA: Lake in the c-south east of AHRISHEN, forming one of the sources of the river ARESH^(2.), and leading directly into lake CRENESIA.

PASS OF BAHAL: Geo. Route through the north west of the SIPYLANA Mountain linking the cities of BASTARNIS and GEDRON.

PASSARA: Mil. Str. Citadel and military stronghold in VAALK overlooking the STORAGH.

PASSARAN CLIFFS: Geo. northern face of the schism known as the RUPTURE, dividing the VAALKAN peninsula from the mainland. The cliffs are sheer and as high as 300-feet in places.

PASSION OF ST. MALICHAR, the: Mus. Opera by the composer and librettist ETHANASIUS, penned between 2288 – 2289 RM and a staple of opera houses since then. It concerns itself with the story of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR'S ITINERARY in KHARKHARADONTIS, ending with this mortal death, ignoring his rebirth as an otherworlder, but hinting at it in its final passage.

PASSION OF TALANTEHUT, the: Art. Monolithic baroque statue showing the DEMIURGE TALANTEHUT in her passion, after being told by THE SHAPER that she was to become an agent of balance, forever losing her link with her siblings.

It stands around 25-ft. tall and is renowned for being made from a core of marble that is encased within a skin of woven hair of various colours, including blondes, auburns, blacks, greys and whites, which together give it an eerie almost lifelike appearance.

It is housed in a temple of thought in the city of ALKAHEST^(4,) in GNOTH and is considered a masterpiece of baroque sculpture. Its author is unknown, though it is believed to predate the rise of the nation of Gnoth by some centuries.

PASSPORT: Pol. Soc. A travel document issued by a ruling government confirming the identity of the holder for travel purposes. Travel between nations in ELYDEN is a complex matter, and attitudes and laws differ greatly between different governing bodies and across borders.

The most recognised forms of passport from around the INNER SEA REGION are detailed below:

1. In the KORACHANI EMPIRE, passports are possessed by all freemen and patricians, and are issued to helots who buy their freedom as a mark of their citizenship. There are two types of passports – those for use within the empire and those for use outside its borders, both of which bear the seal of the MINASTERIA OF ROADS. The default type, including those given to newly-freed helots, is the former. Travel outside the borders of the empire would require submitting a request to the Minasteria of Roads, a payment, a recent HELIOGRAPH, in addition to the normal requirement of a signature.

As passports are required to leave the empire, the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE issues special traveling seals to those undertaking the SHADOW MARCH to those who would not otherwise possess passports, such as those press-ganged into service.

2. In the REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO passports are yearly tax receipts that take the form of bronze disks around 6" in diameter. Each disk is embossed with the individual's details and a date, set to 1 year after the individual's last tax payments. The disk is used as a travel document. As only citizens pay taxes, this precludes a large part of the population from travelling openly.

Non-citizens needing to travel must either seek out temporary passes which are granted by the government or the REFORMED CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, based on the purpose of travel; or will do so illicitly, at the risk of punishment.

- 3. Travel within the REPUBLIC OF PARTHIS is open, with no passports needed to travel within its vassal states and territories, though travel outside its borders requires a state-issued passport, which takes the form of a metal tablet etched with the individual's particulars and printed with a heliograph. Passports are issued by the government in TETHRA against a cost
- 4. ALMAGEST issues a state passport that is required for travelling between territories, both within and without the Republic, though different grades of passport are issued based on other needs. This passport takes the form of a leather-backed booklet with all the holder's details, including a heliograph in the case of passports need for travel outside of Almagest.

Almagest also makes use of a second passport that is needed to enter the CITY OF ALMAGEST. A state passport can be used to gain entry into the City of Almagest, though the opposite is not the case. City passports do not require a heliograph of the holder and are considerably cheaper than state passports, though they do not last as long, normally only being valid for 2-months.

PATAN: Lake in the south of AHKA, fed by the river ALANAD.

PATARA: Set. MANUFACTORY city in the c of SAGITTARIA, along the eastern bank of the river MAENDA (Pop. c. 20,000).

PATARESA: Rui. Ruined city in the south east of EREBETH, in the contested region with CYHLAGHARR. The city was abandoned due to the effects of war in c. 3924 RM.

PATHEA: m. Myr. His. Per. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, a SCION of the DEMIURGE TALANTEHUT and RACHANAEL.

She is the mother of REUS (whose father was ASHTERATH), and SALLON (whose father was the human champion HALAEON). See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

PATER OF LIGHT, the: Myr. His. Epithet by which the DEMIURGE DURUTHILHOTEP was once known.

PATERFAMILIA: see PATRIARCH.

PATERNOVA: Lit 'new father'. Pol. Organisation within the KORACHANI

EMPIRE that passionately believed that the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR, the HIGH CONSULITE, the COUNCIL OF SEVEN, and LEAGUE OF PATRICIANS were the reason for the empire's woes and that their removal would end the corruption and stagnation of the empire.

Originating in c. 3680 RM, the Paternova operated in secret over many years and made several unsuccessful attempts on the Archpotentate's life as well as other prominent politicians in the empire. They were successful for the deaths at least two members of the Seven, and were able to manipulate other members of the council, as well as various ruling ARCHPATRICIANS and their families, as well members of the DESPOSYNI.

Their actions are thought to have been at least partially responsible for the escalating events of the WAR OF SUNDERING and the subsequent SUNDERING OF THE KORACHANI EMPIRE, via the assassination of ARCHBISHOP MAGNUS EMULKHIL DUCAS (though at the time this was blamed on the SARASTROAN ORTHODOXY, exacerbating the conflict.

They were exposed following the fragmentation of the empire they were exposed and hunted down by imperial forces. By c. 3730 RM the Paternova was thought to have been eradicated, but rumours persist to this day that they remain in operation, hiding in the shadows, carefully manipulating events and individuals to rid what remains of the Korachani empire of the Archpotentate Rachanael.

PATH OF THOUGHT: also, 'the Way of Aether' and 'Arelluno'. Phil. Mys. In SAUA, the process through which individuals achieve spiritual enlightenment. There are various schools of thought advocating spiritual ascendence, and not all of them look lightly upon each other. Generally, the laws of the Aether promote an ascetic life of contemplation and moderation through which understanding can be reached. FIRMAMENTAL techniques, such as focus, are common amongst FOLLOWERS OF THE PATH (as individuals call themselves) and it is not unknown for sages of the path to also possess true firmamental abilities (so-called 'gifts of the Aether'), especially within the SPHERE of SAMANA. Many schools consider the BLUE MOUNTAIN to be sacred to the path.

PATH VERMILLION: Phil. Personal ideology observed by people in Karakhas, Khuraur, Hitta and others following select teachings of the church of Khar'illae. Its adherents endorse a life of hard work and self-sacrifice, and protecting their loved ones with their life if need be. It is the prevalence of this ideology that led to Karakhas being difficult for occupying powers to govern.

The prevalence of the ideology varies from region to region within practising states.

PATHMAKERS: Int. Mil. Org. Militant order in the KORACHANI EMPIRE tasked with patrolling regions of wilderness and wastelands close to traderoutes and other regions that see heavy traffic, clearing paths for travel and making sure they are safe from banditry, the ATRAMENTA and other natural dangers. They are known to use SOFTSUITS when working near regions of ATRAMENTAL CORRUPTION and are competent trackers.

PATHOC: Set. Settlement in the far south west of NÁRTHEL, along the marshes of NAGAMOTH, which until 3994 RM was part of SALOROC. The region is a major producer of peat bog (Pop. c. 9,000).

PATHON: Geo. Dome of igneous rock in the east of the territories of ETHISTONITH in RHINOCOLOURA, in the region of NABERIN. It is unclear whether or not the formation – measuring no less than a mile wide and half as high – is artificial or of natural construction, though many cite various features, including the regularity of its surface, as evidence that it was created, though whether by mortal or DEMIURGE hands, remains unclear.

The region is largely ignored by natives though a group of seminomadic indigenous people hold the dome and the land surrounding it as sacred and has travelled its lands since the late FOURTH AGE, and is unrelated to any of the other ethnic groups in Ethistonith today.

PATRIA: Pol. Soc. Org. Amongst nations and states overtaken by the KORACHANI EMPIRE, the patria remain in those settlements, city-states, districts and regions where the native populace remains in the majority. In some lands this may take the form of a slum, with wealthy Korachani immigrants usurping the upper-classes from the natives, or it may be an intelligentsia of native elders who maintain a modicum of control despite, or thanks to, imperial dominance.

When subjugated lands are left to the INTERREGES, a new native government usually forms around the areas of patria cities.

PATRIAN: Rel. Rnl. Native religious leaders in LIDEA, who were abolished following its subjugation by the KORACHANI EMPIRE in 911 RM. they were hunted down for decades by EXOCRINES and ICONOCLASTS⁽²⁾, and were eventually eradicated by c. 936 RM.

PATRIARCH: 1. also 'Paterfamilia'. Pol. Soc. Rnk. The eldest and most respected member of a specific PATRICIAN HOUSE, from whom all other patricians of the line are descended. Though often used interchangeably with the word GERENT, the two are different – the gerent is the head of the house, which may often be someone other than the patriarch, particularly if the patriarch is old or infirm.

Most Patrician Houses are not patriarchal by default, and the rank is shared with that of $\underline{\mathsf{MATRIARCH}}$.

2. Mil. Veh. Class of modern KORACHANI WARSHIP designated as a cruiser. There are 21 individual Patriarch-class ships in active service today, of which five – the Vindicator, Shadow of Awe, Resolute, Machine's Wrath, and Shidara – are classed as capital ships.

Measuring an average of around 475' long, the Patriarch-class ships form the backbone of the Korachani fleet and are amongst the most decorated cruisers in service today, and they are typically armed as follows:

- a primary battery made up of two main 13.7" battery dorsal guns (1 mounted on a fore turret, and a mounted on an aft turret)
- a secondary battery made up of 7 7.3" guns (6 mounted in turrets, divided equally between port and starboard, and one dorsal mounted fore turret) and 4 3.7" guns (2 mounted on port turrets, and 2 mounted on starboard turrets)
- a third battery made up of 5 1.7" revolving cannons (2 mounted on port turrets, 2 mounted on starboard turrets, and 1 mounted on a dorsal fore turret)

They are powered by advanced steam engines (often augmented by TECHNARCANE secondary engines and enhancements), which power twin screw propellers, which together allow for top speeds of around $18-19 \, \mathrm{knots} \, (20-21 \, \mathrm{mph})$, depending on weight and total armament. They have an operational combat range of between $1-1.5 \, \mathrm{miles}$ and are protected by thick compound armour that varies in thickness from 4" in less critical sections to as much as $10 \, \mathrm{mag}$ along the central band that protects the engines and magazines.

PATRICIAN: 1. Pol. Soc. Rnk. Noble rank and the highest social class across many nations across the INNER SEA REGION, particularly within the KORACHANI EMPIRE. They are landowners, industrialists, magnates and merchant-lords. Unlike the COGNATENSIA, they are not necessarily rooted in KORACHANI lands, with many patrician families (known as HOUSES) native to the various other lands across the Inner Sea.

2. Mil. Veh. Class of modern KORACHANI WARSHIP designated as a frigate. There are currently 49 Patrician-class ships in active service today, of which seven – the Arbitor, Ark Imperial, Atramenta, Deochan, Heroic, Ichoria, Intercessor, Maleth, and St. Achetuna – are classed as capital ships, and are all highly decorated.

Measuring an average of around 350' long, the Patrician-class ships are amongst the hardest-worked of ships in the Korachani navy, working as scouts, raider, and messengers, amongst other roles, as needed. They are typically armed as follows:

- a primary battery of 8 7.3" guns (4 mounted on port turrets, 4 mounted on starboard turrets)
- a secondary battery of 4 3.7" guns (2 mounted on port turrets, and 2 mounted on starboard turrets)

Patrician-class ships are amongst the most modular of Korachani vessels, in terms of armament, with most carrying heavily modified loadouts, as well as various offensive and defensive TECHNARCANE engines.

They are powered by advanced steam engines (often augmented by TECHNARCANE secondary engines and enhancements), which power twin screw propellers, which together allow for top speeds of around 20 – 22 knots (23-25 mph), depending on weight and total armament. They have an operational combat range of between .75-1 miles and are protected by thick compound armour that varies in thickness from 2" in less critical sections to as much as 8" along the central band that protects the engines and magazines.

PATRICIAN CLUBS: Soc. Org. Many patricians form groups, sometimes known as sodalities or lodges, where individuals from certain walks of life with shared interests can gather to share opinions and especially the young affluent offspring of established houses.

Such clubs are most common in major cities, particularly within the KORACHANI EMPIRE and ALMAGEST, as well as in KETESH.

PATRICIAN-PRINCESS INNANA; LAST HERALD OF SHADOW, the: (B.3972 RM) Pol. The last HERALD OF SHADOW elected by the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR in 3996 RM after years of work in the PRISON CARCERI.

PATRICIAN-SHAPER: see ONAGOG.

PATRICIAN WEEKLY: Int. Vol. Soc. Weekly publication with distribution across the Inner Sea, whose primary market is the upper-classes of various territories, including the KORACHAN, SARASTRO, ALMAGEST, PARTHIS, as well as VENTHIR, and other regions.

Originally published in c. 2980 RM as a means of advertising balls, proms, and other events of interest to debutantes and high-society in general, it also acted as a social register (similar to CHRYSAPHIUS' PATRICIANS, though less prestigious and more concerned with celebrity and high-society than genealogy).

It has since evolved to become a more encompassing volume, with art reviews, business and political news, economic reports, as well as the more traditional privileged and upper society articles that defined its early years.

Surprisingly, it is a relatively unbiased publication and is open critical of various institutions and governments across ELYDEN.

PATRICIANS, TEMPLE OF THE: Rel. Str. Church in the city of KHADON in KORACHAN that is exclusive to those of the PATRICIAN class. PATRICULA: Set. Settlement in the c of TARTAK (Pop. c. 4,800).

PATRIR: Mil. Str. Coastal fortress in the far south west of TATAR, guarding the entrance into the BAY OF TIAGAME^(1.).

PATRON: Lan. In the KORACHANI language, a common vernacular for the long straight black wigs worn by male PATRICIANS; the style was intermittently in fashion during various eras of the KORACHANI EMPIRE and was at its peak at its end in 4008 RM.

PATTIA: Set. Rural settlement in the south west of SABIA (Pop. c. 8,000).

PAUPER KINGS, the: Pol. His. Old leaders of the empire of CHEGRINT, that existed from c. -1000 - 1200 RM in the north west of SAMMAEA in the lands currently occupied by THE SURRACH. Their rule of Chegrint was ended by concentrated attacks by the POTENTATE HAABHUS in c. 980 RM. Almost all accounts of the Pauper Kings come from historians writing following their deposition by the Potentate Haabhus and it is thought that the name was a derogatory one given to them as a means of belittling their rule, which it should be noted went unopposed for close to two millennia.

PAVIS: Soc. Str. Expansive stepwell in the north west of SAMMAEA, in the far north of THE SURRACH, resembling the negative space of a ziggurat. The place is hewn from the natural bedrock of the area and its sides carry intricate bass-carvings, most of which are disfigured and eroded. The stepwell is about half-a-mile to a side and about 500-yards deep, ending in a square gaping hole no more than a foot- wide, from which emanates fetid air. Little is known of the abyss beneath the stairwell or whether its purpose was even as a stairwell. Most shun the region for there is little of value there today.

PAVO: Lak. Lake, covering some 1,700-square miles, in the far north of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of SYRTIS^(1.), forming a natural border with SAUA. The lake forms part of the complex system of waterways of the river SARA.

PAVONATA: Set. Major fortified city in the south east of CISNERIA. It is a major source of recruits and troops for the Cisnerian military (Pop. c. 89,000). PAVONIS: Rui. Ruined city in the north of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of SYRTIS^(L).

PAWER: Mil. Str. Fortress in the c of NORTHERN SIMBARA that in 2723 RM was the first rebel target in the SHERRIAN CIVIL WAR.

PAYCHUR: Set. City in the c south of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES, in the IMYRI TRADE-ZONE. It is a major producer of rice in the region (Pop. c. 37,500).

PAYENS: Set. Major city in the c north west of the TEMPLAR STATES. It emerged in c. 1100 RM as a tannery and grew into a mercantile hub over the centuries, specialising in textiles made from exotic textiles sourced from around ELYDEN (Pop. c. 110,000).

PAZZAD, OBSERVATORY OF: Ast. Str. Subterranean observatory, located in a chamber in the belly of a deep mine on the island of SHIAD off the south western coast of MENISCEA. The observatory is operated by an order of astronomer-shapers who observe the skies through the MATERIA OMNA, negating the need for open skies or telescopes. Instead, they make use of TECHNARCANE engines attuned to their own SIGHT, through which they are able to map celestial phenomena.

The observatory's distant location is to provide an environment free of stimuli that negatively impact the astronomer's work.

PEACHAN: Set. City in the south of KHURAUR, forming part of the SHADOW MARCH and one of the last major stops before leaving civilised lands into the region of the ALGOL HAREN. It became famous in 213 RM when the mortal body of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR was returned there from the PIT OF DAEKYN following his death a year earlier. A basalt sarcophagus was constructed for him, enchanted with preservative magicks to keep his body in stasis. The body was later moved across the INNER SEA, where it remains now in the BASILICA OF THE HOLY RELIQUARY in ADEPEP, LAASKHA (Pop. c. 32,000).

PEALA: Rui. Ancient city in the c north west of THETIS, in the RTHEI desert, thought to date back to the THIRD AGE, when the desert was not as expansive as it is today. Now it is buried beneath the sands, with only the tips of a few minarets and shattered domes visible.

PEARL CRAB: Fau. Spindly spider-like crab that produces a pearl. It is common in coastal waters in the far east of LLACHATUL See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

PECCARA: Set. Settlement in the region of ERRATZ in the west of THE SURRACH (Pop. c. 18,000).

PECRA: Com. Set. Trade city in the south of RHAMIA, along the lagoon of BILA. The city moves sea trade north via barges to the capital of FASCIA (Pop. c. 15,000).

PEDESTAL OF YEVDOKRA, the: Rui. Expansive ancient FOURTH AGE platform in the c of extant AZAZEM, to the east of the AAORA Mountains. The discovery of nearby AITHAR skeletons have led some scholars to attribute its construction to them though there is little direct evidence supporting this.

PEDSER: Set. City in the c north of CHEIRA. Its main industry is the mining and refining of silver (Pop. c. 37,000).

PEGAN: Set. One of the main cities of the SIX CITIES region in THE SURRACH (Pop. unknown).

PEGARIUS ZONRA: (B. 3959 RM) Pol. Current PRESIDER of the Oligarchic Council of UKHARTH.

PEHON: Mil. Rnk. ALMAGESTI foot-soldiers.

PELACHOR: Set. Settlement in KORACHAN comprising expansive farmlands where grains (primarily wheat and barley) are grown. Its heart is a small valley settlement dominated by three expansive windmills and warehouses controlled by the government. The centremost windmill is effectively a fortress where people from surrounding farmlands can seek shelter in case of attack. It is one of the few regions of healthy farmland in this part of the Korachani peninsula (Pop. c. 1,800 including surrounding hamlets and farmsteads).

PELADA: 1. Geo. Region of rocky pinnacles in the north of AHRISHEN, south of the KARAEHLA Mountains. The region covers 14,000 square-miles of land and is a major source of graphite and slate.

2. Rvr. River in same region flowing for 800-miles from sources in the KARAEHLA and ASOUTAN Mountains before emptying into lake NAIDA.

The river flows through lake EURADA and IANADA before meeting lake Naida.

PELAN: Geo. Rocky highland region in the c of AYAD.

PELASGOS: Dem. 'Pelasgosi'. Ntn. A vassal of the KORACHANI EMPIRE since 73 RM, Pelasgos has been the heart of the Korachani arms industry for millennia, producing weapons, ammunition, armour, vehicles and all manner of machined parts that are used by both the Korachani military and its industries and manufactories.

It has a long history predating the arrival of Korachan there, and its people are descended from the early FIFTH AGE GERICIAN city-states, who had inherited their lands from an earlier FOURTH AGE culture known as HADEN, which would give way through the FADING of the Fourth Age to the rule of the ANAX-LORD from -400 RM and the JUDICIARY AGE, which lasted until the rise of Korachan there.

Its city-states descended into war between 51 and 73 RM, which ultimately led to the Korachani empire moving against it, easily taking it following less than a year of conflict. During the early years under the vassalage of the Korachani empire, the city-states were collected under the banner of the Anax-lord, who became a steward, enacting the will of <a href="https://doi.org/10.1038/jtm2.103

The Pelasgosi people were traders and mercenaries, though with their assimilation into the empire, its beautiful island-chains became converted to industry and mass-production.

This brought about the slow death of the natural land of Pelasgos. Ancient forest-sanctuaries were no more, and its mountains grew dark with soot. Lake became bright with chemical runoff from quarries and mines.

Its western lands were reduced to a polluted wastelands that are now peppered with manufactories, mines and well-travelled highways and bridges linking them together. Between them are the wasted mines and quarries of past centuries, surrounded by a withered wilderness and struggling wildlife.

Pelasgos was the centre of a religious schism that disrupted Korachan between 1191 and 1217 RM, known as the PAPAL HERESIES. This led to a reform of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE and the eventual rise of the DVERG nation of CHTHYRID.

Over the years Southern Pelasgos became less productive and a revolt in a major gold mine in 3791 RM left hundreds dead and the industry there effectively ended. Pressure from HELLOS, the regional capital, exacerbated the waning of the region and in 3833 RM, after years of strife, the Domnitors eventually departed Southern Pelasgos, leaving the region independent. Hellos first adopted the term Free-isles two years later.

Today, Pelasgos remains an industrial centre, its people hard-working and loyal to the empire and the Church of the Undying Machine, which has a strong foothold there. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

PELASGOS, FREE ISLES OF: Ntn. Independent nation occupying the south western-most part of the PELASGOSI PENINSULA and the hundreds of islands dominating its south western coastline and the waters of the SEA OF LISASSA. The Free-isles are famed for their natural harbours, and, despite the waning of the Inner Sea and its life, their fishing fleets, which are still the primary source of industry and food to the islands and their inhabitants.

The region was originally occupied by the KORACHANI EMPIRE alongside the rest of PELASGOS in 73 RM and was considered part of the Pelasgosi territories for most of the Korachani occupation. With Pelasgos it became a major industrial centre, with many mines, foundries and manufactories appearing there over the years. However, its people were used to their independence – each island had been largely self-sufficient until the Korachani occupation and was not used to being governed by a foreign entity. As a result, its people persistently denied the introduction of Korachani culture and customs and retained their classical Pelasgosi lifestyles. This led to many clashes between ICONOCLASTS⁽²⁾ and the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE with locals, and fluctuating periods of unrest that sometimes escalated into outright dissent.

This intense industry of the nation led to the Korachani occupation dividing Pelasgos in two in 3204 RM, with the culturally naturalized north remaining an industrial centre, and the south being handed over to the DOMNITORS. Many of the islands were effectively abandoned to self-rule, though they were technically still vassals of Korachan.

A series of events would lead to the independence of the south, starting with a revolt in a major gold mine in 3791 RM that left hundreds dead and the industry there effectively ended. The REIGN OF THE APOSTATE POPE between 3802 – 3814 RM saw the birth of a new sect of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, which led to a schism in the church. The splinter sect was quelled in the years following the death of the APOSTATE POPE in 3814 RM. Pressure from HELLOS, the regional capital, exacerbated the wane of the south and in 3833 RM, after years of strife, the Domnitors eventually departed Southern Pelasgos, leaving the region independent for the first time since Hellos first adopted the term Free-isles two years later, during the FESTIVAL OF AFFIRMATION in 3835 RM.

Today it enjoys a healthy culture, and though it will never be a political or military behemoth, its islands remain productive, with fishing remaining its main industry. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

PELASGOSI PENINSULA: Geo. Peninsula in the south of CENTRAL LLACHATUL, protruding into the INNER SEA. It is home to the KORACHANI vassal of PELASGOS and the independent nation of the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS.

PELCHATH: Set. City in the c north of PHYRR, to the south of the DISHKAR MAZE. It serves as a tenuous link between the west and east of Phyrr, though is ruled by an insular TECHNARCH whose paranoia has led to the wane of the city amongst larger more prominent city-manufactories (Pop. c. 36,000).

PELETA: Geo. Rocky coastal region in the south east of OPHIUSSA.

PELIGRAN: see LICHENWOOD, THE.

PELLACHAD: also 'the Endless Library'. Rel. His. Str. Expansive stone temple in the south of the EPHOT THAS in the south east of ANUBIA. It resembles a large mausoleum, though instead of housing a body, each crypt is instead home to a huge stone tablet. There are hundreds of unique tablets and, when read in sequence, they make an epic cyclical passage of the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN. Some tablets are broken or missing entirely, leading to missing passages. Despite this, it remains one of the most complete sources of ancient writings from the Mythologia elyden.

Copies of the tablets are now housed in The contents of the tablets have been copied and are housed in the IMPERIAL MUSEUM OF ANTIQUITIES in KHADON, KORACHAN.

PELLARIG: 1. Sea. Bay to the south of PHYRR in the south west of SAMMAEA, forming a north eastern extension of the SEA OF AMMASH^(1.). Its waters are incredibly polluted from industrial and chemical runoff from the URRABANA river and very little lives in it, and what does is sickly and mishappen.

2. Set. Major coastal city in the south east of PHYRR. It forms a part of the NACRE ROAD and is an influential mercantile presence along the traderoute and is a stronghold of the NACRE LEAGUE, though their influence is curtailed by near constant observation by TECHNARCH surveillance. It is amongst the more industrialised cities along the path, and is known for its workshops, mechanics, technologists, and TECHNARCANISTS, many of whom serve the LANDSHIPS that crawl along the trade route (Pop. c. 320,000).

PELLUCIDEA: Set. Coastal settlement in the south west of KHITAI. It is known for its stilt-architecture, designed to protect its people from the extreme tides in the area. Its main industry is salt, which is collected in gigantic pans outside the settlement (Pop. c. 16,000).

PELNA: Set. City in the south west of KERRAS PELLN. Its main industry is granite mining (Pop. c. 32,000).

PELOPRA: Set. Fortified city in the north east of the TARAHID ANNEXES.

During the height of tis power in c. 2800 RM the city boasted a population of upwards of 100,000 but a PLAGUE in 2896 reduced this to little more than 10,000, a calamity from which it never recovered. The ruins of the old city – to which entry is forbidden due to the many mass graves there – surround the city like a wall. The city itself is shunned by most outsiders and it is only valued for its diamond quarries, themselves thought to be waning, and under the control of PATRICIAN HOUSE SATINA (Pop. c. 20,000).

PELUCIA: Ser. Small city in the region of SURDA in the c east of THE SURRACH. It is known for its large fortified square towers, which are inhabited by the wealthiest and most powerful in the city. It is a matter of pride amongst the wealthiest families in the city to have the clearest most open view of the city (Pop. c. 20,000).

PELUCIAR: Geo. Hills in the south of LANTUA, forming the south western reaches of the ALLAD Mountains. The hills are known for their impressive crystalline formations that reflect light in a myriad of pastel tints. Despite their being magickally inert and of little industrial use, parts of the region are quarried and the crystals are used in the creation of sculptures and object d'art, which can command high prices due to the difficulty in working the crystals.

PELVIC CROWN, the: Pol. Obj. Crown worn by the Arch MATRIARCH of NAARETH. The crown is ancient, dating back to the 2nd millennium RM, after the appearance of the CHURCH OF THE VOLUTE there. The original crown was destroyed following the appearance of the KORACHANI EMPIRE there in 2532 RM, though a new one was made from the exhumed body of the last Arch Matriarch, who was slain during the Korachani conquest, and remains in use to this day.

PEMMAL: Set. Fortified city-manufactory in the c south west of PHYRR (Pop. c. 20,000).

PENORU: Set. Small coastal city in the east of SURUTUR (Pop. c. 13,000).
 PENARYS: (B. 3975 RM) Pol. In the military of the HIGH-EMPIRE OF KORACHAN, warden of the empire's 3rd province.

PENESS: Set. In the west of the tribe of INDAAR, in the east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 5,500).

PENGAR: His. Ntn. FIFTH AGE nation that emerged in c. 160 RM alongside TYRANOSH from the power vacuum left by the fall of THE PARRIA in the north of the PARTHISAN PENINSULA.

It existed for close to two millennia as a monarchy with close ties to PARTHIA, though by c. 1770 RM it was beginning to show signs of corruption. The accidental death of its king in 1844 RM led to a period of strife that culminated in a new line taking control in 1907 RM, after which it became known as MECHABET.

In the mid- 6^{th} century political upheaval in its north eastern territories led to the region breaking away in c. 580 RM, becoming known as BISBUT. See Vol II: Extinct Nations.

PENGARI: His. Lan. Now-extinct language that developed in the north of the PARTHISAN PENINSULA from c. 200 RM following the demise of THE PARRIAN coalition. It was spoken in the region until c. 2000 RM, after which it had been largely supplanted in the region by MECHABBI.

PENITENTS OF AVRAHAM: Rel. Org. Religious cult in FALLAROUR. It is an offshoot of the LAZANIST whose members are fanatics viewed with disdain by Lazanism. Like most followers of Lazanism, they are indoctrinated into the broadest of the ancient mysteries from the Mythologia Elyden, and are aware of humanity's true heritage: primarily that they are the children of the DEMIURGE AVRAHAM and that his brother RACHANAEL is little more than a parasite feeding on the souls of MORTALKIND.

They are infamous for their harsh acts of self-punishment, which originated as tests of strength and perseverance that were intended to show that the mortal peoples were worthy of the IMMORTAL birthright they were denied through the hubristic acts of the DEMIURGES during their shaping of ELYDEN. These acts grew more severe and self-pitying over time, until they became akin to self-flagellation and self-punishment. Most notorious of their many self-deprecating acts is the ritual commonly known as AVRAHAM'S LAMENT, in which individuals push metal spheres with no goal other than toil and punishment.

PENTARCH, the: in 3417 RM four of the five Pentarchs of the TARAHID ANNEXES were killed, leaving one – the Hierarch of NYCTERIS – in power. Under his rule, the Pentarchy was dissolved and the Tarahid Annexes were handed over to KORACHAN in 3421 RM. The title of Pentarch remained in use following this, even though power was entrusted with a single Autocrat. The government is known as the AUTOCRATIC PENTARCHY.

PENTARCHY OF TADARIDA: Pol. Seat of power in the TARAHID ANNEXES, composed of five thrones. Traditionally, each throne was filled by a hierarch of one of the nations' five districts. The Pentarchy was dissolved in 2417 RM by one of the Pentarchs who had the four other Pentarchs assassinated and who took over as a puppet of the empire, handing the region over to KORACHAN in 2421 RM.

PENTATAEL: 1. Rel. The main religion of the nations of EZASUH⁽²⁾, and later, ELAT and AYAD. The religion is known for its five female figures, each embodying a different aspect of life. It is thought that the aspects were once DEMIURGES, though the religion has become corrupted to such an extent that this is mere conjecture.

The aspects are SHAID (passion/hope, thought to be the Demiurge ALLAISHADA), KATON (craft/artifice, thought to be the Demiurge SYNCHTHONITH), DALANTA (despair/duty, thought to be the Demiurge TALANTEHUT), NYID (solitude/love, thought to be the Demiurge NEITH^(1,1)), SIY (sin/love, thought to be the Demiurge SYBARIS^(1,1)). The SIBYLLINE BOOKS are major religious texts that are as much part of the region's culture and history as much as they are religious rulebooks. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

- 2. Rel. Set. Holy city in $\underline{EZASUH}^{(2)}$, in the west of $\underline{LLACHATUL}$. The city is the ancestral home of the Pentataeli faith⁽¹⁾. (Pop. c. 303,800).
- 3. Set. City in ELAT, named after the eponymous city in EZASUH⁽²⁾. It is a major centre of the state religion, and home to its religious leaders. It has often been erroneously called the capital of Elat in many academic writings, including older versions of the ENCYCLOPAEDIA ELYDEN as well as the ATLAS ELYDEN (Pop. c. 49,000).

PENUMBRA: 1. Geo. Region in KHARKHARADONTIS surrounding the BLACK FOUNTAIN for a radius of some 100-miles, occupying an area of about 31,000-square-miles. It is known for its violent lightning storms that, over the years, have fused the earth into black glass. The ATRAMENTA is very strong here, and what little life survives here is adapted to the harsh Atramental climate See Vol IV: the Materia Omna.

2. Set. Fortified city in the far west of $\underline{KHARKHARADONTIS}$, in the foothills of the $\underline{ACHARKHARAN}$ Mountains. the city is believed to be the birthplace of the dark form of $\underline{ATRAMENTA}$, known as $\underline{PENUMBRISM}$. The city is dark, and tainted, a personification of all that is corrupt in \underline{ELYDEN} .

PENUMBRISM: Also 'Schiamachy'. Sup. Rnk. Specific SPHERE of shaping practiced by SHAPERS known as PENUMBRISTS. Penumbrism is considered the purest form of ATRAMENTISM, and focuses on manipulation of shadow, and electricity, with limited physical transmutative abilities.

It is most common in the KORACHANI EMPIRE and lands that were once part of it, such as the REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO, ALMAGEST, and its various old colonies.

PENUMBRIST: Nou. 'Penumbrism'. Plr. 'Penumbrists'. Sup. Org. Mil. Rnk. An order of SHAPERS in the KORACHANI EMPIRE, whose MINASTERIA (2.) has been based in the city of BARAK in LAASKHA since 1215 RM. Its members are ATRAMENTAL shapers whose SPHERE is considered the purest form of Atramentism, and focuses on manipulation of shadow, electricity, with limited physical transmutative abilities.

They are considered by most to be the stereotypical shaper within the empire and are probably the most common shaper found working within the SANCTIFIED ORDERS OF THE INQUISITION, in particular the AVÉNETHI order, and they are the antithesis of most Firmamental shapers (or at least what most people think Firmamental shapers are like).

Unlike the members of other Minasteria, most Penumbrists have a more varied suite of abilities, meaning they can fulfil a wider variety of roles across different aspects of society, though they may not be as skilful as those from other Minasteria. Their most ubiquitous skill is the ability to not only detect but also pinpoint the source of ambient Atramental Corruption, though doing so can be dangerous, exposing them to said corruption at an accelerated rate.

They are often found in manufactories or around technarcane engines and machinery, where they use their knack for manipulating electricity to regulate voltages and outputs of batteries. More accomplished Penumbrists are able to better manipulate electricity and can harness Elyden's electromagnetic fired or ambient static to unleash as harmful blasts, making them useful in battle. They can also overload electrical circuits, causing machinery to break down – a useful asset in espionage, the military, or counterintelligence.

Their mastery over shadow is somewhat counterintuitive, with laypeople falsely assuming that they can animate shadows or manipulate them. The truth is more subtle yet no less special – Penumbrists can in fact manipulate SHADOWSTUFF, which is a raw form of UMBRA, which is used ubiquitously across the INNER SEA REGION as fuel for technarcana and the basis for various industries, medicines, and chemicals. The various CLONES, UMBRANS, and VAT-BORN creatures of the empire owe a lot to the tinkering of Penumbrists whose expertise allows for subtle manipulation of shadowstuff, allowing for calibration of dosages that would otherwise be beyond our grasp.

Others can command or call upon the strange and enigmatic creatures of the Atramenta, more commonly known as SHADES. This is a great honour in Korachan and those able to accomplish this are respected by the members of the clergy and laity alike, with some attaining high positions within the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. Others travel along the SHADOW MARCHES, where they protect them from the predations of wild shades that inhabit the wastes of KHARKHARADONTIS.

Penumbrists also have limited control over the physical body. Though not as accomplished or powerful as ANALOGONIN, they still have access to a wide variety of abilities. They can thicken their skin, power up their muscles to boost their strength and stamina. They have limited healing abilities, which are more suited to restoring their own minor wounds and stamina. They can also manipulate internal organs, causing them to fail, leading to great distress in their victims, possibly leading to permanent injury or death. They do however have mastery over cancers and ATRAMENTAL CORRUPTION of the body, and a subset of Penumbrists are able to detect such corruption, and can stymie or otherwise speed up their spread in a body.

This wide range of potential abilities has made Penumbrists a popular choice in the Korachani military, where they fulfil various roles. They are also adept mercenaries and assassins. See Vol IV: Spheres and types of Shaping.

PEONA: see MALICHARICHAN.

PEONER: 1. Mil. Soc. Rnk. Conscripts and other individuals (usually males, of varying age) press-ganged into KORACHANI military service. The term originated in c. 2300 RM in the city of PEONA, PELASGOS, where thousands of men and women were drafted from the city's unemployed and free ranks and shoved in front of LYRIDIAN troops.

2. Soc. Lan. In common slang, the term is generally seen as derogatory, insinuating uselessness and expendability.

PEOPLE, the: Soc. The GIGANRI of GNOTH refer to themselves as this.

PEOPLE'S BREAD, the: Soc. Cui. Bread is a right of all people in SARASTRO, including slaves. The right was hard-won following a period of civil uprising in 3154 RM, and the saying 'the people's bread' is now commonplace in the REFORMED EMPIRE, where all residents are entitled to a loaf of bread a day. The bakers of ARGEA are famed for their size and industry.

PEOPLE'S COALITION, the: Pol. Org. One of the three riling factions of AEONAS, with the others being the SILDELK RING, and HOUSE VODUS.

PEOPLE'S EAR: His. Str. Ancient amphitheatre that likely predates the FADING of the FOURTH AGE, situated on what is now the city of KEELA in the far south of ADHERA. It was used as a meeting place by early communities of the FIFTH AGE and by c. -500 RM had become a capital of the state of OTHERA.

PEOPLE'S NEEDLE: Arc. Monument in the south east of PARTHIS, built in c. 1000 RM atop the ruin of AZOR⁽²⁾, following the withdrawal of the KORACHANI INTERREGNUM in 967 RM. The monument takes the form of a narrow obelisk crafted from a single gigantic piece of red quartz.

PEOSHK, ORDER OF: Mil. Org. Major militant order in AKACHA, with a widespread influence across much of SOUTHERN SAMMAEA.

PEQHUT: Set. Small city in the south of CHEIRA (Pop. c. 14,000).

PERADDIMH: Set. Small fortified city in the c of \overline{ELAT} , close to the border with \overline{AYAD} (Pop. c. 14,000).

PERANDIPHENE: Rel. Ancient bronze-domed temple in the EPHOT
THAS in the south of ANUBIA, fronted by a stone-throned colossus, beneath which is the entrance into an ancient temple, its relics long-since plundered.

PERANTIA: Set. Settlement in the north of SARAGOS, forming part of the EAST ROAD. It is built over a FOURTH AGE ruin, and its vaulted cisterns are still in use to this day. It is known for its LYCEUM where many technologists and others receive their training (Pop. c. 12,000).

PEREIDAS: Geo. Mountain range in the east of EASTERN LLACHATUL, serving as a border between the north of LIMOTH⁽¹⁾ and the south of TETHYSIA.

PERESIA: Com. Set. Major city in the far south of LIDEA, in the region of GILGAMAE. It is a major stop along the SALT ROAD and has grown steadily through trade and the commerce (Pop. c. 92,500).

PERESIDON: Set. Major coastal city in the south of KASIHAAL, overlooking the BATHASHAL OCEAN (Pop. c. 330,000).

PERETAS: Set. Settlement in the c of GNOTH along the course of the river NEPHOT. It is known for its iron mines and smelting works (Pop. c. 8.000).

PERGAMON: Ind. Ser. Major industrial city in the c of ALMAGEST, known for its monolithic foundries and subterranean dross farms. Its central location has seen it thrive as a stopping point along both the SHADOW MARCH (where its catacombs and martyr halls are common sites of veneration) as well as the RED ROUTE, where it is a centre of trade and its merchant yards are amongst the largest in Almagest (Pop. c. 170,000).

PERGAMOS, TEMPLE OF: Rel. Str. Temple in OCTIRA, PELASGOS. It holds the RELIC of St. ASPIRA.

PERGOST: 1. Dem. 'Pergost'. Ntn. Federation of allied states located in the north of LLACHATUL, occupying the expansive peninsula known as REHEMAZ, Pergost is a vast land dominated by boreal forests, tundra, permafrost, jagged mountains and unnumbered coastal fjords. Here, mortals are outnumbered by wild beasts – one of few regions on present-day ELYDEN where this remains the case. It is a wild land where only the tough survive, through upholding traditions and respecting the land and elements.

Pergost emerged from the corpse of the great corrupt empire of ELDRIA, whose ORREX dynasty fell prey to its own vices and corruption in 3682 RM following a brutal civil war instigated by revolting slaves and workers. Once occupying lands controlled by extant Pergost, SABIA, KASPIA and ASTUDAN, it collapsed, leading in its wake a lawless void that for decades was filled with petty warring and scavenging amongst the brutalist citadels and palaces of the faded Eldrian dynasty.

It was this period that gave birth to Pergost. A loose alliance grew amongst some of the descendent states of Eldria, and in 3721 RM a conclave took place within the ruined coliseum of Pergost⁽²⁾, where the Federation was formed. The city of OSTOYAN would grow around the coliseum, which is today the home of the Federation, where envoys from across Pergost come to, to argue their cause.

The Federation remains largely insular, though has good relations with Sabia and Kaspia, with which it shares a common origin. It nevertheless trades its many natural resources – AMBERGRIS, furs, whale and seal oil – with the south.

Its people are pragmatic, a trait garnered from generations of working a harsh land, and in no small amount the adherence to the DREAMING NIGHT religion, which maintains that all life is the DREAM of an unknown god and that everything is doomed to end in an inevitable instant at some undetermined point in the future, when the deity finally wakes from its ageless slumber. As a result, most Pergosti grow up with a sober view of death and decay that few others understand.

In 3843 RM, a spirit possessed three SHAMEN siblings in the region of Mennom. Claiming to be the spirit of the LAST ELDRIAN ORREX, the shamen have garnered a sizeable following in the south east, which has grown increasingly independent over the last decades, leading many to think it will renounce the Federation completely. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

2. Pol. Str. Coliseum in the c south of PERGOST, where in 3721 RM representatives from amongst the major states of ELDRIA gathered to sign the agreement that solidified the Federation of Pergost. The city of OSTOYAN would later appear around the coliseum, which is now headquarters of the Federation, where diplomats from across Pergost convene to vote on matters of national importance.

PERIEDAS: Geo. Mountains in the c-south east of TETHYSIA, forming an extension of the KOTHA ICHOLLIGHA Mountains, crossing the TROPIC OF RAH, acting as a border to the eastern-most expanse of the TURCAR desert. These mountains are old and crumbling, their stones splintered and shattered, revealing strange fossils, and they are thought to be the precursors of the younger Kotha Icholligha.

PERIGON: Pol. Set. Major city and capital of the kingdom of ELSALEN in the c of ELALLIA (Pop. c. 173,100).

PERION: Geo. Headland in the north east of TETHYSIA, in the north east of EASTERN LLACHATUL. It is home to the OMERUVID CITIES – a semi-autonomous region.

PERIPATETIC: Eth. A nomadic people, descended from the children of VORROPOHAIAH and humans, corrupted by the maddening influences of the DEMIURGES' tomb in the PRISON CARCERI. They live in the upper levels of Carceri, and rarely venture to the deeper levels. It is uncommon for them to venture into the external world, though occasional forays are not unknown, particularly in Vârr, KORACHAN, PELASGOS and LYRIDIA, where some settlements welcome their exotic wares and their knowledge. Though in general they are shunned by most surface dwellers, who see them as grotesque and a reminder of the unknown world that lies beneath. See Vol II: Peoples and Races of Elyden.

PERIPATON, the: Rui. Underground citadel, long since ruined and abandoned, in the upper caves of the PRISON CARCERI, off the western coast of LYRIDIA DHAI. It is thought to have been a gate town in the THIRD AGE linking the upper world with the catacombs of Carceri, though was later abandoned and populated by the descendants of human and ROPOHAII unions who became known as PERIPATETICS, after the ruin.

PERIS: Set. Fortified city in the south east of JURRAS^(2.), overlooking the SEA OF DEKANA (Pop. c. 13,500).

PERISPIRIT: Oth. In the study of the SPIRIT and OTHERWORLD, the perispirit is the link between the material body and the immaterial spirit. In most cases it is referred to only in a symbolic sense. See Vol IV: the Afterlife and the spirit.

PERISTULLA: Geo. Large grasslands in the c south of OPHIUSSA. Originally a part of the SEIATHIA forest, the woodlands were largely cut down throughout the FIFTH AGE to make room for pastures and fields, many of which remain in use today. Other areas are now abandoned and are slowly being reclaimed, with thickets and sparse woodlands reappearing.

PERIFLAIA: Pol. Set. Capital of CHAUTULA. It forms a part of the VAEVECTAN TRAIL. (Pop. c. 390,000).

PERQHUTA: For. Heavily forested region in the west of the HENDECARCHY of HATON, in MALAN. It is known for its dense growths of giant trees.

PERENNIAL PAEAN, the: Rel. A continuous prayer that is uttered by a large choir within the city of THALI in the CITIZENRY OF THALI. If Thalian legends are to be believed, the prayer has been in the process of being spoken for over 780-years, since the rebirth of its OTHERWORLDER deity in 3217 RM. Around 300 chorists are gathered in the rotunda of the CHURCH OF THE OTHERWORLDER at any one time, working in eight hour shifts constantly, regardless of the weather or political situation. It has become a place of pilgrimage to many faithful from across the Citizenry of Thali.

PERSANEER, GEM OF: Obj. Black diamond crafted in c. 2190 in VECTIS to mark its independence. It was made through archaic TECHNARCANE methods from the ash of 12 VAEVECTAN^(1.) lords. It is a potent magickal focus that has been linked to various objects and people throughout history, including – being part of a conquerors crown, the pommel of a warlords sword, and an amulet, amongst others. Its whereabouts were lost in c. 3740 RM when it is thought to have been sold to a private collector in the east of MENISCEA.

PERSAWOL: Fau. exotic trees unique to the north of BROR^(1.), noted for their interesting shapes. Each tree has a long thick trunk from which emerge a multitude of branches that fan upwards and outwards, with a thick layer of moss-like leaves that face upwards in the shape of a plate or shallow bowl, which collects morning dew from which the tree draws sustenance. The unique canopy provides shelter to both fauna and mortals from sun and rain, and entire settlements enjoy their protection. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

PERSECUTION OF THE BARDS: see SILENCING OF THE SONG.

PERSIFLAGA: Com. Set. Trade city in the far east of the UMBRA SOKHAR, close to the border with N'RAKH. The city was once a major HUMAN metropolis, though for all of recorded history has been known as a diminished city, with a large DEGENERATE and WEIRDLING population. Where degenerates are shunned in most other cities, living in ghettos or as destitutes, here they fill the role of a lower class, serving as manual labourers and doing other menial jobs.

The city is one of few in the Umbra Sokhar to trade east with N'rakh and has diplomats with knowledge of the aanth nation (Pop. c. 47,500).

PERSIMMON: Flo. Common fruit in EASTERN LLACHATUL and the far north west of MENISCEA, most common in HALEDONIA, KOMMEA, LOEGRESS^(1.), MEHITIEL, SEDALLIA, the north of TETHYSIA, and TISARA. They feature min many legends and myths of the east of Llachatul, where they were gifted to humans by divine figures, granting them sapience and the ability to question. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

PERSIMMON, PRESERVED: Cui. A delicacy in EASTERN LLACHATUL where PERSIMMONS are massaged daily while still on the tree. Once picked the are skinned and hung up to dry before being coated in sugar. They have a jam-like consistency and are considered a delicacy.

PERUN OF FULMIN: (B. ? RM) Sup. SHAPER, native to the town of FULMIN in the north of TZALLRACH.

PERUSH: Set Settlement in the south west of CISNERIA, along the course of the river NAMESH (Pop. c. 5,000).

PESNA: Pol. Set. Capital city of GYZHA (Pop. c. 479,000).

PESSUNDATA: Sup. Geo. Blighted region in the far west of SARAGOS, in the eastern-most reaches of the desert of SLAAN. The MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN claims it is the place where the SCION TALLAS^(2.) was cast down by the champion AHEFAK in the THIRD AGE.

PEST: Set. Fortified settlement in the north of VENTHIR (Pop. c. 4,000).

PET-AMEN: Arc. Ancient structure on the island of SAEMDIS off the western coast of TZALLRACH.

PETEHAROTHIS: Geo. Rocky region in the C of THETIS, known for its labyrinthine winding steep valleys. It is one of the region's most susceptible to the harsh winter storms that wrack southern Thetis and most settlements that surround it are built with high western-facing walls to protect against them.

PETITION OF MANUMISSION: Int. Soc. Pol. Obj. In the KORACHANI EMPIRE, a document that is given to HELOTS and work-slaves who have come of age (this varies by area and sex, though is typically between 14—16 years old), giving them the option to buy their freedom. The document is of heavy stock, individually numbered, and stamped by their owner and city representative. This Petition is needed for a work-slave to buy their freedom and cannot be replaced if lost or damaged. Due to this there exists a trade in counterfeit or stolen petitions.

Buying ones' freedom is a costly and difficult process, intended as little more than a target for the hopes of the masses. Fulfilment of this dream is more all the more difficult by the many distractions and vices that are presented to helots. It can take a responsible individual, with no other dependents, up to a decade to buy their freedom, and that is if they live austere lives with little-to-no distractions.

The Church of the Undying Machine is often willing to pay the Manumission fee to those who pledge to undertake the Shadow March. Few are aware of the risk this poses and see it as an easy way to freedom.

Those who accomplish the manumission are freed, becoming citizens, and are issued a PASSPORT, which cannot be replaced if damaged or lost, making them even more valuable than a Petition of Manumission. The new citizen is sent out into the world, with no possessions and little idea of how the world works. Most helots have little knowledge of how imperial life truly operates beyond their old home, and as freemen are forced to face the harsh realities of freedom with little support.

Life is hard for newly-freed helots, who must find employment and accommodation with little assets. Many find it easier to turn to a life of crime than to integrate into society, while others leave the city altogether, hoping to find better options elsewhere. Many, however, find freedom a difficult prospect and either return to workhouses and manufactories as free men, with few perks they would not have enjoyed previously. Many freemen pool their resources and live together in communal homes, forming close bonds and familial groups that last a lifetime. It is in these communities that many freemen find their life-partners and begin families whose children will know nothing of life in the manufactories.

Those who are unable to find their footing as freemen may find themselves in debt, or turning to hospices, many of which have gangs of 'recruiters' who actively seek out those struggling.

Though there exist freeman hospices that truly do seek to rehabilitate and prepare newly-freed work-slaves for life as citizens, including teaching them to read and write, or teaching them new skills; the harsh reality is that most are little more than workhouses, using the excuse of teaching new skills and vocations to receive free labour. Most such hospices are run by patricians, often the same patricians that own manufactories.

PETITIONERS OF THE MACHINE: also 'Petitioners of the Throne'. Rel. Soc. Rnk. Common term for the pilgrims undergoing THE SHADOW MARCH, in particular those who make it past the GATE OF BAB-ILU and are allowed to enter the SEPULCHRAL PALACE. Though many undertake the March willingly, either selling their debts to the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE or allowing the church to pay any manumission fees they owe, others are pressganged in what is commonly known as the GREAT TITHE. Others are simply freemen with the means and devotion to abandon their old lives (often urged by the Church to sell their possessions as a means of assuaging their sins), dedicating themselves to the March.

Many pilgrims march barefoot so their blood (which is considered consecrated following the sacraments they take before commencing the March) can cleanse tainted lands.

PETITIONERS OF THE THRONE: see PETITIONERS OF THE MACHINE.

PETIRI: Set. Fishing settlement in the west of KHAMID, along the isthmus of EKESTH (Pop. c. 4,200).

PETLIA: Set. Coastal settlement in the far south east of OD MEGINNAS⁽¹⁾ (Pop. c. 5,700).

PETRAKOR: Set. Small city in the c north east of KULIGALA, in the east of the CARCHEMISHI PENINSULA (1.), in the east of SAMMAEA (Pop. c. 18,000).

PETRIKA: Sct. Coastal settlement in the north west of VAALK, known to convert saltwater into palatable water through technarcane means (Pop. c. 9,500).

PETRUDARA: also 'Wall of Spirits, the'. Int. Rel. Sup. Str. A supranatural structure outside the city of UTTRAI in SABIA. It represents the peak of SHAPING in Sabia, and consists of the SPIRITS⁽¹⁾ of the unhallowed dead, bound and tethered to point of overlap between the MATERIAL PLANE and the otherworld where they are visible as a translucent amorphous wall, about a mile long, anchored on both ends by a church of the FROSTBLOOD. In Sabian theocracy the souls of the wicked are not considered to ascend to the heavens, and this is seen as a fitting punishment for them. MORTALS concentrating on the wall may see faces form and dissolve over time, with some mouthing unheard words before losing themselves in the writhing mass.

It is seen as a place of warning, where the living may come for reflection, to see what awaits them should they not live virtuous lives.

Those sensitive to the MATERIA OMNA, or ANIMISTS, are easily able to commune with these spirits, though this is forbidden by church doctrine, and guards are stationed at the wall at all times to discourage this and other heretical acts.

PETTAUG: Set. Small city in the north west of KASPIA. Its main industries are fishing and whaling (Pop. c. 9,000).

PEUS: Set. Small city in the north of SURUTUR (Pop. c. 12,500).

PH-DA: Set. Oas. Fortified oasis settlement in the far south west of ANUBIA. The settlement is a link between ANUBIS and the SOLEYN TERRITORIES and is home to caravanserais (Pop. c. 3,000).

PHA RETH: Set. Fortified settlement in the far north of ALAM BETHYL, (Pop. c. 2,800).

PHACHOR: Geo. Expansive area of karst in the c of SKAROS, known for its many small caves. The region was the heart of a mid-FOURTH AGE culture known as ACASTIX⁽¹⁾, of which many ruins remain in the surrounding area.

PHACLH: Rui. Ruined mesa-top citadel the c west of the KHARKHARADONTID desert, dating back to the THIRD AGE. The material from which it is constructed is extremely durable and unknown. Runes, their surfaces emanating heat, cover the ruin, and are believed to be FIRMAMENTAL in nature – if so, they are one of the few known Firmamental pieces of architecture found so close to the BLACK FOLINTAIN.

PHADIA: Set. Settlement in the south of the PARTHISAN colony of EZHIRAYA^(2.), on the south western periphery of the FIRMAMENTALLY TAINTED region of TRAAGRIA. Its main industry is the mining of SUNSTONES (Pop. c. 9,000).

PHAENNA ONÉSIMUS: Sup. Rak. Wielder of the LIGHT UNDYING, exiled from AMDUKA for tainting her SHAPING with ATRAMENTAL ideologies.

PHAEIN: Geo. Expansive flat stony region along the VERTAEIA peninsula in the far north west of BROR⁽¹⁾, overlooking the SEA OF IDALIA. It is known to KORACHANI explorers for its sun-parched stone, which reflects light, causing it to be seen from miles away, and making immediate exploration difficult. The glare is intense and radiates a great deal of heat and light, causing temporary blindness and skin to redden, leading to some cases of 1st degree burns.

The rocks are thought to be FIRMAMENTALLY-sensitive, absorbing the heat and light of the sun and reflecting them back out. If this postulation is correct the stones do not store this energy, for the region is dark at night.

PHAGASRIA: Set. City in the north east of AETHIOS, in the region of ACTANORS (Pop. c. 35,500).

PHAIA: Rvr. River flowing east into the BAY OF LALLEH from sources along the RHAECHA and OTHACHA Mountains. Its waters are slow flowing, pooling into small lakes along its length and are relatively clean.

PHAINEIN THE CURSED: Leg. Legend common to KOLCHIS. In the tale, a SPIRIT (sometimes referred to as an OTHERWORLDER) wanders the boreal woods of the north during winter months, whose presence is considered to be a harbinger of death or calamity. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

PHAINEIN'S TOMB: Geo. Ancient stone mound in the north of KOLCHIS, north of the KRULL DARGA Mountains. Apocryphal Kolchisi claims that the mound is the final resting place of the ancient tyrant known as PHAINEIN THE CURSED, who appears in local legends as a boreal spirit

PHALERE: Set. Small city in the north of KORACHAN, in the PALAN basin. It is a producer of fine marble, and is known for its sculptural tradition. Statues produced in Phalere are seen in throne-rooms and royal chambers across the INNER SEA (Pop. c. 10,000).

PHALOTRA: Set. Small city in the north of OPHIUSSA, along the course of the river MARAGA, in the ANNEAMAL forest. It is known for the variety of game that lives in the surrounding woodlands, particularly AMAURID ELKS. It is known for its hunters and trappers, and its main export is dried meats and furs, many of which are sold to merchants crossing the settlement along their circuit of THE WAY trade-route (Pop. c. 18,000).

PHAND: 1. His. Ntn. Ancient kingdom in what is now the west of KARGAMA, ruled by the CONSANGUINE DYNASTIES. It emerged from the eponymous city^(2,) in c. -500 RM, following centuries of expanding power and wealth amid the priestly cast that oversaw the veneration of the KARGAMAN IDOL AGHATYRAELL. By then the caste had already been exercising incestuous relationships to stop their power from spreading to other families, leading to birth defects that were regarded by many people as gifts from Aghatyraell, bringing the caste further prestige.

The Consanguine Dynasties spread over the next centuries, coming to encompass most of present-day western Kargama, as well as the south west of the present-day TEMPLAR STATES at their largest reach. As the Dynasties grew rich and powerful, they commissioned great projects – sculptures, paintings, buildings, clothing, amongst others – which made the region famous for its patronage of the arts, and it became renowned for its craftspeople, something which remains so to this day.

Phand saw the unification of ELITAGRA as a FEDERATION as a great threat, causing it to bolster its borders and raise large conscript armies, which in turn caused Elitagra to march against it. In 1126 RM the city of Phand was taken after a 3-month siege, and the idol of Aghatyraell toppled, ending its religious dominance in the region and the Consanguine Dynasties. Following this, the territories of Phand were absorbed into the Federation, and the city of Phand itself became known as FENT. See Vol III: Extinct States.

2. His. Ser. Ancient city in the west of present-day KARGAMA, situated along the southern bank of the river WOLMASH. It was capital to the CONSANGUINE DYNASTIES for many centuries, until its conquest by ELITAGRI armies in 1126 RM. The city diminished greatly after this, until it was eventually abandoned in c. 1150 RM. It was later resettled in c. 2900 RM, following the transfer of the capital to KARGHEMIR⁽²⁾, after which it became known as FENT.

PHANNIA: Set. Settlement in the far east of the nation of DURCHAA, known for its trapping and trade in pelts. The settlement is known to attract itinerants and mountain men who spend more time in the wild than they do in civilisation, returning to the city on to sell their trophies (Pop. c. 6,000).

PHANODARUS ARIO: (B. 3949 RM) Pol. Present leader of the Autocratic Republic of AQUARIIA.

PHANU: 1. For. Dense forest in the east of SAUA, said to be home to many nature spirits. It is known for its boar

- 2. Lake in the east of SAUA, to the east of the KARPAROS Mountains.
- 3. Geo. Mountain pass cutting across the KARPAROS Mountains, linking the east of SAUA with the far west of MALAN.
- 4. Set. Small city in the east of \underline{SAUA} , in the above forest. Its main industry is logging (Pop. c. 16,000).

PHAOH: Pol. Royal title in ANANTHUL, currently held by ENEXTHOL III. The first Phaoh emerged in c. 1430 RM in the power vacuum left by the SCION TELEANYARA'S attack against PHARTH in 1378 RM, which annihilated its capital, PANET. This led to the wane of the region and the fragmentation of its economy and infrastructure.

The coast was abandoned to the amnesic waters of the LETHEA and CHORSAIRS, and people settled inland, where a series of tyrants emerged over the coming decades. By 1436 RM one region, known as Ananthul, gained the upper hand and began to assimilate surrounding territories. The ruler began calling himself Phaoh, and his offspring would follow in his steps taking on the moniker as a title, starting the PHAOHNIC DYNASTY that survives in the region today.

PHAOHNIC DYNASTY: Pol. His. The ruling dynasty of ANANTHUL, dating back to c. 1430 RM, when the first PHAOH united the disparate warring people that had inherited the lands left behind by the collapse of PHARTH following the destruction of its capital in1378 RM. the Dynasty survives today and is ruled by ENEXTHOL III.

PHARAGA: Set. City in the east of KARAKHAS, abandoned in c 4003 RM following increased supranatural activity in the region surrounding it led to the creation of the ATRAMENTAL WASTELAND now known as AKRABATOR.

PHARAHIA: Set. Coastal city on the island of PHARU in KHAMID (Pop. c. 20,000).

PHARAITHA: Set. Fortified coastal city in the south of ALAM BETHYL, in the south of the territory of UNERKILISS^(2.), overlooking the BAY OF OLOTAR. It is fortified against coastal attack and controls a fleet of speedy frigates that patrol its waters against pirates (Pop. c. 44,200).

PHARANA: Set. Conurbation in the north of CHANDOS^(3,), comprised of a few dozen fortified farming communities (Pop. c. 4,000).

PHARANDEAL TANUIT, SIXTH OF THE ELEVEN: m. Pol. Per. (B. 3789 RM) Sixth of the HENDECARCHS of MALAN and ruler of the HENDECARCHY of AONIA.

PHARANX: Dem. 'Pharanxi. 1. Geo. Once rocky-region south of the SNJEMET Mountains in KHAMID, known prior to the CATACLYSM OF KHAMID for its many caverns and sinkholes. The Cataclysm saw the majority of the region destroyed, leaving a deep cleft south of the mountains.

2. Sea. Sea that appeared following the CATACLYSM OF KHAMID in 101 RM, which destroyed the hilly region of the same name that occupied the same general area. The sea is treacherous, peppered with remnants of the old mainland in the form of stone needles (many of which remain under the sea) and large steep-sided islands riddled with caverns.

The Pharanxi coast runs for over 300-miles in the south east of KHAMID, and is particularly steep-sided, dominated by gigantic cliffs, many reaching hundreds of feet up, rendering them unassailable. Its waters are close to impossible to navigate for the sub-surface debris that litters +them.

PHARESES: 1. Sea. Treacherous sea to the south of KHAMID, known for its many island and dangerous reefs.

2. Rui. Ancient city in KHAMID in the above region^(1,), destroyed in 101 RM by the CATACLYSM.

PHARIEN: Set. small city in the far south west of ZHARIAH^(2.), in the region of KUIASH. Its main industry is iron mining (Pop. c. 13,200).

PHAROANT: His. Pol. The ancestral rulers of KHAMID, said to have appeared in the THIRD AGE claiming ancestry to the SCION KHAMAR, and by extension, the DEMIURGE DURUTHILHOTEP himself.

They used the FIRMAMENT in all aspects of their lives, particularly their health, where they achieved great longevity. Their power diminished following the devastation wrought late in the FOURTH AGE, though they remained a powerful force in the DARK SEA. Desperate to maintain some form of power, their obsession with life turned to death and the preservation of their bodies for as long as possible in great hollow pylon mausolea that dot the landscape to this day.

They disappeared after the CATACLYSM OF KHAMID in 101 RM, though the name was adopted by a later dynasty that appeared in 2384 RM and ruled until 3021, when they subjugated themselves to the KORACHANI EMPIRE, who granted them citizenship of the empire and lands there in return for their surrender of Khamid. When Korachan abandoned Khamid to the DOMNITORS in 3721 RM, many of the descendants of the last Pharoants, who by then had become indoctrinated to imperial customs and culture and had grown complacent, left also, effectively ending the influence of the old Pharoant dynasties, such as they were, in Khamid.

When the Domnitors eventually left a newly independent Khamid 60 years later, the title Pharoant was reconstituted, and was applied to the first independent Khamidian governor, who formed a new republic council from which a chairperson known as Pharoant would be elected every seven years. The second Pharoant elected in this way, JENDAYA MET, manipulated the constitution and took advantage of the love the people had for her and turned the position into a hereditary one kept for life, making her the first absolutist monarch ruler of an independent Khamid, corrupting the republic council into the PHAROANT COUNCIL. The tradition remains to this day, and the present Pharoant is her great-great-great-great-great-granddaughter MESSIT SABAH III.

PHAROANT COUNCIL: Pol. Org. Ruling council in KHAMID, tasked with the daily running of the kingdom, whose members answer only to the PHAROANT. The council has its roots in the newfound independence of Khamid following the regions' abandonment by the DOMNITORS in 3781 RM after 60-years as caretakers there. The title Pharoant was reconstituted, and was applied to the first independent Khamidian governor, who formed a new republic council from which a chairperson known as Pharoant would be elected every seven years. The second Pharoant elected in this way, JENDAYA MET, manipulated the constitution and took advantage of the love the people had for her and turned the position into a hereditary one kept for life, making her the first absolutist monarch ruler of an independent Khamid. She renamed the republic council as the Pharoant Council, whose members became advisors to the Pharoant.

- PHAROLA: 1. Set. Settlement in the far north of ERET^(2.), in northern-most tip of the JAMBIAN headland. The settlement is home to a famed lighthouse (Pop. c. 4,000).
 - 2. Str. Lighthouse in the north of ERET^(2.).
- PHARTH: His. Ntn. One of many early FIFTH AGE cultures that emerged in the c west of the PORPHYRI PENINSULA, in what are today the north west of SABAISA, the east of ANANTHUL, and the south of PORPHYR, between c. 450 c. 1380 RM. Its founders were refugees from various cultures and peoples from the early Fifth Age, as well as earlier civilisations from the late FOURTH AGE. See Vol III: Extinct States.
- PHARTHI: Lan. Language spoken in ANANTHUL that is descended from the earlier FIFTH AGE OLD PHARTHI. See Vol II: Languages.
- PHARTHI, OLD: His. Lan. Now-extinct language spoken by the early FIFTH AGE PHARTHI EMPIRE. The language is thought to borrow many words from an even older tongue that dates back to the FOURTH AGE, including possibly IROTHANI. See Vol II: Languages.
- PHARU: Geo. Island off the south eastern coast of KHAMID, west of the BOILING SEA.
- PHAZIMA: Rui. Ancient city in the CHOUNAL peninsula in the south west of NÁRTHEL.
- PHELONION: Soc. Rel. Religious ritual garment worn by HARBINGERS and other ranks of the imperial churches. Following the DISSOLUTION OF THE HIGH-EMPIRE OF KORACHAN, many members of the largely-defunct REFORMED CHURCH OF SARASTRO continued to wear their vestments as testament to their faith.
- PHATH: Set. Small fortified city in the south west of the tribe of HAVATH in the far south east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. It is a major logging region (Pop. c. 11,500).
- PHELERA: Set. Settlement in the c-south east of JURRAS⁽²⁾, in the northern foothills of the INNORADOS Mountains. It is controlled by PATRICIAN HOUSE OTTUSARA and is the main source of food for the fortress of TERAMA UNA, the headquarters of the House (Pop. c. 3,200).
- PHEMA: Set. Settlement in the north east of the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS, along the banks of the river PHEMOS (Pop. c. 8,000).
- PHEMERION, the: His. Pol. Org. Ruling caste in MEHMUTH that emerged in c. 2170 RM amid a prolonged period of suffering at the hands of incessant MEDHAMANNI and later PHYRRAN slave raids and attacks to rally its people into mounting a concerted defence. They orchestrated the construction of a series of defensive lines in the north of Mehmuth that stalled the Phyrran attacks, giving them enough time to expand and fortify existing subterranean fortresses that later became known as PHEMERION BUNKERS.

They waned in influence as Mehmuthi culture diminished over the coming centuries, and are known now through the expansive series of tombs that exist in the wilderness of western MAENMIST, forgotten by its people.

- PHEMERION BUNKERS: Soc. Mil. Str. Expansive series of subterranean fortresses constructed by the PHEMERION in MEHMUTH (extant MAENMIST) between c. 2180 and 2400 RM, many of which were built in earlier fortresses whose foundations lay in naturally occurring cave networks that riddle the central territories of Maenmist. Their construction followed the construction of an extensive line of fortifications in the north of Mehmuth, in what is today the west of Maenmist along the EMRINI escarpment, and the bunkers can be found to the south and east of that area. It is unknown quite how they are utilised by the
- PHEMOS: Rvr. River in the north east of the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS, part of which forms a border with PELASGOS. The river flows for c. 175-miles east before emptying into the SEA OF SPIRES.
- PHEN: Ser. Settlement in the c west of RAONGEN⁽²⁾ in the southern face of the ERIVOINE Mountains. Its min industry is UMBRA extraction, which is reached by drilling deep beneath the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region of ALVELM, some 50-miles north west (Pop. c. 6,000).

- PHENESH: 1. Rvr. River in the north east of NÁRTHEL, its waters largely seasonal, flowing widest and strongest in mid- to late-summer from the north eastern-most prong of the UEFIR highlands. Following the death of the region by c. 2200 RM, the river flow has been erratic, and in some years has slowed to a trickle.
 - 2. Set. Major city that has existed since the time of the AMNATHI KINGDOMS, overlooking the ABYSS OF ENESH. Though much of the surrounding region was devastated by the long war between KORACHAN and the VENATHI empire, Phenesh remained as an agricultural centre, well until c. 2200 RM, by which time much of its arable land become dust and the growing ATRAMENTAL TAINT caused its fields to wither, its major economic contributions coming from DROSS farms, which pumped their produce west and south east into MULCIBER, and farther, to the larger VENTHIRI cities.

Following the silting up of the STRAIT OF NÁRTHEL late in the FIFTH AGE, Phenesh began to grow instead as a mercantile centre, with ships that would once have crossed the Strait stopping there instead, offloading their goods for caravans to move across land to KAELRATH via the RED ROUTE. The city has become a major link for VENTHIR to the eastern seas, as the increased traffic and trade has seen it grow considerably in size (Pop. c. 181,000).

- PHEQIKAL: Set. City in the north west of CHEIRA (Pop. unknown).
- PHESIA: Set. City in the north of OPHIUSSA, along the course of the river MARAGA. The city was once located at the mouth of the river, though lowering sea levels left it close to 500-miles from the present mouth of the river. Its earliest incarnation, founded in c. -600 RM, was abandoned in c. 1100 RM, but it was later resettled, becoming a trade centre along the river (Pop. c. 40,000).
- PHETUAS: Geo. Plains in the c of EDICULE^(L), north west of the SACHAR highlands.
- PHID: Set. Settlement in the north of CHTHYRID, along the southern bank of the river NOTHA. It controls many settlements to its south, along the scree at the base of the DAGHA plateau, who mine its riches (Pop. c. 14,000).
- PHILIA: Geo. Peninsula dominating the c and south of HANNAH, protruding south in the SEA OF ETAGIRIA.
- PHILOSOPHER-KINGS, the: His. Lan. Present-day name given to rulers of the FOURTH AGE city-state of AZOR^(1.) and the later coalition of Parria that rose in the early FIFTH AGE. The Philosopher-kings of the old citystate presided over a republic, elected by citizens from members of the royal caste.
- PHINAYAN: Set. Coastal settlement in the west of RAONGEN^(2.), overlooking the south of the BAY OF NURCYA. Its main industry is the cultivation of EVOLAM KELP (Pop. c. 6,300).
- PHIO: Lak. Lake in the c north of OPHIUSSA. Prior to the waning of ELYDEN'S seas the lake once formed the northern-most part of the BAY OF SNAKES. The lake forms a part of the expansive MARAGA river system and is prone to flooding early summer or following heavy rainfall, breaking its banks, often leading to its area more than doubling in size. As a result, very few settlements are found at its banks.
- PHIRRIA: 1. Geo. Forest in the north west of the HENDECARCHY of ATALLUA, in MALAN. It is known for its dense woodlands which are slowly being replenished by foresters after the forest was reduced to a single tree some 300 years ago. Today the forest in healthy and steadily growing around lake THALAL.
- 2. Set. Major city, located in the above region^(1.) in the HENDECARCHY of ATALLUA. Its main industry is logging, and every felled tree is replaced with three new ones, ensuring the steady regrowth of the forest (Pop. c. 67.000).
- PHIRRIC DANCE: Mys. Sup. One of many methods of affecting the FIRMAMENT, common in the region of PHIRRIA^(1.) in MALAN, after which it is name. Through the use of somatic methods such as dance and intricate hand gestures, individuals are able to subtly influence the Firmament, as though they were shapers. The art of Phirric Dance is not a replacement for shaping, and its use cannot replace any act of shaping. Its strengths lie in illusion, enchantment, misdirection.

PHIRUN KAMERATHIS: (D. 4012 RM) Edu. PELASGOSI scholar specialising in meteorology and later climatology. In 3992 he forwarded the first theory of climatology, which is still used to this day.

PHIO: Lak. Lake in the c north of OPHIUSSA. Prior to the waning of ELYDEN'S seas the lake once formed the northern-most part of the BAY OF SNAKES. The lake forms a part of the expansive MARAGA river system and is prone to flooding early summer or following heavy rainfall, breaking its banks, often leading to its area more than doubling in size. As a result, very few settlements are found at its banks.

PHIT: Rel. Geo. Religious site in the north west of AZAZEM. It is a relic of an older time and is ignored today.

PHITHASOL: 1. Rvr. 43-mile length of the course of the river SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾, in the c south west of RHINOCOLOURA, known for its many white-water rapids, making commercial travel across this part of the river impossible. There are 4 main cataracts, which as a group are named after an ancient temple, found in the region, which also gives its name to a major city, south of the first cataract, along the north eastern shore of lake SHIBBETH.

2. Rel. Str. Ancient temple, its exact location now lost, in the south west of RHINOCOLOURA. The series of white-water rapids along the course of the river SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾ are believed to have been named after the temple.

3. Set. Major city in the south west of RHINOCOLOURA, named after an ancient now-lost temple (Pop. c. 175,000).

PHITHOR MAAT: Mil. Str. BA'AKHI fortress in present-day north eastern N'RAKH. Built in c. 2000 RM following the southern expansion of its territories, the fortress was erected over the ruin of a far older structure, believed to date back to the FOURTH AGE and the ITHOIAN people who inherited the region from the SOVEREIGNTY OF THYM following its crumbling after the WAR OF SCOURGING.

After the DOMNITORS took control of BA'AKH following the KORACHANI EMPIRE'S abandoned of the region to them in 2732 RM, the territories gained in c. 2000 RM were largely lost to aggressive aanth activity and the general disinterest of the Domnitors in the place, and the fortress of Phithor Maat was abandoned in 2812 RM. Little remains of it now save for gossamer-sheathed ruins in lands reclaimed by N'rakh.

PHLEGRAS: Geo. Ancient plains in the south east of SAMMAEA, where a great pitched battle was fought, in which the SCION VOLUPIS was killed.

PHLESHREA: Riv. River in the c west of KASPIA, flowing north for 575 miles from sources in the northern face of the ILLIGHARI Mountains, before meeting its parent, the river TARAGEA.

PHLETHA: Set. Settlement in the micronation of ACHERA between LAASKHA, IPANAH^(2.) and AZAZEM (Pop. c. 8,000).

PHLOTEGNA: For. BUTTRESS TREE forest in the north east of NAARETH, north of the CEPHAS Mountains.

PHOBIA: Geo. Coastal mountain in the far south east of KULIGALA, in the far east of the CARCHEMISHI PENINSULA^(1.), in the east of SAMMAEA, overlooking the PHOBIAN WASTES.

PHOBIAN WASTES: Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTAL WASTELAND in the far south east of KULIGALA, on the southern-face of the PHOBIAN Mountains, overlooking and partially overlapping the SEA OF LETHEA. The region is named after the nearby mountains, and emerged in c. 1500 RM, coming to dominate the south east of the nation. Coupled with the intense amnesic effects of the Sea's waters, the Atramental wastes here make gibbering wrecks of those who venture too close. The air is incredibly humid and takes on traits of the Sea of Lethea, numbing the memories of those who spend too long there, replacing them with nightmarish visions that haunt sleep and waking thoughts alike.

The visions are thought by members of the $\underline{\text{CHURCH OF THE NEPHILIM}}$ to be the whisperings of the $\underline{\text{NEPHILIM}}$ themselves, and many travel there to purposefully subjugate themselves to these visions, which are considered to be religious epiphanies by most.

The region is categorised as $\underline{\text{DANGEROUS}}$ by the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI}}$ $\underline{\text{INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES}}.$

PHOEBOS: Oth. Form of OTHERWORLDER whose being is dictated by its vicinity or distance from the BLACK FOUNTAIN and the TRUE MENISCUS, as well as the ARCANE TEMPERS and natural wax and wane of the MATERIA OMNA. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

PHOENICEA: Int. Ast. Mys. A MAJOR STAR that features in the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN, particularly in relation to the THIRD AGE people of AZER. Its death was observed by PARTHISAN astrologers in 4005 RM and since then they have been studying the OTHERWORLD in an attempt to discern any information possible on the OTHERWORLDER that the star's death has inevitably given way to. Given that Phoenicea was a Major Star, the speculation surrounding the otherworlder linked to this star has been great, as such stars normally lead to the birth influential otherworlders.

PHOENIX: 1. Fau. Enigmatic bird (SUDEK) that for many years was believed to die and be resurrected. In truth the birds are unique in that they undertake a form of metamorphosis that is unseen amongst other creatures in ELYDEN.

Unlike other birds, they become self-sufficient very young and leave their parent's nest and will live on their own for up to two years. During this time both sexes will be of an unremarkable brown rusty colour.

At the end of this period, they gorge themselves on food and build a secure nest for themselves, in which they will moult and hibernate, their bodies taking on the appearance of a corpse. They will remain in this state for an entire winter, emerging as a bird reborn – larger and with brighter golden-red plumage, with two distinct long racket-shaped tail feathers that are deep crimson, flecked with gold. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

2. Soc. They are often associated with OTHERWORLDERS due to their physical metamorphosis.

3. Soc. The phoenix is a common heraldic and architectural motif within the KORACHANI EMPIRE and its vassals, and it is thought to symbolise the rebirth of MALICHAR as an OTHERWORLDER.

PHOGORTHA: Geo. Blasted landscape located in the far south of KHARKHARADONTIS, along the TROPIC OF MAOCARHL.

PHOL EGEDDA: His. Ntn. Ancient FIFTH AGE culture that dominated most of EASTERN LLACHATUL, until its collapse in c. 900 RM. It is thought to have collapsed following a devastating PLAGUE that left its population whittled down, and contact between surviving cities reduced.

Over the coming decades the cities became more insular and developed their own cultures, which served to further distance them form each other, degenerating into dozens of warring independent states and city-states, with the kingdom of HADEA emerging as the dominant one by c. 1060 RM, eventually taking over most of the coastal area east of present-day THETIS.

By the time the PROPHET KATHISIS arrived in what is now Tethysia in around 1570 RM, the region was made up of dozens of independent states, with Hadea already a distant memory, centuries old.

Kathisis founded the city of TETHYS in 1572 RM, which was soon able to make alliances with some of the existing states, with which it was able to subjugate others, and by c. 1650 RM most of these states had either been absorbed by Thetis, or had been destroyed, eventually leading to the formation of TETHYSIA. See Vol III: Extinct States.

PHOLIKIS: Set. Coastal city in the c north of PARTHIS, overlooking the SEA OF ERUISA. The city is a major harbour of Parthis, its deep waters largely unaffected by the diminishing of THE INNER SEA. It has expansive ship yards and docks (Pop. c. 121,000).

PHONOGRAPH: Tec. Obj. A mechanical device invented in PELASGOS in the 34th century, designed primarily for the playback of sound recordings. It consists of a rotating cylinder or disc onto which sound is etched or engraved, typically in the form of grooves. A stylus, or needle, connected to a diaphragm, is placed on the surface of the cylinder or disc. When the cylinder or disc rotates, the stylus traces the grooves, causing vibrations that are amplified through the diaphragm and converted back into sound waves. The phonograph allows for the reproduction of recorded music and speech, revolutionizing the way people experienced and shared audio in their homes and public spaces.

PHORI: 1. Geo. Wide range of hilly terrain that occupies the c of MENISCEA, north of the PTHOSTOTH Mountains. The hills form the northern border between IMEAL and XYRPHAAT⁽³⁾.

Geo. southern-most of two headlands that divide the DAARKEN GULF from the SEA OF ERIA, in ARKOS^(1.). The isthmus was home to two major cities throughout the course of the FIFTH AGE; COLYIS and, later, Arkos. Some 65-miles long, the headland was once far smaller, the isthmus little more than half-a-mile wide, with the city of Colyis providing ships passage across, bringing trade and wealth to the region. though the dwindling of ELYDEN'S seas over the last millennium have seen the isthmus grow to over 5-miles wide, the ruins of the city of Arkos and its legendary vaulted harbours now landlocked and far from the coastline, crumbling.

 Pol. Line of rulers in MENIAASOS, who remained as regents following the fall of LIDEA to the REFORMED-EMPIRE OF SARASTRO.

PHOSAKTO: Set. Small fortified city in the west of SARASTRO, close to the border with IO. It lies along the route of the Shadow March, and its main industry is the manufacture of CATHADESMIN, which are bought by PETITIONERS OF THE MACHINE for use in their prayers (Pop. c. 3,800)

PHOTHATAL: For. Rainforest in the south of SERROK, in the east of SAMMAEA, forming an extension of the WAELMIGH rainforest.

PHOTOLITH: Int. Sup. Ele. Naturally occurring capacitive igneous rocks common in Firmamentally-strong regions, particularly in MENISCEA. The stones are crystalline in nature, and can be of various colours depending on impurities and other factors. Photoliths are prized for their ubiquitous natural property, which absorbs sunlight and releases it as heat through a natural reaction resulting in thermal radiation. Due to varying factors, different photoliths of the same size can emit differing amounts of heat; from a barely noticeable warmth to a brilliant heat that is enough to boil water and, in rare instances, fuse sand around it into glass.

The output of photoliths is not determined by their positions relevant to the NULLAMBIT, but in general photoliths mined closer to the TRUE MENISCUS are noted as being more potent than others. As a result, most photoliths are naturally occurring in the FAR HEMISPHERE, in Meniscea Photoliths are however not a perpetual source of heat and a stone constantly subjected to strong sunlight will only generate heat for a certain time, determined by its physical qualities and other factors.

Due to their natural qualities, photoliths are sometimes used by mortals as a form of power-source. In antiquity this may have been as crude as rows of potent photoliths placed in a shallow pool of replenishing water that would boil, releasing steam, which was used to power various engines. Today, with modern industrialised methods, photoliths are integrated in both TECHNARCANE and mundane engines, and the process is refined and optimised. They are most famously used in LUMINAR SAILS, where they provide power to vehicles including sea and air ships.

Such engines are relatively common in Meniscea and, to a lesser degree in TETHYSIA and surrounding nations.

PHRENIA: Set. Settlement in the c south of NAARETH, known for its hilly landscape (Pop. c. 7,500).

PHRITPHORA: Geo. Expansive stone desert in the far east of KHARKHARADONTIS, crossing the border into the west of the territories of ETHISTONITH in RHINOCOLOURA. It is characterised by its gravelly surface and large black glass-like rocks that lie scattered across the otherwise featureless expanse. Part of the desert crosses over into the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED wastes of TARUULA HAAL.

PHROESTHOTH: also 'the Tesseract Maze'. Int. Sup. Geo. Str. Massive structure floating around a mile above the southern wastes of SHAZGIN, to the north of the wastes of VERMES. It takes the form of a gigantic cube, its sized folding in on each other in non-Euclidean motion.

It has been described as a tesseract maze, existing on the MATERIAL PLANE as well as the OTHERWORLD simultaneously, granting it four dimensions, making its physical properties difficult for mortals to comprehend. Corridors fork off into the same physical space, different doorways lead to the same space, passageways turn corners with walls becoming ceilings and floors becoming walls.

Myths from surrounding lands dating back to the $\underline{\text{THIRD AGE}}$ say that a timeless prize or treasure lies at the centre of the structure. Many have attempted to explore the maze, though simply gaining access to its folding surface is close to impossible.

Little is known of its history, though it is believed to be the work of a $\underline{\mathsf{DEMIURGE}}$ or $\underline{\mathsf{SCION}}.$

PHRONES: 1. Set. Fortified settlement in the c south of PORPHYR. It is home to a large monastery in which live monks who devote their lives to achieving the wisdom with which they claim they can live their lives (Pop. c. 3,000).

2. Rel. Rnk. monks who live in the above settlement in the c south of PORPHYR. They devote their lives to achieving the wisdom with which they claim they can live their lives, and travel across Porphyr, spreading their wisdom and acting as adjudicators in return for accommodation and sustenance.

PHRONTISTERY, the: Soc. Org. Series of high-society drinking clubs common across coastal cities in THE INNER SEA, and, less commonly, beyond, mostly within the HIGH-EMPIRE OF KORACHAN, THE REFORMED-EMPIRE OF SARASTRO and THE SECULAR REPUBLIC OF PARTHIS. They are gentlemen's clubs that promote free-thinking and scepticism of accepted beliefs. In 3769 RM the clubs created the LEAGUE OF EXPLORERS – an organisation that funded expeditions to far-flung parts of ELYDEN, with an eye towards of discovering forgotten or hidden wealth and knowledge.

PHTHALIS: Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTALLY-CORRUPTED region in the far south west of KHARKHARADONTIS, known for its carnivorous plants and vicious fauna. It is 'ruled' by an ancient incorruptible golem, known as the ADAMANTINE KING – the only sentient being found in the area. The region is thought to date to no earlier than c. 1200 RM as a NOAVATURI expedition passed through the area in 1182 RM and made no mention of it, and its first mention in northern records dates to c. 1340 RM.

PHTHISIS: Med. Foul wasting disease first recorded by ancient mortals in the SECOND AGE. It is most prevalent in hot humid places, including swamps, marshes and mangroves. Typically, phthisis causes sores to appear of afflicted areas. In its worst form, it also numbs the sufferer's body to pain, leading to an increased chance of infection in sores, eventually leading to loss of extremities such as fingers or entire limbs.

Though it is often associated with the ATRAMENTA, there is no direct link between the two, though individuals who have been afflicted by Atramental DISEASES are rendered more susceptible to its effects. See Vol II: Diseases and Illnesses.

PHUA ZSTUTH: Geo. Black pit in the far north of LLACHATUL, beneath the far north of the WHITE SHEET, to the north of WESTERN THANO. The pit is some 300-ft. in diameter and is thought to have appeared between the years 3821 and 3834 RM, based on findings of expeditions mounted to the White Sheet. It is unexplored and it is unknown how deep the pit is or what caused it to appear in the ice.

PHUT: Dem. 'Phut'. Ntn. Socialist nation in the east of MENISCEA. Its only port is in the capital city of APHUTA, which is regulated by its ruler the Autocrat Asya. Its borders and coast are heavily patrolled by a state-police that discourages travel in and out of the city outside official routes.

Its people worship the demigod DYFAED, and the religious institution that dominates the state enforce its worship and also espouses a search for knowledge, which many foreign commentators believe to be little more than propaganda. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

PHYGIES: Rui. Ancient ruins in the c south west of the WAELMIGH rainforest in the south west of CHEIRA. The ruins are overgrown and little remains of them today, though accounts from the early FIFTH AGE mention distinct architectural features and tombs in which bones thought to have once belonged to SPHINXES were found. It is thought that the ruins form part of a larger area that was, until as recently as the Fifth Age, home to what may have been the last sphinx stronghold in ELYDEN.

PHYLACTER: 1. Fau. Bipedal upright carnivorous reptile, with a horned head and alert features. Individuals stand some 30 ft. tall, and are common in parts of NORTHERN SAMMAEA. They are feral, and difficult to tame, though some in KARAKHAS and TARTAK ride them. They are resistant to the ATRAMENTA, which has led to them being well-studied by SHAPERS for some years. They are related to TARRAGONS. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

 Mar. Rnk. Household guards in KARAKHAS and VAALK, noted for their red and bronze gilded armour. They are named after the eponymous animals.

PHYLON: Geo. Region of tough grass- and shrubland in the south east of TARTAK, that suffers some ill effects of its closeness to the KHARKHARADONTID wastes, though some scholars suspect the proximity of the ALGOL HAREN may contribute to the lessened effects of the Attramenta there. The area is named after the PHYLACTERS that make their home there.

PHYRR: Dem. 'Phyrran'. Ntn. Nation in the south west of SAMMAEA, with a small coastline that overlooks the SEA OF AMMASH⁽²⁾. It is of a dry climate with short mild winters and long dry summers, whose central settlements often rely on collecting morning dew in special traps to water their crops, livestock and people.

It emerged in c. 1900 RM towards the end of the MEDHAMANNI DARK AGE – a period of almost 200-years that followed the catastrophic collapse of the MEDHAMANNI empire. Where its central and western demesnes devolved into anarchy amid the rampant spread of famine and disease that followed its economic collapse, its easternmost reaches were better-equipped to deal with the rapid changes. The demesne of Phyrr in particular, one of its easternmost territories, was spared the worst of the famines that had struck its western neighbours, and survived the Medhamanni Dark Age relatively intact. Indeed, it expanded its borders east and south, absorbing other fragmented demesnes of old Medhamann, pushing into territories that until then had been occupied by the tribal people of MEHMUTH for many years.

Mehmuth was already used to periodical Medhamanni slave raids, and they made use of high towers that could light signals, alerting its people to seek shelter in underground strongholds. However, beginning in c. 1960 RM Phyrr began a concentrated effort, training all its able-bodied men and sending legions of slave troops south to overwhelm the Mehmuthi border towers, sweeping into their lands, taking slaves and establishing strongholds on their old settlements. This marked a time of unrivalled expansion for Phyrr, and over the next 200-years it expanded its territories threefold into what are now the south of Phyrr and MAENMIST. It installed governors who established great fortressmanufactories that served as strongholds, barracks, and bases for slavers that continued to push east.

The expansion stalled in c. 2180 RM as the Mehmuthi people rallied around a new leader and were able to secure their territories. This forced Phyrr to consolidate into its newly-acquired lands, establishing greater manufactories and industries, that have become its defining feature, putting the manufactories of the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI EMPIRE}}$ to shame.

The nation was fortuitous in that it found itself occupying resource-laden lands that had remained untapped by the industrially-backwards Mehmuth. Many of these resources – iron in the south, continue to be exploited to this day, resulting in a landscape marred by strip mines and quarries that have destroyed any natural beauty it may once have possessed.

Phyrr expanded north towards the HOGGOTHA ISZ over the next centuries, though its borders settled into roughly their present form by c. 2600 RM, after expanding south west into extant HABOT, which at the time was made up of the easternmost territories of the recently collapsed nation of Ammash^(3,).

Between c. 2800 and 3100 RM it faced a prolonged period of incursions from the north, to the west of the SASTAKAUR Massif with various MORTAL peoples – primarily corrupted HUMAN, PLAGI, and SERAPI marauders, setting their sights on its lands, eager to reappropriate its TECHNARCANA and manufactories. This led to a dedicated war along its northern borders between c. 2950 and 3020 RM that led to the construction of a series of great fortresses between which crawled gigantic armoured landships, their artillery making short work of the invaders. However, attempts to pursue the marauders north into their homelands led to unexpected losses as they became bogged down in difficult terrain, falling victim to fearless guerilla attacks. Despite this setback, daring raids north into the Hoggotha Isz are still occasionally made to this day to secure new slaves.

In c. 3450 RM Maenmist began constructing an expansive line of fortifications known as the BASTION OF SIN NASSIR, that made Phyrran leaders uneasy. This was partially responsible for the outbreak of the WAR OF ECHOES in c. 3700 RM. Lasting for more than a century, it caused the deaths of millions and ruined both nations' economies and standing with other states. It was ended only through the efforts of foreign merchants, whose business along the NACRE ROAD had taken a hit, and a handful of individuals from both sides of the conflict who decried the wanton waste of lives and resources. An uneasy armistice was signed in 3815 RM, ending the war, and drawing up a new common border with a 1-mile wide neutral zone between the two that remains patrolled by both sides to this day. However, the armistice was nullified in 3972 RM after Phyrr once more attacked Maenmist, this time supported by SIMBARA and the NACRE LEAGUE, in response to Maenmist closing its borders and sundering the Nacre Road in two in c. 3960 RM. The nations remain at war to this day.

Today, Phyrr is amongst the more technologically-advanced nations in the region, making heavy use of technarcana, POSSESSION ENGINES, and ATRAMENTAL SHAPING in its industries and military. Indeed, it is known in the world at large today for its heavy industries, filth and pollution, and the deplorable lives that its people live in – all traits inherited from its Medhamanni ancestors. Phyrr has been under the yoke of the tyrannical IMPERIARCH HEDRAL IDRAVAYN since c. 3380 RM. An ancient being of murky KERATIN and plagi ancestry, their body has been almost completely replaced with all manner of ORTHOSES that have increased their size and form into that of a technarcane abomination. They rule with a – literal—iron fist, and no-one in Phyrr, not even their closest lieutenants and TECHNARCHS, can dare defy their will or even hope to comprehend their cyclopean and, quite possibly, graft-addled, thoughts and desires.

The upper-class culture of Phyrr is made up of rival Technarchs and nobles competing amongst each other for who has the most grafts and orthoses in a form of mimicry of their ruler. Indeed, this near-worship of the Imperiarch has led to a perverse cult of personality forming where they are worshipped as a living saviour. Their abhorrence of flesh in favour of orthoses has become a defining part of the cult and the nations' very identity. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

PHYRRIC GUARD: Mil. Org. Elite military forces of PHYRR. They are equipped with the best technarcane equipment their manufactories can produce and form the bodyguard of the IMPERIARCH and elite units that are loaned to different armies across the empire.

PHYSI: common religion of TAMAR, rose in the town of EREN in c. -50 RM, which later gained some influence in the HARÉSHK and LYRADEA, though was incorporated in local belief systems by c. 350 RM.

Originating as a philosophy, it later evolved into a method of venerating and invoking elemental forces (fire, wind, lightning, rain, flood, earthquake etc), with each force corresponding with an emotion or act (this facet of the faith was greatly influenced by the CATACLYSM OF KHAMID in 101 RM and the onset of PLAGUE across the NÁRTHELI STRAIT some decades later).

Its priests are called THEURGES, the act of invocation theurgy. Masses and festivals are uncommon, with most veneration taking place in private home-shrines or, at most, secluded temples in natural surroundings away from settlements. The physic is invoked when needed, though offerings and prayers are rarely given otherwise.

PHYSICOFERMENTATION: see PALINGENESIS.

PHYRIGAMON, PLENIPOTENTIARY TO THE MINARET: Sup. One of five current PLENIPOTENTIARIES in the MINARET OF LIGHT, who is famed for his skill in wielding the LIGHT UNDYING.

PHYRIGIA: Geo. Region in the far south of ERUTO in PARTHIS, forming a border with the north west of the TARAHID ANNEXES. It was mined to depletion between c. 300 – 2540 RM. The region is now a series of deserted strip-mines and quarries.

PIAAU: Set. Major city in the c of THETIS, in the PETEHAROTHIS region. It is fortified against the harsh sandstorms that wrack the region, and welcomes thousands of NEMIS nomads behind its walls in winter as they seek shelter from them (Pop. c. 64,000).

PIACULA: Set. Small city in the east of KULIGALA, in the east of the CARCHEMISHI PENINSULA^(1.) in the east of SAMMAEA. It is known for the deep slow-moving waters of the river ESKUTET, where individuals bathe and are baptised into the CHURCH OF THE NEPHILIM (Pop. c. 16,000).

PIARCHAN: Rui. Abandoned city in the c east of KORACHAN, north west of the BAY OF LEMAS. Once a major industrial centre, it was protected from ATRAMENTAL influences by a large SIPHON ENGINE, which also provided much of the power to the city. In 3953 RM a flux in nearby ARCANE TEMPERS caused the engine to explode, subjecting the city to immense levels of Atramental taint. The city was evacuated, with most people heading south to NESSUL, or east to HERESI. The city has been abandoned since then and, over 40-years on, is now partially reclaimed by the nature and the elements. Flora and fauna close within a 5-10-mile radius of the city are corrupted, and anyone spending more than a few hours in the city without the use of a softsuit is likely to contract Atramental sickness.

PICATRIX: Set. City in the north east of ALMAGEST. It is the closest city to the DESOLATION OF ASTUDAN, and is renowned for its great slag and scrap wasteyards. It is the last fortified outpost before the northern-portion of THE RED ROUTE passes through the Desolation on its way to DURCHAA and GÂTHA. Many LOUDHAN nomads inhabit the area surrounding the city, as do SCAVEN who plough the area's detritus (Pop. c. 41,000).

PICKET: Mil. Rnk. Common TEMUJAN title for full-time guards of smaller settlements, also held as a ceremonial title by guards in many GREATTOWNS, including DUARIAHAHN.

PIDRA: Set. Settlement in the c north east of CHEIRA. Its main industry is coal quarrying (Pop. c. 4,000).

PIL AUSH: 1. Geo. Rocky area in the north of VALBAR⁽²⁾. The name has become synonymous with the DREAMSCAPE that was discovered in the region in 3941 RM⁽²⁾.

2. Sup. Geo. Dre. DREAMSCAPE in the above region⁽¹⁾ that was first discovered in 3941 RM. It was found to be filled with seams of unadulterated silver. This attracted prospectors in large numbers, who soon found that the dreamscape was caustic to flora and fauna, preventing any large-scale mining from taking place. A work-around was found in the form of REALITY SUITS, which would be worn by miners, allowing them to spend long periods of time in the dreamscape without suffering any ill effects. This made extraction of the silver possible, but costly, however the benefits – having what was arguably the purest most pristine silver in all of ELYDEN – far outweighed the costs.

The region was soon exploited with the refinery of ACHUTA built just outside the extent of the dreamscape to process the ore. Today the mines of STASIM and DROTER still extract silver from beneath the dreamscape. Silver is mined in small volumes, both to keep supply low so that prices can be inflated, and also due to the costs of equipping miners with reality suits. The mines are manned by oneiromancers who shape the area, making extraction of the silver as easy as possible.

Unlike many other dreamscapes, where material originating within them slowly fades when removed from the dreamscape, the silver found in Pil Aush is fully material, retaining its corporeality and volume when removed from the area, and silver extracted inn 3941 RM remains solid and unaltered to this day. This is of some interest to ONEIROMANCERS and industrialists from across Elyden, who have investigated the phenomenon to see if it can be replicated elsewhere.

PILASTER OF THE ANCESTORS: Arc. Simple granite tower, some 40-ft. tall in the c west of THETIS, along the NEMIS trade-route. It was erected centuries past by early nemis nomads, as a waystone and memorial to their ancestors who have passed on.

PILASTER OF EONS, the: Int. Arc. An ancient bulky block of hard stone in the DHEUNNA region of north eastern THETIS. No ruins or remains of civilisation exist in the area around the pilaster, and its origin is unknown. A vertical line of illegible runes stands vigil above its singular small doorway which leads into an equally small inner chamber, its walls a webwork of cracks, any artifice or art long perished. The air around the pilaster is close, as though the dull emotion of unnumbered disappointments and losses weigh heavily around it. This is perhaps most blatantly expressed in the corpses of small beast and vermin that carpet the land at its feet, as though they bring themselves there to die. The capital of the pilaster is broken, as though in preparation for a sculpture that never grew past a vague idea, chains tethering shards and splinters that float inexplicably above. What SHAPERS have explored this ancient monolith express the pilaster as a place of passive death, the twilight between day and night. Few ever return.

PILASTER OF GERYON: Arc. An immense glass-topped pilaster, some 400-ft. high, on the south western coast of RHEA, that reflects the light of the dying sun onto the SEA OF PYTHEA. A small settlement surrounds it (Pop. c. 1,000).

PILASTERS OF KAMAL MACHARMA: Arc. Seven large pilasters measuring 100-ft. high, 60-ft. wide and 15-ft. deep, floating over the eastern waters of the SEA OF MIRA, 5-miles off the north western coast of OSSIEL in western MENISCEA. The pilasters have stood there unchanging for as far as records go back and feature in many legends and myths of the region, and appear in KORACHANI accounts from c. 1940 RM. They are largely untouched by the passage of time and have defied most attempts at exploration and categorisation. Their nature has led most to claim that they were created and erected by an unknown DEMIURGE, though there is no evidence of this.

PILEI: Plr. 'Pileia': Soc. Rnk. Concubines and sex-slaves (often SHAPERS and taken from foreign lands) found in harems in TZALLRACH. Though technically slaves, most pilei enjoy rights many free people in Tzallrach do not and after retirement (early twenties) often rise to positions of power in temples and governmental administration. Pilei are used to extend royal bloodlines when the offspring of some noble families fail to produce heirs. A few seek exile and become outlawed shapers living on the fringes of society. These fallen pilei are ostracised and often hunted.

PILGRIM WORKSHOPS: Rel. Ind. Str. Workshops found along the length of the SHADOW MARCH as well as other pilgrimages of the Three Churches of the Undying Machine that are operated by pilgrims, which can stay there for months at a time to earn money to fund their further religious travels. The workshops offer all sorts of services and might employ cobblers, tailors, farriers, tinkerers, smiths, technologists, and all ne of other vocations, which change as people come and go. Most such workshops have a set number of spaces with adjoining accommodations with a simple bed and stove where the person can live whilst working at the workshop. Church agents operate the workshops, collecting a portion of profits which go back into maintaining the route and supporting pilgrims, with the workers keeping the rest. Though there is no law or rule indicating the duration of a workers' tenure in these workshops people rarely stay there for more than one or two seasons at most.

They are most common in more hospitable lands along the route, though can also be found as far south as Kharkharadontis, either in more hospitable lands or protected by siphon engines. The workshops only serve pilgrims who much show their papers and tokens as proof of their pilgrimage.

PILGRIMS' MARK: Rel. Obj. A token given to pilgrims about to set off for the SHADOW MARCH. Commonly made from a large disk of pressed tin, the mark contains the date, the station that the pilgrim first set off from, as well as the pilgrim's name and/or passport number (in the case of free pilgrims).

The token serves various roles, most important of which is as a ticket of passage – the Pilgrim's Mark is a guarantee granting the pilgrim the protection of its respective church. A person who loses their Mark can (and usually does) continue to march with the pilgrimage, though has lost the aegis of the Three Churches. Not only that, but the Pilgrim's Mark is also used as a token of admission into various church sites that lie along the route of the Shadow March. Failure to present the Mark will deny access to these areas. It can also, if the situation becomes desperate enough, also be used as a bargaining tool that can be exchanged for food or protection.

PILGRIM'S ROAD the: see THE SHADOW MARCH.

PILGRIM'S STAMP BOOK: Int. Rel. Obj. Small book carried by PETITIONERS OF THE MACHINE at the beginning of their journey, which they carry with them throughout their progress along the SHADOW MARCH. Its main purpose is as a memento that gets stamped at waypoints and shrines crossed. Each such stop has a unique and often elaborate stamp and pilgrims delight in collecting as many as they can, though they also serve a more practical purpose, with CENOBITES offering prayers to pilgrims who collect a certain number of stamps, or specific ones. Some landmarks only allow entrance to pilgrims with a particular stamp, so the collecting of these stamps has become an important part of the Marches, with those who survive to return home holding on to their stamp book for the rest of their lives, passing them down generations as family heirlooms. Others wield theirs like a badge of honour, flaunting years' worth of stamps before inexperienced pilgrims, or friends and family back home.

The Shadow Marches attract individuals from all walks of life, from SLAVES to PATRICIANS, the latter of which are often criticised for the impious manner in which they travel, often with an entire caravan and dozens of staff on hand, not to mention the lengths they go to in order to avoid the possibility of contracting ATRAMENTAL AILMENTS, such as AEPATHY. This includes travelling in hermetically sealed CONVEYORS or wearing sophisticated ACERGENE suits. Though most pilgrims and members of the laity frown on this, their patronage is nonetheless welcomed for the attention and funds they bring to the Marches.

PILIER: Mar. Rnk. Head of each AUBERGE within the WHITE LEAGUE, typically drawn from respected long-serving members of the League.

PILLAR: also 'City Stack'. Set. Arc. Name given to a specific style of settlement, most commonly attributed to DVERG or MULL engineers. They traditionally take the form of natural granite plugs or pillars that are hewn and hollowed out into vertical settlements over the course of many generations, with new structures and fortifications added to their base, and expansive catacombs reaching beneath them like large taproots.

Over the years the term has come to apply to any dverg or mull settlement, even if not hewn in origin. The traditional pillars are found in Synchthonitha, where the geography lends itself to their construction.

PILLAR OF ANKAH: Rui Arc. Large pylon on an island in the south east of KHAMID. It is amongst one of the largest remaining pylon mausolea from ancient Khamid, and measure around 350-feet tall and contains 5,000 individual crypts. Situated some 25-miles north of the DARK SEA, it is partially hidden by sand and dust, the writings on its sides weathered, largely illegible.

PILLAR OF FLAME, the: see AZORA.

PILLAR OF HOTH, the: Int. Myr. Rui. Primeval monument, possibly the oldest remaining artificial construct in ELYDEN, located in the highlands of northern KORACHAN, along the northern face of the RHAECHA Mountain close to the border with CHTHYRID. The artefact takes the form of a mile-high pillar of pure iron, its four equilateral sides (each measuring 2,222-feet wide) presenting no particular bearing (magnetic, cardinal, polar or otherwise). The structure, though clearly unnumbered millennia old, is untarnished and thought to be the work of the DEMIURGE SYNCHTHONITH.

Despite the unmistakeably divine origins of the structure, it has been used as little more than an iron quarry by DVERGAI of the region who, since before the days of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, used an enslaved race of gigantic creatures, the MAAVANDA, to strip the iron into flakes which were used in their engineering projects.

The object was the site of a large battle in imperial history, dated at 997 RM, where imperial forces clashed with the largest recorded host of dvergai assembled, amongst them hundreds of maavandas, most of which were slaughtered in the battle. The imperial forces were victorious, though the iron of the pillar was later deemed to be unfit for imperial use, and its extraction too costly, and was abandoned to what remained of the dverg in c. 2100 RM.

Since then, the dvergai have constructed a great fortress network around what remains of the pillar, guarding the $\underline{RHAECHA\ NU}$ from Korachani intrusion.

PILLAR OF THE KINGS: Arc. Huge iron pillar in the south western reaches of the LLURAN WASTES in the far south of JURRAS^(2.). For many years it marked the southern-most pat of Jurrasi territories, though that honour now belongs to the MAST OF SUSTAR.

PILLAR OF MAOCARHL: see MAOCARHL, PILLAR OF.

PILLAR OF MAZALICZH: Rui. Large basalt-like pillar in the c of the OKKHAMI PENINSULA, thought to date back to the THIRD AGE OF LIFE or earlier. The pillar gives the impression of being a column of petrified black flames some 100-ft. high and 10-ft. wide. It is unknown whether it was once made of flame or if it was initially constructed this way, though the oldest accounts, dating back to the early FOURTH AGE, describe it as it stands today.

Those who are sensitive to the MATERIA OMNA describe sensing the arcane tempers in the region being chaotic, making shaping close to the pillar difficult and erratic.

PILLAR MONK: see STYLITE.

PILLAR OF THE SPHINX: see SPHINX, PILLAR OF THE.

PILLAR OF RA LHEP: Geo. Large icy pillar some 15-miles off the north eastern coast of KASPIA, in the SEA OF DAGGERS. Though clearly artificial, its origins are unknown. Strange lights have been reported by fishing fleets beneath the waters at its base; supposedly belonging to creatures of the deep seas. The pillar is covered in ice even in summer months when ice would otherwise normally be absent in the area.

PILLAR OF THE SPHINX: see SPHINX, PILLAR OF THE.

PILLAR OF TANITH: Rui. Monolithic column, hand-made from the finest pink granite, in the north eastern reaches of TULRATUR. The pillar is the only known relic of an ancient THIRD AGE culture, which is thought to have worshipped the IVORY MOON.

Many historians claim that it should be included in the list of WONDERS OF THE ANCIENT WORLD.

PILLAR OF VASS: Arc. Iron pillar, around 20-feet high, serving as a territorial boundary in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of PALUS⁽¹⁾.

PILLAR OF VHOBIRRAN: Rui. Arc. Drc. Ancient jade minaret in the east of THE VORANDINE, thought to date back to the late FOURTH AGE. Its origin is unknown, though is thought to have been part of GIGANRI territories at some point. The minaret stands at around 250-ft high and appears to be largely undamaged, save for discolouration and grime, and it overlooks the course of the river IASHANDEN as the road leading east forks into two.

The minaret is believed to be an oneiric conductor, amplifying the DREAMS of those who sleep in its shadow. It has been studied extensively by ONEIROMANCERS alike, who have concluded that this is not directly related in any way to the GOD WHO SPEAKS, and that it is dangerous for unprotected or untrained mortals to sleep close to it. This has not dissuaded epicureans and thrill-seekers from camping at its foot, though to do so is to invite danger and possibly even death.

PILLAR OF WHISPERS: Geo. Stone pillar, like a tapering sliver of sharpened flint, around 20-ft. high in the north east of TZALLRACH. Those who place their ears to the stone are said to hear whispers and murmurs that, when the ARCANE TEMPERS are waxing, can be understood to be pleas and dirges. Local legends claim that the stone is a gaol where the spirits of those killed by justicars were imprisoned in the days of the DEMIURGES.

PILLAR OF THE WINDS: also 'Megyod'. Rel. Rui. A stone circle dominated by a large standing menhir etched with runes of power, located in AHRISHEN. It was a LEY marker aiding FIRMAMENTAL rituals in antiquity though later became a region of religious significance in Ahrishen. The emergence of the Cult of the CHILD PRINCE has led to a decrease in pilgrimages here, though the religion of the FOUR WINDS is still practices by many, leaving the Pillar as an important religious site.

PILLAR OF YARADAR: Rui. Ancient totemic idol in the deep forests of north western TAHOMIA. It is around 50-ft. tall and made of a dull tarnished metal that is otherwise without weathering or any damage. It is of vaguely humanoid form and is thought to date back to the SECOND AGE. It is shunned by locals and has been ignored throughout the FIFTH AGE.

PILLARS OF ANASZTELAUS, the: Mys. Rui. Crumbling pillars in the south west of SAMMAEA, in the base of the AMMASHI^(1,) peninsula that straddle the border between the north east of METHUMN and the north west of PHYRR. There are seven major pillars, each around 30-ft. high, scattered around an area of roughly 10 square-miles. They are made from a greenish obsidian-like material and are ancient, thought by scholars to date to the FIRST AGE, though local folklore states that they predate the creation of ELYDEN itself, and that they were moved here by the worker gods when they were crafting the world. Each of these seven main pillars has dozens of others around it, which are much smaller, and largely broken.

They are located in a sparsely populated area so few people know of them, but merchants and mendicants that have encountered them have shown little interest in exploring or investigating them, to the point that some think there may be a MAGICKAL effect in place to protect them.

PILLARS OF DHEK: Rui. Ancient columns of granite in the western face of the ERESHKIGAL Mountains in SABIA. Was once a holy site, though was abandoned towards the end of FOURTH AGE. Little of the original architecture remains and it is now used as a milestone.

PILLARS OF ISIUS, the: Int. Geo. Strange area in the DUNE SEA, along the northern peripheries of the ASHAR IKHALA formation. The region is characterised by its flat-topped pillar-like igneous plugs that dominate the area like stone trees, rising as high as 100-feet, with tops some 15-feet in diameter. Some of the plugs have otherworlders standing on top of them, their features facing skyward, their attentions engrossed by unseen wonders. Some speculate that these are watchers of some sort, observing or somehow communicating with the spirits of the dead, though this is little more than postulation.

PILLARS OF GRESSEL: Rel. Rul. Stone pillars in the east of PELASGOS, west of the settlement of MORACHI. The pillars are famed for their size, and were hollowed out by the Pelasgosi people in c. – 500 RM, and became hypogea, where their priests were buried and earth-rituals took place.

PILLARS OF KHAURE: Rui. Twin obelisks erected by the PHAROANT KHAURE in the south of the KHAMIDIAN northern Kingdom in c. -400 RM. The obelisks are gigantic, reaching some 300-feet in height, and their surfaces are covered in FIRMAMENTAL runes and Khamidian pictograms, depicting his reign's accomplishments.

The obelisks were damaged by the CATACLYSM OF KHAMID in 101 RM, though both remain standing, overlooking the SEA OF PHARANX.

PILLARS OF MORACHI, the: see MORACHI, PILLARS OF.

PILLORY STONE: Law. Soc. Obj. Form of punishment observed in IO, SALOROC and western SARASTRO used for various petty crimes and intended to humiliate the victim. Many pillory stones used today date back centuries if not millennia, and been in constant use. They are the most common form of punishment for minor crimes in more rural regions, and they feature in many legends and tales from folklore, where they are often given anthropomorphic characteristics.

PIN VIGRA: Set. City in the heart of CHEIRA. Little is known of it though it is thought to be a major metropolis and industrial centre (Pop. unknown).

PINNACLES, the: Rui. Three now-ruined towns in the low south western lands of DUN SVARR, centred around three hollow peaks that are interconnected by skyways and house an intricate pump system for its aqueducts. The Pinnacles were taken by DUN SVARR in 2199 RM, a move which forced the ruling ARKOS⁽³⁾ into action against the belligerent CITADEL MOUNT, attacking it in 2212 RM.

The civil war lasted until 2214 RM, with the Arkos and CUSTODES victorious and the city's former ruler supplanted. The Pinnacles remained a vassal of Dun Svarr until c. 2325 RM, where SARASTROAN attacks left the place deserted, never to be repopulated.

PIPISTREL HOUND: Fau. Breed of slender dog, common in coastal regions of northern SAMMAEA, brindle coloured, large-eared, and with a long membrane of skin connecting its limbs. Though reminiscent of flying squirrels and similar reptiles, there is little evidence that suggests these skin flaps are used for jumping or gliding, and the upright posture of the hound would rule out such use. The skin flaps are likely the result of selective breeding in the region. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

PIRA TA': See. City in the c south west of KHULL. The region surrounding the city is the only remaining habitat of a long-lived succulent known as the PARAMANDA, that only flowers once in its lifetime. The succulents are of little economical value and are ignored by the people of Pira Ta' (Pop. c. 22,000).

PIRATE NATION, the: see DHA NAR.

PISKOPA: 1. Set. Settlement in the c west of IO (Pop. c. 9,000).

2. Pol. Rnk. Unique rank within the IONIC government, derived from an ancient term that originated in the region of the same name.

PISHOGUE: Sup. Mys. In OCCULTISM, a simple HEX or curse enacted by the occultist, requiring a great deal of knowledge of the victim, including their name, the constellation under which they were born, as well as possession of a personal object or a part of their body, such as a strand of hair, nail clipping, blood and so-on. The occultist then taps into the raw force of the MATERIAL OMNA, forming a link between the OTHERWORLD and the victim that is aided through their knowledge of the victim and possession of their body-parts, allowing the hex or curse to fully take form.

Though there is a degree of skill involved in the utterance of the pishogue, in order for it to be successful, the occultist must also make the victim believe that they have been cursed, for it is this belief that forges the link between the otherworld and the victim, allowing the curse to fester and grow. Due to this, many think that pishoguy is little more than a clever charlatanism, and that any clever manipulator or demagogue can make someone think that they have been cursed. And while the occultist must employ a degree of theatricality to convince the victim that it has been cursed (thus ensuring that the curse can propagate), without skill in occultism and the ability to tap into the latent powers of the Materia Omna, the occultist cannot accomplish much.

This tradition is ancient, native to temperate cold regions of Llachatul, including extant SKAROS, ALMAGEST, the OLD FOREST, and BASSORAH^(2.).

PISHRON: Rvr. Expansive subterranean river in the PRISON CARCERI, noted for it being comprised of salt-water. Its source is believed to lie in the far south of the SEA OF RYOGEN. The river flows for some 2,000-miles before ending in lake ALLOTHUAGG.

PISMIRE: Geo. Large chamber in the PRISON CARCERI, close to the surface under the c east of KHARKHARADONTIS. Despite its vicinity to the surface the chamber is not thought to have any links direct to the external world, though is thought to have links to the ATRAMENTAL RICTUS.

PISOTHRIS: Geo. Low mountains in the south east of THETIS. The eastern face of the mountains are known for their thick scrub growth.

PÍSSA: Set. Settlement in the north west of the emirate of LIMOTH^(2.) in the c of Limoth^(1.). Its main industry is agriculture, particularly fruit (Pop. c. 6,100).

PISTIS: Int. Str. Monument in the c west of GNOTH, just outside the town of ZIMMRA, where the ancient philosopher Levios eschewed his faith and found true wisdom. His mummified body is interred in the monument and is visited by sages from across Gnoth.

PIT OF ALDRASÛN: Int. Sup. Mil. Str. Isolated fortress in the east of VENTHIR dating back to the days of the VENATHI EMPIRE. It was constructed over a borehole that appeared suddenly in the region in around 70 RM, and which had rapidly garnered a grim reputation, with those passing close to it experiencing strange noises and sightings.

A stone tower was built over the hole in c. 75 RM following a series of disappearances and grisly murders in the area, and it was later reinforced by a CHOIR of SHAPERS after the garrison scattered cases of paranoia and suicides amongst the garrison. It was renovated and improved over the years, with the most recent additions being made in 1333 RM, though strange goings on continued throughout the years, with soldiers stationed there coming to dread their posting. Indeed, by c. 800 RM soldiers were posted there as punishment for bad behaviour.

Later the same year a SOFTSUIT-clad pathfinder was lowered into the hole in a bid to explore the depths and explain the phenomenon. The pathfinder was raised after a few hours of exploration, to be a babbling wreck, fifty years older than when they had been lowered. The pit was subsequently sealed with steel and concrete and the fortress allowed to rot, with any approaching it left to fend for their selves.

PIT OF BOL PHAROH: Geo. Deep pit in the PRISON CARCERI linking the upper levels with the deeper levels. The pit is said to be some 3,000-ft. deep and is near-vertical, with no way of ascending, and is located in the badlands in the BLACK MOUNTAINS to the west of CISNERIA and it emerges into the outside world in the form of a narrow sinkhole.

PIT OF ST. MARUT: Geo. Vertical cavern in the north west of KREM, named after ST. MARUT, who was a prominent member of the WAY OF MEGILLAR, who in 3088 RM received a vision of the hollow, descended into it, knowing it would be his end.

The caverns have not been extensively explored due to their treacherous mouth, which plummets almost vertically down for 300-ft. before levelling out, and is known for the dark pall that hangs over it, leading some to speculate that it's connected to the PRISON CARCERI.

PIT OF SURR, the: Geo. 12-mile-wide crater in the c west of VENTHIR. Little is known of its origins, but the lack of meteoric iron and other ores normally associated with such craters makes it unlikely to be meteoric in origin.

PITIA: Lake in the south west of TATAR, along the course of river TIAGAME^(2.).

PITORRIS: Set. Settlement in the south east of the PARTHISAN colony of EZHIRAYA^(2.), in the east of MENISCEA (Pop. c. 8,200).

PITS OF ZITERKARR: see ZITERKARR.

- PITTACAEL: 1. Geo. Region of rough terrain in the c west of GNOTH. It covers some 40,000-square-miles or land to the west of the capital city BISMUTH and is noted for its uneven plane and rocky terrain. Some GIGANRI seeking enlightenment have been known to disappear in the region though it is otherwise of little note.
- 2. Set. City in the c west of GNOTH in the north of the above region, along the course of the river PITTIROT. It is also a major stop along the GNOTHI ROAD trade-route (Pop. c. 27,000).

PITTILAYA: also 'the Gods' Narthex'. Mys. Geo. Lifeless wasteland in the c. north west of IMEAL that was cursed by the DEMIURGE TALANTEHUT in the THIRD AGE as punishment for the construction of the hubristic DENGEDDAR.

Since that time, the region has not only been incapable of supporting life, but also suffers under a form of blight known colloquially as the WASTING VEIL, which is similar to ATRAMENTAL and FIRMAMENTAL CORRUPTION but is distinct from both and localised to this area.

PITTIROT: Rvr. River in the c west of GNOTH flowing south for 410-miles from sources in the PITTACAEL and the BHASMATHI PLAINS.

PLACE OF THE CRAWLING WORM: see SSAH ASOH.

PLACKART: Mar. Obj. Armour worn over stomach.

PLAGI: Pir. 'plagi'. Mor. One of the original Two-and-Twenty MORTAL PEOPLES, and the children of the DEMIURGE RACHANAEL. Their ancestral lands were known as SCELERIA. Of jet-black skin and red eyes, the plagi were a powerful and populous people, having one of the largest empires of early mortals, through the machinations of their sire Rachanael. They were gifted the flint and glass fortress of HASTANAL DAGGASH by Rachanael, which became the centre of their empire. Their territories grew from there, though they remained centred around the gargantuan dry basin that makes up what is now the wasted land of KHARKHARADONTIS.

Considered by others to be children of the Atramenta, they were nevertheless far from immune to its effects and survived its corruption largely due to the aegis of their father Rachanael and their own skill in protecting themselves.

The so-called Dragon Wars between the plagi and the Serapis ended with the Avatar of Light – Sillamé punishing them. The plagi empire was sundered and they dwindled after this time, with Rachanael abandoning them for the HUMANS, whose dominance of Elyden was on the rise.

At the mercy of the Atramenta, their bodies became prone to corruption. To escape its effects, many amongst them left Kharkharadontis in a great exodus that saw them travelling south, where they would become lost to imperial annals; and to the north and north east to the DAENED SULRACH and UMBRA SOKHAR, where their breeding with humans would dilute the race into what later become known as the ETHERI nomads.

The few that remain in their homeland haunt the more 'hospitable' areas of Kharkharadontis (if such a term can be used), a bitterness consuming them. The ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR'S arrival to DAEKYN in 212 RM saw the remaining plagi join him in his travels where they sojourned in NYALA before aiding him in the construction of the LEADEN THRONE, upon which the newly-liberated Rachanael would be interred, becoming known as the UNDYING MACHINE. With that deed was a new chapter started in the long history of the plagi, and the descendants of these companions of Malichar became known as DEMIURNES – keepers of the Leaden throne, and loyal followers of the Undying Machine. Following millennia of breeding with humans, mulls and dvergai, they are no longer true plagi.

Despite the loyalty of the demiurnes, Rachanael would continue in his patronage of the humans, who now make up the majority of his worshippers.

What few true plagi remain now live in isolation or in distant lands, living in the near-mythical metropolis of KHARAKHARA, their SORCERER-KINGS protecting them from the full foulness of the Atramenta there. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life: Sicthain.

PLAGIOCLAS: Geo. Coastal valley in the east of PORPHYR, between the city of LEMEGETHAS and the coast. The region was once heavily wooded, though construction in antiquity of the PORPHYRI ARKS saw these jungles exhausted millennia past.

PLAGUE: Int. His. Med. Collective term for various infectious diseases that have ravaged ELYDEN throughout history. Typical symptoms include fever, weakness and headaches, though different strains can have more severe symptoms.

Plagues have ravaged Elyden for as long as recorded history has existed and likely earlier than that, possibly dating back to the first centuries of MORTAL life. The MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN names the DEMIURGE NERGAAL as the creator of diseases and plagues, but conversely, he is also responsible for their cures.

There have been hundreds of localised outbreaks over the years and only rarely do they reach the levels of a pandemic. Despite this there have been various major outbreaks throughout the FIFTH AGE, including, but not limited to:

- The Eastern Plague: which raged intermittently between 903 and 1002 RM. It is thought to have originated in MEHITIEL in the far east of EASTERN LLACHATUL, travelling slowly west, where it reached VENTHIR in 1002 RM. Extreme measures in the city of TEIRA halted the spread of the plague, though it the city itself was devastated, forced to quarantine for 20-years by QUEEN HETEPHERES herself. It is thought that around 12,000,000 people died in this plague.
- The Plague of Shadow: an Atramental plague that wracked central Korachan, including the capital city Khadon, in early 966 RM, lasting for 2-years before it was contained. It is believed to have emerged from an experiment within an alchemists' atelier outside northern Khadon, spreading from there via trade and pilgrimages. The spread was eventually stalled through the diligent actions of the FISTS OF KYON and other members of the KYONI ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION, who were able to keep municipal structures safe, though today many believe their actions were overtly-zealous, with many healthy people killed during their fanatical campaign.
- The Kharkharadontid Plague: A devastating plague that originated in the south of KHARKHARADONTIS and moved south throughout the 12th century, following the MT. KLAUVAKAN CALAMITY, which happened in c. 1180 RM. The so-called '20-Month Winter' that followed the eruption led to vast crop failures across ELYDEN, though these were worst in the south of Sammaea including extant AKANTHRA, KHAR NADUL, ELALLIA, and ZAKRON, where the ash clouds from the volcano blew strongest. Though the plague itself is not directly related to the Calamity, the widespread malnourishment that followed in the wake of famines caused by the ash clouds meant that the plague became far more devastating than might otherwise have been the case.
- The Sammaean Plague: originating in the south of THE SURRACH in c. 2750 RM, this plague moved north where it afflicted many SAGITTARIAN cities. It spread West as far as the KORACHANI colony of TAVVADRA by 2763 RM, and east as far as the UMBRA SOKHAR by c. 2800 RM, where it died down, in no small part due to the sparse mortal population there. Around 20,000,000 people are thought to have died in this plague.
- The Great Contagion: the most devastating of 'modern' plagues afflicted the INNER SEA REGION, starting in 3656 RM in the Slums of AMILANA in SARASTRO. The city was wiped out and the plague spread across Sarastro, eventually moving west through trade and travel, reaching most major ports and cities over the next decade, helping to weaken the KORACHANI EMPIRE, exacerbating the events that left to its SUNDERING in 3705 RM.

People across the Inner Sea turned to ST. SAAR ADI (patron of plague victims) during this time, and many churches have been sanctified in his honour since then.

Other forms of plague include ATRAMENTAL PLAGUE, FAHR'S PLAGUE, DEMENTIA PLAGUE, and CATTLE PLAGUE (which, despite its name, also infects mortals), amongst others.

PLAIN OF FLESH: Sup. Geo. Area of severe Atramental taint roughly in the c of the region of Flaescus in the c of Kharkharadontis known as the Eye of Darkness. The earth here takes on a fleshy texture, with unthinking eyes observing from beneath pink lids and grotesque formations of teeth growing like plants in foul mockery of mortal bodies. The region was studied heavily between c. 540 – 730 RM, though little was learnt of the origins and makeup of the area, which remains as much a mystery today as it was the day it was found.

PLAINS OF GLASS: Geo. Flat desert in the c-south east of TZALLRACH, so-named for the fine sands in the region and the way that they reflect light, which is akin to glass. The sands are also notorious for their mirages, and for the fossilised lightning (fulgurite) that is found within them as a result of the year-long lightning.

PLAINS OF VÂRR: see VÂRRAN PLAINS.

PLAINSLEAGUE, the: Pol. Org. Political coalition of town leaders in TEMUJA centred in its largest GREATTOWN, DUARIAHAHN, where they convene within the PALACE OF CRYSTAL. A representative from each settlement is sent to the palace every 4 years to sit at the Plainsleague, where decisions concerning Temuja as a whole are made.

More frequent seasonal meetings are also common, though they are smaller affair, rarely attended by all members.

PLAINSWURM: Fau. Large segmented worm common in the plains of TEMUJA, the north of SAUA, and BAATAN. It can grow up to 20-ft long (though larger examples have been reported). Blind, and with a bifurcated prehensile 'nose' that is used to detect vibrations, this solitary creature creates tunnel-networks in the soft Temujan soil where it hunts for vermin. It rarely leaves its tunnels and when it does it avoids direct sunlight as its semi-translucent skin is sensitive to the light. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

PLALEPH: Geo. Small mountain in the west of LYRIDIA DHAI, noted for the ruins of settlements abandoned during early KORACHANI expansion in the region. A jagged spine-like dyke of volcanic rock runs along the centre of the hills, known colloquially as VAREN'S BACK.

PLANAR TOAD: see TOAD, PLANAR.

PLANET: Ast. An astronomical body orbiting a star, most commonly meaning the seven planets orbiting the star SOR. They are referred to as the Orbs of Life in the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN.

There are seven-known planets, of which Elyden is one. In order of distance from the sun, the planets are: HAEL, ALGOL⁽²⁾, ELYDEN, LIVIAD, GNIHLAS, CYKRANOSH⁽¹⁾, NIHAV. These are commonly organised into two categories – the INNER and OUTER PLANETS – based on their states (solid, or gaseous, respectively) See Vol II: Planets and Satellites.

PLANET, CLASSICAL: also 'Naked Eye Planet'. Ast. Common name for PLANETS that are visible to the naked eye, without the aid of telescopes or other lenses. These consist of HAEL, ALGOL^(2.), LIVIAD, GNIHLAS, and CYKRANOSH^(1.).

In ancient AZAZEM, the so-called Classical Planets were ranked in a strict hierarchy – GNIHLAS, whose rings were reminiscent of a crown, was regarded as the QUEEN OF THE SKY. CYKRANOSH^(1.), the largest planet, was her consort and bodyguard. ELYDEN and other INNER PLANETS were lords, and the countless stars were its many subjects. ASHTERATH^(1.) (then considered a planet) was a nomad, wandering alone, outside of the planetary hierarchy, who featured in many legends and myths as a trickster and rogue.

PLANET, INNER: Asr. In astronomy, the inner planets are the first four PLANETS in the SORCHARI SYSTEM – HAEL, ALGOL⁽²⁾, ELYDEN, and LIVIAD. These are commonly understood to be the terrestrial planets, which are made up of ore, as opposed to gasses.

PLANET, NAKED EYE: see PLANET, CLASSICAL.

PLANET, OUTER: Ast. In astronomy, the last three PLANETS in the SORCHARI SYSTEM – GNIHLAS, CYKRANOSH^(1.), and NIHAV. These are commonly understood to be gaseous planets, which are primarily made up of gasses, as opposed to ore.

PLATEAU OF MULAD: see MULAD.

PLEROMA: Set. Holy city in c-south east GNOTH, and a source of many pilgrims who travel east to visit the TOMB OF URAKABARAMEEL. It is a major mercantile city, with links to both the GNOTHI ROAD as well as THE WAY trade-routes, and offers lodging to the many merchants that pass through it (Pop. c. 61,000).

PLENIPOTENTIARY: Sup. Rnk. High rank within the ruling body of FIRMAMENTAL SHAPERS, known as the MINARET OF LIGHT in MENISCEA. There are only ever five Plenipotentiaries active at any time, and only those who have attained the Second Tier of Shaping can vie for the title, with potentials having to successfully complete a number of tasks and trials of increasing difficulty to even be considered for the rank, which is symbolic of the five strands of Firmamentism.

The Plenipotentiaries stand beneath the ONÉSIMUS-PRELATE – the highest recognised rank amongst shapers.

PLUA: Sea. Small bay in the south east of the KORACHANI PENINSULA, guarded by fort PLUATA⁽²⁾.

PLUAN: 1. (B. -22 RM – D. 7 RM) His. Pol. Warlord who served under the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR during the unification of KORACHAN. He was instrumental in the creation of the IRON GUARD in 3 RM and was made steward of Korachan in the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR'S absence in 4 RM, and died in the protection of Korachan whilst Malichar was abroad.

2. Sca. Bay in the south east of KORACHAN, around 20-miles wide and high, accessible through a narrow strait that's guarded by the fortress of PLUATA^(2.). Both the bay and the fortress are named after an ancient warmaster, Pluan^(1.), who was one of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR'S generals during the unification of Korachan.

PLUATA: 1. Lak. Lake in the south east of KORACHAN, just over 1-mile from the LISSASAN shore. It was once a bay, though was cut off from the shore following the retreat of ELYDEN'S seas, and is now an endorheic salt lake.

2. Mil. For. Coastal fortress in the south east of KORACHAN, overlooking the SEA OF LISASSA. It guards travel into the BAY OF PLUA⁽²⁾ and links the coast to lake Pluata⁽¹⁾ via a large canal, through which military ships pass to berth in the lake. Both the fortress and the bay are named after an ancient WARMARSHALL, Pluan⁽¹⁾, who was one of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR'S generals during the unification of Korachan. The fort is linked to the mighty fortress of Agostan via a well-maintained road and offers the army rapid access to the east of the INNER SEA should the need arise.

PLURAN RIM: Geo. Massif in the c of ALMAGEST.

PLUTOCRATIC CABINET, the: His. Pol. Org. Historical government of VALBAR (1.) and, later, VALBAR DHAI that was formed in c. 3320 RM. Made up of industrialists and other influential members of ALMAGESTI society in the colony of Valbar, the Plutocratic Cabinet was envisaged as a temporary government to oversee the slow exodus of industries from the colony of Valbar in the wake of dwindling resources and production, though it also proved instrumental in supporting those that chose to remain behind.

Seeing the success of this government, Almagest formally placed the Cabinet in power in 3392 RM, reversing its original plan to abandon the region, turning it once more into an annex. The industries that had remained in Valbar were desperate for workers and the Cabinet promoted raids into eastern RAONGEN, taking thousands of people as SLAVES to work its mines and manufactories.

This boost to the region's economy proved to only be temporary and by c. 3440 RM the climate had worsened. This, coupled with waning resources made Valbar less viable as an annex. Industries began to leave in even greater numbers than before and by c. 3460 RM the population had diminished to around 5% of its previous number. Cities became cut off from each other, struggling to survive in the frigid climate.

In 3468 RM Almagest proclaimed Valbar a lost territory, and the Plutocratic Cabinet was disbanded. Its final act before retreating back to Almagest was the founding of the SAHARLI, a force of wardens intended to act as caretakers of the roadways and the remaining cities.

The members of the Plutocratic Cabinet, many of them born and raised in Valbar, returned to Almagest, leaving behind a handful of cities, garrisons, and manufactories that refused to leave, knowing that they would be forced to fend for themselves. Most renowned of these cities was ABLATIA⁽²⁾, though there were others, including THAZAR, ATLA, and OLDIR.

These remaining cities maintained close relations with each other and formed a confederacy, whose leaders adopted the name Plutocratic Cabinet, carrying on the legacy of the old government. Uncontested by Almagest, which technically still claimed the territories of Valbar but was not enforcing the claim, these cities began to call themselves the CONFEDERACY OF VALBAR DHAI — meaning New Valbar. The native KEVERAN^(1.) population began to reemerge from the hinterlands, and new settlements were founded by a mix of Keveran and Almagesti people as well as freed SLAVES of varied heritage.

In 3483 RM, after years of petition, Almagest formally recognised the independence of the region, which became officially known as Valbar Dhai.

Beginning in c. 3920 RM increased volcanic activity in the ESZALA geothermal region wreaked havoc on the interior of Valbar Dhai. Major thoroughfares that linked cities and regions together were rendered impassable. Cities were cut off from one another, leading to strain on the capital in Ablatia. The Plutocratic Cabinet struggled over the next years, as eruptions increased, and it eventually collapsed in 3936 RM amid civil strife and chaos. After seven years of chaos a new coalition government emerged in 3943 RM, simply calling itself THE CABINET.

PLUTOCRATIC REPUBLIC OF LIMOTH: His. Pol. Org. Historical government of LIMOTH(1.), that succeeded the LIMOTHAN DYNASTY in 2829 RM, until its eventual collapse in 3573 RM, following the pressures of almost single-handedly defending the MYMEREAN ACCORDS following the withdrawal of TETHYSIA in 3523 RM.

PLUVIA: Set. Settlement in the c north west of ALMAGEST, just south east of the THAURIR Mountains. It is known for its rainy climate. Its main industry is iron mining (Pop. c. 6,000).

PLYSIANE: 1. Rui. One of 3 major ELITAGRI cities (the other two being DROM and KIVAR) that rose in what is now KARGAMA in the north of the EHRENISIAN COAST between c. -700 and -400 RM, growing wealthy from selling BRIMSTONE over the next centuries. In c. -10 RM the ADEPTS of TRISKETHIA, seeing the value of the brimstone, launched a series of attacks against the Elitagri city-states. PLYSIANE^(1.) bore the brunt of the attacks, and though it was ultimately victorious, it was left crippled and waned in power over the coming years, with Drom, Kivar and VISTATIA maintaining control.

By c. 100 RM the city had lost most of its mines, and had dwindled into a refinery for mined brimstone, though it never returned to its previous heights and as brimstone reserves in the region waned, so too did Plysiane, which was abandoned in c. 800 RM. Many years later a religious community was established there^(2.), made up of devout worshippers of the KARGAMAN IDOLS.

2. Rel. Str. The above ruins^(1.) were eventually resettled in c. 1500 RM by religious itinerants who established a community there, from where they could dwell in peace compiling the history of the many idols in their homeland. The monastery remains there today, and its monks are amongst the most devout worshippers of the KARGAMAN IDOLS in all of KARGAMAN.

PNAKOTIA: Int. Geo. Expansive labyrinthine sinkhole, around 20 ft. deep, in the c east of the TARAHID ANNEXES. The base of the sinkhole is riddled with caves, most of them shallow and fetid, though some reaching far below ELYDEN, and thought to lead to the PRISON CARCERI.

A foul stench wafts from the deepest caves as low rumbles echo through the fissures, as though Elyden herself were sleeping. Local legends mention a $\underline{\text{SCION}}$ of the $\underline{\text{DEMIURGES}} - \underline{\text{TSATTHOG}}$ – slumbering in the caves.

PNESSA: Dem. 'Pnessian'. Ntn. Located in the east of SAMMAEA, Pnessa is a large nation that straddles the equator and the jungles of the west of WAELMIGH to its north. It is surrounded by the nations of OKKHAM, NOAVATUR, RHINOCOLOURA, MULCIBER, ELEKHID, and CHEIRA, and is of a tropical climate, with lush vegetation and rain common throughout the year.

With its roots in the TYRANON and AGORNON castes that were exiled from Rhinocoloura in 3469 RM, the ruling HMMEN REGIME has only been in control of Pnessa since 3959 RM, after successfully overthrowing the old CAIAN monarchy. In control since around 2950 RM, the monarchy's strength had been on the wane since the retreat of the SEA OF SUPPA, beginning in around 3600 RM. The Hmmen Regime had taken control of the region known as the NEANDERINE CITIES in the north of Pnessa in around 3925 RM, slowly working on overthrowing the monarchy since that time

Members of the Caian family and their direct relatives were executed en-masse in the weeks following their overthrowing, though there are rumours of some individuals made it east into ELEKHID where they hide to this day. The Hmmen Regime took control of most industries, which until then had been operated by lords and barons loyal to the Caian house. Hungry to acquire more territories Pnessa declared war on Okkham in 3971 RM, but little came of the war after Noavatur came to the aid of Okkham. A few years after the war ended Pnessa moved against Elekhid, and after near 20-years of war, there were few changes in the borders causing Pnessa to back down.

Almost bankrupted by two unsuccessful wars, its people began to count the effectiveness of the Hmmen Regime, forcing it to turn to other means of growth, including trading. In 3997 RM the war with Elekhid was formally ended, with Elekhid taking back lost territories and trade agreements established that are beginning to bear fruit today.

Its people have learnt to make use of the various flora and fauna of the region, and have developed various medicines and drugs, most notable of which is a treatment for malaria that is derived from a millipede secretion that is used across Sammaea.

Traditionally, SHAPERS were used as champions, duelling each other in front of their respective armies, with the winner often deciding the outcome of the battle without the need for bloodshed. To be chosen as a shaper in battle this way was considered a big honour, though the tradition is dying out as modern warfare becomes more widespread, though shapers still form a major part in its armies. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

PNEUAS: Mil. Str. Fortress in the east of GNOTH, to the north west of the NUNAKI Mountains.

POAHA: Rui. Ancient ruin in VÂRR.

POAL: Sea. Bay to the east of KARGAMA, forming a part of the SEA OF ORRIDA.

POARA: Set. Settlement in the c west of Ammesh, situated along the north western shore of lake Foris (Pop. c. 8,000).

POCHANA: Set. Fortified settlement in southern EREBETH (Pop. c. 10,000).

POEN: Cur. Currency used in the south west of SAMMAEA, in the nations of METHUMN and PHYRR, as well as the south of ADHERA, though it is also recognised in most mercantile centres across the AMMASHI^(1.) peninsula. It originated in Methumn in c. 2875 RM following the collapse of RAMIS and the devaluation of its currency (which had survived the fragmentation of the MEDHAMANNI empire in c. 2020 RM), and it slowly spread from there with trade. It is commonly found in the hands of merchants travelling along the NACRE ROAD, particularly in its westernmost stretch. See Vol II: Currency and Coinage in Elyden.

POGROS: Geo. Mount just south east of NEKOR, in the west of NÁRTHEL, where Jeremah, Proselyte of the DISCORDANT DEITY preached to the masses.

POLARRA: Ind. Set. Mining settlement in the c of VAALK, south of the MALL VORAKAN. The mine produces ALUMINIUM in large quantities (Pop. c. 5,400).

POLAR AURORA: Wea. Brightly-coloured lights – often green – that appear in clear skies in the polar skies in high altitudes close to and within the POLAR CIRCLES. Its exact cause is unknown.

POLAR CIRCLE: Geo. Two circles of latitude, one in the NORTHERN
HEMISPHERE and another in the SOUTHERN HEMISPHERE at 67^O7'37" north and south respectively. This position is determined by ELYDEN'S axial tilt $(22^{\circ}52'23")$ minus 90° .

Areas poleward of the POLAR CIRCLES are noted for their cold temperature and experience at least one 24-hour period when the sun does not set and another 24-hour period when the sun does not rise, in summer and winter respectively. The farther poleward ones goes, the longer these periods last proportionately longer, until at the poles themselves, which experience six months of light and darkness a year.

POLARIS: Sea. The northern-most sea in ELYDEN, reaching as far as 88° 42' north, though it is hidden beneath the WHITE SHEET. The sea extends from 20° west, in the north of LLACHATUL, to the far north east of MENISCEA, at 146° west.

The sea diminishes greatly in size during winter months, when the sea ice from the White Sheet of KHOLAMOR expands south. This leaves large portions of the sea cut off from each other for 3-5 months of the year, stalling sea trade as well as sea-based industries. This leaves nations like VALBAR^(2.) and DURCHAA cut off from the rest of the world for many months.

POLARIS BASIN: Geo. Drainage basin formed by various continental divides in the continent of LLACHATUL, including parts of the LLACHATULI DIVIDE. The basin comprises parts of the north of Llachatul, and all rivers within it drain directly into the SEA OF POLARIS.

Nations and territories that are at least partially within the Polaris Basin include: DURCHAA, PERGOST, and VALBAR^(2.).

POLIADIR: Set. City in the c south of TATAR. It is a major centre of the ISIRATUANISM religion an most of the priests that tend to the temple of ISIRATU begin their training there.

POLIMNA: Set. Small city in the north east of KASPIA. It is a conurbation made up of as many as a dozen different coal-mining settlements (Pop. c. 16,000).

POLYANDRION: Plr. 'polyandria'. Med. Tec. Alongside OUBLIETTES, the workshops of BIONACHA. More specifically the chambers in which UMBRANS are born from rows of STEEL-WOMBS and other archaic machinery.

POLYDACTYL: Med. Sup. A physical deformity where individuals possess as many as seven fingers on each hand. The deformity is embraced within the KORACHANI EMPIRE, where families exist that that have exhibited condition since c. 2500 RM. Those with polydactyly are often hereditary scribes, sometimes rising to influential positions in the most powerful PATRICIAN HOUSES and ambassadorial positions.

Outside of random individuals across the empire, the condition has, over the years, become restricted to a handful of scribe-families around the INNER SEA, who have strived to keep the condition out of other families, often paying large sums of money to assassinate or adopt those born outside such families (adoption is the preferred choice as centuries of inbreeding has weakened the families bloodlines).

Unlike the DACTYLIDS (who the polydactylid families regard as little more than glorified government-owned slaves grafted with crude ORTHOSES), the polydactylid families can wield some degree of influence in the empire.

POMANA: Geo. Cavern in the south west of NÁRTHEL, forming part of the greater YGGDARASA system of caverns.

POMMER: Flo. Tree endemic to the west of SAUA, known for its resin that is used as a varnish on wooden items and is fed to the SOUL-COUNTER mystics of the AKENARA region of the FOREST OF REVERIES that helps to mummify their bodies. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

PONTIUS: Plr. 'Pontiusin'. Sup. Tec. Rnk. UMBRAN creatures employed by various imperial agencies within the TWIN EMPIRES. They are of gangly physiques and pallid skin, with ropey muscles capable of great physical prowess, and are used as trackers and assassins of high-priority targets, including PATRICIANS, magnates, royalty and so-on.

They operate in small groups called cells that maintain links with one another, allowing them to exchange intelligence gathered from across the empire, making them highly knowledgeable on the goings on in the Heartland. Though many think them as a part of the SANCTIFIED

Orders OF THE INQUISITION, they are in fact distinct bodies, though the Orders do at times call upon the services of individual Pontiusin.

POPHARON: For. Woodland region in the north east of LYRIDIA, crossing over the border into c southern AHRISHEN.

POPUESPIN'S PERIPLUS: Vol. Early FIFTH AGE GERICIAN port guide that listed the distance between ports and harbours. Many copies of the guide exist, and most of them are annotated with useful marginalia, listing information about specific settlements and ports, such as what services and trade goods might be found there.

The guide continued to be published following the rise of the KORACHANI EMPIRE in the region, becoming more of a travelogue. The last edition was published in 387 RM and well-preserved copies can fetch high prices at auction or the secondary market.

PORCELAIN LEGION: Mil. His. in antiquity, common name given to LHAUS armies composed of porcelain-like CREANTS and GOLEMS. Famed for their impeccable defence of the lhaus enclaves, they remained a powerful presence in the north of SAMMAEA till the end of the FOURTH AGE, by which time the lhaus were in decline and the Porcelain Legion was dwindling in size and strength.

Today the Porcelain Legion is largely unknown, though scattered examples have been discovered in the hinterlands of ANDILUTH, and the DAENED SULRACH, as well as along the contested border between TRAKIA and KHALHAT, the latter of which maintains a small army of such creants, known as the PORCELAIN PHALANX.

PORCELAIN PHALANX: Mil. Sup. Rnk. Elite LHAUS troops of KHALHAT created through the ancient art of KLADOS. They continue the ancient tradition established by the earlier PORCELAIN LEGION, and are of thick porcelain skin resembling crests and plates, beneath which tough sinewy muscles drive them onwards. Fearless, silent, and tough, they are the epitome of Khalhish ingenuity and represent just a fragment of what the ancient lhaus were capable of creating.

Numbering around 1,000 individuals, who are known as PORCELAIN WARRIORS, the Porcelain Phalanx serves as the main defence of Khalhat, and they are supported by lhaus soldiers and militia as well as human mercenaries from surrounding lands. The creation of PORCELAIN WARRIORS is a costly affair that makes use of archaic techniques, though it differs from the creation of iterants in a major way. While iterants served as artificial vessels into which the SPIRIT (1.) of an individual could be placed, with a new vessel being used when the old one expired; Porcelain Warriors only undergo this ritual of transference once. An experienced soldier, often one who has been mortally wounded, will have his spirit transferred to the vessel, effectively giving them a new body. However, should the vessel be mortally wounded or destroyed, the spirit would not be able to be transferred to a new body, effectively killing the warrior.

PORCELAIN WARRIOR: Mil. Sup. Rnk. Individual troops of the PORCELAIN PHALANX elite iterant troops of KHALHAT.

PORCELLANIA: Set. Major coastal city in the north east PARTHIS, overlooking the entrance into the BAY OF COTIA^(1.) (Pop. c. 62,000).

PORONA: Set. Small city in the c east of NOAVATUR (Pop. c. 13,000).

POROPHOSSYR: Geo. Expansive mountain-range dominating the c of PORPHYR, running for 1150-miles from north to south from the south east of SERROK to the north east of SABAISA. The mountain serves to divide the nation in two distinct cultures: the ARK-BUILDERS in the east, and the pioneers in TECHNARCANA in the west.

POROS NURIA: Geo. Region in the c north east of KASPIA that is dominated by hundreds of eerie obelisks arranged in rows. Forming the capital of each obelisk is a large pearl-like stone, believed by some to be soul-pearls. The region features in many Kaspian legends and folk tales and it is shunned by most. Indeed, it is largely unpopulated.

POROTH: Rvr. River in the far south east of N'RAKH, flowing south for 135-miles from sources in the STERHBEL Mountains before reaching the north of lake C'DATA.

PORPHYR: Dem. 'Porphyri'. Ntn. Founded in 1607 RM by the SCION TELEANYARA APEXEIDE, the roots of the Porphyri TECHNARCHY lie in the ancient actions of the DEMIURGE NYARLOTH and his scion, Teleanyara, much in the same way that the KORACHANI EMPIRE was shaped by the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR and the Demiurge RACHANAEL. It is a place where TECHNARCANA and industrialisation are valued, much like the Korachani empire. Likewise, it is also a land on the brink of collapse.

These similarities only paint the differences in a starker light. Porphyr is a huge nation – three-times the size of KORACHAN, with cities citing histories dating back thousands of years, sometimes to the FOURTH AGE EHLBEZUNI empire upon whose ruins many of them are built. Located in the far east of SAMMAEA, it ranges from tropical rainforests in the north to arid savannahs in the south, with the great POROPHOSSYR Mountains splitting it in two over their 1,150-mile length.

This divide is more than geographical – the mountain-chain sunders the nation in two on a cultural level.

The lands east of the mountains cling to the belief of an ancient ARK-BUILDING culture where monumental arks are constructed, sometimes dozens of miles from the coast, in esoteric rituals that consume the resources and minds of entire cities over spans of months, if not years.

The west is home to manufactories that produce technarcana reverseengineered from archaic examples recovered in archaeological digs that span the nation. The bone-like metallic artefacts of ages past are a soughtafter commodity that is sold to the highest bidder across ELYDEN.

This divide between west and east has caused tensions in the nations of late – a large swathe of land has broken away and remains contested to this day, under the leadership of the city of $\underline{\text{UTIMAN}}$, and cultural disparities across the mountain threaten to lead to a schism that may sunder the nation entirely.

Uniting its people is the ancient philosophy-religion of $\underline{NYARALA}$, which reveres technology and advancement, though whose devotees blindly follow its teachings without truly understanding them. Indeed, the Porphyri live ritualistic lives, where ceremony is valued over individuality. Their technologists are little more than priests who use and maintain great technologies but understand little of how or why they work. Their spiritual leaders, known as the $\underline{MAKHANATE}$, are handmaidens of the $\underline{PRAEDICAE}$ Teleanyara, serving as both rulers and spiritual leaders.

Its people, like most in the PORPHYRI PENINSULA, are descended from Fourth Age unions between the human inheritors of the world and the near-extinct IROTHANI – blue-skinned mortals beholden to the Demiurge Nyarloth. Many individuals have skin with a faint blue taint, or skulls that are slightly elongated, as a result. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

PORPHYRI: Lan. Main language of PORPHYR, that emerged in the mid FIFTH AGE from the earlier language of OLD PHARTHI.

It is also spoken as a common trade-tongue across the PORPHYRI PENINSULA by the people of ANANTHUL, SABAISA, and SERROK. See Vol II: Languages.

PORPHYRI CURRENT: Sea. Warm surface ocean current in the west of the SEA OF MYMEREA that flows south down the eastern coast of the PORPHYRI PENINSULA before splitting into four — west, where it enters the SEA OF LETHEA and joins the LETHEAN CURRENT, south where it joins the WESTERN LERAMUGHI CURRENT, south east where it enters the SEA OF SAMMAIDU and joins the SOUTHERN BRORI CURRENT, and east where it joins with the WESTERN BRORI CURRENT.

PORPHYRI PENINSULA: Geo. Landmass protruding south from the far east of SAMMAEA, east of the SEA OF LETHEA, which it cradles. The headland is occupied by the nations of CHEIRA, SERROK, PORPHYR, ANANTHUL and SABAISA.

PORPHYRI TRADE-TONGUE: Lan. Simple creole language spoken in ports, marketplaces, and embassies across the PORPHYRI PENINSULA, mostly by merchants. It borrows heavily from SABAISAN, PORPHYRI, and PHARTHI. See Vol II: Languages.

PORPHYRIOS DAG: (Pop. c. 3957 RM) Pol. Current Prime Minister of the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS.

PORSIGRA: Set. Scholarly settlement in the north of KULIGALA, in the north of the CARCHEMISHI PENINSULA^(1.) in the east of SAMMAEA. It is known for its scholarly traditions and ancient philosophers (Pop. c. 8,000).

PORT-TALK: see 'LOMHARI'.

PORTAL-CITY, the: see DOLMES.

POSSESSED: Mys. Sup. State in which a mortal is dominated by a foreign entity, such as OTHERWORLDLY spirits⁽¹⁾, SHAPERS, or stranger less-documented beings. Though some regain their freedom, either through the actions of an EXORCIST or other means, some remain shackled until death, and are commonly referred to as possessed. Most of those who are exorcised of the dominating influence go on to live normal lives, though some retain an imprint of the possessing force, and become known as beholden are BEHOLDEN.

PORTILLOR: Set. City in the c north west of CAMAU that is known for its foundries and FIRMATITE alloys that are valuable in engineering across the south east of MENISCEA (Pop. c. 67,000).

POSSESSION: Mys. Sup. Act in which a mortal find itself dominated by a foreign force, typically an OTHERWORLDLY spirit, SHAPER or a stranger less-documented being. A mortal so-influenced is said to be POSSESSED. There exist artificial means through which an individual can find itself more susceptible to possession, such as through use of the drug MUZA, hypnotism or through use of shaping. Objects can also be the targets of possession, such as the rare case with some SURROGATE MOPPETS.

Over the course of history, mortals have developed ways of dealing with possession, including through shaping, the power of suggestion or rituals such as EXORCISMS. The KORACHANI EMPIRE, for instance, maintains an official MINASTERIA OF EXORCISMS to deal with such matters.

POSSESSION ENGINE: Sup. Mys. Tec. TECHNARCANE machine that facilitates the POSSESSION of a MORTAL body by a SPIRIT⁽¹⁾, though which various experiments can be conducted. The spirit possessing the body is able to use it for locomotion or to converse with the living, though it may still be limited by language, for instance.

These technarcane engines are forbidden in most civilised states though are employed in warfare by some, including in METHUMN and PHYRR in the south west of SAMMAEA, and OSSIEL in WESTERN MENISCEA, though it is believed that various nations around the INNER SEA REGION have dabbled in this particular form of technarcana over the years, including the HIGH- and LOW-EMPIRES, and ALMAGEST, though many other are also suspected as having experimented with this debased technology, which forms an OVERLAY with the OTHERWORLD and draws a spirit^(1.) to a mortal body that is equipped with technarcane 'shackles' that imprison it.

The mortal bodies used for this purpose are typically $\underline{WOMB\text{-}BORN}$ still alive, though the process can also be applied to recently deceased bodies that are of good condition as well as $\underline{VAT\text{-}BORN}$ bodies.

POSTMORTAL: Sup. Mor. Common term used to describe those who are WOMB-BORN (as opposed to VAT-BORN) and whose bodies have been altered through ATRAMENTAL, TECHNARCANE or other means. Though sometimes used in reference to HALFBLOODS, the term is incorrect as the term postmortal implies conscious alteration.

Postmortals are relatively common in PARTHIS and, to a lesser extent, its dependencies, where body modification is a practice undertaken by the wealthy and influential as part of the pursuit of fashion.

The term is used both in a pejorative and complimentary fashion by different demographics, with most people who are so-enhanced having reappropriated its usage as a mark of pride.

POTAKH: Mil. Str. Coastal fortress in the south west of LAASKHA, overlooking the BAY OF NAASU. It was, prior to dwindling sea levels in the early centuries of the fourth millennium RM, an island-fortress, though finds itself linked to the mainland today.

POTENTATE: 1. Pol. Law. Rnk. High-ranking administrative role within the KORACHANI EMPIRE, comparable to that of a governor. Typically, each settlement is ruled by a potentate, or in the case of larger cities, divided into districts, each of which are overseen by a potentate who together may form a council.

Potentates are either elected or appointed by a higher-ranking administrator from PATRICIANS, PRIMATES, magnates, high-ranking DEMIURNES, descendants of the DESPOSYNI, and so-on. Their role and composition have fluctuated greatly during the rule of the empire, and they may be replaced entirely in certain vassal states, where native customs are observed.

At times the potentates may form a council that convenes in the capital city of their nation, where they put law and edicts to the vote.

- 2. Soc. Rnk. More specifically and less commonly, in eastern KORACHANI nations (including present-day PELASGOS and VÂRR while it was still a Korachani territory), potentates were highly regarded members of the PATRICIAN HOUSES whose duties included the treasuring of history and culture, particularly in those places where imperial invasion has blanketed much of recent history.
- 3. Mil. Veh. Class of modern KORACHANI WARSHIP designated as a battleship. There are 9 individual Potentate-class ships in active service today, of which two the Throne's Wrath, and Khadon are classed as capital ships.

Measuring an average of around 575'-600' long, the Potentate-class ships are the largest in the Korachani fleet and are amongst the most well-equipped battleships in service today, and they are typically armed as follows:

- a primary battery made up of four main 13.7" battery dorsal guns (2 mounted on a single fore turret, and 2 mounted on a single aft turret)
- a secondary battery made up of 14 7.3" guns (8 mounted in turrets and 6 mounted in fixed armoured casements, divided equally between port and starboard)
- a tertiary battery made up of 21 3.7" guns (2 mounted on fore dorsal turrets, 1 mounted on an aft dorsal turret, and 12 mounted in turrets and 6 mounted in fixed armoured casements, divided equally between port and starboard)

They are powered by advanced steam engines (often augmented by TECHNARCANE secondary engines and enhancements), which power twin screw propellers, which together allow for top speeds of around $18-19~\rm knots~(20-21~\rm mph)$, depending on weight and total armament. They have an operational combat range of between $1-2~\rm miles$ and are protected by thick compound armour that varies in thickness from 4" in less critical sections to as much as 12" along the central band that protects the engines and magazines.

Most Potentate-class battleships are characterised by large bronze figureheads that take the form of stylised faces. Some claim these are depictions of the Archpotentate Malichar, though in truth they are simply designed to intimidate their foes.

POTENTATE HAABHUS: (B. c. 942 - D. c. 984 RM) also 'the Craven Potentate'. Pol. Leader who brought together various powers and entities surrounding CHEGRINT in c. 975 RM to challenge the PAUPER KINGS. Within 5-years the Pauper Kings had been deposed, their line ended, and POTENTATE Haabhus placed at the head of one of the largest territories in the known world. He was known as a ruthless but efficient general and ruler, both of which were required traits to rule an empire as vast and diverse as Chegrint.

His rule was not to last, for in 984 RM he was assassinated and supplanted by his lieutenants who had all historical reference to him changed to the Craven Potentate.

POTHA: Rvr. River in the nation of ELEKHID, flowing south east for 845miles from sources in the south east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS before meeting the BAY OF HINGIL in the far west of the BRINE SEA.

POUKON: Geo. Large peninsula in WESTERN SAMMAEA, forming the north western-most extension of the SANTOREAN Mountains that dominate the western coast of the SAMMAEAN continent.

POUKON, OBSERVATORY OF: Edu. Str. Large observatory in the highland plateau POUKON in the SANTOREAN Mountains in the west of WESTERN SAMMAEA in the north of RAHENG. It commands an unrivalled view of the night sky that is unfettered by light pollution or obstructions.

POURAN WASTES, the: Geo. Expansive wasteland in the north of RAONGEN^{2.}, bearing the scars of an ancient war – glass-blasted deserts and petrified remnants of fortifications. The Wastes cover no less than 820,000-aquare-miles of land across the northern POLAR CIRCLE.

POVON: Set. Fortified settlement in the south east of KARGAMA. It is vital in the defence of the south east of the nation, and its troops are vigilant of the border with ESHIR (Pop. c. 6,200).

POWDERGUN: (also 'gun', and 'Irons') Tec. Common word for firearm. The first recorded use of a powdergun is in c. 900 RM, where matchlock was the prevalent form until c. 1300 RM. This was replaced by wheel- and flintlocks which arose around the same time and diverged in design, with the flintlock gaining popularity in personal weapons and the wheellock becoming more common amongst heavier pieces and artillery. Towards the end of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, beginning around 3600 RM, revolvers were introduced. Also called Irons, in slang. See Vol II: Technology.

POYAKWAN: Rui. Abandoned city in the north west of KREM, which once formed part of an extensive trade-route in the MON KETTRAN empire.

POYYAN: Set. Small city in the c of CUTH, west of the city of OKKOWAN (Pop. c. 6,000).

PRAEDICATE: Pol. Ruling title in PORPHYR taken by the SCION TELEANYARA APEXEIDE upon the founding the nation. The title has only been held by Teleanyara, due to her longevity, and to most the title Praedicate is synonymous with her name.

PRAEFECT: Pol. Rnk. The twenty-two regional rulers of TAAN AN, each of which has been elected every seven years to rule their respective PRAEFECTURE, since the founding of the parliament in 3782 RM. Together, the twenty-two Praefects form a larger council, known as the PRAEFECTURATE COUNCIL, that acts on matters of national import and serves in an advisory capacity to the EMPEROR (1.). Many of the Praefects are also part of the ISHINAL SHAPING CULTS.

PRAEFECTURATE COUNCIL: Pol. Org. The ruling council of TAAN AN, whose twenty-two members are made from the ruling PRAEFECTS of each of the nation's PRAEFECTURATES. The Praefectures are largely self-governing, though the council convenes in CUR APON when needed to act on matters of national import, where they elect and ARCH-PRAEFECT from amongst their ranks to act as a chair.

They also serve as advisors to the $\underline{\text{EMPEROR}}^{(L)}$, offering their disparate skills and experiences when needed.

PRAEFECTURE: Pol. Geo. The districts of TAAN AN, which is divided into twenty-two territories known as Praefectures. Rulers, known as PRAEFECTS, are elected from eligible individuals within the Praefecture every seven years who then select a cabinet to form a government. The rule of each Praefecture is largely autonomous, and together each of the Praefects also form a larger council, known as the PRAEFECTURATE COUNCIL, that acts on matters of national import and serve as advisors to the EMPEROR⁽¹⁾.

The Praefectures predated the rise of democracy in Taan An, and were originally the fiefs at the head of which was the Emperor. The founding of the parliament in 3782 RM saw a restructuring of the organisation, if not the physical boundaries, of the Praefectures, which remain largely unchanged today.

PRAEINA: Set. Coastal city in the north east of TISARA, overlooking the BAY OF PRAET (Pop. c. 25,000).

PRAEPOSTOR: Mil. Rnk. Middle leadership rank within the SANCTIFIED ORDERS OF THE INQUISITION, acting as superiors to the EDICTORS and PREFECTS. Praepostors are in charge of entire regions or districts and are often attached to government departments and act independently of the Orders.

PRAESES MAGNUS: Rel. Rnk. Religious rank within the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE.

PRAESHENG: 1. Pol. Geo. One of the seven INDUSTRIES of RAONGEN^(2.), located in the south west of the empire. It is one of the major OMNATITE mining resigning in the empire.

2. Set. One seven ruling cities in RAONGEN^(2.), located in the south east of the empire, and it is one of its largest cities. It is the ancestral home of the HAU household and is also a major recruiting ground for the Raongeni army, and as a result its populace is made up of many veteran soldiers and citizens (one of the ways citizenship can be granted in Raongen is through military service. The city is surrounded by various military structures, including vast training grounds (Pop. c. 780,000).

PRAET: Sea. Long narrow bay in the far north east of EASTERN LLACHATUL, flanked by TISARA in the west and ABATTUR in the east.

PRAETOR: Pol. Law. Rnk. Law-givers in the KORACHANI EMPIRE. Every town (or district in the case of larger settlements) with a significant Imperial presence has at least one Praetor residing over its administrative and legislative affairs. They have direct influence over $\underline{PRAETORIANS}^{(2)}$ – the law executors of the Korachani empire.

PRAETORIAN BROTHERHOOD, the: see PARTHISAN BROTHERHOOD.

PRAETORIAN GUARD: Mil. Major political and military force in the nation of FATH, in the c of MENISCEA. It is an open secret that they are the true power behind the emperor, who they elect to act as their puppet. This has been ongoing since c. 3540 RM.

PRAETORIANS: 1. see Praetorians of the Road.

2. Pol. Law. Law executors of the KORACHANI EMPIRE. They are higher-ranking than the IRON GUARDIANS and have more autonomy and authority to enact the empire's laws. They work under the jurisdictions of the PRAETORS.

PRAETORIANS OF THE ROAD: also 'Praetorians'. Mil. Military police-force in AQUARIIA, originally appearing in c. 900 RM to guard the frequent food caravans that moved resources from rural settlements in the south to the OBSERVATORY-CITIES in the north. The force remains active to this day, where it has various branches, including city watch and border patrol.

PRAETORS OF TEUTAR: Mar. Org. Private security forces originating in c. 3780 RM in SARASTRO from the remnants of the ORDER OF TEUTAR. Following the SUNDERING OF THE KORACHANI EMPIRE in 3705 RM the Teutars were expelled by the newly REFORMED CHURCH OF SARASTRO. Most retreated north into the HIGH-EMPIRE though the rest scattered across the north of SAMMAEA, renouncing their past ties. Most fragmented though a few remained as mercenaries.

One such band would move east back into Sarastro, becoming freelance guards to merchants and PATRICIANS needing experienced troops and guards. The organisation grew from there, setting up offices in most major cities along the southern coast of the INNER SEA (with their headquarters in the city of HAGRADEA), where they provide work-for-hire to anyone willing to pay their prices. They have a reputation for taking on any job, regardless of the legality or possible repercussions.

PRAETTANIA: His. Ntm. Historical early FIFTH AGE state in the north east of EASTERN LLACHATUL occupying what are now LOEGRESS^(1.), ABATTUR, and the west of KOMMEA. It rose in c. 1100 RM as a series of feudal states whose people were descended from the earlier GALABRIAN culture, and it was culturally isolated and remains known in Eastern Llachatul today as a place of loosely-united city-states ruled by charismatic knights whose genealogies were shrouded in myths that emerged from cults of personality established by their founders, whose names remain culturally resonant in its descendant nation of Loegress today.

The region eventually crumbled in c. 2420 – 2450 RM due to political and cultural inertia and the subsequent internecine fighting between its many feudal states, many of which had developed their own culture and myths that clashed ideologically with those of their neighbours. It eventually stabilised into three distinct territories – ENAELLON^(2.), GLYNNED^(2.), and MOTTANIA^(2.) – by c. 2500 RM, though they remained unstable and at conflict with each other until they were eventually reunited by the warlord TORRVAN in 2588 RM, who became the first king of the new kingdom of a united Loegress in 2612 RM. See Vol II: extinct Nations.

PRAETTANIAN: Lan. Historical language spoken by the people of PRAETTANIA and was known for its many dialects. The collapse of Praettania in c. 2450 RM led to three distinct states – ENAELLON⁽²⁾, GLYNNED⁽²⁾, and MOTTANIA⁽²⁾ – emerging, and their dialects diverged further over the next century.

With the reunification of the three states under the banner of LOEGRESS^(1,) in 2588 RM saw the GAELLNYN dialect became the most influential, and by c. 2750 RM it had superseded all others, becoming the main language of Loegress. Praettanian dwindled into obscurity, to be replaced by other dialects in various regions, though they too became relatively uncommon with the spread of Gaellnyn. See Vol II: Languages.

PRAHAT VIGRA: Set. Settlement in the east of CHEIRA (Pop. unknown).

PRAHEN: Set. Settlement in the c east of AHRISHEN, along the southern shore of lake GALENDA. Its main industry is the gathering of reeds (Pop. c. 8,000).

PRAND: (B. 1433 – D. 1512 RM) LIDEAN naturalist who travelled extensively around ELYDEN, noting the creatures he discovered. He was responsible for bringing knowledge of various fauna that was otherwise unknown to the people of the INNER SEA. He also named various such animals, including PRAND'S JELLYFISH.

PRAND'S JELLYFISH: Fau. Poi. Large jellyfish common in temperate waters of the NORTHERN HEMISPHERE, particularly the northern shores of the seas of Orrida and ERTHYDEA. It is renowned for its incredibly long venomous tentacles, which cause sickness and numbness. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

PRANT: Set. Settlement in the west of ELEKHID, along the course of the river MAHEZEAL (Pop. unknown).

PRASINIA: Set. Major coastal city in the south west of HANNAH, in the c south west of SAMMAEA, in the north of the SEA OF ETAGIRIA (Pop. c. 75,000).

PRAXIS, ORDER OF THE: Org. International philanthropic order common to the south east of MENISCEA, based in the nation of VALA, and with strongholds in VECTIS, ACHAA⁽²⁾, and AURUM⁽²⁾. The order receives funding from its supporting states and charity, and its members, who are known as SEEKERS OF THE PRAXIS, or simply Seekers, travel across the south east of Meniscea, carrying out acts of philanthropy.

Founded in c. 3680 RM, it has, over the years branched into various sub-factions, with the largest and most well-known being its militant branch, known as the VYRAJIN COHORT, whose members, the VYRAJIN, are akin to the knights of more familiar lore.

PRAYAN: Set. Small city in the c west of RAONGEN⁽²⁾ to the north of the SHANII Mountain (Pop. c. 14,000).

PRAYER FLAGS: Rel. Obj. Prayer flags are a common sight in the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. In the religion and philosophy of the various sects of NEPHTHALONT, prayer flags are used as a symbol of well-wishing between people. They originated as a physical representation of prayers, and temples of Nephthalont are adorned with maypoles from which hang many strings, on which are attached dozens of coloured triangular papers, on which are written prayers.

PRE-IMPERIAL: His. Soc. Common term used to describe a time either before the rise of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, or before the subjugation of a nation or people to Korachan. The term pre-imperial does not necessarily describe a specific date or time as this can vary wildly based on region. For example, in KORACHAN, pre-imperial would be any time before 1 RM, when the region was still divided into SEVEN CITY-STATES; whilst in SARASTRO it would mean a time before 339 RM, when the siege of ARGEA finally succeeded, leading to Korachani subjugation of its people.

PRECEPTOR: 1. Pol. Rnk. IMPERIAL caretaker in most lands south of THE INNER SEA, either serving as regent in the absence of an imperial presence, for instance during the handover to the INTERREGNUM, or acting as regional governors of smaller districts and/or settlements.

2. Org. Rnk. Clerks that work in the PRECEPTORIES of the WHITE BANK.

3. Mil Pol. Pol. Org. Tutors in the VÁMAN ODDER of the SANCTERIA

3. Mil. Pol. Rnk. Org. Tutors in the VÁMAN ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION. They train agents (particularly the KEEPERS OF THE KEYS) and re-educate rogue SHAPERS captured by the Orders' agents. They tend to be intimidating figures, known for waring featureless metal masks that are designed to instil fear amongst those who look upon them, be they other agents of the Order or shapers that have been captured.

PRECEPTORY: Org. Str. Common name given to the physical banks of the WHITE BANK. They typically fulfil the role of a bank, as well as a COMMISSARY to the Members of the WHITE LEAGUE and esteemed patrons of the bank.

PRECURSORS, the: Rel. Name appearing in various religions and mythologies in the south and west of SAMMAEA, particularly ADHERA, EPHATTA, and SYNCHTHONITHA. It is thought by KORACHANI scholars that the Precursors are a corrupted reference to SCIONS.

PREDICANT: Rel. Rnk. Religious rank in the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, serving as a preacher and demagogue entrusted to motivate crowds. They are commonly found marching alongside PILGRIMS in the SHADOW MARCH.

PREFECT: 1. Pol. In MHAROKK, regional rulers of the 49 prefectures, answerable only to the queen.

2. Pol. Rank Within the SANCTIFIED ORDERS OF THE INQUISITION, above that of VIGILATOR, with more responsibility and typically in control of a larger jurisdiction. Prefects specialise in upholding specific aspects of the law, as befits their respective Order.

PREFECTURE: Pol. An administrative jurisdiction traditionally governed by an appointed prefect. Specifically, this could refer to:

1. Pol. Division of political districts in the nation of HOLOLACH^(1.).

PREG: Set. Settlement in the c of the emirate of DEITHO^(L) in the c west of LIMOTH^(L), located about 3-miles west of the river MATHRAS. Its main industry is agriculture (Pop. c. 6,100).

PRELLIA: Set. Settlement in the c north east of ALMAGEST, just south of the northern POLAR CIRCLE (Pop. c. 4,000).

PREPOTENCY OF THREPHO: 1. Geo. Island group off the western-coast of SAMMAEA, with the SEA OF NARANOR to the west and the SEA OF ABRAXA^(1.) to the east.

2. Dem. 'Threphian'. Ntn. Nation situated on a large island group of the same name⁽¹⁾ off the western-coast of WESTERN SAMMAEA. Its people are considered primitive by those of the INNER SEA REGION, and little is known about them, though the region is known for its dark bloody pantheon of gods and the kelp forest that dominates its shallow waters. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

PRESBYTER: Soc. Rak. Care-takers of the ORPHANOTROPHIA of the KORACHANI EMPIRE.

PRESIDER: Pol. Chairperson of the Oligarchic Council if UKHARTH^(2.). the current Presider is PEGARIUS ZONRA.

PRESRA: Set. Settlement in the south of the territory of UNERKILISS, in the c south of ALAM BETHYL. It is Just north of the northern POLAR CIRCLE and experiences two days of darkness every winter, though the suns' closeness to the horizon means that those two days are spent in twilight rather than full darkness (Pop. c. 6,000).

PRIEMPIL: Sca. Reef in the SEA OF KRYMEA off the southern coast of LIMOTH^(1.) to the south of THE CONSTELLATIONS islands.

PRIGLIA: Set. Fortified settlement in the c-south east of THE SURRACH, in the far south of the region of ELIPHAO (Pop. c. 8,000).

PRIMATE: Rel. Rnk. High-ranking title within the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, granted by the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR through his POTENTATES to those within the church serving the empire well. The title is honorific rather than functional, and many primates go on to be elected to the rank of potentate themselves, or become rich by drawing salaries from church tithes.

PRIMATE MAGNUS: Rel. Rnk. Rank of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, above that of PRIMATE.

PRIME LACUNAE: Sup. Mys. Geo. The two antipodal fonts where the MATERIA OMNA makes contact with the atmosphere of Elyden, dispersing into the ATRAMENTA and FIRMAMENT at the BLACK FOUNTAIN and the TRUE MENISCUS, respectively.

PRIME MERIDIAN: Soc. Arbitrarily-defined location of the line of longitude defined to be 0°. It was officially recognised as being the site of the OBSERVATORY OF DEOCHAN in 1832 RM, after the cartographer SIMOLEUS popularised it in his ATLAS OF THE INNER SEA.

PRIMHEN: Set. Settlement in the west of RAONGEN⁽²⁾, guarding the pass across the west of the ZEHINE Mountains (Pop. c. 6,750).

PRIMID MELESH: see MELESH.

PRIMOGENITOR: Pol. Soc. Oth. The first ancestor of a particular lineage such as HALFBLOOD HOUSES or SCION bloodlines, as well as prestigious Patrician Houses, such as those descended from the SEVEN-AND-FORTY. In the case of halfbloods, the primogenitor is an OTHERWORLDER, and in the case of scions, this would be a DEMIURGE. For instance, all DESPOSYNI can trace their lineage back to the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR – their primogenitor.

Not all halfbloods or scions can trace their lineage to their primogenitor, which case this individual will remain unknown.

The term is also used in reference to CLONING, specifically the individual from whom cloned iterations are derived.

PRIMORDIAL WISDOM: Myt. Phil. His. Common belief amongst many scholars and philosophers that posits that the two-and-twenty MORTAL PEOPLES were originally born with a base understanding of how to function. It is thought that they were born with a rudimentary language (the so-called UR-TONGUE from which all other languages emerged), as well as an archaic understanding of some aspects of nature that allowed them to survive in the chaotic world into which they had been born.

Though this is not explicitly mentioned in the 'MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN' it is hinted at through the mention of early mortals' knowledge and seemingly innate understanding of certain concepts. Despite this, early mortals were primitive and largely ignorant of many subtleties and aspects of physics and the natural world, some of which were learnt through their experiences or otherwise taught to them by the DEMIURGES. See Vol IV: the Mythologia Elyden.

PRINCE: Mil. Veh. Class of modern KORACHANI WARSHIP designated as a corvette. There are over 100 individual Prince-class ships in active service today, of which 21 are classed as capital ships.

Measuring an average of between 175' – 250' long, the Prince-class ships are the most ubiquitous amongst the ships found in the imperial navy, and they carry out coastal patrols, and serve as forward scouts and as fast attack craft close to shore. They are typically armed as follows:

- a primary battery of 1 7.3" gun (mounted on a fore turret)
- a secondary battery of 4 3.7" guns (2 mounted on port turrets, and 2 mounted on starboard turrets)

Prince-class ships are amongst the most modular of Korachani vessels, in terms of armament, with most carrying modified loadouts, based on their individual roles, and many have their armament removed and replaced various forms of offensive and defensive TECHNARCANE engines.

They are powered by steam engines, which power a screw propeller, which allows for top speeds of around 30 - 35 knots (34 - 40 mph), depending on weight, total armament, and sea condition. They have an operational combat range of between.5 – .75 miles and are protected by compound armour that varies in thickness from 1" in less critical sections to as much as 4" along the central band that protects the engines and magazines.

PRINCE OF THE CHURCH: Rel. Pol. Rnk. Rank within the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE as well as the REFORMED CHURCH OF SARASTRO. that is bestowed upon those with a 'special' relationship with the church, in particular its cardinals, bishops, as well as devout or power-hungry patricians, generals, or magnates. The practice is rife with nepotism and cronyism, and is highly corrupt. It may also be bestowed to loyal and hard-working votaries in certain cases.

The position grants leverage within the church, but 'donations' are expected in return of favours. Princes of the Church are expected to act as social figureheads of the church, and are expected to use their fame or influence to promote the church and, more specifically, their patrons, also acting as brokers and campaigners for their patrons.

The rank can be withheld or taken without prior provocation, so bearers are careful to not endanger their positions.

PRINCE OF KETESH, the: (B. 3934 RM) Pol. Influential politician in KETESH^(1.). Born to PATRICIANS in LAASKHA, he had an unruly childhood and was sent to the city of Ketesh^(2.) by his father.

He became a COMPEER OF KETESH after serving five years in the MOST HUMBLE ORDER OF KETESH, though continued to serve after his obligatory term ended, becoming enamoured with the small nation.

He went on to become a General of the Keteshi army in 3972 RM and a respected and much-loved statesman in 3988 RM, in which capacity he continues to serve. The name 'Prince of Ketesh' is a nickname granted to him by the people in c. 3982 after he successfully fended off a CYHLAGHARRI pirate raid.

PRINCEPS: 1. Pol. Rnk. In the KORACHANI EMPIRE, a title denoting ultimate overseer of each of the seven wards of the great nation of KORACHAN, often accompanied by another title. Typically, the princeps are elected from the POTENTATES of the wards' cities by a council of peers.

- 2. policing officer of KORACHANI outposts, operating as a microcosm of the above, ruling the outpost.
- 3. Mil. Veh. Class of modern KORACHANI WARSHIP designated as a gunship. There are 70 individual Princeps-class ships in active service today, of which fourteen the Asharta, Basilea, Cypria, Inculcator, Indoctrinator, Korachan, Lisassa, Otina, Provoker, Remander, Skaros, St. Fatuh, Throne, and Tyrsis, – are classed as capital ships, and are all highly decorated.

Measuring an average of around 200' long, the Princeps-class ships are intended to target coastal targets rather than other ships, and also serve to carry out 'gunboat diplomacy' (making conspicuous displays of naval power in international politics as a threat of warfare should presented conditions not be met), and are typically armed as follows:

- a primary battery of 2 5.7" dorsal guns
- a secondary battery of 4 2.3" guns (2 mounted on port turrets, and 2 mounted on starboard turrets)

Not as modular as other ships, the Princeps-class ships have nevertheless been retrofitted with different weaponry based on needs.

They are powered by advanced steam engines (often augmented by TECHNARCANE secondary engines and enhancements), which power twin screw propellers, which together allow for top speeds of around 13 knots (15 mph), depending on weight and total armament. They have an operational combat range of between 1-1.5 miles and are protected by thick compound armour that varies in thickness from 2" in less critical sections to as much as 8" along the central band that protects the engines and magazines.

PRINCEPS' CITY: Mil. Str. Outpost along the GOR'KHAN Ridge in the JAELA Mountain in the far north east of SARASTRO. The city is a wealthy trade-town that lies along the eastern imperial trade-routes, effectively serving as the major northern Sarastroan link with the north west of VENTHIR. The only other city – MULCIBER, now part of north western Venthir – serves as a major link from LLACHATUL.

Growing tensions between Sarastro and Venthir have led to diminishing trade along the route, which has seen the Princep's City dwindling in size (Pop. c. 1,010,000).

PRINCIPALITY OF AASHA: see AASHA, PRINCIPALITY OF.

PRINCIPALITY OF OPRET: Dem. 'Opretian'. His. Ntn. Ancient, now extinct culture, south west of PARTHIS and the TARAHID ANNEXES (the latter of which inherited some cultural aspects of the region. The Principality of Opret (often simply called Opret) emerged from the nation of Eron Soth following the signing of the SEVERANCE TREATY in 592 RM that effectively divided the region in two — OPRET in the north west and OPHAM in the east. The region suffered greatly, originally against LHAUS incursions, and later was defeated twice against massive oghur attacks; one in 723 RM that saw its legendary Iron Mantle⁽¹⁾ (a 250-mile-long fortified redoubt specifically built to defend against such an attack) destroyed alongside the regions' major settlements; and another in 941 RM that saw the remnants of that culture wiped out.

Following the original oghur attacks in 723 RM, most males were taken to CYHLAGHARR as slaves, with the remnants (either female or those deemed too weak to be taken as slaves) either executed of left to their fates. A great deal of the women later bore half-oghur children following the massed raping that took place during the attacks. This half-breed generation inherited the broken OPRET, funding a hidden nation in the southern face of the Asoghaqua mountain at the centre of which was the alchemical enclave known as AN SIMEIA, after which the people were later known. The attacks of 941 RM left An Simeia destroyed, the majority of the SIMEIANS slaughtered. The remnants of Opretian lands were either taken by Opham or reclaimed by nature, with only a single small city-state (known as ROAH) to carry the Opretian tradition. See Vol IV: Extinct Nations.

PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT: see SEPAHAUNAT^(2.).

PRINCIPLE OF CONTAGION: Mys. Sup. A commonly-accepted hypothesis amongst scholars of the MATERIA OMNA that posits the following: two MORTALS or objects that have been in physical contact with each other form a permanent, if tenuous, link that can be felt by certain SHAPERS who are sensitive to such effects. Throughout their life a person will form hundreds of thousands of such links, and though most are weak, fading over time, others, like the link shared with ones' home or loved ones, are strong and can last for years.

These links can be detected by shapers, and can be strengthened or broken. Shapers who are sensitive to these links are known as PSYCHOMETRISTS (or ANAMNRIIN in the KORACHANIEMPIRE) and when FOCUSED^(1.) and ATTUNED they can touch an object or person to get a sense of its history or specific events that took place around it. See Vol IV: the Materia Omna.

PRINCIPLES ON THE GODS' DREAMS: Sup. Dre. Vol. ONEIROMANTIC treatise written by the VORANDI Oneiromancer DALAMAN AGUATA, which was published across the INNER SEA REGION in 3376 RM. It spoke casually of the DEMIURGES and their influence on the ancient world and of their extant blame for the DREAMSCAPES that plague ELYDEN.

This drew the attention of the Church of the Undying Machine, whose agents persecuted him, leading to his capture in 3381 RM, and his EXECUTION as a heretic the next year.

PRINTING PRESS: Tec. A machine that, through the application of pressure to an inked surface onto a material (commonly vellum or cloth), produces printed matter. The printing press was devised in c. 785 RM in AZAZEM by a school of engineers, who began selling them in surrounding nations. The device gained much popularity amongst PATRICIANS and INTELLIGENTSIA circles, as well as the growing middle-class of FREEMEN whose growing literacy allowed them to afford printed texts for the first time.

The engineers' designs were appropriated by the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE in 823 RM, with machines constructed primarily for the massed printing and distribution of church propaganda, though rogue designers continued to use the presses for other, more pragmatic, sometimes esoteric, purposes. The Church and censors would hunt down these rogue printers until c. 1200 RM, by which-time the presses had become so widespread that opposition was futile, though the BUREAU OF CENSORS continued to persecute such presses that would spread anti-imperial secular propaganda.

Though printing presses originally used paper as a surface material, the decline of the natural world across ELYDEN necessitated other materials; most commonly being vellum, parchment and thin metal sheets (see CATHADESM).

PRISMERISM: Noun. Prismerist. Sup. Rnk. One of the commonly accepted SPHERES of SHAPING, most commonly-seen in FIRMAMENTISM, whose practitioners can manipulate colours and lights; creating, changing and negating lights both artificial or natural as well as granting them physicality. Few outside their circles can understand or accept how this is done, though they explain it as a bending of the light emanated from the sun and subtle application of Firmamental force (akin but inferior to the sphere of FOREONISM) to the surface of objects so that the light reflects off them in different ways; resulting in the altered colours. The home of Prismerism is the small town of THESIA in SAUA.

PRISMILLIA: Set. Settlement in the south west of GNOTH, in the region of ALKAHEST. It is known for its nickel mines (2,200).

PRISON: also 'Incarceration', and 'Correctional Facility'. Law. Str. Org. Soc. A structure where people are confined, typically as punishment for crimes. In some regimes, prisons are used as tools of oppression where political enemies are sent to, often without fair trial. They are also used in times of war to detain prisoners captured from enemy forces. In many cultures, prisons may also be at the heart of a slave-like industry, known as penal labour, where prisoners are put to work, usually without being paid.

Below are some states and cultures and particular practices they may employ with regards to their prison system:

1. The Twin Empires: a single entity prior to 3704 RM, when the SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE led to the formation of the HIGH- and LOW-EMPIRES, KORACHAN and SARASTRO'S prison system remain almost identical.

The growth of industrialisation in the empire at the dawn of the 2nd millennium RM led to hordes of people from rural backgrounds heading to cities in search of work and the unfounded promise of a better life. Many, broken by the harsh realities of life in large uncaring cities, were forced into lives of crime. The prisons of the day could not cope with the influx of convicts, leading to a growing civil problem. The LEAGUE OF PATRICIANS found a solution of sorts, creating one of the most persistent aspects surrounding incarceration in the twin empires – prison industries.

For the most part, prisoners in the twin empires serve as uncompensated workforces in workhouses and manufactories within the prisons themselves. These produce a huge variety of goods, including food, material goods, clothing, tools, weaponry, and so on. Laws and sentencing are kept intentionally harsh to keep these inmate worker populations high.

Upon sentencing, most convicts are assigned to certain prisons based on their temperament. Those of a more belligerent attitude are sent to the same prisons, where they may be press ganged into penal battalions in return for reduced sentences. Many do not survive their first battle, and the rest become so traumatised by their experiences that after the end of their tour of duty they end up in an asylum.

2. Almagest: ALMAGEST is known for its prison gangs. Indeed, the prisons themselves encourage gang culture within the system, with some gangs having histories going back centuries. These gangs are at the heart of a respected penal corps known as the KRASHBAT, that recruits from the prisons, with gang members placed into regiments of their corresponding gangs. The scope of advancement within the corps is the main motivating factor to recruits, as is the republic pardon that is presented to those who survive three years in the corps, though most remain enlisted after this day comes.

Also common in Almagest are clandestine fights instigated by guards, where two inmates are picked from random gangs and placed in the prison yard, where they are forced to fight. To save face and to avoid being shot by the guards these individuals fight until either killing or seriously incapacitating their opponent whilst the guards bet on the outcome.

There is no incentive to this other than death, should the inmates fail to comply. The practice is frowned upon by the Republic though has been going on for so long that it is considered a prion tradition today, regardless of the cruelty to those selected.

- 3. Parthis: giant ball-like treadmills are used as a form of penal labour in PARTHIS, with convicts running for hours on end in shifts in groups up to a few dozen per treadmill. The treadmills generate electricity for the prison, powering its lighting, and ovens.
- 4. Venthir: prisons in VENTHIR commonly take the form of dungeons, where inmates are incarcerated, often for life, and largely forgotten. Conditions are appalling and many inmates die of malnutrition disease or hypothermia before they even complete their sentences. Early releases are unheard of and a prisoner is as likely to be forgotten about as they are to be released at the end of their sentences. Most freed prisoners invariably find their way back in the system sooner or later, and few who return to prison ever make it our alive.
- 5. Malan: An ancient MALANI tradition where criminals were imprisoned within the hollow trunk of the Prison tree and left to starve, with their bodies sustaining the tree. Though no longer practiced in most urban areas, it is thought to still be a method of incarceration and execution in more rural areas.

PRISON CARCERI, the: 1. Dem. 'Carceran'. Also 'Carceri'. Expansive system of caverns and hollows in the earth of ELYDEN created by the DEMIURGE VORROPOHAIAH, and his children the ROPOHAII, millennia past. Its near-endless corridors cover the chthonic underworld over most of LLACHATUL, and the north of SAMMAEA, with its farthest corridors spreading for thousands of miles, as far West as RAONGEN⁽²⁾, as far east as KREM, as far north as the WHITE SHEET, and as far south as ANANTHUL. Its deepest reaches are said to pierce the fiery heart of Elyden, where byzantine ruins still infest its belly, ancient beings trapped within. The tribe of Vorropohaiah still resides in the deep belly of this place, their minds corrupted by despair and madness.

Most extant imperial maps were either charted or compiled by the diligent work of cartographers and explorers of the SOMNIARECHI ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION, whose work during the so-called ONEIRIC SCOURGE led them into various expeditions of the depths of Carceri.

2. His. Rui. During the rule of the KORACHANI EMPIRE in VÂRR, some of the upper-most hollows of Carceri^(1.) were appropriated by the AVÉNETHI ORDER and used as a prison for FIRMAMENTISTS, and came to be known as Carceri. Their tenure began in 2702 RM, after their old headquarters in VENTHIR was destroyed in an earthquake, and the Order remained there until 2943 RM, when they moved to AVLONIA, ALMAGEST.

They left caretakers behind to oversee the maintenance of the old structures, but they were wiped out by the REGENT-KINGS by 3995 RM, after which they allowed the abandoned structures to fall into disrepair.

PRISON LABOUR: Soc. Law. It is common in the KORACHANI EMPIRE for some prisons to be privatised, where they are owned and operated by PATRICIAN HOUSES and business consortiums. To make a profit they turn them into manufactories and workhouses, forcing the inmates to work in the production on various goods. The business is quite lucrative and has changed the pattern of sentencing in Korachan, which used to lean towards EXECUTION, with most now being sentenced to labour.

PRISON TREE: Flo. Law. Baobab-like trees endemic to the south of MALAN and also in surrounding regions in smaller numbers. The cross-section of its trunk has the shape of a deep crescent, lending it a distinct appearance. Its name comes from an ancient Malani practice of using the tree as a prison for law-breakers, who would starve to death within the trunk, their bodies, being reclaimed by natural forces around them.

Though this method of $\underline{\text{EXECUTION}}$ is no longer practiced, it is said to survive in more rural areas of Malan. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

PRITAYA: Rui. Ruined city in the west of NÁRTHEL, close to coast of the SEA OF SPIRES. It was abandoned in 3688 RM following an umbra explosion in a refinery there that levelled the city. It remains a region of man-made ATRAMENTAL TAINT, with many forms of wretched mutated fauna and DEGENERATES lurking in the rubble of its undercity. It is known to attract crazed ATRAMENTISTS who come to study its ruins for their secrets.

PRITONA: Set. Small city in the c north west of ABATTUR. Its main industry is the breeding and training of MASTODONS which are used as beasts of burden across the nation (Pop. c. 13,000).

PRIYA: 1. Ind Geo. Region of gold-mines in the c north of ACHAA⁽²⁾. The region is overseen by the city that lends it its name ⁽²⁾.

2. Set. Ruling city in the above $region^{(1.)}$ (Pop. c.57,000).

PROCE'S ALUCORN: Fau. Bull-like THEROPS in temperate areas of SOUTHERN SAMMAEA, known for its gigantic recurved horns and humped back. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

PROCHLORIS: Pol. Set. Capital city of SEDALLIA, in the south of the nation at the top of a long valley that leads to the coast. It is also a stop along the EGETAKHAN ROAD and the western termination of the VESHONAN PASSAGE trade route, where it shifts goods from one route to the other under charter of the merchant houses of VESHON (Pop. c. 330,000).

PROCLAMATION OF MERIT, the: Law. Pol. Vol. A foundational document that serves as the constitution of KEPHUAAN. Penned in 3779 RM by ARIS TALMARA and ELENDI VARTHA, who spearheaded the cultural revolution that ousted the old plutocratic council, the Proclamation outlines the precedents of the meritocracy, including outlining the necessary qualifications for holding office in the COUNCILOF MERIT and other principles on which the new nation of Kephuaan was to be governed and holds true to this day.

The Proclamation of Merit also established the rules through which citizens of Kephuaan could sit for examinations to determine who was capable of sitting on the Council of Merit, via the DEPARTMENT OF EXAMINATIONS.

PROCTOR: 1. Pol. Rnk. Administrative officials in the KORACHANI EMPIRE; acting as caretakers of small cities or districts in larger cities. They are answerable to BARRATORS.

2. Law. Rnk. Members of law-enforcement within SABAISA, founded by ALDEBARRA II in 3591 RM with the overarching powers to act as jury and judge, and should the need arise, EXECUTIONER. Punishments are harsh in Sabaisa, though as a result it is a very lawful place, with few taking the risk of breaking the law openly. This is due to the effectiveness of the Proctors and respect and fear that they command.

PROCUL: also 'Farseer'. Nou. 'Proculear'. Plr. 'Proculin'. Sup. Org. Mil. Rnk. An order of SHAPERS in the KORACHANI EMPIRE, whose MINASTERIA (2.) has been based in the city of ALAAN in LAASKHA since 1361 RM. Its members are ATRAMENTAL shapers whose SPHERE of influence involves CLAIRAUDIENCE, CLAIRVOYANCE, and/or CLAIRSENTIENCE, usually meaning that they can sense at long distances.

Proculin are ill-understood by laypeople, and are often attributed greater powers than they truly possess, though that is not to say that are not without a range of abilities. They take on more of a passive role than many other shapers, and are keen observers.

Individual Proculin can be found in various roles, using their abilities to provide information of distant events, such as news, or weather. They can also be found using their abilities for entertainment, performing for crowds, amazing people with their skill at FARSIGHT.

Many find themselves working as security for governments, either working as long-distance guards, or advisors, using their skills to provide insight and feedback to policies and decision-making.

They can also be found working in law enforcement, where they search for clues or perpetrators at a distance, or help to locate missing people or stolen objects. They are also found in the military, where they act as observers and sentries, using their skills to detect sounds and movement at a distance. They are also found as scouts and spies, using their abilities to inform them of enemy movements, gathering intelligence by remotely viewing remote locations. The use or Iron Mantles can greatly increase the range at which they can view their quarries. Proculin who have been specially trained can also detect the scrying of others, and may be able to neutralise them. See Vol IV: Spheres and types of Shaping.

PROCULARACH: Int. Sup. Tec. Pol. Mil. Str. Large circular field around 5-miles north east of DEOCHAN in the nation of KORACHAN. The field is largely empty, but its centre is dominated by a 1,000-ft. high girder tower with a seemingly endless ladder leading to its summit atop which is perched sensitive and powerful TECHNARCANE equipment — SEEING ENGINES and receivers through which the messages of imperial SHAPERS from across ELYDEN can be detected, deciphered and disseminated, as needed.

The gigantic girder is irregular in shape, with various pieces of equipment and batteries scattered across its surface. It is stabilised with several thick guy cables that are held in pace by bulky concrete anchors within which operate LARVAE interred in SARCOPHAGI, which are linked up to the considerable technarcane engines and machinery buried deep beneath the facility. They are each skilled in a particular SPHERE of SHAPING related to incoming transmissions, together allowing the facility and its workers to up all manner of different psychic, oneiric, telepathic, clairvoyant etc. transmissions, making it one of the most important pieces of technarcana in the KORACHANIEMPIRE and perhaps the most powerful modern seeing engine in all Elyden.

The site is well protected, both by mundane troops as well as shapers tasked with looking out for signs of sabotage or espionage.

PROCURATOR: Pol. Rnk. Rank within the SANCTIFIED ORDERS OF THE INQUISITION, whose members carry out investigative duties and are often charged with the recovery of artefacts and relics important to the KORACHANI EMPIRE and its various organisations and department. They are common within the AIWAHAN ORDER, where they specialise in retrieving ARCHAEOTECH.

PRODIA: Set. Settlement in the north of SAGITTARIA known for its logging of the APRODDA forest (Pop. c. 5,800).

PRODIGAL KINGS, the: Leg. Pol. Apocryphal line of kings mentioned in pre-KORACHANI VAALKAN histories and myths, dating them to the time of the VALKAN culture or the earlier ULLUASHI people, or possibly an even earlier time, close to the FADING of the FOURTH AGE. It is unknown if they are based on a real dynasty, and are considered as parables by most who know of the associated stories.

PRODIGLIA: Sea. Wasted sea to the south of BROR^(1.), just north of the POLAR CIRCLE. The sea is empty and dead, its waters dark, unsupportive of life.

PROEDRII, the: PIr. 'Proedriin'. Mys. Sup. Mil. Rnk. order of 9 ARCHSHAPERS employed by the LAASHKAN military, with a history dating to before the rise of the KORACHANI EMPIRE. They are considered elites amongst elites and recruit their members, of which there are always only nine, from accomplished shapers across Laaskha. They then undergo rigorous training during which they are grafted with powerful technarcana, and are given the most exclusive equipment available to the nation, which includes iron mantles.

They operate autonomously though may be called upon in times of war or great need by the COUNCIL OF SEVEN of the Korachani empire, to honour an ancient oath dating back to the conquest to Laaskha, when their antecedents pledged their loyalty to the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR.

Given their importance and the resources it takes to train them, it is rare for more than one to be seen in the same place. Famously, the $\underline{\text{WAR}}$ $\underline{\text{OF}}$ $\underline{\text{SUNDERING}}$ is remembered amongst Laaskhan military, as an unprecedented six them fought alongside each other in the $\underline{\text{SIEGE}}$ $\underline{\text{OF}}$ $\underline{\text{ARGEA}}$, supporting the legendary Korachani Archshaper $\underline{\text{TOMYRESS}}$ $\underline{\text{VILKA}}$.

PROGNOSTICARII: Nou. 'Prognosticari'. Plr. 'Prognosticariin'. Also 'Oracle'.

Sup. Pol. Rnk. An order of SHAPERS in the KORACHANI EMPIRE, whose MINASTERIA (2.) has been based in the city of KHADON in KORACHAN since 2166 RM. Members of the order are ATRAMENTAL shapers whose SPHERE allows them to make predictions, which are invaluable to the various imperial institutions that make use of them. Despite their reputation for being prophets and being capable of identifying specific events in the future, most Prognosticariin only get fragmentary glimpses into what the future might hold. They are often referred to informally as oracles, further reinforcing the unrealistic expectations of their profession.

They are most commonly employed by the armies of the empire, where they work with intelligence departments, gathering information and seeking possible outcomes to certain strategies, or otherwise help with devising solutions to certain situations. They are employed elsewhere in private businesses and financial institutions, where they predict trends in the stock market, amongst other events. They are found in most harbours and ports, and many are also stationed on ships, where they provide weather predictions that aid in navigation.

They are traditionally of little use in prognosticating events that rely on randomness, such as predicting lotteries, or the results of sporting events, in which so many miniscule events happen so as to make predictions impossible. This is due to the way in which most Prognosticariin work, by tapping into the OTHERWORLD and finding information from SPIRITS(1.) of the as-yet unborn. Some spirits dwelling there might carry the memories of a MORTAL life that has not yet come to pass, which are the fragments that Prognosticariin gather. But these memories are believed to only come from potential futures, so the less likely an event is to take place, the more difficult or unreliable the prognostication. Other Prognosticariin may have other means of achieving similar results, but they are uncommon, and they may not even be licensed shapers at all. simply believing that they have a knack or a relying on gut feeling. Such uneducated unlicensed oracles are often welcomed by the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, where they become holy figures, whose 'religious visions' (as the church rebrands them) as used for propaganda to attract more worshippers.

Prognosticariin that fall on hard times may turn to the life of an occultist, offering personal fortune-telling services to people. Others may naturally gravitate to this work, though it is considered shameful for someone trained and licensed as a Prognosticarii to do such work.

In a broad sense, the abilities of many Prognosticariin overlap with those of other Minasteria or spheres, though that does not make them proficient on those spheres. For instance, some Prognosticariin may have an affinity for predicting weather patterns, which some TEMPESTARIIN (weather shapers) might be able to do, but that does not enable them to manipulate or influence the weather in any way. See Vol IV: Spheres and types of Shaping.

PROJECTION: 1. Car. In cartography, a method of flattening a globe's surface to create a two-dimensional map. All projections distort the surface of the sphere in some form, which has led to different types of projections being used for different purposes. Common projections used throughout the FIFTH AGE include ASTRETAS, TETHRAN, VANGULI, VAUNAURN, and VEGNIR IX, amongst many others.

2. Sup. In SHAPING, the act of a SHAPER transferring their spirit to, or merely viewing, the OTHERWORLD, also called ASTRAL PROJECTION.

PROK: Pol. Set. Capital city and major port of RAHENG, overlooking the SEA OF CHHMAR. Emerging in c. 3690 RM, the city postdates the greater effects of the lowering of ELYDEN'S sea levels, and has emerged as a most powerful harbours in the area, a fact only exacerbated by its massive well-guarded natural harbours (Pop. c. 155,000).

PROKYOS: Set. Fortified settlement in the south west of SIRIPHAGOS (Pop. c. 20,000).

PROLGAPEAN DYNASTY: Pol. Org. The ruling dynasty in SIMBARA since 2789 RM, which is based in SOUTHERN SIMBARA, in the city of ITARA (23). The dynasty formed from the ashes of the SHERRIAN CIVIL WAR that ended in 2766 RM, through the charisma of general REXIMAND PROLGAPEA who successfully led the defence against the SHERRIAN uprisings. With the backing of over three quarters of the surviving counties, he was elevated to the rank of MARSHAL-ELECT in 2768 RM—an honorary rank above all the BALLOT COUNTS, which he shrewdly twisted to grant him more and more power until in 2789 RM he had become emperor of all Simbara, the supreme ruler to whom the ballot counts owed fealty. So adroit a politician was he that he was able to do this while maintaining a majority backing from the ballot counts and archdukes not only throughout his rule, but well into the rule of his descendants.

Interestingly, the Prolgapean dynasty places the same amount of power upon the hereditary emperor or empress as it does their spouse, who rule jointly, wielding the same powers. For a period between 3266 – 3612 RM the empire was effectively sundered in two as the emperor and empress divorced, changing the laws of the land to allow them both to continue ruling. This led to the division of the empire into two distinct demesnes, with their respective heirs inheriting for centuries, until in 3612 RM the emperor and empress of the two Simbaras married, reuniting the empire. They changed the constitution following the wedding making the empire indivisible, preventing the same thing from happening again. Following this, the capital was moved to the city of ITARA(2.) in SOUTHERN SIMBARA.

The dynasty rules Simbara to this day and its rule is as strong as ever, despite past issues and calamities.

PROLGAPEAN HOST, the: Leg. Soc. His. Near-legendary ancestral figures in SIMBARA commonly depicted in finely detailed and clothed wax statues presented in bell jars. The statues depict the near-mythic king REXIMAND and queen BELLREAVA, who are remembered across Simbara as founding members of its most beloved dynasty and great champions without whom Simbara could not have grown into its present state.

Their lives and accomplishments are celebrated throughout springtime, when the aforementioned bell jars are brought out to grace windows and doorways and streets are decorated with white, gold and crimson banners, pennants and bunting.

PROLICEUM, the: Str. Great monumental mausoleum in the c east of NORTHERN SIMBARA, where its first emperor and empress — REXIMAND and BELLREAVA PROLGAPEA — were buried. The mausoleum has been described as a white palace to their love and the people's love for them, and it remains popular site of pilgrimage to this day, where new emperors and empresses come to prior to their ordination to seek the approval of the ancestral rulers.

PROLIGEA: also 'the Descendants' Tombs'. Rel. Ancient mausoleum on the south east of the island of AAREN^(2.), attributed to a barbaric OTHERWORLDER (possibly a SCION) who had all its offspring put to death and buried here.

PROLOCUTOR: 1. Mar. Sup. Rnk. A high-administrative rank within the WHITE LEAGUE, – often a SHAPER, that oversees the goals and resources of a CHAPTER⁽²⁾ (both within military and the WHITE BANK). The highest-ranking Prolocutor is typically a member of the ALABASTER COUNCIL.

2. Pol. Rnk. Head of the TATARAN Republic Council, who acts as an elected chairperson and who is recognised as being the highest authority within the council in Tatar.

PROLOCUTORS: Pol. His. Following the INTERREGES' abandonment of VÂRR in 3791 RM, the capital of NOUVATAI remained as testament to its presence. The Reigning lord-patrician at the time was elevated to the rank of prolocutor in 3790 RM and from then on it became a hereditary title bestowed upon the steward of Nouvatai.

Under the leadership of the Prolocutors, Noachis remained a powerhouse of Vârran trade and even following the rise of the REGENT-KINGS as the ruling house of Vârr, the Prolocutors remain largely self-governing, with many political commentators believing that they will soon make a play for full independence.

PROMENADE OF THE FALLEN: Str. Flo. Public park in the city of Khadon in Korachan. It is noted for its many large bronze statues dedicated to famed generals, PATRICIANS and members of the COUNCIL OF SEVEN. The park is also one of the few remaining places of woodland in the city, with trees and vines purposefully left unkempt, with many obscuring statues, which are themselves covered in verdigris.

The park is a common meeting place for freemen and patricians, and helots and slaves are forbidden from entering its walled gated expanse.

PROMONA: Pol. His. Historical island-state off the northern coast of the island-continent of BROR(1.). It was 'discovered' and named by the explorer BOHMIUS in 1531 RM, though later collapsed, its lands eventually being absorbed by KRAJA. See Vol III: Extinct States.

PRONAOS TESSERA: Sup. Obj. His. GODSTONE (1.) discovered in FOURTH

AGE ruins in the rainforest of INZIVA by the woman BENA in c. 1180 RM, who would go on to use the godstone to unite people of the surrounding region, allowing her to become empress of the newly-formed nation of IMELKA in 1191 RM.

The Godstone granted its wielder incredible powers of SHAPING, as well as enhanced physical prowess, but was a drain on their life-force, weakening them and slowly killing them the longer it was in their possession. The IMELKAN DYNASTY suffered under its thrall, with all ruling members' lives being cut short due to its effects.

PRONNA: Sct. City in the south east of the XETEAN STATES, in the south east of SOUTHERN SAMMAEA, north of lake NEREA^(1.) (Pop. c. 112,500).

PROPA: Sea. Bay in the far south west of the SEA OF ERIA in ARKOS(1.).

PROPAGANDIST: Soc. Pol. Rnk. Elite rank within the CONCORDANTIST

ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION whose members twist, influence, or persuade public opinion to line up with official position to facilitate the running of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, often using lies and subterfuge to accomplish their goals. They are expert manipulators with adept social skills and many of them are also competent infiltrators, with varied combat skills. They often work closely with the MINASTERIA OF NEGATIONISM, whose goals and modus operandi often overlap.

PROPESTES: Rui. Abandoned agricultural conurbation in the south of HOAMMI territories in the north of SAMMAEA.

PROPHET OF THE EMPYREAN: His. Oth. Ancient OTHERWORLDER found buried in a necropolis in the massif of HODABR-AGHTUL in the east of CHEIRA in 3621 RM. The discovery of the otherworlder, whose name was revealed to be HAR-RSI on texts unearthed close by, brought about a new religion that came to be known as the CHURCH OF THE PROPHET OF THE EMPYREAN, which spread rapidly across Cheira and the people of the WAELMIGH rainforest, reaching SERROK and GIBEAH.

The otherworlder became a living god to the people of Cheira, and took up residence in the PALACE OF THE PROPHET OF THE EMPYREAN, where it ruled both church and state.

The unearthing of texts disproving the divinity of Har-rsi brought chaos to the church in 3782 RM, and the disappearance of the Prophet two years later only exacerbated the situation. The Church of the Prophet of the Empyrean lost its grip over the people of Cheira, who suffered a crisis of faith, leading to a schism within the Church and its effective disappearance from Cheira.

No-one knows the fate of Har-rsi and different groups have posited different explanations, most of which put the blame on rival factions, leaving the disappearance as a mystery to this day.

PROPHET OF THE EMPYREAN, CHURCH OF THE: Rel. Major organised religion prevalent in the east of SAMMAEA, common in GIBEAH, PNESSA, SERROK, and elsewhere.

It originated in c. 3650 RM in the settlement of MENITAB in Cheira, after the accidental discovery in 3621 RM of the OTHERWORLDER HAR-RSI entombed in an ancient necropolis in the HODABR- AGHTUL massif. Despite the likely-millennia of its burial, the otherworlder was alive and came to be worshipped as a living deity, the so-called PROPHET OF THE EMPYREAN, after texts that were found with the otherworlder were translated, relieving religious tenets and dogma.

The otherworlder is distant and alien, though its mere presence in the city of Menitab, which rapidly grew after the otherworlder's discovery, inspired its people. Though its physiology prevented it from speaking, it learnt their language and was able to communicate through writing, claiming to be a prophet of the Empyrean, born of the earth and destined to be found by a people predestined to be its followers.

The texts of the Prophet of the Empyrean were translated between c. 3625 and 3650 RM, and it became a revered figure in Cheira. The SORCERER-KINGS decried this growing cult of idolatry, punishing those found to be revering the otherworlder, though this only served to strengthen its growth.

The construction of a great palace was ordered by followers of the otherworlder in 3631 RM close to where it was discovered far from the reach of the Sorcerer-kings. Construction was completed in 3651 RM, by which time the Church of the Prophet of the Empyrean had been officially founded in the settlement of Menitab that had appeared at the foot of the palace, which doubled as a church. By the time of the Church's official founding, much of the surrounding area was devoutly following the otherworlder. Missionaries and preachers were sent afield into distant Cheira and neighbouring between 3650 – 3700 RM, bringing word of the religion to ELEKHID, Gibeah, Pnessa, and Serrok. Serrok was the most accepting of this new religion, which rapidly gained a foothold there. Making Serrok a close ally of the church in Cheira.

Fearful of the growing strength of the Church of the Prophet of the Empyrean, the Sorcerer-kings moved against the city of Menitab in 3679 RM, which by then had become a well-defended, with many nearby settlements having seceded from Cheira. Their armies clashed, but the Sorcerer-kings were unable to break the resolve of Menitab, which was bolstered at the last minute by reinforcements from Serrok.

As a result, worship of the otherworlder was outlawed in Cheira, and all followers of the Church of the Prophet of the Empyrean were branded as heretics, with those found to be practising the religion within Cheira executed. Under these harsh laws, the church was quelled, but it slowly spread as an underground cult. The Sorcerer-kings' law-keepers made examples of the weak and poor, all while rumours grew of individual Sorcerer-kings who secretly revered the Prophet of the Empyrean.

This situation was allowed to fester until in 3699 RM, the ranks of the Sorcerer-kings were sundered. The followers of the Prophet were made public, and soon after gained the backing of the people. They were able to usurp the old regime, who remained in the city of Cheira, which remained their power centre. Worship of the Prophet was later condoned and grew exponentially across Cheira, becoming the state religion of Cheira in 3702 RM. The worldly leader of the church (second in power to the Prophet itself), the Arch-pontiff Tilus, became the ruler of Cheira, ousting the last of the Sorcerer-kings in the eponymous city. The last three of the dynasty are exiled, never to be seen in Cheira again.

The discovery of more texts of the Prophet of the Empyrean were unearthed in a necropolis in Hodabr-Aghtul in 3782 RM, speaking of the otherworlder's crimes and its imprisonment in the tomb in which it was found as punishment. Word of these texts spread across faithful lands like wildfire, with the Prophet claiming these texts to be heretical, but the seeds of doubt were sown, bringing a great schism within the church. Over the next decade members of the church were gripped by a crisis of faith as they realised that their faith was built on lies. Fighting and vandalism increased in the streets and the government was unable to adequately quell the situation. Chaos reigned.

In Serrok, the church called for a conclave, deciding that the tenets of their faith were more important than the veracity of their history. What was once considered fact became little more than parable. The Prophet of the Empyrean was no longer a deity, but merely the manner through which the tenets of their faith were created. Though the situation was not as dire as it was in Cheira, there were still many who opposed this. They were excommunicated and founded the NEW TEMPLE OF THE EMPYREAN, with similar-minded individuals from Cheira, who blindly followed the Prophet of the Empyrean, working towards destroying texts that would deny its divinity. This new church clashed with the Church of the Prophet of the Empyrean, leading to instability for some years.

The otherworlder Har-rsi disappeared in 3790 RM, bringing further chaos to Cheira and Serrok. Within a few years however, an accord was reached between the two sects of the church in Serrok, instating freedom of religion, allowing the people of Serrok to worship as they pleased. By then many had abandoned worship of any form of organised religion, though there remained adherents of the two opposing sects, who were forced to live together under an uneasy and, at many times, unsuccessful peace. A Kritarchy was established where members of all churches participated in the rule Serrok in a council made up of appointed individuals from each parish.

The Church of the Prophet of the Empyrean eventually lost power in Cheira, leading to the growing power of its various secular guilds and unions which usurped power from the church, taking control of Menitab, effectively establishing a new government there in 3798 RM.

The church of the Prophet of the Empyrean has dwindled since the disappearance of the otherworlder, though it remains strong in parts of Gibeah, Pnessa, and Serrok. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

PROPHET OF THE RAVENOUS HEART: Rel. Following his death in c. 3900 RM, the TYRANT OF SUMA'YA was deified, became known as the Prophet of the Ravenous Heart, the central deity of the CULT OF SACRIFICE, which arose as a cult of personality based around him in c. 3416 RM. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

PROPOS: Set. Coastal settlement in the c of ARKOS^(1.), overlooking the BAY OF PROPA (Pop. c. 6,000).

PROPONTI: Set. City in the north west of ALMAGEST, along the course of the rive HAZZATH, just north of the POLAR CIRCLE. The city is characterised by massive smelt works and a large slave-labour-force (mostly captured during summer raids on KOLCHIS). The smelt works have come to dominate most of the city and indirectly serve to heat the otherwise frigid region, spanning the large chasm that once flanked part of the city. Proponti forms part of THE SHADOW MARCH, its deep temple of KANDOR visited by pilgrims (Pop. c. 36,000).

PROPONTIS: Sea. Sea dividing VÂRR from LYRIDIA, which is now quite corrupted from the industry of Vârr, though since the withdrawal of the INTERREGES from there in 3791 RM it has begun a slow recovery, though dropping sea levels risk the narrow strait of Propontis closing.

PROPRIA: Set. Settlement in the c north east of SARAGOS. It is known for its iron and phosphorus mines (Pop. c. 18,000).

PRORD: Set. Settlement in the c of CHEIRA, along the course of the river YAGNOTH PHATHAN. It is known for its reed cultivation, which is used in the production of various reed-items (Pop. c. 6,000).

PROSELYTES: Dre. Mil. Rnk. A martial rank within the SOMNIARECHI ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION whose members are drawn from the ranks of the Orders' ACCENSORS and march upon the most inimical of DREAMSCAPES clad in REALITY SUITS armed with specialist equipment that they use to cleanse areas of oneiric corruption. Those who show their worth are recruited into the ranks of the DREAMFORGED, who are the elite martial units of the Order.

PROSELYTISERS, ORDER OF: Sup. Org. An independent organisation within the KORACHANI EMPIRE that works in tandem with the various MINASTERIA⁽²⁾ of SHAPING. The orders' Proselytisers scour the land within and without the empire for individuals (ideally of a young age) who display traits that are sought-after in shaping. Social class and education are of no concern to the order's agents, and by law any shaper found without a valid license is forced to undertake a test at the relevant Minasteria to receive a license, and if they are found lacking, are forced to complete a round of training – both physical and theoretical – after which they are awarded a license.

Once rounded up, those chosen (known as PROSPECTS) undergo simple testing using $\underline{FOCI}^{(2)}$ to determine what role best-suits them, and they are sent to the relevant Minasteria to study and train for their license. This training typically lasts for 2-3 years, depending on the Minasteria, and those of strong disposition and will become licensed $\underline{SHAPERS}$, while those who fail their practical exam go on to take less glamorous roles, such as archivists, or even internment within HEART ENGINES.

The Order works closely with agents of the VÁMAN ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION to capture shapers who knowingly break the law and operate without valid licences. The more amenable shapers captured are sometimes taken by the Proselytisers for training, while more remorseless individuals are taken by Váman agents, never to be seen again.

Those rounded up in this way are often referred to as the $\underline{\text{CHILDREN OF}}$ MALICHAR.

PROSPECTS: Sup. Rnk. Unlicensed SHAPERS rounded up by the ORDER OF PROSELYTISERS are known as prospects while they are tested to see which MINASTERIA^(2.) they will study in to receive their shaping licence.

PROTEA: Set. City in the c north west of LIDEA, known for its coal production (Pop. c. 16,000).

PROTECTORS OF THE PYRE: Mar. Rel. Org. Order of militant monks that live in the CHORHYST formation in the south of MENISCEA.

PROVELIA: Sup. Dre. Geo. Once a PLAGUE island 35-miles north of TEIRA, VENTHIR. It became part of the mainland following diminishing sea levels in c. 3200 RM. The region and the ruins of the old sanatorium on the hill that dominates it are now shunned, and are thought to be ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED or part of a DREAMSCAPE.

PROVINCIAL BATTALIONS: Mil. War. Local forces found in vassal states or colonies of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, drafted from local populations, where possible from individuals with experience in native militias, reserve forces and/or militaries. In most cases they are seen as inferior to the Korachani army, though they are better-trained and equipped than the local militias. They bear the LASAKH SWORD as a symbol.

PROVACTARII. Nou. 'Provactarear'. Plr. 'Provactariin'. Sup. Pol. Mil. Rnk. An order of SHAPERS in the KORACHANI EMPIRE, whose MINASTERIA (2.) has been based in the city of BUACHAN in the south of KORACHAN since 1523 RM. The Provactariin are a low rank of SHAPER whose uneven temperament and unbalanced prowess with SHAPING makes them too unpredictable to employ as full-time shapers. They are withdrawn from their studies prematurely and are denied a licence to shape.

Instead, they are forcibly recruited into the ranks of the Provactariin, where they unwittingly become unwitting recipients of hypnotic psychoconditioning that encourages them heighten their magickal output to achieve extremely self-destructive results. This 'training' also causes them to trigger under extreme stress, such as the heat of battle, causing them to unleash their powers, effectively turning them into a biological bomb, obliterating them and anything in the surrounding area in a twofold blast – one that is felt on the MATERIAL PLANE (in the form of a physical blast and resultant spread of ATRAMENTAL CORRUPTION); and another that is felt within the MATERIA OMNA, where the magickal shockwave has the potential to severely cripple, if not outright kill, unexpecting shapers or TECHNARCANE devices in a wide area.

They are most commonly used in times of war, where they serve as suicide shock troops thrown into the midst of the enemy, where they are expected to detonate. Many Provactariin are kept in a permanent state of emotional agitation, a hair trigger away from relinquishing control over their faculties. Others work as spies, operating deep within enemy lines, unaware of the true purpose of their mission.

This practice originated after scattered instances of untrained or otherwise unprepared shapers consuming themselves in similar ways in battle and other stressful activities that eventually led to the formation of the Minasteria of Provactarii. Other nations with a similar proclivity of using suicide shapers include SARASTRO, CYHLAGHARR, and VENTHIR, amongst others.

The use and treatment of Provactariin in the Korachani empire has drawn criticism from various groups, including the PARTHISAN REPUBLIC, whose stance on mortal rights is far beyond that of Korachan and decries the use of shapers as little more than fodder to be sacrificed as barbaric. See Vol IV: Spheres and types of Shaping.

PRUELLA: Rel. Geo. Major campsite in the north of KHARKHARADONTIS, in the c north east of SAMMAEA, in a region where the ATRAMENTA is relatively weak, making it safer than surrounding regions. It is a site of congregation for those undertaking the SHADOW MARCH, where smaller processions stop to gather their strength and join up with other processions for the benefits granted by increased numbers against predation on the long road ahead.

PRURIAS THE BEHOLDER: Oth. HALFBLOOD, once-PEONER in the KORACHANI army. He deserted the army and turned to the life of an itinerant, travelling across the length and breadth of ELYDEN, searching for exotic locations and ruins of past ages. He wrote the first of a many-volumed series (ELYDEN; AN ITINERANT'S GUIDE) in 3127 RM.

PRUSHAE: Set. Settlement in the west of KASPIA (Pop. c. 7,200).

PRUTTIGA: Set. Conurbation in the c north of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES. A series of large SOULSTONES were found there in c. 2780 RM and a boom town soon appeared around the site as mining operations began, growing rapidly. It became notorious as a lawless place with no streets – buildings were all constructed adjacent to each other, with the rooftops acting as 'streets', making it a dark claustrophobic place.

A total of 47 soulstones were found, before the mine ran dry centuries later, though the settlement remained, if smaller in size and notoriety (Pop. c. 10,000).

PSALDA: Geo. Black hills in the c east of KORACHAN, to the north east of the FATUACH Mountains stretching into the HERESIAN PLAINS Though of little value to agriculture, they are dotted with hardy evergreens, some of which may grow stunted, particularly in the east.

PSAMMOL: Geo. Mountain in the c west of THE SURRACH, in the north west of SAMMAEA, just north of the MISHANOL Mountains.

PSELLA: Set. Settlement in the north of LAASKHA. Its main industry is the manufacture of saltpetre, which used in the production of gunpowder.

PSILKA: Fau. Small therops found in ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED regions in the north west of LLACHATUL, north of THE INNER SEA. they are curious and have developed a resistance to mild ATRAMENTAL TAINTED and are famed for their musk glands, which are used in the production of perfumes. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

PSULLANT: also 'giant flea'. Fau. Leaping insect known to grow to the size of a cat. They dwell in the dry interior of WESTERN MENISCEA, including the badlands of IMBRIA in the south of CEHOPHELA and the north west of SHAZGIN. They once lived on the hides of the monolithic therops that roamed ancient plains in these regions, where they were much smaller and more numerous. The slow death of the great beasts saw the fleas adapt to new habitats, becoming tied to the dry savannahs, where they grew in size.

Today they are predators, sucking the blood of small creatures such as rodents and birds they catch or scavenge. They are abhorred by most people, who set blood traps for them when travelling in lands where they are known to dwell. They are pests in rural areas and have been known to feed on sleeping babies. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

PSYCHOGRAPHER: Sup. Voc. SHAPERS with the ability to communicate with the OTHERWORLD and/or SPIRITS⁽¹⁾, typically by entering a trance during which they write information down without being conscious of the details they are writing. The results of these automatic writings can contain hidden or otherwise secret information, which may be of importance, though which is often so severely out of context and vague as to be largely useless. Many psychographers spend as much time researching and sifting through their automatic writings, looking for clues as to their potential meaning than they do writing.

The art of doing so is referred to as PSYCHOGRAPHY.

PSYCHOGRAPHY: also 'automatic writing'. Sup. Rnk. The MAGICKAL ability to produce written words without consciously doing so, usually by a SHAPER who is able to contact the OTHERWORLD and/or a SPIRIT^(1.), typically by entering a trance in which they write information down without being conscious of the details they are writing. Such shapers are known as PSYCHOGRAPHERS.

The field is rife with charlatanry, though it is a recognised $\underline{\text{SPHERE}}$ of $\underline{\text{SHAPING}},$ with shapers who can genuinely produce automatic writing.

PSYCHOMETRY: also 'clairsentience'. Sup Rnk. A MAGICKAL SPHERE in which the SHAPER (known as a PSYCHOMETRIST) is able to garner fragments of an objects' or persons' history through the PRINCIPLE OF CONTAGION. More common amongst FIRMAMENTISTS than ATRAMENTISTS, it is still found across Elyden wherever either the FIRMAMENT or ATRAMENTA hold sway. In the KORACHANI EMPIRE psychometrists are more commonly known as ANAMNRIIN.

PSYCHOMETRIST: Sup. Rnk. A SHAPER whose main SPHERE of SHAPING is PSYCHOMETRY, and who is able to garner fragments of an objects' or persons' history through the PRINCIPLE OF CONTAGION. The longer the shaper maintains the touch, the older and more obscure the information they can glean.

PSYCHOPHAGY: Mys. Consumption or hunger for the SPIRIT or soul. This is a rare act, and usually something associated with beings such as MOROI or possibly OTHERWORLDERS or other unique creatures. Any creature with the ability to consume the spirit of a mortal is to be feared.

PTEROGRAPHER: Voc. Clerks and AMANUENSIS in the KORACHANI

EMPIRE tasked with transcribing records onto mechanical devices that either store the inputted information or print it onto paper for posterity. Many of them have TECHNARCANE ORTHOSES to aid in their work.

PTHAHIL: Ind. Rui. Abandoned iron open-cast mines in the c of IO.

PTHASSAL'OSS: Geo. Mountains in the far south of TZALLRACH, originally acting as a border between it and KREM. Their southern-face is influenced by the FIRMAMENTAL region of OBIHADDAR.

PTHOSTOTH: Geo. Mountain-range in the c of MENISCEA, with a peak height of around 12,000 ft. Though not noted for its height, it is a widespread range, with a north-to-south length of around 1,000-miles and a west-to-east span of close to 450-miles at its widest. In the north, it diminishes into the PHORI hills (1.), and in the south it splits into the AUTH Mountains in the south west and the LAODDANAN Mountains in the south east.

The Pthostoth Mountains serve as a natural border between the lands of IMEAL and XYRPHAAT^(3.) and are not heavily populated.

PUAFAR: Set. Settlement in the west of OPHIUSSA, within the badlands of IVACHAR. Its main industry is the mining of Aluminium (Pop. c. 7,500).

PUAHA: Rvr. River in the north west of KARAKHAS, flowing for 95-miles from sources in the KRATHI hills before meeting with its parent, the river SARGOTH.

PUAHATH: Set. Fortified settlement in the north east of KHURAUR, overlooking a wide valley leading into KARAKHAS. The city's main industry is breeding and training of MANTRAS (Pop. c. 15,500).

PUDUMARRA: Set. City in the c south of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES, along the course of the river ASHTRA. The city is a major manufacturer of food, including rice (Pop. c. 20,000).

PUERRNA: Set. Settlement in the south of THETIS, along the course of the river UAPETH. It is a major agricultural area, and is known for its MOONS CRAB harvesting (Pop. c. 5,500).

PUNCH-MARKED COIN: Cur. Primitive system of coinage where sheets of metal (silver copper, bronze, gold and alloys) were printed in geometric shapes and marked by symbols for identification. The system is old and the results are easily forged or counterfeited (such as through coin clipping) and was replaced by more advanced forms of coinage in the TWIN EMPIRES, though it remains common in certain areas, most commonly THE SURRACH and other parts of SAMMAEA.

PUNGAN: Sea. Reef off the south western coast of CUTH, between the islands of OAACH and HATAYOON.

PUNHATTAY: Set. Major city in the south of IACIO, along the course of the river PURANAR (Pop. c. 72,000).

PURANAH: Int. Rui. Veh. Massive ship buried in the limestone plains of ANDILUTH, in the west of TARTAK. The wood of the hulk is petrified and little of its original shape is recognisable save the stone-like ribs that protrude from the knoll that surrounds it and a 100-foot-tall needle-like pillar that reaches for the sky at an angle.

PURANAR: Rvr. River in IACIO, flowing south for 400-miles from sources in the far south of the DORLEIDON Mountains before reaching the SEA OF MIROVEA.

PUREG ODU: Geo. Large geyser in the north of KOLCHIS, in the region of NOLKOSH.

PURIFICATION CRUSADES, the: Pol. Soc. His. Crusades conducted within the borders of the KORACHANIEMPIRE by the ARÂTHUAHI ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION between 503 – 534 RM, with the primary goal of eradicating ATRAMENTAL CORRUPTION from its territories. Entire settlements were razed in their purges and hundreds of thousands, many of them innocent, were slain. The Order's KNIGHT PURIFIERS became feared across the empire, and the sight of their black and gold livery was enough to make people stop in their tracks and do their bidding.

These crusades solidified the Order's reputation for unyielding justice and the relentless pursuit of purity, and its actions during this time inform people's perceptions of the Order and its members to this day, over three millennia later.

PURIFIER: Rnk. Org. One of the most numerous ranks within the ARÂTHUAHI ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION, Purifiers are the overt face of the Order, contrasting with the more covert nature of the SHADOW HUNTERS. They are often found clad in their distinctive black softsuits cleaning areas that have been stricken by ATRAMENTAL DISASTERS (both natural of mortal-made).

The worthiest Purifiers are elevated to the rank of KNIGHT PURIFIER, who serve as the elite fighting arm of the Order.

PURITANS: Org. Caste that originally rose in RHAMIA in c. 2100 RM to deal with pervasive ATRAMENTAL TAINT that had afflicted the region. Plagued by birth defects for millennia, the Puritans were SHAPERS who used the ATRAMENTA to stymie the negative effects. They came to oversee births, executing those deemed too corrupted, while caring for others, managing to cure many children afflicted by AEPATHY.

They would eventually give rise to a caste Firmamentists called CAZHANS, who were eventually successful in abating the growing Atramental threat. They became prestigious, usurping the Rhamian monarchy in 2239 RM, starting a new period of scientific thinking and harsh laws that allowed Rhamia to survive.

PURN: Geo. Island off the south eastern coast of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES, measuring some 46-square-miles. It is known for its many ancient SHIE ruins.

PURRI: Lak. Large endorheic salt lake in the north of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES. The lake is below sea-level with an average depth of -200-ft. at its shore and a depth of -575-ft. at its deepest point. The lake is extremely salty, though there is no evidence that it was ever linked to the sea. If that is the case, we do not know the source of this salt, which takes on a pinkish hue at the shore. The level of the lake fluctuates as the flow of rivers that feed into it wax and wane with the seasons.

PURSON: Rui. Half-buried idol in the c north west of AETHIOS, in the scrub of SALASAH. The idol, its features indistinct in its decay, is surrounded by the ruins of an ancient mud-brick settlement and the half-petrified corpses of its inhabitants preserved like statues. The ruin is attributed to the Salasahi empire of the late FOURTH and early FIFTH AGES, though there is little explanation for the state of its corpses.

PURSUANT: Mar. Rel. Rnk. Operatives within the REFORMED CHURCH OF SARASTRO, who form the martial backbone of any EXECRATOR HOST. They are the equivalent of KORACHANI VENATORS – skilled hunters and combatants – and they are well-versed in the tenets of the Church.

PURULEA: Sup. Drc. Geo. ATRAMENTAL WASTELAND in the north east of SAMMAEA, along the border between PNESSA and the tribe of ESSENIA in the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. The land here is a hellish landscape that produces a yellowish ichor that is noxious and acrid to the tough. The ichor dries on contact with the air, becoming scabrous. Those who step foot in Purulea feel nauseous, and those who spend a prolonged period there experience headaches and dizziness. Some have said that this may be a DREAMSCAPE, though there has been little research into this.

The region is studied by ATRAMENTISTS from the nearby city of SOCHARAD, and is categorised as DANGEROUS by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

PURULOSH VAGHAR: also 'the Swirling Citadel. Int. Sup. Str. Ancient structure in the c south east of the BARRIER LANDS, on the eastern-most edge of the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED lands of OLTAGRA. It is famed for its appearance. The citadel was constructed through some monolithic feat of shaping and appears to be extruded from the earth itself, as though an omnipotent hand reached down from the heavens and pulled the earth, twisting it upwards, creating a 200-ft high feature that looks like an upturned corkscrew funnel. It is hollowed out, with spiralling tunnels and corridors, and rooms and dungeons filling its interior – all of which are clearly hewn by hand.

It is unknown what power created the structure and what culture shaped its rooms or later reused it, and it is shunned today, with many legends surrounding its deep largely-unexplored catacombs and pits.

PURUNEM: Rvr. River in the east of AZAZEM, and tributary of the larger river ZEMEN.

PURUSA: Rvr. River in the south west of GNOTH, flowing south east for 745-miles from multiple sources in the KABIRA region, east of the HABBAD RIDGE, before meeting its parent, the river MARAGA. The waters of the river PURUSA are known to be rich in minerals carried from Kabira.

PUTHUTUL: Set. Small city and surrounding farmlands in the c south of CISNERIA, known for its cattle reading (Pop. c. 12,000).

PUYA MARROK: f. Sup. Per. (B. 3922 RM) High-ranking member of the SOMNIARECHI ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION, originally from MASLIA in PELASGOS. Having spent most of her time in the Order was a DREAMFORGED she was promoted in 3982 RM to the bespoke rank of Guardian of DREAMSCAPES, in honour of her work and efforts in safeguarding various regions of dreamscapes across the KORACHANI EMPIRE.

She is an accomplished SHAPER in her own right, with a natural ability to navigate and stymie dreamscapes, a gift that has served her well in her travels across the empire cataloguing its dreamscapes. She collected her findings into a public reference volume, known as the MARROK'S GUIDE TO THE DREAMSCAPES AND NIGHTMARISH REALMS OF THE EMPIRE, which contains the fruits of her decades-long research, albeit heavily abridged for public consumption.

PYDON: Set. Settlement in the far south west of CHEIRA (Pop. c. 2,200).

PYERAL: Rui. Abandoned castle and small harbour in the c south west of HOLOLACH^(1.). The castle dates back to c. 1200 RM and was constructed on an island in a large lake that disappeared in c. 2500 RM. Local legends claim the castle was once inhabited by a mad ATRAMENTIST who experimented on the bodies of the dead. The region is shunned to this day.

PYERUN: 1. Rvr. River in the south of HOLOLACH⁽¹⁾.

2. Rel. Dei. God of thunder once commonly-worshipped across the CLOUDY COAST. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

PYLON OF AFIZ: see AFIZ, PYLON OF.

PYMANDER: Myt. Leg. Mor. In the mythology and ancient history of ELYDEN, the first leader of HUMANS, as guided by the DEMIURGE AVRAHAM, and commonly referred to as the first human. Unlike other first-born mortals, he was considered to be the perfect archetype after which all other humans aspired, though this is likely little more than aggrandizement in the millennia following his death.

He is revered as a secular patron in parts of PARTHIS.

PYMESYL: Set. Settlement in the c of OKKHAM, in the western foothills of the Okkhami Mountains. Its main industry is sericulture – the production of silk from caterpillars of the giant ORUNA moth that is endemic to the lower mountains of Okkham (Pop. c. 7,250).

PYMION: Ind. Rui. Abandoned iron open-cast mines in the c of IO.

PYRAM: Set. Independent coastal city on the isle of ERRHIA in the KALISANGELID ISLES in the far south west of SAMMAEA. It is known for its pirates and slavers, who prey on coastal cities across the archipelago. The city itself is heavily fortified, and its port is completely enclosed (Pop. c. 38,000).

PYRAMIDS OF KARRO: Rui. Five stepped pyramids of varying sizes in the plains of AHATESSUIN in the c of LIDEA, attributed to an early FIFTH AGE culture that emerged in the region in c. -1000 RM, and which is thought to have constructed the pyramids in c. -100 RM. Little is known of the culture responsible for their creation, and its people are only known now as the KARRO, after their KORACHANI 'discoverer', who encountered and briefly excavated them in c. 2500 RM, two millennia after the Karro period's wane.

PYRAMID OF OTULR, the: (29,265-ft.) Int. Rui. Monolithic pyramid in the northern foothills of the CAMMOREAN^(1.) Mountains in ANDILUTH, thought to date to the earliest works of the DEMIURGES in the FIRST AGE. It is gigantic and dwarfs any other known structure other than the wastemountain known as the VARRACHON, and rivals a small mountain in size. It is 46,041-ft. to a side, and is 29,265 ft high from its base (though its foundations are at an elevation of 1,100-ft. Making it over 30,365-ft. from sea level: the second highest known point in ELYDEN after AELLCHTH in the ACHARKHARAN Mountains.

The pyramid is covered in mosses and vines and it is constructed from a singular block of metal, corroded and pitted from exposure to the elements for thousands of years, and its mass has so far proven impenetrable to scrying or other means of clairvoyance.

It is listed as one of the NINE WONDERS OF THE ANCIENT WORLD.

PYRAMIDS OF MALPHIG: Rui. Series of steep-sided pyramids, in the c. south west of AETHIOS. Numbering in their dozens, each is about 20-ft tall, with a doorway leading to what is thought to be a tomb. They are thought to date back to an ancient late THIRD AGE culture that is now forgotten, and they are crumbling and overgrown with shrubs and vines, largely ignored by the people of Aethios.

PYRAMID OF ZILETRA: Soc. Str. Gigantic pyramid built in 2934 RM in OSSIEL, south of the capital city ILLATHURIA, overlooking the BAY OF UYRUD leading to its main harbour. Originally a temporary structure made from thousands of skulls and bones of SHAPERS and their followers, it became an important symbol of THE SOVEREIGN-MILITANT ILLATHUR'S crusade against MAGICK. Its construction was ordered by the ARCHZEALOT ZILETRA following a successful campaign, and it continued to be added to over the years, with the last known significant body – belonging to the infamous SHAZGINI shaper HIDUSTHUNÉ – having been placed there in 4004 RM. The pyramid towers over the bay, and serves as a grim reminder to anyone visiting the capital of the realities of life in Ossiel.

PYRANA: Set. Settlement in the c north west of THE SURRACH built into the remnants of a gigantic tree stump, nestled in its roots and tunnelled within its wood. In the middle of the stump is young tree, growing from a seed of the stump, which have both taken on near-religious importance to the settlement's inhabitants. Its main industry is object d'art made from the malleable deep roots, which are mined (Pop. c. 10,200).

PYREA: 1. Sea. northern-most part of the SEA OF PROPONTIS, separating RHAMIA from AHRISHEN Historically, it was far larger than it is today, due to the retreat of the sea between c. 2500 – 3200 RM.

- 2. Lak. Coastal lake 6-miles from the coast of $Pyrea^{(1)}$, close to the settlement of the same name⁽³⁾.
- 3. His. Nm. Ancient FIFTH AGE state located in what is now the west of AHRISHEN. It fractured from ARSHESH in c. -100 RM following years of being ignored by its parent state amid increasing KORACHANI attacks. It was eventually absorbed by Ahrishen in 104 RM after increased Korachani attacks forced it to seek its aid amid the devastation wrought by the waning Sea of Pyrea^(1.), which had left many of its once-coastal cities far from the coast, and abandoned. See Vol III: Extinct States.
- 4. Set. Named after the eponymous sea^(1.), this settlement appeared in c. 3350 RM following the sea's retreat. Populated by the descendants of those forced to move from struggling settlements in the wake of the sea's waning levels, it is now a major centre of sheep grazing (Pop. c. 18,000).

PYREAN MOUNTAIN: see PYREAN PYRAMID.

PYREAN PYRAMID: also 'Pyrean Mountain'. Rui. Group of seven ancient crumbling pyramids in the south of AHRISHEN, believed to be the sole remnants of an ancient culture that predates the RETHAN civilisation that existed in the region during the FOURTH AGE. The pyramids are half sunken in the soft earth of the surrounding region and are covered in parts with mosses and vines.

The pyramids were looted by LYRIDIA DHAIAN explorers in 186 RM, though it is believed that many chambers remain hidden and unexplored.

A growing fascination with the pyramids has led to renewed efforts in the past decades to catalogue and study the remains. Such efforts have been led by KORACHANI archaeologists, though Ahrisheni efforts are not unknown.

PYROTECHNICS: Tec. The science of using materials that are able to undergo self-sustained_chemical reactions, producing gas, heat, light, sound, and smoke, most commonly seen in the manufacture of fireworks and explosives.

Many cultures value the use of fireworks, particularly across the HIGH-EMPIRE OF KORACHAN, and the SOLEYN TERRITORIES, amongst other regions. They are often used in various festivals and other celebrations, such as the SYMPHONY OF SKYFIRE in LAASKHA.

PYRR: Rvr. River in the north of LIDEA, flowing north for 210-miles from sources in the ORIAN Mountains.

PYRRAN: Oth. Type of HALFBLOOD commonly found within the KORACHANI EMPIRE, descended from the OTHERWORLDERS known as AEHARI, whose domains of influence are lies and deceit. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

PYRRHOUA: Set. Coastal city in the north of LIDEA, along the delta of the river PYRR, specialising in the cultivation and extracting of the dye commonly known as PYRRHOUAN PURPLE from a hardy species of sea snail (known as pyrrhouan snails) that survives along a 10-mile stretch of coast along the $\underline{BAYOFMHARKA}$, whose waters are relatively untouched by the filth of industry. The city is affluent and its chief exports – dye and dyed goods – are highly lucrative, finding their way along the $\underline{SALT\ ROAD}$ and the $\underline{RED\ ROUTE}$, both of which pass through it (Pop. c. 1,083,000).

PYRRHOUAN PURPLE: dye produced in the north of LIDEA, from PYRRHOUAN SNAILS, which are endemic to the northern coast of Lidea.

PYRRHOUAN SNAIL: Fau. A snail native to the northern coast of Mharokk, along the BAY OF MHARKA from which the dye known as PYRRHOUAN PURPLE is extracted. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

PYTHEA: Sea. Shallow sea dividing the HAMMINHENG peninsula in CUTH from the west of RHEA.

PYTHON-LORD, the: (B. unknown) Pol. Ruler of the city of ODENA, in SARASTRO, since 1983 RM. An ATRAMENTIST of classical tradition who eschews TECHNARCANA, he has ruled Odena with an iron fist for centuries, though it is today much waned from its former glory.

QAASROTH: also 'the Glass Tree'. Dre. Flo. Geo. Fantastical oneiric tree in a small DREAMSCAPE in the northern highlands of the isle of ARCHAEDON The tree is seemingly made of hollow prismatic glass and is large, over 100-ft. high, with a great sprawling canopy and twisting branches of hollow glass and gossamer-like leaves. It is famed across Archaedon for the prismatic shadows that it casts, moving with passage of the sun. It is highly respected and even features in the mythology of its people, possibly indicating a venerable age.

To all intents and purposes, it is a living tree – and one examining the interior of its trunk will see vein-like structures and water from equally translucent roots being pumped through its massive form. Leaves fall periodically and new ones grow, and it produces infertile inedible glass-like fruit, which are used in religious rituals – though anything taken from the tree disintegrates with increasing speed the farther it is taken from the tree, as the influence of the dreamscape that sustains it wanes, so despite their beauty, these objects have little value outside of their cultural and religious significance.

QABARRU: also 'Khabara'. Geo. Large cave-system that sprawls for hundreds of miles beneath the south of PARAIYA, east of KARAKHAS (where it known as KHABARA), and the north of the UMBRA SOKHAR. The largest cave entrances are accessible from near ZOTHOGG, and another in the URATH Mountain in Paraiya, though many smaller caves exist in the MITTU sinkhole in the north east of the Umbra Sokhar. The upper levels of the caves are filled with the detritus and waste carried by floodwaters, though signs of ancient cultures, such as those believed to have existed in what is now Paraiya have also been found there.

QADDIN: Set. Small city in the east of ABACARDAT, situated atop a rocky pinnacle along the trade-route linking the cities of ASHAIIA and ARHBAH. Since antiquity its people have been accomplished ALCHEMISTS and across the ages its scholars have been fascinated by the effects of the SEA OF LETHEA and today the city is dominated by the LETHEAN HOSPITAL AND COLLEGE, where those afflicted by the amnesic maladies of the sea are treated (Pop. c. 18,000).

QADESH: Set. Settlement in the far south west of the SULTANATE OF ABACARDAT. Its main industry is the quarrying of coal, most of which is exported (Pop. c. 5,800).

QADIR: Soc. Org. One of the 17 GRAND HOUSES of the NACRE LEAGUE.

The House is based in the nation of QARALAM though it has a major presence along the entirety of the NACRE ROAD, though the war in MAENMIST had left its westernmost holdings relatively cut off, and many believe the House will sell off its holdings there to concentrate on the lands east of Maenmist.

The House handles the import and export of exotic goods, including rare spices, gemstones, and medicinal herbs. It also maintains diplomatic relations with foreign powers to secure rights to the aforementioned goods.

QALMAB: Set. City in the north of the SULTANATE OF ABACARDAT, along the course of the river OURED OUMAQ.

QALMUTRA: 1. Geo. Region in western TURCAR, facing east, along the foothills of the ARGENT Mountains. The region is dominated by a single city^(2.) a scattering of small satellites.

2. Set. City in the eponymous region. Little is known of its people, but for their religion, which revolves around the worship of the foul mummified body of what some claim may be the LYSSA, the SCION of the DEMIURGE VORROPOHAIAH and the scion TALLAS⁽²⁾. (Pop. c. 20,000).

QALNAMA: Set. Settlement in the c south of the SULTANATE OF
ABACARDAT. Its main industry is arable farming (Pop. c. 7,200).

QAM: Sea. Large bay in the north west of the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT, forming part of the SEA OF BATYAE.

QAM RON: also 'the Crater City'. Rui. Once a city of vice and sin in the north west of the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT, the city was destroyed by a freak meteorite strike in 3444 RM that left the city in ruins and its inhabitants dead. A single survivor went on to fund the church of SYBARR, and would become the first IDOLON of the religion.

QANAM HALAT: Geo. Long escarpment forming a border between the north of LYRIDIA and the south of AHRISHEN, around 210-miles long. Its incline is sudden at first, which alongside the HAL HALAT, makes is a natural deterrent to travel between Lyridia and Ahrishen.

QANAT: also 'the City of Wells'. Set. Small city in MARACHA, in the far north west of THE SURRACH (Pop. c. 20,000).

QARAD SESH: Geo. Rocky area in the north west of the WAELMIGH rainforest in the c of PNESSA.

QARALAM: Dem. 'Qaralami'. Ntn. Nation in the south east of SAMMAEA.
It is descended from the FOURTH AGE empire of YASHMIN. Its main geographical feature is the so-called MARROWLANDS, which dominates its c northern territories, and is where most reserves of ICHOR – a supranatural drug that has brought much wealth to the region – are held. It is ruled by a hereditary SULTANATE known as IARAQASHA, which holds a monopoly on the ichor trade, which has made the ruling caste incredibly wealthy, and its rulers are famed for their obscene palaces and estates that are the size of cities, with staffs numbering in the thousands.

The ruling sultanate emerged in *

The people of Qaralam identify as FELLAQISHI – a divisive religion that emerged from a heretical splinter sect of the ancient Yashmini pantheon. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

QARAQHIM: Set. Settlement in the LEGED region of SEPAHAUNAT in the north west of SAMMAEA. It is one of many producers of OPIATES in the region (Pop. c. 8,000).

QARATH: Set. Large city in the c-south east of QARALAM, known for its many gardens within its ancient walls and expansive hunting grounds and woodlands without (Pop. c. 110,000).

QARAVAC DELL: Int. Rui. Forest encased in shallow ice beneath the WHITE SHEET in the far north of LLACHATUL 130° west. Parts of the trees are visible beneath the ice, if one were to remove the deep snow cover crowning it. There are no surviving accounts of any forests or woodlands in this area and nothing is known of it, despite the various attempts there have been to tunnel into the floor.

QARIL: Lak. Lake in the c of AHRISHEN.

QARIN TA: Set. City in the south of KHULL. It was once a stronghold of the SUPHETS, where they unravelled the secrets of the SORCEROUS CODEX to become the SORCERE-KINGS⁽³⁾. The city was one of those besieged by the KHULLAN INQUISITION and was left a near-ruin by the end of their campaign that saw the Sorcerer-kings annihilated.

It has since recovered and is now renowned for its library, the contents of which is controlled by the Inquisition (Pop. c. 15,800).

QARRABIKON: Set. Small city in the east of NOAVATUR, in the region of SAURIAR (Pop. c. 6,500).

QASDRA: Set. City in the c of CHEIRA (Pop. unknown).

QASHEN: 1. Lak. Lake in the c of AHRISHEN, fed by the river LANAEST. It has been connected to lake CYIDA via the Qasheni^(3.) canal.

2. Com. Set. Trade city in c Ahrishen, twinned with the larger city of ACHERUSA. Qashen appeared in c 2700 RM in response to increased trade demands and serves as a land link between the river routes of the \underline{SAVEST} and $\underline{ARESH}^{(2)}$ (Pop. c. 32,000)

3. Rvr. man-made canal forming a part of the AHRISHENI WATERWAYS, lake Qashen^(1.) with lake CYIDA. It is 48-miles long and contains 22 major locks.

QASHIDA: f. Pol. Per. (D. 1912 RM) Historical Empress of AKHSARAY who acceded the throne on 1881 RM, inheriting an empire that as in the midst of the cultural revolution known as the SILENCING OF THE SONG, in which the SHAIWWAL caste – loremasters, bards and advisors that had grown incredibly influential – were being persecuted. She enacted laws that eased their arrest and execution, escalating events, that culminated in a genocide that ended with their extermination by c. 1890 RM.

QASHRA: Sett Settlement in the north of AHRISHEN, in the region of AQARASHA (Pop. c. 8,000).

QASIMRA: Rvr. River in the south of Virahan, flowing north west for 250-miles from sources in the ORCAMMOR Mountains, before meeting its parent, the river SARA.

QATALLOQ: geo. Large region of carr in the west of AHRISHEN, centred around the river NALESH.

QATTAS: Set. Settlement in the c south of the SULTANATE OF
ABACARDAT, west of the border with the JAHADAT STATES (Pop. c. 5,500).

QATTI: Geo. Plains in the west of THE SURRACH, west of the SARRASTER Mountains. The plains are known for their saffron plantations.

QATTISYSH: Set. Independent city-state in the plains of QATTI in THE SURRACH. The city is renowned for the dust-worms it harvests. The creatures are used in the production of leathers and their meat is processed into DROSS (Pop. c. 69,000). QAVUHEN: Set. The largest of as many as a dozen linked settlements in the c south west of AHRISHEN. The region is a major producer of tobacco, and one of few major producers outside of the region of IRRIGUEN. Much of its produce is sold along the GREAT ROAD, which passes through the settlement (Pop. c. 8,000).

QEBEL VAR: Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTAL WASTES in the north west of ABACARDAT, in the north of the stone desert of SHOT SHADDAH. It is riddled with caverns and delicate duststone formations and is dangerous to traverse. It would be of little value, but the presence of the ancient ruined city of ZAROQ had led many adventurers to their deaths.

The region is categorised as a LEAST CONCERN by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES, and the instability of the terrain itself of far greater danger.

QEDARI: Lak. Lake in the west of VENTHIR, forming a part of the course of the river TEIRIS.

QEMETH: Set. Small city in the south of ALAM BETHYL, in the territory of UNERKILISS⁽²⁾ (Pop. c. 16,000).

QEPHNIR ELIR: Rvr. Wetlands along the course of the river NEPHILA in the north west of SAMMAEA. The wetlands are home to half-sunken monoliths that are thought to have belonged to an ancient empire. The monoliths are shunned most.

QIADIR: Soc. Influential kindred (family) in IDRISS, who stood up against the dynasty of ZAYIID, and has gone on to become a beloved political power in the state. Its members claim ancestry from the SCION SHARHAM and are known for their thick mane-like hair, which is often a deep violet or dark green in hue.

QIAR: Set. City in the south west of ARERAQTH. It emerged in c. 2450 as a boom town following the founding of the MINES OF QIAR as has grown considerably since then, becoming an industrial centre where mined salt is processed (Pop. c. 76,000).

QIAR, MINES OF: Ind. Expansive deep salt mines in the south west of ARERAOTH. The mines originated in c. 2450 RM, and have continuously grown since then, reaching a depth of almost a mile, and with a span of many miles. The mines are thought to be the largest most expansive salt mine in all of Elyden and produce both industrial and food grade salt as well as other minerals such as iodine.

Entire subterranean settlements exist in the mines and many workers are born, live and die without seeing the light of day. Supplements are added to food to stave off the effects of rickets in workers.

QIEMM: Set. Fortified city in the south west of PNESSA, relatively close to the border with NOAVATUR. It is the main economical link with Noavatur and trade between the two regions is common (Pop. c. 30,800).

QILI: Lak. Lake in the south west of RAONGEN⁽²⁾, along the course of the river CAMILI, between ZEHINE and CHIAVALLE Mountains.

QILLA: Soc. Mil. Str. Set. Historically, fortress-citadels in SHAZGIN and VALA^(1.). They were erected by expeditionary forces or in contested areas and along borders where outsiders were expected to be active, and served to strengthen the region's defences, serving as border fortresses.

These could then be used as needed – strengthening the defence of an area, or serving as a hub for mounted patrols, or colonists or expeditionary parties. Many would go on to serve as the nucleus of future settlements, their original military function being repurposed into government buildings, churches, halls, forums, and so on as a settlement grew around them. Indeed, many established cities in Shazgin began their lives as qillas.

QIRORA: Set. Settlement in the c south west of KOLCHIS. Its main industry is iron mining (Pop. c. 6,700).

QIRU: Set. Small city in the c-south east of CHEIRA (Pop. c. 14,000).

QIZZIAH: Set. Major fortified city in the east of ZHARIAH^(2.) along the course of the river ZOLIAH. It was once coastal, lying along the north western coast of the SEA OF ISTHIS, but the waning of ELYDEN'S seas saw it become landlocked in c. 3400 RM (Pop. c. 330,000).

QOCHLAN PLAINS: Geo. Relatively dry region in AHRISHEN, though known for its many rivers and fertile land, where farms abound and INDRIKS are trained for warfare.

QORADIAN ORDER: His. Pol. Org. A historical minor ORDER OF THE SANCTIFIED INQUISITION in the KORACHANI EMPIRE that was founded in 1114 RM in KHADON.

Named after its founder, VENEPH QORADIA, it appeared in response to various events and sentiments, including the RENAISSANCE CRUSADES, in which it was found that PATRICIANS were using their wealth and influence to fund various corrupt of heretical groups that, in many cases, sought an manipulate or otherwise end the empire.

The Order never grew to rival the other more renowned Orders, but its agents were a common sight across major cities, where they investigated the activities of PATRICIAN HOUSES. Within a century of its founding, it found itself slowly being corrupted over many years by the very forces that it sought to end, and it became a hub to organised crime perpetrated by a handful of Houses.

By c. 1360 RM this had become an open secret to high-ranking members of the imperial government and soon later even certain members of the general public became aware. In 1392 RM it became the target of a secretive investigation by agents of the ARÂTHUAHI ORDER, who methodically built their case over time. In 1462 RM it took its case to the COUNCIL OF SEVEN, who approved at attack on the Qoradian LANGUE^(1.).

Though the storming of the Order's Langue was completed in a matter of days, the conflict between the Arâthuahi Order and its allies, and the Qoradian Order and their Patrician supporters spilled over into the rest of the capital and other imperial cities, dragging on for years, with The Seven finally declaring the Qoradian Order cleansed in 1464 RM. Most of its agents and their supporters were either killed or incarcerated, though those few agents who were deemed to have been free of corruption were absorbed by the Arâthuahi Order, which now carries on the work once done by the Qoradian Order.

QORILIE OF NEGRED: see St. QORILIE.

- QORRIN: 1. Geo. Headland in the west of AHRISHEN forming the sizeable delta of the river ARESH^(2.). It appeared in c. 1000 RM as the waters of the SEA OF PYREA^(1.) decreased and has grown steadily since then.
 - 2. Set. Port city in the west of Ahrishen, overlooking the Sea of Pyrea. It is a relatively recent city and is known as a place where sailors and those taking the Grand Tour can avail themselves of various entertainments (Pop. c. 25,000).
- QOSHHANAITH: Geo. Mountains in the c south of NOAVATUR, stretching south towards the coast, at the north west of the SEA OF RTHAS.
- QOTHILLULAN: Lan. Unknown language that is spoken by mortals that have spent too long in the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region of QOTHILLUG. The language is undecipherable by those who are unaffected by the glossolalia of the region, and attempts and finding an etymology for the language remain unsuccessful and only the most basic of words have been translated. See Vol II: Languages.
- QOTHILLUG: Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region in the c of the nation of QARALAM. It is famed for afflicting those that linger in its domains for too long with a specific form of glossolalia that sees them speaking the same tongue that has thus far avoided any form of identification. Once removed from the region, those afflicted by the glossolalia often never recover knowledge of their native tongues, and spend their lives speaking fluently in what has now become known as QOTHILLULAN.
- QRAQI QUARTZ: Ele. Rare quartz sourced in the QRAQOD mines in the north east of ARERAQTH that is laced with veins of OMNATITE, granting it a rare beauty.
- QRAQOD: Ind. Geo. Str. Mines in the north east of ARERAQTH known for a rare variety of quartz known as QRAQIQUARTZ. The mines can only be worked a few months a year due to weather, which closes mountain routes for all but three months of the year, though some rulers have forced work to continue in winter, leading to devastating loss of life in the name of profits.
- QRED: 1. One of the nine territories of ALAM BETHYL, located in the north west of the nation.

- 2. Set. City in the north west of $\underline{ALAM\ BETHYL}$. It is the capital of the eponymous territory^(1.). It is close to a fork in the river $\underline{LELOANA}$, and is known for its peat industry (Pop. c. 37,000).
- QUADRIPTYCH OF DULA: Int. His. Sup. Mys. Obj. Fabled relic that can be traced back to the city of DULA in AZAZEM, with far older origins in what is though t to be the late SECOND AGE. Now thought to be a GODSTONE a powerful conductor of the MATERIA OMNA allowing monolithic acts of SHAPING. It was lost at some time in the FOURTH AGE, and was later recovered in the south of Azazem in c. 1721 RM, finding its way in the possession of a minor PATRICIAN HOUSE, who, ignorant to its legacy, had the stone broken into four, with each part becoming the focal point of four lavish vases.

The vases were sold in c. 2365 RM after the house fell upon hard times and, and they scattered across the INNER SEA after this, going to different homes. One vase ended up in a KETESHI museum, where part of its history was later identified through ancient accounts of the original godstone in c. 3873 RM. Attempts were later made by the Keteshi monarchy to retrieve the other 3 parts. One was found in a Sarastroan church in 4102 RM and was purchased off it, but the whereabouts of the other two vases are unknown despite continued attempts at finding them.

The quest has become a defining aspect of the Keteshi royal family, and the search continues as fervently as ever, as the discovery of all four parts of the godstone could give Ketesh a power unrivalled across the Inner Sea, potentially reshaping the political landscape.

- QUAERAT HAD: Lak. Collective name for the series of great lakes that exist in the north east of Eastern Meniscea, along the border between ARERAQTH and XYRPHAAT. The main lakes that together form the Quaerat Had are the *. An ancient empress is famed for having constructed a city-sized barge, known as the *, that was used to host lavish parties and retreats, sometimes for weeks at a time.
- QUAESTOR: 1. Law. Rnk. official title given to high-judges in the KORACHANI EMPIRE, given the power to sentence any brought before them without need for trial or jury. They were common across the empire until c. 1000 RM, when reforms found the title obsolete, replaced by that of CONSUL.
- By c. 3200 RM the title had re-emerged in the eastern territories of the empire, primarily VÂRR, and PELASGOS, where they were city officials with varying responsibilities, including, but not restricted to, city wardens, high-ranking militia members, tithe- or tax-fraud investigation, and city partisans. Their role often overlapped with that of the IRON GUARD, though the 'Guard have a more militaristic structure and are more concerned with enforcement, whereas the Quaestors are more of an unseen force typically with more authority.
- 2. Pol. Rnk. One of many ranks and titles within the GRIGORIAN ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION. They fulfil a mid-level leadership role, commanding units of WATCHERS and clerical staff in their duties across the EMPIRE and often in the field.
- QUALTHAS: Geo. Flat featureless plains in the east of BROR(I.), in the east of Mostue, ending at the border between GHROND. The plains are bare, save for hardy stiff-rooted plants that manage to survive the harsh coastal winds that blow in from the east.
- QUARAVI: Int. Leg. Oth. A specific legendary OTHERWORLDER famed across the south east of WESTERN MENISCEA, known for its striking appearance translucent skin, beneath which can be seen translucent organs of an alien nature and bright tints ranging from deep reds to violets maroons pinks and crimsons. Their flesh has an effervescent quality and seems to sparkle or bubble with a life of its own. Its face is equally alien, with no mouth or recognisable sensory organs, but it has a well-developed nervous system that pulses with an inner light.

Quaravi is believed to have sired many $\underline{\text{HALFBLOOD}}$ dynasties across $\underline{\text{MENISCEA}}$ throughout the $\underline{\text{FIFTH AGE}}$, making them the most common halfbloods in Meniscea by some degree. Its bloodline is strong and features remain distinctive across many consecutive generations with 10^{th} generation halfbloods still showing telltale signs of their lineage.

Quaravi was most active between 3000 – 3300 RM, though the fact that halfbloods showing his physiological traits are still alive today (with no discernible prolonged lifespans) indicate that he is still active, to a degree. Most such halfbloods are found in IMELKOT, TAES, AURUM, and LANTUA, in the latter of which they exist as a caste apart from other people, equivalent to a priestly middle class. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

QUARES: Rvr. River in the c of OPHAR flowing north west for 470-miles from sources in the ASOGHAQUA Mountains. The city of OPARA lies at its mouth, where it reaches the coast of the GULF OF OPHAR (1).

QUEEN OF THE SKY: His. Ast. In ancient AZAZEMI MYTHOLOGIES, the planet GNIHLAS was referred to by this name, its rings being likened to a crown

QUESDRON: (D. 1926 RM) Pol. His. King of the KARGEMMAN MONARCHY whose death in 1926 RM left the kingdom in the hands of his twin children – ANOQUARON and ANOQUARIS. They drew lots to decide who would rule which regions of the kingdom, though the kingdom was restored following their deaths.

QUESIAN: Law. Rel. Pol. Rnk. EXECUTIONERS of the archaic religio-legal system in place in the KORACHANI EMPIRE after c. 1000 RM. Those whose sins are found to be too great by the Judges of the CHURCHOFTHE UNDYING MACHINE are sent the Quesians to be purified. Execution, exile and torture are not uncommon methods employed by the Quesians, though are by no means exclusive.

QUEEN-REGENT: Pol. Rak. Title given to the matrilineal line of stewards who have ruled the state of ALLASAN since 3887 RM and the selfimposed exile of King ALABAS AZER III.

They are descended from Azer III's elders sister who was conceived with the invading warlord Benett who executed his birth father and married his mother to unite the states of Allasan and LAACHOM.

QUEEN'S CITY, the: 1. Sec. Major city in the west of KHAR NADUL. It is named after an ancient monarch, who is said to have visited there sometime in the 23rd century RM, blessing its people. The city remains staunchly royalist and its people are involved in the royalist revolution, seeking for surviving members of the royal family in the hopes that it can be reinstated. This has caused friction with MUAHHARI police forces in the area (Pop. c. 58,400).

2. see MAALKAT 1.

QUEENCITY, the: see THEMANA.

QUEEN OF CONSTELLATIONS, the: Rel. One of two deities of the BETHYLAN religion of SABIANISM, with the other being the KING OF THE HEAVENS. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

QUELOR: Geo. Mountains on the island of JIRIDUN off the north western coast of THE SURRACH. It forms the spine of the island, and its southern foothills are rich in copper and were the primary resource to be exploited by the people of OD MEGINNAS^(1.).

QUIAN: Mil. Str. Fortress in the west of RAONGEN^(2.) that forms a part of the military organisation within the territories that are contested with ANAGAR.

QUICKSILVER PALACE, the: Int. Str. Spectacular palace in the north of the ZAHARAN DESERT in MENISCEA, known for its fantastical construction. The palace is a relic of the THIRD AGE, and is made of a liquid metal (incorrectly identified as quicksilver but thought to be the far rarer QUICKSTEEL), that floats 100-ft. in the air. It is held together by ancient FIRMAMENTISM and the gravitic properties of the region. It was once the capital of a powerful empire ruled by shapers, though is now all that remains, floating eerily over the silent ruins below.

The Firmamental properties that maintain the structures' integrity are waning, and parts of the palace are now mishappen and out of proportion, taking on a strange geometric appearance.

QUICKSILVER OBELISK: Int. Sup. Arc. Fantastical monolith located in INNER CHAUTULA, in the south east of EASTERN MENISCEA. It is around 120-ft. high and is made from liquid metal (probably a form of QUICKSTEEL) that is held in place through ancient FIRMAMENTAL MAGICKS. It is ancient, dating back to the late FOURTH AGE, where it was a waymarker belonging to the Firmamental authority known as the FULGOR NOMOS.

Its original purpose remains unknown and shapers have been unable replicate the conditions required to sustain the obelisk.

QUICKSTEEL: Ele. Rare form of metal whose natural state at room temperature is a semi-liquid. It can be cooled into a permanent solid state through supranatural processes, after which it acts like a normal metal. In this state it has properties similar to worked steel, making it quite valuable. It is most common in the subterranean lava flows of SYNCHTHONITH'S FOUNDRY, but can also be found elsewhere, mostly in SOUTHERN SAMMAEA.

QUINTAI, the: Soc. Org. Semi-secret group of KORACHANI PATRICIANS dedicated to keeping the empire stable. They were most influential during the REIGN OF THE EMPTY THRONE, between 205 and 339 RM, when their actions were able to stall the expansion of imperial territories as a means of maintaining stability in the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR'S absence, though his return to power had their dominance toppled.

Funded by five members, the group was never truly destroyed and its members hid in the shadows while they continued to subtly manipulate city edicts and military manoeuvres to suit their goals.

QUINTUMVIRATE: Myr. His. Collective name given to five DEMIURGES within the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN, including ARIMASPI, NEITH^(1.), NERGAAL, SHIBBOLETH, and SYNCHTHONITH. The Demiurge's acts of hubris in SHAPING^(1.) the MORTAL PLANE caused the IMMORTAL SEEDS from which were meant to be born the IMMORTALS (a race of beings that would inherit the perfect world created by the Demiurges) to germinate sooner than intended, giving birth to the so-called MORTAL PEOPLES instead – imperfect simulacra of what the Immortals were meant to be, doomed to inherit a world cursed to chaos.

The Demiurges were punished and stripped of much of their powers, castigated into becoming leaders to the mortals their actions had given birth to. Some accepted this, and others grew bitter. Others still refused to accept the punishment, arguing that their very purpose was to Shaper. And so, they did, knowing that their actions would likely incur the wrath of THE SHAPER. They poured every mote of creativity they possessed into creating a perfect realm, one as food, if not better than what they had been originally tasked with. The five Demiurges died with their last act of Shaping this new perfect world, and so it was, beauteous beyond compare and serene, without chaos or death, yet no-one knows where it is.

Indeed, most scholars of the Mythologia Elyden now wonder if the new act of Shaping by the Quintumvirate was another new PLANET entirely, either within or without our known system of planets. Some, however, contest this, saying that much of ELYDEN remains unknown to modern mortals, and that it remains to be discovered.

QUISQUAM, PALACE OF: Pol. Arc. Maze-like palace in QARALAM known for its 144 steep stairs that lead into its throne room. The steps exist solely as a test of strength and the hall's small door, through which most must stoop to enter, is designed to force people into a symbolic gesture of subservience.

QURTH: Set. Settlement in the c of CHEIRA (Pop. unknown).

QUTTAKAL: Geo. Mountain-range in the far east of NÁRTHEL.

R

RA: Lak. Dre. Lake in the south west of RAONGEN⁽²⁾ along the course of the river GARAILI. Between c. -600 and -500 RM it was the site of various supranatural events in which unrelated people experienced visions and DREAMS that all featured a central unseen figure that people would later name RAON. The lake remains a holy place to this day and is an unofficial place of pilgrimage to many.

RAAD: Set. Fortified city in TERION, in the north west of SAMMAEA. It is known for its silver-mines that produce some of the finest silver in all of Sammaea, much of which is used in crafting filigree, which is used in fashion throughout Terion. Its delicate cosmetic chainmail is a symbol of status amongst its nobility and has spread to KORACHAN through trade, where it is just as popular (Pop. c. 38,400).

RAADI: Set. City in the region of SÛR GHATH in the west of THE SURRACH, in the southern foothills of the MISHANOS Mountains. (Pop. c. 25,000).

RAAHEN: Geo. Rugged peninsula in the south of LAASKHA.

RAAKH: Set. City in the east of BAATAN, overlooking the border with TEMUJA. It is a major trade centre and the GREAT ROAD passes through it (Pop. c. 99,000).

RAALEM: Rvr. River in the east of AZAZEM, flowing west for 60-miles from the TEKRACHT escarpment, into the SEA OF BATHOS.

RAALO: Set. College-city in the south of AZAZEM, where the children of many PATRICIANS study (Pop. c. 50,000).

RAAMALA ITALLI: f. (D. 2323 RM) Art. Per. LAASKHAN prima donna of HALFBLOODED descent who became famed across the KORACHANI EMPIRE and beyond during her life, performing on the largest stages, before the most prestigious audiences.

Orphaned at a young age, she lived in an ORPHANOTROPHIA until the age of fifteen, though rumours heavily point towards her being recruited as a WIRRAN at a delicate age, with her life in front of the limelight being a front for her true role as a Laaskhan agent.

She was beloved by the people, especially HELOTS and work-slaves, who listened to her singing through PHONOGRAPH cylinders in social clubs and it was largely through their support that she was able to tour.

She died during a performance in KHADON where various patricians died under mysterious circumstances during the final intermission.

 \underline{RAAN} : Set. Small city in the Kingdom of $\underline{ROMOREA}^{(2)}$, overlooking the Sea of \underline{HASAAZ} ARAAT. It has a harbour that exports coal mined in \underline{HAAMU} in the north east (Pop. c. 13,200).

RAANA: Rvr. River in VAALK flowing south west for 320-miles from its source in the MALL VORAKAL, before reaching the SEA OF AZAM.

RABA: Set. Settlement in the north west of the emirate of $\underline{\text{LIMOTH}}^{(2)}$ in the c of Limoth^(1,). Its main industry is agriculture (Pop. c. 5,700).

RABACHAN: Set. Slum city just outside the south western walls of the city of KHADON, in the c of KORACHAN. The settlement snakes along the ditch that separates the main wall from the redoubt, with structures rising along the walls themselves. It does not fall within the city's jurisdiction and has its own informal government, though is considered to be a lawless demesne shunned by much of the parent-city's populace. (Pop. c. 80,000).

RABAH: Ind. Set. Quarry settlement in the c north of BASSORAH⁽²⁾, in the region of IURABAN, south of the GORRAN Mountains (Pop. c. 4,200).

RABANNA: Set. Fortified city in the region of ZILION in THE SURRACH (Pop. c. 20,000).

RABASSA: Set. Coastal city in the south of AHKA, overlooking the SEA OF SUTT. The city has been subject to KORACHANI bombardments for some years, and much of its harbours are damaged, with many once-thriving districts now-deserted. Much of the remaining is now part of the war effort against Korachan. The harbour is strategically important to the PARTHISAN relief forces and reinforcements (Pop. c. 73,000).

RABATEA: Set. City in TAHOMIA. It is known for its large fortress that is controlled by a knightly order and the strict martial law that it enforces over the surrounding land (Pop. c. 70,000).

RABBIRA: Set. Coastal stilt-settlement in the south west of NAARETH, overlooking the ROILING SEA (Pop. c. 20,000).

RABI: Set. Settlement in the north west of the emirate of LIMOTH^(2,) in the c of Limoth^(1,). Its main industry is agriculture (Pop. c. 4,300).

RABIDEA: Set. Coastal settlement on the island of KILLOS, off the western-coast of the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS. It is the islands main link to the mainland (Pop. c. 6,000).

RABTSHAH: Int. Sup. Rnk. Soc. Caste of slave-shapers in VENTHIR and its dependencies. The caste fills a unique niche in societal hierarchy in Venthir, with it being both a lowly caste, with apprentices being little more than slaves, often mistreated by their masters; and a respected one in the form of the masters, who while still technically slaves and property of the crown, are well-regarded and feared for their abilities, giving them a degree of notoriety and even celebrity, with most living lives of relative luxury.

Prospective shapers spend a year studying in the ROYAL ACADEMY OF SHAPING and its regional annexes before being assigned to mentors. These apprentices are routinely mistreated and belittled as part of their training, which includes the assignment of demeaning tasks and chores, often unrelated to shaping. This is considered to build character and is expected by both rungs of the caste, though is open to abuse by sadistic masters who may ignore their apprentice's training entirely, turning them into little more than servants for a few years before they fail their studies and are taken away from them.

The slave apprentice follows their mentor for as much as three years, learning from their actions and studying under their often-dubious tutelage. The unique manner in which every slave is taught leads to anachronisms, quirks, and foibles in their techniques later on, meaning that the skillset and repertoire of a master rabtshah will differ greatly from one to another, making the caste one of diverse characterful individuals.

It is not unknown for apprentices to assassinate their mentors, and in some circles this is even considered a legitimate way of ascending from apprentice to master (the argument being an apprentice who is able to best their master, be it through shaping or subterfuge, deserves to ascend to the rank of master), being particularly common in the court of QUEEN HETEPHERES herself. In truth, it is little more than a shortcut to the title and the privileges that comes with it, with those who become masters in this way often having stunted skillsets that limit future prospects.

Apprenticeship typically lasts no longer than 3-years, though many apprentices do not last that long and are either killed or, more likely, abandon the profession. Many are injured, preventing them for continuing their studies. Some extreme cases are relegated to use as larvae.

Once an apprentice becomes a master – either by ousting their old mentor (through assassination, a duel, or test) or being granted it once they achieve an appropriate level of expertise – they are free to take on their own apprentice, eventually starting the cycle anew.

Old masters must proffer their former apprentices a degree of respect and must treat them as equals or risk facing a tribunal of their superiors at the Academy.

RACH: Fau. Scent hound bred in the early days of the KORACHANI EMPIRES' tenure in VAALK and seen across the INNER SEA REGION to this day. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

RACH I' YO-DHALLA: see RUATHA.

RACHA: Ser. Small city in the microstate of ACHERA that lies along the RED ROUTE, providing lodging and storage facilities to the merchants and caravans travelling along it (Pop. c. 12,200).

RACHALEN: Cal. In the KORACHANI CALENDAR, the fifth month of twelve. It is named after the UNDYING MACHINE, RACHANAEL and is considered the second of three months of spring. See Vol II: Months and Lunar Cycle in Elyden.

RACHAL: Mys. Rel. Phil. One of the SEVENTY-SEVEN NAMES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE.

RACHANAEL: m. Myr. His. Per. Rel. In the mythology and ancient history of ELYDEN, seventh of the Two-and-Twenty DEMIURGES, whose children were the PLAGI.

He is one of the few Demiurges known to still be alive and is the current the deity of the KORACHANI EMPIRE and other territories, in the guise of the UNDYING MACHINE. Titles include, Wielder of Shadow and Prince of Darkness. In Elyden's original mythology, he is the last surviving Demiurge who defied death by finding a manner in which to resist the passing of ages. His incarnation in the FIFTH AGE is as the Undying Machine, UMBÁVGHAR, and he is kept alive by the TECHNARCANE engine known as the LEADEN THRONE, and the supplication of mortals (mostly human pilgrims reaching the end of the SHADOW MARCH). His true MORTAL children are the PLAGI, though he has long-since abandoned them in favour of the far more numerous HUMANS.

The word Rachanael is not in common usage and though schooled individuals within the empire are aware that the true name of the Undying Machine is Rachanael, it is not uttered commonly. Indeed, in the early days of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, most records of the name were expunged alongside the world Demiurge, in an act of mass propaganda designed to blind mortals as to the true roots of their deity and the fact that other Demiurges may yet remain, undiscovered, in ELYDEN. Though this stance has since relaxed, the full story of the Demiurges and Rachanael's history before his freeing by the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR are still suppressed by the church.

His known SCIONS are: OSSELDOR, PATHEA, and SATHANAEL. See Vol IV: the Two-and-Twenty Demiurges.

RACHANAEL, HOLY LAND OF: see HOLY LAND OF RACHANAEL.

RACHANAEL RISEN: Rel. Aspect of the UNDYING MACHINE (the DEMIURGE RACHANAEL) that is worshipped by certain cults of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, in the KORACHANI EMPIRE. As open usage of the name Rachanael is forbidden by law, members of these cults are persecuted and excommunicated when caught.

RACHANAEL'S BLOOM: Flo. Succulent plant famed for its slow-blooming deep purple pungent fleshy flower, with five to seven petals, with seven being the rarest and most prized. Examples with seven petals are highly valued by botanists and the elite for their beauty, and there is a lucrative trade around both the growing of such specimens, as well as their acquisition from the wild.

The plant is native to highland regions of southern $\underline{\text{LLACHATUL}}$, where rainfall is uncommon, and was once abundant in the northern face of the $\underline{\text{CHACTHORNYS}}$ Mountains.

At various times in history, the Church of the Undying Machine has attempted to eradicate the plant from existence simply because of its persistent common name, which refers to the true name of the Undying Machine. It was named millennia past after the Demiurge Rachanael, though few are alive today to know its origins, though the church is still careful of not letting it spread too far, lest inquisitive minds find out too much. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

RACHAR: Plr. 'racharin'. Fau. Aberrant life-form. In the bestiaries of the EMPIRE and surrounding regions, the racharin are those creatures that cannot easily be classified and are often bestowed with strange properties that cannot be described as natural or inherited. They are often shackled to the ATRAMENTA or FIRMAMENT in some way.

RACHEA Set. Settlement in the north of LIDEA, known for its sheep farming and wool production. It also forms part of the SALT ROAD and RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 8,500).

RACHI: Geo. Beautiful grasslands and rolling hills in the c of SAUA. Fed by the river ACHI and its many tributaries that flow from mount Mera and the BLUE MOUNTAIN.

RACHOUIN: Set. Small city in the far east of PARAIYA, along the border with LIDEA and the course of the river SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾. Its main industry is the cultivation of cotton (Pop. c. 16,300).

RACHRIS: Fau. City in the prefecture of EROSENEA^(1.) in the north west of HOLOLACH^(1.), known for its sparse woodlands and its truffles (Pop. c. 41.200).

RACTYON: (B. c. 3840) Pol. ATRAMENTIST warlord who wrested the city of TETRACYTYS from a previous subjugator in 3897 RM. He was thought killed by poison in 3902 RM though he was merely paralysed, his mind still functioning even as his body began to waste away. His followers made a pact with PARTHIS, which saw a powerful technarcane engine brought into the city in 3903 RM, giving Ractyon a means of communicating with his followers.

He rules to this day, his body little more than a desiccated husk kept alive by the machine, as his followers rule the city of Tetracytys in his name.

RADABAD: 1. Sea. Bay in the far north east of the SEA OF LETHEA, off the western coast of SERROK.

2. Rui. Ruined city in the south west of SERROK. It was once coastal, lending its name to the above bay^(1,), but was abandoned in c. 3300 RM after the retreat of the coastline.

RADAM: Set. Small city in the north east of the tribe of SATAR in the north of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 13,500).

RADAMATHUS: Set. Major coastal city in the west of ANANTHUL, overlooking the south east of the SEA OF LETHEA. It is an industrial centre known for its drydocks, shipyards, and foundries (Pop. c. 95,500).

RADASHAN: Set. In the south of the tribe of INDAAR, in the east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 4,000).

RADHA: Ind. Set. Major mining settlement in the south of JURRAS⁽²⁾, in the far south east of the INNORADOS Mountains (Pop. c. 8,000).

RADISHAR: Geo. Fertile plains in the north west of SARASTRO fed by the waters of the river SOLONA.

RADIX: Mil. Str. Major fortress of the DESOLATI in the south of SHOTHA. The forces stationed in Radix patrol the borders against AL AKHI incursions and take slaves used in labour and sold west to ALMAGEST.

RADNOR: Geo. Region in what are now the south of AETHIOS and the north west of RHINOCOLOURA, that between c. 1500 – 3200 RM was famed for its ATRAMENTAL SHAMEN, who ruled the region, which had until then remained distinct from ACTANORS and, later, Aethios, though by c. 3200 RM all but its most remote settlements had been assimilated by the ROYAL HOUSE OF ETHAND. Today, under the auspices of the Holy Republic, its remaining shamen are protected as a relic of a lost age. Today the city of ARISTH carries the legacy of these shamen, and it is the only city in Aethios in which the shamen thrive, and they are a ruling class.

RADORER: Set. Settlement in the north west of CHEIRA (Pop. c. 10,000). RADULA: Set. Coastal settlement in the east of SABAISA, overlooking the RADULA: Set. Coastal settlement in the east of SABAISA, overlooking th BAY OF ANDAFAR. Its main industry is fishing (3,800).

RADUNA: Set. Settlement in the north east of THETIS (Pop. c. 5,700).

RAEGA: Ser. Small coastal city in the c east of ELEKHID, along the delta of the river NUBBIOR. It is a major source of food (Pop. c. 14,000).

RAEHIA: 1. Lak. One of seven major lakes in KOMMEA, collectively known as the SEVEN MAIDENS^(1.), situated in the far north east of the kingdom, in the LYRLDRAN Mountains.

2. Dei. Rel. Myt. One of the SEVEN MAIDENS^(2.) of KOMMEAN myths. She is most commonly associates with spring time and the renewal of life, and fauna, and is depicted as a chimera of aquatic life, physically monstrous but fecund and loving. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

RAELLA: Geo. Plains dominating the south west of SABAEA, which over the last decades have been growing dryer, leading to the abandonment of many rural settlements.

RAEMOLUTHISM: Rel. Puritanical religion in RHAMIA. It emerged as a corruption of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE brought over by KORACHANI colonists, and AHRISHENI and native ACHSHI faiths between c. 250 – 2000 RM. It became puritanical as Atramental taint in the region increased, resulting birth defects that reached their peak in c. 2100 RM. A caste of law-keepers known as 'Puritans' emerged around this time, overseeing all births and culling those dement be too corrupted.

Over the years the religion convoluted, taking on traits of the harshening ambient its people faced, becoming known as Raemoluth. Its deity became a rapacious entity, hungry for sacrifice and purity above all else. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

RAETHA: Set. Coastal settlement in the far east of LIMOTH. Its main industry is fishing (Pop. c. 8,000).

RAETIA: see RHAECHIA.

RAETUMA: Int. Sca. Thick bituminous sea of ATRAMENTA in the far south of the MIROVEAN OCEAN, off the north western coast of BROR^(1.); to the east of the island of BRSEA, and occupies some 440,000–square-miles.

The sea makes a mockery of normal seas and is an inimical environment, its thick passive waters unable to sustain any form of natural life, though some highly adapted creatures somehow survive within its muddy lightless depths – wretched burrowing things subsisting on the umbriska within the sea and squirming lamprey-like predators that feed on them. Its shores are fetid places of strange-coloured chemicals, rank with the decaying bodies of creatures caught in its torpid tides. The lessening of ELYDEN'S seas have left large miles of coast as desiccated plateaus of cracked Atramenta.

Some natives of Brsea have perfected a method of distilling some of the chemicals produced by the sea, turning them into a crude form of fuel on which its people have come to rely.

RAETZANT: Set. Small city in the region of TZEDEK in the far east of THE SURRACH (Pop. c. 17,000).

RAFAEL: Set. Settlement in the c of GNOTH (Pop. c. 4,000).

RAFFIN BARAQ: m. (B. 3571 – D. 3698 RM) Pol. His. Founder of ROMOREA (2-) and primogenitor of the Romorean royal line. He was exiled from GAAP in 3663 RM and moved south with his closest followers, settling an oasis not far from the desert of VACIVA. People slowly followed him and by c. 3750 RM the settlements of BRAAT (2-), ECHEA, and IONOL had appeared, around which the rest of Romorean culture eventually coalesced. His daughter SETAREH BARAQ ascended the throne upon his death.

RAFFIN IO SGIROUT: m. (B. 3741 – 3859 RM) Pol. Per. Historic king of ROMOREA^(2.) who ascended the throne following his MOTHER'S death in 3813 RM. Following in her footsteps, he was the monarch who finally saw the completion of the flooding of the Romorean^(1.) rift valley in 3821 RM, giving birth to the sea of HASAAZ ARAAT. The flooding was controversial during his time, with many people displaced or even killed by the action, but ultimately the benefits it wrought far outweighed the losses, bringing increased economy and industry to the region. The construction saw hundreds of slave labourers killed by lax work conditions, and he is remembered now for his excesses and died a symbol of power and decadence and set the precedent for the cruelty of the Romorean royalty that persists to this day.

RAGEL ABARIS: m. Ast. Per. (D. 208 RM) ALMAGESTI astronomer who in c. 172 RM identified a golden-tailed comet that crosses ELYDEN'S northern skies every 154-years – the comet was named ABARIS after him.

RAGANA: Set. Settlement in the north of the HENDECARCHY of CHLORIS in the c of MALAN. Its main industry is the mining of iron (Pop. c. 10,000).

RAGHA: Set. Coastal settlement in the west of METHUMN, in the HENAKARAIAN peninsula. Its main industry is manufacture, and most people are employed in the single gigantic manufactory that dominates the settlement (Pop. c. 5,400).

RAGOR: Set. City in the c north west of the tribe of GOROR in the south east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 12,500).

RAH: lit. 'cross'. 1. Geo. South easternmost of the large islands that make up the MAIDEN ISLES between the SEA OF NARANOR and the BATHASHAL OCEAN. It is named after the cross shape that it bore when it was first documented by the explorer BOHMIUS in 1527 RM, though the diminishing of ELYDEN'S seas has since seen it increase in size, loosing that shape.

2. also 'the Cross of Rachanael'. Ast. Con. Constellation in the NORTHERN HEMISPHERE. See Vol II: Constellations.

3. Set. Small city in the north of the BARRIER LANDS overlooking a small lagoon close to the coast (Pop. c. 17,400).

4. see TROPIC OF RAH.

Soc. Though simply meaning cross, in imperial vernacular the word has become synonymous with the SWORD TARTARUCH.

RAH, FESTIVAL OF: also 'festival of the sword'. Soc. KORACHANI feast day celebrated by all nations whose people worship the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. Celebrated on the first AIONAL of HAELEN, it celebrates the martial victories of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR through the symbol of the SWORD TARTARUCH.

RAHAAL: Geo. Glacier in the far north of GNOTH, in the SOLUN HIGHLANDS.

RAHAB: Fau. Sea serpent common in the north of ELYDEN, most commonly seen in the SEA OF POLARIS, the GULF OF VALUS, and the SEA OF DAGGERS. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

RAHACH: Ind. Set. Mining settlement in the c of the KORACHANI colony of CRASSULA, in the far north east of MENISCEA. Its main industry is gold-mining and it has the largest open-cast gold mine in the colony (Pop. c. 10,000).

RAHADANT: Set. Fortified city in the west of the region of KERRET, in the east of THE SURRACH. It is ruled by a caste of AUGURS, and skulls form a major part of its culture and funerary customs — the skulls of the dead are varnished and kept by the descendants of the dead, who keep shrines that contain many generations of the dead, which are left offerings on certain festivals (Pop. c. 29,000).

RAHADRA: Fau. SAMMAEAN name for the BEAST OF ARIMASPI.

RAHAL: Lak. Lake in the c south west of TETHYSIA, close to the border with LIMOTH^(1,). It is a remnant of a far larger lake that has slowly diminished with the increased desertification of the nation and the growth of the NEHNAXIAN desert.

RAHANA: 1. Rel. Religion of IPANAH (2.), originating from remnants of IACITE sects that sheltered there following their persecution by the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. It spread to the north west of SAMMAEA, where it developed into a separate cult with its own beliefs, which in turn led to the appearance of the cult of the ATTAH.

It is named after an old saint of the Church of the Undying Machine, ST. RAHANA, and is not to be confused with the similarly-named religion of the SIX CITIES. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

2. Rel. Religion common to the SIX CITIES region of THE SURRACH that developed following the arrival of KORACHANI EXOCRINES to the region some 1,500-years ago. It has been corrupted over a time into a mix of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE and old local polytheistic traditions, such as those still practiced in PEGAN. The religion itself is monotheistic though has a pantheon of around 2-dozen powerful saints that can be considered as patron demi-deities. Upon birth, a child is given a patron saint and will normally spend their life revering that saint above all others, including Rahana (the deity's name).

A corruption of common religions in the region that adopted parts of the Korachani religion of old, the Church of Rahana is the only religion in the states of NEKHARAAL and VANKA, and is common in parts of TANASS. It is also gaining popularity in Pegan. Rahana is also common in the BAKHRAN STATES and its vassals.

It is named after an old saint of the Church of the Undying Machine, ST. RAHANA, and is not to be confused with the similarly-named religion of IPANAH⁽²⁾.

RAHANKHEN I: Pol. The first MAHANTKHAI (supreme king) of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES, who rose to power in 1328 RM after defeating the Demon Sultan AMENABAST.

RAHARI CHAPEL: Rui. Ancient ruin, 110-miles south of CONTH in eastern LIDEA. It was a site of great interest during the height of Conth in c. -1000 RM, where its ancient FIRMAMENTAL libraries and artifacts were looted. They are now ruined, buried in the earth of the region.

RAHASAN: Set. Small city in the c north of the BAKHRAN STATES in the north west of THE SURRACH. The city is known for its copal (a type of soft AMBER) deposits, that are mined and fashioned into object d'art(Pop. c. 18,000).

RAHASS: Set. Small city in the west of OPHIUSSA, overlooking the BAY OF TASHI. It is built within the remains of an ancient THIRD AGE catacomb-like necropolis (Pop. c. 17,000).

RAHAUT: Set. City in the south west of the tribe of DRAKAINA, in the east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 26,000).

RAHENG: Dem. 'Rahengi'. Ntn. Tropical nation in the far west of equatorial Western Sammaea, along the Chhmari coast. The nation is nestled in the cliffs and steep mountains of the western face of the Santorean Mountains. The region gained its independence in 3812 RM following decade of colonial rule under Dha Nar. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations

RAHETOSHOT: Set. PLAGI city common in KORACHANI myth by way of native N'RAKHI, PARAIYAN and AETHIOSI legends. Whereas many scholars and explorers maintain that the city itself is factual and that the legends surrounding it are merely fabricated or aggrandised, most place the city firmly in the realm of myth.

Rahetoshot was once a grand metropolis, the centre of the plagi race. The cult of RACHANAEL has its roots in the city and in the days of the DEMIURGES, this was the seat of his power. Following the banishment of the Demiurges to the material plane Rachanael became desperate to regain his lost power, stopping at nothing to accomplish his goals. His children were forgotten, used as little more than pawns and tools in his power games, and their empire grew weak, the plagi bitter at their perceived abandonment in favour of the weaker humans, who would eventually become Rachanael's adoptive children (as evidenced by the Korachani empire, and previous, similar empires in past ages).

Slowly, the metropolis died, its people leaving, its districts crumbling in their wake, until little remained save the corroded walls of empty citadels and echoing halls. Those who remained in Rahetoshot became insular, and bitter, rarely leaving their rotting metropolis, choosing instead to brood over their inequities. The millennia of seclusion and the acrimonious madness that has consumed the descendants of these people them have changed them, body and mind. Such bitterness, married with the depravities of the Atramenta have given rise to a wretched race of twisted beings that revel in pain.

Some postulate that Rahetoshot may be synonymous with the plagicity of KHARAKHARA. (Pop. unknown).

RAHHA'KA: Set. Fortified settlement in the c north of the tribe of SUUR'KA, in the north east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 3,000).

RAHHIR: Set. Small city in the north of EZASUH^(2,). Its main industry is logging (Pop. c. 13,000).

RAHII: Geo. Mountain, some 450-miles long, in the north east of WESTERN SAMMAEA, to the south east of the BITAMMAN Desert, in the far east of VESPERTINE LEAGUE. The mountains are volcanically-active, and in some places, such as the ATAZUL Wastes, old lava flows are up to a mile or more thick.

The mountain's north facing foothills are home to the descendants of ESHIRAN^(2,) immigrants which in c. 3340 RM fled the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED ruins of SABRIM.

RAHIYA: Set. Settlement in the south west of the SULTANATE OF
ABACARDAT. Its main industry is arable farming (Pop. c. 3,000).

RAHKA: 1. Geo. Island off the southern coast of AHKA.

2. Set. Fortified settlement on the eponymous island off the southern coast of AHKA, known for its military workshops and small manufactories. As recently as 3-decades ago the settlement was the centre of a many smaller rural communities, though they were rapidly replaced by industries needed to support the war-effort in Ahka (Pop. c. 10,000).

RAHSTUN: Set. Fortified city in the south of the TARAHID ANNEXES (Pop. c. 13,800).

RAHUNAA: Rvr. Wetlands in the c of SARASTRO, along the course of the river SOLONA. The wetlands cover an area of around 1,000-square-miles and are home to a diverse selection of wildlife.

RAIAA: Set. Small city founded over the ruins of ASIUM in ARKOS^(1.) in c. 3750 RM, following the SUNDERING OF THE KORACHANI EMPIRE and the fragmentation of Arkos into warring city-states. The city was settled by Arkosian political refugees who fled there following persecution from the regions' cities for supporting the HIGH-EMPIRE OF KORACHAN. The city was attacked during its early years though its location made it easy to defend and remains to this day an independent city overlooking the DAARKEN GULF (Pop. c. 3,500).

RAIAINA: Set. Small city in the south east of KAZZAR, along the course of a tributary of the VETAGAME, around 10-miles from the wetlands of SYMHERO^(2.) (Pop. c. 13,000).

RAIDIA: Set. Small city in the south west of $\underline{ZHARIAH}^{(2.)}$, in the region of \underline{KUIASH} . Its main industry is iron mining (Pop. c. 11,400).

RAIGEL: 1. Pol. Geo. One of nine political territories, located in the north of ALAM BETHYL. It is the northern-most Bethylan territory and has the reputation for being the bleakest, with the longest winter, with close to a month of total darkness, whose people are the most dour and fatalistic in all of Alam Bethyl.

2. Pol. Set. Small city in the north of ALAM BETHYL, and capital of the eponymous territory^(1.) (Pop. c. 17,400).

RAIHA: Set. Fortified settlement in the north of TAHALL. The city is a major link along the course of THE WAY trade-route (Pop. c. 7,200).

RAIN, IELLY: Int. Atr. Phen. Wea. A relatively common phenomenon that takes the form of small semi-solid globules of a translucent liquid (though the substance is often laced with impurities and particulates) that fall like rain.

Such rains are experienced across ELYDEN, and particularly in areas where the ARCANE TEMPERS sway towards ATRAMENTAL dominance, but weather conditions can lead to such rains happening far from the area in which they were created.

The rains may be mildly ATRAMENTALLY CORRUPTED, posing a risk to those exposed to them over prolonged periods, though for the most part they are inert, possible little danger other than the immediate annoyance or possible flooding or congestion of waterways.

No adequate explanation exists for the creation of such rains, and for the most part they are just taken to be a fact of life wherever they occur commonly. Where such rains are uncommon, they may be seen as miraculous or cursed.

Jelly rain is often compared to the rarer phenomenon known as STAR JELLY, though the two are unrelated.

RAINN, PALACE OF LIGHT: Sup. Arc. FIRMAMENTAL beacon in the north east of the HENDECARCHY of CYRENIA, in the north of MALAN. It acts as a potent FOCUS⁽²⁾ to FIRMAMENTISTS, who can easily see it from a hundred miles away through the SIGHT.

RAISEN: Set. City and administrative centre in the north west of AHRISHEN (Pop. c. 33,200).

RAISHAZAR MELQART: m. Mil. His. Per. (B. 3656 – D. 3877 RM)

SARASTROAN SARAKASHAR (general) who on the 15th LIVIALEN 3703 RM was appointed supreme general of the SARASTROAN COALITION during the WAR OF SUNDERING, becoming the first in a storied line of ARCH SARAKASHAR. He was already a loyal follower of Sathep (who was the one who appointed him) but was not an ARCHIDOXUS, due to showing little magickal aptitude, though he still benefited from his rapport with the Lichking in the form of good health and long age.

He not only survived an assassination attempt on him on the 1st SOLSTICE Day 3705 RM in ARGEA, but apprehended and killed the assailant in front of a large crowd of onlookers, earning him the respect of the people and improving public morale amid growing famine.

His grand strategy during the War of Sundering was pivotal in leading SARASTRO to independence (though he had his detractors at the time, many of whom had hoped for Sarastro to replace the KORACHANI EMPIRE entirely, rather than splinter as a second empire).

RAISHAZAR'S COLUMN: Str. Monument in the city of ARGEA, in SARASTRO, built in 3708 RM to commemorate the victory of ARCH SARAKASHAR (supreme general) RAISHAZAR MELQART'S victory during the SECOND SIEGE OF ARGEA, which was instrumental in Sarastro's eventual victory in the signing of the SARASTROAN TREATY.

RAIYAN: Sct. Settlement in the far south west of RAONGEN^(2.). Many soldiers who go on to garrison the fortress off QUIAN in the north come from here. Its main industry is the cultivation of wyrdwort, which is used in funerary rites across Raongen (Pop. c. 8,000).

RAJA: Pol. Rnk. City governors in the CITIZENRY OF THALI. Regional rulers who command multiple cities are known as DEMARAJAS.

RAK ETH: Rel. Dei. The sun deity of the AUREATE FELLOWSHIP that is worshipped in METHUMN and ADHERA. It is depicted as a majestic humanoid figure of honey-like skin that radiates golden light that symbolises life, rebirth, resilience, and enlightenment. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

RAK ETH SOTARA: Lit. 'blessings of the sun'. Lan. Soc. Phrase used throughout METHUMN and southern ADHERA, where it is usually used as a farewell amongst friends and acquaintances. Its origins lie in the dogma of the AUREATE FELLOWSHIP (the main religion of Methumn), where it is used as a blessing.

RAKHACHAN: Rui. Abandoned KORACHANI colony in the north of ABACARDAT. Once coastal, it is now some 10-miles from the coast.

RAKHAHANA: (B. -485 - -427 RM) Pol. 2nd ruler of the SAOSTANAN DYNASTY known as THE DEFILER KINGS. She ruled from -473 to her death in -427 RM.

RAL OXA: Set. Small fortified city in the west of BARATHEA^(1.) (Pop. c. 17,000).

RALANEM: Rvr. River in the south east of AZAZEM, flowing south for 80miles from the OTHACHA Mountains before joining with the river SIDIA.

RALAT: Set. Settlement in the c east of AZAZEM known for its cotton fields and textile industry, as well as OGHUR SLAVES and MANUMITTED LEGIONNAIRE workers (Pop. c. 9,500).

RALIEL: Geo. Expansive badlands area in the LEVANTINE region in the south east of AHRISHEN, covering some 10,500 square-miles.

RALCZHET: Str. Large lighthouse in the east of OKKHAM, guarding the BAY OF ITAE in the far north west of the SEA OF KHURSA. The lighthouse is also a college to the order of TIDESHAPERS, whose SHAPERS are a necessity in many coastal settlements of Okkham.

RALIA: Lak. Largest lake in AMMESH, located in the c west of the coalition of states, in the south west of SAMMAEA. It is fed by dozens of rivers with sources in the URARAGHI, LOSHIGH, LORAGHI, and LARAPH Mountains and empties via the river Vertandi into the BAY OF LEPHET.

It is surrounded by countless settlements, cities and farmland and is amongst the most fertile regions of Ammesh.

RALISS: 1. Geo. Island off the western-coast of THE SURRACH.

 Mil. Str. Fort in the north west of the above island^(1.) off the westerncoast of THE SURRACH.

RALLAN: 1. Sea. Bay in the far north east of MALAN, to the south of the SEA OF IALCUS.

2. Set. Major coastal city in the north east of MALAN, in north east of the HENDECARCHY of NHORA. It is known for its large port and fishing fleet, with vessels that ply their trade across the Ialcus, venturing north into the GULF OF VALUS (Pop. c. 120,000).

RALLATA: Geo. Picturesque canyon system in the far east of THE SURRACH covering some 300-miles. It has one natural arch that spans its width, over which a major road linking the cities of SULHAFAT and KALAI passes.

RALLATA, CUBE OF: Int. Str. Giant pitted metal cube, its sides around 20-ft. wide, floating above the eponymous canyon system in the far east of THE SURRACH. It has existed for as long as written and oral records of the region go back, and was ignored by people ancient and present, who fear it

As though the nature of the object were not mysterious-enough, it is most well-known for the constant stream of fine white sand that pours from and cube and scatters across the canyon, carried far on the strong winds of the area. No one knows where the sand comes from, though few have studied it with the scrutiny of modern eyes due to the stigma that surrounds the region.

RAM'ATHI: lit. 'Heart of the Forest', also 'the Deep Wood. For. Fantastical dense region of vegetation in the c of THE OLD FOREST covering 90,000 square-miles, where the floor is largely untouched, little more than a narrow labyrinthine chasm between the multifaceted trunks, creepers, parasitic plants, gigantic EPIPHYTES and rocky pinnacles that pack the area. Gigantic boulders are known to be trapped in the gigantic trees and trunk-sized vines that strangle the region, and the natives are known to mine them and build strongholds within them. Strange and wondrous creatures are said to live within its reaches, including many that are now thought to be extinct elsewhere, such as BALAURS and FAEREX.

Human settlements are built amongst the flat branches and constructed platforms some 50-feet up. Over centuries of habitation, this artificial layer has been adapted by the forest as a new floor, the true floor beneath now little more than half-buried tunnels.

RAMAH: Set. Settlement in the c of CHEIRA, along the course of the river YAGNOTH PHATHAN. It is known for its reed cultivation, which is used in the production of various reed-items (Pop. c. 3,800).

RAMALAHARIKON: Set. Small city in the c-south east of NOAVATUR, in the southern foothills of the MAHAISHITH Mountains. (Pop. c. 16,000)

RAMATAR KAN: m. Pol. His. Per. (D. 3121 RM) MALANI politician who usurped the throne of AONIA in 3092 RM, seizing power for himself. He was eventually overthrown and imprisoned in 3107 RM by the revolutionaries NALLINDE AND ALISHIN, who became heroes in Aonia and are remembered to this day.

RAMATESH: Set. Settlement in the north west of VAALK, along the route of the SHADOW MARCH. It is known for its many hostels that cater to pilgrims undergoing the March (Pop. c. 5,000).

RAMAVARKHA: Geo. Rocky shallow hills to the south of the north western Varrachon Mountain, forming the northern border of Vârrachon with The Old Forest. The region is largely barren and was stripped of all its resources during the Korachani empire's tenure in Vârr, though greenery is slowly returning. The only major settlement there is the city of Noachis, which remains the regional power city to this day.

RAMAYN: Rui. Abandoned city in the c of LAASKHA, in the region of THAZAKHA. It was destroyed in a massive cave-in of weak duststone formations in the area.

RAMEAL: Rvr. River flowing west for 460-miles from sources in the NGHALLEAL Mountains, before meeting with its parent, the river VAEL SUMI.

RAMERON: Set. Fortified city in the south of Taan An in the south west of SAMMAEA. It has a long history and was a major city of the nation of AMMASH⁽³⁾, though it was attacked by dissidents 2549 RM amid the collapse of the nation, following the destruction of the MONSTRANCE OF FEALTY and the resultant.

It was once the capital of the middle FIFTH AGE state of RAMERRI^(2.), which was overrun by marauder forces in c. 3420 RM, with the city razed and resettled by the marauders and used as a stronghold. The later signing of the AMMASHI TREATY in 3594 RM saw stability returned to the region, and Rameron was eventually resettled in c. 3780 RM, when it became the centre of a series of bastions that guard the south of Taan An from potential invasions from the south (Pop. c. 42,000).

RAMERI: 1. Geo. Geographical region in the AMMASHI^(1,) peninsula in the south west of SAMMAEA, crossing the borders of southern TAAN AN, eastern KEPHUAAN, and the north of AMMESH. It once belonged to an ethic group in the nation of Ammash^(3,), though following its collapse in c. 2550 RM, its people dwindled, with their remnants scattering. By c. 2685 RM a new coalition of loosely allied city-states^(2,) had appeared over the approximate area to provide security against growing marauder threats.

2. His. Ntn. Geo. Historical state in the AMMASHI^(1.) peninsula in the south west of SAMMAEA, in land now occupied by the south of TAAN AN, eastern KEPHUAAN, and the north of AMMESH. It emerged in c. 2685 RM as independent states came together to better defend themselves against increased marauder activity in the region during the tumultuous time that followed the collapse of the nation of Ammash^(3.) decades earlier in c. 2550 RM.

Despite this, it became a target to concerted Marauder forces in c. 3420 RM, that marched upon its orchards and farmsteads, burning them down, on its way to the capital city RAMERON, which was sacked, razed, and its people slaughtered before being resettled by the marauders, becoming a stronghold to their forces, from where they were able to launch dedicated assaults against neighbouring regions.

This ultimately forced the states of the Ammashi peninsula into an alliance, known as the AMMASHI TREATY, that was able to rid the region of these marauders once and for all, bringing stability to the region. The old territories of Ramerri were divided amongst Kephuaan, Taan an, and Ammesh. See Vol III: Extinct States.

RAMES HIQ: Set. Settlement in the c north west of CHEIRA (Pop. c. 4.500).

RAMICA: Set. coastal settlement in the south of Ammesh, overlooking the BAY OF TIRILIANA (Pop. c. 6,600).

RAMIEL: Rvr. River in the south west of GNOTH flowing north for 325miles from sources in the HRKONNA Mountain before meeting its parent, the river MARAGA at lake IMAGA.

RAMINA: Set. Nm. Major independent city in the AMMASHI^(1.) peninsula in the south west of Sammaea, between the states of KEPHUAAN, TAAN AN, and AMMESH. Ramina was able to remain independent during the time period known as the AMMASHI STRUGGLE, its warriors effectively fending off marauder attacks in the south west of SAMMAEA, and it allied itself with KAPHAAR and TAANAL, bringing into motion events that would culminate with the signing of the AMMASHI TREATY in 3594 RM that saw stability restored to the region.

The MONSTRANCE OF FEALTY, an ancient vessel used at the signing of the Treaty, remained in Ramina, which became a fortress of sorts protecting the Monstrance, which became an object of pilgrimage to some who understood its importance in the region's history.

As the marauder menace that had characterised the times of the Ammashi Struggle died out, the spirit of the Treaty was forgotten as those who were alive at its founding slowly died, replaced by new generations who cared less and less for its significance in bringing stability to the peninsula. There remain however those who know full well the importance of the Treaty and the symbol of the Monstrance in keeping the region safe. These are MARSHALLS⁽²⁾, wardens of the fortress where the Monstrance is kept, who travel across the peninsula spreading words of hope that are meant to keep the promise of the Treaty alive.

The Monstrance of Fealty has become an integral part of Ramina, where it is now a common heraldic device, seen in works of art, as well as being the prominent feature of its flag.

Today the city is ruled by a council that invites representatives from across the peninsula as advisors, and is seen by most as a beacon of hope and justice, though in truth many councillors use the Monstrance and the work of the Marshalls as a tool to gain more power, with little interest in restoring the spirit of the Treaty (Pop. c. 89,000). See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

RAMINI: Set. Settlement in the c south east of AMMESH, (Pop. c.).

RAMIFERA: Set. Large city in the c west of OKKHAM, along the course of the river ENETSIC. It is known for its large mangroves and other expansive trees with aerial roots, many of which are used as the basis of architectural construction.

It was the birthplace of the CULT OF THE DREAMING GOD, in c. 3425 RM, and remains a religious centre to this day (Pop. c. 48,000).

RAMIS: His. Ntn. Extinct kingdom in the south west of SAMMAEA, just north of the TROPIC OF MAOCARHL, in what are today occupied by southern ADHERA, most of METHUMN, and the far west of PHYRR. It was situated along the course of the river TAHKI, making the otherwise dry land fertile.

It emerged in c. 2020 RM from the ruin of the MEDHAMANNI empire, which collapsed suddenly in c. 1830 RM due to a culmination of events, leading to an almost 200-year period of unease known now as the MEDHAMANNI DARK AGE. What was once a land of demesnes centred around great city-manufactories and slave-markets had become instead a wasteland of ruins and corpses as its slave population fell to starvation and disease in the wake of its corrupt government's fragmentation. Its western territories slowly coalesced into a group of allied people who were descended from surviving slaves and remnants of the overseer casts. They worked together, forging a new economy centred at first around agriculture and then rebuilding some of the old Medhamanni industries, around which a competent and respected plutocratic council formed. For the most part its people eschewed slavery given their ancestors' dark history, and they valued hard work, though cherished their freedom at the end of the day.

The council gave way to an autocracy by c. 2280 RM, which in turn evolved into a sovereign monarchy in 2417 RM, which ruled until its eventual overthrowing in c. 2630 RM, after which the nation became a republic, collapsing finally in 2836 RM after war with Adhera saw its northern territories annexed, and the remaining territories forming the insular nation of METHUMN.

It is famed today for its historical queen YASSMINA I, who is remembered as a formidable politician and for having fought in battle alongside her male lieutenants. The name remains popular in the region to this day. See Vol III: Extinct States.

RAMISA: Rvr. Lake in the east of KEPHUAAN, along the course of the river SHAYANDI.

RAMISIA: Set. Fortified settlement in the west of HABOT, close to the border with TAAN AN. It processes raw umbra that is piped there from the umbra fields of ZENEGE RES, which is then pumped to the capital, AHEHAFRET (Pop. c. 8,000).

RAMMA: Set. Small city in the west of Ammesh (Pop. c. 12,600).

RAMMINA: Sec. Small city in the south east of AMMESH. It forms a part of the NACRE ROAD trade route (Pop. c. 16,300).

RAMON'ATHI: 1. Eth. Ethnicity most-prevalent in RAM'ATHI. They live in settlements constructed on the lowest flat-branches of the giant multifaceted trees of THE OLD FOREST. Their presence has created a second artificial forest floor, usually some 50-feet up. The true forest floor is dark, buried beneath the foundations of these settlements, and acts as crypts to their dead, places of solitude and exile.

2. Set. Loose conurbation in RAM'ATHI named after the demonym for the people of the region. The city is comprised of as many as hundreds disparate settlements, each linked physically and culturally to their neighbours, creating a rich city that stretches across the artificial floor of the region (Pop. c. 67,400).

RAMOTH: Ind. Set. UMBRA pumps owned by house LLANA in the east of LYRIDIA DHAI, in the ATRAMENTAL region of AHOPESH (Pop. c. 6,200).

 \underline{RANA} : F. 'Ranasha'. Pol. Title of the emperor of $\underline{VIRAHAN}$. The present Ranasha is $\underline{SECHENGALA~II}$.

RANAGA: Lake in the c of AHRISHEN.

RANAHEN: Set. Small city in the far east of Ahrishen, forming part of Great ROAD – the main land trade-route passing through Ahrishen. It offers inns and hostels to travellers (Pop. c. 13,800).

RANAIA: Set. Small coastal city in the north east of SEDISIA, in the far south east of the region of VETHRAND. It appeared in c. 3380 RM as a new port and harbour to serve the older city of NAIN, whose own ports were left landlocked following years of waning sea levels (Pop. c. 17,400).

RANALUN: Set. Major city in the c of CEHOPHELA. It is an important mercantile centre, and distributes goods and food across the nation (Pop. c. 1,400,000).

RANAPURA: Set. Small city in the south west of IACIO (Pop. c. 18,000).

RANARHOR: Rvr. Costal boreal bog in the c of PERGOST, overlooking the AMAARI WATERS.

RANAT: Set. Settlement in the east of the tribe of ESSENIA, in the c south west of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. Its main industry is ADAMANTINE mining (Pop. c. 3,000).

RANAWYRT: Flo. Bitter root with bright purple flowers that, when ingested in large numbers, induces an artificial ability to SHAPE the FIRMAMENT. Its effects are random and brain damage is not uncommon (both from over exhaustion through untrained use of the Firmament and side-effects of the root itself) and its use by non-shapers is outlawed in most civilised areas, and is typically restricted to those already able to shape.

When used by those who already possess the ability to shape, it can enhance abilities or widen the spectrum of SPHERES that the user can influence. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

RANCHANT: Set. small city in the prefecture of \underline{HOMREA} in the c south of $\underline{HOLOLACH}^{(L)}$ (Pop. c. 6,000).

RAND: Geo. Ridge, some 250-miles long, linking the north west of the BAKHRAN⁽¹⁾ Mountains and the western-most reaches of the AZHAO Mountains. The ridge forms a natural border between the nation of ERET⁽²⁾ and THE SURRACHI region of JAZKIA.

RANE: Set. Fortified settlement in the north of ROMOREA^(2.), to the north of the VACIVA desert, guarding the main aqueduct providing water to the capital IONOL (Pop. c. 5,000).

RANGON: Set. Coastal settlement in the west of CUTH, overlooking the SEA OF BALIMAN. Its main industry is crabbing, specifically MOONS CRAB (Pop. c. 4,800).

RANGPOUR: 1. Rvr. River in the east of SAUA, flowing south for 560-miles from sources in the MERA and KARPAROS Mountains, before meeting its parent, the river TAKRE.

2. Pol. One of the FIVE-AND-SIXTY FEUDAL STATES of SAUA. The region is home to much of its nobility's estates.

3. Set. City in the above region, in SAUA (Pop. unknown).

RANKON: Set. Settlement in the east of CUTH. its main industries are logging and the production of rubber (Pop. c. 10,000).

RANNAH: Set. Small coastal city in the north west of ENNAIAH. It is the main sea route out of Ennaiah, and also a source of most of its imports (Pop. c. 15,500).

RANNARA: Geo. Island forming a part of the Federation of UGURIIT.

RANNO: 1. Lak. Endorheic lake in the north east of AZAZEM, fed by the river HIROR, GARUR and NENEM.

2. Set. Twin ferry-towns overseeing the crossing of lake Ranno^(1.) (Pop. c. 180).

RANYOON: Geo. Island 110-miles off the south western coast of CUTH. The island is lush with vegetation and mangroves, and is uninhabited.

RAODICEA: 1. Soc. Str. Patrician district in the city of KORACHAN. It is a gated community, protected by many of IRON GUARDIANS.

2. Rel. Str. One of the SEVEN TEMPLES OF THE MACHINE, in the city of KORACHAN.

RAOGON: For. Jungle region in the centre of CUTH, stretching from the south of the ERES IRKALLA mountains, across the north of the HAMMINGHENG Highlands, to the north western coast of the SEA OF PYTHEA. It is one of the last havens of MONOCEROUSES in Cuth, where they are able to hide from the greedy eye of MORTALS.

RAOKA: Pol. Central district in the SAUAN city and capital of ADAIA.

RAON: see GOD WHO SPEAKS, THE.

RAON, WINDOW OF: Soc. Geo. Gigantic natural stone arch in the URAHASH Massif in the south west of RAONGEN⁽²⁾. The arch is around 600-ft. high and is surrounded by great vertical pillars of sandstone. The arch is named for the GOD WHO SPEAKS, after a legend that claims the negative space beneath the arch is the god.

RAONGEN: Dem. 'Raongeni'. 1. For. wooded lands to the north west of GNOTH dominating the c of WESTERN LLACHATUL.

2. Ntn. Raongen is an expansive nation that dominates the subcontinent of WESTERN LLACHATUL, stretching from 113° west to 5° west and 51° north to the NORTHERN POLE, whose people worship an unknowable deity known as the GOD WHO SPEAKS. Given this vast area, its climate varies widely, from cool temperate in the south to polar in the north, with various pockets of warmer continental weather farther inland, with the plains surrounding the great lake TAHONG being particularly pleasant vear-round. Its people are descended from various cultures, including the FOURTH AGE empire of HELMINTH, whose ruins still dot the east of the nation; the OHDU ATAN people, who dominated the south west of Western Llachatul in the early FIFTH AGE, and the ARAIJAN people, who emerged from the FADING into the early Fifth Age and went on to populate the central basin of extant Raongen. It is sparsely-populated, and most of its cities are concentrated in its south western-most territories, between THE VORANDINE in the north and the PARNASIAN STATES, OTINTH, and SEDISIA in the south.

Raongen is an empire that is divided into seven territories, known as INDUSTRIES, that function as a neofeudal system, ruled by FACTOTUMS⁽²⁾. There are various ranks of nobility beneath the Factotums, beneath which are their vassals – the HELOTS and SLAVES that make up the majority off the empire's vast populace.

The empire as it exists today was born in 3307 RM when the death of EMPEROR-FACTOTUM ASHAI LIJJ left the empire in shock, with no eligible heirs to claim the throne. Rather than risk a protracted conflict over control of the empire, the Factotums agreed to elect a member from within their own ranks to become the Emperor-Factotum, with the winning candidate bequeathing their title of Factotum to the next in line, in accordance with their Industry's traditions.

Before this time, the empire had been ruled by a hereditary Emperor-Factorum since 2792 when King INVIS IAFENG appointed himself as emperor, reforming the political system and territories of the empire, which had grown stagnant surrounding regions were embracing the rise of technarcana. His actions, while seen as radical at the time, ushered in a time of capitalism that saw great manufactories and industries replacing ancient rural production, leading to the rise of the industrial noble caste known as the Hegemons and the neofeudal system that persists to this day.

The western-most expanse of Raongen is largely lawless and is infested by the people of the so-called LOST DEMESNE, which is made up of the descendants of ancient ALMAGESTI colonists, who have descended into techno-barbarism, worshipping the original PATRICIAN HOUSE that settled the area as deities, with their MACHINE-MONKS being the only individual with any technical competence, itself polluted by idolatry and religious reverence of technology, particularly technarcane. These people, known collectively as the CALLOW HORDES, have formed an enclave within the eastern territories of Raongen, and have been terrorising these lands for centuries, leading to a heavy military presence in the area.

The empire is known as one of Elyden's largest producers of OMNATITE, a legendary ore that can, through the application of technarcane processes, be shaped into various substances. This versatility has made it one of the most valuable materials in Elyden and as the only nation with large deposits of the ore, this has made Raongen extremely wealthy as a result. It has stockpiled the resource and created artificial scarcity to drive up the price, filling up its coffers — and those of its HEGEMONS and Factotums — to unimaginable volumes. Given its size, it comes as no surprise that Raongen is also known for various other natural resources, including $\underline{\mathsf{AMBER}}$ and $\underline{\mathsf{EVOLAM}}$ KELP.

Its vassals can become citizens through various means, the most common of which is civil service or joining the army for a set amount of years. Once a citizen, an individual enjoys various rights that others do not have including, paying less taxes, and benefitting from representation amongst the courts of the Hegemons and ORGANIZIERS, though the implementation of these benefits are often lacking, particularly in more rural areas. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

RAONGENI: Lan. Language spoken in RAONGEN⁽²⁾. See Vol II: Languages.

RAOSI: 1. Pol. Soc. Tribe in the north east of MULCIBER, in the GROWING MOUNTAINS, in the north east of SAMMAEA. It is dry, befitting its position to the west of the desert of ANUBIS, though the seasonal river LEAR is its lifeblood, and if the river fails to flow for even one year, the region suffers in response.

2. Set. Ruling city in the tribe of Raosi, in the north east of MULCIBER. The city is known for its expansive subterranean cisterns, which conserve enough water to last a year (Pop. c. 55,000).

RAPAS: Set. Small fortified city in the c north east of the tribe of CHRIL in the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. It is known for its ADAMANTINE mines, and soldiers are recruited from the most ablebodied of miners there (Pop. c. 17,200).

RAPE OF BA'AKH: see BA'AKH, RAPE OF.

RAPELAH: Set. Small coastal city in the south east of AHOPAH. It has a reputation for being a hotbed of smuggling (Pop. c. 16,000).

RAPHI: Int. His. Law. Highwaymen in the REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO who, following the SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE, turned against the lingering remnants of KORACHANI culture. They terrorised imperial citizens while they were being repatriated to the HIGH-EMPIRE, killing many, stealing their belongings and claiming their old homes. Their exploits are responsible for destroying various imperial traditions in the newly-independent Sarastro and many new customs in the reformed empire stem from their actions.

Once Korachani influence had abated by c 3725 RM they developed into an irregular 'militia' that took protection money from people for defending their settlements. This practice was quashed in larger cities between c 3800-3850 RM, though they remain a common-enough sight in rural areas, where they are simply accepted as a form of life and culture. Though derided by political leaders, many people truly rely on them to defend their lands, though some groups have been known to take protection money without offering any services in return.

RAPIRACH: m. Myr. His. Per. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, a SCION of the DEMIURGE MALACHAI.

He was tortured and killed over many centuries in the THIRD AGE, his essence turned into an artefact wielded by BAPHOMET. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

RARAM: Pol. Ser. Capital of VARU, located in the west of the nation. It is known for its black-market – an ill-kept secret that is representative of its corruption. The market is known about across not only Varu, but also surrounding nations, and people of means travel there to acquire all manner of illicit goods. It is a stop along the EGETAKHAN ROAD (Pop. c. 1,090,000).

RAREDOS: Geo. Mountains in the far north east of PORPHYR. They are famed for exposed strata and their palette of colours, which range from deep purple, to grey, brown, and orange.

RAREVAS: Plr. 'rarevas'. Mor. One of the original Two-and-Twenty MORTAL PEOPLES, and the children of the stillborn DEMIURGE RYHASSHARAUCH.

Assuming that the current school of theory is correct and a twenty-second Demiurge does indeed exist, the rarevas were cursed before their conception due to the catatonic state of their demiurge parent. The rarevas are an argument for the existence of the so far unseen yet purported twenty-second Demiurge and are used as proof against those scholars who still deny the existence of the stillborn Demiurge.

Legends claim that only seven exist: in a fugue state between life and death, unable to die or reproduce. The stench of vinegar and rotting flesh surrounds their mummified grey bodies and KHARKHARADONTID fables claim they keep their umbilical cords as necklaces in memory of their unknown god.

Of all the mortal peoples the least is known about the rarevas and their existence remains uncertain. Though some explorers claim to have found the land of their conception, reports are conflicting, and the seven catatonic beings themselves remain undiscovered. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life: Sicthain.

RARADCHAN: Set. Independent city-state in the c north of THE SURRACH, populated by religious extremists descended from KORACHANI colonists from c. 2400 RM. The city is known for the AMBER FORT, which is the headquarters of the CHILDREN OF RACHANAEL, an extremist cult that splintered from the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE following the retreat of Korachan from the region.

It is one of few city-states within the Surrach to have a script based off the KORACHANI language, though it has since taken on many Surrachi loan-words (Pop. c. 28,000).

RARSK: Flo. Hardy tuber plant known for its singular fleshy leaf and its ability to lay dormant for long droughts. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

RAS: Set. Town in the far east of THE SURRACH, built in a shallow crater basin to the north west of the BLEACHED SHELF. It's now-crumbled rim was foundation for an ancient wall that surrounded Ras, though the town has long-since outgrown it.

Ras appeared as a mining settlement long ago, where small volumes of meteoric iron and MOLDAVITE beads created at the time of impact, were mined. Though the iron was consumed millennia past, the moldavite is still used to make a greenish jewellery that is famed throughout the Surrach (Pop. c. 5,800).

RASA HAR: Set. Coastal city in the south of DHA NAR. It is known for its historic ports where pirate fleets used to lay anchor (Pop. c. 52,000).

RASADARA: Rvr. River in the c of PERGOST, flowing west for 550-miles from sources in the c of the DANTIS Mountains before meeting its parent, the river HAMASADANDARA.

RASAK: Set. Coastal settlement in the south east of GYZHA. Its main industry is fishing, and its people practice an ancient form of stilt fishing – with fishermen standing on poles in shallow waters, waiting for hours at a time to fill their quota (Pop. c. 6,000).

RASALAGH: Geo. Expansive badlands in the north of AQUARIIA, stretching into the domains of the deep BLACK MOUNTAINS. The region is noted for its mesas and stark mushroom-shaped rock-formations.

RASALGATH: Geo. The heart of N'RAKH. A region of ash-like sandy desert, though to originate from the pumice stone that dominates the region.

RASAMA: Set. Settlement in the c of GNOTH, to the east of the DOLMEN Mountains. It is a link in THE WAY trade-route (Pop. c. 3,400).

RASANAVIEZH: Ind. Gigantic open-cast mine in the west of NOAVATUR, made up of 6 separate pits, each varying from half-a-mile to a mile in diameter. It is considered one of the largest such pits in ELYDEN, and was abandoned in c. 3200 RM following the waning of its iron yields.

RASAQ: 1. Geo. Mountain pass in the c east of CHEIRA, between the ZOIQUAGO Mountain in the north and the YGGOAUGO Mountain in the south

2. Set. City in the c east of $\underline{\text{CHEIRA}}.$ Its main industry is silver mining (Pop. unknown).

RASCETA: Set. Coastal city in the east of SURUTUR, built around an ancient grooved wall thought to date back to the FOURTH AGE. The origins and purpose of the wall are unknown, though it is likely that it was located underwater or close to the shore when it was created (Pop. c. 62,000).

RASCHA: Set. Settlement in the south east of AQUARIIA, known for its cotton and textile production much of which are sold to merchants passing the settlement while travelling along THE WAY trade-route (Pop. c. 10,000).

RASELETH: Rvr. Major river in north east of SAMMAEA, flowing from sources in the UGOSTAUTH Mountains before meeting its parent, the river NARRATI (itself a tributary of the river SHIBBOLETH^(3,1)), in AETHIOS.

RASELRIA: Mil. Set. Fortified militant settlement in the far south east of CISNERIA. It is a major recruiting ground for the army and is instrumental in patrolling the troubled borders of eastern Cisneria (Pop. c. 29,000).

RASHA: (12,800-ft.) Geo. One of ten peaks (colloquially known as the TEN PRINCES) of the south eastern A SAVI Mountains, in northern AHRISHEN, named after an ancient prince.

RASHADAR: Sea. Reef 1,000-miles off the coast of eastern GIBEAH, just south of the island of ZAKKAR.

RASHAHA: Pol. Set. Capital city of BASSORAH^(2.) and a major link in the RED ROUTE, forming a trade centre in the c of LLACHATUL, linking SKAROS, ALMAGEST, LAASKHA and AZAZEM together (Pop. c. 720,300).

RASHAPH THE INSCRUTIBLE: (D. 2669 RM) His. Sup. Pol. SHAPER and ATRAMENTIST belonging to the caste of SORCERER-KINOS⁽³⁾ in INGHULL (present-day KHULL). Like most other Sorcerer-kings, he was involved in the fighting in a long-lasting war with VESPER, in which Inghull was losing. In a bid to turn the tide, Rashaph attempted to perform an Atramental ritual in 2669 RM. After sacrificing dozens of neophytes and using their SOULS to power the ritual, he unleashed an Atramental blast that obliterated him and the landscape in a 25-mile radius. The very land was torn asunder and lifted into the air in a potent explosion that left the terrain itself a wasteland of deformed and rippled geography. The region is now known as the EFFLUX OF RASHAPH and the devastation can still be seen to this day.

Every living creature in a 25-miles radius was obliterated, including most of the Vesperi army. This led to the signing of a peace treaty, ending the conflict and elevating Rashaph to a cultural hero. His sacrifice was honoured by the construction of a monolithic statue in EMEKTA.

RASIDI: lit 'hot place'. Set. Small fortified city in the east of the tribe of Esseris in the south east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. It is famed for its natural hot springs and baths (Pop. c. 16,000).

RASION: Set. Small city in the west of LIMOTH^(1.), in the c east of the emirate of OTHOTEL^(1.). It lies along the main internal trade-route, and offers accommodation to travelling merchants (Pop. c. 13,000).

RASLED: Set. Settlement in the south east of NÁRTHEL (Pop. c. 4,300).

RASMOTTHRI: Sup. Geo. Mildly ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region in the far north of AHKA, just south east of the AGNOS Mountains.

The region is categorised as a MODERATE THREAT by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

RASSAPTREX: Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region in the south east of LYRIDIA, dominating the land north of the DHERKAZ forest and the south east of the KYTHI Mountains, over which it has a negative influence. Originally a forest, all vegetation has long-since died, leaving the region a barren landscape of crumbling DUSTSTONE formations, that makes travel difficult. Likewise, any creature – animal or mortal – born in the region is commonly afflicted by birth defects, which may be passed on to offspring, should the being survive. Trade-routes across the region have been moved, leaving over 200-miles of road abandoned and dozens of small cut off.

The region is categorised as a MODERATE THREAT by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

RASSIHIR: Set. City in the c north of TATAR, straddling both banks of the river BEREGAME. It is known for its large stone bridge, on which is located the palace of then JURAT.

RASTAN: Dem. 'Rastani'. Ntn. Small sub-desert-nation in the north east of the island-continent of BROR^(1.), overlooking the SEA OF ASEER. Its main deity is known as ONORESH. SUPPLICANTS OF THE LEVIATHAN appeared late in FIFTH AGE, originating here. FIRMAMENTAL DEVASTATION liquefied much of the rock of northern Rastan and most of ABHA, leaving the region a flat wasteland of now solidified rock, reshaping the coastline.

RASTIS: 1. Mil. Str. Tower in THASTARO, in the south east of SAMMAEA, south of the ruins of DANTALIA.

2. Lan. Regional language in $\underline{\text{THASTARO}}$, in the south of $\underline{\text{SAMMAEA}}$. See Vol II: Languages.

RASURE COAST, the: Geo. Expansive stretch of coast in the west of OKKHAM, covering some 350-miles of shore, overlooking the SEA OF LETHEA. The name was given by KORACHANI explorers in c. 620 – 630 RM after learning of the amnesic effects of the Sea of Lethe. To this day, the coast remains largely uninhabited due to the sheer potency of the waters here, which permeate flora and by extension fauna, making the region inhospitable to mortal life.

Despite this, there remain a few opportunistic settlements that produce $\underline{\text{LETH}}$ – an amnesic-inducing drug that is made from the waters of the Sea of Lethea.

RATAH: Geo. Hills in the south east of the ESHAMIL Mountains in the east of HOLOLACH^(L).

RATAL: Set. Settlement in the north east of HARAPPA⁽³⁾, situated in the delta of the river TENE (Pop. c. 18,000).

RATALRI: Set. Settlement in the south east of HABOT. It lies along the route of the NACRE ROAD, and sells fossils that are excavated north in TASAN, though its main industry is iron mining – the only major region of note in Habot to have iron reserves (Pop. c. 6,800).

RATAMAL: Set. City-manufactory in the north west of PHYRR, along the course of the river MIRILLIRA, which forms an integral part of its industries, powering its manufactories (Pop. c. 17,000).

RATAMMARA: Set. Settlement in the c east of AMMESH, located between the URARAGHI and MEL SAGHI Mountains. Its main industry is the mining of amethyst, which is commonly seen in object d'art across Ammesh (Pop. c. 5,600).

RATAN: Geo. Island to the west of the SEA OF IPERIA, off the southern coast of DANU. It was 'discovered' and named by the explorer BOHMIUS in 1526 RM.

RATEDOS: Mil. Str. Coastal fortress of the KNIGHTS OF THE BUDDING
ORCHID, in the west of OKKHAM. It serves as a harbour and barracks to Knights' forces, and also has a sizeable hospital.

RATH: Mil. Str. Fortress in the south of MARACHA in the far north west of THE SURRACH, guarding its border with the BAKHRAN STATES.

RATHAAN: Soc. Org. One of the 17 GRAND HOUSES of the NACRE LEAGUE. The House is based in the nation of HABOT, where it emerged as a major player in c. 3830 RM during the decline of the HABBOTI monarchy, where it capitalised on the rise of the merchant class, solidifying its influence in the changing political landscape of the newly formed nation of Habot.

By leveraging its control over the supply of essential building materials that were needed to fuel the new nation's many building projects over the next decades, House Rathaan was able to establish itself as a major influence, becoming a member of the Nacre League in c. 3875 RM. It is now recognised as the most recent of League Houses to now be recognised as a Grand House. Where most other Grand Houses see this as an insult, Rathaan sees it as opportunity.

Today, it is involved in the trade and manufacture of raw materials used in the construction industry, and its materials are sought after across the NACRE ROAD. Its strategic partnerships and control over resources have allowed it to maintain significant political and economic power, ensuring its place among the elite houses of the Nacre League.

RATHOR: Pol. Set. Capital city of TAHOMIA. Known for the towering funerary spires that dominate its skyline, Rathor has become a hub for the TECHNARCANE industry. Its streets are lined with intricate stone carvings that depict the merging of Korachani and Tahomite cultures (Pop. c. 420,000).

RATHOUR: Set. Harbour 5-miles east of the KORACHANI colony of MADOUR, north of VÂRR. The harbour was constructed in 3989 as a means of linking the city of Madour to the coast, as it had been a millennium ago.

RATHURU: 1. Geo. Archipelago in the far east of the MIROVEAN OCEAN, around 1,000-miles south east of the PANTHEON ISLES. There are four major islands (Rathuru⁽²⁾), MONTAR, OIAM, and REOCO) of which the former is larger than the others, and dozens of smaller islets. They were 'discovered' in 1532 RM by the explorer BOHMIUS.

2. Geo. Largest island in the eponymous archipelago^(1.) in the east of the MIROVEAN OCEAN. It is thought to be uninhabited

RATI: Lak. Lake in the c of AHRISHEN, forming a part of the ARESHI⁽²⁾ river system.

RATTAMAR: Set. Small coastal city in the west of METHUMN, in the HENAKARAIAN peninsula. Its main industry is fishing (Pop. c. 13,800).

RATTAR: Set. Settlement in the east of the tribe of KORIND in the north west of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 6,000).

RATTEA: Set. Small coastal city on the island of ROHDIN off the north eastern coast of KARGAMA. In 1981 RM it was settled by a group of five knights who were exiled by the KARGEMMAN king BATTUZ. They gained support over the next years and in 1988 RM led its people in a rebellion that saw the island break away and form an independent state.

KORACHANI forces making up part of the first EHRENISIAN CRUSADE overpowered the island's defences in Rattea and established the coastal fort of ST. AND⁽²⁾, which was used as the starting point for many incursions into the mainland. During this time, Rattea became a major supply post to the crusade effort.

In 2804 RM the Korachani occupiers were forced off the island and fort St. And was destroyed, and Rattea was resettled by people from Kargemma, bringing it into the kingdom once more.

Rattea remains the only settlement of note on the island, and its people largely subsist off fishing and farming (Pop. c. 11,600).

RATTEN: Set. Small settlement in the south east of OKKHAM, along the isthmus that connects the peninsula of Okkham to the headland of KHURTAE. It is part of the SASACZHOT canal and controls one of the lochs along its course (Pop. c. 1,000).

RATTHA: Set. Coastal city in the far west of JURRAS (2.) (Pop. c. 20,000).

RATUKUR: Set. Small coastal city in the north east of the PANTHEON ISLES, along a narrow isthmus between the isthmus and the BHALASSIAN PENINSULA^(1.) (Pop. c. 14,000).

RATUNA: Rvr. River in the east of OPHAR, flowing west for around 315-miles from sources in the ASOGHAQUA Mountains, before it meets it parent the river QUARES.

RAUD: Geo. Island off the western coast of PHUT in the c east of MENISCEA in the SEA OF LARISH^(1.).

RAUTI: Rvr. River in the c east of AETHIOS, flowing south for 175-miles from sources in the ARAM Mountains before meeting its parent, the river NARRATI, at lake NURAS.

RAVA: Set. Settlement in the c of HARAPPA⁽³⁾. It is a major caravanserai that links the more populated north with the south east via a long pass that cuts through the southern foothills of the Harappan⁽¹⁾ Mountains (Pop. c. 6,000).

RAVINA: Int. Rui. Ancient ruins in the fields of BAULDOR, east of SIRIPHAGOS originally settled no later than c. -500 RM, possibly earlier by pioneers believed to be descended from a handful of tribes exiled from the lands of AUERENI. A lake once bordered the town, though the change in weather patterns in the region in the last millennia have left it dry, an empty basin on the edges of which is the crumbling ruin of Ravina, barely recognisable for its weathering.

The town of Ravina once formed part of the SALT ROAD, and is known to have regularly traded with the CITADEL MOUNTS as far back as c. -300 RM, with records attesting to many merchants and ambassadors from the Citadel Mounts staying there until c. -200 RM. The town thrived, though never truly grew in size, trading goods between MULCIBER and the Citadel Mounts for many years. By c. 100 RM they had grown close with the people of north western Mulciber, their merchants trading goods with them in return for guards, brides and other resources from the mountainpeople. By then middle of the fourth century RM, KORACHAN had appropriated the Citadel Mounts (renaming it EHBOT), its borders moving steadily south, with Ravina falling to its armies following 2months of pitched battles in 373 RM. The survivors fled east into Mulciber and incurred the wrath of the barbarians there, which within the span of a year had amassed a great army, moving west against Ehbot. The conflict that followed dragged on for 16-decades, reducing Ehbot to a warzone from which Korachan was eventually forced to withdraw. By 471 RM the ruin of Ravina had been trampled by decades of fighting amid its ruin, leaving nothing now but the echo of foundations and strewn bricks that appear as little more than boulders.

RAVVAH: Set. Small city in the north east of AZAZEM, in the backwards NARAMISH TERRITORIES. It is the primary city in the region and it is known for its granaries and hand-operated grain threshers (Pop. c. 16.000).

RAWH: Geo. badlands in the CITIZENRY OF THALI.

RAYA RETH: Set. City in the c of ALAM BETHYL, in the territory of UNERKILISS⁽²⁾ (Pop. c. 32,000).

RAYAN: Set. Small city in the south west of RAONGEN⁽²⁾ along the western shore of lake RA. The settlement is amongst the oldest to venerate the GOD WHO SPEAKS, whose first acts of speaking to MORTALS through DREAMS and visions were reported around the lake in c. -600 RM. The city handles much trade from across the west of Raongen, particularly across the various rivers of the region, and moves goods from the sea overland to the south west due to the rapids downstream along the GARAILI river (Pop. c. 20,000).

RAYAH: Set. City in the west of the JAHADAT STATES, under the control of the city of MARBAIJA (Pop. c. 30,000).

RAYMMA: Set. Small coastal city in the south west of AMMESH (Pop. c. 15,000).

RE: Rvr. River in the north east of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOMS, flowing for some 280-miles through SYRTIS^(1.) and UCHRON^(1.) from the GESHAL massif. The river empties into lake PAVO, which itself forms part of the far larger river SARA.

RE'HAIZ: Sec. City in the north east of BA'AKH, built atop the ruins of the ancient settlement of ENDA, which was abandoned in in c. 110 RM due to the retreating of the DAARKEN GULF'S coast and the exposing of a shallow coastal shelf that by c. 2000 RM stretched for about half-a mile to the new coast. Re'haiz was rebuilt form the rubble and stones of Enda in c. 2450 RM to keep contact between IO and Ba'akh alive, and it became renowned for its hewn harbours and ports.

Following the KORACHANI EMPIRE'S abandonment of Ba'akh to the DOMNITORS in 2732 RM, the capital was moved there from the PALACE OF THE PRECEPTORS in BAALBETH, which was allowed to rot. The city thrived during this time, enjoying its relationship with Io, though as both nations slowly waned and the ATRAMENTA once again began to rise, it found itself deteriorating, the few SIPHON ENGINES that remained in the region unable to cope with the increased taint. The city was abandoned by the Domnitors in 3097 RM, though it remained deserted until at least c. 3200 RM, by which point it had become repopulated by DHAMATEANS whose hard-earned resilience to the ATRAMENTA and natural remedies against it, coupled with the natural wane of the shadow in the region following c. 3400 RM, allowed them to survive there, rebuilding the settlement into a thriving entity, ignoring the SARASTROAN SANCTION that in 3103 RM handed over Ba'akh to SARASTRO. Indeed, Sarastro itself has largely ignored this land since the Sanction was signed, though its slavers occasionally encroach upon the city's territories in their incursions for slaves (Pop. c. 27,000).

REALITY SUIT: Int. Dre. Tec. Complex TECHNARCANE suit that allows the wearer to safely traverse DREAMSCAPES and other similarly-tainted regions without needing the aid of an ONEIROMANCER (or in the case of an oneiromancer wearing it, vastly amplifying their defensive abilities). The suit allows the wearer to ignore the effects of the dreamscape, and also makes them imperceptible to NIGHTMARE CREATURES and such.

The suit was first mentioned by the $\underline{PARTHISAN}$ inventor \underline{THALEM} in 3635 RM, and the first fully-functioning suit was crafted in 3653 RM, and tested in the dreamscape of \underline{DAGON} the next year, proving successful.

The manufacture of such a suit is laboriously time-consuming and incredibly expensive. The suit requires advanced technarcane and oneiromantic techniques to make, as well as specifically bred $\underline{LARVAE}^{(1.)},$ which are interred within the bulky hermetically-sealed suit, which functions similarly to a $\underline{SOFTSUIT}.$

Such suits have been made in small numbers across the INNER SEA, though have never been produced in large quantities. The city of MANUFACTORIA in Parthis specialises in their manufacture, though can only produce one a handful of such suits every few decades. The region of STASIM in VALBAR is famed for its miners who work in rudimentary reality suits that are mass-produced at great expense. The SOMNIARECHI ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION maintains a cadre of specialists known as PROSELYTES, who are equipped with simplified versions off the suits which they wear when cleansing particularly dangerous dreamscapes.

REALM OF AQUARIIA, the: see AQUARIIA.

REATH: Set. City in the c of NAARETH, along the course of the river ABASHERA. It is known for its rangers who patrol areas of the BATYAAD that are close to settlements, protecting them from wild animals, particularly TARRAGONS. Its main industry is reed and grain farming (Pop. c. 40,000).

REATOR: Set. Major coastal settlement in the south of ALBASSITA. It is a relatively-recent city, having been founded in c. 3720 RM, though it grew rapidly, the lowering sea levels revealing a perfectly-shaped natural harbour that is now the largest port in Albassita, and it is renowned for its drydocks and shipyards (Pop. c. 113,000).

REAUT: Set. Small city in the west of ERET⁽²⁾. Its main industry is logging (Pop. c. 18,000).

REBETIA: Set. Farming settlement in the c of RHAMIA (Pop. c. 10,000).

REBHA: Set. Settlement in the c north west of SARASTRO, along the course of the river SOLONA, at the confluence with the river SARAGON. It lies along the passage of the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 5,000).

RECKONING OF PEACE: Pol. His. Agreement between SIRIPHAGOS and the tribes of MULCIBER made in c. 2950 RM leading to an uneasy friendship where trade was brokered. This period lasted until the SARASTROAN attacks on ARKOS^(1.) and Siriphagos following the SARASTROAN SANCTION of 3103 RM and KORACHANI attacks on AETHIOS in 3002 RM, which saw barbarians and marauders from Mulciber attacking those nations as they were distracted by war.

RECUSA: Set. Settlement in the west of the BAKHRAN STATES, known for its nonconformist attitude towards religion – it is the only major settlement in Bakhran to be eschew any of the recognised religion in the region (Pop. c. 10,000).

RED BANNER, the: Soc. Obj. Ancestral banner, created in SAUA in c. 2135 RM during reunification ceremonies when the FIVE THRONES of the warring Sauan houses were brought together by the first DIADON. It today hangs in the FORBIDDEN BASTION in Saua, brought out in times of war, where it is carried by the BATUL.

RED BAY, the: Sea. Bay in the south east of NOAVATUR, to the north west of the SEA OF RTHAS, so-named after the aftermath of the naval battle of 1303 RM that ultimately saw Noavatur becoming an independent state. It is said that hundreds of bodies and debris from the battle were drawn to this bay by prevailing currents, painting the waters red with blood.

RED CALENDAR, the: Cal. Calendar based on the BLOOD MOON ARAKHAMÉ that was observed in PRE-IMPERIAL KARAKHAS. The calendar was abolished in 121 RM once the KORACHANI EMPIRE took control of the nation. There was some resistance to this, but within a few decades its use had been largely abandoned. See Vol II: Month and Lunar Cycle in Elyden.

RED CITY, the: see HARAKAI.

RED CLIFFS, BATTLE OF THE: His. War. Naval battle that took place north of the cliffs of KANDAKE at the mouth of the river SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾ during the WAR OF SUNDERING in 3704 RM. KORACHANI ships sailed into the mouth of the river and attacked fort COMMOS, which was a major stronghold of the LIDEAN fleet that had been commandeered by SARASTRO at the onset of the war. What started as a bombardment of the aft part of the fort turned into a dramatic engagement overnight, escalating into the early hours of the morning. Unbeknownst to Korachan, Grand admiral KATION ZAMEN of Sarastro was present and led his fleet to victory, dividing the Korachani fleet in two and causing it to lose momentum and scatter, forcing it to withdraw.

The victory allowed Sarastro to strengthen its defences in the area, putting pressure on MHAROKK, which at the time was still a Korachani vassal.

RED FOUNDRY: Ind. Set. Major foundry in the TARAHID ANNEXES.
Before its assimilation by the Korachani empire and later Parthis, it was a major producer of bricks, providing building materials thousands of bricks for the PENTARCHY'S monuments. It expanded over time and became a MANUFACTORY city, its main body below ground, forging metal sheets from iron mined farther north in the city of ALBITIA (Pop. c. 60,000).

RED ISLES, the: Geo. Region in the north west of the BOILING SEA in the BROKEN ISLES. The isles are remnants of the NEFERATH highlands that was destroyed during the CATACLYSM OF KHAMID in 101 RM. What remains is a treacherous watery labyrinth of flanked by sheer-sided cliffs and mesa-islands, the rich layers of strata visible along their sides responsible for the area's name.

Due to the rubble and debris, much of which exists beneath the sealevel (tides permitting), the entire region is avoided by most seafarers, the lack of mercantile settlements and notable features in the area also contributing to this desertion.

RED KEEP: see ARAK ABH.

RED MARKET: also 'Organ Trade'. Int. Med. The commercial trade of MORTAL organs, including hearts, livers, lungs, kidneys and limbs, intended for use in transplants. The practice thrives wherever a market exists for organs, with no questions being asked as to their origins, usually under duress or performed on recently dead bodies. In most places the practice is unregulated.

The organ trade is legal in PARTHIS and its vassals, dependencies and colonies, where it is regulated by the governments, though many outside commentators believe the practice to be largely coercive, with most people found selling a kidney being poor. They are paid a pittance and often later die of infection.

RED MINARET, the: see TAANA.

RED MOON, CULT OF THE: Rel. Religion common in the cities of PEGAN and APINAR in the SIX CITIES region in THE SURRACH. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

RED RIVER, the: see $\underline{\text{EMPUSA}}^{(1.)}$.

RED ROUTE, the: Com. Geo. Main trade-route of the KORACHANIEMPIRE and, since the SUNDERING OF THE KORACHANIEMPIRE in 3705 RM, the REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO, that almost circumvents THE INNER SEA. It appeared in c. 350 RM following the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR'S return to power in Korachan and the strengthening of the Korachani nations. The route existed under various guises and forms before the name came into common usage c. 600 RM, where many smaller trade-routes were linked together with the convergence of newly-acquired imperial nations. By c. 800 RM, the Red Route had become a staple of imperial culture; the mercancy that passed along its roads bringing money to imperial cities. The road was well-maintained and guarded, with towers and strongholds scattered along its length, safeguarding travel: indeed, it was the only safe way to travel.

With the over-stretched infrastructure of the Korachani empire that appeared c. 3000 RM, the road fell into disrepair, with many stretches along its length becoming dangerous to travel, causing cities and regions to falter through lack of trade. By the time of Sundering of the Empire, the Red Route was little more than a name and dozens of scattered routes linking nearby regions together, though with the subsequent stabilisation of the HIGH- and LOW-EMPIRES, the Red Route was re-established, and remains one of the few uniting forces between the two rival nations, with trade allowed to travel 'freely' along it (the term freely being highly relative).

The Route converges with the SALT ROAD, another trade-route that circumvents most of the INNER SEA REGION, in two regions – in KARAKHAS, in the cities of SERKAN and DEKANA, as well as for most of their passage through LIDEA, with the cities of IDDEN, MENIAASOS, PYRRHOUA, ZERED, and CATHAGO, amongst others, seeing traffic from both routes, bringing much trade to their markets. They also meet in the SARASTROAN capital, ARGEA. See Vol II: Major Trade Routes.

RED TREE, the: Flo. Tree and site of religious importance in the UMBRA SOKHAR in the north of SAMMAEA, in the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region of MARASMUS. It is visited by ETHERI nomads who still hold to the ancient ETHERI religion of ETHER-ZOTHAZA, and the INNER GODS are paid tribute there.

RED WALL, the: Str. Defensive wall constructed between 1852 and 3007 RM along the ORCAMMOR Mountain-chain in SAUA. Originally intended as a symbolic gesture to the HARÉSHK (much of which was populated by Sauan expatriates), the Red Wall grew into a symbol of Sauan xenophobia, covering most of the AHRISHENI border and regulating access to much of the Haréshk and MALAN.

REDASNETH: Set. Fortified settlement in the far north of AETHIOS. It is located in the region of DAGESARETH and its main industry is the quarrying of SOULSTONES on an industrial level (Pop. c. 7,500).

REDDA: 1. Sea. Bay in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of PALUS^(1.), forming a smaller part of the GULF OF EDALAN, (itself the western-most part of the SEA OF DERAEA).

2. Set. Small coastal city in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of PALUS^(1.). The town is the major settlement of the duchy of ILLON^(1.) and is largely a fishing settlement, its vessels policing the eponymous bay of Redda^(1.), as well as the larger EDALAN gulf (Pop. c. 10,200).

REDDIN: Geo. Rocky island off the north eastern coast of KHULL between the SEA OF ANIPTERRA and ORRIDA, and separated from Khull by the deep MAZARINE SEA. The western-most part of the island was once a littoral shelf that was exposed following the diminishing of ELYDEN'S seas in c. 3100 RM, which saw the island grow steadily in size since then.

The landmass, which has an area of around 12,500-miles, is relatively bare and rocky, though it has rapidly become a sanctuary to various creatures. The Khullan colony of RHEM TA' appeared there in c. 3245 RM, becoming a base for fishers and whalers.

REDDIN BANK: Geo. Shallow submerged plateau off the north eastern coast of KHULL, forming the southern-most part of the REDDIN island landmass. Navigation of the bank as well as waters surrounding it is dangerous and discouraged The bank was 'exposed' with the lowering of ELYDEN'S seas in c. 3100 RM, accompanying the growth of the island of Reddin.

REDEKHIN; Rvr. River in the c south of GNOTH, flowing west for 250-miles from sources in the HECHALOT Mountains, before meeting lake IAMTI.

REDHIZZAR: Rui. Ancient acropolis in the south of HORSCH, in the BAND Mountains. The citadel was the refuge of the sorcerer-lord Redhak Il Hazz, whose corsair fleet terrorized imperial shipping in the SKAROSI GULF in c. 950 – 1100 RM. His reign was finally ended in 1102 RM, at which point attacks ended. Years later imperial explorers investigated the ruins of Redhizzar, finding the place deserted, built over a gaping pit which remains unexplored, believed to reach down to the depths of the PRISON CARCERI, where the prison of the FORGOTTEN ONES is said to be located.

REDISON: Set. Settlement in the north east of LAASKHA. Its main industry is the mining of Asbestos (Pop. c. 4,200).

REFABRICATION: Med. Soc. Extreme form of plastic surgery that is commonly practiced in PARTHIS and its dependencies. It is rooted in ATRAMENTAL practices that distort and reshape the body on a fundamental level that does not require intrusive surgery, though can take time to achieve the desired results.

Refabrication $\underline{\text{ATELIERS}}$ are relatively common in most major Parthisan cities, though are also found in major advanced cities in the $\underline{\text{HIGH}}$ - and LOW-EMPIRES, amongst others.

REFLET: Geo. Rvr. Large prismatic spring north of the HANNASTRA forest in the c east of THE SURRACH.

REFORMATION DECREE, the: Pol. His. In 3452 – 3463 RM, the passing of a decree outlawing and banishing militant groups not formally recognised by the State of KORACHAN from the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. Disillusioned former members abdicated the aegis of the empire and formed the loose confederacy of LATHLOS-CHA in 3472 RM following a 2-year conflict with Korachani forces.

REFORMED CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE: see REFORMED CHURCH OF SARASTRO.

REFORMED CHURCH OF SARASTRO: also 'REFORMED CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE'. Rel. An offshoot of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE that formed in 3705 RM following the SUNDERING OF THE KORACHANI EMPIRE. It is based in SARASTRO and is the official religion of the REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO. Its ruling title is the PAGON.

It originated in the city of Argea, late in the 37th century as the SARASTROAN ORTHODOXY, which refuted the divinity of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR and began to revere the ancient Sarastroan god HAGE as a power above the UNDYING MACHINE. This partially led to the WAR OF SUNDERING that in turn led to the SUNDERING OF THE KORACHANI EMPIRE in 3705 RM. After gaining independence, SATHEP THE RISEN, ruler of the LOW-EMPIRE, worked tirelessly to unify the disparate sects that had splintered from the Church of the Undying Machine prior to the Sundering.

The Reformed Church of Sarastro officially formed in 3821 RM, bringing together dozens of different sects, after Sathep himself penned a new holy text in which he eschewed the Korachani diptych of the Undying Machine and Malichar, with a triptych made up of the Undying Machine, Hage, and himself. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO: also 'the Low-empire of Sarastro' or 'the Reformed Empire of Korachan'. Dem. 'Sarastroan'. Ntn. A major political presence in the north east of SAMMAEA, the Reformed Empire of SARASTRO emerged from the SUNDERING OF THE KORACHANI EMPIRE in 3705 RM. Sarastro retained most of the old empires' southern territories, including MHAROKK, BA'AKH, IO, and LIDEA, with MHAROKK and VAALK joining it within a few decades.

The Sundering came about following two years of war that engulfed the east of the INNER SEA REGION that began with VENTHIR declaring war on Sarastro in 3703 RM, later becoming known as the WAR OF SUNDERING. The conflict ultimately saw KORACHAN join in the fray, and it ended with the Sarastroan Treaty, signed on the 23rd of SATAVALEN 3705 RM. From the chaos emerged the so-called TWIN EMPIRES of Korachan and Sarastro.

Sarastro prospered under the leadership of the Tyrant SATHEP, though its individuals did not. Sathep himself was a relic of a far older time, and was distrusting of technology in the magnitude that it had come to dominate life in Elyden. Slavery became rampant, and what resources Korachan had not stripped from the earth were rapidly exploited, including vast diamond and gold mines discovered after the Sundering that brought great wealth to the Reformed empire. Under his aegis was the OVERCOUNCIL formed, which is made up of dozens of sycophants and nepotistic rulers, who exist only to serve Sathep.

A mixture of hotter climates and harsher terrain give Sarastro a distinct appearance that is different to that of the High-empire, and most of its cities are seen as backwards as a result. In truth, Sarastro is no less industrious than Korachan and other major powers around the Inner Sea, it's just that its cities look older and its people cling to older fashions and traditions.

The capital of Sarastro, ARGEA, is famed for its bakeries and the bread that is distributed for free to its populace, who, despite many aspects of life being harsher than its northern counterpart, enjoy certain privileges (some would say basic rights) that the work-slaves of Korachan are denied. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

REFORMED NATION OF ABACARDAT: His. Ntn. Short-lived nation that emerged in the east of SAMMAEA in the wake of a deadly strain of FAHR'S PLAGUE that caused a schism within the nation of ABACARDAT in the decades after its first appearance in 2138 RM.

The nation appeared in c. 2240 RM following decades of rebuilding and the forming of a stable trade network between the cities of ARHBAH, ASHAIJA, and MIRADAS, and farther east, with ZHARIAH⁽²⁾ to the east and ANATHUL and SABAISA across the SEA OF LETHEA.

In c. 2540 RM, the ABACARDATI SULTANATE made efforts to bring the Reformed Nation of Abacardat under its rule. This began with offers of political alliances and trade deals, though events degenerated into war in 2561 RM that dragged on for two years at the end of which the east of Abacardat surrendered to the Sultanate, bringing the two realms together. See Vol III: Extinct States.

REFUGE OF THE GREEN TIGER: Phil. Mar. Sup. Str. Isolated monastery in the FARAVARI forest in SAUA, where a secretive order of monks live ascetic lives. The traveller Havan Umi sojourned there for some time between 3721 and 3724 RM and later published his journals from his time with the monks, who he claims study an ascetic form of shaping that requires great physical training and sacrifice from its practitioners, including near total starvation, lack of sleep, and close to twenty hours of training every day. The masters of this form of SHAPING, he claims, are capable of achieving feats of shaping unknown elsewhere.

REFUSCA: Geo. Rocky plains in the c south of EMENRIST on the continent of BROR^(1,), known for their reddish-brown colour. The region was once the site of a major plague, and its settlements were razed to the ground, with little trace remaining of them. Today, the region is peppered with mass graves and ghost towns.

REGAJI: Set. Settlement in the south west of RAONGEN⁽²⁾, to the west of the CHIAVALLE Mountains. Its main industry is omnatite mining (Pop. c. 5.500).

REGENT TAUAM: (B. c. – 250 – 202 RM) Pol. In ancient AHRISHEN, a human who rose to power in the first half of the 13th century of the FIFTH AGE (c. -200 RM) out of relative anonymity, defeating other claimants to the HOLLOW KINGDOM. A ruthless leader, who within two decades brought the BARROW-FIEFS of Ahrishen together in a precursor of the Ahrishen that is known today. In celebration of his accomplishments, he began the restoration of the TA OMA (named in his honour) in c. -200 RM.

REGENT-KING, the: Pol. Rnk. Hereditary title granted to the usurper of the LIDEAN governor in 3973 RM, and held by his successors since then. The present Regent-king is MUQARRAN IIX.

REGENT-KINGS, the: Pol. Rnk. Leaders of VÂRR that rose in the decades after its abandonment by the INTERREGES' in 3791 RM.

The power-vacuum left by the Interreges' departure saw tyrants and warlords vie for control of the ruin that had become of Vârr. Eventually, the ancestors of the Regent-kings rose to prominence in the city of NOUVAR in 3824 RM, becoming a patriarchal absolutist monarchy that rules to this day. They would go on to move the capital to a more central area, in the form of the city of SATARR in 3985 RM, after which the PROLOCUTORS became an influential presence in the old capital and its conurbation of NOUVATAI.

Though the Regent-kings now rule over the entirety of the lands left by the Interreges, there remain areas where the rule is weaker. This includes the area of the ILORHAN peninsula, which is under the control of the Prolocutors, whose support is unquestioned; and the city of NOACHIS in the north west, whose people are deeply indoctrinated in the imperial cult and refuse to accept the recent deification of ST. SOLUM.

The Regent-kings had a close relationship with the AVÉNETHI ORDER prior to its departure from Vârr in 3943 RM.

The Regent-kings formed a patriarchal dynastic rule composed of a native inhabitants (known as seeds) descended from the original imperial patrician immigrants who, over years of imperial rule, held prominent roles in the administration.

Despite the name Regent-king implying a stewardship or temporary position, the original meaning has now been lost as is kept in tradition of the title claimed by the first Regent-king.

REGHAN: Geo. Treacherous mountainous expanse to the west of the TOMB OF THE GODS, dominated by razor-edged rocks and jutting blade-shaped boulders.

REGHON APPLOSAE: one of 5 categories in the SUZIVIAN TAXONOMY, encompassing trees, shrubs, greases and plants, amongst others. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life: Reghon Applosae.

REGHON ARRATUS: one of 5 categories in the SUZIVIAN TAXONOMY, encompassing the Two-and-Twenty Demiurges and the MORTAL TRIBES. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life: Reghon Arratus.

REGHON HAGHORIN: one of 5 categories in the SUZIVIAN

TAXONOMY, encompassing fauna. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life: Reghon Haghorin.

REGHON SPUNGAE: one of 5 categories in the SUZIVIAN TAXONOMY, encompassing fungi. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life: Reghon Spungae.

REGHON SULNATHIN: one of 5 categories in the SUZIVIAN TAXONOMY, encompassing those born exclusively of the MATERIA OMNA. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life: Reghon Sulnathin.

REGIO ANTENOR: (B. 2691 – D. 2778 RM) PATRICIAN of HOUSE ANTENOR who in 2711 RM published a gazetteer detailing his travels around the INNER SEA between 2708 and 2709 RM as part of the GRAND TOUR. His accounts are partially responsible for popularising the Grand Tour, turning it into the COMING-OF-AGE RITUAL that it is today.

REH TA': Set. City in KHULL. It is a major religious centre, with lots of stone pylon temples (Pop. unknown).

REHAMEL: Rel. Str. Ascetic monastery in the north of SARASTRO, along the southern-face of the JAHAL Mountains.

REHASHA: Set. City in the c north west of Vaalk (Pop. c. 41,400).

REHEL: Sea. Sea off the eastern coast of WAELMIGH, to the south of the peninsula of XENIA.

REHEMAZ: Geo. Large headland in the north of LLACHATUL, protruding to the south east, and dividing the SEA OF DAGGERS in the south west from the GULF OF VALUS, beyond which is the continent of MENISCEA. Much of the headland is located to the north of the northern POLAR CIRCLE and consists largely of permafrost and ancient rounded formations. It is home to the Federation of PERGOST.

REHHAN: Set. Settlement in the west of VIRAHAN, with a road leading west into AHRISHEN (Pop. c. 27,000).

REHNASSAR: Set. Coastal city in the north west of SERROK. It is one of few coastal cities in Serrok overlooking the corrupted waters of the greater SEA OF LETHEA, as its waters are not that foul here, and their amnesic qualities are not as pronounced here as they are elsewhere, though full immersion is still prohibited by law due to the risk of memoryloss that may lead to people going missing or dying (Pop. c. 40,000).

REHNDA ESHEQ: Set. City in the far east of CHEIRA, known for its harbours (Pop. c. 38,000).

REHNOSS: 1. Sea. Bay off the western-coast of OKKHAM, separated from the south east of the SEA OF STYGAS by a peninsula of rock. The river TERESIC empties into this bay and it sees heavy sea traffic, with vessels coming and going to the eponymous city, 5-miles from the mouth.

2. Set. Large city in the west of OKKHAM, along the course of the river TERESIC. It is known for its harbours and shipyards (Pop. c. 140,000).

REHOUR: Set. Settlement in the KORACHANI colony of MADOUR (Pop. c. 1,900).

REHTAB: Set. Settlement in the c of OKKHAM (Pop. c. 6,200).

REIDANT: Set. Fortified settlement in the c east of THE SURRACH (Pop. c. 7,200).

REIGN OF MALICHAR: see RM.

REIGN OF THE APOSTATE POPE: see APOSTATE POPE, REIGN OF THE.

REIS: also 'the Kings' River'. Rvr. River in the c north east of THE SURRACH, flowing only seasonally for 900-miles from sources in the east of the NGHALLEAL and PAMEROAS Mountains before meeting its parent, the river YELLRAKH.

The name Reis comes from the regions' history, where the capital of an ancient nation was said to lie on the banks of the river under what is now the city of HATTRE.

REJHELLE OF RHODAN: also 'the Rhodanne'. Rel. Myt. Per. A figure detailed in various texts of the SCRIPTURE OF SHADOW, who was prophesied to be the bride to the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR during his TRIALS AND TRIBULATIONS that paved the way to his death and eventual rebirth as an OTHERWORLDER.

There are few historical accounts of a real woman by the name of Rejhelle, though she was a real person, effectively fulfilling that part of the prophecy within the Scripture of Shadow. She was an ETHERI nomad who served as a guide to Malichar during his Itinerary, and is mentioned directly by Malichar himself within his autobiographical work EMPIRE, though there are scant few details. It is this lack of concrete detail on her life that has prevented her from being canonised, though many people still consider her a saint.

Given her role within the Scripture of Shadow, many scholars believe that she in fact married Malichar, bearing his children, prior to his otherworldly rebirth, though if this is the case, there are no records of it, not even by Malichar himself. Her role in Empire is short but important, though she is not mentioned following the Malichar's mortal death, and it is likely that even he does not know her fate.

If she did in fact bear his children, any such offspring and their descendants would be the sole legitimate heirs of Malichar, according to the Scripture of Shadow, rather than the more commonly known DESPOSYNI (1.), most of whom were eventually CULLED anyway. Even if this were true, there is no way of tracing this lineage today, over 37 centuries later, though the promise (or rumour, depending on who you ask) remains a driving force amongst many groups today, and the mummified relic known as the RHODANNE HEART, was once an important artefact within certain religious circles, as it held the promise of possibly identifying any prophesised heirs of Malichar.

Some sects of the Church of the Undying Machine and mystery cults have come to worship of Rejhelle as a demigoddess due to her importance in the tale of Malichar. The status of these groups has changed over the years and today most are tolerated by the church, given that they abide by certain tenets and observances (including revering Malichar and Rachanael above Rejhelle, amongst many others). The most widespread of these sects is the Sect of Rejhellian Observance, whose members refer to themselves as Sons and Daughters of Rejhelle.

REJHELIAN OBSERVANCE, SECT OF: Rel. Org. Sect of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE that reveres REJHELLE OF RHODAN as the wife of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR. Though she was a documented historical figure who Malichar himself has spoken of (for instance in his literary work, Empire), her role as wife of the Archpotentate is not yet universally accepted by scholars and theosophists, which led to the formation of the sect in c. 900 RM.

It has existed since then as a largely autonomous religious body, free of the constraints of the Three Churches of the Undying Machine, so long as the Archpotentate and the UNDYING MACHINE remain hierarchically above Rejhelle.

The sect is based in the city if IKATHIA, along the border between SKAROS and LAASKHA.

REKH: Geo. Island off the south western coast of WESTERN SAMMAEA, in the COTRIAN ISLES, forming a part of the ISLAND STATES OF IRY.

REKOTONIANA: Ind. Set. Small mining city in the north west of NOAVATUR. It is known for its lead mines (Pop. c. 13,000).

REKULLEN: Set. City in the north of ATARAXIA, in the SISSEBA valley (Pop. c. 37,000).

RELASSAR: Mil Str. Major fort in the north west of SERROK, guarding the border west with CHEIRA (Pop. c. 14,000).

RELIC CROCODILE: Fau. Gigantic CROCODILE that lives in coastal wetlands in KASIHAAL and RASTAN. If left unchecked individuals can grow to over 60-ft. long, and can be a danger to coastal fishing and commerce. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

RELIC OF ST. ACHETUNA: Rel. Obj. The head of ST. ACHETUNA, preserved in a reliquary in the CATHEDRAL OF IRON AND SHADOW in KHADON. It became the centre of a MYSTERY CULT in Khadon in 2356 RM and is said to remain so to this day, despite efforts from the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE to quell it.

RELIC OF ST. ASPIRA: Rel. Obj. The preserved body of conjoined twins born to ST. ASPIRA in 3601 RM, now held in the TEMPLE OF PERGAMOS in PELASGOS. The relic is said the be the reincarnation of the City's recently deceased twin rulers. The children (named Rimmon and Mammon) died soon after birth, though many have claimed miracles while in the presence of their preserved body.

RELICS OF THE ARCHPOTENTATE: see MALICHAR, RELICS OF.

RELICS OF MALICHAR: see MALICHAR, RELICS OF.

RELIHEN: Set. Small city in the south west of RAONGEN^(2.), between the ZEHINE and CHIAVALLE Mountains. It controls the pass west across the mountains alongside the settlement of INHUAN on the opposite side (Pop. c. 13,800).

RELLEN: Ind. Rui. Originally an ARPAROH^(2.) settlement, it was slowly converted into expansive open caste mine in the first centuries of the KORACHANI occupation of LAASKHA. The hundreds of miles of tunnels and dozens of pit-like quarries of Rellen cover an area of around 12 square-miles and have been abandoned since the first decades of the second millennium RM, their bounties exhausted.

RELVERA: Sec. City in the north east of SIMBARA. It was the site where the SHERRIAN CIVIL WAR started in 2711 RM with the slaughtering of SHERRI workers (Pop. c. 23,000).

REMEX: Set. Fortified settlement in the far west of SAGGAR, known for its bird-keepers and their birds of prey (Pop. c. 8,000).

REMHA BHATIT: Rui. Ancient ruin located in the far south west of KHALHAT, in the c of the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region known as the DAENED SULRACH^(1.). They ruins here are expansive, and include large pylon-like stone structures and the remnants of mud brick foundations scattered around them, indicating a large city. It is believed to be part of an ancient LHAUS city, and is rumoured to still contain ITERANTS and vat-grown guardians.

REMMANATI: Rvr. River in the c of METHUMN that flows seasonally from sources in the UKHORR and MAR SAHIGH Mountains towards its parent, the river SAPPARANTI. It typically flows for a few months a year following seasonal rains in the surrounding areas, particularly the north.

REND, the: Geo. Slot canyon in north eastern GULLAETHA, NAARETH; carved by seasonal rains and snow melt that flows down the mountain, emptying into a treacherous morass that forms in late spring – early summer.

RENAISSANCE OF REDISCOVERY: Art. Soc. His. Historical period commonly recognised amongst KORACHANI scholars and chroniclers denoting the centuries following the FADING of the FOURTH AGE, where the remnants of its extinct cultures and civilisations began the process of rebuilding. Unlike the mortal people's first fumbling steps following their creation, this period of rediscovery was characterised by its relative rapidity and a general aggressiveness in the expansion of groups that would later become the first nations and peoples of the FIFTH AGE.

RENAISSANCE CRUSADES: See CRUSADES, RENAISSANCE.

RENGAR: (12,450-ft.) Gco. One of ten peaks (colloquially known as the TEN PRINCES) of the south eastern A SAVI Mountains, in then of AHRISHEN, named after an ancient prince.

RENNED: Set. Small city in the c north east of RHINOCOLOURA (Pop. c. $14\ 000$)

RENOUNCEMENT, TEMPLE OF: Rel. Str. Main temple of the VOID, built in c. -120 RM. Following the religions' recognition by the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE as a sect of the church, in 367 RM, it became the site on which the cathedral of the SECT OF THE VOID was constructed, and it stands there to this day.

RENURANESS: Pol. Set. Ruling city in the tribe of INDAAR in the east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 65,000).

REO: Set. Settlement and surrounding farmsteads in the west of ABATTUR. It is a centre of agriculture and animal husbandry (Pop. c. 7,000).

REOCO: Geo. Island in the far east of the MIROVEAN SEA, forming a part of the RATHURU^(1.) archipelago.

REPOSITORY OF KNOWLEDGE: Edu. Str. Massive library in the city of ABIMOLOCH in PARTHIS. It is known as an archive of esoterica, knowledge and other fringe information. Massive shelves filled with thousands upon thousands of index cards, meticulously categorised, with a myriad of lists and facts. It is used for research purposes across the INNER SEA, and is kept as up-to-date as possible, something made possible through the exploration and study of its intrepid members.

REPRESENTATIVE COUNCIL OF NOAVATUR: Pol. Org. The government of NOAVATUR since 1878 RM. It is made up of speakers of the hundreds of different unions from across the nation.

REPUBLIC BANK, the: Com. Bus. Org. Str. Main bank of ALMAGEST, owned by the influential OKKSHILT PATRICIAN HOUSE.

REPUBLIC BOTANICAL GARDENS, the: Flo. Str. Botanical gardens, just outside TETHRA, in PARTHIS, known for its gigantic glass and castiron greenhouses and large variety of flora from across ELYDEN and, on a lesser scale, fauna.

REPUBLIC COLLEGE AND HOSPITAL OF PLASTIC SURGERY:

Edu. Med. Str. College and hospital in the city of BUTHARIS, PARTHIS. It has helped pioneer both reconstructive and cosmetic plastic surgery, and is the most prestigious hospital dedicated to plastic surgery in around the INNER SEA.

REPUBLIC COLLEGE OF ASTRONOMY: Edu. Ast. Str. College in the district of THARDAIA, in the CITY OF ALMAGEST, ALMAGEST.

REPUBLIC FOUNDLING ORCHESTRA: Int. Mus. Org. Prestigious orchestra based in the city of TETHRA, PARTHIS, whose players and choristers are drafted from orphaned children who show an aptitude for playing music. They undergo rigorous training until they are considered to be good enough to play in the orchestra.

They are famed for the featureless gold masks that they wear and people come to visit them from across the Republic.

REPUBLIC INSTITUTE OF OTHERWORLDLY RESEARCH: Edu.

Oth. Str. Located in the city of ARKAIM, in ALMAGEST. It is home to many researchers and scholars, many of whom are SHAPERS, who devote their lives to studying the OTHERWORLD and its denizens. The pride of the institute is a large technarcane engine that allows shapers with an affinity for the otherworld to more easily make contact with the spirits that dwell there, via ASTRAL PROJECTION. The equipment is incredibly rare, expensive and is highly prized and is well-guarded by shapers and soldiers alike.

REPUBLIC WAR ACADEMY, the: Mil. Edu. Str. Military academy situated in the south of the ZOHELETHI BASIN in the south east of PARTHIS. It is the most prestigious military institution in the nation and the wealthiest and most influential PATRICIAN HOUSES send their children here to be educated in the ways of war. It also has a wing dedicated to selecting the best candidates from orphans across the Republic's territories, which has led to a fostered enmity between wealthy and poor students, with one trying to outdo the other.

REQUIESCA: Rel. Rul. Temple city in the north west of the UMBRA SOKHAR. It is a necropolis where the ribcages of the dead are interred in small shrines. In SOKHARAN religion, the ribcage is considered to be the vessel of the soul and it is kept intact as a means of protecting the soul, which is believed to dwell in the ribcage after mortal death. The necropolis is expansive and was a traditional resting place for the dead amongst the disparate settlements of the Umbra Sokhar, with families travelling for months to secure a final resting place for their departed. Requiesca is considered a holy place, where the otherworld is close to the material, making it a perfect spot for interment.

REQUNA: Set. Small city in the c of AHRISHEN, linking the major inland land trade-route of the GREY ROAD with the AHRISHENI WATERWAYS via the ARESHI canal⁽³⁾. It is known for its warehouses and caravanserais and canal docks (Pop. c. 17,000).

RESCISSIONISM: Phil. Soc. 'philosophical' movement that originated during the historical period known as the Technarcane Rescission, that emerged from recessions and hardships across the INNER SEA following the War of the Artifexes. The ideology eschews a reliance on technology, and Technarcana in particular, leading to its adherents being considered antiquarians and backwards. Though Rescissionism as an ideology died out by c. 3200 RM, there remain isolated pockets of followers who live in settlements in the hinterlands of civilised lands.

RESEBEK: Set. City in the far north of the VESPERTINE LEAGUE just a few miles south of the southernmost coast of the SEA OF ANIPTERRA, dating back to the early FIFTH AGE, when it was the capital of the ancient nation of LIN GOOL. It is known for the large HYPOGEAL COURT that remains beneath its central district, which once housed the government of Lin Gool in its subterranean amphitheatre, which was constructed in -760 RM. Today the old Hypogeal Court has been repurposed as a restaurant and theatre where the elite of Resebek meet (Pop. c. 33,200).

RESH: f. Myt. His. Per. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, a 2nd generation SCION and daughter of the scion KHAR'ILLAE. One of triplets (the others being AZZARA and CHYLE), she is only mentioned in passing once in the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN, leading some mythographers to believe the birth was apocryphal or misattributed. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

RESHKA: Set. City in the far south of AHRISHEN, in the region of the LEVANTINE. It forms part of a small trade network linking the east of LYRIDIA with the south of Ahrishen, and the north east of TAMAR (Pop. c. 14,000).

RESIDUAL DREAMS: see IMPRINT.

RESIDUAL MEMORIES: see IMPRINT.

RESILOS: Set. Fortified city in the north of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of SYRTIS^(1.). The city forms part of the GREAT ROAD though also maintains its own route east directly into SAUA across the HORSE GATE (Pop. c. 25,500).

RESIN, AANTH: Ele. A quick-hardening resin made by AANTHA and used in construction and the manufacture of tools and weapons. The resin is made in dedicated resin manufactories through a degenerate slave caste of aantha whose lives exist solely to produce the silk from which the resin is made, not unlike cattle in battery farms. Their bodies have changed through centuries of selective breeding and have distended stomachs and atrophied limbs, and are force-fed a diet rich in fats and proteins that are needed for the production of strong silk.

Aanth resin is common in N'RAKH, where it is used in the manufacture of structures, particularly military fortresses, where it is poured like concrete. It is also sold in RESIN MARKETS in J'THANA and BARATHEA^(1.), the latter of which also exports it to other human lands in the north as an exotic substance.

RESIN MARKET: Com. Relatively common in BARATHEA^(1.) and J'THANA, these markets specialise in selling AANTH RESIN goods imported from N'RAKH, originally manufactured through the unique organic process of the AANTHA that live there.

RESKOKH: Lak. Lake in the c south of PORPHYR.

RESOLUTION OF EARTH: Soc. Leg. Custom in regions in the north of CENTRAL LLACHATUL including SABIA, FARIS, KASPIA, and PERGOST, amongst others, where many quarrels and disputes are settled through a martial tradition where the involved parties use great mallets to shatter stones, with the person who first fails to break a stone being said to have lost the dispute.

The Resolution of Earth is seen as an impartial way of resolving simple quarrels – anything important would go to the standard legal channels, and it is expected that all participants accept the result and be respectful of the outcome.

RESPLENDANT ONE, the: Myt. His. Common epithet by which the DEMIURGE ALLAISHADA was once known.

RESS: Set. Minaret-city in the east of SAMMAEA, in the UHBATAQI peninsula^(L), in the north of the MARROWLANDS, in the north of QARALAM. The city was once a metropolis, though large parts of it are now deserted and ruined, following a large earthquake that wracked the region in c. 3570 RM, from which it never recovered. The city takes the form of a minaret around 600-feet high with a base of around 1-mile wide. It spirals up from a low round base, with loggias allowing light into the inner city. The lowest of the outer loggias were shops and businesses, including caravanserais serving merchants and travellers arriving to the city. Temples and noble palaces rested on top with common residences taking up the darker areas inside the structure and beneath it (where now-spent mines once branched out).

Vast wells watered the city and aqueducts branched out of the city like a spider's web, providing water to the thousands of square miles of fields that supplied the city with sustenance. With such adequate food-supplies, the city's population exploded and over time the old mines and crypts were converted into vaulted tunnels used to transport food and traffic, with subterranean chambers hollowed out of the rock, providing extra room for the lower-classes and slaves.

Little is known of the city, though it is believed that at the height of its power it was a major economic power across the Uhbataqi headland, though it rapidly became isolated as surrounding lands lessened in power and influence, leaving it greatly diminished over the past centuries (Pop. unknown).

RESTLESS CITY, the: see NIMMEA.

RESTOTH: Set. Fortified coastal city in the south of LIMOTH^(1.) on the island of ALETARA^(2.). The city is the main cultural and economic hub of the island, and though many other settlements can be found in Aletara, it is the largest and most influential (Pop. c. 33,000).

RESUSTA: Set. Settlement in the south of OPHIUSSA, on the fertile XEIA delta of the river MARAGA. Its main industry is agriculture, and the growing of legumes (Pop. c. 8,000).

RET AHK: Rui. Ancient city occupied now by the trade-town of RETHKA. It appeared in c. -500 as a small town around an oasis.

RETACHAN: Set. Settlement in the east of THUMAL, known for its crabbing fleet. The settlement was once part of the KORACHANI colony of AMONDOR (Pop. c. 17,500).

RETEMAA: Rui. Abandoned city in the far north of DURCHAA(I.). It was a thriving whaling station until it was destroyed by a landslide in 3882 RM. Some people still live there, struggling to eke out a living in their old homes, but most survivors spread along the coast, going to other settlements.

RETHAN: His. Ntn. Ancient FOURTH AGE civilisation on whose ruins the nations of AHRISHEN, the HARÉSHK and SAUA are partially built. Little is known of this civilisation, but for the majestic towers, pyramids and monuments they built, the ruins of which remain to this day, either abandoned or used as foundation for present-day cities and structures. The towers of ABERASH HATHAM are attributed to this culture. See Vol III: Extinct States.

RETHARTA: Set. Fortified settlement in the north west of THETIS. It is part of the trade-route west into KREM (Pop. c. 8,130).

RETHKA: Set. Known historically as RET AHK, this city is in the far west of ANUBIA, close to the border with MULCIBER. It is a merchant town that forms a part of the SALT ROAD, and is known to trade with the tribes of the GROWING MOUNTAINS.

The AVENTORS, a caste of ascetics, who would go on to become the rulers of EHBOT, originated in Rethka in c. 341 RM (Pop. c. 40,200).

RETHON KAEDE: m. Per. (B. 3969 RM) High-ranking member of the SOMNIARECHI ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION, where he serves as chief TECHNARCANIST, overseeing the use of technarcane engines to facilitate the use of ONEIROMANCY. His engineers are responsible for the maintenance and manufacture of the Order's unique equipment and weapons, such as REALITY SUITS and LUCID JEZAILS. He wields the bespoke technarcane blade, known as Dreamblade, that he crafted himself. It is capable of slicing through dreamscapes to reveal the MATERIAL PLANE beneath.

RETONA: Set. Small coastal city in the south east of THETIS overlooking the SEA OF HALDUA (Pop. c. 16,000).

RETTEN ONARAH: Myt. His. MESOCHTHON said to inhabit the ATRAMENTAL RICTUS in KHARKHARADONTIS. It is thought to be responsible for the majority of the ATRAMENTAL effects in the region. It is mentioned in PLAGI legends of the region, and is regarded as a foul deity by Kharkharadontis nomads. See Vol IV: the Mesochthons.

REUS: f. Myt. His. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, a SCION of the DEMIURGE ASHTERATH with the scion PATHEA. Abandoned by her father, she became very close with her mother. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

REVACHA: Set. Settlement in the c south west of ELEKHID (Pop. unknown).

REVAHAZ OTTUSARA VIII: (B. 3754 RM) Soc. Present paterfamilia of PATRICIAN HOUSE OTTUSARA and considered by most to be the wealthiest mortal in ELYDEN. He has prolonged his life well beyond its natural span through the use of technarcana and atramental procedures and is rarely seen outside his ancestral home – the fortress of Terama Una, in the northern foothills of the INNORADOS Mountains, in the c-south east of JURRAS⁽²⁾.

REVASOR: Geo. Mountain in the prefecture of EROSENEA^(1.) in the north of HOLOLACH^(1.), forming part of the TOLIASOR Mountain-range.

REVEKKO: Set. Small city in the c of SAUA, in the south of the FARAVARI Forest (Pop. c. 19,000).

REVENANT: Sup. Geo. In ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED regions in and around the ARID TRIPTYCH; a person brought back though 'natural' causes, without mortal influence. Such beings are uncommon, and it is thought that they are of similar origin to the ruler of SARASTRO, SATHEP THE RISEN.

REVENANT, AZAZEMI: Leg. Common folktale in AZAZEM that speaks of two revenants – the Northern Revenant and the Southern Revenant – in what is likely a variant of the wider NORTHERN AND SOUTHERN PALADIN legend that is common around the Inner Sea.

Brothers, they were driven apart by their love of the same woman. The Northern Revenant eventually married the woman, embittering his brother, who sought him out across Azazem, until he found him in a town just south of the CHACTHORNYS Mountains, attacking him. The Southern Revenant killed his brother but later died alone of his wounds, and the spirits of the two are said to haunt the region to this day, seeking their love. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

REVENANT'S TOMB: Mys. Rui. Ancient stone cairn in the north east of TEMUJA, pre-dating the solidification of the Temujan tribes. The cairn is around 20-feet wide and mostly overgrown with grasses and tough shrubs, with the corroded remains of old skulls, weapons and shields, rotting at its base, half-buried. Whatever history is tied to this place is unknown, yet despite this, the place is revered as a mystical place by those who come across it.

REVOLVER: Tec. A type of repeating 'GUN with at least one barrel and a revolving cylinder with multiple chambers.

REXCANIS: 1. Fau. Apex predator; very large mastiff, native to the lands surrounding the MORTAR forest of northern LYRIDIA and southern AHRISHEN. With the KORACHANI EMPIRE'S exploitation of the forest during its occupation of the area, individual creatures were captured and bred, often using technarcane methods (effectively turning them into UMBRANS and HAGHORIM), and they became relatively common around the empire, mostly as guard creatures of the affluent or in rural areas. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

2. also 'the King of Dogs'. Ast. Con. Constellation along the equator. See Vol II: Constellations.

REXIMAND PROLGAPEA: m. Pol. Mil. His. Per. (B. 2741 – D. 2904 RM) the first PROLGAPEAN emperor of SIMBARA, who was declared emperor in 2789 RM after over a decade of manipulating BALLOT COUNTS, ARCHDUKES and laws to give him more power as MARSHAL-ELECT. A shrewd politician whose enemies were weary of his silver tongue, and whose followers practically worshipped him, he not only regrouped an ailing Simbara following the devastating effects of the SHERRIAN CIVIL WAR, but saw her rise to a power and influence the nation had never felt before.

He rose to prominence during the civil war, helping the Simbaran armies gain the upper hand over the SHERRI rebellion. Ever-aware of the sheer power of public opinion and perception, he married the Lady BELLREAVA SIMAR in 2793 RM following two years of very public courtship, where every appearance and sighting they made was orchestrated thusly to elicit the best possible reaction. The two lived a fairy tale lives (at least on the surface), siring nine children who would all go on to become beloved champions, darlings, and luminaries in their own rights.

Reximand crafted a rock-solid foundation that his descendants would for the most part reinforce over the next millennium, creating what is believed to be the most beloved ruling household across all of ELYDEN throughout the FIFTH AGE, without the need for coercion, bloodshed or tyrannical laws.

Together he and his wife shepherded Simbara from the darkness of the sherrian civil war into an age of enlightenment, wealth and power that was only matched during their time by the KORACHANI EMPIRE far to the north. The two are remembered today as the PROLGAPEAN HOST, and their lives and rule are celebrated every springtime, when Simbara is bedecked in white, gold and crimson pennants and banners – their dynastic colours.

REYE: Set. Coastal city in the east of ROMOREA^(2.), overlooking the Sea of HASAAZ ARAAT. It is a port city, where coal mined in the east is loaded onto ships and exported to other nations. It is known for its gangs, whose activities dominate the waterfront (Pop. c. 45,000).

REYKWON: Set. City in the south of CUTH, along the south western-face of the HAMMINGHENG peninsula. It is home to a large part of the Cuthi navy, and patrols are launched south of there to combat the influence of the PARTHISAN colony of NISSA (Pop. c. 48,750).

REZERED'S THYME: Flo. Woody desert herb common to the south of the EHRENSIAN COAST that is common in KARGAMA, ESHIR, and the east of the VESPERTINE LEAGUE. It is known for its vibrant purple flowers and its distinctive smell. Rezered's Thyme grows larger than other varieties of thyme, with individual bushes reaching 2-3-ft. in height. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

RGLLAUR: Rvr. River in the c west of CHEIRA, flowing east for 875-miles from various sources before meeting up with its parent, the river YAHNOTH PHTHAN.

RGWEROTHA: Geo. Coastal mountains in the north east of CYHLAGHARR. It is known for its many coastal towers that look out to the north east, most of which are now in ruin, no longer needed.

RHAD: Set. City in the north west of CHEIRA (Pop. unknown).

RHADAMANTHOUS: (18 ,900-ft.) Geo. Sulphuric volcano in the north of ETUA, in the south eastern face of the ABOSHATHOT Mountains. It is known for its many caves and yellow sulphur fields that are mined by hand by the people of ICTERA. The process is dangerous and many die extracting the sulphur, either due to noxious gasses, cave-ins or generally bad working conditions.

RHAE: Rr. River in the north west of KORACHAN, flowing south for 60-miles from sources in the RHAECHA Mountains before meeting its parent, the river PHAIA.

RHAECAS: 1. Geo. One of two ridges, the other being THAUMAS, forming a crater around lake ATHOS in western PELASGOS.

2. Set. Settlement in the north west of PELASGOS (Pop. 3,800).

RHAECHA: Geo. High, relatively young mountain-range (produced by ancient subductions of the SAMMAEAN and LLACHATULAN plates) along the northern border of KORACHAN, running for over 1,000-miles, where it joins in the east with the shale mountain of ADALLA. Despite the ATRAMENTAL TAINT that has gripped the mountain, they are still regarded as a thing of natural beauty (perhaps because of, rather than in spite of the effects of the ATRAMENTA there) and have been the subject of many Korachani artworks.

The $\underline{\text{RHAECHA}}$ Mountain are also postulated by historians to be the ancestral homeland of the $\underline{\text{DVERGAI}}$, and the shattered remains of what some believe to be dvergai tombs and temples to the $\underline{\text{DEMIURGE}}$ $\underline{\text{SYNCHTHONITH}}$ have been unearthed in its western reaches.

RHAECHA NU: Geo. Pass through the RHAECHA Mountains linking the south of CHTHYRID with the north of KORACHAN.

RHAECHII: Plr. 'Rhaechiin'. Mil. Rnk. KORACHANI standing troops trained in mountain and high-altitude warfare. Trained in the RHAECHA Mountains (after which they are named), they are employed in various theatres of war where fighting in mountainous and difficult terrain is expected. They are also skilled in fighting dvergai, specifically the forces of CHTHYRID, with whom border clashes are common.

RHAETORIA: Set. Settlement in the south of ALMAGEST. It is known for its fine watchmaking (Pop. c. 8,000).

RHAMIA: 1. also 'the Loose Kingdoms'. Ntn. Standing between the VARRACHON and KARAEHLA Mountains in CENTRAL LLACHATUL, Rhamia was originally part of expansive woodlands of which THE OLD FOREST is the largest extant remnant, and is still home to flora and fauna that originated in those woodlands.

Originally populated by people indigenous to the Old Forest, Rhamia has since seen KORACHANI colonists invade it in 213 RM to exploit its natural resources. Intending on using it as a base for CRUSADES against AHRISHEN, they remained there until 1017 RM, when they abandoned the region suddenly, leaving PATRICIAN HOUSES Rhamia^(2,) (after which the region was named) to oversee Korachani fortresses there. The populace was left to struggle for itself, though Korachan would periodically use its territories to mount invasions north.

The region has struggled with pervasive ATRAMENTAL TAINT for millennia, and birth defects are also common, reaching their peak in around 2100 RM, leading to the creation of a caste known as PURITANS, who oversee births, executing those deemed too corrupted.

A caste FIRMAMENTISTS called CAZHANS were eventually successful in abating the growing Atramental threat and became prestigious, usurping the Rhamian monarchy in 2239 RM, starting a new period of scientific thinking and harsh laws that allowed Rhamia to survive.

However, the taint continued to spread and over the 3rd Millennium RM, many of its cities became isolated, prohibiting regular travel between them. In 2823 RM a trio of Firmamentists travelled to the TOWER OF

JARAMORA, where they were able to call upon the Firmament to ward Rhamia. Two died from their efforts, and though Rhamia remained tainted, the spread of the taint was greatly lessened, allowing people to venture forth again, though they remained notoriously xenophobic and, influenced by their increasingly radicalised religion, the borders of Rhamia were closed to outsiders in around 3100 RM. Today the privilege of breeding is bestowed upon those with untainted lineages – these so-called 'perfects' are the new nobility and guard their purity fiercely.

For centuries Rhamia was a ghost, with no one entering and no one leaving, until in 3642 RM, when Korachani envoys seeking the use of its harbours forced their entry, finding a deserted land with settlements hidden behind monolithic concrete walls. The high-Consulite travelled there the next year and was denied entry, prompting Korachan to declare war, taking the region in a matter of months.

Atramental research facilities were established across Rhamia, and SIPHON ENGINES were installed in its cities to nullify the Atramental taint and its harbour were renovated and fortified, becoming house to a new fleet of ships that preyed on the Ahrisheni coast. The populace was betrayed, enslaved in manufactories that appeared in FASCIA and surrounding cities.

In 4006 RM, Rhamia was abandoned to the INTERREGES after years of waning fortunes. They curated a local government with which they rule in a joint bipartisan government. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

2. Pol. Soc. PATRICIAN HOUSE with a presence in the east of the INNER SEA REGION. Having originated as small merchant family in the city-state of ZEPHANICHAN in the nascent KORACHAN, it grew in power and influence with the rise of power of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR. In 213 RM it was chosen to head the colonisation of south east of the Old forest, in what is today known as Rhamia^(1.).

The house fractured during the original occupation of Rhamia, prior to 1017 RM, with part of the house remaining in Rhamia, becoming more insular, with the rest continuing its mercantile tradition, coming to control many trade posts and markets along the RED ROUTE, making it one of the richest Patrician Houses in the KORACHANI EMPIRE today. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

RHAMO, THE VULTURE: Mys. Rel. In TEMUJAN SPIRITUALISM, the TUTELARY SPIRIT entrusted with protection of the mortal VESSEL (the skeleton). Vultures remove the flesh from corpses, so that the skeleton can be truly free of its constraints. Because of this, zombies are seen as evil creatures, because they bind the flesh to the vessel, preventing it from completing the cycle of life, where it should become one with the soil. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

RHAROU KHORA: Set. Conurbation and surrounding farmlands in the south west of PARAIYA, in the south west of BELLN. It is a major agricultural centre (Pop. c. 14,200).

RHAS: Rvr. River in the north east of RHAMIA, flowing for 220-miles from sources in the KARAEHLA Mountains into its parent, the river NALESH.

RHATHYMIA: Set. Small city in the c south west of ANANTHUL (Pop. c. 19,000).

RHAUBATAR: Set. Coastal city in the far north east of VÂRR, scant miles from the border with MADOUR. The city is known for its shipyards (Pop. c. 26,000).

RHAV: Set. Small city and surrounding farmsteads spread over a wide area in the c N of JURRAS⁽²⁾. Its main industry is the cultivation of grapes for wine production and it is controlled by PATRICIAN HOUSE SYNOD⁽²⁾ (Pop. c. 12,000).

RHAZES: 1. FOURTH AGE GNOTH i philosopher.

2. Set. Coastal city in the c-south east of GNOTH known for its high towers and FIRMAMENTAL research. It forms a part of THE WAY trade-route (Pop. c. 32,000).

RHEA: Dem. 'Rhean'. Ntn. Nation situated in the far south east of LLACHATUL, above IACIO and SURUTUR, and south west of the RTHEI desert. Rhea is a tropical region that owes its roots to the ancient kingdom of ARRETOY, which was once united with KARKAUTH, to the west, which since gave rise to the DOMINION OF CUTH. It is a centre of aluminium production and refining. Despite this it is still a rising industrial power, and most of its aluminium production is geared towards export to the west, where it is in high demand for engineering projects.

The country is ruled by a magocracy known as the COURT OF DREAMS, which has ruled Rhea since 3242 RM, though it has existed as a secret society for close to a thousand years acting on behalf of shapers who have had a history of harsh treatment there in the past. The arrival of the HIEROMONARCHS in Rhea in 3192 RM led to the removal of the ancient AURADIAN DYNASTY from power, closing FIRMAMENTAL colleges, which led to the Court of Dreams taking up arms against them, leading to their ousting of the Hieromonarchs, and the fracture of Rhea in two – with the south west becoming a new state, known as Iacio, ruled by the Hieromonarchs.

Despite their expulsion from Rhea, the religion that the Hieromonarchs brought with them – the sun-cult of \underline{SAEWAL} – remained firmly-embedded in Rhean culture and is a major religion there to this day. Despite this, the Court of Dreams allows all religions to be worshipped, and many of its cities, most notable amongst them $\underline{ZARATABA}$, are havens to minorities and immigrants fleeing persecution – from the $\underline{KORACHANI\ EMPIRE}$ in the west, to the $\underline{PANTHEON\ ISLES}$ in the east. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

RHEAN: Lan. Language spoken in RHEA. See Vol II: Languages.

RHEAN, ANCIENT: Lan. Language spoken in TETHYSIA. It is an older form of the RHEAN language spoken in present-day RHEA, and was brought to Tethysia by the PROPHET KATHISIS and his followers in 1592 RM

It is a religious language, largely spoken during rituals of the KATHISIS religion, which explains why it has not changed much in two millennia. See Vol II: Languages.

RHEDEA: Set. Coastal settlement in the south east of GIBEAH (Pop. c. 4.800).

RHEGA: Pol. Soc. Dominant PATRICIAN HOUSE in the city of DEOCHAN in KORACHAN, which controls most of the shipyards and land in the region. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

RHEGIA: Pol. Prefecture in MHAROKK.

RHEISZH: Set. Fortified settlement in the south east of KHALHAT, within the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region of the DAENED SULRACH^(1.). It is a major source of UMBRA for the nation, which is refined and used in the manufacture of ITERANTS and the lifeless troops of the PORCELAIN PHALANX. Access into the city is restricted and outsiders are forbidden from entering (Pop. unknown).

RHEM TA': Set. KHULLAN colony on the island of REDDIN. Founded in c. 3245 RM to take advantage of the many creatures that sheltered on the island, it has since dwindled and remains as little more than a port, linking the island to the mainland (Pop. c. 7,000).

RHIGA: Set. Small city in the west of KASPIA (Pop. c. 14,200).

RHINEMAIDEN: lit. 'water princess'. Mys. In many cultures of THE OLD FOREST, particularly those around the KERDA river. The Rhinemaiden is a shamanic figure that lives apart from her community, her life solitary, devoted to contemplation and reverence of the water spirits. Rhinemaidens are typically SHAPERS with SHAMANISTIC training

RHINOCOLOURA: Dem. 'Rhinocolouran'. Ntn. Nation situated in the c north east of SAMMAEA, nestled between the wasteland of the UMBRA SOKHAR and the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER, Rhinocoloura occupies a 1,900-mile stretch of the mighty river SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾. Half of its territories are dominated by arid mountains, badlands and highlands, and the rest is comprised of the fertile drainage valleys of the Shibboleth, where most settlements are located.

The KHANATE^(2.) of Rhinocoloura was established in 3618 RM, following the appearance of the red-skinned Khan. This came at the end of a 14-year campaign that swept across the region from west to east, ending with the successful siege of the city of SARDONYX, which remains the capital and seat of the Khanate to this day.

Rhinocolouran borders stabilised somewhat following Illaregh Khan's death of natural causes in 3712 RM, though it was able to absorb <a href="https://example.com/eth-shape-nt fate for the marching armies of the Khanate. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

RHIS: Rvr. River in the east of TEMUJA flowing for 250-miles south into lake KHASGA AUR.

RHITHASOL: Geo. Expansive mushroom-shaped rock-formation in peaks in the south of RHINOCOLOURA.

RHODAN: His. Geo. Historical region in the south east of KHARKHARADONTIS, in what is now occupied by the CAMBIUM forest. The ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR travelled through this land during his ITINERARY, encountering REJHELLE OF RHODAN, who became a consort and guide.

RHODANNE, the: see REJHELLE OF RHODAN.

RHODANNE HEART, the: Int. Rel. Obj. The mummified heart of REJHELLE OF RHODAN – a historical and religious figure who guided the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR during his legendary ITINERARY and who was prophesised by the SCRIPTURE OF SHADOW to be his consort and eventual wife and mother to his children.

The religious artefact dates back to c. 480 RM, when it was first described by religious scholars in $\underline{\text{KHADON}}$. At that point it was a blackened mass of desiccated flesh, its original function unknown to anyone without prior knowledge of the, nestled in a weathered hardwood box of unknown providence.

It was later placed in a reliquary, where it remained on display in a church for centuries. In 713 RM QORILIE OF NEGRED received visions of the heart and gained a massed following. Later that year she made a short pilgrimage to the church where it was held, where she began proselytising. The Church of the Undying Machine got wind of this and saw her growing popularity, and made her a figurehead of the church in Khadon. She travelled across Korachan with the Heart and in 715 RM undertook the Shadow March, attracting thousands of followers.

The Heart travelled across Korachan as a relic for many years after Qorilie's death and later canonisation, where it was used to inspire people to undertake the March. It finally settled down in AGLAIA^(2.) in 822 RM where it remained on display in the BASILICA OF ST. MALICHAR RESURRECTED until 1004 RM, after which it was lost, possibly stolen. Church and INQUISITION agents spent decades searching for it, to no avail, and it was declared lost by c. 1030 RM.

The Heart resurfaced in ONORTI in 1438 RM, after having been in possession of a PATRICIAN HOUSE for around 2 centuries, and was donated to the Church of the Undying Machine in ALMAGEST, where it became a fixture of the Basilica of St. Jostan (later renamed the BASILICA OF THE RHODANNE HEART) from 1438 to 2884 RM, after which it was moved to the KINGDOM OF THE HOLY LAND OF KHARKHARADONTIS, where it became a place of pilgrimage to those undertaking the Shadow March into KHARKHARADONTIS. The relic was moved back to LLACHATUL in 3062 RM following the collapse of the Kingdom, where it remained in the city of BAAYN in LAASKHA until its last recorded mention in 3376 RM, after which its whereabouts were lost. Today it remains sought-after by various religious groups, including the Almagesti Temple and the Korachani Church of the Undying Machine, both of which claim it as their own.

RHODANNE HEART, BASILICA OF THE: Rel. Str. BASILICA of the ALMAGESTI TEMPLE in the city of ONORTI, in ALMAGEST. It was the home to the RHODANNE HEART relic between 1438 to 2884 RM, after which it was moved to the KINGDOM OF THE HOLY LAND OF KHARKHARADONTIS.

RHODEN: Set. Small city in the c of LOEGRESS^(1.), located in the CANTICATONA Mountains Its main industry is copper mining, with gold mining as a by-product (Pop. c. 14,000).

RHOSS: Set. Settlement in the c east of SAGITTARIA. Its main industry is the production of food for the much larger city of SABBROS (Pop. c. 4.800).

RHOZHADEN: also 'Warlord Rhozhaden' (B. 3923 RM). Pol. Present ruler and head of the People's Republic of ZHARIAH⁽²⁾. He rose to power in a nation divided by the results of the political and social revolution of 3913 RM that had successfully ejected the ROYAL HOUSE OF HINOL.

He emerged in the south east of Zhariah, in the region of KUIASH in 3951 RM, uniting its people. His influence spread across Zhariah over the next years, overtaking other leaders, until in 3954 RM he declared himself Warlord of Zhariah, taking control of the city of BHAL ZHARIAH later the same year.

He was quick to act, and within a year had plotted all of the nation, marking all areas that were of economic and industrial importance, dividing them amongst his lieutenants to develop and exploit. Within a decade the nation had become completely industrialised, with mines, quarries and clearcutting of its forests becoming common. What resources were not consumed by its many manufactories were sold on to nations around the ETAGIRIA, making him incredibly wealthy. Some areas, including his homeland of Kuiash have since become industrial wastelands, much to the dismay of his people, whose cries go unheard.

He demands nothing but the utmost control over his people, and his government takes great pains to control what contact its people have with the outside world, abolishing passports and foreign travel when not economically essential.

He is consumed with a hatred for the old house of House of Hinol despite being born a decade after its exile from Zhariah. He founded various military traditions that train special forces whose task is to search for remnants of the Royal House, particularly those who settled in MALAN, which became political targets.

Rhozhaden is tyrannical and his people are treated as little more than another resource to be exploited, and though they hate him, fear of the consequence of speaking out of turn keeps them in line.

RHSHI EMPIRE: His. Nm. Ancient THIRD AGE empire that is believed to have exhausted in the west of extant LLACHATUL, with territories expanding across the sea to north western SAMMAEA. It is only known of through ancient anecdotal FOURTH AGE accounts, and it was already ancient and half-forgotten to them. Of note are the so-called RHSHI MEDALLIONS — a series of powerful artefacts that are more commonly mentioned in ancient texts. See Vol III: Extinct States.

RHSHI MEDALLIONS: Int. His. Sup. Obj. Ancient magickal objects believed to have been produced by the RHSHI EMPIRE at the height of its dominion in the THIRD AGE. There is scant physical proof for their existence though they are mentioned in various FOURTH AGE documents, where they are invariably named as magickal items of immeasurable power bestowed upon rulers of Rhshi provinces to cement their dominion.

Various archaeological artefacts of indeterminate nature that have been unearthed in the Fourth and Fifth Ages have been called Rhshi Medallions, though this attribution is largely conjectural, designed to garner interest and funding for future expeditions rather than out of any desire for historical authenticity.

RHUDASHA: Set. Settlement in the of GIBEAH (Pop. unknown).

RHUETH: Mil. Str. One of two major fortifications in the south west of THE OLD FOREST, forming the eastern-most part of the RITHAHAN defensive lines.

RI BASETH: Ind Set. Mining settlement in the east of THETIS. Its main industry is the mining of VIRGIN STONE (Pop. c. 7,300).

RI-MENEH: f. Pol. Per. (B. 2989 – D. 3385 RM) PHAROANT of KHAMID, who inherited an ailing kingdom from her father KHAKNUD. Like her father, she was and not well-loved, and her reign saw unrest grow in many districts and her lack of action saw public opinion continue to wane. In 3017 RM she visited the KORACHANI embassy in TEIRA and later travelled to KHADON, where she remained for some months. She eventually returned to Khamid, finding it in a state of chaos. Soon after, Imperial diplomats followed, who she elevated to positions of power within her court. Over the next years these foreigners increased until by 3021 RM all her advisors and councillors were of Korachani blood. A great ceremony later that same year cemented the empire's claim in Khamid, where she married a Korachani 'prince' (now thought to have been a member of THE SEVEN), effectively handing over Khamid to Korachan.

Following this, she became a slave to UMBRA, prolonging her life through its use, though at the expense of her will and sanity. She died of broken mind in 3385 RM after close to four centuries of rule as regent.

RIADHAN: Set. Small fortified coastal city in the south east of TAHALL. It was funding in 3932 RM and its main industry is repairing ships that pass through the GATE OF EREBETH. Industry is booming and the city will rapidly reach a far larger size (Pop. c. 20,000).

RIAL: Set. Fortified settlement in the far west of BANT, in the east of SAMMAEA (Pop. 10,000).

RIATA: Rvr. River in the emirate of DEITHO^(1.) in the c west of LIMOTH^(1.), flowing south for 395-miles from sources in KOTHA ICHOLLIGHA Mountains, before meeting its parent, the river ATROTHA^(1.).

RIBAOR: Set. Settlement in the north east of AETHIOS, along the course of the river ESTARATTI. It is known for its cattle ranches (Pop. c. 10,000).

RIBSHAN: For. Tropical forest region in the south of KHITAI, known for its bald cypresses and other flora and fauna that are adapted to the salty aquatic nature of the region. NAGAS are known to dwell in this region, making it dangerous to mortals.

RICFREID: 1. m. Oth. Leg His. Per. Legendary character in the myths of KOMMEA who lies at the centre of various prophecies believed to date back to the early FIFTH AGE.

Believed to be a SCION of indeterminate origins, he will arrive on the shores of northern Kommea astride a grey steed and will march across the nation, gathering followers in his wake and fighting decriers. He will presage a terrible storm, leading the people to safety and will perform other miraculous deeds to further the agenda of the Kommean people.

In c. 3900 RM an individual matching the general description of Ricfreid appeared on a pale horse in the north of Kommea. He moved slowly south over the next decade, massing followers and fighting disbelievers. Word of his coming spread and he was soon elevated to a coveted status that gave him great privilege and comfort, essentially turning him into a living deity and figurehead of the entire nation.

But over the years various events that were later interpreted to be part of the greater suite of prophecies surrounding the legendary figure came and went without him having any bearing on them and opinion on him soured and he began to lose followers. By 3921 RM he'd been utterly denounced and was exiled, finding shelter in the city of CALBIA^(2.), where he eventually established a new state.

Following these events, the people of Kommea have soured on the idea of the prophecy, with younger generations paying it little heed.

2. also 'the Hollow Prince'. m. His. Pol. Per. (B. c. 3860 RM) SCION of indeterminate origins and present ruler of the small kingdom of CALBIA^(1,). He is considered a fraud and a charlatan in KOMMEA, where he came to prominence in c. 3900 RM posing as the true Ricfreid^(1,), before being exiled for his lies. He fled to the city of Calbia^(2,), which in 3946 RM was excommunicated from Kommea by religious decree, allowing him to found a new state centred around the city without opposition.

Over time the people of Calbia became fanatically reverent of him even as the incredulity of the rest of Kommea increased, leading to the two states becoming culturally opposed of each other.

He rules the kingdom of Calbia to this day as its autocratic ruler, enjoying a life of luxury amid the adulation of its people.

RICHAA: Set. Small fortified city in the c of DURCHAA^(1.). It originated as a series of fortifications guarding the main access into the city of Durchaa^(2.), though a settlement later appeared around the fortifications following the independence of Durchaa, growing steadily since then (Pop. c. 31,000).

RICKETS: Med. Bone disease common amongst the lower classes, particularly work-slaves who live their entire lives in the manufactories around the INNER SEA.

RIDA: Set. Settlement in the c east of VENTHIR (Pop. c. 10,000).

RIDAREN: Mil. Str. Fortress in the west of AHRISHEN, overlooking the SEA OF PYREA. The fort originated in c. 1800 RM as an island-fortress, before the diminishing of the Sea of Pyrea and DEMERAL, and flourished following the island it was on became landlocked in c 3600 RM.

RIDDA: Rui. City in the c of KARAKHAS destroyed and buried in ash in c. 2000 RM following the last recorded eruption of MT. OROROTH. It was later abandoned.

RIDDAS: Geo. Island off the eastern coast of ATARAXIA. It was known for a large ancient tower that once stood there, though the tower has long since disappeared, and few now live who know of it.

RIDORAN: Rui. KARTHANI ruin a few miles north of the BAY OF BYSAMMA. It is thought to have been a major harbour in the latter days of the Karthani empire in the FOURTH AGE.

RIEAK: Set. Coastal settlement in the south of THETIS, overlooking the bay of RIEHEL: Rvr. Major river in the c west of GNOTH, flowing south for 910-miles from sources in the VAGNOSTAN Mountains and the SOLUN HIGHLANDS before meetings its parent, the river MARAGA.

RIFFAS: Set. Small fortified city in the x of the tribe of TATRAS, in the c south of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 16,000).

RIG: Lan. Tec. Common name for TECHNARCANE vehicles or equipment that require piloting or jockeying (see RIG JOCKEY).

RIG JOCKEY: Rnk. Tec. Common name for the pilots of technarcane vehicles and RIGS. It is typical for them to interface with these machines through the use of UMBILICALS that connect to OCCLUSIONS embedded in their skin and flesh.

RIGAMAFAR: Ser. Coastal city in the west of Abattur. It is known for its large port, where most distant goods from the north of Central Llachatul make it into the nation, via established sea routes (Pop. c. 46,200).

RIGETEAS: Set. Major city in the c north east of TISARA, dominating the flow of the river ACIONNA for many miles up and downstream. Its main industry is the production of textiles from wool and linen sourced locally and from surrounding nations.

Its manufactories are monolithic and responsible for most of the textile production in the nation, and much of their output is exported across Llachatul and Meniscea at great profit. The manufactories make use of gigantic waterwheels to power their mills, and hundreds of them can be seen along the course of Acionna in the environs of the city (Pop. c. 1,205,000).

RIGOURRA: Set. Settlement in the east of KASPIA, in the far east of the HRIMA Mountains. The surrounding land is very rocky (Pop. c. 7,300).

RIHAB: Mil. Str. Coastal fortress in the north west of VENTHIR. It was once a major fortress, defending the entrance into the BAY OF DAVKA. Following the wane of industries in the area, the fort was allowed to fall into disrepair and is now manned by a skeleton crew.

RIHAL: Lak. Lake in c SARASTRO, forming part of the course of the river LABAON.

RILLATAIA: also, 'the Shale Mountains'. Geo. Jagged Mountain-chain dominating the c and north west of KHITAI. It is ancient and grey, known for its perilous scree slopes, rendering them difficult to traverse.

RIMA: Set. Major city in the c north west of KASPIA, along the eastern bank of the river AVERNA. It is the termination of the KASPIAN leg of the GÂTHAN ROAD (Pop. c. 40,000).

RIMA, the: Geo. Impact crater rim dominating part of the eastern VENTHIRI coastline, measuring around 85-miles wide. During the time of the KORACHANI EMPIRE'S tenure in Venthir, the region enjoyed a prosperous trade in ADAMANTINE, though reserves were already dwindling c. 1500 RM, and most mines were abandoned by 2000 RM, leaving the region largely deserted.

RIMASAT: Set. Settlement in the c north of the tribe of HAVATH in the far south east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 8,000).

RIMONAR: Set. City in the c south east of AMMESH. It forms a part of the NACRE ROAD trade route and has many merchants passing through it. Much of the city is built over the northernmost reaches of lake IKARA, either on large stilts or stone vaults, beneath which the waters of river EKYANTI still flow (Pop. c. 47,600).

RIMSFOLD: Geo. Common name in Temuja for the western BORDER MOUNTAINS, otherwise known as the ENEÁRHI.

RINNETH: 1. Geo. Island off the south eastern coast of LIMOTH⁽¹⁾. It is home to a large fortress operated by combined forces owing fealty to the MYMEREAN ACCORDS, whose vessels patrol the seas east of EASTERN LLACHATUL against SLAVERS and pirates.

2. Mil. Str. Major coastal fortress and harbour, and forward base operated by combined forces of the MYMEREAN ACCORDS, whose ships patrol the surrounding waters against piracy and SLAVERY. The fortress was constructed in c. 3540 RM following the TETHYSIAN withdrawal from the Mymerean Accords to aid in the defence of the $\underline{\text{KRYMEAN SEA}}$ and surrounding waters.

RIPAA: Sea. Bay in the north of SAMMAEA, to the north east of the IGUZZEN lagoon, off the western-coast of KAZZAR^(2.).

RIPARIS: Rvr. River in VAALK flowing for 450-miles north east from its source in the ARIS Mountains, before emptying into the INNER SEA.

RIPHAEA: Geo. Mountain in the south east of PARAIYA, forming a natural border with the UMBRA SOKHAR wastes. Its face is a desiccated monument to all that is dead – its black peaks and cliffs riddled with the fossils of abominations from past ages. The shells of ancient citadels dot its crags, hidden from the world, most famous of which is the TOWER OF TARB.

RIS: Geo. Major island off the northern coast of VECTIS in the SEA OF SIPARIA that is home to many LARISHI⁽²⁾ sea forts, many of which are now decommissioned and lying in ruins, far from the coast. It was strategically important to the Larishi navy.

RISA: Set. Settlement in the east of ERET⁽²⁾ along the course of the river EMPUSA⁽¹⁾, known for its reed gatherers (Pop. c. 5,000).

RISAYE: Geo. Mountain pass across the DHAKALL Mountains in the c of TAHALL.

RISEI: Fau. Parasitic creatures that subsist on spirits while they are still tethered to the VESSEL on the MATERIAL PLANE. They grant their hosts myriad abilities in return for the souls, though once the parasite leaves, the host is left broken and hollow.

They are descendants of ancient diminutive primates that subsisted on SOULSTONES, and are native to inland areas of SAMMAEA, and are only rarely encountered by mortals. See Vol II: Classifications and Taxonomy of Life.

RISENBLADE, the: (B. c. 3667 RM) also Okaadur Valda. Mar. Leg. VAALKAN champion who died fighting in the KORACHANI civil war of 3705 RM. He was revived at the behest of SATHEP THE RISEN through TECHNARCANE means to be used as a tool of Vaalkan propaganda and is considered a cultural hero there.

His name refers to a sword of Vaalkan legend, known as HAALUANKA, which was purported to make its wielder invulnerable. The Risenblade has been killed more than once since his rebirth, though was ranted life anew though the arts of FLESHWRIGHTING and technarcane birthing engines.

RISLAY: Set. Major coastal city in the north east of DHA NAR. It is a major stop along the BROKERS' ROAD trade route (Pop. c. 83,000).

RISUR: Set. Conurbation made up of five SOULSTONE quarries surrounding a fortified settlement in the east of the TEMPLAR STATES, in the north of the region of TRISKETHIA (Pop. c. 5,000).

RITE OF MORTIFICATION: Soc. Rel. Ritual within the SARAGOSI SECT OF THE CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. The religion sees carnal temptations as amongst the greatest of sins, and requires its followers to meditate as a means of combating such temptations. The analogy of the strength and stoic resilience of the machine is often used in describing this. In effect the rite is little more than a daily time of meditation, set by the individual that must be adhered to as much as possible. In it the individual reflects on their actions, chastising themselves for moments of weakness and offering thanks for their vigilance against temptation.

So great does the need of mortification become that some worshippers form into illegal groups that worship together in secret (religious worship is only allowed in SARAGOS in the privacy of one's home).

In some cases, the Rite of Mortification can become taken to extremes, with individuals flagellating themselves. This is discouraged and those proven to be mutilating themselves in this way are incarcerated in state-controlled asylums.

RITE OF SHER: Soc. A COMING-OF-AGE RITUAL in SHAZGIN in which children who have experienced their first menarche or spermarche are anointed by priests in communal granary forts (known as SHER DHIA). Following this the children are considered to be adults and have their heads shaved, keeping them shaved for their entire lives.

Hair growth is considered unclean and uncouth, and prisoners are branded on their scalps upon commencement of their incarceration and their hair is allowed to grow long. Following their release, they have the option of shaving their head, exposing the brand, or keeping their hair long, which is its own stigma.

RITE OF THE VOLUTE: Soc. COMING-OF-AGE RITUAL undertaken by the female offspring of HOUSEHOLD MATRIARCHS in NAARETH once yearly. Overseen by the household Matriarch, willing virgins that have come of age (16-years) are assembled before the Matriarch and raped by the household temple's HIERODULE (usually the life-mate of the Matriarch).

Those deemed weak become slaves to THE VOLUTE^(2.), and their eventual children are sacrificed to it. Those who show their strength and pass the test become MATRIDULES (citizens of Naareth) or KNAVES, serving Naareth as holy warriors. Both positions are highly regarded in Naarethi culture. In turn their children become eligible to undertake the Rite of the Volute.

RITHAHAN: Mil. Str. Defensive fortifications stretching for over 160-miles in the south west of THE OLD FOREST. They were constructed to defend against the worst of KORACHANI predations, they remain now as a deterrent to a fragmented foe.

RITUAL OF BECOMING: Soc. Common rite of passage amongst many tribes of THE OLD FOREST, taking many different forms depending on culture. Usually celebrated around the 14th year of life (many peoples of the Old Forest do not keep track of their age, so this is a rough estimate).

RITUAL OF SKULLS: Rel. Soc. Due to overpopulation and waning food supplies, the bodies of the dead in KORACHAN are valuable resources and are processed into DROSS – a slurry that makes up the main food source of the lower classes. However, its culture and religion require a physical relic of the dead to be revered.

As a result of this, the skulls of the dead are not processed alongside the bodies, and following death, are prepared and stripped of their flesh and etched in epithets and details of the person they once belonged to, and either placed inside family shrines or expansive mortuary towers and adorned with prayers on scraps of paper and jewellery by those who can afford it. During religious festivals these skulls are taken from their resting places and taken on processions in which the names of the dead are recited by church fanatics. The skulls are carried above the heads of their descendants, facing south towards the SEPULCHRAL PALACE.

RITUAL CIRCLE: Sup. Arc. Stone circles used in ancient neolithic rituals in present-day KOMMEA. The circles are located on FIRMAMENTAL LEY lines, and many have since been destroyed, firmamental structures rising in their place over time.

RIVENURR: Mil. Str. Pair of coastal fortifications in the north of GREST(1.) in the island-continent of BROR(1.). Though modern in construction they borrow from ancient designs, and take the form of large reinforced concrete colossi with head-like bunkers. They stand around 200-ft. tall and serve as lookout posts and will fire on non Grestin vessels that continue south from the SEA OF RAETUMA towards the entrance into the SEA OF RATASHAH.

RIVER OF SOULS: see ALISSA.

RIVER OF STARS: Ast. Ancient LLACHATULI term used to describe the tight cluster of stars that covers a large portion of the sky, seen as a continuous snaking region of densely-clustered stars crossing the NORTHERN and SOUTHERN HEMISPHERES along the poles.

The term is synonymous the SHAMAR'S TORRENT that was used in SAMMAEA.

RIVER LANDS, the: Geo. Name for the more densely populated area of the c of coastal TZALLRACH. The name is derived from the two major rivers that flow through it, namely the BAELLI and ARELLI, and their many tributaries, as well as the wetlands of KRISHTUI.

RIVER TREE, CHURCH OF THE: Rel. Religion observed in CHEIRA that is centred around the river YAGNOTH PHATHAN. It is a primal nature religion that holds the river as sacred. Little else is known of the faith as its worshippers are secretive and do not reveal the innermost workings of the church to outsiders. See Vol IV: Religions and Pantheons.

RIVERLANDS, the: 1. see THAUR^(2.).

Pol. Geo. Common term for AHRISHEN, usually used colloquially within Ahrishen itself. RIVVEN: Set. Small city in the c north west of PHYRR, situated along its main internal trade-route (Pop. c. 18,000).

RIUFAN: Pol. Soc. PATRICIAN HOUSE common along the northern SAMMAEAN coast, particularly in LIDEA, and the port of HADAR. It is a major presence in shipping across the INNER SEA, with holdings and assets spread across many docks, harbours, and warehouses. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

RIUH: Rvr. Waterfall in the c west of THE SURRACH, along the course of the river ESSRA. The city of SAGGAR is located close to the falls.

RJASNA: Geo. Island off the north western coast of the island-continent of BROR⁽¹⁾, forming a part of the KRAJAN archipelago.

RM: also 'Reign of Malichar'. The term RM is used to denote the passage of years in the MACCABEAN CALENDAR. The term refers to the reign of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR over the newly-unified seven states of KORACHAN⁽¹⁾. The present year is the year 4007 RM.

The term BM, meaning Before Malichar, is used to denote years preceding the Reign of Malichar. So, the year 5 BM would mean 5 years before the Reign of Malichar, which is often also written as -5 RM.

RMES LOSTH: Set. Major city in the c south of CHEIRA, and capital city of the tenth prefecture of Cheira (Pop. c. 320,000).

ROAAKEN: Geo. Shallow valley in the c north east of VAALK, reaching north to the SEA OF BASSANDER, between the MALL VORAKAN in the north west and GAUGMOTHA in the south east.

ROAAKEN, LADY OF: see LADY OF ROAAKEN.

ROAD OF SAINTS, the: Geo. Major road in the east of SERROK, covering some 175-miles, from the city of SIUA-CHBON in the south east to the smaller city of OSURPRA in the north west. It is marked by statues of thousands of saints along its route, all from different pantheons which are recognised in Serrok.

ROAD OF WOES, the: Int. Geo. Law. Long discontinuous highway that links the north west and north east of ATARAXIA, situated to the south of the BLACK MOUNTAINS, traversing long stretches of wilderness. The stretch is around 800-miles long and incorporates many paths and roads that are rarely used and as a result are of ill-repute. The Road of Woes is infamous for the many disappearances, abductions, and murders that are said to take place along its length. Few remains are ever found, and those native to the area suspect that people are kidnapped and sold into slavery, though other more fanciful and distasteful explanations have been proposed. Merchants travelling this stretch of road make use of armed escorts and guards, including WHITE LEAGUE mercenaries from MACERATA in the west of SKAROS.

ROAH: 1. Dem. 'Roahani'. His. Rui. Ancient city-state and later region of the KINGDOM OF OPHAM, located in the c of present-day TRAKIA. The city owes its origins to the CYHLAGHARRI invasions of the PRINCIPALITY OF OPRET beginning in 723 RM that saw the majority of its male population taken to Cyhlagharr as slaves. The next centuries saw the scattered human remnants scoured by the OGHURS, hunted periodically, with their women raped, and their settlements villages razed. The next generations were marked by a large proportion of unnatural HALF-BREEDS; the result of unions between oghur invaders and native women. Persecuted by the oghurs, these descendants of Opret were forced into hiding, where a hidden settlement known as AN SIMEIA was established, just south of the ASOGHAQUA mountain. The settlement thrived in relative secrecy for some time, though in 941 RM it was attacked by oghurs. The majority of its survivors scattering throughout the wasted lands of Opret. A handful of these people settled an oasis just north of the ROAHAN ROUGHLANDS, and by c. 950 RM it became known as Roah, and it was allowed to flourish in relative peace, undiscovered by the oghurs.

The settlement remained relatively small, though re-established contact with the LHAUS enclaves to the south, from where its people acquired certain traits, including a love of ALCHEMY, which they later practiced. Its merchants braved the old routes and contact was established with crusading Ophami soldiers in c. 1000 RM, with tentative trade-routes established linking the two places. Events in Cyhlagharr led to the oghurs reducing their presence in Opret, allowing Roah the chance to grow, where it became a vital link in trade-routes of the region. Ophami merchants established permanent offices in Roah, their caravans becoming a common sight in the region. The Ophami merchant houses gained much influence in the region, until in 1274 RM they were able to purchase the town from its residents, becoming a ruling presence there. The resultant meritocracy ruled for some time, overseeing the towns' growth into a small city, controlling trade south to the lhaus enclaves and west into Cyhlagharr. Despite their mixed oghur and human heritage (by that point they were breeding true, the imperfections of their sullied ancestry having stabilised through successive generations), the people of Roah still regarded themselves as human. Despite their wealth gained from the sale of Roah, the Roahani nobility were regarded by outsiders with suspicion, their size, pallor and inhuman demeanour belying their true heritage.

Roah was assimilated by the OPHRAMI empire by c. 2395 RM, where it remained an important link with present-day lands in KHARKHARADONTIS, establishing trade west with regions as distant as DAAZ by c. 2600 RM, though contact with the isolated realm effectively ended Roah, as caravans from the west brought with them illnesses and diseases that had never reached the east. This, coupled with the already deteriorating natural land to the north (eventually resulting in the corrupted region known as the HOGHSOTHAMON) and the vehement actions of the of the CLEANSER caste that originated in the time left the city and its populace quarantined. When the quarantine was lifted, traders found a broken settlement, its once vibrant industries and caravanserais forgotten. The city never was never to recover from this, and as the region's corruption slowly increased, so too did Roah diminish, until it was abandoned in c. 2940 RM.

2. Fau. Giant flightless predatory bird once native to most of the north west of SAMMAEA, though now dwindling in numbers and now found largely to the west of THE SURRACH and in SEPAHAUNAT, and its many islands, where they have largely escaped the slow death that befell their continental kin than once dominated the Sammaean mainland, as far east as the SEA OF BYSSOS. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

ROAHAN ROUGHLANDS: Geo. Badlands region to the south west of the TARAHID ANNEXES, covering some 10,000-square miles of land, the area is at a relatively high elevation, with impressive views of surrounding regions. The feature has often served as a natural border between the human lands to the north and the more esoteric LHAUS territories to the south.

ROAM: Set. Major fortified city in the west of MOAH, within the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region known as the DAENED SULRACH^(1.) (Pop. c. 60,000).

ROAMM: Set. Coastal city in the south west of PNESSA, overlooking the SEA OF SAURIAR (Pop. c. 90,000).

ROANTA: Geo. Caverns in the west of LYRIDIA DHAI, along the westernface of the BROMACHID escarpment. The caverns are created by water erosion in the soft duststone formation and are unstable, prone to collapse.

ROATAS: Set. City in the far north of the prefecture of EROSENEA (1.) in the north of HOLOLACH (1.), on an island along the course of the river ALLAMAR, along the border with AQUARIIA. It controls two great fortified bridges that span the river, both of which are enclosed and covered with white marble structures. The city is a link between the nation and is the largely the first city immigrants and travels see when moving east from Aquariia, and it forms a link along THE WAY traderoute, which links Aquariia with Hololach (Pop. c. 27,200).

ROBAT: Mil. Str. Fortified city-state in the c of THE SURRACH, and base for the KNIGHTS AENEOUS. Within its walls are a great number of hostels, caravanserais, markets and hospitals, all serving the needs of those travelling along the IVORY ROAD (Pop. c. 32,000).

ROC: 1. Fau. Giant bird, with documented wingspans of up to 40 – 50-ft., though individuals rarely grow that large. Common around the GROWING MOUNTAINS (where they are used as mounts), and eastern KHARKHARADONTIS – they nest along the south western cliffs of the DARK SEA. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

2. Ast. Con Constellation in the NORTHERN HEMISPHERE. See Vol II: Constellations

ROCHAD: 1. Geo. Island 125-miles off the south western coast of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES. 2. Mil. Str. Fort on the above island, belonging to the SOLEYN TERRITORIES. Ships stationed here patrol the periphery of the BRINE SEA against piracy and chorsairs.

ROCHAYO: Mil. Str. Large KORACHANI fortress in the north of RHAMIA, overlooking a pass leading to the eastern-most reaches of ACSIS in THE OLD FOREST. The fortress once guarded the logging routes leading in and out of the Old Forest, though it was abandoned in c. 1000 RM, prior to the imperial abandonment of the region in 1017 RM. In the ensuing years, the ruin of the fort became corrupted by the ATRAMENTA, its aura palpable and thick in the air around it. Its iron-shod walls are orange and scabrous from neglect.

Following the Korachani empire's return to Rhamia in 3980 RM, the fortress's interior was restored to working order and BIOMECHANICAL ATELIERS installed there, where UMBRAN experiments were conducted (Pop. c. 3,000).

ROCK OF CIMMERIA, the: Int. Geo. Ancient black boulder in the north west of ALMAGEST, in the west of the MARMARA Massif. It is around 30-ft. high and 50-ft. wide, and it covered in ancient runes, though to date back to the Third Age, and a possible ILLIDRAEN civilisation that is thought to have existed there. The stone was shunned by mortals of the early FIFTH AGE and is now too isolated, the climate around too cold for most mortals to know about it, let alone show any interest in it.

There have been a few scholarly expeditions made there in the past centuries (the first being in 3782 RM and the most recent in 3943 RM), none of which have been able to glean much information, though fragments of other boulders have been found, some bearing the shattered remnants of runes thought to be similar to those on the 'parent' stone. The significance of the runes is unknown, though they do emanate a faint FIRMAMENTAL aura, that has made some associate them with RUNIC MAGICK.

ROCK WATER: Lan. Common term in the KORACHANI LANGUAGE and a loanword in many other languages for drinking water that comes from aquifers, cisterns, and the water table, as opposed to rivers and springs, which collectively are known as RUNNING WATER. Rock Water is usually regarded as clean and safe to drink as it is rarely contaminated by industrial pollution, though this not always the case — ATRAMENTAL and chemical pollutants can seep into underground reservoirs.

RODDEN: Rui. Abandoned settlement in contested lands to the far west of the tribe of AUEREN, in the far north of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER.

RODDUN: Mil. Str. Fortress in the c north of ROMOREA⁽²⁾, in the middle of the VACIVA desert, guarding the BARAQ AQUEDUCT, which provides water to the capital, IONOL, over 54-miles away.

RODEA: Rui. Expansive stone ruins in the south of LYRIDIA DHAI. The ruins take the form of a labyrinth-like hewn stone city with deep ditches surrounding it. Most of the city is now covered in thick soil, though parts have been excavated by looters.

RODEN: Set. Settlement in the north east of THE SURRACH, known for its carob groves and the hard carob cakes it makes that are a common food in merchant caravans of the east of the Surrach (Pop. c. 5,000).

RODHUD: Set. Settlement in the west of the region of HAPAX in the c east of THE SURRACH (Pop. c. 7,000).

RODIA: Ind. Set. MANUFACTORY settlement in the far south west of the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS. Rodia was once a great manufactory, the sole manufacturer of DAEMONTYR, though it was destroyed in c. 1800 RM and was abandoned shortly after. The art of their manufacture was lost with the city. It was resettled in c. 3800 RM by HOUSE MORDON, which has slowly been rediscovering the manufacturing processes and is rapidly growing (Pop. c. 5,800).

RODOPSIA: Ind. Set. Major fortified city in the south east of TARTAK. It operates 2 large amethyst mines, and controls their distribution and usage across Tartak, and is incredibly wealthy as a result. It enjoys a level of autonomy that most other Tartakasid cities are not allowed (Pop. c. 148,000).

ROGGA: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the south east of ALAM BETHYL, in the BAND⁽²⁾ Mountains. It guards an ill-used pass across the mountains into KOLCHIS. ROGHAD: Set. City in the c north of the MULL CITY-STATES, in the TOLIASOR Mountain chain along the shores of lake SUGHRA. It is known for its mercenaries that are currently used in the border dispute with HOLOLACH^(1.) (Pop. c. 19,000).

ROGIRUED: Mil. Str. Fortress in the south east of ALAM BETHYL, in the BAND⁽²⁾ Mountains. It guards an ill-used pass across the mountains into KOLCHIS.

ROGUE SHAPERS: see SHAPER, ROGUE.

ROHDIN: 1. Island off the northern coast of KARGAMA in the south of the SEA OF ORRIDA.

2. Dem. 'Rohdinian'. His. Ntn. A relatively short-lived island-nation in the south of the SEA OF ORRIDA, off the north eastern coast of KARGAMA. It originated in 1988 RM following a revolt orchestrated in the only major city, RATTEA, by five disgraced knights exiled by the frivolous KARGEMMAN king BATTUZ a few years earlier. With Kargemma still reeling from the actions of the king before his death, the island was allowed to break away, after which it became renowned for its seafaring knights who policed the seas around their home, as far afield as the SEA OF SERPENTS in the north east and ANIPTERRA in the west.

The arrival of the EHRENISIAN CRUSADES to the island in 2535 RM saw Rattea invaded by KORACHANI troops, which defeated it relatively easily, allowing it to construct the sea fort of St. And which was used as a staging point for Korachani forces to move south onto the mainland. The island and fort St. And in particular endured massed bombardments by the allied forces, though were ultimately abandoned after the crusade petered out in 2809 RM.

Rattea was rebuilt in the decades following the retreat of the crusade, though it was eventually assimilated by Kargama in c. 3040 RM. See Vol III: Extinct Realms.

ROHIR: Lak. Lake in the east of AYAD, along the course of the river DOROPHONOS.

ROHINI: m. Myt. His. Per. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, a SCION of the DEMIURGE BAPHOMET. He was killed by his father and used in a ritual of strengthening. Little else is known about him or what became of his body. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

ROHOTHA: Rvr. River flowing south east for over 550-miles from the CARTIGA Mountain with its mouth emptying in the SEA OF URAN.

ROKON BANMISS: (B. 1311 – D. 1386 RM) Ast. ALMAGESTI Astronomer who is today remembered alongside his colleague TYRAN KASTRO for confirming the KASTRO-BANMISS CYCLE with modern mathematical precision.

ROILING SEA, the: Sea. Sea known for its rough waters, forming the western-most part of the SEA OF BALTICA and is located between the nations of NAARETH, ELEKHID and GIBEAH. The southern waters of the sea are particularly deep, most notably along the Gibeahn coast. Conversely, the northern-most shores of the sea, along the southern coasts of Naareth and KHITAI are notably shallow, resulting in extreme seasonal tides.

Settlements along the coast of the Roiling Sea make good use of windmills due to the harsh winds coming off the sea.

ROILING GYRE, the: Sea. Sea gyre in the c of the ROILING SEA, formed from the movements of the NAARETHI CURRENT. It is partially responsible for the rough waters of the sea.

ROILING SEA BASIN, the: Geo. Drainage basin formed by various continental divides in the continent of SAMMAEA. The basin comprises part of EASTERN SAMMAEA and all rivers within it drain directly into the ROILING SEA.

Nations and territories that are at least partially within the Roiling Sea Basin include: CHEIRA, ELEKHID, GIBEAH, KHITAI, MULCIBER, NAARETH, SOLEYN, and SUOR, amongst others.

ROITHAN: Set Coastal settlement on the eponymous island in the south of LIMOTH^(1.), in the emirate of Limoth^(2.). Its main industry is fishing, particularly shrimping (Pop. c. 5,400).

ROKA: 1. Rui. Ancient city and part of the realm of HARA^(2.). The city appeared in c. – 1100 RM and rapidly became a major influence in the region, controlling traffic in and out of the SEA OF DERAEA. In little over a hundred years, it had grown into one of the three largest and most-influential cities in Hara, taking control of the many small coastal settlements that by then had appeared around the Deraea. The rulers of Roka grew powerful and greedy, leading to a civil war in -875 RM, which saw the capital moved from Hara to AAMAGH and the Rokan armies defeated, most of its vassal cities freed.

2. Rui. Ruin in the south east of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of EDICULE(1.). The city was once situated along the coast of the region (now some 6-miles east), though the retreat of ELYDEN'S seas left it landlocked, its docks ruined. The ruined city is now populated by scavengers and brigands.

ROKANA: Geo. Headland in the south of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of EDICULE^(1.), overlooking the divide between the SEA OF BOKKEA to the south and the SEA OF DERAEA to the north.

ROLEMM: Set. Major coastal city in the south west of PNESSA, in the far east of the GULF OF SAURIAR. Its main industry is shipbuilding and repairs (Pop. c. 74,000).

ROLOGASTER: Rui. Ruins of an ancient telescope in the south of $\overline{\text{THAMAAZ}}$ in the c south of $\overline{\text{THE SURRACH}}$.

ROLOUR: Set. Small city in the c of RHINOCOLOURA (Pop. c. 12,000).

ROMMA: Ser. Small city in the c west of HABOT. Its main industry is the mining of SERPENTINE (Pop. c. 11,500).

ROMMORHA: also 'City of the Beholden'. Set. City in the far west of AKANTHRA, in the south of SAMMAEA. It is a haven to survivors of various forms of POSSESSION, who gravitate to the city.

It is not uncommon for $\underline{MORTALS}$ who survive possession to retain an imprint of the possessing $\underline{SPIRIT}^{(1.)}$ or force, changing them forever. Shunned by most mortals, they tend to gravitate towards one-another. The city of Rommorha is such a place.

founded in c. 2640 RM to the east of the SEA OF KRIHIEK, Rommorha now functions as a normal city in most respects and though it is accepting of untouched mortals, they find it difficult to live there and are outnumbered by those who call themselves 'the Touched' (Pop. c. 14.500).

ROMOREA: 1. Geo. Dominant region and rift-valley to the north west of KHARKHARADONTIS, south of the SEA OF ESCHATA in SAMMAEA. The name is traditionally used by scholars to denote the region east of the VANNAKORDOR highlands, which is dominated by an expansive lengthy rift-valley that runs north to south for over 2,500-miles.

The region is renowned for its salty poisonous endorheic lakes, and earthquakes and volcanic eruptions, many of which are coupled with ATRAMENTAL ACTIVITY, particularly SHADOWISPS.

It was traditionally populated by sparse tribes of nomads who struggled to survive in the hostile terrain, refusing to leave due to it being their ancestral land, though in 3663 RM it became home to an exiled Surrachi king, who founded Kingdom of Romorea⁽²⁾ in 3669 RM, which now claims most of the lands surrounding the Romorean basin and surrounding areas.

In 3821 RM the Kingdom of Romorea completed an ambitious civic engineering project that flooded a large part of the rift valley with waters from the Sea of Eschata, producing an artificial sea now known as the HASAAZ ARAAT, which has completely altered the ecology, climate and economy of the region.

2. Dem. 'Romorean'. Ntn. Nation in NORTHERN SAMMAEA, just south of THE SURRACH, to the south east of the SEA OF ESCHATA. It is of a hot semi-arid climate and received little rainfall – with most water coming from oases, aquifers, aqueducts, conversion from seawater, or trapped condensation.

It was founded in 3669 RM by the GAAPI prince RAFFIN BARAQ who claimed most of the Romorea and surrounding lands as his own, attracting followers and others from the south east of the Surrach, as well as various natives. He settled the oasis of IONOL where he founded his capital. A few years later, members of his household unearthed coal deposits south east of Ionol, a fortuitous find that brought great wealth to the region.

The kingdom went on to become a totalitarian state, with all mines owned by the monarchy. Lords are given tracts of land, and they in turn work them through slave labour, this slave-based industry is considered by most foreign states to be even worse than even that of the KORACHANI

EMPIRE, and has become the backbone of the kingdom. The ruling dynasty has grown depraved and degenerate on the backbreaking labour of its people, with its members deeply ingrained in their excesses, largely unaware of the suffering of the people who live beneath them, whom they force to worship them in a twisted CULT OF PERSONALITY. The dynasty makes use of SICTHAINEN TECHNA to guard its mines and palaces, and these have become infamous in surrounding regions.

Most slaves work in the mines, hauling minerals, ore and coal, using buckets and spades, hauling them up ladders along the sides of deep tiered pits.

Of note is the Sea of HASAAZ ARAAT, which was created in 3821 RM by flooding the northern most expanse of the Romorean^(1,) rift alley. A sea once existed in the region earlier in the FIFTH AGE though it dried up as Elyden's seas waned, millennia before the arrival of Raffin Baraq to the region. The seas rebirth brought lie to Romorea, and many new settlements appeared on its shores, though others were flooded by its creation, in some cases without the evacuation of their residents. Today many ports thrive along the coast of this artificial sea, exporting raw coal and iron to other nations.

The west of Romorea always lied along the course of the IVORY ROAD and the city of ECHEA had existed there for centuries, and though it initially resisted the cultural growth of Ionol, it eventually became a part of the surrounding kingdom in c. 3750 RM, bringing much wealth and trade into the new kingdom. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

ROMOREAN: Lan. Language spoken in the kingdom of ROMOREA⁽²⁾. It is a dialect of SAVIUDI that emerged in the city of IONOL in c. 3700 RM, and is now a spoken by the upper classes of Romorea, while most slaves and workers speak a stunted version of Saviudi. See Vol II: Languages.

RONAS: Mil. Str. ALMAGESTI outpost and fortress in the WHITE SHEET, in the far north of LLACHATUL, overlooking the north west of the SEA OF POLARIS, where most Almagesti expeditions to the White Sheet begin. It originated under KORACHANI rule in c. 2600 RM when exploration of the White Sheet became popular, and has existed largely uninterrupted since then, though there have been different incarnations of the fort.

It is only accessible over the sea by specially built icebreaker ships, and even then, only in summer – the winter sea ice is too thick and expansive to be reliably traversed.

RONDAAR: Set. Fortified city in the north west of the tribe of INDAAR, in the east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 42,500).

RONGAN: Set. Settlement in the north west of CUTH (Pop. c. 4,500).

RONONVARR: Sup. For ATRAMENTAL woodlands in the west of VARR, known for its twisted and misshapen trees and the creatures that live on them.

RONSHAHIR: Set. Major city in the c-south east of AYAD (Pop. c. 120 000)

RONYEN: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the far north west of KREM, overlooking the trade-route linking the nation with the south of TZALLRACH.

ROOT AQUARIIAN: see AQUARIIAN, ROOT.

ROOTBRAIDING: see BRANCHBRAIDING.

ROPOHAII: lit. 'of Vorropohaiah'. Plr. 'ropohait'. Mor. One of the original Two-and-Twenty MORTAL PEOPLES, and the children of the DEMIURGE VORROPOHAIAH.

The ropohaii were an industrious people, though afflicted by the same uncertainties that crippled their Demiurge father. Paranoid and covetous, they spent more time constructing and defending their temple-forts than they did increasing their lands and peoples. Shackled by their fathers' fears, they were driven underground into the realm of their own creation that became known as the PRISON CARCERI, and the land above eventually forgot about them.

They undertake an arduous multi-generational pilgrimage akin to the SHADOW MARCH of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, albeit on a grander scale, where pilgrimages of tens of thousands circumnavigate the depths of the Prison Carceri on their way to the TEMPLE OF VORROPOHAIAH, where the body of their father is maintained in state beneath the city of PANDAEMONIA. There the truly faithful sacrifice themselves to him in a form of communion, where the god consumes the body of the follower. This is thought to be an extreme form of the andromachy that's common to all the Demiurges; with perhaps the ropohaii having dwindled so much in spiritual stature that more than just devotion is not enough to sustain Vorropohaiah.

They are possibly the second most numerous Mortals after humans, but their labyrinthine home remains largely unexplored by surface dwellers, so the full extent of their culture and spread can only guessed at. Anecdotal accounts of mortals who have visited Carceri speak of expansive chambers the size of nations, and a thriving civilisation that reveres Vorropohaiah as fervently as the people of the INNER SEA REGION worship RACHANAEL, but the truth remains elusive

Few accounts exist of the ropohaii above ground, and what records are known depict them as misbegotten sun-starved wretches who skulk under the cover of darkness, their bodies hidden beneath pus-soaked bandages. Though in some regions (particularly VÂRR), there exists a pariah caste, known as PERIPATETICS, who are thought to be descendants from the ancient union between ropohaii and humans, whose people sometimes venture to the surface. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life: Sicthain.

ROPSAH: Set. City in the north of IPANAH⁽²⁾ surrounded by a large opencast iron mine (Pop. c. 13,500).

ROQ MAZDA: Set. Settlement in the south west of CHEIRA, overlooking the pass north into PNESSA (Pop. c. 10,000).

RORA: Rvr. Seasonal river in the east of KHARKHARADONTIS leading to lake SARIS.

RORMO: Set. City in the north east of CHEIRA. Little is known about it (Pop. unknown).

RORO: Set. Settlement in the c north west of SERROK (Pop. c. 8,000).

RORON PHAR: Set. City in the c of CHEIRA (Pop. unknown).

RORRIA: Set. Coastal settlement in the east of SABIA, overlooking the SEA OF BIELOST. Its main industry is fishing (Pop. c. 3,300).

RORZHAI: Set. Small coastal city in the c south of the PANTHEON ISLES, in the south of its mainland (Pop. c. 16,000).

ROSAT: Set. TIKBALA settlement in the contested region of ASIKKA in the east of NAARETH (Pop. unknown).

ROSENORS: Mar. Set. City in the c of AETHIOS, in the south of the MALAEGAN valley. It is the home of the largest academy and gymnasium of the martial art known as the WAY OF QUICKSILVER, and trains professional mercenaries that sell their services across the surrounding regions (Pop. c. 39,400).

ROSEWOOD BRIDGE: Arc. Bridge in the GREATTOWN of DUARIAHAHN.

ROSEI: Leg. Soc. In SAMMAEA, tale of a traveller who became king of the city of ROSEIA. The story is apocryphal and unlikely to be real.

ROSEIA: Leg. Set. The fictional city of king ROSEI.

ROSHAA: Rui. Dead tradetown in the c of TETHYSIA, near NEHNAXIA.

ROSHANARA: Rel. Str. Hermitage in the VAUHR Mountains in the south of SURUTUR. The structure is ancient and situated in a steep basin, accessible only from three natural land bridges, each of which is defended by an ordained warrior.

ROSS CAP: Flo. Button mushroom common to cool regions of CENTRAL LLACHATUL, particularly SKAROS, BASSORAH⁽²⁾, and southern ALMAGEST. It is highly toxic and ingestion will likely lead to liver and kidney failure, with symptoms typically showing within 12 – 24 hours of ingestion, including severe sickness, which will slowly abate, leading to a belief that the worst has passed. In fact, the organs would have already been irreparably damaged by the time the first symptoms have been felt. There is no cure other than immediate organ transplant, which is rarely successful, and death typically follows 2 – 4 days after ingestion.

The fungus has been used as a poison for as long as records go back, and was used at least as early as the THIRD AGE. It was well-regarded for its properties, particularly the delayed appearance of symptoms and their rapid disappearance, giving victims a false sense of security, leaving them ignorant to the fact they were even poisoned until it was far too late. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

ROTAAR: Rvr. River in the prefectures of ALITENEA^(1.) and EROSENEA^(1.) in the north of HOLOLACH^(1.), flowing for 340-miles from its source in the SABASSOR Mountains before meeting its parent, the river ENATHAAR.

ROTHA: Rvr. River in the south east of SKAROS, flowing north for 210-miles from lake ONNAS before joining lake ULAROS. Its waters are tainted by runoff from lake Onnas, which is toxic from nearby iron oxidisation.

ROTHAROS: Geo. Plains in the c and south east of SKAROS. The region was once forested though is now largely scrubland, dominated by ALOARES and hardy shrubs that can withstand the harsh winter winds of the region.

ROTHKA: Set. Settlement in the c west of AHKA, known for its apples, grown in lava-rich soil from MT. VRAMATHIS (Pop. c. 4,500).

ROTHOB: Geo. Mountain in the far north west of KHITAI. Like the larger RILLATAIA to the south, it is ancient, its rocks rounded and crumbling. Its southern-face is quarried for shale.

ROTKHA: Set. Settlement in the c west of LAASKHA, along the southernface of the CAALUA Mountains. The settlement is known for its limestone quarries and was the source of the stone used in the colossi of BETRA, 75-miles south east (Pop. c. 4,400).

ROTOK: Bev. Alcoholic beverage made from fermented whey. It is common in the CITIZENRY OF THALI, where entire communities are dedicated to its production. It is usually drunk during family festivities. See Vol II: Beverages.

ROTORS: Set. Settlement in the c south of AETHIOS, along the course of the river SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾. It maintains a link with the larger city of ARISTH (Pop. c. 6,000).

ROTTAN: Mil. Str. Major hilltop fort on the small headland of BRETTA, in the far west of HOLOLACH⁽¹⁾, overlooking the SEA OF MARDEN. The fortress commands an impressive view of the sea and the wetlands surrounding the mouth of the river HEMAVAR.

ROTTING MOUNTAINS, the: see VOULLOR.

ROTWINE: Flo. Bev. Wine produced exclusively in vineyards in the ORRIAH peninsula in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of CARIA^(1.), whose grapes are afflicted by an endemic fungus that leaves the grapes shrivelled, and their flesh crystalline and sugary. It is drunk as a desert wine that is prized across the INNER SEA REGION.

ROU: Set. City in the c north east of KASPIA (Pop. c. 43,000).

ROUT OF THE KORACHANI 1st, the: Mil. His. The defeat of KORACHANI forces fighting in the SECOND SIEGE OF ARGEA in SARASTRO that took place on the 30th NIHAVALEN 3705 RM towards the end of the WAR OF SUNDERING.

Shaken by the recent RITUALS OF SEGARRA Korachan recruited tens of thousands of fresh conscripts to send to various theatres of the war, primarily the faltering Siege of Argea, where they provided a new backbone to remaining forces surrounding the city. They assaulted the city following days of bombardment and were followed by coordinated attacks by elite forces, tanks, SHAPER corps and shock troops on multiple fronts, including the inspiring presence of the IRON ANGEL and some 2,000 STEEL LEGIONNAIRES of the Korachani 1st Gryphonnes (the largest deployment of legionnaires seen in the war) who stormed the inner city, but found themselves trapped in a minefield between specialists and TECHNARCANE auxiliaries led by more Archidoxes, who do not even afford them the chance to retreat, slaughtering them.

The Iron Angel was attacked by three ARCHIDOXES, who severely damaged her, forcing her to retreat. Without the Iron Angel and Legionnaires to rally behind, what remained of the Korachani armies in Argea were cut down, their fresh recruits unprepared for the horrors of what assaulted them. The remnants fled and scattered to the north, in what later became known as the Rout of the Korachani 1st.

The rout was one of the most humiliating imperial defeats in the war, and Korachan never fully recovered from it. Despite the stubbornness of the COUNCIL OF SEVEN, who would not admit defeat, it became clear that Sarastro had gained the upper hand, though desperate fighting continued across the INNER SEA REGION for close to another month, with the SARASTROAN TREATY finally signed on the 23rd of SATAVALEN, leaving Sarastro independent. Many believe that the rout of the Korachani 1st was one of the deciding factors in the eventual MANUMISSION OF THE CLONES over a century later.

ROVAST: Int Geo. Wasteland in the north east of TARTAK. The place serves as a reminder to the people of Tartak of the dark days of KORACHANI rule.

The region was once filled with fertile plains, scrubland and forests, and between them, villages and towns that thrived under the seasonal inundations of the river KHARAD. Under the yoke of the Korachani empire, Rovast was converted to a major agricultural centre for the southern territories. Woodlands were felled to make room for pastures and farmlands. Ver centuries of abuse any fecundity that the land had once held had been sapped. After close to two millennia of use, Rovast was left an arid wasteland.

By the time Korachan had left Tartak in 2132 RM, most of the Rovast was left as a grotesque scar upon the skin of ELYDEN - forests reduced to dustbowls; the hollow remnants of quarries, and withered grasslands where once bountiful farmlands thrived. The area is dotted by hollow ghost towns and the degenerate remnants of those who once populated them, the barren dust of Rovast sweeping over them unendingly.

ROVEL: Set. City in the c south of KARGAMA (Pop. c. 33,000).

ROWAN: Flo. Variety of trees and shrubs common to the NORTHERN HEMISPHERE. The wood of rowan trees is hard, and lends itself to carving and turning. It is sensitive to the FIRMAMENT and is commonly used as the construction of FOCI (2.). See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF SHAPING: Sup. Org. Str. Institute of higher learning in Teira, Venthir, where prospective young Shapers are sent to study. Most of those who graduate go on to fulfil vocational roles around the kingdom, with the most promising amongst them apprenticed to a master for up to three years, where they might themselves attain the rank of Rabtshah – master shapers.

ROYAL COLLEGIATE OF SARASTRO: also 'Sarastroan Institute of Arcane Skills'. Edu. Sup. Str. School of SHAPING built in ARGEA in c. 3450 RM. The building is a place of controlled learning where both the FIRMAMENT and ATRAMENTA are researched. Most who study here are contracted by the region's ruler, SATHEP THE RISEN, and work for the state. Though independent scholars are licensed, there are only a few who are allowed to study here, all of them subjects of the REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO.

ROYAL CORPS OF HYDRAULIC ENGINEERS: Org. Skilled corps of civil engineers in AHRISHEN who are specialised in the construction and maintenance of its many CANALS AND WATERWAYS, as well as patrolling them and defending specific areas of them from banditry and other illicit activities.

The corps was founded in 3299 RM, though various institutions and organisations existed throughout the reigns of the AHRISHENI MONARCHIES, fulfilling a similar function. The Corps are divided into various branches (including the DYKEWALKERS, amongst others) and most engineers and workers do not fulfil combat roles, though there are elite regiments of combat engineers who work in isolated and dangerous areas.

ROYAL COUNCIL OF THE THRONE OF GÂTHA: Pol. Org. Ruling council of the city-state of GÂTHA. The last King, His holiness, King Paraneet Bomhada, was elected by the council in 3971 RM.

ROYAL FUNGUS, the: Flo. Fungus unique to the region of HAMULAR in north of THE SURRACH. Its harvesting is by the appointment of the royal household of Hamular only. The fungus is famed for its medicinal and restorative properties and the areas in which it grows are heavily guarded. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

ROYAL HOUSE OF ETHAND: Pol. The royal house of ETHAND in AETHIOS, founded by the NEGUS Ethand in 2561 RM, following his ousting of the SEPHIANS from power. The Royal House of Ethand would go on to rule Aethios until 3810 RM, when the ABUNA managed to gain independence from SARASTRO, executing the royal family and its relatives in a week of bloody fighting in its cities, effectively ending its rule and bringing about the HOLY REPUBLIC of Aethios, that was officially recognised in 3817 RM.

ROYAL ORDER OF BAPHOMET: Org. Rumoured secret society, believed by some to be made up of royalty and other high-ranking individuals from across ELYDEN. Most scholars deny its existence, though those who believe in it claim that its members work together despite the public relations of their respective nations, to further their own goals, though few agree as to their objective.

Despite its name, it is unknown if there is a link to the DEMIURGE BAPHOMET (whose name has become pervasive across Elyden, with few actually knowing the full history behind it).

RSHOKRKHOAB: For. Sparse dry forest in the c of CYHLAGHARR, south of the NTHAEGOM massif.

RTHAS: also 'the Glimmering Sea'. Sea. Sea off the eastern coast of SAMMAEA, to the south of NOAVATUR, forming the northern-most part of the SEA OF LETHEA. The amnesiac traits of the Lethea's waters are less pronounced in the Lethea. The river HATSHATHIID, HARIID and VEREDAMIID all empty into the Sea of Rthas.

RTHEI: 1. Sup. Geo. A vast FIRMAMENTALLY-INFUSED desert in EASTERN LLACHATUL, dominating the north and north west of THETIS. It originally occupied the IMONTH valley between the KOTHA INNACHARL and the HETHA GHUR Mountains, around the border between Tethysia in the north and Thetis in the south, though has steadily expanded south west throughout the FIFTH AGE, possibly as a result of the changing climate and ELYDEN'S diminishing seas.

It's most Firmamentally active region is known as ACENNATH BES (lit 'Heart of the Sun'), and the sand here is razor sharp, making it the most inhospitable part of Rthei.

2. Dem. 'Rtheiam'. His. Ntn. Once a prosperous early FIFTH AGE nation in the south east of LLACHATUL, including the expanding desert of TURCAR. It rose c. -1200 RM, became culturally diverse c. -100 – 300 RM following an abandonment of lands in the north east and dwindled with the rapid desertification of the land.

Many ruined temples dedicated to the Demiurge Nergaal lie buried in the dust of this area, which is still called Rthei by the people of Cuth and Rhea. The followers of Kathisis travelled through Rthei in 1552 in their exodus, on their way to what would become their adoptive home of Tethysia. See Vol III: Extinct States.

RTHEIAN WINDS: Wea. South westerly winds in EASTERN LLACHATUL, blowing east into the RTHEI desert^(1.).

RTHOGGH: Geo. Intricate cavern-network in the east of the RTHEI desert in the north of THETIS. The caverns are winding and labyrinthine, and are thought to stretch for miles beneath the Rthei, with rumours of expansive chambers filled with pallid SERAPIS and phosphorescent fungi.

RTUOR: Set. Small city in the west of CYHLAGHARR, 65 miles south east of the contested region with EREBETH. It has become a major recruitment ground to the Cyhlagharri in recent years, and most industries have been converted to maintaining the armies stationed there (Pop. c. 14,000).

RTURIN: 1. Geo. Island 74-miles off the northern coast of CYHLAGHARR.2. Mil. Str. Coastal fortress on the above island.

RUA SABBRUH: Set. Settlement in the south west of AYAD. Its main industry is marble quarrying (Pop. c. 4,000).

RUADOM: Geo. Mountain forming a border between the east of TARTAK and KHURAUR and the north west of the ALGOL HAREN. Around 180-miles long, the mountains form the northern-most reaches of the SAHODOM Mountains.

RUALASOR: Geo. Mountain-range in the east of HOLOLACH^(1.). It is around 250-miles long, forming the southern-most part of the TOLIASOR Mountain.

RUATHA: Sup. Geo. Region in BA'AKH that was always recognised as ATRAMENTALLY-ACTIVE. By the time the KORACHANI EMPIRE came to dominance of the region, it became one of its largest sources of UMBRA, with thousands of SIPHON ENGINES dominating the horizon, earning the region the moniker Rach I' yo-dhalla; 'place of the siphon'. Following Korachani abandonment of the region, most of the engines fell into disuse, with those that remained active appropriated by SUMA'YA. Without the near-constant siphoning of the Atramenta, the area became corrupted, a treacherous land of DUSTSTONE and collapsed caverns.

The region is categorised as $\underline{\text{DANGEROUS}}$ by the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI}}$ $\underline{\text{INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES}}.$

RUAVAR: Rvr. River in the south of HOLOLACH^(1.), flowing for 800-miles from the HOLIASOR Mountains and the RUALASOR Mountains before emptying in the BAY OF TOLAR.

RUBATAR: Mil. Str. Fortress in the south of JURRAS^(2.) in a basin north west of the GIBBORAH Mountains.

RUBEIT: Rvr. Marshes in the c of Elekhid, along the course of the river IUDIVRA.

RUBRIC OF THE FALLEN, the: Rui. Ancient ruin in the west of the HENDECARCHY of LONAR, in MALAN. It was once a holy site to an ancient religion that followed the DEMIURGE NEITH⁽¹⁾, though its full purpose is unknown, and it lies forgotten to this day. People claim to have seen pale figures praying near the ruin on nights when the IVORY MOON is full, lending some to believe that SEITHIN (the children of Neith) still live in Malan, though this rumour is unfounded.

RUBRICA: also 'the Red City'. Set. Major city in the north east of the HENDECARCHY of ATALLUA, in MALAN. It is known for its ancient SHAPING tradition (Pop. c. 148,000).

RUCHATIN: Set. Major city in the north west of SHAZGIN, along the north easternmost edge of the arid ORZOC plains (Pop. c. 80,000).

RUDIAR: Set. Fortified coastal city in the far south west of LIMOTH^(1.), in the emirate of OTHOTEL^(1.). It is a hub of trade and moves goods up the river SHARATHA^(2.) to the state capital of Othotel^(2.) (Pop. c. 48,000).

RUDOS: Set. Small fortified city in the south of the tribe of ASSAGOS, in the east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 14,000).

RUDU: (8,250-ft.) Geo. Highest peak of the FARRESH Mountains in BASSORAH⁽²⁾. The peak is a rust-brown colour and twisted, like a piece of slag.

RUEMERI: Rvr. River in the west of PARAIYA, flowing south for 150-miles from sources in the URAYA and AKATA mountains, before meeting its mouth in lake ALANCARAC.

RUFARAMM: Set. Settlement in the south of PNESSA, south of the river IGRAHORA. Its main industry is agriculture (Pop. c. 4,500).

RUFEAL TRAZAR: m. Per. (B. 3323 – D. 3389 RM) KORACHANI naturalist and scholar who first described the SUPRANATURAL creatures known as TSILEEN in a 3377 RM treatise following years of travel and study across various foreign cultures, particularly SAUA and MALAN.

RUGABAH: Set. Small city in the south west of AQUARIIA. It is a former military base, and its outskirts are peppered with crumbling and overgrown concrete bunkers and barracks (Pop. c. 15,750).

RUHUK: Set. Coastal conurbation in the east of ROMOREA⁽²⁾, along the shores of the Sea of HASAAZ ARAAT. It is made up of dozens of settlements, whose main source of income is fishing (Pop. c. 8,000).

RUIN, the: Rui: Gigantic ruin in the north west of LYRIDIA DHAI, akin to steep large-scale stairs leading towards each other, though crumbling before contact is made, some 10-miles up. For miles around the ground is covered in ruins and rubble, much of it being used by later peoples. Architecture can still be seen in structures as far afield as the north of VÂRR, AHRISHEN (where some appear in private collections) and LYRIDIA.

RUINATION, the: Rel. In the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE and its various offshoots and sects, the end of existence. Though never named in religious texts and doctrine, the term is commonly used by both the laity and the clergy to refer to the moment when all existence ends, when the spirits of those who revered the LORD RACHANAEL will enjoy a final moment of ecstatic union with their deity before he too is obliterated. See Vol IV: the Afterlife and the Spirit.

RUKBA: Set. Small city in the c north east of AQUARIIA, at a fork where the river HILARRA meets the river ISARRA. It is known for the ruined coliseum beyond its borders (Pop. c. 20,000).

RUKH: Set. Small city in the west of SALOROC. It was once known for its shadow mystery cult, and though this was claimed to have been eradicated in c. 3877 RM, rumours persist that there are still those who meet in secret, in ancient cisterns and canals deep beneath the city (Pop. c. 20,000).

RUKIO: Set. City in the west of SAUA, in the south west of the FOREST OF
REVERIES along foothills of the KOKORO Mountain (Pop. c. 1,242,000).

RUKUNNAH: Mil. Str. Fortress in the west of BASSORAH⁽²⁾, close to the ANOMOFERROH. Its troops keep a vigil on the region, for both natural and MORTAL dangers.

RULA-CHACL: (16,700-ft.) Geo. Peak in the north eastern-face of the HAMAJADON Mountains in the north of SERROK.

RUMAHOCH: Rel. Str. AGONIST monastery in the MENNOM region in the south east of PERGOST. Its monks are more reclusive than those of other Agonist monasteries, and though they can still act as SINEATERS, they spend most of their days in meditation, praying for absolution for all of MORTALKIND'S sins.

RUMAIA: Set. Agricultural settlement in the c of $\underline{NAARETH}$, in the region of $\underline{BATYAAN}$ (Pop. c. 8,000).

RUMANN: Set. Coastal settlement in the c north west of GIBEAH. It is one of the more insular regions of the nation and little is known of it (Pop. unknown).

RUMAN: Set. Settlement in the north of SKAROS. Its main industry is watchmaking (Pop. c. 7,800).

RUNE: Mys. In RUNIC MAGICK, a rune is a symbol or shape that is scribed onto an object by a RUNIST who imbues it with specific traits, that other shapers may be able to benefit from. For instance, a runist may carve a rune of weightlessness into a stone, making it lighter. Similarly, a rune may be given certain abilities so that another runist who breaks the rune will inherit those abilities. See Vol IV: Other Forms of Mysticism.

RUNE, PARAIYAN: Soc. Totemic emblem of cultural significance in PARAIYA. The Runes are most observed amongst the so-called RUNIC TRIBES, who exist as nomads outside of the modern cultural norms of Paraiya, clinging to old traditions.

There are three such runes, each of which embodies different traits and strengths. The runes are: \underline{AREN} , \underline{BELLN} , and $\underline{KHARAN}^{(1.)}$.

RUNIC TATTOOS: Soc. Tattoos that are made from pigments that are sensitive to the FIRMAMENT or ATRAMENTA. Despite the name, runic tattoos are a form of SHAPING, rather than RUNIC MAGICK. Such tattoos can act as FOCI⁽²⁾ to SHAPERS.

RUNIC TRIBE: also 'the Paraiyan People'. Eth. Ethic group in the north east of Sammaea, centred around the east NOTHIYA. The Runic tribes live in numerous small family groups and maintain little contact with one another. Each tribe owes fealty to one of three leaders, who in turn represents one of three runic convictions – the so-called Paraiyan RUNES – totemic emblems of great importance to these ancient people. The runes are those of AREN the HORNED CHARGER, the THUNDER BEAST (2.) and of KHARAN (1.) the WINGED SERPENT. Notable practices include the dances of respect they pay to ELYDEN (in the form of their sun deity, the EYE OF RAKAN) and heavy use of ritual EXORCISMS, said to 'exile' malevolent spirits and illnesses.

The Runic tribes, also called the Paraiyan people, hark back to an ancient time, before the SULTANATE, before even the KESHUGHALS, or KORACHANI subjugation there. They are unruly and their only culture revolves around the PARAIYAN RUNES – totemic emblems that are far older than even them. They exist outside of present societal norms and can barely be considered Paraiyan, taking little part in modern life and shunning modern technologies and industrialisation.

RUNIC MAGICK: also 'runism'. Mys. A form of non-SHAPING MYSTICISM that draws on primal energies from the MATERIA OMNA and stores them in RUNES, which are akin to minuscule LEYS, carved into objects. Runes are a form of shaping that manipulates the INTEGUMENT to make certain acts easier or merely possible to those who do not shape.

Runes are shapes that hold mystical power over parts of the Integument and are carved into physical objects. They are thought to be a somatic representation of the DEMIURGES' acts of shaping. A rune of a particular shape might influence the Integument around it, making the object the rune has been etched into lighter, or easier to otherwise shape, for instance.

This is an old form of mysticism and is closely tied to the use of leylines and is considered to be an artificial form of this ancient form of shaping.

Much like the use of leylines, it is thought that runic magick was likely independently discovered by mortals without the aid of the DEMIURGES. It is simple in concept, though of near limitless application. See Vol IV: Other Forms of Mysticism.

RUNISM: see RUNIC MAGICK.

RUNIST: Mys. One who practices RUNIC MAGICK.

RUNNING WATER: Lan. Common term in the KORACHANI LANGUAGE and a loanword in many other languages for drinking water that comes from rivers and springs, as well as sea water that has been treated to be drinkable. This is contrary to STONE WATER, which comes from aquifers, cisterns, and the water table. Running Water is often polluted by chemical runoff from many industries found at the water's edge, tough in many areas it is the only drinkable water so people have little choice.

RUODONT: Str. Fortified coastal lighthouse in the south of AZAZEM, guarding the sea route into the SEA OF BATHOS^(1.).

RUOHA: Set. City in the c-south east of the TARAHID ANNEXES (Pop. c. 23,500).

RUOI: Rui. Ruined city on the island of SHIBBOTHA in the greater SHIBBOTHA ISLES. It is one of the main reasons, alongside another ruin known as ELARI, why the archipelago remains contested between FALLAROUR and the CORAL BARONIES, both of whom claim ownership in the hopes of exploiting rumoured industrial treasures believed to be found in the ruins.

RUPTURE, the: Geo. Large cleft in the c north of VAALK, forming a steep-sided valley that runs for some 95-miles from the TRAAL MOUNTAINS to the BAY OF SALTRA and the river STORAGH (1.) follows its route, with the natural limestone arch, also known as Storagh (2.), passing over it 25-miles from the coast.

RURAL GNOTH AND ITS PEOPLE: Phil. Vol. Travelogue published by the GNOTHI annalist NEBURO in 3891 RM that became popular amongst GIGANRI of more urban areas, many of whom adopted his teachings, which were largely based on the meditations of the people of ARGYRA.

It was translated into LOMHARI sometime in the early 40th century, becoming a novelty black-market book that was shared amongst literate classes across the INNER SEA REGION, much to the displeasure of many governing bodies, that went to great lengths to have the book banned.

RUSAMADARIID: Rvr. River dominating the east of Kharkharadontis, flowing south east for over 3,500-miles from sources in the south of the MOLOTH KHAMMOTHUL Mountains and OHBOKHAR BASIN, before reaching the north west of NOAVATUR, eventually reaching lake SAURIAN at the coast of Noavatur. Its waters have been known to run foul from corruption in the north, and lands surrounding it are largely unsettled, save for the settlement of MAYDABIKON in Noavatur, which utilises siphon engines to purify the water.

RUSASH: Rvr. River in the c of SABIA, flowing east for 230-miles before emptying into the SEA OF BIELOST.

RUSINA: Set. Fortified city along the border between the north east of ELAT and the north west of AYAD. It is a major trade centre between the two nations (Pop. c. 48,400).

RUSS: Soc. Rnk. Title in RAONGEN, equivalent to lord.

RUSSEM: Set. Small coastal city in the south east of LAASKHA. It once had a thriving fishing community, though its waters are now barren and its docks and boathouses are now largely abandoned (Pop. c. 13,750).

RUSSINA: Set. Caravanserai-city in the north east of DURCHAA^(1.) (Pop. c. 13,400).

RUST: Soc. Lan. Lower-class slang within the KORACHANI EMPIRE, meaning pick-pocket.

RUST SLUG: Fau. large slugs that can grow up to 12" long that subsist on oxidised metals. Commonly found in areas of high rust, such as rust fields or structures (typically abandoned) that are predominantly metal. Their saliva breaks down the rust which they then eat over a period of days. Though the individual midge's consumption is barely noticeable, they travel in swarms of thousands which can reduce large deposits in hours. They are a nuisance in urban areas. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

RUSTLANDS: Geo. Soc. Cultural region generally thought of to encompass the east of KORACHAN and the west of Pelasgos, which were the ancient industrial heart of the empire, and whose mine, quarries, foundries and factories have been abandoned for centuries if not millennia. The Rustlands is not a defined area, but rather a generic name given to such abandoned towns, factories and mines in the aforementioned regions, though specific cities or areas surrounded by Rustlands might not themselves be considered part of the Rustlands.

RUSTMEN, the: Org. Descendants of ancient loremasters that once tended the TOWER OF VIRACOCHAN in the south east of PELASGOS. The Rustmen live in ghettos in cities in the east of Pelasgos, though they do make up the majority of the populations of some smaller settlements. Some of them devote their lives to retrieving the ancient metal tablets that their ancestors once guarded.

RUSTED KNIGHT, the: Leg. An old LASCAR⁽³⁾ legend that remains now in LAASKHA and the west of AZAZEM and parts of SKAROS, the rusted knight is a figure of vengeance that is said to roam the land, challenging those he meets to battles of wit or might, testing their worthiness.

The rusted knight is a ghostly figure, named after the pitted full-plate armour he is said to wear. His presence is presaged by the stench of decay and mould and he speaks in a sibilant whisper. He is most commonly encountered on barren crossroads at night by those travelling in solitude. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

RUSTWORM: Fau. In the salty deserts of south eastern KHARKHARADONTIS, flat worms growing to lengths of 20-30-ft. that feed on naturally occurring ores in the area. Their saliva turns metal into rust, and they eat the rust, as a result they often attack small imperial settlements. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

RUSTED ISLES, the: Sea. Small sea between KORACHAN and PELASGOS.

The sea is almost completely devoid of sea life, giving rise to its current name.

RUSZA: Set. Coastal city in the c of SABIA, overlooking the SEA OF BIELOST. Its main industry is fishing, though its waters are not as bountiful as they once were (Pop. c. 14,200).

RUTALUM: Dre. Myr. Mys. The SARASTROAN word for the DREAMWORLD.

RUTAN: 1. Geo. Island off the south western coast of HOLOLACH^(1.).

2. Mil. Str. Island-fortress in the prefecture of SONTADRIS in the south west of HOLOLACH^(1,), overlooking the entrance into the entrance of the BAY OF NATRIS.

RUTASHA: Set. Small city in the c west of RAONGEN^(2.), in the north east of the ERIVOINE Mountains. Its main industry is the mining of OMNATITE (Pop. c. 18,000).

RUTHA: Geo. Small island 79-miles off the northern coast of SAMMAEA, forming part of HOAMM.

RUTHUNODA: Geo. Low hills in the c. of KORACHAN, forming the northern face of the AKAGHA Mountains. The region remains one of the few significant fertile areas of the KORACHANI PENINSULA and is home to most husbandries and farms in Korachan.

RUTILANT: Int. Obj. Gigantic ATRAMENTAL prism, measuring some 30-ft across, half-buried in the hill lands of ANIT NUR in c AHKA. The prism appears differently to everyone though it is blinding to those with the ability to shape and due to this it has been shunned throughout most of recorded history.

RUTAHASHA: Sec. Trade city in the far north east of AETHIOS, not far from the border with SIRIPHAGOS. It is a major trade centre, with trade house controlled by Siriphagan merchant lords (Pop. c. 75,000).

RUUSHILLIGN: Myt. His. 1st generation SCION who is infamous in WESTERN LLACHATUL, particularly in RAONGEN⁽²⁾, as a devourer of unwilling mortal spirits. Desperate to attain the status of godhood once enjoyed by its ancestors the DEMIURGES, it was said to roam the land feeding on any and all that it encountered, becoming corpulent and bitter. Though the tale is relatively common knowledge amongst the nations of Western Llachatul, the tale was always believed to be little more than parabolic and symbolic in nature.

RUZASHAALK: Ind. Largest open-cast mine complex in PRE-SUNDERING KORACHAN, located in the c north west of VAALK. The complex covers an area of some 240 square-miles and comprises seven different pits and quarries, all of which were major suppliers of iron ore between c. 1800 – 2700 RM. The largest pit is RUZA, which measures almost 5-miles across and is close to 5,000-ft deep, the bottom of which is filled with rust red water that's anathema to life in the region. It's so large that the weather inside it is different to outside the complex. Operations were reduced greatly in c. 2700 RM and it was abandoned fully in 3707 RM, despite attempts by HOUSE KOAN to stretch its usefulness.

In the years since its abandonment, it has been home to bandits and unlicenced miners.

RUGGORATH, BANE OF LIGHT: (B. 52 RM) Pol. Mil. His. Regent appointed by the Archpotentate Malichar prior to his departure for Nárthel in 82 RM. A powerful Shaper, he was a pioneer in the Atramental arts following the rise of Shaping in Korachan. He was largely ignored until the mysterious disappearance of the Archpotentate following his victories in Nárthel in 84 RM, at which point he became an object of scrutiny and hatred in the imperial capital of Khadon.

Little is known about him other than his appointment and the implication that he was to rule in Malichar's absence, something that was looked at with resentment by the DESPOSYNI and Malichar's other faithful, such as THE CONSULITE, the CHOSEN OF MALICHAR, and the COUNSIL OF SEVEN. Many records state clearly that he was unloved by those in power and he was even blamed for Malichar's' disappearance by some Ruggorath seemed not to care and left the newly-appointed Council of Seven to rule as he perfected the Atramental arts, travelling with the Imperial armies as they conquered other lands and nations. He was ruthless, a general without compare and a self-confessed torturer of FIRMAMENTISTS, and his methods were seen as barbaric even by the other PATRICIAN-generals of the Imperial armies. One of his few autonomous acts as regent was ordering the construction of the BRIDGE OF VALAMIR in the south of Korachan, seemingly to spite his detractors.

Though, just as he appeared before Malichar's disappearance, he too would disappear in 105 RM. The power vacuum left in his wake would lead to the two-century period known as the REIGN OF THE EMPTY THRONE, which almost tore Korachan asunder.

He was the subject of the mysterious painting titled THE ETERNAL RALLY, which was rediscovered in the BASILICA OF KHADON in 3773 RM

RUSINA: Pol. Soc. One of the earliest PATRICIAN HOUSES that appeared around the INNER SEA, in c. 150 RM, in the east of AZAZEM. It was one of six Patrician Houses that in 243 RM seceded from the KORACHANI EMPIRE and formed the REPUBLIC OF LARATHUKH⁽²⁾. The republic was attacked by Patrician Houses that had remained loyal to the empire, and it was toppled in 271 RM, and four of the six Patrician Houses died with it, including House Rusina. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

RUWETH: Lak. Lake in the west of LOEGRESS^(1,), forming a part of the course of the river MORRINACH.

RUYAH: Set. Fortified coastal settlement in the far south east of ATARAXIA. It was once a major fishing centre but the slow death of the STRAIT OF SKAROS has seen it dwindle in the past decades, and today its harbour is known to seasonally silt up due to decreasing sea-levels (Pop. c. 17,000).

RYCRAAT: Set. Large city in the c north east of TAAN AN, along a major crossroads between land trade routes, the course of the river MERREANTI, and the AQUEDUCT OF CREPHITHISS. It was at this point that a major collapsed section in the aqueduct once allowed water to flow north east into the ACCA HOAL Basin, forming the endorheic lake STONNARA, which slowly disappeared following the aqueducts repair many centuries ago.

The repairing of the aqueduct attracted many workers, necessitating the foundation of a worker's settlement at its base, which eventually grew into the city of Rycraat, which survives to this day as a major UMBRA processing centre along the ZENEGE RES PIPELINE route (Pop. c. 69,000).

RYHASSHARAUCH: also 'the Stillborn'. x. Myt. His. In the mythology and ancient history of ELYDEN, twenty-second of the Two-and-Twenty DEMIURGES, whose children were the RAREVAS.

The cursed Demiurge, Ryhassharauch was stillborn, its body inert, yet its mind DREAMING and bitter. Its children were likewise cursed without life, their seven seeds fossilised, never having become MORTALS. It is believed that its bitterness and hatred of the living is so intense that its dreams are responsible for many of the DREAMSCAPES around Elyden.

It has no known \underline{SCIONS} . See Vol IV: the Two-and-Twenty Demiurges.

RYKK: Geo. Major Mountain-chain in PORPHYR, stretching from the lowlands in the north west of Porphyr to the south east for 900-miles, where it meets the POROPHOSSYR Mountains. Its northern face is riddled with volcanoes, both active and extinct, as well as sulphurous wastes and geysers.

RYKKA: Set. City in the c of PORPHYR, 100-miles to the south west of MT. RYKKA (Pop. c. 18,000).

RYNDA: Mil. Org. Militant arm of the KASPIAN HEGEMONY, who serve as personal guards to league members and protect league sessions on a larger scale. Their leaders are the SHIEUILL.

RYOGEN: Sea. Sea in the far north of LLACHATUL, north of the SOCIALIST REPUBLIC OF ALMAGEST.

RYOGENI BASIN: Geo. Drainage basin formed by various continental divides in the continent of LIACHATUL, including parts of the LLACHATULI DIVIDE. The basin comprises parts of the north of Llachatul, and all rivers within it drain directly into the SEA OF RYOGEN.

Nations and territories that are at least partially within the Ryogeni Basin include: ALMAGEST, KOLCHIS, RAONGEN^(2.), and VALBAR^(2.).

RYOON: Ser. Fortified settlement in the far north west of KREM, forming part of the trade-route into the far south of TZALLRACH (Pop. c. 7,000).

RYTHON: Pol. Soc. PATRICIAN HOUSE in the KORACHANI EMPIRE. Its ships were responsible for the notorious Rythoni Spill, that devastated the northern coast of MHAROKK in 4001 RM. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

RYTHONI SPILL: Sup. Soc. Geo. Large UMBRA spill off the northern coast of MHAROKK in 4001 RM covering 380 square-miles of sea and 240-miles of coastline, including the entirety of the BAY OF SAFFA. The spill was caused by an umbra tanker belonging to HOUSE RYTHON tanker, the 'St Gaspat', running aground on a reef and spilling 30-million gallons of crude umbra, which was carried slowly west. The spill caused the devastation of close to a third of the coastline of Mharokk, and the death and corruption of unnumbered species of flora and fauna. A few scattered attempts at clearing the coastline were attempted, but abandoned after the magnitude of effort required was realised. The region is now largely shunned, though some groups have started studying the effects of the spill, particularly on wildlife that survives in the region.

RZAQAFAHAM: Set. Small fortified city in the far north west of NOAVATUR. It is known for its lead mines (Pop. c. 10,000).

S

S'HI TUL: Geo. Scrublands in the c of KHAMID, south of the AHSUDET highlands and west of the NEFERATH Mountains. The region is home to much of what remains of most Khamidian wildlife.

S'UBARRU: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the far north west of N'RAKH, guarding the insular nation from incursion from LIDEA to the north and PARAIYA to the west. It is an expansive structure, and one of few examples of N'rakhi architecture that can be seen from outside its territories.

SARETH: Ser. Capital and largest permanent settlement in ALAM BETHYL, and seat of power of the FEDERAL ASSEMBLY since 3482 RM, and also capital of the territory of UNERKILISS⁽²⁾. Prior to that it was home to the SORCEROUS ruling caste until their ousting following the BETHYLAN CIVIL WAR. Its population almost doubles in winter when the lands around it become inhospitable and nomads and mountain folk from the north seek the protection afforded by its walls (Pop. c. 369,000).

SA'AYA: Set. Fortified settlement in the far west of the SULTANATE OF
ABACARDAT. Like many settlements surrounding the UHBATAQI basin it is a major producer of salt (Pop. c. 3,000).

SA'LLAR: Set. Settlement in the north west of BA'AKH, forming part of the SHADOW MARCH as well as the SALT ROAD. It offers various services to PETITIONERS OF THE MACHINE and merchants alike, which it has turned into its main industry today (Pop. c. 34,000).

SA'WEH: Geo. Region in what are now the present-day SAUA and the far east of AHRISHEN, that emerged from the early FIFTH AGE nation of SAEDISH in c. 1320 RM. Characterised by its five distinct regions, known as the FIVE THRONES, which were: ADAIA, DERIKO, IOMA, OKASI, and YAMORRA. They were warlike regions, as prone to squabbling amongst themselves as they were to attacking neighbouring nations.

Starting in 3022 RM the states entered a period of strife dominated by internal unrest culminating in full-in war between themselves that lasted for decades, during which the spiritual figure known as BAHMA TORA fell into a catatonic state. This period ended only in 3108 RM through the exploits of General HU of ADAIA. He became the first emperor (or DIADON) of a united Saua, uniting the 5 Thrones as one nation that became known as Saua. He split the remaining territories (some had been lost to Ahrishen and the HARÉSHK) into 65 states, now known as the FIVE-AND-SIXTY, which were divided between the noble families and loyal warlords from all Five Throne. See Vol III: Extinct States.

SA'WEHI: His. Lan. Ancient language of the SA'WEHI people, from which the modern language of SA'WESH emerged. See Vol II: Languages.

SA'WESH: Lan. Language of SAUA that emerged from the ancient SA'WEHI. See Vol II: Languages.

SAABARATH: 1. Geo. Rugged escarpment in the north west of LAASKHA, to the west of the LAASATHEA Mountains.

2. Rel. Str. Tomb and shrine in the north west of LAASKHA, along the course of THE SHADOW MARCH. The shrine is of religious importance to those who worship the UNDYING MACHINE.

SAABATE: Set. Small coastal city in the north west of LAASKHA. It lies along the route of the SHADOW MARCH and offers hostels and other accommodations to PETITIONERS OF THE MACHINE (Pop. c. 12,000).

SAABRA: Rui. Abandoned city in the c of LAASKHA, in the region of THAZAKHA. It was destroyed in a massive cave-in of weak duststone formations in the area. Once boasting a population of about 40,000, the city is now half-sunken, engulfed by dust, with few clues as to where most of the city is now.

SAADIN: Set. City in the far east of MHAROKK, known for its ancient traditions, which was the source of most HARAPPAN^(3.) culture (Pop. c. 20,000).

SAALEM, KING: (B. –431 – –383 RM) Pol. Historic ruler of CHTHONITHON from –413 RM. He suppressed the philosopher-castes throughout his rule, though they would emerge again after his murder. It was believed that his death was an assassination masterminded by the philosophers, though this could never be proven. The construction of the PARTHISAN COLOSSUS was attributed to him.

SAARA: Int. Set. MANTIS training city in the c of LAASKHA, close to the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region of BETHAL. Its exact location is a closely guarded secret and few are those who know its exact location, and depictions in maps are only approximations.

SAARACHAN: lit 'island City'. Set. Small fortified city in the tribe of SUUR'KA in the north east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. The city originated as a KORACHANI colony in c. 410 RM, where it became a major source of FREESTONE. The freestone mines have since run dry, and the city itself has moved half-a-mile to the east, where aluminium quarries were founded in c. 2400 RM, which are still in use to this day (Pop. c. 18,000).

SAARATAPARR: Rvr. River in the south of LAASKHA, flowing south for some 335-miles from sources in the western-face of the ARCANTHEA Mountains, before emptying into the BAY OF EDASK. Its waters are tainted by inflow from the river AHAABARIPAR, which flows through ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED lands. The mouth of the river is polluted from industries in the neighbouring city of HESHIACHAN.

SAARDAYN: Rui. Abandoned city in the south west of LAASKHA. The city was known for its deep harbours, though the withdrawal of the SEA OF LARSIS by c. 3500 RM saw it landlocked, and its trade ended. The city remains now as a crumbled ruin.

SAAT: Set. Settlement in the region of SIN in the c south of THE SURRACH (Pop. c. 5,500).

SAAT ANID: also 'the Assassin King'. (D. c. 2880 RM) Pol. In c. 2750 he assassinated the head of the ruling priestly caste of the city of AZOSAOTH⁽²⁾, causing it to fragment. He took control of the city and over the coming years attempted to subjugate the surrounding region, though struggled to unite its various people.

- SAATAM: 1. Geo. Small peninsula in the north east of ATARAXIA, overlooking the STRAIT OF SKAROS.
 - 2. Set. Coastal settlement to the south west of the eponymous peninsula, known for its clam farms. It forms a part of the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 4,600).
- SAATAR: Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED lake in the south west of VÂRR, in the region of GHALLETHA^(2.). The lake is thought to be linked via underwater caves with the region of RONONVARR to the north.
- SABA: Sec. Small city in the north of the tribe of LEGEO, in the c south of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 16,300).
- SABACHAN: Set. Small city in the north west of KORACHAN, just west of the Bay of LALLEH. Its steep harbours have allowed it to remain by the water's edge, where it maintains a large slave market, where slaves are brought from AHKA and other lands for sale. It was one of the first cities to bring MULL slaves from west of the STRAIT OF SKAROS some 200 150 years ago and as a result the surrounding region is today renowned for its large mull slave population (Pop. c. 14,500).
- SABAEA: Dem. 'Sabaea'. Ntn. Nation in the west of WESTERN MENISCEA. Its main cities are HADRAMAOUT, and MAHROUB, the names of which were inherited from an old predecessor nation, on whose ruin Sabaea is built. It is known for the Cult of the True king, whose members revere a recently dead king as a god, out of hatred and fear towards a replacement. Sabaea was a member of the FEDERATION OF FREE NATIONS OF MENISCEA. Its south western territories are a shallow coastal plains that was submerged as recently as three centuries ago. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.
- SABAISA: Dem. 'Sabaisan'. Situated along the TROPIC OF MAOCARHL in the far east of SAMMAEA, the name Sabaisa was first used in 1598 RM, with the union of the TWIN BANNERS of MENKAR and SATTAR ISHA, following the influence of TELEANYARA APEXEIDE, prior to her abandonment of their people and hundred-year disappearance.

The twin kingdoms spread to encompass the southern-most part of the PORPHYRI PENINSULA. A swelteringly hot place, moist air carried over the MIROVEAN OCEAN provides a lifeline through which forests and other vegetation can survive, making life there possible.

For much of its history, Sabaisa was ruled by a royal dynasty with its roots in the precursor Menkarri and Sattar Ishan kingdoms. In 2246 RM an ancient caste of shapers, long thought dead, known as the ATTESTORS, revealed themselves, becoming advisors to the crown. They foresaw a time of darkness during which the royal family would disappear. Their warnings went unheeded, and in 2931 RM the royal family was killed in a religious coup during a solar ECLIPSE.

After this, various political and militant groups made attempts for the throne, none of which would prove to be permanent, whilst warlords and other opportunists made their own claims, making a recovery difficult for the region. Sabaisa broke down, and a centuries-long dark age followed.

In 3526 RM the exiled JAHINN ALDEBARRA was able to unite the disparate states of Sabaisa following two years on campaign with his son acting as lieutenant. He kept the name Sabaisa, though the old royal family had long-since been forgotten, Instead he founded a new SULTANATE, echoing the government of his old home in ABACARDAT. Following this, Sabaisan culture took on a more southern veneer.

Its people, like most in the Porphyri peninsula, are descended from FOURTH AGE unions between the human inheritors of the world and the near-extinct irothani — blue-skinned mortals beholden to NYARLOTH. Many individuals have skin with faint blue taint, or skulls that are slightly elongated, as a result. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

- SABAISAN: Lan. Language spoken in the SULTANATE OF SABAISA. It has its roots in the birth of Sabaisa, in c. 1600, following the unification of the TWIN KINGDOMS of MENKAR and SATTAR ISHA, when their disparate tongues (MENKARRI and SATTAR ISHAN, respectively) began to evolve into one tongue, with different facets of the two parent tongues taking precedence until by c. 2400 RM a standardised tongue had emerged that is still spoken to this day, with slight changes over time. See Vol II: Languages.
- SABAAR: Rvr. River in the prefecture of ALITENEA in the north east of HOLOLACH^(1.), flowing for 275-miles from its source in the SABASSOR Mountains before meeting its parent, the river ROTAAR.

- SABAHEN: Set. City in the east of AHRISHEN, 8-miles from the border with VIRAHAN. The city is located along the GREAT ROAD the main land trade-route in Ahrishen and trades east with Virahan along the river SARA (Pop. c. 47,750).
- SABAIR: Set. Settlement in the south west of NAARETH. It is known for its production of the exotic banana fruit (Pop. c. 5,500).
- SABAR SULA: Rui. Ancient lion-headed colossi on the island of OTUTU, off the western-coast of TZALLRACH. The colossi date back to before the CATACLYSM OF KHAMID and are relics of ancient TZALLRACHI life.
- SABARRA: Flo. Sacred tree in the WOLD FOREST. It is towering above other trees in the area and is protected by a cult of fanatics, who harvest its sap and use it as a life prolonger. Its use is regulated locally though is sold for incredible amounts to outsiders, largely rulers from WESTERN SAMMAEA.
- SABARRAK: 1. Geo. Depression in the c of THE SURRACH, with a maximum depth of 120-ft.
 - 2. Set. Small city in the c north of THE SURRACH, to the south east of the forest of HISPIDIA. Its primary industry is the crafting of wooden statues and object d'art (Pop. c. 12,500).
- SABARUH: Set. Coastal settlement in the south east of GYZHA. Its main industry is fishing, and its people practice an ancient form of stilt fishing with fishermen standing on poles in shallow waters, waiting for hours at a time to fill their quota (Pop. c. 3,800).
- SABASHAAR: 1. Geo. Expansive valley in the far north east of ROMOREA^(2.). Weathering in the valley indicates that a river once flowed south across it, though it likely ran dry during the FOURTH AGE.
 - 2. Mil. Str. Major fortress in the north east of ROMOREA^(2.), guarding the region from foreign attention.
- SABASSOR: Geo. Mountains in the north east of HOLOLACH^(1.). It is a source of many rivers, in particular, the river Rotaar, which flows in a steep valley system before reaching the plains to the west.
- SABASTAR: Set. Open-cast mine and adjacent settlement in the south eastern hills of the ADALLA Mountains. The quarries appeared following the retreat of the INTERREGES from VÂRR in 3791 RM and though small are major source of income to the REGENT-KINGS, who sell the diamonds to the north east (Pop. c. 1,200).
- SABATA: Mil. Str. Fortress situated in the north of THE SURRACH, along the IVORY ROAD, belonging to the KNIGHTS AENEOUS. It is a base for rangers who patrol the region.
- SABATIA: Mil. Set. Small city in the north west of AHKA. It is a major training ground for the region's military, including the IRENARCHS (Pop. c. 15,400).
- SABATON: Set. Settlement in the URTAN LEAGUE, in the south west of IZABAL^(1.), known for its OLIVE groves. It was once the seat of power of a tyrannical government, which was overthrown in 3682 RM, after which a new capital was established in the city of URTAN. (Pop. c. 5,800).
- SABATTA: Set. Major city in the far north east of CISNERIA. Its main industry is logging, and it also relations with MASSALAR, serving as a trade-route into the independent mercantile city-state (Pop. c. 90,500).
- SABATTOS: Mil. Str. Fortress in the east of PELASGOS, overlooking the SEA OF SPIRES, guarding the sea route into TEREKION.
- SABBAR: 1. Flo. Common AGAVE plant in the KORACHANI EMPIRE, particularly AZAZEM, SKAROS, VAALK, and ALMAGEST, adapted to temperate-cold climates. Individuals grow very large, commonly 15 ft. in diameter, often as high as 20 or 30 and is extremely hardy, growing in areas of little rainfall, otherwise-barren soil and intensity of the Atramenta. It flowers once a decade, with a single flower-stem growing out of the central mass of leaves. It is used for weaving and brewing a type of BRAN known as sabbar⁽²⁾.
 - 2. Bev. A type of BRAN made from the sabbar^(1.) plant. See Vol II: Beverages.
 3. Set. Town in AZAZEM, known for the production of the plants of the same name^(1.) (Pop. c. 5,000).
 - 4. Set. Coastal settlement in the north west of ELAT (Pop. c. 3,750).
- SABBARA: Geo. Road in the east of AZAZEM crossing the TERRACHT escarpment.

SABBARAN: Geo. Mountain chain in the east of WESTERN MENISCEA overlooking the SEA OF SIPARIA. The mountain runs for some 530-miles from the south of LARISH (where it is at its highest and most treacherous) down to the strait leading into the SEA OF PANOTIA and the north east of ETUL.

SABBAROT: Geo. Rocky region in the south west of TRAKIA, to the east of the KEPHAMISHAI Mountains. The region is dry and supports sparse shrublands.

SABBATOR: Set. Settlement in the c of GIBEAH. It is known for its ancient cisterns though these are said to have been polluted centuries ago, rendering them unusable. They have since become refuge to different individuals and groups at different times (Pop. unknown).

SABBAYN: Set. Collection of closely linked settlements in the c east of LAASKHA, built in the fertile soils of LAABOU KENNATH. Their main industry is agriculture, and their people are also adept hunters of the TAINTED creatures that emerge from the region of KANAAIR SHOS (Pop. c. 4,500).

SABBHAL: Set. Major fortified coastal city in the south east of ZHARIAH⁽²⁾. The city emerged in c. 3300 RM from five separate cities whose growth saw them merge into a single entity. These historical cities continue to shape both its character and geography to this day, making it the largest conurbation in Zhariah (Pop. c. 1,280,000).

SABBOQUA: Geo. Gently-sloping hilly region covered intermittently with scree and boulders in the north of THE SURRACH, south of the NGHALLEAL Mountains.

SABBRAT: Gam. Boardgame common in the north east of EASTERN SAMMAEA, particularly in VENTHIR. The game features a board in the shape of a VENTHIRI CROSS that contains 85 indentations where pieces can be moved. The game is culturally important in the ARID TRIPTYCH region, and is played by most adult men and some women (though more rural regions may be reticent of letting them play), and most cities have SABBRAT BARS, which are a focal point of culture where people can meet to drink, eat, game, and gossip. See Vol II: Games and Pastimes.

SABBRAT BAR: Str. Gam. Taverns common in the ARID TRIPTYCH region of EASTERN SAMMAEA, though most widespread in VENTHIR, where the boardgame of SABBRAT is commonly played, usually by men, over drinks and/or food. The game is taken very seriously and most such taverns have enforcers and referees to handle disputes (both related the game rules, as well as arguments that often break out).

Many cities have leagues and tournaments where Sabbrat masters can test their mettle against competitors. See Vol II: Games and Pastimes.

SABBROS: Set. City in the c east of SAGITTARIA. Its people are superstitious, clinging to the ancient belief of their SAGITTAARI forbears (Pop. c. 73,000).

SABEA: Set. Harbour in the east of VENTHIR at the mouth of the river TEIRIS. It has a history of smuggling, and many of its landmarks and old buildings were built through the spoils of piracy (Pop. c. 13,400).

SABHAR: Set. Settlement in the north of SARASTRO just north of the region of BUTAR. It is the main exporter of the diamonds and jewellery produced there (Pop. c. 6,000).

SABIA: Dem. 'Sabian'. Ntn. A nation in the north of CENTRAL LLACHATUL, situated to the east of the DESOLATION OF ASTUDAN, overlooking the SEA OF BIELOST, better-known as the WHITE SEA to most. It is known for its boreal forests and cold, windswept plains, that are home to large herds of beasts and industrious settlements that are linked by a strong trade-network.

Appearing as the Kingdom we know today in 3493 RM, Sabia is descended from the older kingdom of SAKKHRIA, which collapsed in 3222 RM following the final death of its OTHERWORLDLY ruler, the FROST KING, who is remembered today as the chief deity in the Sabian pantheon of the FROSTBLOOD. It grew rapidly in its first century, expanding north, reclaiming territories abandoned by a waning ELDRIA, whose ORREX leaders had grown corrupt and insular. The fall of Eldria in 3682 RM cemented the claim of Sabia's new territories, and it grew more powerful as a result.

Sabia has, like its predecessor, SAKKHRIA, withstood many KORACHANI and ALMAGESTI CRUSADES into its lands. These have targeted its southern cities, and their FIRMAMENTISTS and their 'heathen' culture, leading to many settlements being attacked and ultimately abandoned over the years, following the genocide of their people. This has left the people of Sabia with a strong enmity of Korachan and Almagest, between which they see little distinction.

A popular legend in Sabia is the SWORD TARTARUCH, which was forged by the SAVANT-KING of old, and was used to defeat many demons that beset the early borders of Sakkhria. The sword was wielded by many champions over the years and was lost in 3590 RM after a battle with an OTHERWORLDER and its followers in the ALLASAI. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

SABIAN: 1. Lan. Language spoken in modern SABIA. It emerged from SAKKHRIAN. See Vol II: Languages.

2. Rel. Str. Monastery in the c north of GNOTH, located in the south west of the SOLUN HIGHLANDS. The monastery is one of the seven MONASTERIES OF THOUGHT.

SABIANISM: Adj. 'Sabian'. Rel. Astral duotheistic religion that appeared in early ALAM BETHYL. Its main deities – the QUEEN OF CONSTELLATIONS, and the KING IN THE HEAVENS – are depicted as being in constant opposition of one another and rule above a vast court of constellations, stars and other astral phenomena. The religions' roots are thought to lie east in KOLCHIS, where it is worshiped as a secondary religion by its CONSTELLAR caste, though it found its home in Alam Bethyl, where it is worshipped widely by all social strata.

Links have been drawn between the dual aspects of this religion and the month-long day and night of summer and winter, respectively, experienced in the north of Alam Bethyl. See Vol IV: Religions and Pantheons.

SABIK: Set. Coastal settlement in the south of AQUARIIA, overlooking the SEA OF LIAKARRA (Pop. c. 20,000).

SABILE IO SGIROUT: f. (B. 3923 RM) Pol. Per. Current ruler of ROMOREA^(2,) and head of the royal family. She ascended the throne in 3952 RM after the death of her FATHER, and continues the legacy of depravity that was begun by her GRANDFATHER, building great monuments and structures while the majority of hr kingdom lives in shackles.

SABISSILIAN REVOLTS: His. Tumultuous period of history in KARAKHAS that was characterised by massed revolts across the nation starting in c. 1200 RM. The PAIAMALLI ORDER was founded in 1242 RM specifically to deal with these revolts in a cost-effective manner that minimised bloodshed, and though it was effective, the unruly nature of the Karakhasid people meant that the region could not be fully controlled.

The period culminated in 1248 RM with a civil war that saw the region of LATERITIA devastated. The revolts were quelled and order was restored to the nation through the actions of the renowned general (later ruler) NOMROS, though the region remained a hotbed of unrest for centuries after.

The revolts were named after a minority group whose actions were able to rile up an already restless population to defy the government.

SABLED SUN, the: Int. Org. A secretive arcane organisation active in PARTHIS since 3994 RM. It has taken responsibility for seemingly unrelated acts of terrorism across Parthisan cities over the past years, including the bombing of the IMPERIAL OPERA HOUSE in 3999 RM.

The group is thought to have cells in many major cities across the Parthisan empire, with a decentralised and hierarchical leadership, limiting the amount of information that individual members possess.

Most of its members are believed to be SHAPERS with a shared agenda that likely seeks to destabilise the TETHRAN government, but little else is known of them. Some have posited that they have received foreign funding, but there is little truth to these rumours.

SABNOL: 1. Sct. Fortified settlement in the north of RHINOCOLOURA. It maintains a trade link with AETHIOS in the north and the UMBRA SOKHAR to the south east.

Not to be confused with the city of SABONOL in the east of the UMBRA SOKHAR, with which it shares a trade-route. The names are thought to be etymologically-linked, possibly owing a common ancestry in the early FIFTH AGE or earlier (Pop. c. 70,000).

2. Arc. Bridge in the above city^(1.), crossing the river SHIBBOLETH^(3.).

SABOLO: Set. City in the c of PNESSA. The forests surrounding the city are known to be dangerous to travellers and disappearances and abductions are common. Often attributed to predators and other natural phenomena, some people believe that there is a more sinister explanation (Pop. c. 23,000).

SABOMOR: 1. (B. 1694 – D. 1732 RM) KORACHANI explorer who followed the route of VREGL in 1720 RM. Born in SIDION, he spent his life at sea, first as a sailor, then in 1721 RM as a 1st mate to the explorer ASHERAN. In 1728 RM he sojourned in the c of BROR (1.), naming the region after himself. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

2. Lan. Ntn. $\underline{\text{KORACHANI}}$ name for the $\underline{\text{BRORI}}$ nation of $\underline{\text{TOAHN}}$. It is only recognised by Korachan and has become antiquated, disappearing from most contemporary maps over the last centuries.

SABONOL: Set. City in the east of the UMBRA SOKHAR wastes, and one of the largest closest enclaves of the plagi in the civilised world. The PLAGI of this city are not the insular xenophobes of the KHARKHARADONTID desert, and are known to trade with the people of AETHIOS, ETHISTONITH and RHINOCOLOURA. The city is named for and built over the ruins of an ancient SOKHARAN city.

Its priests are known to sacrifice specially bred three-eyed AUROCHS to their deity in times of uncertainty.

Not to be confused with the city of \underline{SABNOL} in the north of Rhinocoloura, with which it shares a trade-route. The names are thought to be etymologically-linked, possibly owing a common ancestry in the early $\underline{FIFTH\ AGE}$ or earlier.

It originated from an earlier caravanserai that formed part of the famed NOAVATURI TRAIL (Pop. c. 70,000).

SABRAS: Mil. Str. Coastal fortress in the north west of SKAROS, overlooking the STRAIT OF ANEON.

SABRI, COGNATE OF THE MACHINE: (B. 3973 RM) Tec. Born in SKAROS, he was inducted into the ranks of the COGNATES in 3999 RM, where he devoted himself to spreading work of the UNDYING MACHINE around lands to the east of the KORACHANI EMPIRE.

SABRIM: Set. Settlement in the north of ESHIR (2.). It was once a major industrial city, producing vast quantities of pig iron sourced in surrounding mines, as well as UMBRISKA as a by-product of crude UMBRISKA as a by-product of crude UMBRISKA as a by-product of crude UMBRA filters and SIPHON ENGINES that protected the city from the nearby ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region of AKUBATH. A filter explosion in c. 3340 RM saw a large part of the siphon engine array destroyed, leading to the spread of corruption in the city, which made it uninhabitable. Forced to evacuate, most of its people weren't accepted in other cities and were forced farther south across the border into VESPERTINE territories, into the BITAMMAN desert, where their descendants now remain, populating the northern foothills of the RAHII Mountain.

Those who remained in the city were mentally and physically scarred by the events, and their descendants would become forevermore shunned by the rest of ESHIR, though they continued their ancestors work in cleaning the land, with ATRAMENTISTS rising to power there, repairing the great siphon engine, bringing a modicum of safety back to the city, though the region of Akubath continued to grow following the accident (Pop. c. 3,500).

SABRIYA: 1. Geo. Once a large sea dominating the eastern coast of ESHIR⁽²⁾, and forming a large inlet of the GULF OF ESHIRON, today Sabriya is a shallow valley that dominates the c of the nation, through which the expansive river GAMUS flows. The 4th millennium RM saw the Bay of Eshiron dwindle, and by c. 3500 RM the thriving Sabriya region was left as salty landlocked wasteland, its hundreds of coastal settlements, abandoned or aling. Today, the region is filled with the tell-tale signs of ancient industries and settlements – crumbling homesteads, rusted machinery, and ruined towns.

Of the major settlements on the region, only the city of ANAFA remains, which found itself at the edge of a freshwater lake when the sea level retreated, allowing it to survive.

In 1209 RM a GODSTONE was discovered in the mudflats of Sabriya, leading to a period of strife with various kindreds vying for control of the mystical object. This period ended in c. 1620 RM when the overlord

Drerllatar Farisûn used it to force surrounding city state into vassalage.

2. Rui. Major ruin in the c south of ESHIR^(1.). It was once a major coastal city overlooking the Bay of Sabriya^(1.), though as the bay disappeared with the wane of the GULF OF ESHIRON, the city was left landlocked, eventually being abandoned, with people leaving it for Anafa, which found itself on the eastern bank of the newly-revealed lake Eusis, which was formed as river Gamus chased the expanding coastline as the sea continued to retreat.

SABRIYAN STONE: Sup. Obj. Pol. His. A GODSTONE discovered in the mudflats of the SEA OF SABRIYA in 1209 RM, altering the course of history in the region. The stone became coveted by the various kindreds and city-states of the disparate ASSEERIAN people. It brought chaos and war to the region, and changed hand many times as people allied against its new possessors. It was most-famously wielded by the DRERLLATAR FARISÛN, who ruled for over five centuries, before his mysterious assassination in 2175 RM, after which the Sabriyan Stone was lost.

The Stone was rediscovered quite by chance by the Atramentist Aliqur in 3203 RM, who then used it to attack a small region in the south east of ESHIR⁽²⁾. He was ultimately defeated, and the godstone was confiscated. Following a vote by the Eshirian Republic council, the fortresses of AKROL, AVIRAR, and LAUK were reinforced, and the Stone was placed secretly in one of them, though many people believed that it was placed in a fourth undisclosed location. GODSLAYERS attacked Eshir in 3481 RM, intent on destroying the stone and desecrating its PANTHEON temples. The Godslayer forces were later found to be under KAZZARAN control, though they were ultimately defeated in 3514 RM, leading to the founding of a new branch of the ORDER OF THE STONE whose members operate as well-trained and equipped elites both within and without Eshir.

Thanks to their work, the Sabriyan Stone has been largely forgotten by the world at large, with most Eshirian people being completely ignorant to its history.

SABSIS: Rui. Expansive ruins in northern reaches of the plains of ESTIA in the north east of LYRIDIA. The ruins are granite and weather-worn, little more than fragmentary foundations half-buried in the plains, the compact earth embracing them tightly. They are largely ignored, though are often used by travellers as a camping site.

SABUKKI: Set. City in the north of SAUA (Pop. c. 50,000). *

SABURA: Soc. Rnk. Knightly servant caste, devoted and dedicated to serving the ruling castes of MALAN. They are immune to many Malani laws, and are unswervingly loyal and vicious warriors who forsake the path of the shaper due to the vows they take.

SABURRA: Set. Major settlement in the eponymous region in the c of THE SURRACH. It is noted for the solid granite foundations of its buildings (Pop. c. 87,000).

SACAM, KING: Pol. Self-proclaimed king of ZABAL. *

SACHAPH: Set. Settlement in the west of RHEA, known for its aluminium mines, which are the main industry of the nation (Pop. c. 18,200).

SACHAR: Geo. Rugged highlands in the c of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of EDICULE^(1.).

SACHARA: Rvr. River that flows south east for over 280-miles from the SACHAR highlands in central EDICULE in the HARÉSHK. The river is a tributary of the river ROHOTHA.

SACHARAL: Ind. Str. Major fortified chemical manufacturer and producer of shadowsteel overlooking the river ICHORIA in the city of ZEPHANICHAN in KORACHAN. From the outside one would be forgiven for mistaking it for a fortress, for it is concealed behind thick slanted reinforced concrete walls covered with buttresses. It is only the smokestacks, pipes and reservoirs that can be seen above the walls that offer a glimpse into its function. The river flows sluggishly between these canyon-like walls, its waters tainted by chromatic wisps and ATRAMENTAL pollutants. So foul is the air within the manufactory that most workers wear SOFTSUITS, and those who do not rarely last long.

SACHLOAL: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the south east of THE SURRACH, guarding the pass between the STRAMINEA and ABOSHATHOT Mountains.

- SACHRAN: Geo. expansive roughlands in the c of MENISCEA, along the border between eastern CEHOPHELA and western IMEAL.
- SACODONTA: Sec. Major city in the west of VÂRR built along a steep-sided ridge that runs north for about 3-miles, and it is a centre for its cattle and vellum. (Pop. c. 50,000).
- SACRAMAD: Soc. Org. One of the 17 GRAND HOUSES of the NACRE LEAGUE. The House is based in the nation of HANNAH and is amongst the most powerful of the Grand Houses, controlling myriad different moneylenders and exchanges along the length of the NACRE ROAD, as over a hundred branches of the BANK OF SACRAMAD. The House provides loans to other Houses and its coffers finance wars and great municipal projects for nations across southern Sammaea, earning it great prestige.
- SACRAMAD, BANK OF: Com. Org. Major bank in SOUTHERN SAMMAEA, with over a hundred branches located across the length of the NACRE ROAD. The Bank is controlled by the GRAND HOUSE of SACRAMAD, which is one of the major Houses of the NACRE LEAGUE and is extremely influential in the region, financing the raising of armies, navies, and wars, as well as municipal projects.
- SACRARIUM OF SETHENYN: Rui. Subterranean temple-complex in LAASKHA, once dedicated to the deity SETHENYN (now a saint of the UNDYING MACHINE), forming part of THE SHADOW MARCH.
- SACRIFICE, CULT OF: Pol. Rel. Cult of personality that emerged in SUMA'YA surrounding the TYRANT OF SUMA'YA, which developed into a crude religion. Worship of the religion is enforced across Suma'ya and takes the form of large-scale masses at the end of which a person is chosen to be sacrificed. Though the law requires that the sacrifice be randomly chosen, in truth this is usually an agitator or enemy of the state. This helps to keep dissent to a minimum. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.
- SACROSANCT SIMULACRUM, the: Rui. Gigantic metal idol in the c west of THE SURRACH, in the region of SÛR GHATH. It is around 100-ft. tall and stands at an angle, half-buried in the soil of the region and depicts in dark pitted metal humanoid figure, its arms destroyed, its head bearing seven eyes and three horns.
- SAD ILLIA: Geo. Island off the eastern coast of THUMAL.
- SADA: Set. Coastal settlement in the north east of BA'AKH. It is cut off from the rest of the nation by the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region of ELOTTUAKEI, though it operates a large harbour, through which it maintains contract with the rest of the nation, as well as IO, across the STRAIT OF GARAP (Pop. c. 8,400).
- SADAAN: Set. Small coastal city in the south east of PARTHIS. Its main industry is fishing and it forms part of the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 14,000).
- SADACABIA: Set. Small fortified city in the north west of AQUARIIA, close to the border with GNOTH, along the course of the river ACHAMOTH. It has a small GIGANRI population, some of which are exiles from the realm of Gnoth (Pop. c. 17,200).
- SADAGOR: Set. Coastal fortress in the west of SKAROSIAN territories in the BLACK MOUNTAINS south of the region of ADAMATI. It ships slaves captured in the west back to Skaros, via the fort of SABRAS, where they are sold around the nation and beyond.
- SADALI: Set. Fortified settlement in the far north of SEDISIA, along the course of the river NASHADRA (Pop. c. 6,000).
- SADANI: Set. City in the south west of the HENDECARCHY of CHLORIS in the south of MALAN. It forms part of the GREAT ROAD trade-route. It is close to the border with KHAMID and has embassies where Khamidian and other diplomats dwell (Pop. c. 37,000).
- SADANIA: Set. City in the c north of SABIA. Its main industry is the quarrying of peat, which is used as fuel (Pop. C. 20,000).
- SADDAI: Sec. Settlement in the north west of TARATI^(1.). Its main industry is iron mining (Pop. c. 8,300).
- SADDALLI: Set. Small city in the east of the island-nation of ARTALSCELLI. It is known for its exclusive ATRAMENTAL college (Pop. c. 18 500)
- SADEMALEK: Set. Fortified settlement in the c-south east of AQUARIIA, forming part of a trade-route east with ATARAXIA across the HARAB pass between the TOLIASOR and BLACK MOUNTAINS. (Pop. c. 10,000).

- SADIATTHA: Geo. Scrub- and grasslands that dominate the north west of the TARAHID ANNEXES. The region is largely untamed, and is home to most of the nations' wildlife.
- SADII: Rel. Str. Mountaintop monastery in the north east of TEMUJA. Its monks are insular and do not speak with outsiders. Because of this little is known of their order and their purpose.
- SADOT: Set. Settlement in the north west of JURRAS⁽²⁾, with sprawling flower fields used in the production of perfumes and other toiletries. The settlement is a centre of a large region filled with small chateaus, each controlling acres of land (Pop. c. 8,000).
- SADROS: Org. Volunteer corps in TAAN AN, whose members maintain and protect the great AQUEDUCT OF CREPHITHISS. Though voluntary, the culture surrounding the Sadros has grown to become so important in Taan An that it is considered a great insult to ones' honour and family to refuse to serve. As a result, almost all able-bodied individuals volunteer for the corps when they come of age at 16. They are chosen based on aptitude to serve in various departments, either as engineers, guards, labourers, or in a myriad of other roles in between. The corps are famed for their hydraulic engineers, who have since constructed many new reservoirs, cisterns and grand steam-operated pumps that are put to good use in Tann Anan cities.

Their work is paid for by the PRAEFECTORATE COUNCIL and lasts for a minimum of one year with various boons granted for every year spent beyond the first, until after seven years, when individuals are granted the rank of citizen, allowing them to vote in Praefectorate elections. Most PRAEFECTS have served in the Sadros corps, and many pride themselves on their many years of service.

- SADZUKAUN: Sct. City in the c south east of ZATAUR, in the south east of SAMMAEA, (Pop. c. 58,000).
- SAEB: Lak. Lake in the c west of SARASTRO, along the course of the river MALICHUL.
- SAECHIN: m. Alc. Mys. Per. (B. < –120 RM D. 1274 RM) ALCHEMIST and powerful SHAPER and SET. In -96 RM he slayed the Lord-occultist Mailligr in ARTA SCELIA, and assumed leadership in his stead. In 4 RM he became a thrall to the KORACHANI EMPIRE, continuing to rule throughout its defection to HOAMM in 165 RM, until his death in 1274 RM.

His death would have many repercussions, including in LIDEA, where dissent amongst his followers would eventually lead to its independence in 1282 RM.

- SAECULA: 1. Sea. Sea, forming the north eastern-most part of the larger SEA OF APHOTIS. The sea is named after the now-ruined city in the region of SUPHLATUS⁽³⁾ in ALMAGEST.
 - 2. Rui. Abandoned city in c ALMAGEST. It was once a coastal city, famed for its manufactories and umbra processors (with pipelines crossing the SEA OF SAECULA from HORSCH), though was since abandoned following the retreat of the coastline. Its expansive ruins are either collapsed in DUSTSTONE fields or partially submerged beneath dust dunes.
- SAECULA, SEA OF: see SAECULA.
- SAEDISH: Dem. 'Saedish'. His. Ntn. Early FIFTH AGE nation in c LLACHATUL, in what is present-day SAUA. It gave way to the more recent nation of SA'WEH in c. 1320, which would in turn give way to Saua.
- Saedish is now known for its persecution of the ESHILLI people who once lived within its borders, nearly wiping them out in their genocide between c. -700-500 RM. This long period of war is thought to be responsible for the dour nature of its people, which in turn may have contributed to its many hedonistic cults. It was once an ally of AHRISHEN though it became insular, cutting down on trade in c. 230 RM. a succession of warmongering rulers led to hostilities with HATHOR between 432 and 438 RM, during which the city of ENEGH was taken.

Between c. 700 – 750 RM it took much of the GOETHAN coast, leading to the eventual unification of Goetha and HARA as the HARÉ SHKA in 807 RM. See Vol II: Extinct Nations.

SAELA: Sea. Strait dividing the islands of SAELEH, in the north west, from ULLMECH^(1.). The strait is around 100-miles wide and around 250-miles long at its longest and empties into the SEA OF MAELER to the south and MIROVEA in the north.

SAELEH: 1. Geo. Nm. Island-nation in the south east of SAMMAEA, to the east of ZHARIAH⁽²⁾, in the far south east of the MIROVEAN OCEAN. Founded in c. 3400 RM from a diaspora of freed Zhariahan slaves, the nation is built on the ruins of an older peoples – the SALL ATHI, who in c. 2430 RM were wiped-out by Zhariahan armies and slavers.

The people of Saeleh are ruled by a strict council that holds close the memory of their ancestors' fates, lest their doom be repeated. They maintain at great cost the great fortresses and towers that defend their coastlines from Zhariah, and their people live hard, if not unfair lives, ever ready for attack from without. Those who are able-bodied are trained to fight and serve 5-years of compulsory service, after which they are declared citizens, keeping their weapons and equipment. Should they be called to service in times of war.

The island is See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

2. Pol. Set. City-state and capital of the eponymous region⁽¹⁾. It was founded in c. 3400 RM by a diaspora of thousands of ZHARIAHAN⁽²⁾ slaves who had been freed amid a period of unrest, reclaiming their ancestors home lands. The new city was founded in the shadow of the ruins of SALL – the old capital of SALL ATH – as a remined of their people's past. The new city was fortified and designed to accommodate a large population – so that anyone outside its walls should could find shelter should they need it (Pop. c. 165,000).

SAELWYN: 1. Geo. Island off the north coast of KOMMEA.

2. Mil. Str. Large coastal fortress on the above island^(1.), in the north of KOMMEA. It guards the entrance into the BAY OF ABIND.

SAEMDAR: (B. 392 – D. 438 RM) Pol. His. King of ancient HARA. He was killed in battle against KORACHANI forces during an attack on what is today the south east of AHRISHEN. Left without heirs, the monarchy ended, with his advisors appointing a TRIARCHY instead.

SAEMDIS: Geo. Large island in the west of the BROKEN LANDS, and home to the monastery of TAA KRI.

SAERO: Set. Settlement in the east of ELAT, along the course of river SOSSOR. Its main industry is the production of cork (Pop. c. 7,300).

SAESPITOSE: Geo. Large spit in the south east of the island of CAMARA in the north east of the CORAL BARONIES. It was formed between c. 3500 – 3700 RM from the lowering of sea levels and the resultant joining of sandbars, atolls and reefs. It remains uninhabited, and has become haven to wildlife, though catamarans from Camara have begun to ply its waters while fishing.

SAETEN RI: His. Str. Geo. Ancient stone pillars in the VAKAR wetlands of the DOMAINS OF SHAUATAS. There are hundreds of sites containing such pillars, and most are now crooked or half-sunken. A few are arranged in circles, though these do not seem to correspond with any pattern or phenomena (such as LEYS or areas of OVERLAY) and their purpose remains unknown. Most are unadorned, though a few have symbols carved into their surface.

SAETH: Set. Settlement in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of ALAMUT (Pop. c. 3,400).

SAEWA: Set. City in the c west of RHEA. It was one of the first major cities in Rhea to adopt the SAEWAL religion, and it remains a centre of the faith to this day. It is also a major centre of ironworking, where raw iron mined in the west is processed into pig iron (Pop. c. 38,000).

SAEWAL: Rel. Dei. Sun-deity worshipped in IACIO and RHEA. The religion has its roots in TZALLRACH, where it was a MYSTERY CULT that emerged from the religion of ANATHA BAETYL in c. 3035 RM. Presided over by a secretive group of holy men calling themselves HIEROMONARCHS, the cult became popular amongst the lower-classes, quickly supplanting the prevalent faith of Anatha Baetyl.

This prompted a holy war that in 3037 RM saw fanatics of Anatha Baetyl drive out the Hieromonarchs. Many were slain, but the survivors fled east, crossing the ARGENT Mountains in c. 3040 RM, where they headed north east into the TURCAR desert.

They re-emerged in c. 3135 in the north of Rhea, challenging the ancient Auradian religion there. For decades the religion of Saewal struggled to gain a foothold from the city of PAEZAL in the north of the region, but the persistence of the Hieromonarchs paid off and by c. 3150 it had spread through trade-routes to the south, gaining a foothold in most cities, where it gained further popularity, ousting the old $\underline{AURADIAN}$ religion.

The Hieromonarchs gained a substantial following over the next decades, becoming powerful, until they were able to oust the AURADIAN DYNASTIES in 3192 RM. The Auradian religion would eventually die in the wake of the spread of Saewal, which remains worshipped in Rhea and Iacio to this day. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

SAFFA: 1. Sea. Sound in the northern coast of MHAROKK, known to have recently been subjected to a massive umbra spill known as the RYTHONI SPILL.

2. Set. City in the north of MHAROKK. It was once a major port though following the defection of NUTHACHAN to the HIGH-EMPIRE major rebuilding works saw a new port built, linking the city with the coast, giving Mharokk a vital link to THE INNER SEA through the north west. It's a major producer of DROSS in the region (Pop. c. 135,000).

SAFOT: Set. Settlement in the east of MHAROKK (Pop. c. 6,000).

SAGAR: Mil. Str. Major fort in the south west of the PARTHISAN colony of VARTA^(1.). It guards the main trade-route between the colony and THE SURRACH and its troops patrol the border of all Varta.

SAGARIN: Rui. Ruined FIFTH AGE city in the north west of METHUMN, located in the middle of the ANTENAS plains. It was once a coastal city overlooking the BAY OF LRITHA long before the slow retreat of ELYDEN'S seas led to the diminishing of the sea and the eventual abandonment of the land-locked city by c. 2600 RM.

SAGATHY: Set. Settlement in the c north of THE SURRACH, known for its fine silks (Pop. c. 7,200).

SAGDALON: Pol. Rnk. Ruling caste in the state of AIGOKHERA in SAMMAEA that has ruled since 3615 RM, after uniting disparate people from the region. Under the Sagdalon's leadership, Aigokhera has been able to secure a large stretch of the IVORY ROAD, making its cities wealthy trade-centres.

 \underline{SAGGAR} : 1. Geo. Region in the c west of THE SURRACH, and target of $\underline{BAKHRAN}$ expansions south west.

2. Set. City in the above region^(1.) in the c west of THE SURRACH, near the falls of RIUH. It is known for its high towers, each belonging to a major family in the city and used as a display of power. It is a major trade influence both up- and downstream along the river ESSRA, and the barges of its merchant houses are a common sight. It is a city divided in two, with a part above and another below the waterfall, each of which is linked with a well-travelled road that moved trade good off the river, across land to the continuation of the river either above or below the waterfall (Pop. c. 100.000).

SAGHAMAT: Set. Small fortified city in the far south of METHUMN. It is an ancient settlement with records dating back to the first centuries of the MEDHAMANNI EMPIRE, where it was founded above a far older necropolis (Pop. c. 10,500).

SAGHAN: Set. Lake-town in TEMUJA along the northern shore of lake KHASGA AUR (Pop. c. 2,200).

SAGITE: Rnk. Order of secretive monks in ILLAKRAR and found in lesser numbers in western AKACHA. Little is known about their dogma and tenets and they survive through donations and living ascetic lives.

SAGITTAAR, TEMPLE OF: Rel. Str. Temple erected on the Island of COSSYRA off the north eastern-coast of TAHALL in 21 RM. Though the temple remains to this day it was abandoned some time ago following the schism between TAHALL and SAGITTARIA.

SAGITTAARI: His. Soc. Ancient snake-worshipping natives of the KORACHANI PENINSULA. Originally only a minor group, they slowly gained a dedicated following as they opposed the rapid changes taking place in Korachan following the rapid rise to power of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR, as their views and beliefs became more public in the summer of 13 RM, many of their numbers were executed in a display of force. They were later driven west by the IRON GUARD, and forced across the Skaros, where they settled lands around the GATE OF EREBETH. Their descendants would fund the nation of TAHALL and SAGITTARIA.

SAGITTARIA: 1. Geo. Headland in the north of SAMMAEA, encompassing the nations of ALTHA⁽²⁾, EREBETH, IZABAL⁽¹⁾, Sagittaria⁽²⁾, the URTAN LEAGUE.

2. Dem. 'Sagittarian'. Ntn. Nation in the north of SAMMAEA, south of the GATE OF EREBETH. First colonised by SAGITTAARI exiles of KORACHAN in c. 15 RM. Led by the KNIGHTS-EXILE they had been driven out of Korachan in 13 RM by the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR for their opposition of his reforms and worship of the so-called ASP GOD. They settled the land around the Gate of Erebeth and spread north and south from there, ruling both territories as a single entity.

In the south they encountered a simple pastoral people with sparse city states, collectively known as the EMERATIANS. The Sagittarians were quick to settle the region through ha mix of peaceful absorption or more hostile subjugation, and by c. 50 RM Sagittaria had come to control trade across the Gate of Erebeth, growing wealthy under the leadership of the Knights-exile as it took on the role of link between THE INNER SEA and the SEA OF SERPENTS, founding many prosperous cities around the SEA OF TROJA.

In 76 RM the region was gripped by civil war over attacks against Korachani trade and the nation was sundered in two in $80 \text{ RM} - \underline{\text{TAHALL}}$ in the north and Sagittaria in the south.

The appearance of the MEROVICHI DYNASTY saw trade with the east dwindle as it focussed on the south west instead. The nation grew incredibly wealthy from trading exotic goods from THE SURRACH east even as it looked to its past relations with Korachan with growing bitterness.

The Merovichi Dynasty was ousted by their own advisor who in 1567 RM became ruler, known as the AUTOCRAT OF SAGITTARIA. Leading a caste of sycophantic sorcerers, he allowed the largest Sagittarian harbours to become landlocked as the INNER SEA retreated. The region stagnated and existed only to serve him and his allies.

In 2163 RM the Knights-exile were able to kill him and depose his followers, taking control and marrying into the remnants of the ancient merchant-houses in an effort to bring back stability to the region. The autocrats' body was interred within a technarcane engine by his followers and hidden within the independent city of SOGASSA.

With its inland sea (and all its harbours and ports) dry and its coastal farmlands barren, the region waned. PLAGUE wracked the nation in 2758 RM, leaving it devastated. Forced into it by the followers of the Autocrat, the Knights-exile turned for help to the god-machine (later known as the INTERMINABLE ONE) whose religion has spread across their land. Under his direction, they were able to bring wealth back to Sagittaria, but they were slowly manipulated by the gods' priests until they became his puppets.

Revolts in the western territories in 3122 RM over working conditions and the unjust redistribution of wealth led to all-out war by 3158 RM, that engulfed the west of the nation. The war ended when a Sagittarian SHAPER died the next year, taking most of the Sagittarian armies with it, allowing rebelling troops to secure much land. They called for a ceasefire, catching the Knights-exile off-guard. They agreed to the terms, and in 3159 RM the war was ended, with $\underline{IZABAL}^{(1.)}$ and surrounding cities – by then wasted by the war – breaking away from Sagittaria on condition that contact between the two remain peaceful.

By 3236 RM the rule of the Knights-exile was over, replaced by the sorcerer-priests of the Interminable One. The Knights-exile remained in small numbers guarding the merchants plying their trade along the IVORY ROAD

The Interminable One remained a god to the people of Sagittaria, manipulating the desires of the sorcerers until in 3582 RM, when following an expensive deal brokered with the LHAUS of KHALHAT, a cloned artificial body was secured in which his soul could be interred. The Interminable One was reborn in flesh after nearly 1400-years of rule from within a machine. His rule became absolute, and none doubted his divinity.

But it was not to last. An earthquake destroyed the city of $\underline{\text{KESHEL}}$ in 3612 RM during a ceremony of veneration, destroying the Interminable One and the city with him. Seeing the body of their god destroyed, and his life taken, the people lost faith in their god. The church and the sorcerers waned in strength. His closest agents were able to transfer his soul back into the ancient technarcane engine, but both engine and soul were damaged, leaving him twisted and weak, surviving in the hidden city of Sogassa.

The region fell into chaos after this and suffered under decades of war. By 3680 RM Sagittaria had split into as many as a half-dozen realms that by 3751 RM had coalesced into a democratic republic headed by the house of CAMACA, though the entirety of the east had splintered away, becoming known as ALTHA^(2.). See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

SAGITTAARIAN: His. Lan. Ancient dialect of KORACHANI that was spoken by SAGITTAARI exiles who fled KORACHAN close to 4,000-years ago. The language followed the Sagittaari around the INNER SEA, and would later form the basis of various languages, including modern SAGITTARIAN and TAHALLIAN, amongst others. See Vol II: Languages

SAGITTARIAN: Lan. Extant language spoken in various nations in the north of SAMMAEA, including SAGITTARIA, ALTHA^(2.), EREBETH, and IZABAL^(1.). It borrows heavily from the CALLISTEAN language that was spoken by natives, as well as the EARLY KORACHANI dialect known as SAGITTAARIAN that was brought by immigrants who settled the region farther north. See Vol II: Languages.

SAGITTARIANS: 1. Eth. Soc. The descendants of the SAGITTAARI people who, following their exile from KORACHAN in 13 RM, settled the lands around the GATE OF EREBETH. The serpent motif is a relic of their first culture in the region. Not to be confused with their ancestors, the Sagittaari.

2. His. Oth. Rnk. Ancient HALFBLOODED priest-caste in SAGITTARIA, who made ritual sacrifices to the ASP GOD.

SAGO: Geo. Relatively flat highland region in the c north west of VENTHIR, east of the JAELA Mountains peppered with mesas and valleys. The region once served as a border between Venthir and NARTHEL, though is now firmly in Venthiri territories.

SAH AUR: Lak. Shallow-shore lake in the c-south east of TEMUJA along the course of the river AIHANÉ. In particularly harsh winters and following snowmelt in early summer, the lake can increase greatly in size, at times joining with the river ARILLIEN, causing the latter river to break its banks.

SAHARLI: Pol. Mar. Caretakers of VALBAR founded by the PLUTOCRATIC COUNCIL in 3461 RM to provide a modicum of security to the handful of cities that remain active there following the region's abandonment by ALMAGEST.

In 3717 RM the Saharli were reformed into a well-equipped force of rangers whose role was to protect distant cities and safeguard the roads linking them. They went on to become a major policing force, not only patrolling its own cities and territories, but also its borders – particularly in the west, where incursions from the CALLOW HORDES were not uncommon.

SAHATI: Rvr. River in the south west of AETHIOS flowing north for 375-miles from sources in the ANCHIAUS Mountains and the MAMMEN roughlands, before meeting its parent, the river SHIBBOLETH^(3.).

SAHAXAT: Rui. Ancient abandoned city, in the far north of Grarneâst, just south of the border with NASTAL⁽²⁾. It lies to the south of the SPHYRNIDONTID DESERT, in the c west of WESTERN SAMMAEA, harking back to an ancient time when the MORTAL PEOPLES were still young and SPIRITS remained tethered to the bodies of the dead in the forms of ILLURCAULS. The city takes an ancient form, of thick stone walls and wide thoroughfares, through which amble the seemingly lifeless bodies of VALTHAS, soul-pearls still protruding from their bodies. it is a strange and sterile place, of another time, though seemingly unaffected by its passage.

What few explorers have encountered it have reported a dark pall hanging over the city, under which their thoughts turn dark and action comes difficulty. Due to this, full exploration and exploitation of the immense metropolis and the riches within is impossible (Pop. unknown).

SAHAZZAR: Set. City in the east of ZAKRON. It was once home to a famed university of SHAPING, though this was destroyed in c. 2900 RM following a revolution in the nation that saw shaping banned. The city waned after this, and much of it is now deserted (Pop. c. 25,000).

SAHENNAH: Rvr. Wetlands in the east of AZAZEM, overlooking the BAY OF IRYSA.

SAHHAR: m. Per. (D. 66 RM) His. Follower of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR in the early days of the KORACHANI EMPIRE. He betrayed the forces of the Archpotentate in 22 RM during the siege of SKAROS and was later executed by beheading.

His mummified head is now a relic in the MUSEUM OF ANCIENT ARTEFACTS, in TETHRA, PARTHIS, following a tumultuous history that saw it passed from owner to owner over the past millennia.

SAHIOX: Set. City in the HENDECARCHY of AONIA in MALAN, situated along the northern shore of lake VHARA (Pop. c. 171,000).

SAHIM: 1. Sea. Bay in the north of TARTAK, between the mainland and the delta of the river KHARAD.

2. Set. Large city in $\underline{\text{TARTAK}}$, known to trade with $\underline{\text{JURRAS}}^{(2.)}$ (Pop. c. 290,000).

SAHIR: Ast. Set. City in the c of EZASUH⁽²⁾. It is noted for its astronomical telescopes and its astronomical library, which is perused by scholars from across the INNER SEA (Pop. c. 33,400).

SAHITTA: Geo. Rocky mountain region dominating the interior of KHITAI, stretching from the western-most headland, to the BAY OF KIBE.

SAHIVAN: Set. Settlement in the south east of GNOTH, in the forested region of VIANTARAS. The settlement was once a major centre of Gnostic study, though it dwindled following the diminishing of the SEA OF LIAKARRA, which left it landlocked and 120-miles from the present-day coast. The GOSPELS OF GNOTH were written there in c. 1800 RM, during the city's golden age, when its population stood at 100,000, made up of a mix of GIGANRI and HUMANS. Today it is greatly diminished, and its human population is reduced to a handful of families, descended from ancient ALCHEMISTS. Today it forms a part of THE WAY trade-route (Pop. c. 7,000).

SAHKHIA: Set. Settlement to the south of the YGGATHALUR Mountains in the north east of THE SURRACH. The settlement is built in the inner rim of a meteor crater, and is known for its shaded loggias, with structures and dwellings built in the cool crater rim. In antiquity the crater was mined for its meteoric iron, with tunnels stretching outwards, like the spokes of a wheel, facing the rim. Though since the mines were exhausted centuries ago many have since been converted into stores and rooms for various industries (Pop. c. 7,200).

SAHODOM: Geo. Mountain range in the c north of SAMMAEA, forming an extension of the larger CAMMOREAN Mountains. Like the Cammorean it helps to guard the north from the ATRAMENTAL TAINT to the south.

SAHRAIM: Mil. Str. Small fortress located in the c of ESHIR⁽²⁾, established to offer protection to the SIPHON ENGINES that safeguard the trade-route that crosses the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region of GOSASHANA that separates the coast from the city of ANAFA.

SAHRODOT: Int. Rui. Abandoned zinc, lead and copper mine in the c south east of ALMAGEST, in the north east foothills of the GAEFANG Mountains. The mine was once the deepest vertical mine in Almagest, at almost 1.5-miles deep. It was operational for close to 900-years and was finally abandoned in 3662 RM, leaving behind a labyrinth of pits, shafts, tunnels, and hollows – most MORTAL-made, though some natural.

At the height of its operations, the mine was home to close to twothousand people, who formed a settlement deep below the surface, serving all the needs of the miners. Perhaps most famous is the large church that was constructed in an expansive hollow to accommodate all the people of the mine. The church remains today, eerily silent, over a mile from the surface, cut off from the surface.

Sahrodot was abandoned under mysterious circumstances, and at the time it was believed that it would remain profitable for many more decades, if not centuries. A month before being closed a BRONZE MASK was found in a hollow that was revealed during pit extensions. Before this, the hollow had been completely sealed and there was no way for the mask to be there, but there it had been. It was taken away to the city of ALMAGEST to be examined by scholars, but it went missing. Soon after the mine was closed. Some believe that the scholars examining the mask discovered part of its history, leading to the hurried closure of the mine, but this remains conjecture.

The mine was sealed with hundreds of feet of concrete and guarded by military personnel for decades after its closure to dissuade anyone from entering, though they too abandoned it in c. 3700 RM, leaving it unguarded. Few know about it today and most who do know better than to disturb it.

SAHRODOT MASK, the: Sup. Obj. Bronze mask of unknown providence discovered in 3662 RM in a newly-revealed natural hollow over mile beneath the surface of ALMAGEST, deep within the mines of SAHRODOT. The hollow had been completely sealed prior to the mask's discovery, with no explanation as to how the object found its way there.

The mask was of distorted proportions and grotesque detailing, and could not be identified by scholars entrusted to research it. It later went missing, with the mines being shut down soon after, with many following the story believing that the two to be linked. The event spawned many legends and stories, none of which can be verified. The mask remains lost (or destroyed, as some claim), to this day.

SAHURRE: Set. Small city in the c north of the territories of ETHISTONITH in RHINOCOLOURA. It is a major source of myrrh and is the c. of the myrrh production industry in the region (Pop. c. 20,000).

SAI: 1. Pol. One of the FIVE-AND-SIXTY FEUDAL STATES of SAUA.
 2. Set. City in the above state^(1.) in SAUA (Pop. c. 38,000).

SAIAS: Rvr. River in the east of RHAMIA flowing east for 40-miles into lake SAIDA along the border with AHRISHEN.

SAIDA: Lake in the north west of AHRISHEN, bordering the east of RHAMIA, situated along the course of the river NALESH, though is also fed by the river SAIAS and RHAS.

SAIDAHK: Set. Coastal settlement in the east of ATARAXIA (Pop. c. 8,000).

SAIGUS CHIMEON: m. Mil. Pol. Per. (B. 3912 RM) GRANDMASTER of the SOMNIARECHI ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION since 3961 RM. He was discovered by the ORDER OF PROSELYTISERS at a young age, and was taken to the MINASTERIA (2.) of SOMNIAREAR to train as an ONEIROMANCER, a subject he excelled at, becoming somewhat of a prodigy, performing in packed venues to enthralled audiences at the age of 15. He was later recruited by the Order, where he trained for many years, becoming a PROSELYTE before being promoted to a DREAMFORGED, in which role he spent most of his days. Having proven himself as an exemplary field-agent he was commended on various occasions, earning the respect of the Order.

Like many others in the Order, he is aloof of bearing, and is very tall and of a wiry frame. Despite his role as Grandmaster, he maintains a very active role within the Order and spends much of his time encased within a tailor-made oneiric HEART ENGINE, which he uses to explore the DREAMWORLD for signs of growing overlays between it and the MATERIAL PLANE, which typically indicate the emergence of a new DREAMSCAPE. Indeed, many new dreamscapes were discovered by his own probings.

The engine is believed to administer cocktail of drugs to stall the aging of his material body whilst his mind is in the Dreamworld.

SAIHWAN: lit. 'Watchers'. Soc. Mar. Org. Military tribe in THE OLD FOREST, known for its archer tradition, using 8ft. long composite longbows, with an incredibly high tensile strength. They lived most of their lives in the GEAFIRS of THE OLD FOREST.

After centuries of conflict with KORACHAN and ALMAGEST, their tradition has waned since guns have become more common in the Old Forest, though some scattered groups still exist who cling to the old ways.

SAIMA: Set. Major city in the south west of SEDISIA (Pop. c. 46,000).

SAINT: Rel. A person who is considered by an organised religious institution to be spiritually close to that religion's deity, with individual saints often being recognised as having performed at least one miracle that has been verified as so by said institution.

Different religions have different doctrine with regards to saints, some of which are detailed below:

1. In the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE saints are individuals whose deeds have been recognised by the respective church or churches as exemplary, with many amongst them dying as martyrs.

The process of elevating an individual (called canonisation) to a saint is a complex one, requiring various criteria to be met. Amongst them, the individual needs to be dead with a formal application submitted by interested parties for investigation by the church for merit. This is particularly the case when applications include claims of miracles, which must first be verified. These investigations can take years to complete, and even once a verdict has been reached, it normally takes the respective Church many more years to organise a conclave where all pending requests for canonisation can be formally approved.

Once canonised, a saint is celebrated in their community, with statues erected in their honour and churches and chapels constructed and dedicated to them. Such statues are a common sight in most cities of the TWIN EMPIRES, and ALMAGEST, where they adorn street corners or plinths at crossroads or squares. Typically made of wrought iron or bronze, these statues are identified by plaques that list the names and domains of the saints, as well as votive prayers one can utter to invoke their blessings. There are people that tend to these statues, making sure that there are candles burning at all times and that they are in maintained in good condition.

Their death day becomes a day of commemoration, remembered every year by prayer and processions in which an idol is carried through the streets by VOTARIES and other faithful. In some places, reveration of the saint might surpass that of the UNDYING MACHINE and the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR, which might earn the attention of the MORÉHAN SANCTIFIED ORDERS OF THE INQUISITION, who may take action against them.

Many saints within the Three Churches of the Undying Machine become regarded as patrons – advocates of particular vocations, places, nations, or people. This may be arbitrary, though typically stems from an aspect of the saint's life, and may be based on their own vocation, place of birth, or actions. People will often wear a necklace in the image of a saint they choose as a patron, worn alongside the symbol of their respective church, or the idols of the LEADEN THRONE or the SWORD TARTARUCH.

SAINT OF SLUMS: Leg. Legendary figure in ALMAGESTI lore, specifically within the CITY OF ALMAGEST, who is said to have once been a PATRICIAN who used his wealth to help the poor and eventually came to live amongst them, his name was forgotten and he came to be known as the Saint of Slums. Though not recognised by the ALMAGESTI TEMPLE. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

SAJAHAD: lit. 'Palace on the Field. Set. Large city in the east of the tribe of DRAKAINA in the east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 62,000).

SAJONA: Geo. Island off the north western coast of BROR^(1,), forming a part of the KRAJAN archipelago. It was famed amongst ancient mariners and explorers for its west-facing coastal cliffs, in particular their rich colours, which range from violet, to purple and pink.

SAKADA: Set. Small city in the east of AMMESH, along the course of the river KERIKHAYANTI (Pop. c. 13,000).

SAKAR: Rvr. Wetlands along the eastern shore of lake BALA, in the north of LAASKHA.

SAKARAS: Set. Small city in the east of SKAROS, along the SHADOW MARCH. Its main industry is catering to passing pilgrims (Pop. C. 12,000).

SAKEN ITRUSH: Sea. Shallow coastal sea off the west coast of TAAN AN, in the south west of SAMMAEA.

SAKETHI: For. Verdant region in the east of PARTHIS, known for the sheep husbandry that dominates most settlements there.

SAKHAOST: Rvr. River in the c of LLACHATUL, flowing east through CISNERIA for around 350-miles from sources in the east of the BLACK MOUNTAINS, before emptying in the SEA OF APHOTIS. It is known as BARRA in ALMAGEST.

SAKHAR: Set. Small city in the west of the JAHADAT STATES, under the control of the city of MEHEMESH (Pop. c. 13,900).

SAKHER 1. Set. Small city in the c west of KORACHAN. It is known for its mask-makers and its harvest festival, which has become a yearly highlight across the Korachani PATRICIAN HOUSES, and the city's population is known to increase fivefold during the weeks leading up to the festival

(Pop. c. 15,000. Increases to 60,000 - 75,000 during the yearly harvest festival).

2. Obj. Soc. Featureless white masks worn by some female nobility in the KORACHANI EMPIRE to keep their skin pale. They are named after the city from which they originate.

SAKHET: Ind. Set. Pyrite mine and adjoining settlement in the north east of KHAMID, to the north east of the NEFERATH Mountains. The mines were established during the KORACHANI subjugation of Khamid and pyrite mined here was used in the manufacture of firearms across THE INNER SEA. Though the need for pyrite has diminished, the mines are still in operation to this day, though greatly diminished from their former height in c. 3180 RM (Pop. c. 6,200).

SAKHIR: 1. Rvr. River in the c of AHRISHEN, flowing for 85-miles, linking lake CYIDA with lake ACTAEA.

2. Set. Small city in the c AHRISHEN (Pop. c. 17,000).

SAKILL: Set. Settlement in the c of GNOTH along the GNOTHI ROAD. It forms a link in the GNOTHI ROAD trade-route, providing food to those travelling along the road (Pop. c. 4,500).

SAKKEN: Set. Small city in the far north east of MHAROKK, close to the southern-face of the HARAPPAN^(1.) Mountains. It is a link in the RED ROUTE, and has a large hospital that maintains a corps of mounted hospitaliers who assist merchants travelling the route (Pop. c. 20,000).

SAKKHRIA: His. Ntn. Extinct kingdom in the north of LLACHATUL, occupying what are now the north of SABIA, parts of western PERGOST, and the north east of the DESOLATION OF ASTUDAN. The kingdom rose as an offshoot of the empire of ELDRIA in 2504 RM, and was populated from refugees from the east, though it faltered in 3222 RM, following the final death of its OTHERWORLDER leader, known today as the FROST KING. Following his death, he would be deified, and would go on to become the main deity of the Sabian pantheon.

Sakkhria would eventually collapse following the death of most of its royal family and its court to a strange malady, and in 3493 RM SABIA would claim its ruin. See Vol III: Extinct States.

SAKKHRIAN: His. Lan. Language spoken in the now-extinct kingdom of SAKKHRIA, from which modern SABIAN emerged in c. 3500 RM. See Vol II: Languages.

SAKORAMAND: also 'the City of Dreams'. Set. Dre. Large independent city in the north west of BROR(1.) that is known for its DREAMWALKERS and oneiric manifestations. The city lies above a FIRMAMENTAL LEYLINE favouring ONEIROMACHY. As a result, it has a higher-than-normal population of SHAPERS who can manipulate DREAMS and dream-matter. It is common for people to keep as pets dream-creatures, for instance, and dreams are a major industry here — with dream peddlers competing to offer the most attractive dreams (or horrific nightmares, to be inflicted upon one's' enemies), and information-brokers have crafted inventive ways of extracting and planting specific information.

Less well-known is a documented DREAMSCAPE that lies scant miles from the city, which is thought to be responsible for the dreams that are so easily manipulated and evoked in Sakoramand. The terrain here is mutable to some shapers and though largely hospitable, it is known to erupt in nightmarish conflagrations periodically, where even the most docile of its dream creatures are warped into monstrosities.

The city is well-guarded from these manifestations by a competent corps of trained ONEIROMANCERS, who serve as psychic guards, based in pylon-like structures that are specifically-placed throughout the city and its immediate environs (Pop. c. 128,000).

SAKRA: 1. Rui. Ruined FOURTH AGE city in the south of SAGITTARIA. Little of the ruin remains save foundations and weather-worn granite mausolea that lie half-buried.

2. Set. Rural area in the region of $\underline{SAKETHI}$ in eastern $\underline{PARTHIS}$, known for its sheep (Pop. c. 7,400).

SAKRAP: Set. Settlement in the north west of IACIO. Its main industry is ALUMINIUM mining (Pop. c. 8,000).

SAKRIM, HOLY EXECRATOR OF AKAEA: (B. 3982 RM) EXECRATOR crippled by a mild form of DEGENERATISM who nonetheless withstood the stigma and burden of his condition to rise through the ranks of Execrators in NÁRTHEL. He crafted two great CATHADESMIN bearing the thirteen curses of the Archpotentate, which he carried with him across the KORACHANI EMPIRE, preaching to those who would listen, admonishing the heathens.

SAKKARA: Geo. Steep-sided mountainous island in the SEA OF PHARANX in KHAMID. The island measures some 15-miles in length and is a remnant from before the CATACLYSM OF KHAMID, where the region was dominated by what was then known as the PHARANX highlands, forming a ridge of sorts. Following the Cataclysm and the breaking up of the continent, the majority of that highland region collapsed into the sea, leaving various steep-sided islands in its wake. Sakkara is largest of those mountainous regions.

It is thought to be unpopulated, with little in the form of animal life. Scholars have proffered many theories as to why that island remained while other parts of the PHARANXI highlands, with theories ranging from a different make-up, FIRMAMENTAL influence, to things more esoteric, such as a buried engine or edifice attributable to a DEMIURGE.

SAKKRA: Geo. Island in lake ALANCARAC, to the east of KARAKHAS. It is claimed by PARAIYA, though there are no settlements of note on it, though it is home to the temple of TUN'OKE.

SAKTAR: 1. Geo. Small island off the western coast of JURRAS⁽²⁾. The diminishing of Elyden's seas over the past few millennia has almost tripled the size of the island, which is now dominated by lowland coastal plains that bear the remnants of ancient unattributed ruins. Some claim they were built by an unknown MERILL culture, but others use the design of the architecture as evidence that they belonged to an ancient land culture.

2. Mil. Str. Island-fortress off the western-coast of JURRAS⁽²⁾, overlooking the shipping lanes across the STRAIT OF GATH.

SALACUR: Sup. Str. Solitary walled palace-complex in ALLASAN, oncehome to MHAROKKIN BARRATERS, overlooking the SEA OF AZAM. The palace was a summer residence of western districts' barrators, though in 2874 RM it was abandoned after an earthquake and rebuilt three centuries later, closer to the coast, where mild ATRAMENTAL TAINTED had been recorded. It became a hub for Atramentism, with SIPHON ENGINES installed in its dungeons from which experiments are conducted to this day.

SALAHA: Flo. Wretched form of tree that dots the STOLAS area and parts of the DESOLATION OF ASTUDAN beyond. The tree is seen as sacred by nomads and AL AKHI in the area (as one of the few trees to survive in the region it is seen as a symbol of life). The skulls of dead animals and those who die on the road are placed between the layers of its peeling bark in offering. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

SALAMIS: Pol. Patrician House with a presence in KARAKHAS, KHURAUR and particularly ALLASAN. It is famed across Karakhas as being in possession of the historic BLOOD SWORD. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

SALAN: Set. Fortified settlement in the region of KORVANT in the north west of GNOTH (Pop. c. 2,800).

SALITH: also 'the Moon Desert'. Geo. Desert located just north of the city-state of SURDA in the c east of THE SURRACH. The desert is an empty expanse of sun-bleached rock that appear similar to the surface of the IVORY MOON, from which it draws its name. The area is featureless but for the chalk-like huts made by nameless degenerates known in KORACHANI as PALE ONES or 'AMMASILIN'.

SALA: See. Small city in the north east of ARKOS^(1.), along the course of the river THANAUR (Pop. c. 20,000).

SALA HABB: Set. Coastal settlement in the far south east of CHEIRA (Pop. c. 4,000).

SALAMA: Set. Settlement in the c east of LOEGRESS^(1.) (Pop. c. 5,000).

SALAMANDER: Fau. Large semi-aquatic reptiles commonly found in RAONGEN^(2.) and GNOTH in north western LLACHATUL. There are many different varieties, and they range in size from a 2 – 10-ft. in length.

They favour lakes and rivers in volcanically-heated lands. They feature in GNOTHI MYSTICISM due to their dichotomous nature. See Vol: Classification and Taxonomy of life: Dichagor.

SALAMANDRINE: Mor. Elusive salamander-like 'MORTALS' (ASICTHAIN) rumoured to live in expansive wetlands of OGNAVASQ in the south east of ARERAQTH. They stand around 5 ft. tall and have relatively short limbs and a stumpy tail, causing them walk on land with a distinctive waddle, though they spend most of their time in the shallow waters of their homes, where they are expert swimmers. They have slick thick skin with large black eyes and have four long fingers and five stubby webbed toes, and their long index finger (proportionately far longer than that of humans) considered their primary digit. They are of laconic disposition and are sluggish, moving deliberately (some would say slowly) whilst on land.

They are considered primitive by the people of Areraqth who treat them unfairly, bordering on abusive, though recent studies have shown a thriving culture and civilisation that is merely distinct from the norm of FIFTH AGE mortals. They live in tandem with the natural world, leaving little impact - their settlements are made of natural substances and they care little for material possessions, using only simple tools and weapons, and they favour scant clothing, wearing kilts and skirts made from natural fibres and little else.

They live in close-knit communal villages and have a subsistence lifestyle, living off the land and using only what they need in the immediate future. They build intricate shallow tunnels that are heavily insulated with vegetation and spend the coldest months there, sealing themselves in. once cocooned in these winter homes their grounds to a halt - they rest for up to 22 hours a day, eating little, and doing as little physical activity as possible. They coordinate their sleep so that at least one individual in each tunnel is active at a time, serving as a lookout for danger.

Their origins are unknown and they are largely unstudied by scholars of the NEAR HEMISPHERE, to whom they are a relatively recent discovery, though they have been known to the people of EASTERN MENISCEA since time immemorial. Some believe that they are GODSBORN children of the DEMIURGE ASHTERATH, or that they are perhaps a corrupted form of SERAPIS based on little more than their physical similarities. It is unlikely that we will ever know the truth. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life: Asicthain.

SALAPEKH: Set. Settlement in the c of KORACHAN, in the northern foothills of the FATUACH Mountains. It is a major producer of poultry and dross, mostly for use in KHADON (Pop. c. 10,000).

SALARA: Set. 1. Small coastal city in the west of the AMMASHI FREE-ISLES, on the island of SAMMALIM (Pop. c. 18,000).

2. Settlement in the east of KEPHUAAN, in the region of RAMERRI, in the far east of the MAO SAGHI Mountains. It maintains a seasonal trade route with the independent city of Ramina (Pop. c.10,000).

SALARAN: Med. Dre. Psychedelic drug that enhances or induces LUCID DREAMING in those who consume it. It is processed from the flesh of the VARESVAT fish, which when eaten also amplifies lucid dreaming. The drug is prized by ONEIROMANCERS and laypersons seeking to experience lucid dreams, and it commands a high price in the grey markets across the Inner Sea Region. See Vol II: Drugs and Addictions.

SALARNA: Pol. Soc. Tribe in the c north of MULCIBER, in the GROWING MOUNTAINS, in the north east of SAMMAEA. It's eastern-most borders are dominated by the BOLILOT PEAKS.

SALARIA: Set. City in the north of THE SURRACH, in the region of EMPUSA⁽²⁾ (Pop. c. 50,000).

SALASAH: Dem. 'Salasahi'. 1. Geo. Savannah in the c north west of AETHIOS, known for its stone FOURTH AGE ruins and pylon like milestones, all of which are forgotten, and half-buried in the hard soils of the region. Amongst them are crumbling temples that were once part of a sensate cult, one of which remains intact, if ignored.

2. His. Ntm. An ancient empire in the north east of SAMMAEA that survived the FADING after the end of the FOURTH AGE, before faltering between -1500 and -1200 RM. It was ruled by an ancient sybaritic SCION, who exiled large swathes of people for their beliefs. These exiles would, alongside immigrants from GELHANA and the ACATAS people, go on to found ACTANORS.

3. Set. City in the c north west of AETHIOS, named after an ancient FOURTH AGE empire of the same name⁽²⁾. The great TEMPLE OF THE ELEMENTS in the c of the city was built atop a cathedral of the UNDYING MACHINE that was abandoned following war with KORACHAN, which itself was built atop the ruin of a Fourth Age sybaritic temple that was part of the Salasahi empire^(2,) (Pop. c. 44,800).

SALATA: Set. The north west of the tribe of LEGEO, in the c south of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 6,000).

SALATORR: Set. City in the north west of ALBASSITA (Pop. c. 89,000).

SALD: Set. Settlement in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of EDICULE^(1.), responsible for most of the copper mining along the MARCHOSILIOS Mountains.

SALDHUIN: Rvr. Expansive region of delta and river wetlands in the north of LOEGRESS⁽¹⁾, in the ALAUNYR headland. The deltas of various rivers, including the NYNWAR, BRANWYLL and EREDWYN meet here, forming a thriving coastal environment that is famed for its wildlife, particularly its birds. The region is largely uninhabited and what settlements exist are small and bucolic.

SALEDU: Geo. Coastline in the south west of TZALLRACH, overlooking the TORRENT OF KARROCK. Its waters are shallow and dangerous to navigate against the flow of water from the south.

SALEI: Set. Small fortified coastal settlement in the south west of TZALLRACH, 25-miles south west of the city of BALBETH. It is a major producer of grain and barley (Pop. c. 10,000).

SALEMA: Set. Small coastal city in the north west of Lidea, overlooking the STRAIT OF SHIBBOLETH. Its main industry is fishing (Pop. c. 13,800).

SALETE: Set. City in the east of KORACHAN, along the course of the river ADOS. Its sewers are constructed from ancient catacombs that lead strait into river (Pop. c. 26,000).

SALIAH: Ser. Fortified coastal city in the south of ZHARIAH⁽²⁾. It plays a major part in the textile industry of the nation, and is known for its many cotton mills and its port where ships laden with textiles sail across the east of SAMMAEA (Pop. c. 50,000).

SALIENT, the: Rvr. Table waterfall along the river ARESH^(2.) in the north east of AHRISHEN.

SALIFEROUS PALM, ORDER OF THE: Mys. Org. Order of monks common in lands surrounding the SEA OF ETAGIRIA in the south east of SAMMAEA. Its monasteries are a ubiquitous sight across ZATAUR, AKACHA, ILLARKRAR, ZAKRON, and the south of KHAR NADUL, and its monks use salt as a symbol of their suffering, and their symbol is a pinch of salt on an open palm.

SALIX: f. Myr. His. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, a SCION of the DEMIURGE ACHAIAH and the scion IEHOVA. She had one daughter, ZEVIIT, with a mortal king. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

SALK: See. Small city in the c-south east of the Templar States, in the far north east of the Sidirion Hills⁽²⁾. It is built atop an ancient ruined city, that is thought to have once stood at the edge of a great river that flowed north across the VIMBRA canyon (Pop. c. 12,500).

SALKH: see 'SALKHAN'.

SALKHAN: Geo. Massif that dominates the north western region of AHRISHEN.

SALKIA: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the north east of THE SURRACH, guarding the trade-route north east into CYHLAGHARR.

SALL: Rui. Ancient city and capital of the island-nation of SALL ATH, located in then south of extant SAELEH^(1.). The city was sacked in c. 2430 RM by ZHARIAHAN armies and slavers, an act which led to the downfall of the Sall Athi people and their culture.

SALL ATH: His. Ntn. Extinct island-nation on the island of SAELEH^(1.) in the south east of SAMMAEA, to the east of the nation of ZHARIAH^(2.). It was famed amongst the people of KORACHAN for its wines, which were exported to the INNER SEA.

Its people were simple, largely pastoral, with a theocratic culture that revolved around the stone-capital of SALL. The island was settled by Zhariahan⁽¹⁾ colonists between c.1300 – 1500 RM, and farmlands were established with a single large city, the walled capital of SALL, dominating all. For many years the island was largely left to its own devise, so long as its yearly tithe to the homeland was paid, though over centuries many monarchs came to treat its people as a commodity, occasionally pressganging them into their armies and workforces to replenish their ranks, as needed.

Whittled down by generations of these culls, the people of Sall decided to strengthen their city, preparing themselves to oppose their oppressors. In 2119 RM they resisted a mighty cull, putting into motion events that would lead to their doom. The next year, a great Sall Athan fleet sailed across the STRAIT OF ETTELLA for Zhariah carrying thousands of troops, but the attack was disastrous with most slain while still on their ships. Zhariah retaliated by keeping Sall Ath on a tighter leash, asking more from its tithes and taking more people west, now as slaves.

In 2430 RM a ruthless king, hungry for more slaves and riches, marched against Sall, sacking it and slaughtering its people, taking those who were not killed west as slaves. The destruction of Sall was the death knell for Sall Aah, which did not survive. For a millennium it was populated only by herders and far remaining largely uninhabited.

It was later repopulated by a diaspora of freed slaves between c. 3350 – 3400 RM, with a new capital founded outside the ruins of Sall. This new land became known as SAELEH^(1.). See Vol III: Extinct States.

SALLAHUADDIN: m. Myt. His. Per. A THIRD AGE royal MORTAL and 4th generation SCION from the bloodline of MENILEK. He was noted in the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN as being of noble character with a roguish disposition, who travelled extensively across mortal lands with the 2nd generation scion ELKURIAN. After dying he was buried in a lavish 7-layered electrum sarcophagus covered in wondrous bas relief detailing his many exploits. It was filled with an ALCHEMICAL jelly that preserved his body perfectly for ages. It was discovered over 20-millennia after his death in the north east of the CITIZENRY OF THALL in c. 2100 RM, after which it was moved to the undying city of THALL, where it remains to this day. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

SALLON: Dem. 'Sallonish'. His. Ntn. Culture that dominated what is now PARTHIS in the FOURTH AGE, its ruins forming the foundations of Parthisan architecture and secularism. Little is known of the cultures' history, though it is known that the Sallonish people fought in the WAR OF SCOURGING that ended the Fourth Age, and that they were wiped out in the conflict. They were master artisans, with their skilled architecture and engineering surviving where they did not, serving as the foundation on which the Parthisan civilisation would develop.

SALLOS: 1. Geo. Deserted land in the c of VIRAHAN, forming the north eastern part of the HANIGAR plains. The place saw much conflict in the civil war that saw Virahan split away from its mother nation and is largely ignored to this day, the bodies of nameless soldiers long-since reclaimed by the land. During summer thaws the bones and rusted weapons of those soldiers are sometimes unearthed.

2. Str. White palace that stands in the centre of the eponymous region^(1.) in VIRAHAN, harking back to a time of conflict between the small region and AHRISHEN. It has been abandoned for years, and lies in a decrepit state shunned by all who surround it.

SALLOWFIELDS: see ARTUL AKAEL.

SALLOWLANDS, the: Inc. Sup. Geo. Wretched region located in the north east of ADHERA, and crossing the border into the west of HOGGOTHA ISZ, in the north of SOUTHERN SAMMAEA. The area is known for its unhealthy appearance and the sparse misshapen trees and foliage that grows there. The Sallowlands are afflicted by a moderate form of ATRAMENTAL TAINT, rendering them inhospitable to mortal life.

The region is of interest to the people of Adhera due to its rich copper reserves, which are located beneath the influence of the Atramentally tainted surface, making it a target to open cast mining. Miners in this region are recognisable for the SOFTSUITS they wear.

SALAROCC: Lan. Language spoken by the people of early FIFTH AGE

SALOROC^(1,) and Io, emerging from the FOURTH AGE language of NAAMNI. Following heavy Korachani influence it would go on to become SALOROCIN. See Vol II: Languages.

SALLEM: His. Soc. Historical PATRICIAN HOUSE that was influential in the east of Skaros between the first and second millennia RM. It waned and died out by c. 2370 RM, and its lands fell into ruin. It is perhaps best remembered today through its last paterfamilia Givelhi, who found the last of the silver trees and nurtured it. It is now named after the house as the TREE OF SALLEM.

SALLEM, TREE OF: Int. Flo. Sup. Supranatural tree of living growing silver in the south east of SKAROS, north of the FARRESH Mountains. There were once dozens of them in the region but they were cut down over time by opportunists and industrialists, and used to make fine object d'art after attempts at propagating them and growing them in captivity failed, even with the aid of SHAPING.

Today only one is left, saved by the PATRICIAN Givelhi of HOUSE SALLEM, who built an estate around it in c. 2300 RM to protect it. The Givelhi died long ago, after which the estate fell into ruin, the tree itself forgotten. It remains today, its outer layer slowly oxidising and sloughing off as it slowly grows.

Settlements slowly appeared around it and the tree was rediscovered, becoming an heirloom of sorts to its people, who valued it for its beauty, though some feared it may be stolen or cut down. As a result, some locals now volunteer to guard it from malicious intent though even these guardians sometimes disagree on the best course of action to protect it.

SALLON: m. Myt. His. Per. Child of the SCION PATHEA, fathered by the human champion HALAEON. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

SALORA: Rvr. River in IO flowing north from the GHOLA mountain for over 200-miles, emptying in the far west of the SHADOW SEA. The city of SHIL was built along its banks close to its source.

SALOROC: 1. Dem. 'Salorocan'. His. Ntn. Ancient nation predating present-day Io, that dominated the SALOROCAN PENINSULA. (which takes its name after the nation) from around c. -850 to c. -550 RM, at which point the rise of a religious sect known as the IONIC HIERARCHS led to the nation becoming known as Io. Saloroc emerged as a colony of the city-state of SCYTHEA in c. -1100 RM, and rapidly gained prominence in the area, its ships preying on foreign merchants and its slaves' harassing nomads that lived in the south east. See Vol III: Extinct States.

2. Dem. 'Salorocan'. Ntn. Extant nation located in the north east of SAMMAEA, divided in two by the SEA OF SÛN, its eastern coast is dry, though its western coast enjoys a temperate climate, due to moist air being carried west from the INNER SEA.

The extant people of Saloroc are descended from the FIFTH AGE SVATHI people, who moved south from SCYTHEA in around -1100 RM and would go on to become accomplished mariners.

In -587 RM a priestly caste known as the IONIC HIERARCHS overtook the people of the SYMENIAN^(1.) peninsula, from where they came to rule, taking one of their three fabled golems with them. The APOSTATE WARS of -192 RM left IO shattered, and the people of Symenia became free again, first using the name Saloroc in around -50 RM.

Originally a city-state with a few satellite vassals, Saloroc grew powerful through piracy. Its slavers became a force in the east of the INNER SEA, preying on sea trade and small coastal settlements that they often subjugated and colonised.

The opening of the Ionic borders to $\underline{\text{KORACHANI}}$ trade in 174 RM led to the subjugation of Saloroc, which became one of its more imperialised cities; something exacerbated by the Exarch's full vassalage of Io to Korachan in 212 RM. It was during its vassalage to Korachan that its borders expanded north across the Sea of Sûn, where it appropriated the city of Scythea and its environs in 382 RM.

Devastated by its losses in the WAR OF THE ARTIFEXES, Korachan allowed Saloroc, a relatively insignificant part of the empire, to fester. In 3029 RM Saloroc fell under the control of the twin Hathata despots. The sons of its Lord-BARRATOR, they inherited his post during a time of decline for Korachani industries in the area. Using the imperial occupiers as scapegoats, they drove the populace into a frenzy, declaring Saloroc's independence in 3032 RM, and ejected Korachani governors and patrician houses, after which they named the city 'the Ducal Crown'.

Saloroc's newfound independence did little for its industries and it continued to diminish as Io was handed over to SARASTRO as part of the SARASTROAN SANCTION of 3103 RM. A neglect of its Ionic cities led to Saloroc slowly expanding its borders south before Sarastro fortified its borders, though Saloroc's use of golems to defend its lands remained a deterrent to Sarastroan attentions.

In early 3703 RM VENTHIRI diplomats bought the loyalty of Saloroc after declaring war on Sarastro, beginning the WAR OF SUNDERING. This allowed them to use its lands as staging posts for its armies. The small fort of ZIUKBBAR was greatly expanded and strengthened to accommodate Venthiri armies, which soon after would march into \underline{IO} . The region has remained a close ally of Venthir since then.

Today the region is known for its GOLEMS^(2.) – powerful constructs with their roots in ancient techno-religious texts recovered by Io early in the Fifth Age – which defend its borders against enemy intrusions. Though the texts that had led to the construction of the golems were destroyed by Korachan during its occupation, the region is still a major producer of such technarcane engines, though none can rival the original golems, of which only one now remains in the CALIXARAN plains, defending Saloroc from Sarastroan attentions. See Vol III: Extant Nations.

3. also 'the Ducal Crown'. Set. City funded by SVATHI colonists from SCYTHEA in c. -1100 RM. Pressure from the rising AMNATHI KINGDOM in the north caused an exodus of sorts from Scythea to Saloroc in c. -1025 RM. The diminishing of Scythea saw in turn the growth of Saloroc and by c. -850 RM its people had spread across the majority of the SALOROCAN PENINSULA the slave-raids that it and Scythea conducted across the region whittling down the native populations, absorbing many of their cultural traits, including the SHAMAR religion that had appeared in c. -900 RM. This, alongside other rising disparities caused Scythea to sunder itself from Saloroc in c. -820 RM, where it came to treat its former colonies with as much contempt as it had held for others in the region, preying on their vessels and raiding their costal settlements for slaves and plunder.

Saloroc remained the main power in the region for some centuries, until the discovery of the FIRMAMENTAL text known as the FIONIC TALPA in HAAGEN in HAAGEN in -692 RM, and the moving of the 3 HONIC GOLEMS in -692 RM. Garap rapidly came to oppose Saloroc by c. -600 RM and in -587 RM the priestly caste known as the HONIC HIERARCHS overtook Saloroc in a bloodless coup, from which they came to rule, taking one of the three golems with them. The APOSTATE WARS that gripped Io in -192 RM left Saloroc independent, its slavers (though reduced in numbers from ancient times) preying on unprotected travellers. In -128 the city-state of BAESHA attacked Saloroc, sacking it and carting its golem back to its own WOID temple. This marked the end of the Apostate Wars and the end of the so-called LITHIC PERIOD in Io, leading to the rise of the EXARCHS of MIRADOR who reunited Io.

The opening of the Ionic borders in 174 RM to the KORACHANI EMPIRE led to an influx of imperial immigrants into Saloroc which, alongside ETHRA became one of its more imperialised cities; something exacerbated by the Exarch's handing over of Io to Korachan in 212 RM. The city's harbours underwent much rebuilding as the coastlines of ELYDEN began to retreat and many imperial businesses moved away to other cities, leaving it embittered.

In 3029 RM Saloroc fell under the control of the twin Hathata despots. The sons of its Lord-BARRATOR, they inherited his post during a time where Io, like most imperial nations was in steady decline – its resources mostly spent, its businesses and industries diminishing. Blaming Korachan for this, they declared the city's independence in 3032 RM, after which they named the city 'the Ducal Crown'. The city continued to diminish following this though stabilised by c. 3250 RM. Korachan's handing over of Io to Sarastro in 3103 had little effect on Saloroc, which survived as an independent nation. By that point Korachan cared little for the region and allowed it to remain, though policed its borders until its sundering in 3705 RM left Sarastro in control of the region (Pop. c. 381,400).

SALOROCIN: Lan. Language spoken in present-day SALOROC⁽²⁾ that emerged from the early FIFTH AGE language of SALAROCC. It was also spoken in IO, but was supplanted there after years of KORACHANI subjugation, and it eventually died out. See Vol II: Languages.

SALOROCIN BIT: see BIT, SALOROCIN.

SALOROCAN PENINSULA: Geo. Peninsula in the far east of the INNER SEA, dividing the SEA OF ETHA in the west from the Seas of SÛN and TIAMA. It was once home to the nation of SALOROC.

SALPANT: Set. Fortified city in the south of the PARTHISAN colony of ABDAKROS^(1,) on the island of IRUGNA^(1,). It is a military centre and helps guarding against attacks from the MALEFACTOR HORDES (Pop. c. 26,200).

SALPINIX: Geo. City in the south east of ARKOS^(1.), situated along the northern bank of the river THAUR. Originally a series of ancient cliffside caverns, the city was built over them with many of its tiered streets have buildings that stretch into the cliffsides (Pop. c. 15,500).

SALPSAN: For. Dense forest in the west of GNOTH.

SALRIDEA: 1. Geo. Land far north west of LLACHATUL, north of the northern POLAR CIRCLE, forming part of the WHITE SHEET. It is named for an ancient empire that once existed there⁽²⁾, the heavy stone ruins of which pepper the region, sometimes protruding from the ice sheet. Of note are the many gigantic stone pylons that protrude from the ice in the region of YACHOTH, overlooking the division between the Seas of SUDUNIR and POLARIS.

2. His. Nm. Ancient nation in the far north of LLACHATUL thought to date back to the late THIRD or early FOURTH AGES, when the climate was far less inimical than today. Very little is known of this culture, save for the scattered ruins that pepper the region to this day, including great sandstone pylons that are half-buried in the ice and permafrost. See Vol III: Extinct States.

SALSUN: Set. Settlement 3-miles north west of ANAKARRA in the c north of VAALK, linking the capital with the sea through a series of lochs (Pop. c. 8,000).

SALT ROAD, the: Com. Geo. SAMMAEAN trade-route centred around the city of SIRIPHAGOS, which has, since its appearance in c. 1900 RM, been a hub of trade in the region. The route existed for many centuries before then, where it linked surrounding nations, just to the west of the ARID TRIPTYCH, together.

Named after the salt that was originally traded between SIRIPHAS (the ancient free city that preceded the growth of Siriphagos in c. 1920 RM) and DUN SVARR (now CATACHIS), the Salt Road covered no less than 6,500-miles of well-travelled routes at its height in c. 3000 RM – reaching as far north as SHONEA in the c of LIDEA; west in CARDAMATHIA in ANDILUTH; and south and east in ANAILING, in the GROWING MOUNTAINS. The salt-road is now but a shadow of its once-great self, with entire routes falling into disuse following the diminishing of the cities in the region, and the remaining roads becoming dangerous to caravans.

The Road converges with the RED ROUTE, another trade-route that circumvents most of the INNER SEA REGION, in two regions – in KARAKHAS, in the cities of SERKAN and DEKANA, and for most of their passage through Lidea, with the cities of IDDEN, MENIAASOS, PYRRHOUA, ZERED, and CATHAGO, amongst others, seeing traffic from both routes, bringing much trade to their markets. They also meet in the SARASTROAN capital, ARGEA. See Vol II: Major Trade Routes.

SALTIA: Set. Settlement in the west of SARAGOS, in the eastern face of the LEONTA Mountains. It is known for its sulphur mines (Pop. c. 6,000).

SALTLANDS, the: see HALOLAN.

SALTRA: Sea. Hook-shaped bay in the c north of VAALK, technically forming the last part of the course of the river STORAGH and, geographically, the RUPTURE valley. Its waters are fertile due to deposits from the river that flow there.

SALU: Scr. Settlement in the c south of SERROK. It is situated in the region of BAULAUROCH and is noted for its diamond mines. The mines are government-owned and strict regulations and rules are in place safe-guarding the welfare of workers, yet working conditions remain difficult for relatively little-pay (Pop. c. 1,600).

SALUUT: Set. Settlement in the c east of HARAPPA^(3.) (Pop c. 10,000).

SAMA PARIA: His. Ntn. Early FIFTH AGE nation that emerged during the FADING of the FOURTH AGE in the PARTHISAN PENINSULA, which it dominated until its disintegration in -900 RM, from whose ruin the coalition known as THE PARRIA would arise. See Vol III: Extinct States.

SAMAEL: 1. Art Arc. FIRMATITE statue in the c west of GNOTH depicting the DEMIURGE URAKABARAMEEL. It is ancient and often attributed to the SCION Samael, after which it is named.

2. f. Myr. His. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, a SCION of the DEMIURGE URAKABARAMEEL. She is thought to have built the massive firmatite statue dedicated to Urakabarameel in the c west of GNOTH. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

SAMAHRA: 1. Set. Major city in the south east of KEPHUAAN, forming the terminus of its main internal trade route (Pop. c. 110,000).

2. Ser. Coastal settlement in the c south west of HABOT, overlooking the north of the BAY OF ESSIA (Pop. c. 9,000).

SAMAIHA: Set. City in the north of BISBUT. It is the largest city in Bisbut and is one of the few to have regular contact with the KORACHANI EMPIRE through trade (Pop. c. 852,000).

SAMAL: Sea. Reefs and atolls in the west of the SEA OF TROJA^(1.). Since the sea dried up in c. 1800 RM the reefs became landlocked, some 75-miles from the coast. Few now live who know of the beauty this region once possessed, and they are left ignored by most.

SAMALLAN: Set. Fortified settlement in the far south of SARASTRO, to the west of the SOLACHANI desert. It is known for its ancient libraries and forms a part of the eastern stretch of the SALT ROAD, leading into ANUBIA (Pop. c. 3,800).

SAMAN: Plr. 'Sama'. Mys. Sup. Rnk. Spiritual FIRMAMENTISTS, live in wilderness, rarely communicate with civilisation; but are contacted in times of need (sickness, distress, judgement). Have spirit guides (often in the guise of animals or ancestral spirits), and dress according to their guide (those with elk spirit guides will wear their pelts and horns, for instance). Common in PERGOST, SABIA and KASPIA.

SAMANA: Set. Fortified coastal city in the west of MENISCEA, overlooking the CAMARINAL SEA, and centre of military power in the region (Pop. c. 20,000).

SAMAPAR: Rvr. River in the west of LAASKHA flowing south for 145-miles from the CALLEA Mountain before joining the river KAARAPARR. It is a fast-flowing river and has carved surrounding land into a distinct canyon, 200-ft deep in places.

SAMAR: Pol. Soc. Bus. PATRICIAN HOUSE in the KORACHANI EMPIRE known for its ownership and operation of the CIRCUS ARCANE. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

SAMARA: Set. Coastal city in the c north of CANNOS (Pop. c. 86,000).

SAMARANA: Edu. Str. Library-town in the north of SARASTRO, built on the ruins of an ancient city-state known as Sho Marn. Its collections and annals are famous throughout KORACHAN. The library was commissioned by the custodian Albaer of SIDION in 3147 RM, and its embers, scholars and collectors have since acquired precious works from all over ELYDEN in the name of the library.

It forms a part of the RED ROUTE, and books are traded and bought by its librarians, with those sold, finding their way across the trade-route.

SAMARIA: His. Nm. Ancient FIFTH AGE culture that emerged following the FADING of the FOURTH AGE in what is now the c east of JURRAS⁽²⁾, over what was once the periphery between two larger Fourth Age empires – SAMMON in the north and KARTHAN to the south.

The culture failed by c. -100 RM, leading to the appearance of various tribal groups that by c. 200 RM had grown to dominate the area surrounding the SYNHODOS Mountains. It was to this political climate that the first Jurrasi lawmakers emerged, in the west of present-day Jurras, north of the Jurrasi Mountains, whose actions led to the rapid rise of the city of Jurras, where their ARBITRATORS were able to unite the tribes under its banner.

SAMARIAN: His. Lan. Now-extinct language that was spoken by the early FOURTH AGE SAMARIAN people. Its roots lie in the FOURTH AGE LANGUAGE that was spoken by the people of SAMMON. See Vol II: Languages.

SAMARIS: Pol. Ser. Capital of the early FIFTH AGE SAMARIAN culture that existed in lands east of the SYNHODOS MASSIF in the far east of present-day JURRAS⁽²⁾. It was renowned in antiquity for its war-chariots, which played a large role in uniting the lands of Samaris.

It was appropriated by the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI}}$ $\underline{\text{EMPIRE}}$ following its subjugation of Jurras in 403 RM, where it was renamed $\underline{\text{HAROSHETH}}$.

SAMARSKA: Set. City in the c north of TARAHID ANNEXES, overlooking the CAMARINAL SEA, known for its ship-breaking (Pop. c. 16,500).

SAMASH: Rui. Ancient temple of SOLUM in the north east of VÂRR, 65miles south of the MADOURAN border. In its prime it would have been a monolithic structure of standing stones and alleys that were positioned to allow the dawn light to penetrate them on select days of the year. Today it is half-buried, the stones pitted and crumbling, though it is thought there may be a series of hypogea and burial chambers beneath the surface.

SAMATIA: Ser. City in the north east of TAAN AN. It is the centre of one of the nations' PRAEFECTURES, though is politically and culturally isolated, maintaining little contact with the rest of Taan An. As a result, its people, as well as satellite and neighbouring cities for dozens of miles around it are culturally distinct from the rest of Taan An, and they also maintain mercantile links with METHUMN to the north, via the DAMMGHRAN ROAD (Pop. c. 45,000).

SAMBATIA: Lak. Subterranean lake in the PRISON CARCERI, beneath the BAND Mountains in the north of LLACHATUL.

SAMCHRIS: Rui. Ruin in the prefecture of BROTRIS^(2.) in the c of HOLOLACH^(1.), on the hill of HOLOMAR. The ruin dates back to the early years of the FIFTH AGE and predates the present Hololachi culture by some time and it thought to be an ancestral city of the EVORADI nomads, who often return here in their pilgrimage around the nation.

SAMEKON: Eth. Loose collection of people in the north of MENISCEA, made up of a handful of different ethnic groups. For the most part the region is made up of roving bands led by charismatic warlords and tyrants. Its settlements are little more than shanties built atop ancient fortifications and ruins. It is a highland region, and the air is thin, though its people are accustomed to the this, with large barrel-chests.

SAMEL: Geo. Expansive region of badlands in SAMMAEA, serving as a border between the south east of ROMOREA^(2.) and the north west of KHARKHARADONTIS.

SAMER: PIr. 'Samerin'. Rel. Soc. Rnk. Professional mourners who are hired to mourn the dead. The practice is common around the INNER SEA REGION in lands where the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE are dominant, where individuals (usually the elderly or destitute) are hired by the upper classes to mourn over the body of a close relative. The tradition stems from pre-imperial KORACHANI(1.) practices that spread to PELASGOS, AZAZEM and some parts of MHAROKK and LIDEA, before spreading to the rest of the Inner Sea Region following the growth of the KORACHANI EMPIRE.

The mourners clothe themselves in black shawls and cover any mirrors in the room the dead body is in (this follows old superstitions that the SPIRIT" (1.) can become trapped in mirrors), and work themselves up into a state of frenzied mourning where they would wail, sometimes for hours on end.

The practice saw its peak between 400 – 600 RM and remained common following that. Today most samerin are members of the FUNEREAL SODALITIES, where they also offer services of DELEGATORY PRAYERS.

SAMIA: 1. Sea. Bay along the western-coast of VAALK, to the west of the settlement of Samia⁽²⁾, in the east of the SEA OF AHAMA.

2. Set. Coastal settlement in the west of \underline{VAALK} , overlooking the $\underline{SEA\ OF}$ \underline{AHAMA} (Pop. c. 4,100).

SAMILET: Mil. Str. Fortress in the north west of THE OLD FOREST.

SAMIUN: Set. Settlement in the south of the SARASTROAN colony of IPSISSIMA^(1,). Its main industry is the mining of SOULSTONES, for which the colony is famed (Pop. c. 5,000).

SAMMA SUR: Gam. Popular sport in VAALK, MHAROKK, and LIDEA. Two teams of 5 players each compete to be the first to successfully climb over a wall that separates the teams. Players can use force to stop opponents from climbing over the 10-ft. high wall. The sport is known for its violence, and minor injuries such as black eyes, broken teeth and broken limbs are not uncommon. It is played casually in makeshift courts or in tailor-made arenas that can house crows of hundreds or thousands.

SAMMADA: Set. Coastal settlement in the south west of AMMESH. Its main industry is fishing (Pop. c. 7,000).

SAMMAEA: lit. 'Southern Sun'. 1. Geo. Common name across most of the INNER SEA REGION for the largest of ELYDEN'S continents.

The continent is commonly divided into three, using the WORLD'S CROWN Mountains as the borders – NORTHERN SAMMAEA, WESTERN SAMMAEA and EASTERN SAMMAEA. Much of Sammaean lands are inhospitable desert and are uninhabited by mortal peoples.

 $2.\ \ \textit{Geo.}$ More commonly used to express lands within the continent bordering THE INNER SEA.

SAMMAEA, EASTERN: Geo. One of four common subdivisions for the continent of SAMMAEA, understood to lie east of the MOLOTH KHAMMOTHUL Mountains.

SAMMAEA, NORTHERN: also 'Central Sammaea'. Geo. One of four common subdivisions for the continent of SAMMAEA, understood to lie between the KARKARMIS Mountains in the west, the ACHARKHARAN Mountains in the south, and the MOLOTH KHAMMOTHUL Mountains in the east. It is also often referred to as Central Sammaea.

SAMMAEA, SOUTHERN: Geo. One of four common subdivisions for the continent of SAMMAEA, understood to lie south of the SHAKHURAN and ACHARKHARAN Mountains.

SAMMAEA, WESTERN: Geo. One of four common subdivisions for the continent of SAMMAEA, understood to lie west of the KARKARMIS Mountains.

SAMMAEAN TRIAD: see GREAT SAMMAEAN TRIAD.

SAMMAECI: Lan. Language spoken in the south west of SAMMAEA, specifically in the states of METHUMN, PHYRR and the south of ADHERA. It is a natural corruption of the language originally spoken by the now-extinct FIFTH AGE MEDHAMANNI empire. See Vol II: Languages.

SAMMAH: 1. Mil. Str. Major fortress in the far south of NARTHEL, guarding the border between it and VENTHIR. It dates back to its short time of independence and war with Venthir. The fort remained in use as a border control office following its declaration of a protectorate to the larger kingdom in 3923 RM, and now guards those travelling along the RED ROUTE.

2. Set. Fortified city in the south of NÁRTHEL, close to the border with SARASTRO. It is a centre of military training in the region and its troops guard the RED ROUTE that passes through it (Pop. c. 20,000).

SAMMAIDU: lit. 'Southern Sea'. Sea. KORACHANI name for the southernmost sea in ELYDEN.

SAMMANUS: 1. Geo. Region in the south of CARIA (4), in the HARÉSHK
 Rui. Ancient ruined castle in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of CARIA (4). It is ancient, thought to have been built by very early FIFTH AGE descendants of the FOURTH AGE GOETHAN empire. Very little now remains of it, and it appears as little more than a hillock surrounded by rocky grasslands.

SAMMAVAR: Rvr. River in the c of HOLOLACH⁽¹⁾, flowing south west for 380-miles from the south of the ETRAMIL Mountains before reaching the endorheic lake LO SAVAN.

SAMMEH: Ser. Small coastal city in the north east of NÁRTHEL, known for its domesticated quail (Pop. c. 16,000).

SAMMALIM: Geo. Island in the west of the AMMASHI FREE-ISLES, off the south western coast of the AMMASHI^(1.) peninsula.

SAMMOM: also 'the Jewel in the Desert'. Set. Desert metropolis to the south of the BITAMMAN Desert in SAMMAEA. The city is known to traders and merchants from foreign lands as a hub of culture and life that stands against the harsh landscape of the Bitamman Desert, a jewel in the wasteland. and its philosophical factions are renowned as far afield as KORACHAN and the free-lands of the east.

Inferred links with the extinct $\underline{FOURTH\ AGE}$ nation of \underline{SAMMON} are unfounded, largely due to its distance from the city's ruins (Pop. c. 210,000).

SAMMON: Dem. 'Sammonish'. His. Ntn. Extinct FOURTH AGE empire in the north of SAMMAEA encompassing present-day PARTHIS, JURRAS^(2.) and north western VAALK. Little is known about it, but it was populated by PLAGI & KERATIN city-states ruled by powerful tyrants. Its ruins were most dense around Parthis and Vaalk, and following their collapse, they were plundered by a race of mishappen mortals known as AATI, who waned towards the end of the Fourth Age.

Sammon was famed for its dense population, with many of its city states forming a continuous conurbation with the only demarcation between rival states being a single unenforced street. It is believed that as many as a dozen independent city-states, each originally appearing in a very fertile tract of land slowly merged together over hundreds of years. It is unknown if these ever coalesced under a single government or coalition, though all records found from the time are clear in the independence of the various city-states despite their continuous nature. See Vol III: Extinct States.

SAMMONISH: His. Lan. Now-extinct language spoken by the ancient FOURTH AGE SAMMONISH empire. It is thought to have emerged from the more ancient HUMAN language of ANAVRAMI, which itself emerged from the first human language, gifted to them by the DEMIURGE AVRAHAM.

Native $\underline{PARTHISAN}$, $\underline{JURRASI}$, and $\underline{VAALKAN}$ languages all emerged from this tongue, though colonialism across the regions has seen most of them diminish, with only Parthisan remaining as a major language today. See Vol II: Languages.

SAMORRAH: Geo. Cold-temperate plains in the south of ALMAGEST.

They were once heavily forested, but overlogging left the area sparse, is soil loose and mostly barren, affording little economic value to the region.

SAMUIL EDICT: Pol. Soc. Law. Edict passed by the COUNCIL OF SEVEN in 1973 RM that not only legalised by also encouraged the looting of tombs and burials that either predated the founding of the KORACHANI EMPIRE or in foreign lands where the UNDYING MACHINE was not the primary deity. The edict was passed to much fanfare (likely designed to cover up the opposition) and imperial coffers were overflowing within a few years of the edicts passing, with the profits being put to various uses - largely military funding and expansionist efforts.

The edict is named after ARCHPATRICIAN EMUROS SAMUIL III, the member of the Seven who proposed it and fought for its passing.

Despite its earlier successes, the edict was revoked by unanimous agreement of the Council of Seven in 2487 RM and subsequently forgotten, though there have been recent whispers in Khadon of a revival of the edict SAMUCHAN: His. Failed KORACHANI colony off the south western coast of CUTH. Attempts to colonise the Island in 1525 RM failed and lasted less than a decade before it was abandoned due to the expense in operating it.

SAMUNNIA: Set. Major city in the north east of SEDISIA, along the course of the river NASHADRA (Pop. c. 400,000).

SAN: Eth. Nomads whose winding caravans are a common sight across in the EHRENISIAN COAST of the north of WESTERN SAMMAEA, including KHULL, SATHAII, and the north of the VESPERTINE LEAGUE. They have devised a system where they harvest TSAMMAS that grows semi-wild along their migratory routes, which they sell to settlements they pass through. They travel to a culturally-important location known as the CIRCLE OF THE SAN in late winter, and they congregate around it in time for the Spring Equinox, which they celebrate together before carrying on their separate ways. See Vol II: the Nomads of Elyden.

SAN DARTH, LABYRINTH OF: Rui. Ancient stone labyrinth in the far north of LLACHATUL, beneath the WHITE SHEET above the waters of the SEA OF IGRASIA. Little of the original structure is visible today, and the parts of it that are locked within the ice.

SANAKHA: (B. 3935) Pol. Ruler of TARTAK since 3952 RM, descended from the line of TARTAKASID REGENTS that was established 2134 RM. Known colloquially as the Giant-king, he stands 7-ft tall, and is thought to suffer from gigantism. The condition is kept in check by ATRAMENTAL drugs. It is commonly rumoured that he is descended from OGHURS, a lie that he himself does little to counter.

SANAKO: Set. Settlement in the far south of PARAIYA, in the GOUSON badlands. It is known for its goatherds (Pop. c. 6,000).

SANCTIFIED INQUISITION OF THE KORACHANI EMPIRE, the: also 'the Sanctified Orders of the Inquisition', and 'the Fraternal Orders of the Inquisition'. Pol. Org. Series of ordained organisations within the KORACHANI EMPIRE, composed of many independent Orders, that together carry out the will of the COUNCIL OF SEVEN. Each Order has set tenets and goals that it works towards achieving, making each a distinct entity with its own traditions, titles and troops. Together, the Orders follow a guidebook known as THE DIRECTORY, that was penned between

Each Order is based in a LANGUES^(1.) in a particular city, though has strongholds, offices, fortresses and other bases scattered across the empire (and beyond, in some case), as its tenets necessitate. There are dozens of different Orders across the empire, and nine amongst them are considered to be major, with many others fulfilling more niche roles being designated as minor.

c. 400 – 430 RM.

The major orders of the Sanctified Inquisition are, in alphabetical order:

 The AIWAHAN, whose members search for lost technologies whilst safeguarding existing technologies, ensuring that their secrets do not fall into enemy hands. They are gatekeepers of TECHNARCANA and their members are often augmented by ORTHOSES.

Founded in 341 RM, the Order's present Grandmaster is $\underline{\text{MACHAEUS ZIDEON}}$.

- The ARÂTHUAHI, whose members guard society against moral corruption, safeguarding the empire from its own people and rulers. They are seen by many as being less interested in the wellbeing of individuals than they are in the stability of the nation.

Founded in 396 RM, the Order's present Grandmaster is ABDASTARTUS ANAAH.

The AVÉNETHI, whose interest is in reducing the influence of the FIRMAMENT. They hunt WITCHES and destroy Firmamental architecture and landmarks. They are crusaders and are the most widely-recognised agents of the Inquisition.

Founded in 458 RM, the Order's present Grandmistress is ADONICA ASTARTUS.

- The CONCORDANTISTS, whose members believe in unity and balance, and strive to maintain the status quo that has ensured the empire's continued survival for over 4 millennia. They are tactful and duplicitous, rarely disclosing their full intentions, and have a reputation for having many spies.

Founded in 3037 RM, the Order's present Grandmaster is SIDION ROUYO.

 The GRIGORIANS, whose members root out and extinguish evil in all its forms. They are less specialised than other orders and are often the first line of defence. They are master trackers and investigators.

Founded in 358 RM, the Order is now divided into a TRIUMVIRATE, each Langue of which is led by a TRIUMVIR KOLROKH HANNO, KALEN PENSETTAR IV, and NUALLA INEN ARGHAAV.

 The KYONI, whose members guard the imperial cities and institutions from physical harm. They are experts in defence tactics, be it the building of fortifications or MAGICKAL protection, such as SARCOPHAGI.

Founded in 96 RM, the Order's present grandmaster is BELTSAR KOAN.

 The MORÉHAN, whose members protect the imperial populace from the heresies of idolatry and paganism. They work closely with the BUREAU OF CENSORS.

Founded in 498 RM, the Order's present Grandmistress is BEHRAAD KHASHAYAR.

 The SOMNIARECHI, whose members strive to keep the empire safe from DREAMSCAPES and the UNNATURAL CREATURES that are born inside them.

Founded in 1189 RM, the Order's present Grandmaster is $\underline{\mathsf{SAIGUS}}$ CHIMEON.

 The VÁMAN, whose members police usage of the ATRAMENTA and work against its abuse. They are seen as a necessary evil by many and have curtailed many disasters in their day.

Founded in 1196 RM, the Order's present grandmaster is HIMMILCAR FERDOUS.

Orders have risen and fallen throughout the long history of the Korachani empire, with many having been lost to SARASTRO following the events of the SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE, which later became known as the SHAMASHI ENCLAVES OF THE SARASTROAN EMPIRE. Most notable of these is the SURRAN ENCLAVE, which defected in 3705 RM.

The orders rose independently following the founding of the Kyoni Order in 96 RM in city of DEOCHAN in Korachan. Following the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR'S return from his wanderings in $\underline{\text{KHARKHARADONTIS}}$, he saw the strength of the Kyoni Order and had other orders founded between c. 350 – 500 RM.

Though originally members were male humans selected from various military organisations, freemen, and PATRICIAN HOUSES, an edict passed in 1765 RM by the Arch Assessor Magnate Atla ruled that anyone, regardless of race, sex and social standing could become a member of the Orders. This slowly filtered down to different Orders over the years, though the degree to which individual Orders have followed it has varied over the Orders.

SANCTION OF INDUSTRY: also 'Exploitation Rights'. Soc. Ind. All territories in the KORACHANI EMPIRE are said to belong to the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR, who in turn gives rights to PATRICIANS, FREEMEN and consortiums to work. These sanctions are granted by the MINASTERIA OF TITHES, proxying for the Archpotentate, and the Minasteria is also responsible for collecting the tithes owed to it by those working the empire's lands.

Individuals and organisations granted these exploitation rights must prove the financial viability of their venture within a year or risk losing the rights, which may be given to rival parties instead. Corporate espionage is common, with Patrician HOUSES interested in a particular tract of land doing anything in their power to usurp a territory from another House, only to buy them for cheap before turning lands into lucrative businesses.

SANCTITAN ORDER: Pol. Org. One of the minor SANCTIFIED ORDERS
OF THE INQUISITION in the KORACHANI EMPIRE whose agents independently investigate claims of miracles and discoveries of religious and historical relics across the empire.

The order was founded in the city of NEKODA, KORACHAN, in 343 RM following massed reports of miracles in the wake of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR'S return to the empire in 339 RM.

Many attempts have been made over the years to fold the Order into the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, though the importance of an independent assessor has become important as the Churches own criteria for approving miracles are more relaxed than Order's, which has led to clashes in the past.

SANCTUARIES OF SHADOW: Mil. Atr. Str. Throughout its history, the VÁMAN ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION has established hidden bases across the KORACHANI EMPIRE and beyond. These are clandestine bases of operations located in remote or strategically significant areas across the empire and beyond and serve as staging posts, training grounds, research facilities, and safe houses for Order agents during their observations of ATRAMENTAL activity, and are sometimes used to reeducate rogue SHAPERS that have been captured.

SANCTUARY OF DEII: see DEII, SANCTUARY OF.

SANCTUARY OF THE HOLY APPARITION: see HOLY APPARITION, SANCTUARY OF THE.

SANCTUARY OF MALICHAR MARTYRED, the: see MALICHAR MARTYRED, SANCTUARY OF.

SANCTUARY STATES, the: see CEGANE.

SANCTUARY OF TAGANAL: see TAGANAL, SANCTUARY OF.

SANCTUARY OF TEMPERANCE: see TEMPERANCE, SANCTUARY OF.

SANCTUM OF SUNTI: Rel. Str. Large shrine in the west of ZHARIAH^(2.) consecrated to the FELLAQISHI faith. It is the centre of a small community where adherents of the faith live in isolation from the world.

SANCTUM OF THE UNBORN: Rel. Str. Monument and temple in the west of PARAIYA.

SAND: Set. Small coastal settlement in the c ARKOS^(1,), overlooking the SEA OF ERIA (Pop. c. 2,200).

SAND GARDENS, the: see GULLAETHA.

SAND GHOSTS, the: see UTUARA.

SANDAN: Leg. Myr. One of many names of the HERO OF A THOUSAND BATTLES

 \underline{SANDAS} : Set. Whaling settlement in the far south east of $\underline{SAMMAEA}$, overlooking the $\underline{SEA\ OF\ SAMMAIDU}$ (Pop. c. 8,200).

SANDASSE: Set. Settlement in the west of N'RAKH, known for its slavers that move west into the UMBRA SOKHAR (Pop. unknown).

SANDNAR: 1. Lak. Lake in the c of THE SURRACH.

2. Set. Settlement in the c of THE SURRACH, along the shores of lake Sandnar^(1.). Its primary industry is the collection of mineral-rich mud from the shores of the lake, which is used in pottery as well as cosmetic products that are used across THE SURRACH (Pop. c. 6,100).

SANDS OF MOREG: Also 'Moreg'. Geo. Region of the west of the EPHOT THAS in the south of ANUBIA. It is noted for acidic soils that are detrimental to most life. In extreme instances, this soil can corrode material objects, as evidenced by the TOWER OF ERETH; its adamantine walls pitted and stained by the soils effects over the years.

SANDLEAPER: Fau. Small winged lizard common to arid regions in SAMMAEA. Their atrophied legs are barely capable of walking and mostly serve as stabilising their flight when gliding, or hanging onto cliff-faces and bushes. Their 'wings' are made up of skin membranes that run between their limbs and bodies. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

SANDOON: Set. Large city in the c north west of CUTH. It is an ancient city, with records dating back to c. 0 RM, when it formed part of a MON KETTRAN trade-network. Today it and its satellites are major producers of bloodstone and aluminium (Pop. c. 71,000).

SANDRO: Set. Coastal settlement in the west of RHEA. The settlement is disproportionately-small in comparison to its harbour, which serves as a mercantile centre, where processed aluminium begins its journey to be sold abroad (Pop. c. 6,500).

SANDULKA: See. Small city in the north east of the tribe of ESSERIS in the south east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 16,000).

SANDWASP: Fau. Small vermin common in desert and other dry interior regions of KHARKHARADONTIS. It builds paper-like nests in the dust and hovers close to the ground. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

SANDWEAVER: see VERKES.

SANDWEAVER HIVE: Geo. A rare example of a SANDWEAVER hive that is built above ground. Located in the middle of the VACIVA desert, in the c north east of ROMOREA^(2.). It is gigantic, measuring some 30-ft. tall and 40-ft. wide at the base, though is now abandoned.

SANEM: Geo. Mountain in the c north east of SABIA, dominated by the COLOSSUS; a monolithic bas-carving that takes up an entire face of the Mountain.

SANGATTA: Set. Crossroads city in the c south of KARAKHAS, known for its large markets. In antiquity it was subject to many barbarian attacks from the south (Pop. c. 25,500).

SANGEN: (14,820-ft.) Geo. One of ten peaks (colloquially known as the TEN PRINCES) of the south eastern A SAVI Mountains, in the north of AHRISHEN, named after an ancient prince.

SANGRUR OSH: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the north east of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES, just south of the MADRA Mountain close to the border with ANUBIA and SUOR. It employs a small elite corps of FIRE LIZARD troops who patrol the border along the mountain.

SANI: Set. Settlement in the c north west of the VESPERTINE LEAGUE in the north of SAMMAEA, unlinked to, but situated over the ruins of a far older place, said to be part of the great redoubt now remembered as SATARNICA. Though small, the settlement is a hub of regional knowledge, with thousands of ancient books on a variety of subjects housed there. They are thought to have been recovered from the far more ancient and possibly mythical library known as LOSTIS, which is thought to have been destroyed sometime in the FOURTH AGE (Pop. c. 5,500).

SANIESA: Int. Sup. Geo. Attramentally tainted river and waterfall in the PLAIN OF FLESH area of the FLAESCUS, in c western KHARKHARADONTIS. Its waters are thick and yellowish and stink of putrefaction. Its waters buzz with tens of thousands of insects that subsist on its waters, which disappear down a wound-like sinkhole. Its terminus remains unknown.

SANKAROS: Geo. Large highland massif region in the south of MALAN, between the HENDECARCHIES of CHLORIS and ATALLUA.

SANKAROS, OBSERVATORY OF: Ast. Str. Astronomical observatory in the south west of the HENDECARCHY of ATALLUA in the south of MALAN, not far from the peak of MT. TAABAR. It originated as a star temple in the THIRD AGE and after millennia of abandonment was repurposed as an observatory that is still used to this day.

SANNAL ITRUSH: Sea. Lagoon in the AMMASHI FREE-ISLES, off the south western coast of the $\underline{AMMASHI}^{(L)}$ peninsula.

SANNATH: also 'the Sterile Realm'. Int. Geo. Eerie savannah realm in the east of SABAISA, in far EASTERN SAMMAEA. The entire region, covering some 2,000-square-miles, is noted for its dusty white patina that covers everything, from rock formations, as though the whole area were made of porcelain. Much of areas' canyons and buttes are cracked and pitted. Little is known of the place though it has existed in this state since the appearance of records.

SANO: Cur. SAUAN currency. See Vol II: Currency and Coinage in Elyden.

SANRIS: Set. Settlement in the south of the PARTHISAN colony of EZHIRAYA^(2.), on the south western periphery of the FIRMAMENTALLY TAINTED region of TRAAGRIA. Its main industry is the mining of SUNSTONES (Pop. c. 9,000).

SANSARA: His. Historical settlement in the south west of the Island-state of ARCHAEDON⁽²⁾. It became the new capital of Archaedon in 3013 RM following decades of conflict, and was renamed Archaedon⁽³⁾ during its centennial festival in 3113 RM.

SANSARNIS: (D. 97 RM) Rel. His. One of the FOURTEEN APOSTLES who followed the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR during his conquest of the Inner Sea. He would later earn the moniker 'the First', as he was considered by his peers to be the favoured of Malichar. He was the first to popularize the ritual of breaking bread, which would go on to be known as the VICTUALS OF SANSARNIS, and which are observed to this day, largely in ALMAGEST. He was made a saint of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE one decade after his death, in 107 RM.

SANTER: Set. Settlement in the north east of ALMAGEST, south of the MARMARA massif. It stores and distributes ores and other materials excavated around the massif south to other cities in Almagest, and is also a major producer of musk ox wool, which is highly valued (Pop. c. 5,000).

SANTOREA: Geo. Expansive mountain-chain dominating the south west of Western Sammaea, to the north of which is a vast basin that encompasses most of the CITIZENRY OF THALI and the VESPERTINE LEAGUE. Its western sea-facing face is steeper, characterised by plateaus and cliffs, and its northern face is shallower, characterised by terraced fields and savannahs. Around 2,200-miles-long, the range begins in the north near the SEA OF SAVAEN where the city of ASHIKARA stands as its northern-most settlement, all the way to the northern border of AEONAS, where it serves as a border between CARNYNGA and BELEGOR⁽¹⁾, before giving way to the TALENTARI mountains to the south east.

SANTHA: Set. Settlement in the c-south east of SHOTHA, along the LUKAEN formation (Pop. c. 9,000).

SANTHAR: Sec. Small city in the c north east of ESHIR⁽²⁾, situated along the western-most extent of the LEDGE OF LARCIA. It was once a prosperous harbour-city, though is now around 75-miles from the present-day coast. It is much diminished from its previous incarnation, and its main industry is peat mining (Pop. c. 4,800).

SAOKIAN: Geo. Island off the northern coast of KEPHUAAN, which, alongside, SONUIAN, are separated from the coast by the shallow sea known as the VEREN ITRUSH.

SAOSHYANT, the: Pol. Rnk. Ruling rank withing the SAOSTANAN ruling council known as the SAOSHYANTS.

SAOSHYANTS: Com. Pol. Rnk. Ruling merchant class that rose in the city of TAHMAL⁽²⁾ (later moved their halls to SOLONIA) from a mix of SAOSTANAN people and Tahmali natives (from AMNATHI KINGDOM that dissolved in -589 RM) in c. -200 RM, coming to power in -172 RM, following the waning of the SAOSTANAN DYNASTIES. By -33 RM, they had rallied most of the SAOSTANAN city-states under their banner.

The Saoshyants ruled as a council, with representatives from each of the $\underline{SARASTROAN}$ city-states; headed by The $\underline{SAOSHYANT}$ – a hierarchal leader. They continued to rule as regional leaders under the yoke of the $\underline{VENATHIEMPIRE}$, which lasted from 114-157 RM, when Sarastro broke free. The return of $\underline{SATHEPTHERISEN}$ in 176 RM saw the Saoshyants wane in power, though they remained as his ruling council, though the rank of Saoshyant was retired.

Its freedom was not to last long however, as the nation was taken by the newly-risen ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR in 339 RM. Though many of them maintained their mercantile holdings in Sarastro, they slowly became subservient to the appointed patricians of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, who in turn took their name as their own, later becoming known as EMIRS (by c. 500 RM), after which the Sarastroan EMIRATES are named.

Little changed after the fall of the Korachani empire, and by that time the Saoshyant patricians that remained in Sarastro had reverted to a system of government almost identical to that that had been in effect in 339 RM

SAOSTANA: His. Ntn. Precursor nation to SARASTRO. It became known as Sarastro during the rule of the latter SAOSTANAN DYNASTIES, under whose leadership it broke free from its VENATHI subjugators in 157 RM. Originally ruled by the sorcerer SATHEP, who rose in -1019 RM, his abandonment of the region in -1000 RM saw the Saostanan Dynasties rise to power, ruling until the regions' subjugation by the Venathi empire in 114 RM, which saw the last Dynast executed, and their line ended.

The death of KING LABAISINGH in 151 RM saw Venath crumble, and Saostana slipped away soon after, regaining its independence under the SAOSHYANTS. Sathep returned as a lich in 176 RM, and reclaimed his lands, ruling as autocrat until 339 RM, when the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR attacked the nation after it had been besieged by KORACHAN for a century. Malichar was successful in capturing the nation, bringing Saostana under his banner, becoming known as Sarastro. See Vol III: Extinct States.

SAOSTANAN: His. Lan. Now-extinct language spoken by the early FIFTH AGE SAOSTANAN nation that would later evolve into SARASTROAN. It emerged from the earlier THYMI language See Vol II: Languages.

SAOSTANAN DYNASTIES: His. Ntn. The old ruling elite of pre-SAOSHYANT SARASTRO (then known as SAOSTANA). The Saostanan Dynasties rose in c. -1000 RM and were centred around what is now CARULA and the fertile basin around 250-miles around. In c. -500 the people of TAHMAL. (i.) (one of nine NARTHELI ancestral states) would join with Saostana. Beyond were the Saostanan nomads who would later in c. -300 RM populate the larger region covering what today are the north of Sarastro, south of NARTHEL and IO.

Below is a list of the full dynasties and their rulers in chronological order. Each ruler is followed by the length of their rule in years.

- The White Kings. The first dynasty began with an invasion of the AMNATHI KINGDOM (later known as Nárthel) in c. -1100 RM, culminating in –1019 RM with the crowing of SATHEP as the first king of Saostana: Sathep (19), Khorsh (15), Abasiha (12), Sakhon I (36), Sakhon II (21), Varrakh (3.), Sakhon III (2.).
- The Saostanan Household. Following a rule that lasted just over a century and whose final days were rife with tumult and weak leaders, the immigrant White Kings were replaced by the first true Saostanan king, Rahakh, in −911 RM. The Saostanan Dynasty was strong and concentrated on growth, providing solid roots for future kings. Rahakh (28), Athan I (17), Athan II (25), Abasiha II (53).
- The Nathi Dynasties. Marriage bonds made between Saostana and the kingdom of NATH (that would, centuries later, become the heart of the VENATHI EMPIRE) propagated the rise of the Nathi Dynasties, who consolidated their lands and created trade-routes to the north and east. Khathan (41), Eithakhan (32), Khasahb (23), Khasahb II (35), Nothah (29), Vorah (1.).
- The Simulaeids. Vorah was assassinated one year into his rule, and a new dynasty rose; the Simulaeids. Each king naming himself after the patron deity Sathahan, the Simulaeids created such a bond between church and state so as to foment unrest amongst the people. This unrest culminated in –579 RM with a short but bloody civil war that ended in a coup, toppling the Simulaeid household. Sathahan I (4.), II (11), III (9), IV (15), V (2.), VI (7).
- The Shananid Dynasty. In the wake of Sathahan VI rose Shanan and, later his son Sathahan, whose relatively long rules restabilised the region whilst returning more traditional religious values to Saostana, though the foundations paved by this dynasty were to be undone with the death of Sathahan. Shanan (25), Sathahan (41).

- The Defiler Kings. Destroying all that came before, the Defiler Kings were tyrants who cared little for the prosperity of the region. Granaries and coffers lay empty even as the Defiler kings erected more lavish and marvellous monuments in their honour. By the time of the last of the Defiler Kings, Habakukh, claimed the throne, Saostana had become a dead place, most of its cities reduced to shadows of their former selves. Habakukh died to the PLAGUE in −382 RM, leaving Saostana without heir. Voragh the defiler (40), RAKHAHANA (46), Reshab (34), Habakukh (11).
- The Usurper. Habakukh's death left Saostana without heir and for three years after his death the region suffered lawlessness and anarchy as a handful of aspirants fought over the throne. In −379 RM, Reneb the Usurper gained the upper hand. His rule was tenebrous but served to return stability to the region. Reneb the Usurper (5).
- The Twilight Dynasty. The dynasty that followed Reneb was far more conservative than those that preceded it, concentrating on mending schisms and repairing that which was lost to the Defiler Kings, but too much effort and resources were wasted keeping increasingly independent city-states and regions under their control. During the Rule of Vanash (c. –175 RM) a new power had begun to rise in Saostana; a powerful merchant class known as the Saoshyants who claimed Saostana after the death of his successor, Sarkash II. Rehak (19), Kahhan (8), Deneb (41), Sarkash (43), Vanash (38), Sarkash II (25).
- The Hollow Dynasty. Under the Saoshyants, Saostana enjoyed a prosperous rule and in their wisdom was the royal family was allowed to continue. While the Saoshyants wielded full political power, the dynasties became the face of Saostana and served the morale of the people well. Habashan (9), Habashan II (11).
- The Arrogate Dynasty. The status quo was challenged in -140 RM when the newly risen king Sakhon Re rose against the Saoshyants. He was killed in action. Sakhon Re (the heretic) (8).
- The Silent Dynasty. Following the fall of Sakhon Re, the dynasties and Saoshyants returned to their partnership. During this time the high families of the Dynasties, their duties and responsibilities largely handed over to the Saoshyants, became embroiled in secret pursuits uncovered in the south. Little is known of this passion though it is responsible for their prolonged lifespans. Seemingly happy with their relationship with the Saoshyants, peace remained in Saostana until the rise of Venath in the east, culminating in its annexing of Saostana and the EXECUTION of the last king, Maharah in 114 RM. Sherrib (31), Re-Hakah (38), Hakah anu (35), Eikatha (61), Sat hashan (37), Re-aunu (42), Maharah (rebirth of old dynasties) (2.).
- The Risen. By then Saostana had become known as Sarastro, and it had broken free of Venathi rule in 157 RM and, around two decades after that, an emaciated demagogue emerged from the Shamal claiming to be Sathep the Risen; the first king of Dynastic Sarastro. His word was not questioned and he remained a powerful figure until 339 RM when the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR attacked and seized Sarastro, making Sathep his proxy there; a position he maintains to this day. Sathep the Risen (c. 180 RM to present).
- SAPAH: Sea. Narrow sound in the c of GYZHA, acting as the mouth of the river ARNON.
- SAPARATH: Lak. Largest lake in the c of LLACHATUL, in THE OLD FOREST and forming part of the route of river IAGANNATH. The lake is relatively shallow and sports a variety of life and its shores are thought to be home to many settlements in the region.
- SAPARY: Geo. Tropical lowland region dominating the south of IACIO. The region is characterised by its sparse jungles and low, level, elevation, which was slowly revealed by waning sea levels over the past millennia. The western part of Sapary is renowned for the ruins of a vast artificial channel network known as SAPPAR, remnants of a previous age.
- SAPEAHK: Set. Major city in the c north east of AHKA, along the course of the river AMALTHEA, where the river GORIA meets it. It is a major link along the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 239,500).
- SAPET BESAYT: Pol. His. Descendant of PHAROANTS and unifier of post-CATACLYSM KHAMID. By c. 800 RM he had united most of the people north of the SNJEMET Mountains.

- SAPETI DYNASTIES: His. Pol. Ruling dynasty in KHAMID that lasted from 854 2384 RM, named after SAPET BESAYT. It ended with the assassination of SHEDKHARKHEM IV by NATIT HENSHEF.
- SAPHACHAN: Set. Settlement in the north east of PELASGOS, to the east of the BULOS Massif. Its main industry is the mining of SERPENTINE and the manufacture of objects from it, including turned cups (Pop. c. 4,800).
- SAPHAHAKH: Orth. OTHERWORLDER who in c. 2845 RM united the nine peoples of the CEHOPHELA region of central MENISCEA.
- SAPHIA: Set. Small city in the west of ALAM BETHYL, in the c of the territory of GELAH^(1.) (Pop. c. 13,700).
- SAPHRAX: Pol. Soc. Ind. Large PATRICIAN HOUSE with manufactories in AZAZEM and LAASKHA that produce DENIM garments (mostly jeans and dungarees) that are used by manual labourers across the INNER SEA REGION. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.
- SAPPAM: Pol. Set. Capital city of VALA, located roughly in the middle of the nation. The city is renowned as the centre and origin of the practice of HAPAMALA; where the dead are submerged in fresh resins which dry clear, preserving their bodies for millennia (Pop. c. 246,000).
- SAPPAR: Str. Ancient channel-network in the south west of IACIO. It was once coastal, though the waning of ELYDEN'S seas has found it many miles from the coast, abandoned and forgotten.
- SAPPARANTI: Rvr. River in the south west of METHUMN that flows for c. 740-miles west from sources fed by springs and aquifers and occasional floodwaters from rare spring storms, before emptying into the BAY OF HEZAZ. Its course is blocked by portcullises at the capital, ARAROBY, so that merchant barges from the west can be inspected and pay taxes before gaining access into the city.
- SAPPHAN: Set. City in the c north of AHKA. The city is known for the grotesque cadaver statue that stands above the governor's palace, that contains the mummified heart of the city's founder (Pop. c. 25,000).
- SAPPHIA: Set. Major city in the south west of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES. It is an industrial centre of the area, and is known for its factories and shipbuilding yards (Pop. c. 1,000,000).
- SAPROCHAN: Set. Conurbation in the c of AZAZEM, known for its vast numbers of greenhouses that surround the settlements for miles in all direction and which are fed by vast underground reservoirs. It was once a coastal city, when the SEA OF BATHOS^(1,1) stretcher farther inland than today, but found itself some miles from the coast in the ensuing centuries. It was home to ST. AGYNES, who is buried there, within the THREEFOLD CHURCH, which is dedicated to her (Pop. c. 26,000).
- SAQATAR: Set. Settlement in the east of AHRISHEN, forming a part of the GREAT ROAD the main Ahrisheni land trade-route. It offers food and provisions to merchants travelling along the route (Pop. c. 8,300).
- SAR: 1. Rvr. River flowing from the KOKORO Mountains and passing across the west of SAUA and the north of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of ALAMUT, before meeting its parent, the larger river SARA.
 - 2. Rui. Ancient KERATIN ruin in the c of VAALK.
 - 3. Geo. Crater in the c south of EREBETH measuring some 17-miles wide.
- SARA: Rvr. Large river flowing for over 1,500-miles through the nations of BAATAN, the c of VIRAHAN, the east of AHRISHEN, the west of SAUA, and the c of the HARÉSHK from sources in the DUIÁRHI and ORCAMMOR Mountains and the SALKHAN Massif, before emptying into the SEA OF DERAEA. The river flows through many major lakes, including lake MASTI and GALENDA, and forms a part of the AHRISHENI WATERWAYS.
- SARABAT: Set. Small city in the c south of BANT, in the CARCHEMISHI
 PENINSULA⁽¹⁾, in the east of SAMMAEA, close to the delta of the river
 SCATURIA. It is a major producer of food in the region (Pop. c. 14,000).
- SARAD: Set. Settlement in the far east of PARAIYA. Its main industry is the cultivation of date palms (Pop. c. 5,000).
- SARAD RYX: His. Set. Ancient early FIFTH AGE settlement in the state of ERINAT, south of the river SARADAR. An outbreak of river flu around the confluence of the river Saradar and DAKKHAN led to many Erinati settlements being abandoned, and the IDOL OF BAPHOMET, located in a temple since c. -450 RM, was moved to Sarad Ryx, which became the new capital in around 220 RM.

The city was abandoned in c. 520 RM, due to KORACHANI influence in the region, and was larger resettled in c. 690 RM, eventually becoming the capital of Erinat after the old capital, TIGAR, was razed by Korachani forces in 817 RM. Its name would slowly change to SARDONYX, the present capital of RHINOCOLOURA.

SARADAH: Set. City in the c of BASSORAH⁽²⁾, along the course of the river SASSARAH (Pop. c. 35,000).

SARADAR: Rvr. River in the north east of RHINOCOLOURA flowing north east for 180-miles from sources in SIRI RAH Mountains before meeting its parent, the river DAKHAN.

SARADI INAT: Geo. Major region of level sparse coastal jungle dominating the west of IACIO. It was recently exposed in geological terms, through the waning of ELYDEN'S seas and until c. 1000 RM, the entire region, as far east as the cities of HAOH SAYON and MARECHOTTAY, was submerged. The retreat of the sea revealed vast regions of coral, some 10 - 20-ft. tall. They were already dead by the time they were revealed and were bleached from exposure to the fierce tropical sun, but they served as valuable anchors for new vegetation, which rapidly advanced to claim the newly-revealed terrain. Today the entire region is covered in epiphytes, vines and creepers that have taken over the calcified coral remnants, peppered with new-growth jungles between them. The entire region is lush, and a place where nature thrives.

SARADRA: Set. Small city in c PARTHIS, some 10-miles south west from the capital in TETHRA. The city is a major producer of TECHNARCANELY altered poultry and livestock, most of which is consumed in Tethra (Pop. c. 20,000).

SARAGON: 1. Rvr. River in the north of SARASTRO, flowing for 250-miles south from sources in the JAHAL Mountains before meeting its parent, the river SOLONA.

 Lak. Lake along the course of the above river^(1.) in the north of SARASTRO.

SARAGOS: Pol. Set. Capital city of the TECHNOCRATIC REPUBLIC OF SARAGOS. Technologists exiled from VENTHIR fled south in 1939 RM and settled around what was then a small settlement, which would later become the capital of Saragos. It is considered one of the most advanced cities in ELYDEN, with the highest literacy rate and the greatest proportion of vocationally-qualified individuals amongst cities in the greater INNER SEA REGION. It is famed for its expansive subterranean vaulted water reservoirs that are used in some parts to aid public transport.

The city was besieged in 3405 RM by Venthir, though its defences and expert DACATECH army repelled the attacks.

Like many coastal cities in Elyden, the retreating coastlines recorded during the FIFTH AGE have left the city stranded from the coast, though it maintains a complex system of levees and canals that maintain its link to the sea. These canals cover no less than 7-miles (Pop. c. 650,500).

SARAGOS, TECHNOCRATIC REPUBLIC OF: Dem. 'Saragosi'. Ntn. Nation in the north east of SAMMAEA, to the south east of VENTHIR, that originated in 1939 RM after chief technologist ZADDOCK and his allies were exiled to the south of Venthir by QUEEN HETEPHERES decades earlier. It lies across the TROPIC OF RAH, and has the MOLACHARI DESERT to its west, making it a dry region, though it is far from inhospitable, and is covered in expansive savannahs. Its cities are known for their large communal wells as well as their expansive vaulted subterranean water reservoirs, that are sometimes used for public transport.

It is considered one of the most advanced nations in ELYDEN, with the highest literacy rate and the greatest proportion of vocationally-qualified individuals in the greater INNER SEA REGION, and its technarcane machinery is famed by others nations. Perhaps most mentioned are its airships that are used to maintain a thriving trade-route with the otherwise reclusive people of PORPHYR.

In 3703 RM the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR travelled to Saragos and met with the chief Technocrat there. The outcome of the meeting is not recorded, though upon returning to KORACHAN, Malichar began a time of reclusiveness that has lasted three centuries and continues to this day. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

SARAGOSI: Lan. Main language of SARAGOS, evolving from VENATHI following its founding as an independent nation in 1939 RM, after its sundering from the south of VENTHIR. It is a technical language and is used within the government and its industries. See Vol II: Languages.

SARAGOSI BIT: see BIT, SARAGOSI.

SARAGOSI UNIVERSITY OF TECHNARCANA: Edu. Str. Major university dominating the settlement of VENTIA in the north east of SARAGOS.

SARAHAQ: Set. Small city in the c south of the SULTANATE OF ABACARDAT. Its main industry is arable farming (Pop. c. 12,500).

SARAHAPONGAN: Sup. Geo. Scattered Atramentally Tainted region in the jungles of Kardaul known for their impressive and treacherous duststone formations, which are covered in vegetation.

SARAIA THE DERELICT: Oth. HALFBLOOD and former head lictor to the VAALKAN government between 2713 – 2759 RM though was exiled in absentia following her arrest and botched EXECUTION in 2759 RM due to excessive aggression. She spent the next decades wandering the lands around KHARKHARADONTIS, seeking challenges worthy of her attentions. She fought and slayed an elder tarragon in 2863 RM in AETHIOS. Following many years on the road, becoming a fugitive in dozens of settlements and an infamous legend in the south of KARAKHAS following a series of bloody murders there, she settled down in Karakhas.

Following an encounter with a devotee of ARAKHAMÉ, she became consumed by a desire to learn more of the DEMIURGE KHARANI, who she believed she was descended from. Her magnum opus was in 2917 RM when, after years of research, she discovered the BLOODY STELAE in VORAKAN, birthing the ORDER OF THE BLOODY HAND, which consequently led to the rise of the CHILDREN OF KHAR'ILLAE across Imperial cities.

SARAKHAR: Rvr. River in the east of RHINOCOLOURA, flowing north for 190-miles into lake NOHEHUN.

SARAL: Set. Major city in the c of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES, and one of its oldest permanent settlements. Saral is well known for its prestigious painhouses, and wealthy masochistic hedonists travel there from distant lands to experiences new levels of pain there. It is also home to one of the largest NOAMASI markets, outside its main walls. The market can be considered a settlement apart Saral, and like most such markets, it is governed by the Noamas families and falls under their archaic laws and customs, and the militia and armies of Saral have no influence there (Pop. c. 220.000).

SARALAL: Rvr. Expansive wetland region in the south east of HABOT, along the course off the river VAIAUANTI, where the river flows slowly in a vast lowland area of the ELLSALEN (3.) basin.

SARAN RESERVOIR: Rvr. Lak. Expansive wetlands in the c of VIRAHAN, forming a 110-mile stretch of the river SARA, serving as a sink for floodwaters, allowing the rest of the river to withstand flooding.

SARANTHIA: Sup. Geo. FIRMAMENTAL expanse in the north east of the HENDECARCHY of DERAEIA, in MALAN, in the western plateaus of the ARGENT Mountain.

The region is noted for its relative warmth (though on the 44th parallel the climate there is more akin to a savannah), with glaring hot summers and warm winters, though the climate rapidly returns to normal outside its borders. The area is cracked and dry, the land bleached from repeated exposure to the Firmament, though when its effects wane in the winter the rain that affects the region can flood some areas.

SARAPHA: Rvr. River in the c north of GNOTH, flowing south for 530-miles from sources in the SOLUN HIGHLANDS, before meeting its parent, the river NEPHOT.

SARAS: Set. Settlement in the c of the PARTHISAN colony of EZHIRAYA^(2.), in the east of MENISCEA Its main industry is agriculture (Pop. c. 6,800).

SARASAN: Geo. Mountain-range in the south west of the territories of ETHISTONITH in RHINOCOLOURA, forming part of the expansive ETHISTONI HIGHLANDS.

SARASH: For. Forest in the north of ATARAXIA.

SARASHAN: Dem. 'Sarashan'. His. Ntn. One of many early FIFTH AGE cultures that emerged in the c of the PORPHYRI PENINSULA, in what is now the south of PORPHYR, between c. -700 – 823 RM. Their leaders were technologists descended from missionaries of the VAGANT COHORT who came into power in 213 RM, in the form of the VAGANT DYNASTY. The nation finally fell in 824 RM, with the collapse of the technarchy. Following centuries of instability, three successor states emerged – SEBDRA in the north, MENKAR in west and KAPAR in the south east. See Vol III: Extinct States.

SARASHANI: His. Lan. Now-extinct language of the early FIFTH AGE SARASHANI culture. It would eventually evolve into extant SABAISAN. See Vol II: Languages.

SARASTRO: 1. Dem. 'Sarastroan'. Ntn. Nation in the north east of SAMMAEA and home to the RULING CITY of the REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO. Its climate ranges from arid in the south to temperate-dry in the north, with mountainous highland regions forming its eastern border and various ranges to its west. Between are large swathes of savannahs, grasslands, and sparse woodlands, through which flow various rivers, most notably the SOLONA, which dominates the east and north, and the Morul, which dominates the west.

The nation has a long history, going back to the early centuries of the FIFTH AGE, when it was known as SAOSTANA. Founded by the sorcerer SATHEP in -1019 RM, it eventually came to be ruled by a succession of monarchs known as the SAOSTANAN DYNASTIES. It was a powerful state, controlling what is now the west of the ARID TRIPTYCH, though fell under the yoke of the VENATHI EMPIRE in 114 RM, which had the last of the Saostanan Dynasts executed.

The death of King Labaisingh the Strong in 151 RM saw Venath crumble, and Saostana slipped away soon after, regaining its independence under the Saoshyants. Sathep returned to Argea as a lich in 176 RM, where he amassed a cult following, though he was unable to oust the Saoshyants. Korachan attacked Sarastro in 222 RM, but the nations' defences were too strong and the war devolved into a stalemate, dragging out for over a century, devastating the surrounding region. In 339 RM Sathep went into the wilderness and encountered the Archpotentate Malichar. The two returned to Argea at the head of a mercenary army, taking Argea in a single night with the rest of Sarastro falling soon after. Malichar made Sathep governor of Argea before returning to Korachan.

Sarastro became a powerful state within the Korachani empire, acting as a bulwark against unruly lands to the south east of the empire, with its military guarding the Growing Mountains and the Anubian desert from barbarian intrusion.

Sarastro prospered under the leadership of the tyrant Sathep, who was given the luxury of self-rule that many subjugated territories were not. Most claimed that it was by dint of his strength and skill with ATRAMENTISM. Indeed, many believed he was more than a match for the Archpotentate, should he choose to oppose him. A relic of a far older time, Sathep was distrusting of technology in the magnitude that it had come to dominate life. Slavery became rampant, and what resources Korachan did not take for itself he put to good use. Sathep established the Imperial DIWAN, a large autocratic council that oversaw the daily running of the Reformed empire, which continues to rule to this day.

In 3103 RM, the Archpotentate Malichar granted to Sarastro Io, part of BA'AKH and other lands in a controversial move that came to be known as the SARASTROAN SANCTION. This gave Korachan access to Sarastro's military might, making it the most powerful empire in the INNER SEA REGION. Others saw the move as a risky, albeit grandiose gesture, but as the empire crumbled in the wake of waning resources and growing threats, Sarastro found itself growing stronger, and more brazen in its actions.

The VENTHIRI declaration of war against Sarastro in 3703 RM eventually saw Korachan join in the conflict, which later became known as the WAR OF SUNDERING. The war ended on 23rd SATAVALEN 3705 RM, with Sarastro gaining independence and the states of IO, BA'AKH and LIDEA as vassals, leading to the SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE. Sarastro would eventually also acquire MHAROKK and VAALK as vassals over the next decades, by which time it had become known as the LOW-EMPIRE OF SARASTRO. New reserves of gold and diamonds were discovered after the Sundering, brining renewed wealth to the Low-empire.

A mixture of hotter climates and harsher terrain give Sarastro a distinct appearance that is different to that of the High-empire, and most of its cities are seen as backwards as a result. In truth Sarastro is no less industrious than Korachan and other major powers around the Inner Sea, it's just that its cities look older and its people cling to older fashions and traditions.

The capital of Sarastro, Argea, is famed for its bakeries and the bread that is distributed for free to its populace, who, despite many aspects of life being harsher than its northern counterpart, enjoy certain privileges the work-slaves of Korachan are denied. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations

2. Ntn. Lan. Common name for the REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO, or the Low-empire of Sarastro.

SARASTRO, THE REFORMED EMPIRE OF: see REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO.

SARASTRO, SIEGE OF: Mil. War. His. Common name for the KORACHANI attack of SARASTRO, which lasted from 322 to 339 RM. Ironically, the war was won 2-years after the retreat of most imperial armies, when the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR (disappeared since 84 RM following his victory in NARTHEL) marched north east from KHARKHARADONTIS with a cadre of PLAGI and DEMIURNES and other followers. He entered the city of KNOSSOR, which he subjugated in one night of fighting, renaming it MALICHARA. The rest of Sarastro fell soon after.

SARASTROAN: Lan. Primary language spoken in the nation of SARASTRO, as well as most capitals and administrative regions across the REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO. It emerged from the early FIFTH AGE SAOSTANAN language See Vol II: Languages.

SARASTROAN COALITION, the: Mil. Pol. His. The formal name given to the alliance of dissident forces during the WAR OF SUNDERING, led by SARASTRO. The coalition included the states of BA'AKH (following the failure of the BA'AKHI WAR FOR INDEPENDENCE), IO, LIDEA, and roughly half of VAALTHA following the fall of ANAKARRA. Various other territories, mostly in Vaaltha and MHAROKK were, for at least a short time during the war, part of the coalition.

The SARAKASHAR (general) RAISHAZAR MELQART was appointed as ARCH SARAKASHAR by the LICHKING SATHEP himself on the 15th LIVIALEN 3703 RM, remaining the supreme commander of the Coalition until the signing of the SARASTROAN TREATY two-years later.

The Treaty led to the formation of the REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO, which replaced the Coalition.

SARASTROAN INSTITUTE OF ARCANE SKILLS: see ROYAL COLLEGIATE OF SARASTRO.

SARASTROAN ORTHODOXY, the: also 'Machine Orthodoxy'. His. Rel. Now-extinct religion that appeared in ARGEA as a sect of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE late in the 37th century RM. The Sarastroan Orthodoxy refuted the divinity of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR, which led to dissent within the Church of the Undying Machine that culminated in early 3704 RM with fighting reaching various parts of the empire as the beliefs of the Orthodoxy continued to spread.

By summer, members of the laity were fighting within the HOLY PRECINCT, ending with the CONCLAVE OF KHADON, in which the church was divided into two denominations – the Church of the Machine of Korachan and the Sarastroan Orthodoxy in Argea and surrounding lands.

After gaining independence in 3705 RM following the SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE, SATHEP THE RISEN, ruler of the LOW-EMPIRE, worked tirelessly to unify the disparate sects that had splintered from the Church of the Undying Machine prior to the Sundering. After penning a new holy text in which he replaced Malichar as the second half of the diptych, he was able to unite all the sects, including the Sarastroan Orthodoxy, which was officially absorbed and formed the backbone of the REFORMED CHURCH OF SARASTRO, which remains the state religion of Sarastro to this day.

SARASTROAN SANCTION, the: Pol. His. A controversial edict issued by the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR in 3103 RM that granted SATHEP THE RISEN, ruler of the vassal state of SARASTRO, control of the territories of IO, northern BA'AKH (as determined by the land north of the course of the Shibotha mountain, south east towards the ILLEAN coast), and the territories south of the HAAGEN^(1.) Mountain. In return, he demanded Sarastro downsize its armies, providing the excess to KORACHAN in the form of a tithe. He also promised Sathep that, should he honour his obligations for at least two-centuries, he would also share with him deep Atramental secrets in his capacity of SENTINEL OF THE SHADOW.

In Khadon, the Council of Seven and the League of Patricians were livid, proclaiming it no less than folly for Korachan to so willingly and needlessly hand over territory to a vassal so powerful as Sathep, and so soon after the devastating losses of the War of the Artifexes, in which Almagest, northern Skaros and Durchaa($^{(1)}$) slipped free of Korachani control.

Ba'akh, by then reduced to an Atramental Wasteland, its SIPHON ENGINES beyond repair, received little attention, with Sarastroan governors plundering it for what few resources it still had. This included occasional slave raids into its territories. Io was more productive, and Sarastro was quick to send governors and forces into its territories to secure them.

The CITADEL MOUNTS of EHBOT and the tribes of MULCIBER suffered from many Sarastroan raids over the next centuries, until c. 3700 RM, which ended only due to the effects of the GREAT CONTAGION that weakened Sarastro.

Emboldened by one of the Archpotentate's prolonged absences, the COUNCIL OF SEVEN issued an edict to Sarastro in 3698 RM that rescinded the Sarastroan Sanction, effectively removing Io, Ba'akh and the Haageni territories from its territories. Sathep himself replied, simply refuting the request and effectively challenging the empire to call his bluff. The Seven did not immediately act, though Sathep's reply was not forgotten during the subsequent WAR OF SUNDERING, which eventually saw Sarastro itself SUNDERED FROM THE EMPIRE.

ASISH remains the only Ba'akhi city to actively owe fealty to Sathep following the Sundering; the only city west of DAARKEN GULF to do so.

In c. 3800 RM, following the retreat of the Archpotentate Malichar into obscurity, the Council of Seven attempted to wrest Io form Sarastro; though after a century-and-a-half of sporadic conflict, their hopes were abandoned to the more pressing needs of the fragmenting empire.

SARASTROAN HECKEL: Cur. Currency of SARASTRO, first minted in 3706 RM. See Vol II: Currency and Coinage in Elyden.

SARASTROAN INQUEST: see THE SHAMASHI ENCLAVES OF THE SARASTROAN EMPIRE.

SARASTROAN TREATY, the: Pol. His. A treaty signed on the 23rd of SATAVALEN 3705 RM in which SARASTRO was declared a free state, alongside the vassals of BA'AKH, IO and LIDEA, with MHAROKK and VAALTHA (later known as VAALK) joining it within a few decades.

This marked the end of the WAR OF SUNDERING and over two-years of fighting, restoring an uneasy peace to the INNER SEA REGION. All Sarastroan territories taken by Korachan and its allies during the war were returned, though the vassal states of Vaalk and Lidea remained Korachani, at least at the time of the signing of the treaty until the official end of the war on the 6th of AKORALEN 3722 RM.

SARAT: Set. City in the north of the DEMESNE OF HARAPPA⁽³⁾, known for its production of tea. It is part of the RED ROUTE, and dry tea leave are sold to merchants by the tonne, finding their way across LLACHATUL and SAMMAEA. It is built atop the ruin of an ancient FIFTH AGE YARAOMIC settlement, which was known as SHARAA (Pop. c. 33,200).

SARATANA: Leg. Fictional realm commonly featured in KORACHANI literature; a paradise of pleasures and vices.

SARATHANT: 1. Set. Small fortified city in the north west of RHINOCOLOURA (Pop. c. 15,000).

2. Mil. Str. Major fortress in the north west of RHINOCOLOURA, guarding the SALT ROAD from banditry.

SARAUT: Set. Settlement in the west of KARAKHAS, forking part of both the SHADOW MARCH and the SALT ROAD. It is known for its many hostels and inns where travellers can rest (Pop. c. 7,300).

SARAZZIR: Set. City in the far west of KAZZAR⁽²⁾, known for its metalworking (Pop. c. 48,200).

SARBAC: Gam. A form of lawn billiards common across the INNER SEA REGION, particularly amongst FREEMEN and the nobility who have the time to spend on such pursuits. The game involves hitting weighted balls through hoops with a mallet. It originated in the bastion gardens of ALMAGEST in c. 2000 and spread south from there, enjoying its peak in c. 2750 RM, remaining a popular leisure time sport enjoyed in public gardens to this day. It is named after Sir Viddo Sarbac of UPPER ALMAGEST who was responsible for the spread in popularity of the game across the social elite of ALMAGEST. See Vol II: games and pastimes.

SARCADRIX: Set. Settlement in the wastes of north eastern ALMAGEST, whose people are xenophobic and distrustful of outsiders. Its main industry is iron mining (Pop. c. 6,200).

SARCANTA: For. Forest dominating the entire north east of NAARETH.

SARCARN: Pol. Soc. Sup. Bus. PATRICIAN HOUSE that has for millennia had a critical role in the cloning and fleshwrighting industries in the KORACHANI EMPIRE.

The House emerged in MHAROKK in the 3rd century RM, where it gained influence and wealth from trading goods between KARAKHAS and LIDEA. It settled down and established the trading outpost of EBERUK in c. 500 RM, which saw it grow even wealthier. By c. 710 RM the city had become a centre of ALCHYMICAL research, with the House establishing various ATELIERS and settlements that were devoted to the nascent industries of FLESHWRIGHTING and CLONING. This eventually led to the founding of the IMPERIAL COLLEGE OF FABRICATED INCEPTION there in 732 RM, which went on to become instrumental in the fields. This in turn allowed for the first successful industrial-scale inception of primitive haemonculi in c. 740 RM, which earnt the city many accolades, though it led to the tumultuous period known as the CHEMISTERS' WAR that eventually saw the House (via the College of Fabricated Inception) win exclusive rights to issue licences to ateliers across the empire to manufacture HAEMONCULI for 100-years.

This brought further riches and influence to the house, which saw it prosper and spread throughout the INNER SEA REGION, where it remains as a powerhouse in the cloning industries today, and the name has become synonymous with quality UMBRANS and other VAT-BORN creatures.

The current PATERFAMILIA of the house is KHARILON SARCARN, who has been in control of the house since 3801 RM and who is renowned for his use of ATRAMENTAL drugs to maintain his strength and youthfulness. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

SARCARN MEDICAL ARCHIVES: Edu. Str. Specialist library in the city of EBERUK in MHAROKK, founded by HOUSE SARCARN in 905 RM. It is probably the most complete library in ELYDEN that is of interest to FLESHWRIGHTS and CLONERS, and is accessible to anyone who is a member of the IMPERIAL COLLEGE OF FABRICATE INCEPTION.

Its volumes chronicle the history of cloning and fleshwrighting, which many claim were fields that were pioneered in the city of Eberuk itself. The dissertations and treatises of many famed fleshwrights and cloners are kept here, and copies and transcripts have been made available to College ATELIERS and their members across the INNER SEA REGION.

SARCOADA: Alc. Set. Independent settlement in the c of AZAZEM, in the western reaches of the AAORA Mountains. The settlement is controlled by FLESHWRIGHTS and ALCHEMISTS who specialise in breeding of HAGHOUERS (Pop. c. 2,000).

SARCOBELIZA: For. Grotesque forest in the c south west of KHARKHARADONTIS that is made up of hundreds of ATRAMENTAL FLORETS – tree-like entities that corrupt the land around them and subsist off it. It is the largest concentration of such entities in Elyden and has been studied at length by PENUMBRISTS.

SARCOLINE WASTES: Sup. Geo. Grotesque area of Atramental TAINT in the c south east of the HOGGOTHA ISZ, made up undulating plains of, for want of a better term, skin, with single-stalked plants not unlike gigantic hairs growing from shallow follicle-like hollows. Elsewhere the skin erupts in to sore-mounds that sometimes rupture, leaking foul pus that attract giant insects and other vermin.

The region lies around 100-miles from the border with $\underline{AKANTHRA}$ and $\underline{KHAR\ NADUL}$, and both regions have made attempts to explore the inimical wastelands, with carrying results. To this day, very little is known of the Sarcoline Wastes other than grotesque third-hand accounts from ancient merchants and explorers.

SARCOPHAGE, VISID: Sup. Fau. Vermin common in ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED lands in KHARKHARADONTIS that are named after the mask-like growths on their heads. They take the form of black iridescent beetles, around 8" long, with long pink fleshy abdomens. They are scavengers, feasting on dead bodies, particularly those claimed by ATRAMENTAL AILMENTS. Though they are solitary creatures, they swarm around any source of food until it has been fully consumed, before they go their separate ways.

After eating tainted matter, their bodies enter a state of hibernation as the process the ingested matter, which is expelled as hard spherical pellets. These are of immense value to Atramental industries due to their relative purity and the ease with which the Atramental matter within can be extracted, and as a result visid sarcophages are farmed in large numbers in some manufactories specifically for this. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

SARCOPHAGUS: Sup. Tec. Colloquially, a term for HEART ENGINES that are installed within the defensive architecture of important structures such as military fortifications or government buildings. The sarcophagi fulfil a defensive role, protecting the structure and its contents from supranatural attack from without, including attack from SHAPERS. Often the shapers interred within these engines are ANNULLARII.

SARCOPHILIA: Set. Major city in the east of CISNERIA, and is a hub of the cannibal cults for which the nation is known. In was founded in c. 1800 RM as a short-lived ALMAGESTI colony, and was the centre of a lyceum where native children were taught imperial culture in a failed attempt at indoctrination (Pop. c. 38,000).

SARDAL: Set. Settlement along the main trade-route in IZABAL^(1.). Its main industry is the production of OLIVES and olive oil (Pop. c. 8,000).

SARDAPAR: Set. Small city in the south east of VENTHIR, along the course of the river BOPHURA, about 17-miles from the coast. Its main industry is the cultivation of reeds (Pop. c. 13,400).

SARDAQ: Set. City in the c of CHEIRA (Pop. unknown).

SARDIS: 1. Set. City in the c of LYRIDIA DHAI, along the course of the river BINI, under control of TERARA. The city grew around a large church that that was constructed there by the order of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR in 350 RM.

Today it forms part of THE SHADOW MARCH, before it turns south into NÁRTHEL. By the time of the KORACHANI EMPIRE'S abandonment of the region to the INTERREGES in 1704 RM, the area had gained many imperial customs, and worship of the UNDYING MACHINE remained strong, even to this day (Pop. c. 17,000).

2. Rel. Str. Church in the c of LYRIDIA DHAI founded by the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR in 350 RM. Situated some miles south of the river BINI, it saw itself evolve into a town^(1.) that would reach as far as the banks of the river and faithful of the imperial church go there in pilgrimage to revere the hallowed ground on which the risen Malichar had walked.

SARDIUX: also 'the Red City'. Set. City in the south eastern foothills of the TALENTARI Mountains in the west of SAMMAEA, named after the red and iron-rich rocks of the Talentari Mountains the city is famed for its gigantic stone-hewn temple, which predates the city by millennia (Pop. unknown).

SARDONYX: Pol. Set. Bustling metropolis and capital of RHINOCOLOURA since 3631 RM, and currently the seat of the Rhinocolouran KHANATE (2.). It originated as the small settlement of SARAD RYX, founded by ERINATI settlers in c. 50 RM, though was abandoned in 520 RM following increased KORACHANI influence in the region. Its natural vantage point over surrounding lands and natural springs made it the perfect site for a settlement and it was resettled by c. 690 RM, and in just over 100-years it was made the capital of the northern prefecture of ERINAKH LAUR, after the old capital, TIGAR, was razed by Korachani forces in 817 RM. It would eventually become known as Sardonyx by c. 900 RM.

Though never part of the SALT ROAD, which turned east around 60miles north, Sardonyx nevertheless became an important trade city, and a way point of sorts where caravans would leave the Salt Road to trade goods before turning back north. today, with the Salt Road far larger in size, it is considered a major stop along the route.

By c. 1780 RM Sardonyx had become the religious centre of Erinakh Laur, and had become renowned for its large temples devoted to the KZANADEMI POLYTHEISM, an identity it retains to this day.

In 2965 RM the city-state of HAZOR came under the leadership of the OTHERWORLDER NEANDER, after having already declared its independence from Erinakh Laur in 2483 RM. Following this it would pressure Sardonyx to capitulate, and political intrigue became a way of life in the city, with Hazorin spies vying to sway the city's opinion of Hazor. Unsuccessful, Hazori forces would go on to prey on trade between Sardonyx, ERIVUR and LAKERTHA in 3042 RM, and within a few decades the region was embroiled in all-out war. In 3194 RM Hazor destroyed the city of Erivur, and moved further north towards Sardonyx. This led to the signing of surrender in 3211 RM, and Sardonyx capitulated to Hazor, bringing Hazor in full control of what had once been Erinakh Laur, renaming the region the empire of NEANDARA.

Sardonyx remained a major city throughout the rule of Neander, which lasted until 3462 RM, when he was assassinated, leaving the empire in tatters. Resisters in Sardonyx rallied the people against the descendants of Neander, and led an uprising that would reach the city of Hazor in the winter of 3469 RM, attacking its ruling citadel, further destabilising the capital, which fell the next year. The resistance instated its generals as rulers, who divided the land into four prefectures, of which Sardonyx became capital of one.

In 3604 RM a red-skinned mortal named ILLAREGH appeared in Rhinocoloura, alongside an army and entourage of followers claiming to be the descendent of an otherworlder, sent to unite the struggling prefectures. He began a campaign across Rhinocoloura, capturing city after city. Sardonyx was the last city to fall to the Khan in 3618 RM, where he instated a new government, after which Rhinocoloura became a Khanate, with Sardonyx as its capital (Pop. c. 1,053,000).

SAREASH: leg. Ser. A mythical city said to lie hidden within the dense jungles of the WOLD, in the territories of the MAUNURIN TRIBES. It is said to be home to ancient treasures and magickal artifacts. The ruins of the city are lost and all attempts at locating them have ended in failure.

SAREB: Geo. Boulder fields in the prefecture of TERECHANT^(1.) in the c south of HOLOLACH^(1.). The fields are thought to be the remnants of an ancient glacier.

SARGAR: Set. Small city in the x of the tribe of SALARNA, in the c north of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 5,000).

SARGASSUM SHELF: Geo. Vast flat coastal plains in the north east of the DOMAINS OF SHAUATAS in the south east of BROR (1.), revealed over the past centuries by waning sea levels. Bleached coral forests dominate these otherwise flat plains, and close to the coast the shelf descends steeply in a series of deep valleys in which are located the ruins of MERILL cities. Made from a soapy stone, they reek of the sea and are shunned by most, with rumours that merills still crawl to the cities on nights when the IVORY MOON is gibbous.

SARGATANAS: 1. Rvr. River in the c of JURRAS⁽²⁾ flowing for 125-miles from sources in the north west of the SYNHODOS Mountains before meeting its parent, the river KARIBAT.

 Also 'the Death Valley'. Geo. Valley leading to the river KARIBAT tainted by the ATRAMENTA. The top of the valley is marked by the city of the same name.

3. Set. City in JURRAS^(2.). Local myth claims the city is built over the tomb of an ancient SCION (Pop. c. 50,000).

SARIASHUU: Geo. Dry plains and scrub forest in the c south of PORPHYR.
SARIS: Lak. Endorheic lake in the south east of KHARKHARADONTIS, fed by many rivers flowing from highlands all around it, particularly the IATULKAN and the VRISIAS Mountains. Its size varies wildly based on the season, with water from the rivers SIK and RORA amongst many others feeding it following snowmelt and heavy rains. It was fully documented by a NOAVATURI expedition in 1182 RM.

SARGOTH: 1. also 'the Black Plains'. Geo. Plains in the north of KARAKHAS covered in past lava flows from previous eruptions of MT OROROTH, the most recent of which was in c. 2000 RM. Dense grasslands have appeared

- where the flow has slowly eroded into fertile soil over time, where it now sustains high grasses and small trees.
- 2. Rvr. River in the north of the above region, in northern KARAKHAS, flowing for 360-miles from the GIBBORAH Mountains before emptying in the SEA OF DEKANA.
- 3. Set. KARAKHASID city in the south of the above plains, that is home to many marauders that prey upon trade in the c of the nation, as well as pilgrims travelling THE SHADOW MARCH in the region (Pop. unknown).
- SARGOTHI: Pol. Soc. One of three marauder tribes in KARAKHAS, dominating the plains of SARGOTH.
- SARIBIA: Set. Coastal settlement in the east of CANNOS (Pop. c. 4,500).
- SARKID: Geo. Rocky region in the c of GNOTH. It is rough, dusty and contains little variety of life.
- SARMAUL: AHRISHENI prophet who spread word of the FOUR WINDS to SAUA, where the religion continues to be revered by the GATEKEEPERS.
- SARMIS: 1. Sea. Long narrow bay in the north of the PARTHISAN colony of ABDAKROS^(1.) on the island of IRUGNA^(1.).
- 2. Set. Coastal settlement in the far north of the PARTHISAN colony of ABDAKROS^(1,) on the island of IRUGNA^(1,) (Pop. c. 4,700).
- SARNAS: Set. Mossy tiered city in the c south of PORPHYR built into the cliffs overlooking lake RESKOKH (Pop. c. 80,000).
- SAROD: Geo. Small mountain in the west of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER, acting as a border between the tribes of DRAKAINA and TATRAS.
- SAROM, TREE OF: Flo. Tree in the north east of FATH that was identified in c. 1800 RM by the prophet Haurori as a holy conduit through which the worker gods could interact with the MATERIAL PLANE. The tree became an object of massed veneration and pilgrimage to the people of surrounding lands. Within a few centuries the mortal activity surrounding the tree led to its decline, and in 2120 RM the TEMPLE OF THE TREE was constructed around it, to protect it, though the tree's condition only worsened and by c. 2300 RM it died, leading to a wane of the surrounding religion.

Today all that remains of the tree is a pale stump, and a handful of people still revere it, and the temple remains as the only bastion of their faith in Fath.

- SAROSS, LIBRARY OF: Edu. Str. Library in the south of PACHOMIA, LIDEA. It is a refuge to scholars and erudites.
- SARRA: Set. Settlement in the north west of LIDEA, along the cliffs of KANDAKE. Sarra is known for its daredevil birdmen, who brave the cliffs for exotic bird eggs that they sell to larger cities (Pop. c. 4,200).
- SARRASTER: Geo. Mountain in the c west of THE SURRACH, in the north west of SAMMAEA.
- SARRIM: Set. Coastal settlement in western TARTAK. Its primary industry is fishing (Pop. c. 6,300).
- SARRIT: Set. Coastal stilt-settlement in the south west of NAARETH, overlooking the ROILING SEA (Pop. c. 6,000).
- SARPRA: Set. Fortified coastal city in the north west of OPHAR, and home to half of its fleet (Pop. c. 20,000).
- SARRAHAL: Geo. Warm humid plains in the north east of VÂRR.
- SARUKK, THE SALLOW PIT: Int. Sup. Geo. Small yet immeasurably deep vertical pit in the east of ALAM BETHYL, in the c hills of the BAND⁽²⁾ Mountains. The pit appears as a sinkhole, its origins unknown, and the rocks around its mouth are a sickly sand-colour, and prone to collapse.

A fetid stench emanates from it, and at times the air blows out of it, bringing with it stale dry air. Some have postulated that it may lead to the PRISON CARCERI, though there is little evidence for this. Attempts have been made to descend the pit, but it opens into a large hollow 100-ft. down, in which no measurements can be made.

- SARYTOS: Com. Set. Trade city in the MATERAN TERRITORIES in the east of LYRIDIA. It forms a part of the western-most reaches of the GREAT ROAD is one of few cities in Lyridia to trade with the east, across the pass of MONRA^(1,) (Pop. unknown).
- SASACZHOT: 1. Arc. Canal in the nation of OKKHAM, constructed between 3627 3642 RM, linking the SEA OF KHURSA with the SEA OF

- LETHEA, speeding up sea travel and commerce in the area. The canal is 15-miles long and maintained by the eponymous city.
- 2. Set. Large city in the c-south east of OKKHAM, around midway along the Okkhami peninsula. Between 3627 3642 RM a large canal was cut across the peninsula linking the SEA OF KHURSA with the SEA OF LETHEA, and the city became a hub of naval transport and trade. Millennia ago, the site where the city later appeared was home to a natural channel the peninsula was smaller than today due to the higher water level, and the eastern-most portion (today dominated by the waters of the LITASCH AESAMAY) was a large island known as KURTAE that was slowly linked to the mainland between 400 1200 RM, following the rising ELYDEN'S sea levels (Pop. c. 370,000).
- SASAQ: Set. Settlement in the c of CHEIRA, along the course of the river YAGNOTH PHATHAN. It is known for its reed cultivation, which is used in the production of various reed-items (Pop. c. 8,000).
- SASASHAH: Set. City in the north of the JAHADAT STATES, in the east of SAMMAEA, and capital of one of the twelve States (Pop. c. 43,000).
- SASHAR: Set. Settlement in the north of the MULL CITY-STATES (Pop. c. 8,200).
- SASHAT: Rvr. River in the south of AHKA, flowing north east for 375-miles from various sources, including the OTHOR, SOTTHEA and ETRON Mountains, before emptying into the STRAIT OF SKAROS.
- SASHELL: 1. Geo. Coastal region in the north of the historic nation of VESPER, along the eastern shore of the BAY OF BATHIN.
- 2. Dem. 'Sashellan'. His. Ntn. Small independent region within historic VESPER (now the north of the VESPERTINE LEAGUE). It was populated by the so-called BERSERKER-MAGES, who were ostracised from VESPER for their smoking of the herb MULLEN, which acted as a painkiller and aggressant. These outcasts gravitated towards one another and eventually settled in the region of Sashell, where they established various small settlements by c. 1200 RM. They developed a system of ritual combat in which challengers would consume a large amount of mullen prior to fighting to the death. This led to a culture where armies were unknown, in which so-called BLOOD CHAMPIONS enjoyed great privileges, but who lived short, dangerous lives.

This custom slowly waned as the FIRMAMENTAL properties of the herb were discovered, allowing the culture to establish a Firmamental tradition – somewhat of an oddity given its vicinity to the NULLAMBIT. Mullen granted those who took in in large-enough quantities over an extended period of time great bursts of Firmamental energies. Extremely dangerous and unpredictable, this suited their culture well, and their famed blood champions evolved into SHAPERS who were capable of unleashing unpredictable powers in battle. These replaced the blood champions, and became known as BERSERKER-MAGES.

The berserker-mages became a touchstone, shaping the culture of Sashell for years to come, eventually becoming leaders of the disparate settlements and ruling Sashell as a whole through an overcouncil.

If the ancestors of Sashell had been shunned by the people of Vesper before, then this turned them into pariahs. Yet they became immeasurably useful in fighting the invading KNIGHTS OF ST. MALICHAR, who were finally defeated in 1441 RM after 7-years of fighting, largely due to the sacrifice of the berserker-mages, effectively ending the tradition.

The Sashellan people would later be absorbed by the Vesper expansion in c. 2400 RM, and the berserker-mages were drafted into its armies, where they came to be used as terror troops, wreaking havoc amongst enemy forces. See Vol III: Extinct States.

- SASHHOU: Set. Settlement in the c south of SAUA. Its main industry is the cultivation of walnuts, many of which are sold to merchants passing through along the GREAT ROAD trade route (Pop. c. 8,000).
- SASHIAH: Set. Fortified settlement in the south west of ZHARIAH⁽²⁾, along the course of the river VENNON, in the region of KUIASH. Its main industry is iron mining (Pop. c. 6,000).
- SASSAB: Set. City and harbour in the north east of VENTHIR. It forms a part of the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 50,000).
- SASSANUS ACHALLA: (B. 3199 D. 3323 RM) Mil. Governor-general of Parthis, whose body was cloned in c. 3390 RM, becoming the basis of an elite force of soldiers – known as the $\underline{PARTHISAN\ BROTHERHOOD}$ who continue his legacy.

Achalla was a paragon of the Parthisan ideal – a gentleman, a scholar, and a decorated soldier and general, who saw combat in JURRAS^(2,), for which he was awarded the CROSS OF GALLANTRY. He was a member of various orders and sodalities, and was granted the position of governorgeneral of VULKA in 3301 RM following his retirement from the military, where he spent his final years. He well-respected across Parthis and the nation mourned following his death.

Many were originally against the call from the imperial council to use him as a basis for a clone army, including his surviving family, but the vote succeeded and in c. 3390 RM the first group of clones born from his blood were incepted, beginning a tradition that continues today, and which is now highly celebrated.

- SASSARAH: 1. Lak. Lake in the south east of BASSORAH^(2.), known for a small island in its centre on which the monastery of SENSASH ALA is situated.
 - 2. Rvr. River in the c south of BASSORAH⁽²⁾ flowing for 415-miles from the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED hills of the FARRESH Mountains before meeting with its parent, the river GORSAN.
 - 3. Set. City in the c of BASSORAH^(2.) (Pop. c. 34,000).
- SASZAB: Mil. Pol. Eth. Rnk. A martial caste that is employed across the REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO to enforce the empire's will on both new and unruly territories. They are descended from ancient MULCIBIAN^(1.) people who had been subjugated by the armies of SAOSTANA and whose descendants remailed loyal to them, and later SATHEP THE RISEN.

Today, they are considered by most to be little more than glorified bullies and pugilists who are given a legal outlet to subjugate others. They are ruthless and are famed within the Overcouncil of Sarastro for their effectiveness at quelling unrest. Despite this, are as likely to be a cause of unrest as the ones they oppose, if they are not kept occupied with official work.

SATACHAN: Set. Independent colony established by the CHURCHOFTHE UNDYING MACHINE in what is now OTINTH in 777 RM, acting on a prophecy from the SCRIPTURE OF SHADOW that was interpreted to mean the lifeblood of RACHANAEL would be found there. The city of Satachan was firmly established on the coast by c. 800 RM and its templars attacked surrounding pastoral communities en masse, taking its people back to Satachan to be indoctrinated into the Church of the Undying Machine.

Today the city forms part of Otinth, though it is no longer coastal, following the slow retreat of the ABARULLIA. It is now located along the edge of an expansive wetland region, where it is a major producer of food (Pop. c. 16,000).

- SATAHIR: 1. Set. Small fortified city in the north east of the AMMASHI FREE-ISLES, located on the mainland of Ammesh (Pop. c. 14,000).
 - 2. Set. Fortified coastal city in the far south east of HABOT, overlooking the BAY OF ELLSALEN. It forms a part of the NACRE ROAD, and is a major trade centre, forming a hub of commerce between Habot and the south of PHYRR (Pop. c. 47,600).
- SASTAKAUR: Geo. Large massif and part of the GREAT SAMMAEAN TRIAD. The massif is located between and south of the SHAKHURAN and ACHARKHARAN mountain in central SAMMAEA.
- SAT AHI: His. Ntn. Extinct nation in the south west of SAMMAEA, centred around what is now the region of ENITH. The nation crumbled in c. 2200 RM. See Vol III: Extinct States.
- SATALA: Rui. Abandoned city, once a prosperous MANUFACTORY city in eastern KORACHAN, boasting a population of 500,000 at its peak in c. 2250 RM. It's industries blighted the waters of the river BOSTA. ultimately leading to its downfall. By c. 2800 RM it had been largely abandoned, chimneys that never stopped belching smoke for centuries falling silent.
- SATALAI: Set. Small city in the c south east of Taan An. It is positioned at a junction along the AQUEDUCT OF CREPHITHISS and covers a series of piers (columns) on which the aqueduct is supported (Pop. c. 13,000).
- SATALARA: Set. Small city in the south west of HABOT, along the course of the river GITTARANDI (Pop. c. 15,000).

- SATALMA: Set. Major coastal city in in the east of the island of CYNAKRIA, off the south eastern coast of AMMESH. It is the largest city on the island and is home to most of its culture and its governing body (Pop. c. 105,000).
- SATALMAS: Set. City in the south east of KEPHUAAN, close to the outer reaches of the LARALAL wetlands (Pop. c. 44,300).
- SATAMMA: 1. Geo. Mountain pass in the c of AMMESH, cutting across the URARAGHI Mountains. The pass is controlled by the city of the same name⁽²⁾.
- 2. Ser. City in the c of AMMESH. It was once home to the ruling council of the AMMASHI COALITION, which collapsed in 3759 RM, seeing the region, once united under a single council representing its disparate region, fragment into singular states and cities.

It waned in power and influence after this, though remains a central city to this day, forming a part of the NACRE ROAD, offering lodging and warehouses to travelling merchants (Pop. c. 168,000).

- SATAQ: Geo. Mountain-range in the c south of SAMMAEA, acting as a border between HOGGOTHA ISZ and the north of MAENMIST. The range is noted for the hand-hewn cave-system commonly known as THE CONGRUENCE that exists beneath it.
- SATAR: Pol. Soc. Tribe in the far north of MULCIBER, in the GROWING MOUNTAINS, in the north east of SAMMAEA. It is just south of the tribe of AUEREN, and is known for its two large basins, which dominate its geography, and the many duststone formations that mark its northern border with Aueren.
- SATARIEL: Dem. 'Satarian'. Ntn. A nation in the north west of MENISCEA, east of the SEA OF IALCUS. Its nine territories are each ruled by SHAPERS, who together form a council that oversees the leadership of the nation, from the city of KLIPHA. The north east of the nation is desecrated by the ancient fossilised remains of a colossal CHTHONITHON, its body now part of the landscape, forming the hills of VULFEGHUNDIS that are feared by SHAPERS and ONEIROMANCERS. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.
- SATARNICA: Rui. Arc. Ancient gates in the c of the VESPERTINE LEAGUE in the north of SAMMAEA, in the salt-wastes of BATHIN. Little is known of the gates save for what casual exploration of the region surrounding them has gleaned they are gigantic, their time-warped gates rusted solid, marring the bass carvings that once covered them. They predate the disappearance of the Bay of Bathin and likely date back to the middle FOURTH AGE.

The gate is half-buried in the salt-deserts of the region, and the only ruins visible in a hundred-mile radius are the eroded remains of the once-coastal walls that once surrounding the gate, though no evidence exists as to what the gate once guarded.

Much of Satarnica's great marble wall has been plundered over the centuries, the blocks used in construction in settlements in the region with many blocks being taken for use in construction of nearby cities. Most notable of such settlements is the city of AGARIA.

- $\underline{SATARR}{:}\ 1.\ \textit{Lake}\ in\ the\ c\ of\ \underline{V\^{A}RR}.$
- 2. Set. Major fortified city in the c of VÂRR, near the western shore of the above lake^(L) and home of the PARISH OF ATRAMENTAL DEFENCE. It has been the seat of the REGENT-KINGS' power and capital of Vârr since 3985 RM (Pop. c. 189,000).
- SATATLEG: Geo. Ridge in the c of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER, forming a border between the tribes of ATEVEGOS and JACITTA.
- SATAVALEN: Cal. In the KORACHANI CALENDAR, the tenth month of twelve, comprising 30-days. It is named after the ancient astronomer SATAVI, who was responsible for the ancient KORACHANI lunar-based calendar. It is considered the first of three months of autumn. See Vol II: Months and Lunar Cycle in Elyden.
- SATAVI: Ast. Ancient astronomer, who was responsible for the ancient KORACHANI lunar-based calendar. The month of SATAVALEN is named after them.
- SATELMA: 1. Set. Coastal settlement in the south of KEPHUAAN, overlooking the BAY OF LEPHAINA. Its main industry is fishing (Pop. c. 8,500).
 - 2. Set. Small city in the c of TAAN AN (Pop. c. 18,000).

SATEM ITRUSH: Sea. Lagoon off the south western coast of the AMMASHI^(1.) peninsula, dividing the AMMASHI FREE-ISLES in the west from AMMESH in the east.

SATEMMA: Ind. Set. Major city in the c south west of HABOT, along the course of the river MEDDERANDI. It is an industrial centre, and is known for its vast manufactories that straddle the great river (Pop. c. 180,000).

SATH: Set. City in the south east of SHAZGIN that covers 5-miles of the course of the river ATTIL. It is surrounded by wastelands and mountainous terrain and exists solely due to the presence of the river (Pop. c. 72,000).

SATHA: Set. City in the south of ALMAGEST, home to the CATHEDRAL OF HATALA. The city forms part of THE SHADOW MARCH and has largely increased in size to the patronage of pilgrims and other faithful. It was once part of SKAROS, though was assimilated by Almagest in c. 3600 RM (Pop. c. 30.400).

SATHAII: 1. Also 'the Hermit Kingdom'. Dem. 'Sathaiian'. Ntn. Isolationist nation in the far north west of SAMMAEA, nestled between the west of the VESPERTINE LEAGUE and the north of the CITIZENRY OF THALI, overlooking the SEA OF ERTHYDEA. Very little is known of it by outsiders due its reclusive foreign policies. To most outsiders who are even aware of its existence, it is known simply as a land of ATRAMENTAL CORRUPTION populated by DEGENERATES.

In truth the regions' history is tragic and has been purposely hidden from the world-at-large by the MINASTERIA OF NEGATIONISM. It became a target of EXOCRINES and missionaries of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE in c. 3620 RM, though after decades of dogged resistance, it eventually gave up, though not before discovering that the region was rich in untapped UMBRA.

VAALK saw the potential in this and in 3668 RM (when it was still a part of the KORACHANI EMPIRE) it attempted to subvert the Sathaiian monarchy with promises of Korachani titles and riches in return for rights to mine its umbra reserves. These attempts were all rebuked, forcing the Vaalkan fleet to initiate a blockade 3671 RM that cut off Sathaii from the rest of the world, wreaking havoc with its economy and causing rampant starvation. Vaalk invaded two years later, expecting a rapid advance to its strategic regions. Instead, its armies encountered a nation that was heavily fortified, its and its people drafted into a competent and army. The Vaalkan forces became bogged down in pyrrhic battles against a fanatical defence that gave no quarter.

Desperate, the Vaalkan forces resorted to using PENUMBRISTS and prototype ATRAMENTAL BOMBS to destroy its military assets, leading to widespread devastation and Atramental taint spreading across the land. This scorched earth campaign continued until 3679 RM, by which time the nation had been completely devastated, with any value it might once have had being lost. Korachan abandoned the attack, leaving Sathaii ravaged, its peoples' morale shattered. The MINASTERIA OF NEGATIONISM spent decades not only erasing records of the failed war but also of painting Sathaiians as a wicked misanthropic people.

Very little is known of the politics, economy and culture that have emerged in the centuries since this war, and most what is known is likely tainted by Korachani propaganda. What we can trust is that the nation remains heavily fortified, and that despite its peoples' descent into degeneracy, there remains a modicum of civilisation and a government at its centre, tenebrous as it may be.

The travelogue titled 'MY SOIOURN IN THE HERMIT KINGDOM' was published in the CITY OF ALMAGEST in 3973 RM, detailing the travels of the polymath IZAGUERRE, from which most of our anecdotal knowledge of the nation comes. If the wirings can be believed, Izaguerre spent nine years there between 3893 and 3912 RM as a guest of the royal family, during which time she was shown various aspects of Sathaiian life, though she is quick to point out that even she doubts the verity of what was shown to her. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

2. also 'the Spire-City'. Set. Expansive city built around a mesa in the south west of the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT in the north west of SAMMAEA. It has districts and shanties that expand from the base of the rock-formation, with structures built atop the mesa being either religious, municipal or ancient, often carved into the bedrock itself with vast catacombs stretching beneath the city. The city shares a name with a nation^(1,) to the west, and it is thought that the two were once culturally linked before the rise of Sepahaunat in 3259 RM (Pop. c. 31,000).

SATHAN: Pol. Duchy of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of SYRTIS^(1.). The duchy is renowned for its horse archers (commonly scouts).

SATHANAEL: x. Myt. His. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, a SCION of the DEMIURGE RACHANAEL. * big sorcerer but had to be stopped. quartered and beheaded, each part now encased in stone, one in Carceri, another in trench, guarded by (another new son of shibboleth, a BIG sea monster). See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

SATHAR: Set. City in the west of SHOTHA, serving as a link between Shotha and ALMAGEST (Pop. c. 15,500).

SATHEP THE RISEN: (B. unknown) Also 'Lichking'. Pol. Ruler of THE REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO and powerful ATRAMENTIST.

His origins are unknown, and if he remembers anything of his early life, he has made no effort to reveal it to anyone. He originally rose to power over five millennia ago in c. -1019 RM amongst the SHAOS KHER people in the DELOMIG region, at a time of great cultural change amid the appearance of a noble caste known as SAOSTANAN DYNASTIES. Though not of noble blood, he gained a large following amongst the Dynasties and became a spiritual advisor to them and is now remembered as the cornerstone of the foundation of SAOSTANA.

He disappeared in c. -1000 RM on a spiritual quest into the SHAMAL desert in ANUBIA to learn about ancient HESYCHASTIC mystic teachings. The dynasties prospered in his absence for centuries but were eventually ousted by merchant kings known as the SAOSHYANTS in -172 RM, who remained in control at the time of Sathep's unexpected return in 176 RM as a changed being. His body desiccated, his cranium graced by a large hole that had been trepanned in a forbidden Hesychastic ritual, he had released his SPIRIT (1.) form his vessel, bringing him closer to divinity and spiritual enlightenment.

He became a powerful figure but was unable to oust the Saoshyants, who had become economically and culturally too powerful. He bided his time and amassed a small but unflinchingly loyal following, manipulating events from the shadows. Having transcended death, he could afford to wair

In 339 RM, he travelled into the wilderness with a handful of allies, meeting the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR. The two conversed alone under the stars for a night, and when they returned, they attacked the city of ARGEA, which, alongside the rest of Sarastro, was under siege by Korachan. With Malichar's mercenaries they took Argea, ending in one day what the empire had failed to do for over a century. Malichar, shrewd as ever, knew where the loyalties of the Sarastroan people lay and allowed Sathep to rule autonomously.

Sathep ruled as regent, turning Sarastro into one of the wealthiest and powerful regions of the EMPIRE. It is now thought that he fostered the rise of various cults and schools of thought across Sarastro that questioned the divinity of the Archpotentate Malichar, which eventually culminated in the CONCLAVE OF KHADON that ratified a schism in the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, eventually leading to the WAR OF SUNDERING and the SUNDERING of 3705 RM, which left Sarastro independent and in control of roughly half of the old Korachani territories. He went on to unite the myriad different religious sects that had led to the religious schism into a unified Reformed Church OF Sarastro in 3821 RM, of which he became figurehead and chief deity, ruling through his OVERCOUNCIL.

He is an accomplished SHAPER, though little details are known of his abilities, and it is believed that he has hidden most of his abilities from public. He is colloquially referred to as the LICHKING on account of his appearance, a name he does little to discourage.

SATHEP TRIUMPHANT: Arc. Large statue of KING SATHEP erected outside the main gate into ARGEA in SARASTRO in 3722 RM in honour of the newfound independence of Sarastro following the SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE in 3705 RM. It is around 300-ft. high and made of dark granite, with clothing made of bronze that has since turned green. The continued growth of the city has seen the statue surrounded by buildings, but it towers above most buildings in the city.

SATHEPRA: Set. City in the c of SARASTRO, originally named Malichara in honour of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR who in 339 returned from his ITINERARY and led the siege of KNOSSOR. It was renamed Sathepra in 3706 RM, following the SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE.

The city has been an industrial centre for many centuries and it is also a revered holy site, forming part of THE SHADOW MARCH, and is known for its neophyte monasteries and Malichari cults. It also forms part of the Red Route and the merchants that travel here sell religious trinkets aimed at separating PETITIONERS OF THE MACHINE from their money (Pop. c. 184,000).

SATHERI: 1. Geo. Peninsula off the north western coast of PELASGOS in the SEA OF CYPRIA^(1.).

2. Rui. Once a major city in the north west of PELASGOS, was abandoned after the diminishing of the SEA OF CYPRIA^(1.).

SATHIAY: Set. Major landmark city in the c of the PHILIAN peninsula in southern HANNAH. It is built in, on and around a massive 1200-ft. tall granite spire along the rolling plains just east of the KHAMEAH Mountains. The spire is older than existing records and was already hollowed out when the people of Hannah found it. Its origins can probably be traced back to the THIRD AGE, though little is known about it.

The highest levels of the spire city are home to many of Hannah's most prestigious families, and it is amongst the wealthiest cities in the nation outside the capital. Most nobles' estates are located within the spire itself, which houses more opulent residences the farther up one goes — with some even boasting penthouse hanging gardens and waterfalls, amongst other opulent touches.

Outside the spire, new buildings have appeared at the base as the city's population outgrew the spire itself. Farther out from the new districts are the farms and grazing lands that provide food, herbs and spices to the city's population. The spire is beginning to show its age and despite engineers' best efforts to restore it, it is rapidly deteriorating, with a major collapse of the south east base reported in 4005 RM, leading to thousands of deaths and many more displaced. Even the best Hannahan engineers have been unable to stop the erosion, and it is unknown how long the city has until the spire crumbles down into the Philian Peninsula (Pop. c. 62,000).

SATHOG: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the south east of CHTHYRID, guarding the DVERGAI lands from attack from the south.

SATÍ: His. Pol. Geo. One of five distinct political and cultural regions to emerge from the collapse of the THERASHIAN EMPIRE in 902 RM. The western-most of these territories, Satí would develop into a stable territory that would go on to become the ancestral state to the presentday nation of SATHAII.

SATIAN: Set. Settlement on the island of DEGISAAR in the KORACHANI colony of MELHUMBRA. It is a major producer of cork in the empire, and its plantations are mostly worked by SAMMAEAN slaves (Pop. c. 7,200).

SATINA: Pol. Soc. Ind. Bus. PATRICIAN HOUSE that is renowned across the INNER SEA for its large diamond mines. The house owns most major jewellers in major cities and provinces around the Inner Sea and beyond, and through them is able to manipulate the supply, keeping it lower than demand to artificially inflate prices. This virtual monopoly has made it one of the wealthiest Patrician Houses in ELYDEN, and individual members are amongst the most influential and feared patricians around the Inner Sea and beyond.

The house is expansive and has influence in the south east and north of SAMMAEA, as well as around the Inner Sea, where its individuals are known to be amongst the richest and most decadent of nobles. It has major mines in ALMAGEST, KARAKHAS, KHARKHARADONTIS, KHOLAMOR, and KREM. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

SATIUM: Set City in the north of VENTHIR, along the course of the river GULAM. It was once the centre of a very productive industrial centre under KORACHANI rule (when the region was part of NÁRTHEL), though the collapse of the tin and copper industries in the region saw surrounding settlements falter and die, with many people moving to Satium, which remained the only sizable city in the area (Pop. c. 37,000).

SATIUM LINES: Rui. Mil. Str. Military fortifications in the north of present-day VENTHIR, running for over 200-miles. They were constructed by KORACHANI military engineers in c. 3720 RM in what was then NÁRTHEL, following the SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE, to guard against the threat of SARASTROAN attack, though never saw much use. Since then, the region was appropriated by Venthir, before Nárthel itself became its vassal. Most of the lines are now ruined though a few fortresses are maintained and manned to this day.

SATLIS: See. Small city in the prefecture of HOMREA is the c south of HOLOLACH^(1.) (Pop. c. 11,500).

SATNA: 1. Geo. Region in the south east of WESTERN SAMMAEA, along the contested border between EPHATTA and SYNCHTHONITHA. It is characterised by a large rocky expanses, valleys and mesas, between which are savannahs.

2. Ntn. Lawless war-torn region occupying the no-mans-land between the nations of EPHATTA and SYNCHTHONITHA, in the south east of SOUTHERN SAMMAEA. It is the remnant of a larger FIFTH AGE nation that was decimated by a long war between the aforementioned nations.

Today it has become a despicable region where MORTAL life has no value and people struggle to even survive, and which has practically no culture to speak of. Though the war that saw Satna destroyed ended over 100 years ago, the region is in no state to recover, with no remaining infrastructure and all territories of value lost to either Ephatta or Synchthonitha. What remains is a lawless place ruled by warring warlords who vie for the leftovers of their ancestral home. There is no government outside of what tyrannies exist within their respective territories, and people are drafted as needed to fight border conflicts. People live in shanties and the ruins of old cities and there is little order, with survival of the fittest – or most ruthless and cunning, as the case may be – being the rule of the day. Most people tried to flee in the decades following the end of the war, with most being killed as they entered neighbouring nations' territories or risking the voyage across the SEA OF ASDU into ADHERA.

SATOAZ: Set. Settlement in the north east of KHITAI. Its main industry is the quarrying of shale (Pop. c. 4,000).

SATORIAEA: Set. Settlement in the east of Porphyr (Pop. c. 5,700).

SATRA: Set. Port settlement in the c north of VAALK, overlooking the SEA
OF BASSANDER. The settlement appeared in c. 3500 RM following the silting up nearby ASSORA'S harbours and remains in use today, linking the city to the sea (Pop. c. 27,000).

 $\underline{SATTRUH} : \mathit{Set.}$ Settlement in the c of $\underline{EZASUH}^{(2.)}$ (Pop. 4,000).

SATRANU: Set. Coastal settlement in the south west of GYZHA. Its main industry is fishing, and its people practice an ancient form of stilt fishing – with fishermen standing on poles in shallow waters, waiting for hours at a time to fill their quota (Pop. c. 5,000).

SATRI: Mil. Str. northern-most of two fortresses in the c of TARTAK, guarding the MAESAN ridge and the AIOS KATH pipeline that runs across it.

SATRUR: 1. Geo. Headland in the south east of SUOR, separated from the mainland by the BAY OF ISILAT.

 Geo. Mountain running along the southern coast of the above headland⁽¹⁾ in the south east of SUOR.

SATRYAN: Rvr. Major river in the south east of CYHLAGHARR, flowing for 640-miles from multiple sources in the GRCAUTHAIRM, and GRCAUTH massifs, and the HURSORYAN Mountains before emptying into the GULF OF OPHAR^(1,).

SATTAR: Lak. Lake in the west of AZAZEM, fed by the rivers UGONEM and EPHANOSH.

SATTAR ISHA: His. Ntn. Ancient early FIFTH AGE empire in the south west of the PORPHYRI PENINSULA, in what is now the south western-most part of SABAISA. Its capital was the city of BODARAGH, which was founded in c. 850 RM by exiled shapers from ZOLOK who would go on to become the ruling caste known as ATTESTORS. The Attestors encountered techno-barbarians living in the south western-most tip of the Porphyri peninsula that had been terrorising the people of PHARTH, and over many years tamed them, becoming the citizens of Sattar Isha.

The empire crumbled between 1300 – 1400 RM following the chaos caused by the UPHEAVAL OF LETHEA, and the subsequent drying of the river ANDRAS. This, coupled with the mane of its capital and the inertia of the Attestors, who concerned themselves with the distant future at the expense of the present, led to its downfall. Following years of chaos, the many small states that followed in its wake would go on to form the nation of Sabaisa. See Vol III: Extinct States.

SATTAR ISHAN: His. Lan. Now-extinct language that was spoken by the state of SATTAR ISHA, in the PORPHYRI PENINSULA. It would eventually give rise to SABAISAN. See Vol II: Languages.

SATTAS: Mil. Str. Fortress in the far south west of ALMAGEST, in its territories east of the BLACK MOUNTAINS.

SATTION: Com. Set. Fortified city in the south of OPHAR, forming part of the trade-route known as the PARTHISAN ROAD. It has grown steadily since its trade alliance with Parthis in c. 3960 RM and now caters to the many merchants that travel the route (Pop. c. 38,000).

SATTUN: Set. Small city in the prefecture of EROSENEA^(1.) in the north of HOLOLACH^(1.). The is classical, surrounding a hilltop castle and is the centre of a large agricultural centre, providing food to the cities of Erosenea^(2.) and ALACHRIS (Pop. c. 17,500).

SATURRU: Set. Settlement in the c south of N'RAKH. It is known as a cultivator of the AGAVES, which the AANTHA subsist on (Pop. c. 4,500).

SATYA: Oth. Type of HALFBLOOD common in the KORACHANI EMPIRE, known for its benevolence and working towards truth and honesty, regardless of what form they may take. They are the male form of NYM. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

SATYRION: (D. 1533) Mus. SKAROSIAN composer and music theorist, probably most famed for his baroque madrigal, THE MARCH OF A MILLION PILGRIMS. It was one of the first famous madrigals in the INNER SEA REGION, largely due to its subject matter – the SHADOW MARCH.

SAUA: Dem. 'Sauan'. Ntn. Located in CENTRAL LLACHATUL, Saua is a populous and idyllic land whose people are characterised by a dichotomous nature where conflict and spirituality are equally embraced. This is possibly a result of its geographical identity, for the nation, much like AHRISHEN and the HARÉSHK, both of which are neighbours, lies at a crossroads between disparate cultures, all of which have long and convoluted histories.

Founded in 3108 RM by General HU following decades of strife within the FIVE THRONES of SA'WEH. His death in 3147 RM left the region contested between three generals, including his son Huata, though peace was later restored. Saua is now divided into FIVE-AND-SIXTY FEUDAL STATES, over which rules a DIADON. Each feudal lord is beholden to the Diadon, though is granted a degree of autonomy over their rule.

Prior to the unification of Sa'weh under the banner of Saua, the five Thrones were ruled by a symbolic otherworlder queen, who fell into a dormant state in 3093 RM. Since known as the SLEEPING QUEEN, she maintains a loyal following, and there are tensions between then and the court of the Diadon, which lives in fear of her awakening.

It is a kingdom grounded in the past – animism and spirituality are important cultural aspects to its people, who respect nature spirits as well as the spirits of their dead, with whom they are known to commune frequently. FIRMAMENTAL SHAPERS are relatively common there as a result, despite the nation lying along the course of the NULLAMBIT.

Despite its traditionalism, it has readily embraced industrialisation, rapidly becoming one of the most advanced of the so-called free nations of the east, though its people are careful to not allow their industries to sully the natural world – pristine forests, beautiful mountains and crystalclear rivers alike still dominate the Sauan landscape, and many are sacred to its varied religions and philosophies.

Its culture is strictly hierarchal, with individuals of its three upper castes allowed to seek spiritual enlightenment after raising a family. Incestuous marriages are also not uncommon amongst its ruling houses

To many outsiders, including KORACHANI scholars, it is seen as a dichotomous land – on the one hand it clings to animism and ancient pagan beliefs even as it advances into the modern post-industrial world bloated large cities and manufactories. The coming decades will serve as a decider as to the direction in which Saua enters the fifth millennium. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

SAUL: 1. Geo. Island off the coast of TETHYSIA.

Set. City-state and main conurbation on the eponymous island^(1.) off the coast of Tethysia. Established as a trading colony in c. 1700, the settlement grew; enjoying resources that mainland Tethysia did not have access to.

In 2163 RM the city, by then a major naval power in the north of the MYMEREAN OCEAN, declared its independence from Tethysia. A long series of naval battles and island-sieges ensued, until 2203 RM, where Tethysia lost a major engagement, leaving Saul independent. Saul remained so until c. 3500 RM, by which-point local politics had changed significantly. The THAUMATURGE-KINGS of Saul had grown increasingly close with mainland Tethysia, and in 3532 RM the two became one entity once again; with the Thaumaturge-kings acting as regents of the island-colony (Pop. c. 55,000).

- 3. Pol. Duchy in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of PALUS. The now ruined city of Saul was named after the duchy.
- 4. Rui. Ruined capital of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of PALUS.

SAULLA: Set. Classical settlement in the south east of AZAZEM with origins in c. 320 RM as two separate settlements on adjacent hills divided by a steep gorge. A bridge was originally built linking them in c. 550 RM and this was later expanded and eventually replaced in 1623 RM with the bulky vaulted stone bridge that remains to this day.

Known as the Domnius, the bridge itself is famed for its buildings – both along its span as well as within its arches and supports. Though the settlements were united as one in 1354 RM passage across the Domnius is tolled, which has caused many people to use the expansive catacomb system beneath the city to traverse the ravine.

The settlement was once home to a major agricultural PATRICIAN HOUSE which fell into ruin in c. 3140 RM. Following this Saulla waned in influence and power, though it has since recovered, becoming famed for its monastic library which specialises in noble records and genealogies (Pop. c. 7,300).

SAUNEDL: Set. City in the region of ASADAUL, in the south east of MAENMIST, in the south of SAMMAEA (Pop. c. 16,1000).

SAURIAR: 1. Sea. Narrow snaking gulf in the east of SAMMAEA appearing between the east of NOAVATUR and the west of PNESSA, appearing after c. 3200 RM following the diminishing of the SEA OF SUPPA. The lowering of ELYDEN'S sea levels led to the sea diminishing in size, until, by c. 3400 RM was almost completely cut off from the SEA OF STYGAS, with the only link being a narrow gulf which became known as the Sauriar, at the south of which were the marshes of FAMMIN.

- 2. For. Coastal region of sparse jungle in the far east of NOAVATUR where the pylon-like granite tomb-markers of ancient SERAPI cultures are scattered. Occasionally the serapis of the eastern KHARKHARADONTID wastes attempt to travel there in a form of pilgrimage, though they rarely make it and are slaughtered en route. They are recorded to have reached it in c. 1240 RM, when they congregated under the mid-summer sun and chanted hymnals of absolution before the markers of their ancestors.
- 3. Rvr. Coastal wetlands in the south west of PNESSA in what was once the SEA OF SUPPA. Revealed relatively recently, over the last 100 200 years, the region is relatively flat and waterlogged, becoming a haven to coastal wildlife, though it is thought that the continued diminishing of the Gulf of Sauriar will leave it much higher than surrounding waters within a few decades leading to its drying out.

SAURIAT: Set. Settlement in the south east of the tribe of ALLAKAT, in the c of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 7,000).

SAUT: Set. Settlement in ERET⁽²⁾ on the border of the LANKRA woodlands, whose primary industry is logging (Pop. c. 5,800).

SAVAEN: Sea. Large bay in the west of WESTERN SAMMAEA to the east of The Dragon Isles, west of the CITIZENRY OF THALI, and the north of RAHENG. Its waters are shallow, and it is famed for its many small islands, shallows, and lagoons. It was considered one of the FIVE SEAS of the pirate lore of the FIVE SAILS.

SAVAKLOR: Pol. Rnk. Powerful political/religious rank in the demesne of KURATH that is central to the regions' worship of the SERPENT MOTHER. They wear scale cassocks and speak in ancient antediluvian tongues said to have been spoken by the SERAPIS before they were cursed, millennia ago.

SAVANT-KING: Pol. Ruler of CEEROPIA; had the sword TARTARUCH forged to aid in the OTHERWORLD WARS.

SAVAT: Rel. Originally a saint of the CHURCH OF RAHANA in the SIX
CITIES region of THE SURRACH, today Savat is one aspect of the duotheistic religion of IANAHN, commonly linked with the BLOOD MOON ARAKHAMÉ.

SAVEL: Set. City in the east of NÁRTHEL. Its main industry is logging (Pop. c. 17,500).

SAVEST: Rvr. River in the north of AHRISHEN, flowing south west for over 1,100-miles from various sources in the A SAVI Mountains, before meeting lake NAIDA that itself drains into the river ARESH⁽²⁾.

It has a deep religious significance it the worshippers of the followers of the CHILD PRINCE as its main source is a spring that lies beneath the CHILD'S ESTUARY in the A Savi Mountains, making it holy to the Ahrisheni people.

SAVHIL: Soc. Arc. Bev. A kiosk, often elaborately designed, where water is freely dispensed to people by an attendant. Savhils originated in SALOROC in c. 1000 RM, though have since spread across the REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO, where they are now most common.

SAVI: Eth. Indigenous people of THE SURRACH in the north west of NORTHERN SAMMAEA. Since the arrival of KORACHANI migrants and colonists to the north of the region, first in c. 1700, then again in c. 2200 RM, there has been a dilution of the savi bloodlines, particularly in the north of the western-coast, around the region of the SIX CITIES and MARACHA. The remaining savi people have been least touched by outside influence in the c and east of the Surrach and they are thought to be the closest extant people to those of the CHEGRINTISH empire.

The fall of the nation of \underline{AHINA} in c. 3580 left a vacuum in the surrounding region, about as far east as the extant city of \underline{FURUD} . What under Ahina had been a coalition of people became fragmented, changed into a land of dozens, if not hundreds of city-states that controlled only the immediate area around them, with lands between being lawless regions that made travel difficult. For decades the entire area was consumed by war as rival tyrants and warlords subjugated the land to their 'laws'.

By c. 3600 RM one coalition of cities led by the charismatic leader Hegeumar, gained the upper hand. Within a few years it had united most cities into the loose nation that became known as Saviana, though his death brought renewed friction. The nation went on to be ruled by a succession of short-lived tyrants, many of which were deposed or slain by their successors, whose rule was only as effective as that of their governors and lieutenants who oversaw the various districts.

In 3791 RM, a new alliance formed opposing the Tyrant Daaran who had risen to power in Saviana, taking over much of the western part of the region. Following a protracted war, the Tyrant was defeated in 3796 RM and the land was divided into 6 territories, amongst 6 generals, and the term the SIX CITIES was first used in an official capacity to describe the region, and it survives today as a small coastal enclave in the west of the Surrach. See Vol III: Extinct States.

SAVIUD: Lan. Ntn. Native name for THE SURRACH, meaning 'conflict' in the native tongue.

SAVIUDI: Lan. Language of the SAVI people that is common across THE SURRACH. It is first recorded in c. 1600 and emerged from the earlier SELAHIMI, which in turn evolved from the early FIFTH AGE CHEGRINTISH. The language itself is known for having dental clicks and relies heavily on physical gestures (such as an upward nod being the 'word' for no).

The collapse of the kingdom in 2761 RM led to a fracturing of the region and the language itself diverged alongside regional cultures, and in some places has developed to the point as to be considered different languages. Hundreds of regional variants exist today, and most travellers and merchants communicate in a simple pidgin tongue that has roots in the most basic words of the original Saviudi tongue. See Vol II: Languages.

SAVOUG: Set. City in the far north east of PARAIYA, along the southern bank of the river SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾. It also forms a part of the SALT ROAD, and trades east with LIDEA via the settlement of BERENIT, and goods bought from SIRIPHAGAN⁽¹⁾ merchants are sold up and down the river Shibboleth as far as its course allows, reaching MHAROKK in the north and N'RAKH in the east (Pop. c. 38,200).

SAYYAD: Set. Settlement in the west of VENTHIR, overlooking lake QEDARI (Pop. c. 4,500).

SAZGROD: Set. Independent city in the south west of CHEIRA, cut off from the rest of the nation by the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region of EXITUS. The city is in truth built atop an ancient ruined temple city, whose origins are unknown. The temple-complex is crumbling, kept in place only through the grasp of vines and roots. Though populated, it lacks a true government and is considered an anarchy (Pop. c. 25,000).

SBARRAR: Set. Harbour-city in the east of VÂRR, in the BAY OF ILURO. It is home to the largest remaining cathedral of the UNDYING MACHINE in VÂRR and is one of few cities where it remains the dominant faith. It forms part of the SHADOW MARCH as well as the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 27,400).

SBARRAIA: Sct. Coastal settlement in the north east of the SOVEREIGNTY OF THUMAL. It forms a part of the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 9,000).

SCAB FORTRESS: see KERRAS PELLN.

SCABLANDS: Int. Geo. Region in the c east of BASSORAH⁽²⁾, known for its cracked land, many fissures, shallow canyons and caves in an otherwise level lowland plateau. The caves are deep and very small, with most too narrow for adults to pass through, but they are known to lead to an expansive series of far larger hollows and are rumoured to house a population of diminutive humanoids, of which little is known.

Surrounding regions have many independent legends and tales of emaciated child-sized beings known colloquially as MOONSFOLK that have been spotted at night, and which are blamed for objects going missing or disappearances of people.

SCABRIA: 1. Geo. Fertile region in the c of THE SURRACH, surrounding part of the river RAMEAL.

2. Set. Main city of the eponymous region^(1.). Its main industry is the harvesting of grain, which is also its official emblem. Straw is used widely in construction and as feed for cattle (Pop. c. 40,000).

SCALOTTI: Rvr. River in the c north east of AETHIOS, flowing south west for 260-miles from sources in the AGRABU Mountains before meeting its parent, the river SHIBBOLETH^(3,).

SCALPTUR: Set. Satellite settlement of GANGUA, in the c south west of THE SURRACH (Pop. c. 4,200).

SCANSCIALA: Geo. Wide coastal plains in the south east of GYZHA. The feature dominates most of Gyzha, and it is a fertile land, with many rivers and settlements.

SCAPHION, the: Str. Tec. Large stone tower in the centre of the city of LEHIOK in VECTIS. It stands in a large empty square that is flanked by 14 large markers arranged on the same side of an imaginary hemisphere surrounding the tower. The tower and markers together act as a sundial, marking the time of day from 6 AM to 8 PM. The construction and use of the tower predates modem time-keeping devices. Indeed, in 2800 RM a clock was installed in the tower, rendering the sundial obsolete.

SCAPIA: Set. Small city in the c of OPHIUSSA (Pop. c. 16,000).

SCAPPHIA: Set. Independent city in the c north of THE SURRACH, situated atop a level plateau south of the NGHALLEAL Mountains. Its people are known as studiers of the sun and moons, and their lives revolve around their movements. ECLIPSES are seen as times of great contemplation (Pop. c. 25,200).

SCARABAD: Plr. 'scarabadi'. Mar. Rnk. Mute guards outside the tower of JUPITER BELUS. Their heritage is uncertain, though they are larger than normal men, standing some 7-seet tall, their skin, where visible beneath their red robes and heavy hide lamed armour (akin to a woman's mantle) is grey-brown and tough. They wear distinct helms, fashioned of hide, that take the form of the imperial cross.

SCARAS: Rui. Ancient stone-carved temples around 100-miles north west of the BITTER SEA, in the northern-most extent of TEHETH in the north east of ABACARDAT. The tombs, perhaps a hundred in all, are scattered in an area of around 150 square-miles, and each is carved from a single small monadnock, with a single face turned into a temple. A narrow hewn corridor leads beneath the geo. feature and a tomb.

Little is known of the culture responsible for these tombs, and many are now empty, looted years ago.

SCATEBRIN: Geo. Region in the c of THE SURRACH known for its many bubbling springs and geysers.

SCATTERING OF THE TRIBES, the: Myt. Soc. Event in the Mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, when the original Two-and-Twenty MORTAL TRIBES left their ancestral lands and spread across Elyden. It is argued by some scholars that most of the Two-and-Twenty tribes first appeared in the NEAR HEMISPHERE and later mingled and travelled, populating most regions of the world.

What led to this is unknown, though it is thought that the eventual weakening and deaths of the disparate Demiurges may have played some part in it, and that the Scattering may have taken thousands of years to have taken place. See Vol IV: the Mythologia Elyden.

SCATURIA: Rvr. River in the c of BANT, in the CARCHEMISHI
PENINSULA⁽¹⁾, in the east of SAMMAEA. The river flows south for 580miles from sources in the Carchemishi Mountains⁽²⁾, before emptying in the FLAMING SEA. The capital of THAO is situated along its course.

The river is known for its large sedimentary output, which has resulted in a large delta forming. Over the past century, the delta has increased by some 25-miles, and is now home to large tracts or farmland that is worked based on the inundation of the river following snowmelt in the Carchemish, and rainy season farther inland.

SCATURIAS: Rvr. River in the c of PORPHYR, flowing south for 800-miles from sources in the RYKK Mountains and the ZESTOR RIM, before meeting the SEA OF LETHEA at an expansive wet delta. The name is thought to be a corruption from ancient KORACHANI word for flowing water

SCAV: see SCAVEN.

SCAVAGER: Voc. Org. Street cleaners in the KORACHANI and SARASTROAN empires. They form a caste unto their own and live apart from others, in ghettos or sequestered districts. Traditionally, this was due them being seen as unclean, though this stigma is now largely forgotten. Indeed, most scavager communities today are centres of proud recycling traditions, where other people's waste is reclaimed and repurposed, either for their own use or to be sold on. As a result, many scavager communities can be wealthy, though there may exist a disparity in wealth between classes.

SCAVEN: also 'scav' and 'scavenger'. Soc. Scavenger-destitutes who roam the outskirts of large cities and wasteyards of CENTRAL LLACHATUL, predominantly the dust plains of ALMAGEST, c AZAZEM, western PELASGOS and KORACHAN, prospecting for scrap metal, ruins and anything of value.

The largest and most powerful of the scaven families dwell in and around Almagest, and rose to great prominence following the DISSOLUTION OF THE HIGH-EMPIRE OF KORACHAN. Many scaven in the northern territories follow a practice called CYCLING, where they repurpose and convert materials into new objects they use and sell.

SCELD: Pol. Ser. Capital of GREST⁽¹⁾, situated along the course of the river AGO. It rose to prominence between c. 3150 – 3200 RM as an influential mercantile centre in the nation of AHAGGAD⁽²⁾ at the centre of which was a powerful IUNITANT family, which had amassed a fortune and no small amount of influence in the region. This led to a shifting of power bases in Ahaggad, destabilising the politics of the state as Sceld leeched wealth from the capital in NEYEM.

This escalated in 3234 RM into a civil war that endured for three decades, ending in 3263 RM when the victorious armies of Sceld marched into a defeated Neyem, with its CULTISTS razing it and slaying its rulers. Sceld was established as the capital of a new sovereign state that was named Grest, and it remains as capital to this day and the most powerful stronghold of the central Mansion of the $\underline{\text{HE'ELAN ARCHDUKES}}$. (Pop. c. 328,000).

SCELERA: Set. Fortified settlement in the south east of SHOTHA. The settlement is close to the contested border with STOLAS (Pop. c. 11,200).

SCELERIA: His. Myt. Geo. Ntn. Ancient historical territories belonging to the DEMIURGE RACHANAEL and his tribe, the PLAGI. It is unknown where those territories were in relation to today's borders, though it is likely that they were close to extant KHARKHARADONTIS.

SCENA: Mil. Rnk. Military rank in the city of IRASCENA and surrounding regions in the north of THE SURRACH, known for its drug-use and cabertossing.

SCENEA: Sea. Bay in the north west of CYHLAGHARR and terminus of the river LYSINGR. It is known for its many islands many of which were formed by silt deposits carried by the above river.

SCEPTRE OF ST. DAGH: see St. Dagh, Sceptre of.

SCERTA: Set. Coastal settlement in the west of ARTALSCELLIA. It is known for its deep copper mines (Pop. c. 8,000).

SCETHRA SEPRIA: (B. 3973 RM) Pol. Present monarch of AYAD, who has ruled since her mother's death in 3999 RM.

SCHIAMACHY: Sup. Lan. Early FIFTH AGE GERICIAN term for PENUMBRISM. The word has largely gone out of fashion though some still use it in PELASGOS and the FREE-ISLES.

SCHINDA: Geo. Coastal mountain fort in the far north west of KASPIA, on the far northern face of the SILVERPEAKS, overlooking the SEA OF BIELOST. It was built in c. 1340 RM atop a FOURTH AGE ruin, and was later fortified following the rise of the CULT OF TAHIRA in c. 1600 RM. Now it serves as the centre of its navy.

SCHISM WARS, the: Rel. His. Conflict within the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE between 196 – 367 RM, following the actions of ARREKAN THE BETRAYER.

SCHOLAR AND THE STONE, the: Leg. Vol. Common fairytale around the INNER SEA REGION, thought to have originated in the highlands of AZAZEM in c. 800 RM. the most common version of the tale follows this structure:

The tale follows a scholar who discovers an ancient stone (thought now to be a GODSTONE), and becomes consumed with a desire to learn more about it. He neglects his family life in his obsession, which finds him leaving his home to travel the world in search of answers to the origins of the stone and the purpose behind its construction. He finally reaches a ruined temple in a polluted desert (likely KHARKHARADONTIS), and finds the truth behind the construction of the godstones, which leaves him hollow, realising that he had everything he needed and abandoned it in search for shadows. He realises then that wisdom and love transcend mere knowledge and facts.

Returning home, he learns that his wife and child have moved on and he is left alone, having learnt the invaluable lesson that true fulfilment stems not from the pursuit of answers alone, but from living your life and appreciating what you have.

It is thought that the tale may have originally been used to keep children out of trouble, but this would also have been effective in stopping people from asking questions or trying to leave their homes. See Vol II: Legends and Folktales.

SCIACACHIA: Set. City in the c north of TZALLRACH, along the course of the river SCIACHI.

SCIACHI: Rvr. River in the c north of TZALLRACH, flowing north west for 340-miles from sources in the ARGENT Mountains before meeting its parent, the river LIATHAR, itself a parent of the river BAELLI.

SCIAGAMMA: Pol. Sct. Ruling city in the tribe of SUUR'KA, in the east of MULCIBER, in the eastern face if the GROWING MOUNTAINS. It is known for its larger hospital and medical college (Pop. c. 30,000).

SCIAMACHY: Sup. Rnk. Form of ATRAMENTISM concerned with UMBREKHA and shadows. See Vol IV: the Materia Omna.

SCIBARA: Lak. Lake along the course of the river NARRATI in the c of AETHIOS.

SCIDDA: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the north of ATARAXIA, in a wide valley in the southern-face of the BLACK MOUNTAINS guarding the border with CISNERIA. It works alongside TADDATRA, and their rangers are experts at patrolling the wooded hills and mountains of the north of Ataraxia.

SCIDI: Set. Coastal settlement in the east of ARTALSCELLIA (Pop. c. 10,000).

SCIDRA: 1. Myr. His. In the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN, the legendary son through rape of VOLUPIS by TERATHA. He was raised by humans, and learnt of his divine heritage (his parents being both SCIONS, born to DEMIURGES) only after his adoptive mortal mother was slain by the Demiurge SYBARIS^(1.). He forsook his divine heritage and wandered ELYDEN, eager to forget the evil the Two-and-Twenty were capable of, instead relishing in the beauty of the world and helping other mortals in abandoning the yoke of the Demiurges.

2. Set. Fortified city just south east of lake SCIBARA, close to the river NARRATI in the c-south east of AETHIOS. Its inhabitants claim ancestry from the divine-born legend Scidra^(1.) in possibly the SECOND AGE or early THIRD AGE, making it one of the oldest cities in ELYDEN, if the claims are true. The city was once a thriving independent metropolis, controlling the river for hundreds of miles up- and down-stream as the nation of ACTANORS grew around it in the early FIFTH AGE. Its history is now lost to most, though fragments of the ancient city remain outside the present-day borders (Pop. c. 60,000).

SCINTILIA: Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTALLY-TAINTED region in the north west of HANNAH, in the south east of SAMMAEA. Scintilia is surrounded by warm plains and is known for its glass like formations that are a result of centuries of fierce Atramental lightning strikes. The sky above Scintilia has a deep purple hue and very few stars are visible at night. Indeed, historically, this region of Hannah had its own constellation and myths surrounding its darkened skies, many aspects of which were adopted by later Hannahan culture.

SCIOBUTTRA: Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region in the c north of THE SURRACH covering some 25,000-square-miles. At its most intense it causes those within its borders to suffer from violent hallucinations, oft-times indistinguishable from the real world.

The region is categorised as a MODERATE THREAT by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

SCIOLA: Edu. Set. Library-city in the c of AZAZEM (Pop. c. 20,000).

SCIOLLA: 1. Also 'the City of Apparitions'. Ind. Set. City in the c of THE SURRACH, in the south of the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region of SCIOBUTTRA. The city's relative vicinity to the nearby ATRAMENTAL wastes has earned it the moniker 'the City of Apparitions' after the hallucinations many of its citizens experience.

Indeed, the city would not exist so close to an Atramental wasteland, were it not for its unique industry. The city operates many salt mines, each which is about 5-miles from the city-proper. The mines extend north, some miles into the wastes of SCIOBUTTRA. The mines' proximity to the wastes and the length of time the salt has existed within the wastes has imparted a unique trait to the salt mined there – it has potent hallucinogenic properties, which makes it a valuable drug, commonly used in BACALUSIA and MASSEGA, though is not unknown as far east as VENTHIR, though transportational constraints make it prohibitively expensive far from THE SURRACH. The drug is known colloquially as Sciolla⁽²⁾, after its place of origin (Pop. c. 50,000).

2. Dru. Hallucinogenic drug common in THE SURRACH, made from powdered and refined rock salt, mined in the environs of the eponymous city in the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region of SCIOBUTTRA. The salt, deposited eons past in Sciobuttra, has inherited its hallucinogenic properties and is mined specifically for this purpose. It is commonly used in the cities of BACALUSIA and MASSEGA, where it commands a high but not unaffordable price, though the cost increases exponentially the farther from the source it is transported. This is because it breaks down rapidly once it has been exposed to air, becoming not only ineffective but potentially dangerous to use. Special caravans have been constructed for the specific purpose of transporting the drug, not only to keep it effective, but also to keep it safe from banditry. See Vol II: Drugs and Addictions.

SCION: also 'godscion' and '* Myr. His. In the mythic history of ELYDEN, the children of DEMIURGES, usually with other Demiurges, scions, or MORTALS, though the descendants of scions are often referred to as scions for many generations, typically until their mortal blood begins to shroud their divine heritage.

As befits their semi-divine ancestry, most scions, particularly 1st and 2nd generation scions, are incredibly powerful, often possessing great SORCEROUS powers and abilities (usually referred to as SCIONIC MAGICK), mirroring those of their Demiurge ancestor, if slightly reduced in magnitude, though there are many accounts of individuals with incredible abilities, many of which are mentioned in the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN.

They feature heavily in the tales of the Mythologia Elyden and their actions were pivotal in the shaping of mortal cultures and civilizations in the ancient world. Though rare today, there are many documented scions in Elyden today, including rulers and powerful shapers, for instance Teleanyara Apexeide, the ruler of Porphyr. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

SCION-BORN: Myt. Soc. The descendants of SCIONS and MORTALS, similar to HALFBLOODS, though far rarer and usually of greater power. They have been hunted and persecuted at various times throughout ELYDEN'S history due to the threat they pose to governments and people in power. As a result, many choose lives of obscurity or isolation due to the infamy that surrounds their heritage. Others crave the attention their ancestry brings them and seek positions of power. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

SCION OF OT: Myt. Soc. Direct descendant of the TEMUJAN fire goddess OT (rare outside the ruling classes of TEMUJA), usually female, displaying an affinity with the FIRMAMENT, particularly the domains of wind and fire.

The Scion of Ot is mentioned in many Temujan legends, and last appears in contemporary lore in c. 3640 RM.

SCIONIC CREATURE: Myt. Term commonly used interchangeably with SCION, though with a broader meaning, usually meaning the offspring of any supranaturally powerful being, such as a DEMIURGE or OTHERWORLDER, for instance.

SCIONIC MAGICK: Int. Mys. Sup. Rnk. A form of non-SHAPING MYSTICISM that is practiced by descendants of the DEMIURGES, hence the name SCIONIC magick. There is little in the way of formalised teachings or lore surrounding scionic magick, and effectively each individual is forced to learn their abilities through trial and error, though they tend to have more of an innate knack than normal shapers.

Rather than tapping into the MATERIA OMNA and the FIRMAMENT and/or ATRAMENTA, scionic magick draws on the latent powers of the Demiurge PRIMOGENITOR of the user, usually being more pronounced and powerful the closer the user is to the Demiurges, in terms of generation, though this is not always the case with individuals with otherwise no discernible link to their ancient divine progeny displaying powerful scionic abilities.

Practitioners of scionic magick rarely know their true heritage and are more commonly referred to as SORCERERS, and though some may seek formal training in shaping they will almost always find no correlation between their innate abilities and shaping. See Vol IV: other Forms of Mysticism.

SCIONS OF THE THRONE, the: Int. Sup. Org. Secretive group that believes in the sanctity and strength of the ATRAMENTA and those who wield it. The group is based in the city of KETESH⁽³⁾(which is seen as a neutral presence) and has cells across various territories of the INNER SEA REGION, from where they push their agenda.

The organisation is mostly comprised of SHAPERS and their sympathisers and sycophants, and it is thought that many of the KORACHANI MINASTERIA^(2.) of SHAPING as well as the ORDER OF PROSELYTISERS have secretive sodalities that recruit members for the Scions of the Throne.

It is unknown what the throne in the title refers to. Most assume it is a reference to the LEADEN THRONE, though others believe it is more symbolic, referring to the right they believe shapers have to rule over others.

SCISSELA: Set. Small coastal city in the far south west of ALMAGEST, close to the border with SKAROS. It is known for its shipyards, and it marks the southernmost point of the Almagesti Coastal Bulwark (Pop. c. 17,200).

SCLERO SOMA: Rui. Ruined temple in the south east of the UMBRA SOKHAR wastes in SAMMAEA. It is built into a cliff-face at the foot of the north eastern-face of the MOLOTH KHAMMOTHUL Mountains and spreads deep beneath the Mountains with branching passages, chambers and catacombs. Little is known of its history, though it is thought to date back to the FOURTH AGE and was possibly built by plagi refugees fleeing tainted lands in the south following the imprisonment of RACHANAEL in DAEKYN.

SCOIHINA: Geo. Plains in the c of the island of IRUGNA(1.), to the east of the UTHAANI Mountains.

SCOPULA: Rui. Ruined town in the east of NÁRTHEL. It was attacked by a monstrous GROTESQUE of unknown origin in 3257 RM, after which it was abandoned.

SCORIA: 1. Geo. Ancient wasteland in ALMAGEST, just south of the arctic circle. The region is largely flat and is made up of what can most easily be described as gigantic plates of slate, shattered and askew, fused together. The stones are covered in fossils of what many scholars believe are the earliest creatures fashioned by the DEMIURGES.

2. Geo. Volcanically active region in the south west of ANUBIA. It is known for its geysers, fumaroles and sulphurous lands, as well as outcrops of ancient weathered black lava fields. It's most prominent feature is the prismatic hot spring of Ialadeha.

SCORIG: Set. Coastal settlement in the north west of PNESSA, overlooking lake AKASM (Pop. c. 3,000).

SCORPION CITY, THE: see AKRB.

SCORR, THE BOAR: Mys. Rel. In TEMUJAN SPIRITUALISM, the TUTELARY SPIRIT of Perseverance. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

SCOTOMA: Sup. Geo. FIRMAMENTALLY active region in the south east of WESTERN MENISCEA, along the border between the regions of AHOPAH and IMELKOT, in the eastern foothills of the MENEFIR Mountains. Prolonged exposure to the region can result in loss of sight, and even shorter sojourns there can leave travellers with permanently damaged sight, including black flashes and blind-spots.

SCOURGE OF ICONS: Pol. His. Period in the history of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, between 21 RM – c. 500 RM, where ICONOCLASTS persecuted the faithful of deities and powers both within and without the empire during the UNIFICATION WARS.

SCOURGE OF WITCHES: also 'the Witch Wars' and 'the Witch Crusades'.

Pol. Soc. His. KORACHAN has always been distrustful of foreigners and those with different beliefs and philosophies. At various times in its history, Korachan has launched CRUSADES into the so-called heathen lands to its west and particularly its east, with the claim of scouring it of WITCHES (practitioners of FIRMAMENTISM) and its heathen religious practices. Many of these crusades were headed by the church of the Undying Machine and/or the AVÉNETHI ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION.

One such period was the Scouring of Witches, which took place between 3714–3811 RM, which began by persecuting Firmamentists and their sympathisers within its own borders, and which rapidly spread to 'heathen' lands, which included Ahrishen, Lyridia, Virahan, Baatan, Saua, Temur, Khamid, and Malan, though the silting up of the Strait of Nárthel impacted the potential routes into such lands, making Ahrishen and its direct neighbours the easiest targets in the past centuries.

Incursions into Ahrishen and other free lands of the east were launched from various bases and points in RHAMIA and PELASGOS throughout the near three-decades of the Scourging, during which thousands of SHAPERS and many more innocents were killed, in what was in most cases little more than a massacre. The Korachani empire eventually wound down its offensive, despite largely ineffective opposition.

More covert hunts, led by the Sanctified Orders of the Inquisition, were conducted across the aforementioned lands, with Ahrishen, Saua and Temuja bearing the brunt of attacks, as its forces infiltrated more distant lands that the empire's armies were unable to reach. From there, the INQUISITORS and their forces were able to observe and records various heathen practices before razing entire settlements to the ground. The skulls of the dead were piled in great pyramids of flaming bone, intended as symbols to other witches and heathens of what their foul beliefs would bring them.

The Scourge of witches eventually led to the formation of the CENTRAL LLACHATULI ALLIANCE in 3804 RM, which survives to this day as a means of defence against larger Imperial powers around the Inner Sea.

Though the Scourge of Witches officially ended in 3811 RM, much smaller irregular incursions persisted up until the present day, largely intended to gather intelligence on the region and to spread the word of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, leading some to believe that a larger incursion or attack might be planned for the near-future.

SCOURGE OF OGHURS: Pol. His. Period of strife in ALMAGEST between 2312 and 2319 RM, that followed massed uprisings of oghur slaves, in which thousands of oghurs were slain in a bid to quell the dissent.

SCOURGING OF THE PANGAIA: Pol. His. The persecution and apprehension of members of the PANGAIA led by the ARÂTHUAHI SANCTIFIED ORDER OF THE INQUISITION. Beginning in 3791 RM and lasting some three years, the scourging left hundreds of KORACHANI PATRICIANS (amongst others) were burnt, their estates taken by the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE and the empire.

SCOURING OF KEVER, FIRST: His. War. Genocide perpetrated by the allied armies of ALMAGEST and the KORACHANI EMPIRE against the KEVERAN^(1.) people in VALBAR^(1.) between c. 1800 and 1847 RM, during which most of the native population, descended from the KINGDOM OF THYTHIA, were either eradicated or taken to Valbar as SLAVES.

The remnants of Keveran society scattered across the wildernesses of Valbar, becoming skilled survivalists, trying hard to remain unseen by the Almagesti colonists.

SCOURING OF KEVER, SECOND: His. War. Genocide perpetrated by ALMAGEST against the KEVERAN^(1.) people in VALBAR^(1.) between c. 3020 and c. 3050 RM, following its victory in the WAR OF THE ARTIFEXES. Thousands were slain and even more were taken as slaves to work new industries across the Valbaran peninsula. This genocide effectively destroys Keveran culture, though Almagest's eventual abandonment of the region in 3468 RM sees a resurgence of these people.

SCRIPTURE OF SHADOW, the: Rel. Vol. Myt. His. Prophecy foretelling the story of the return of the DEMIURGE RACHANAEL as the UNDYING MACHINE and other ancient texts, which some considered apocryphal and others canon. The Scriptures were found by the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR on the island of MALETH(I.) in -23 RM, buried in an ancient temple dedicated to the Demiurge TALANTEHUT later named the TEMPLE OF THE SHADOW.

Perhaps more importantly, Malichar interpreted its ancient writings as a prophecy that spoke directly to him, the one who would unite the SEVEN TRIBES of the KORACHANI PENINSULA, and later the 'SEVEN NATIONS OF THE INLAND SEA'. The Scriptures were the spark that lit the crusade of Malichar and his eventual subjugation of the INNER SEA, which in turn would lead to Malichar's DEATH AND REBIRTH as a timeless OTHERWORLDER and the freeing of Rachanael from his prison in DAEKYN and his rebirth upon the LEADEN THRONE.

The Scripture has gone on to become the basis for the main tenet of the Church of the Undying Machine, now known simply as THE SHADOW.

SCUDA: VENTHIRI unit of scale, comparable with the IMPERIAL MILE, though smaller. 1 scuda equals 1.22 Imperial miles. The scuda's roots lie in the VENATHI EMPIRE and it remains a common unit of scale in surrounding regions, including SARASTRO, NÁRTHEL and SARAGOS.

SCUEJU: Set. Major city in the c of RAONGEN^(2.). It is a major industrial centre in the INDUSTRY (territory) of IRICORA^(1.), with most of its vassals working in its manufactories (Pop. c. 115,000).

SCURRIER: Mil. Wilderness scouts and runners in the AHRISHENI military. They are experts at navigating both dry land and wetlands and spend months away from their base – scouring the land for dangerous beasts, bandits and SUPRANATURAL threats.

SCUTA: 1. Set. Settlement in KERRAS PELLN, close to the KELACHOT Mountains and the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region of GNATHALLO (Pop. c. 8.000).

2. Geo. Pass in the $\underline{KELACHOT}$ Mountains, linking \underline{KERRAS} PELLN with KARAKHAS.

SCUTI: Soc. In the KORACHANI EMPIRE, HELOTS who for some reason or another (hereditary honour, award, inheritance) are exempt from working in the manufactories and allowed to make their own way in life, without them bring FREEMEN or considered citizens. A widespread example includes the majority of IONIC population following its subjugation to Korachan in 212 RM. They are regarded with bitterness by other HELOTS and disdain by other freemen and PATRICIANS.

SCYKADA: Set. Small coastal city on the east of the island of CAMARA in the south of the CORAL BARONIES, off the south western coast of SAMMAEA(Pop. c. 14,200).

SCYLLARETH: Also 'the Coral Baronies'. The native name for the CORAL BARONIES, though this name is only used in a state capacity on official documentation, with most people, including locals and foreigners, referring to it by the more common name of the Coral Baronies.

SCYNAGRA: Set. Fortified city in the c-south east of CYHLAGHARR, in the dry region of ODULROA. It is a major manufacturer of sulphur and pyrite, with great numbers of slave-forces employed to quarry the material (Pop. c. 15,500).

SCYTHEA: 1. Rvr. River in the north of SALOROC that flows south west for 70-miles from the CALIXARAN hills. The waters are largely seasonal and flow heaviest in spring and winter.

2. Set. A powerful city-state during the early days of the FIFTH AGE. It was funded atop the ruin of an unnamed FOURTH AGE ruin along the far eastern coast of the SHADOW SEA, just west of the SEA OF TIAMA, in c. - 1250 RM by SVATHI migrants moving south from present-day LYRIDIA. The city rapidly dominated the surrounding region and by c. -1000 RM it had established many colonies around the Sea of Tiama, trading and preying on the people of the region. The increase in size and power of the AMNATHI KINGDOM just to the north (itself also descended from the Svathi people) brought pressure to SCYTHEA, leading to an exodus of sorts of much of its populace to the colony of SALOROC, across the sea on the SYMENIAN (1.) peninsula in c. -1025 RM.

Saloroc, like most large cities in the region at the time, developed a slaving tradition and preyed on the people of the surrounding regions, including the south of AMNATH, the Symenian peninsula, HAAGEN^(2.) and the south of SAOSTANA, and by c. -850 RM it had dominated the Symenian peninsula. In c. -820 RM, Scythea sundered itself from its southern kin, with its privateers coming to prey on Salorocan vessels with as much regularity as any other.

The discovery of the so-called IONIC TALPA in c. -730 RM led to the solidification of the Salorocan cities. This union of the Symenian peninsula brought strength to the region which became known as IO after the priestly caste that had united them. They opposed much of Scythean predation, with the city of Saloroc opposing Scythea, dominating the Sea of Tiama. In -555 RM, Ionic diplomats arrived in Scythea, their leaders confident that the city-state would accept its terms and join its territories. They were ultimately unsuccessful. They tried again in -548 RM, this time sending a veritable army of envois and troops, with one of the three Ionic GOLEMS^(2.) in tow. The Tyrant of Scythea, deceived into thinking that Io had at its disposal armies made up of golems, prostrated himself to the IONIC HIERARCHS, effectively handing them Scythea. Though as part of his terms he retained control of the city, and a Golem.

The APOSTATE WARS that engulfed Io between -192 and -128 RM left Scythea, like many other cities, sundered, an independent city- state. During this time, it came to prey on travellers and merchants, though pressure from an ailing NÁRTHEL to the north left its borders greatly diminished by the time the Wars ended and Io restabilised. The appearance of the EXARCHS OF MIRADOR and their creation of true golems in UR SITH in -111 RM left Scythea, which by then had grown agnostic, sundered from the other city-states, struggling against Nártheli expansion in the north.

Scythea remained independent, preying on shipping that passed through the Shadow Sea for the next centuries, defying the imperial expansion throughout the region. By 212 RM both Nárthel and Io were under KORACHANI rule, with the formers' borders pushing against those of Scythea. Finally, in 382 RM Nárthel attacked the city-state, slaying its rulers and instating its own leadership there, bringing it too under Korachani rule. This lasted until c. 2100 RM, when Korachan retreated from the region, leaving it in the hands of the INTERREGNUM. Following this, cultural growth in the region of SALOROC in the south led to Scythea and surrounding lands being appropriated by Saloroc by 2680 RM.

The city is a major industrial centre and its river port is busy with mercantile vessels. It forms a part of the RED ROUTE, and its streets are busy with merchants and traders, and its loggia-markets are filled with goods from across the INNER SEA REGION (Pop. c. 139,400).

SCYTRI: also 'the Naked City'. Pol. Set. Capital city of MOSTUE. Its nickname of the Naked City comes from its bare stonework which is characterised by stark stonemasonry and little decoration. The city stands at the periphery of what was once the sea shelf of Mostue, which is now an expansive coastal plain that was submerged until as recently as c. 3200 RM (Pop. c. 117,000).

SDORII: Set. Small city in the north of PNESSA (Pop. c. 12,000).

 $\underline{\textbf{SEA OF ABRAXA}}\text{: see }\underline{\textbf{ABRAXA}}^{(1.)}.$

SEA OF ADUM: see ADUM. SEA OF AZAM: see, AZAM.

SEA CAMPHOR: Flo. Stunted form of camphor laurel that is endemic to the far south east of MENISCEA and the MAIDEN ISLES, where it grows in earth that is rich in salt, including coastal areas. The wood of sea camphor is burnt, with the resulting vapour condensed and turned into a salt-like substance that is used in the manufacture of perfume as well as in pain relief, where it is used as an ointment. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

SEA OF CHAOS: se CHAOS, SEA OF.

SEA OF CYPRIA: see, CYPRIA 1.

SEA OF DAGGERS: Sea. Polar sea in the north of LLACHATUL, between PERGOST and KASPIA.

SEA OF DAGGERS BASIN: Geo. Drainage basin formed by various continental divides in the continent of LLACHATUL. The basin comprises parts of the north east of Llachatul, and all rivers within it drain directly into the SEA OF DAGGERS.

Nations and territories that are at least partially within the Sea of Daggers Basin include: KASPIA, PERGOST, and SABIA.

SEA OF ERIA: see ERIA.

SEA OF FIRE: Lan. Common KORACHANI name for the ESH ETEK, a small sea to the south east of KHEMET, in KHAMID. It is named after the occasional lava flows that spill into the water.

SEA OF FOR: see FOR, SEA OF. SEA OF GEAUA: see GEAUA.

SEA OF LERAMUGH: see LERAMUGH, SEA OF.

SEA OF NARANOR: see NARANOR, SEA OF.

SEA NOMADS: Soc. Group of people who emerged in the nation of Sibbion in c. 3000 RM following a long period of PLAGUE, drought and civil unrest that began in c. 2880 RM. Driven to despair, they took to their large catamarans and became coastal nomads, moving from bay to bay, become sea nomads. Over the years they attracted more numbers from the mainland, but as the years went on these new recruits proved to be wretched – outcasts, criminals, exiles and religious heretics – ousting the established, more peaceful leaders, and becoming pirates by c. 3130 RM under the name of the FIVE SAILS.

SEA OF ORRIDA: see ORRIDA, SEA OF.

SEA OTTER, GIANT: Fau. Variety of sea otter common in the south of the SEA OF ORRIDA, particularly in the west of the GULF OF ESHIRON.

SEA OF PASARADE: see PASARADE^(1.).

SEA OF SAECULA: see: SAECULA, SEA OF.

SEA OF SEKHEM: see SEKHEM, SEA OF.

SEA OF SERPENTS, the: see SERPENTS, SEA OF.

SEA OF SPIRES, the: Sea. Sea to the east of PELASGOS, and the west of LYRIDIA. It is named after the ruins of the FENEAL, whose spires jut from the seas' waters, and is home to many roosting seabirds like \underline{SHARA} \underline{DOVES} . It is known as \underline{THE} \underline{DEAD} \underline{SEA} in the east, due to its polluted waters.

SEAL OF SERDUN: see SERDUN, SEAL OF.

SEALS OF THE COVENANT, the: also 'Eight Seals, the'. His. Obj. Pol. Myt. Eight brass sigils, around 8" in diameter, that were minted in the early FOURTH AGE as part of an alliance forged between eight cultures around the INNER SEA REGION, signalling a time of relative prosperity that is thought to have lasted for many centuries before its fragmentation.

The seals have become ingrained in many legends and myths from the surrounding areas over the years, with some stories centring around a single seal, forgetting the others, with other tales forming mythologies around all eight or a portion thereof.

Most are lost, though many expeditions have been mounted to search for them due to rumours of ancient magickal properties or simply their historical value. The location of one, the SEAL OF SERDUN, is known – it was discovered in eastern PARTHIS in 3488 RM and is now located in a museum, away from the public.

SEASON: an arbitrary partition of the year based on change in weather and hours of daylight in a particular region, as a result of ELYDEN'S axial tilt in relation to its orbit around the SUN. Typically, the solar year is divided into four seasons – spring, summer, autumn, and winter. With the retreat of Elyden's seas, many regions have experienced a change in seasons with some becoming more pronounced and other being less noticeable.

Different cultures may have different designations for months, or different ways of dividing the year entirely. Some notable ones are found below:

1. In TEMUJA, the seasons are known as: flowerbloom (spring), deadheat (summer), leaffall (autumn), Whitewater (winter).

SEAT OF KURKUA: Rui. Ancient granite colossal sculpture on the island of SIAREHET in the west of the MAIDEN ISLES, facing the LANRA Reef. It is ancient and takes the form of a gigantic bust looking out to the east. It was crafted in situ, likely in the FOURTH AGE and is made from the purple granite of the region.

SEAT OF RHOT: Int. Arc. Gigantic hewn throne on a peak to the west of the IATULKAN ridge in the c north east of KHARKHARADONTIS. The stone around the throne is diseased and wretched and few have travelled here. Moderate threat.

The region is categorised as a $\underline{\text{LEAST CONCERN}}$ by the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI}}$ INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

SEA OF SOULS: Leg. Ast. Common name, particularly in antiquity, for the heavens. The name is a reference to the SPIRITS^(1.) of the dead that gestate there before being reborn as OTHERWORLDERS.

SEALORDS, the: see THE SILDELK RING.

SEATH: Geo. Island off the north eastern coast of Zhariah⁽²⁾. It flat and largely unpopulated.

SEBAHAK: Ser. City in KHAMID, overlooking the SEA OF URAN. It appeared in c. 500 RM as a simple farming community that naturally grew over time into a thriving city, one of few that rose after the Cataclysm under the aegis of the SAPETI DYNASTIES. The city and surrounding regions were targeted by Korachani forces during the SCOURGE OF WITCHES between c. 3722 and 3830 RM (Pop. c. 110,000).

SEBAHAK CATACOMBS: Str. Vast network of catacombs carved by hand in the limestone beneath the city of SEBAHAK in the north west of KHAMID. Totalling many hundreds of combined miles of tunnels, shafts, chambers, cisterns, drainage tunnels and storm drains, the catacombs proved invaluable in the defence against the SCOURGE OF WITCHES, which targeted the region for around a decade between c. 3722 and 3830 RM

SEBAN: Geo. 1. Headland in the north of KHAMID. It is known for its stark red limestone formations and badlands that have been shaped over centuries of wind and rain erosion.

2. Coastal mountains in the far north of $\underline{\text{KHAMID}}$ overlooking the $\underline{\text{SEA OF}}$ $\underline{\text{URAN}}$. The northern face of the mountains descends steeply towards the coast, ending in stark red cliffs in various areas.

SEBAQ: Set. Small city in the east of the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT, in the delta of the river NEPHILA. Its main industry is the cultivation of rice (Pop. c. 17,500).

SEBASAAR: 1. Geo. Small island in the KORACHANI colony of TAVVADRA, south of the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED island of IRREDIVIVA. It maintains a small settlement that goes by the same name where researchers can stop before expeditions into the tainted island.

2. Set. Small settlement on the above island in the Korachani colony of TAVVADRA, where researchers can stop before expeditions into the tainted island (Pop. c. 2,000).

SEBBADDI: Rvr. River in the west of KREM, flowing for 750-miles from sources in the south of the ARGENT Mountains, before emptying in the IAPETAN SEA, where it forms the delta of SHAM.

SEBBER: Lak. Artificial lake along the course of the river SEBRENNA, in the north of ABATTUR. The lake serves as a reservoir behind a dam that was erected outside the city of ALEISAR in 3820 RM.

SEBDRA: His. Ntn. Successor state of SARASHAN in the north of the PORPHYRI PENINSULA that emerged in c. 1000 RM, following centuries of anarchy. It faltered after the SCION TELEANYARA APEXEIDE attacked it in 1590 RM, destroying its capital, leading it to fracture. See Vol III: Extinct States.

SEBEHOKH: Set. Settlement in the c of the nation of DURCHAA⁽¹⁾, just over 55-miles west of the capital. It is known for its sheep and their thick wool, which is used to make clothing adapted to the climate (Pop. c. 6,000).

SEBEREN: Set. Coastal city in the west of LYRIDIA DHAI, in the territory of TERARA. It is located along the RED ROUTE, where it fulfils a support role, providing provisions and food to those travelling the road (Pop. c. 16,900).

SEBESHAT: Set. Settlement in the c south of BANT, in the CARCHEMISHI
PENINSULA^(1.), in the east of SAMMAEA, guarding the entrance to the lagoon of TIDDIN (Pop. c. 3,900).

SEBDRA: Set. City in the south of SERROK. For much of the year, the city finds itself surrounded by the burgeoning waters of the river BEREKODRA, which swell with rain and melt waters, causing it to spill over its banks (Pop. c. 36,000).

SEBHET: Set. Coastal city in the far south east of KHAMID, on the headland of KHARR. It is known for its ancient tiered lighthouse (Pop. c. 16,000).

SEBRAD: Set. Settlement in the c of the tribe of EATAN, in the c of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 5,000).

SEBRANT: Set. Small city in the region of MEMBARRA in the c east of THE SURRACH (Pop. c. 15,200).

SEBRASSA: Ind. Set. Mining settlement in the south west of the KORACHANI colony of CRASSULA, in the far north east of MENISCEA. It is a major producer of gold in the region (Pop. c. 10,000).

SEBRENNA: Rvr. River in the north east of ABATTUR, flowing south west from sources in the CABIENAN Highlands, before meeting the coast at the SEA OF GEAUA.

SEBROT: Rui. Abandoned settlement in the west of AETHIOS, in what is now the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region known as the BLEEDING PLAINS. It was abandoned in c. 2200 RM after the aforementioned expanded beyond its borders.

SEBUND: Geo. Large island-chain between HAUTIA and the STRAIT OF
SAOR. It is home to an independent city-state by the name of LALAUN.

SEBURAN: Set. Fortified settlement in the c north of MHAROKK, north of the SOLON HIGHLANDS. It is a centre of the region's military forces (Pop. c. 9,000).

SEBURAN NU: Geo. Pass in the c of MHAROKK crossing the eastern SOLON HIGHLANDS.

SECHENGALA II: (B. 3967 RM) present RANASHA of VIRAHAN.

SECOND AGE OF MORTAL LIFE: Also 'the Second Age'. In the mythology and ancient history of ELYDEN, a period of time characterised by the spread of the MORTAL PEOPLES across Elyden, and the DEMIURGES being forced into positions of leadership of the mortals.

Of note was the construction of the fabled BRIDGE OF ETERNITIES, which ended with the Demiurges punished and the mortal tribes scattered across Elyden, the singular tongue they had spoken in until then sundered, fragmenting them and bringing about fear and suspicion amongst them.

This is also the age in which the Demiurges taught the mortals the secrets of FIRMAMENTISM, and ATRAMENTISM, beginning a long-standing tradition in SHAPING across Elyden that persists to this day. See Vol IV: the Mythologia Elyden.

SECOND GREAT COUNCIL OF THE PLAINSLEAGUE, the: Mil.

Soc. Second gathering of the PLAINSLEAGUE that convened in the southern reaches of the SWORD HILLS in south eastern TEMUJA in 4007 RM. It also included various envoys from the CENTRAL LLACHATULI ALLIANCE, who together discussed the growing threat of war from the west.

SECOND SIEGE OF ARGEA, the: see ARGEA, SIEGE OF.

SECOND VICTORY SQUARE, the: Arc. Large square in the south of KHADON, often the site of festivals and other celebrations. The square is named after the KORACHANI victory in VAALK, the second nation conquered by the empire.

SECOND WAR OF FAITH: see WAR OF FAITH, SECOND.

SECT OF REJHELLIAN OBSERVANCE: see REJHELLIAN OBSERVANCE, SECT OF.

SECT OF SILENCE: Rel. Org. A religious sect in RAONGEN⁽²⁾ whose members worship the GOD WHO SPEAKS. Unlike the majority of the worshippers of this deity, they try to ignore the visions and DREAMS that many people experience, and instead seek to empty their minds of thought and memory so that their bodies may be adequate vessels for the whisperings of the GOD WHO SPEAKS. They are willingly mute and communicate little with each other, using simple hand gestures when they need to.

SECT OF THE VOID: Rel. Religion that appeared in Io in 367 RM and later spreading to SALOROC. After the EXARCH'S betrayal of Io and the arrival of the KORACHANI EMPIRE there 212 RM, worshippers of THE VOID were hunted down by the ICONOCLASTS^(1.); a costly, bloody practice that by c. 340 RM had become such a drain on resources that it was eventually corrupted into a sect of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE that became known as the Sect of the Void, becoming officially recognised in 367 RM, with the building of a great cathedral on the site of the TEMPLE OF RENOUNCEMENT. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

SECT HOUSE: Rel. Str. Monasteries and convents within the KORACHANI

EMPIRE, occupied by the SECTARIAN caste of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE.

SECTARIAN: Rel. Rnk. Commonly referred to as brothers and sisters, sectarians are the lowest initiated members of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE.

Though not ordained members of the clergy, sectarians fulfil an important role within the religious culture of KORACHAN. They live frugal lives and devote themselves to the church and its tenets, helping the people of the empire in what way they can. Many sisters are nurses and midwives, for instance, and many brothers and monks are responsible for collecting and preserving knowledge from the far corners of the empire. They live in SECT HOUSES – convents and monasteries, either isolated in the wilderness, or close to parishes with which they are affiliated.

SECTS OF SYNCHTHONITH: Rel. See SYNCHTHONITH, CULTS OF.

SECULAR DISSOLUTION: Pol. His. Series of events culminating in 1393 RM where growing secularism in SARASTRO and VENTHIR was finally abolished, granting more power to the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE and its regional POTENTATES, bringing the nations in line with the rest of the KORACHANI EMPIRE.

SECULAR EMIRATES OF LIMOTH, the: His. Pol. Org. The present government of LIMOTH^(1.), which is a federal state made up of five separate federal emirates, each of which is ruled by a hereditary EMIR^(4.), who together form the electoral college from which the SUPREME LEADER is elected. The Five states are DEITHO^(1.), LIMOTH^(2.), NIMALO^(1.), OTHOTEL^(1.), and UKOLIST.

The old PLUTOCRATIC REPUBLIC OF LIMOTH had faltered due to the pressures of near single-handedly having to defend the western coast of the SEA OF MYMEREA from UGURIITI pirates and SLAVERS following the withdrawal of TETHYSIA from MYMEREAN ACCORDS in 3523 RM.

Members of the Republic worked to undermine the collective, resulting in a handful of members gaining more power, which was handed to a supreme leader in 3573 RM, with his lieutenants being granted the title of Emirs and control of clearly defined territories. The Present Supreme Leader of the Secular Emirates is DEOTOTH MUAKKAR.

SECULAR REPUBLICAN EMPIRE OF PARTHIS: Pol. The government of PARTHIS since 3701 RM, after the WHITE LEAGUE, which forcibly took control of Parthis in 3406 RM failed and was ousted. The republic was formed by the White League in 3465 RM to govern Parthisan territories on the League's behalf. By c. 3670 RM it had grown in power, gaining a massive following, which pressured the White League to reform various laws, which it refused to do. Years of tension led to the eventual ousting of the White League from TETHRA in 3701 RM.

SED QUIA: Rel. Str. Isolated monastery in the c of SARASTRO, west of the KRAONA badlands. It is home to an extreme order of monks known as the SODALITY OF THE SOUL'S APERTURE, who practice self-trepanation in honour of KING SATHEP.

SEDA: Set. Settlement in the c of \underline{AZAZEM} . It is known for its coal mining (Pop. c. 6,800).

SEDALLIA: Dem. 'Sedallian'. Ntn. Nation in the north west of WESTERN MENISCEA, north of the SEA OF AKRY. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

SEDDHEN: 1. Set. City in the east of AHRISHEN, forming part of the GREAT ROAD – the sole major land trade-route linking western Ahrishen with the east, and VIRAHAN beyond. It is also the main city along the Seddheni canal⁽²⁾, operating its largest step lock (Pop. c. 38,000).

2. Rvr. Canal in the east of AHRISHEN, forming part of the AHRISHENI WATERWAYS, linking the river ARESH^(2.) in the north with lake GALENDA in the south. It is around 24-miles long and contains no less than 17 major locks.

SEDEM MENHIRS, the: Int. Rui. His. Six singular menhirs in 100-mile area on a level plateau along the midspan of the ARATHAMMOS Mountains in the north east of OBLEVIS. The menhirs are each around 15-ft. high and are of a circular cross-section that bulges before gently tapering towards the top, where they end in a concave depression that appears less weathered than the rest of the structures, indicating that the depressions once held something. Theories as to what the menhirs' purpose once was vary greatly and there are no commonly-accepted hypotheses.

Locally, the menhirs each have their own name and have been used for centuries as waymarkers for the pass east into BADTHIS.

SEDISIA: Dem. 'Sedisian'. Ntn. Independent nation located to the south west of LLACHATUL, between two insular nations – the tyranny of OTINTH in the west and the Republic of GNOTH in the east. Situated in a temperate climate and possessing rolling farmlands that have been cultivated over millennia of interference by mortals, the once dense forests of the area are no more – having been replaced with thousands of square miles of pasture and fields. A far cry from the near desolate expanse around the INNER SEA.

The empire of Sedisia was founded in 1985 RM, following the cultural growth of the city-state of HAII within the expansive theocracy of VETHRANDA. Its influence had grown over the past hundred years, allowing it to absorb various cities and territories, increasing its political strength until in 1911 RM it overthrew the theocracy within its territories, establishing its own government. Over seven decades later it would declare full political independence from Vethranda, forming the empire of Sedisia, which would go on to expand over the next centuries to the Gnothi border, annexing roughly half of Vethrandan territories.

Despite this annexation, Sedisia is today the only major territory in which the CHAINED GOD, which originated in Vethranda, is worshipped. Sedisia is famed for its plum wine, which is a cheap alcohol that is drunk across the south of Llachatul and the north of SAMMAEA, though it is also a major producer of raw UMBRA, exporting it as well as large volumes of food, much of which goes across the GATE OF EREBETH to the east.

Of note is the region of ATILIPHO, which is heavy in deep umbra reserves and exists at the border with Otinth. It has been empty since the expulsion of the KORACHANI colony of OHDURTAR from the area in 2641

RM. Both Sedisia and Otinth have claimed this area as their own since then, leading to it being contested. As part of each nation's claim to the land, the smaller area of Arrakin must also remain unclaimed, and the borders of both it and Atilipho are heavily fortified, and the political climate between both remains tense to this day. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

SEDEN: Set. Settlement in the north of THUMAL. Though small, it is a vital trade-link between Thumal and the neighbouring MULL CITY-STATES, and maintains a well-guarded trade route to the north (Pop. c. 6,300).

SEDNA: Geo. Island off the north western coast of CECOPHELA on which is built the COLOSSUS OF HERCOLOBA.

SEDUBRO: Set. Small coastal city in the north of GIBEAH (Pop. c. 15,000).
SEDDHEN: Set. Settlement in the c east of AHRISHEN, along the course of the river ARESH^(2.) (Pop. c. 38,000).

SEDEA: Sea. Small bay to the west of the SEA OF NUTHEN, forming the border between eastern VAALK and north western MHAROKK. It's waters are tainted by the nearby MEKENA AKRA, an ATRAMENTAL FEATURE found just to its west.

SEDOS: 1: Geo. Flat savannah in the SHEDAMMA region in HOGGOTHA ISZ, in SOUTHERN SAMMAEA.

2. Set. City in the far west of KORACHAN, a few miles east of the border with AZAZEM. The city forms part of THE RED ROUTE, linking Korachan with Azazem and was home to the explorer LYLEUS, who explored the south of the SAMMAEA continent (Pop. c. 69,000).

SEED: Pol. Name given to dynastic ruling families in VÂRR under the rule of the REGENT-KINGS (3791 RM – present). They are descended from the HIEROGOTHS, and are respected members of society there.

SEED OF CREATION: Myt. The singular mote of matter that, in the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN, was the idea from which THE SHAPER woke. See Vol IV: the Mythologia Elyden.

SEED, TEMPLE OF THE: Leg. Myr. Rel. Rui. Ancient FIFTH AGE temple built by the PHILOSOPHER-KINGS of THE PARRIA atop the spot they claimed the HUMAN seeds had been placed. Ownership and usage of the temple caused great friction amongst the coalition of the Parria, which eventually collapsed in c. 100 RM. The temple was allowed to fall into ruin, and its location has since been lost.

SEEDBORN, the: also 'Sicthain'. Myt. Mor. Common name within CENTRAL LLACHATUL and particularly in the KORACHANI EMPIRE for the Two-and-Twenty MORTAL PEOPLES, though few know the origin of the name. The name is in fact derived from their creation story from the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN, in which it is said that two-and-twenty pods of seven seeds each were sown by THE SHAPER, from which were eventually born the mortal peoples, each pod of which was beholden to one of the DEMIURGES.

The plan was for them to be IMMORTAL^(1.) beings that would inherit a perfect world, but the hubris of the Demiurges caused them to germinate before them time, becoming the imperfect mortals instead.

They are often compared and contrasted with the so-called GODSBORN
- the beings directly created by the Demiurges, such as the AIKLAHS and EELYOUHNS. The two disparate people as said to have lashed in a great war in mythic ages, known in contemporary texts as the CHILDREN'S WAR. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life: Sicthain.

SEEING ENGINE: also 'seeing pool. Mys. Tec. Technarcane engines that are utilised to varying degrees throughout the industrialised world (including the SOCIALIST REPUBLIC OF ALMAGEST, the KORACHANI EMPIRE, the SECULAR REPUBLIC OF PARTHIS, and the REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO) that allow communication across large distances, made possible through the actions of a SHAPER, typically a LARVA, interred within the engine.

While CLAIRAUDIENCE and CLAIRVOYANCE are relatively common uses methods of communicating at a distance through shaping, the use of a seeing engine can allow third parties (specifically non-shapers) to see at a great distance, through the actions of a shaper. This is made possible through the use of OCCLUSIONS and archaic technarcana that project what the shaper sees into a pool made up of an ATRAMENTALLY-sensitive be very stressful and is prolonged marriage to the engines can lead to brain damage and in some cases, death.

The most powerful known seeing engine is the tower of PROCULARACH in DEOCHAN, KORACHAN.

SEEKERS: Mil. Rnk. A militant rank within the AVÉNETHI ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION, forming the backbone of the Order and the bulk of most WITCH CRUSADES and other forays outside the borders of the KORACHANI EMPIRE. They are and well-trained in identifying and combatting FIRMAMENTAL SHAPERS, though few amongst their numbers are shapers themselves (shapers within the order are usually reserved for more elite roles, such as the SENTINELS). Their counterparts in hunting for WITCHES within the borders of the empire are the WATCHERS.

SEEKERS OF THE PARAGON, the: Int. Oth. Fringe group of IMPERIAL INTELLIGENTSIA who became obsessed with, for want of a better term, engineering the birth of a bespoke otherworlder.

Forming in c. 3960 RM in BAAYN, LAASKHA, they called themselves the Seekers of the Paragon, the group originated as a dozen-or-so individuals whose immediate purpose was to educate themselves in various aspects of life – the sciences, philosophy, psychology, ATRAMENTOLOGY and FIRMAMENTOLOGY, amongst others – with the ultimate goal of sacrificing themselves at the same time in a ritual in which they hoped their spirits would ascend to the OTHERWORLD as one, leading eventually to the birth of a superlative otherworlder that would, hopefully, possess their collective knowledge.

Though relatively secretive, the group gained a dedicated following, and by c. 3970 RM they had around 50 fully-fledged members who were indoctrinated with their full plan and who were willing to sacrifice themselves to the final goal. Over the next two decades they had a TECHNARCANE engine constructed that would marry their spirits upon their eventual deaths. Meanwhile, the Seekers of the Paragon continued studying, taking as much care of their bodies as they did their minds. They learnt the secrets of shaping – a vital step in the completion of their ultimate goal – and in 3993 RM were successful, with all 99 members – by then amongst the most learned members of Laaskhan high-society – dying at the same moment in a massed suicide.

SEEKERS OF THE PRAXIS: also 'Seekers'. Voc. Rnk. Members of the ORDER OF THE PRAXIS in the south east of MENISCEA. They are philanthropists, travelling across major trade routes and thoroughfares, aiding those in need. They are often accompanied by martial kin from the order, known as VYRAJIN, who protect the seekers in their travels.

SEEKERS OF THE STONE: also 'Seekers'. His. Org. Members of the semi-religious order known as the ORDER OF THE STONE, that rose in ASSEER (present-day ESHIR^(2,)) in c. 2200 RM, following the construction of a monastery on the island of GEMARIS in 2189 RM, whose members were dedicated to searching for the powerful artefact known as the SABRIYAN STONE – a GODSTONE of great power that had dominated local politics and culture for centuries, until its loss in 2175 RM with the assassination of the regions' GOD-KING).

Originally known as Seekers of the Stone, these individuals took it upon themselves to search far and wide for the Stone. Following a string of false accusations and hostilities, the order became distrusted. Many fled settled lands, spending their days following up on clues and hearsay whilst helping to maintain order in the hinterlands. This helped to restore the Order's reputation, and with it, that of the Seekers, who became welcomed one more in most settlements. By c. 2380 RM the Order had established chapters in most major cities, with the Seekers bringing order and helping to maintain safe relations between them. They established a stronghold in JIRRA in c. 2310 RM, allowing them to secure the north against the growing threat of organised crime. In 2379 RM they secured the city of ANAFA, allowing the Order of the Stone to re-establish order around Asseer, and the Seekers brought stability to the old trade routes once more.

The establishment of a formal republic in 2282 RM saw the Seekers growing more distant from the Order of the Stone and by c. 2300 RM the group's members were redrafted into two separate entities – a more numerous policing force, which retained the name of the order; and the Seekers, who were far smaller in number and became closer to the church of the ASSEERI PANTHEON. Over the next century the Seekers lost what little organisation they had retained, becoming individuals, often of opposing ideologies, united only by their supposed search for the Sabriyan Stone

In 2191 RM, it was made legal for Seekers to search people's properties if they had reason to suspect the stone might be there, leading to years of abuse, with people being robbed and persecuted with no result. This period ended in 3202 RM, with the formal disbanding of the Seekers of the Stone, and the organised church of the Asseeri Pantheon being dissolved.

The Sabriyan Stone was discovered, quite by chance, the next year, by an ATRAMENTIST who'd inherited a small fortress from an ancestor. He used it to subjugate part of Eshir, killing many in the process. He was eventually brought to justice and the Stone was recovered and hidden.

The Seekers blamed themselves for the needless loss of life and punished themselves for failing to find the Stone themselves. Many left Eshir on a penance quest that took them across WESTERN SAMMAEA, where many became mercenaries, living on donations and alms, finding quests to undertake and people to help. They retained the name Seekers, though operated as individuals or isolated bands with little contact with one another. Others remained in Eshir, where they became servants of the temples, atoning for their mistakes. Following this, the Order of Seekers was effectively defunct, with no new members taking on the mantle, though mercenary companies still survive bearing the name or corrupted versions of it, though it is unlikely that most have any knowledge of the long history of their order.

SEELAH, THE BUTTERFLY: Mys. Rel. In TEMUJAN SPIRITUALISM, the TUTELARY SPIRIT of skies and weather.

SEEKERS, the: see ONOCHREDEN.

SEER: 1. Also 'farsight'. Sup. Rnk. Common vernacular used throughout

ELYDEN in reference to AUGURS, prophets and fortune-tellers, as well as

CLAIRAUDIENCE and CLAIRVOYANCE. In KORACHAN, the MINASTERIA (2.) of Farsight is located in the city of ALAAN, in LAASKHA.

2. Sup. Rnk. In the court of the CRYSTAL PALACE of DUARIAHAHN,

TEMUJA, a caste of SHAPERS entrusted to keeping official meetings

(particularly councils of the PLAINSLEAGUE) free of tampering through shaping.

3. Atr. Rnk. Org. Rank within the GRIGORIAN ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION. They are SHAPERS, usually PROGNOSTICARIIN (diviners) or PROCULIN (farseers), answering to the OVERSEERS of their Order and are responsible for the bulk of surveillance work carried out by the Order.

SEER, CULT OF THE: Rel. Religion common in the city of ALRON in the SIX CITIES region in THE SURRACH. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

SEER, the: Mys. In eastern mysticism, one of four figures, alongside THE AVATAR, THE HERALD, and THE SENTINEL, that form part of an eschatological myth that is said to bring about the end of the FIFTH AGE.

SEERE: Set. City in the c west of $\underline{GREST}^{(1.)}$ in the island-continent of $\underline{BROR}^{(1.)}$ (Pop. unknown).

SEGARRAN RITUALS, the: Int. Myt. Sup. His. Two great ATRAMENTAL rituals that were performed by the ruler of SARASTRO, SATHEP THE RISEN in 3705 RM during the WAR OF SUNDERING, ultimately leading to his victory over the KORACHANI EMPIRE.

At that time Sarastro was facing multiple enemies on various fronts — VENTHIR in the north, whose troops were amongst the most devout and fanatical in the entire conflict; and Korachan in the north and west, whose fleet effectively controlled the INNER SEA and whose STEEL LEGIONS were proving devastating in ground engagements. Its more numerous SHAPER corps and heavier engines of war were slowly grinding down the dissidents, despite their more numerous forces and more skilled shapers who had been studying under Sathep for years.

Lands gained throughout two years of conflict were slowly being lost, disease was spreading across its cities and morale was waning, threatening to end the war from within Sarastroan cities without Korachan even needing to land the killing blow.

Nearing desperation, Sathep decided that ancient magicks would do what modern technology could not. He left the running of the nation to his OVERCOUNCIL, and matters of warfare to sycophantic generals while he researched ways to use the GODSTONE he had retrieved from the fortress of NIKAN earlier in the war. He delved deep into archaic PLAGI texts and the teachings of the LEDGER ARCANA, eventually devising a ritual the consequences of which would make even the largest ever ATRAMENTAL BOMB detonation at the time look insignificant by comparison.

He formed a CHOIR of 144 LICHKIN monks and interred them in a complex TECHNARCANE engine in the centre of which was the godstone. Through their combined efforts and the powerful magnification to his own considerable skills Sathep was able to find a suitable target – in this case, the city of CORYBANT, which he chose for its relative proximity to ARGEA – which he attacked with all his magickal might. Intended as an experiment to prove the effectiveness of the venture, the attack was far more devastating that even he could have foreseen. The city was annihilated in an explosion that sucked the light for a hundred miles around, turning day into a sickly twilight. When light eventually returned, the city had been replaced with a crater and almost all its 200,000 people dead. All 144 lichkin were dead, their hollow bodies charred into ash, and Sathep himself was severely weakened, his arms blackened by their contact with the engine.

The event was enough to stop the fighting in Venthir for a day, and Sarastroan propaganda was quick to inform Khadon that this was just a taste of what they were capable of. In Korachan, THE COUNCIL OF SEVEN were forced to contemplate the might of Sathep's domains, but ultimately called his bluff, believing that whatever had caused the explosion had been a one-off.

Forced to prove that the ritual could be replicated, Sathep began working on a new ritual. His forces recruited more lichkin from across Sarastro, almost exhausting their ranks within the empire, testing them for aptitude, before he began another ritual that took place 7-days later, on the 17th of ASHTALEN, this time targeting TARATI(^{2.)}. The effects of this second attack are not as pronounced – the city being farther away and Sathep himself being wounded by the first attack – but it is powerful enough to topple many buildings and leave thousands dead and even more wounded.

Sarastro was quick to send envoys to Khadon. The Seven were not ready to lose half the empire in the absence of Malichar and, despite the protests of imperial generals and advisors, who did not know the full capabilities or nature of the weapon that had been used, they refused the envoys an audience, saying that the weapon changed nothing. However, the seeds of doubt had been sown and, perhaps for the first time in the war, they were fearful of losing.

The two attacks were however enough to cause QUEEN HETEPHERES to reconsider her position in and she withdrew her forces from Sarastro, but did not surrender. This hampered the Korachani strategy over the next weeks

The technarcane engine used to power the ritual was later destroyed by Korachani forces, and Sathep was unable to replicate the ritual in his weakened state. Indeed, he had to delegate to the duties of supreme commander to his generals who put every last resource available to Sarastro into the war in the hopes of winning, a gambit that eventually paid off.

SEGATAYA: Geo. GNOTHI name for the coastal region north of the SEA OF MARDEN. The area stretches south west from the THABATIAN peninsula for around 230-miles to the island of ALASAEI and is noted for its wind-worn limestone cliffs that stand some 30 – 40-ft. above today's sea-level.

SEGMIN: Mil. Rnk. City militia in the REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO.

They emerged in c. 1350 RM as well-trained flintlock-armed guards in the nation of SARASTRO, and they spread from there. Though their armament has changed over the years, the name persisted and became more widespread after the SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE, as SATHEP THE RISEN promoted use of the SARASTROAN tongue over KORACHANI.

Today the segmin form the backbone of law-enforcement in the LOW-EMPIRE, and they can be found throughout its territories, from Sarastro itself, to its vassals and colonies. They are well-trained, though foreign commentators claim that they are not equipped in a manner to match, perhaps due to the Low-empire being stretched thin.

Segmin are granted citizenship after 5-years of service and upon retiring they are also granted land – those without a clean record are denied the latter, which detracts from corruption within the force.

SEGRAN: Ind. Set. Small city in the c of PNESSA. Its main industry is iron mining (Pop. c. 18,000).

SEGUSIANA AMANTA: (B. 3957 RM) Pol. Present LORD-CONSTELLAR of KOLCHIS. She is a stern figure, who took control in a time of increased instability with ALMAGEST.

SEHATT: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the east of SALOROC^(1.), overlooking the border with IO.

SEHER: Soc. Rnk. Caste of dawn callers based in the city of $\underline{\text{TITHENA}}$ in the nation of $\underline{\text{BROR}}^{(2.)}$.

SEHSPAR: Rui. Ancient KARTHAN necropolis, where human, DVERG, VAPULA, SHIE and KERATIN bodies were interred. The necropolis is believed to date to c. -3000 RM, where it was used over many centuries by the Karthan people.

SEHUTH: also 'C'huth', 1. Lak. Lake in the north east of MALAN. Acting as a border between the HENDECARCHIES of AONIA, CYRENIA and HATON. The city of SAHIOX lies along its western shore.

2. Rel. Str. Temple complex on a peninsula in the east of the above lake (1.) in the north east of the HENDECARCHY of AONIA.

SEIATHIA: For. Forest in the c-south east of OPHIUSSA. It was originally far-more expansive, ranging from the plains of PERISTULLA in the west, all the way to the BAY OF GOSTAKIS in the east, though it has slowly dwindled in size over the past millennium. What remains is the heart of the old virgin woodland, though even this is at risk of climate change and industry.

SEIRE: Pol. Set. Capital of the nation of EMENRIST in the east of the island-continent of BROR⁽¹⁾. It sits at the fork where the river PAFRAN meets it parent, the river HEMAH, and is a crossroads of trade and culture from across Emenrist (Pop. c. 217,300).

SEISM OF ASMARATH: His. Geo. Major earthquake that shook the south west of TISARA in 3201 RM, levelling dozens of settlements, including the major city of ASMARATH, after which the event was named. Following the earthquake thousands of people abandoned their ruined homes, moving north to other regions that had not been as affected. The region of Lhana was severely affected, and its many quarries and mines were destroyed, ultimately abandoned.

SEITH: Plr. 'seithin'. Mor. One of the original Two-and-Twenty MORTAL PEOPLES, and the children of the DEMIURGE NEITH⁽¹⁾, thought to have their origins in what are now the great FOREST KINGDOMS of MALAN. Their homeland is thought to have been a great plain on which the light of the IVORY MOON shone brightly, empowering them. Many scholars believe that they were antitheses of the KERATIN. They were short—standing no taller than 5', and were of pale pearlescent skin that glowed as though from within. They had long limbs and nimble hands and were thought to be adept climbers.

Contemporary THIRD AGE accounts claim they were beings of two worlds, trapped between the MATERIAL PLANE and the OTHERWORLD, being particularly sensitive to the fluctuations of the latter, with individuals having rudimentary abilities similar to those of ANIMISTS, while those who trained in the field became masters of the art, surpassing the skills of any other mortal SHAPER. Little else is known of them, and they are thought to have died out by the FADING of the FOURTH AGE, though rumours persist that some survive deep in Malan to this day. Indeed, the pale figures that can be seen praying near the RUBRIC OF THE FALLEN in the HENDECARCHY of LONAR are likened to ancient seithin, though there is little proof of this. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life: Sicthain.

SEITH ATALA: Rui. Ancient ruins located in the north west of the HENDECARCHY of MYEIN, in the eastern face of the KARPAROS Mountains in MALAN. They are believed to date back to the early THIRD AGE, and are often attributed to SEITHIN⁽²⁾, where they are thought to have been a lunar observatory-temples designed to track the movements of the IVORY MOON SIELLA. Though they are now mostly buried, their relative condition remains testament to the skill of their craftsmen. Malani mystics believe the topography during the time of the temples was different, and that they stood out along the white plains of the towering monuments to the grace of Siella.

SEITHAL: Dem. 'Seithalan'. His. Ntn. Ancient mortal empire descended from the original tribe of the DEMIURGE NEITH^(1.). Its descendant state was NAHORIA, which later gave way to the FOREST KINGDOMS of MALAN.

SEKA: Rvr. River in the north east of HARAPPA⁽³⁾, flowing for 70-miles from sources in the Harappan⁽¹⁾ Mountains before meeting its parents, rivers TENE and TOTHA.

SEKASSAN: Rui. Ancient island fort in the west of KORACHAN. Today it is ruined, perched atop a coastal hill, overlooking the surrounding lands. It once protected costal trade from piracy, and its stone docks and breakwater are still visible, now a few miles from the sea.

It was restored in c. 3800 RM and used as a base for a small PATRICIAN HOUSE, though was abandoned around 40-years ago, and has been allowed to decay since then.

SEKAT: Set. Small city in the north eastern massifs of the HARAPPAN⁽¹⁾ Mountains, in the c east of HARAPPA(3) (Pop. c. 18,000).

SEKEL: Set. City in the c of KHAMID, along the course of the river ARAX (Pop. c. 32,500).

SEKHEM: Sea. Sea to the far north east of the SEA OF APHOTIS, bordering the west of ALMAGEST and the south of KOLCHIS. The sea is diminishing due to the waning of ELYDEN'S seas, and scholars postulate that it will be cut off from large bodies of water entirely, becoming a large lake decades or centuries in the future.

To counteract this waning the Almagesti government embarked on the near-impossible task of damming the sea, resulting in the construction of the $\underline{\mathsf{DAMOFST.SIMEOL}}^{(1)}$ in 3758 RM.

SEKKI: Rel. Obj. Lead stamps commonly used is burial rituals around the ETAGIRIAN REGION, that are used to brand the skin of the dead. Stamps can take various forms, each symbolising a trait the person was known for, and are buried with them after the ritual is completed. The traits embodied by the stamps can represent both good and bad traits, and are treated neutrally by those carrying out the ritual. The purpose of the ritual is so the SPIRIT (1.) of the deceased will be known in the afterlife as it was to MORTALS during its life.

SEKNATTU: Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTAL marshlands in the far east of KHARKHARADONTIS, known for the gigantic cannibalistic worms that live there. The marshes waters are oily and thick and what flora that lives there is twisted and foul.

SEKPRA: Sct. Largest permanent TIKBALA settlement in the IPPARAN hills, in the east of LYRIDIA (Pop. c. 1,600).

SEKUIA: Geo. Empty plains in the south of the BARRIER LANDS, to the north of the VANNAKORDOR Mountains. It is known for its ruby deposits and is home to various quarries and mines.

SELAHIM: Dem 'Sclahim'. His. Ntn. Extinct FIFTH AGE empire in the north west of SAMMAEA, centred around the inland portion of what is now THE SURRACH. It emerged in c. 1830 RM from the void left by the collapse of empire of CHEGRINT in c. 1200 RM, occupying most of what is today the east and south western lands of the Surrach. It was once known for its great harbours to the south west and its great eastern caravanserais, some of which remain to this day, albeit much-altered, and the great traderoutes that linked the two – which partially survive in the IVORY ROAD.

The empire lasted until 2761 RM, when the suicide of its ruler, Drakugh, left it rudderless, following a series of devastating earthquakes and volcanic eruptions in the THISATHON Mountains 2-years earlier. The thirteen Ankhs, his closest confidantes, could not elect a leader and their squabbles and power grabbing rapidly descended into a civil war which gripped the region for 13 years, at the end of which the land was divided between the 7 surviving Ankhs and the coalitions of city-states that had formed during the war. A state of uneasy truce emerged, though political backstabbing remained common, leaving borders in a state of constant flux and the emergence of new states commonplace for some time after the death of Drakugh.

Following this no one single region became dominant over any other for a significant amount of time. This eventually became the status quo for the region, which by c. 3000 RM had become known as SAVIUD. See Vol III: Extinct States.

- SELBIST: Set. Major city in the south east of NORTHERN SIMBARA, situated along the NACRE ROAD. It is one of the main strongholds of the NACRE LEAGUE, and is a base to its armies (Pop. c. 272,500).
- SELAHIMI: His. Lan. Now-extinct language of the mid FIFTH AGE nation of SELAHIM, that emerged from the earlier language of CHEGRINTISH. It was superseded by the later SAVIUDI. See Vol II: Languages.
- SELANA: Set. City in KANAATI (Pop. c. 42,000).
- SELANA VERKHUN: Geo. Highland plateau desert in the east of the tribal territories of KORIND in the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER.
- SELENITE: Ele. Crystalline form of gypsum that is relatively common in WESTERN MENISCEA and in smaller volumes in the rest of MENISCEA. It is most common in MIRALUL, NALARDIL, and OSSIEL.
 - It is mildly Firmamentally-active and is often used as a FOCUS^(2.) for SHAPERS, particularly animists, who claim that it helps them in ASTRALLY PROJECTING.
- SELEUIA: Set. Settlement in south western GNOTH, in the region of ALKAHEST, along the course of the river PURUSA. It is known for its iron and tin mines (Pop. c. 4,000).
- SELEUS: Mil. Str. Fortress in the south east of ALMAGEST, in the southernmost hills of the GAEFANG Mountains, overlooking lake ALTAHET and the border with THE OLD FOREST. Its rangers patrol the border, guarding it from wayward forces from the east.
- SELKIE: Sup. Mor. Corrupted degenerate form of MERILLS that lives along the western banks of the STRAIT OF SKAROS, particularly on the STRAIT OF ANEON. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life: Asicthain.
- SELLOH: Set. Small city in the region of GANGUA, in the c south west of THE SURRACH (Pop. c. 12,800).
- SELMAS: Set. Small city in the north of the tribe of ALLAKAT in the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. It is known for its open cast ADAMANTINE mines (Pop. c. 12,200).
- SELVAAN: Set. City in the east of XYRPHAAT. It is built on a historic location that is believed to have been one of the first areas of the cultural dominance of the VOLTUMNI people early in the FIFTH AGE (Pop. c. 48.000).
- SELVARSHI: Soc. Pol. PARTHISAN PATRICIAN HOUSE that in c. 3480 RM colonised the island of JIRIDUN (now OD MEGINNAS (1.)) alongside Houses of CAELMONT, TAELIS, TENDARI, and VALTARIS. Together, those Houses formed trade arrangements with the local government of Jiridun, marrying into each other and with local nobles to secure power. This allowed the Houses to settle the land, taking over overlooked industries that were of importance to Parthis.
 - In 3597 RM House Valtaris orchestrated a ruthless culling of its household, including House Selvarshi, where many ancillary parts of the House were either sent to Parthis or other far-flung corners of Elyden, effectively castrating them of power and denying the House the privilege of inheriting any of the holdings of the family. This was a damning act that earned the PATERFAMILIA of House Valtaris the enmity of House Selvarshi and the other Houses, and it is thought that he was responsible for many mysterious deaths and disappearances, but it ultimately paid off and by 3630 RM the family tree had been sheared down to size, consolidating the power amongst a handful of individuals, and ultimately serving a death knell to the House Selvarshi and the other Houses with which it had once been allied. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.
- SEMA: Set. Settlement in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of PALUS. The settlement is known for its limestone quarries (Pop. c. 4,000).
- SEMARAH: Rvr. River in the east of SARASTRO, flowing west for 475-miles from sources in the western KOROR, northern KHO INNOR, and southern JAELA Mountains before meeting its parent, the river SOLONA.
- SEMETH: Ind. Set. Small city in the c south of THETIS, in the PETEHAROTHIS region. It is a storied city with a proud history of metallurgy and manufacture, and it is famed in local history as being the location where the legendary SERPENT HELM was constructed, during the days of the Kingdom of MINTHA (Pop. c. 14,800).
- SEMENTINE: Geo. Plains in the c-south east of KARGAMA. BRIMSTONE deposits were found there early in the FIFTH AGE by various ELITAGRI cities culture. This brought great wealth and spurred industry in the area, and by c. -400 RM the cities of DROM, KIVAR, and PLYSIANE⁽¹⁾, had become powerful from the production and sale of brimstone across the SEA OF ORRIDA.

New deposits are found there to this day, though the ancient seams from over 4 millennia past have long-since been abandoned, and are now mostly collapsed and overgrown, with little trace of past industry to be seen there today. The largest quarries in the Sementine are located around the city of KYRASEA.

- SEMERSEQA: Set. Coastal city in the east of ARERAQTH, overlooking the SEA OF TULAN (Pop. c. 110,000).
- SEMINARIES OF SHAPING: Edu. Sup. Str. Informal colleges where SHAPERS can train, located in the BROKEN LANDS, under the auspices of the MINARET OF LIGHT in MENISCEA, though due to the fragmented nature of FIRMAMENTAL leadership in ELYDEN, many shapers go their whole lives without learning of the Seminaries, let alone visiting them. Other Seminaries exist outside of Meniscea, though the Seminaries of Shaping are the largest located in LLACHATUL.
 - The Seminaries offer tuition and hands-on training, leading up to a test, which shows a shaper which sphere they are most attuned to. Once a shaper passes their test they will typically return to their homeland, where they pass on their knowledge and serve their people.
- SEMIRA: Rui. Ancient bitumen mines that were a source of embalming materials and ship waterproofing in the VENATHI EMPIRE. Abandoned millennia ago, its ruin now lies in the north west of VENTHIR to the south of the HAMSHEN plains.
- SEMITRAT: Geo. Mountain-chain in the c of LLACHATUL, to the east of the STRAIT OF SKAROS, serving as a border between ATARAXIA in the north and AHKA in the south.
- SEMMARA OF TERARA: (B. 3948 RM) Pol. Current ruler of the republic of COTHON, and one of three rulers of the TRIPARTATE UNION OF LYRIDIA DHAI, alongside IHUMESH OF COTHON and BILLAL OF VEPAR.
- SEMPITERNA: Myt. Leg. In the mythologies of ELYDEN, one of the 7-first born VALTHAS (children of the DEMIURGE TALANTEHUT). In many NORTHERN SAMMAEAN myths Sempiterna escaped the fate of its kin and went on to achieve immortality, remaining now as a timeless observer of the mortal plane. It is said that those travelling alone may at times get a feeling of being watched; in Northern Sammaean legends, it is said that this is Sempiterna watching them. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.
- SEMPREN: Set. Settlement in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of ALAMUT (Pop. c. 2,800).
- SEMREAS: Set. 80,000 in the c of TISARA, along the course of the river ACIONNA (Pop. c. 65,000).
- SEMUDECH: Mil. Str. Fortress in the south of SARASTRO, guarding the SALT ROAD from banditry.
- SEMUT: Set. Small coastal city in the north east of BISBUT (Pop. c. 17,000).
- SEN: Rvr. River in the north east of ZHARIAH^(2.), flowing south east for 570-miles, before meeting its parent, the river HENIAH.
- SENAN: 1. Lak. Lake in the west of SARASTRO, along the course of the river SEMARAH.
 - 2. Rui. An ancient SAOSTANAN city taken by NATHI invaders in -407 RM. It was later abandoned and allowed to fall into ruin.
- 3. Set. Present-day settlement 8-miles east of the eponymous ruin, along the course of the river SEMARAH (Pop. c. 5,000).
- SENAYIT SHIWAN: (B. 3951 RM) Pol. Current ruler of BARATHEA^(1.), bearing the title of known as Lady-magnate.
- SEND MATOY: Set. City in the south west of IACIO (Pop. c. 30,000).
- SENDKA: Rel. JURRASI⁽²⁾ religion before the rise of the empire in its lands. Idol, originally an indigenous deity, its domains centred around martial prowess, dominance, egotism and fortitude, its centre of worship in the city of DOX.
 - It was assimilated by the Church of the Undying Machine in c. 415 420 RM following its conquest of Jurras in 403 RM, becoming a saint of the Undying Machine. Its dogma was further corrupted over time and adherence to Sendka's old doctrine, until c. 2100 RM worship Sendka remerged as a mystery cult, gaining popularity throughout the following centuries until it rivalled the Iron Deity in dominance in the region. In c. 2500 the empire tried toppling the religion, but it was too strong in the region. Instead, it allied itself with the highest members of the cult, where Sendka became a puppet to the empire. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

SENEROKH: Rel. Rui. Rock-cut tombs in the western-face of the ISURUS
Mountains in the far east of KHARKHARADONTIS, thought to date back to the FOURTH AGE.

SENESCENEA: 1. Sup. Geo. Dre. DREAMSCAPE in the north west of CYHLAGHARR, surrounding the eponymous city. The region is believed to surround the torpid corpse of an unlocated unnamed SCION, believed to be the offspring of the DEMIURGE NERGAAL. The terrain of Senescenea is characterised by its stickiness, and, in places, its tar-like substance. Though prolonged exposure to it is dangerous, the material, known as SENESCIN, is, when distilled and purified, a potent analgesic and coagulant. The most concentrated areas are mined by the OGHURS of Cyhlagharr, mostly using slave-labour.

2. Set. City in the heart of the above region, in the north west of CHYHLAGHARR, known for its senescin mines. The SENESCIN is purified in great manufactories outside the city, and sold to other cities in Chyhlagharr. Small amounts are sold at great price, largely to the KORACHANI EMPIRE, where it used in the creation of HAEMONCULI and other VAT-BORN creatures. The city exists solely to exploit this unique resource, and it has a vast slave-population that toils ceaselessly in the senescin industry (Pop. c. 48,000).

SENESCHAL: 1. Pol. Rnk. Originally political advisors in ALMAGEST, though since the abolition of its short-lived empire in 3475 RM, the republic councillors have gone by that name.

2. Mys. Sup. Voc. Trainers and instructors in the various MINASTERIA (2.) of SHAPING the KORACHANI EMPIRE and its old territories, including ALMAGEST and the REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO. The name is borrowed from the Almagesti title (1.) of the same name.

3. Soc. Rnk. AZAZEM is known for a particular tradition amongst its upper classes that remains unique amongst the KORACHANI EMPIRE. Upon coming of age many PATRICIANS and wealthy FREEMEN will leave their family's main residence and take up residence in a lesser estate, taking care of surrounding lands or holdings. They will then take on an individual to serve as a major-domo or wingman, more commonly known as a seneschal. In many cases the seneschal would be an accomplished individual, perhaps a doctor, accountant or a retired soldier, though they would traditionally be from a lower class to the noble that they serve. It is also common for the seneschal to be somewhat older than their charge.

In many cases, the noble and the seneschal (who was typically of the same sex as the noble), would become inseparable, becoming close platonic (or even romantic) partners, forming an inseparable bond, despite the class divide that exists between them. The name is derived from the Almagesti title^(1.) of the same name.

SENESCIN: Sup. Dre. Ele. Supranatural resource found in very limited quantities in some DREAMSCAPES across ELYDEN. It is most abundant in the SENESCENEA region in the north west of CYHLAGHARR, after which it is named.

In its natural state the substance is like black tar, and is produced naturally by chemical reactions of dream-ores on contact with the air. The substance is sticky to the touch and toxic, though if distilled and purified, is known to have hallucinogenic properties if ingested, and is also a mild analgesic and potent coagulant.

SENET: Pol. Soc. Bus. PATRICIAN HOUSE in the KORACHANI EMPIRE known for being a member of the ATROPI HOUSES. Its ancestral home was the city of VELEX, which was abandoned in c. 3200 RM following the continued decay of the region of ATROPHY. Today house Senet is based in the CAMASSIAN STRONGHOLD.

Its main role within the cooperative is the smooth pumping and shipment of DROSS across the empire and maintaining and repairing the pumping stations, pipelines and distribution centres. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

SENKA: Gam. Board game common to lands south east of the DARK SEA, including KHAMID, TZALLRACH and KREM. See Vol II: Games and Pastimes of Elyden.

SENMURU: Fau. Bird-like creatures native to the ARID TRIPTYCH, though rarely seen. They are one of the largest known birds fling creatures in ELYDEN, and commonly feed on goats and sheep, which they pluck with their large claws, and drop to rocky ground. They appear as gigantic birds of prey with a wingspan of around 30-ft. and a beakless snout with sharp teeth. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

SENNET: Set. Settlement in the south of RHINOCOLOURA. It is known for its production of Myrrh (Pop. c. 4,000).

SENSASH ALA: Rel. Str. Monastery in the south east of BASSORAH (2.).

SENTÉ: Set. Small fortified city in the south east of the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS (Pop. c. 14,800).

SENTINEL, the: Mys. Myt. His. In eastern mysticism, one of four figures, alongside THE HERALD, THE SEER and THE AVATAR, that form part of an eschatological myth that is said to bring about the end of the FIFTH AGE.

SENTINEL OF SHADOW, the: Rel. Rnk. The guardian of the tenet of SHADOW within the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, though as of its founding only the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR has held the title.

SENTINELS: Mil. Atr. Rnk. An elite militant rank within the AVÉNETHI ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION. Most Sentinels are ANAMNRIIN – SHAPERS capable of PSYCHOMETRY, allowing them to get information from an object or person through touch. They operate alone along the outermost borders of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, where they are everyigilant for signs of heathen activity, particularly the presence of FIRMAMENTAL shapers.

In times of war, they serve as leaders to small cadres of SEEKERS, penetrating deep into enemy lines far ahead of any other imperial presence, reporting their findings to the main armies and sowing discord whilst hunting for WITCHES. Individuals may also serve as scouts and trackers hunting for high-priority targets.

SENTINELS, the: Geo. Natural rock pillars off the north eastern coast of PARTHIS.

SENTINELS OF ARIMASPI: Org. An order base don't he island of ISEA, made up of those loyal to the DEMIURGE ARIMASPI, whose members guard lands sacred to him and prevent MORTALS from entering the dreamscape known as the EUANTHEKIB, whether it is by mistake or purposefully.

Some members are VAPULIM, though they are few in number, so more prominent are HUMAN members, as well as a smattering of other mortals. They have an affinity for the natural world and abhor the proliferation of industry and technology (particularly TECHNARCANA), decrying them as antithetical to the beliefs and desires of Arimaspi. Most distrust modern firearms and prefer bows and crossbows, or large brutal slashing weapons. Some members are SHAPERS, many of whom have an affinity for the natural SPHERES – being able to manipulate flora and fauna, for instance.

The order is based in the fortress of CHILAGRIA in the north west of IDRIIS, and is ruled by an assembly of seven senior members.

Elite agents of the order travel across Isea, visiting its cities and harbours, looking for those who have willingly entered the Euanthekib and whose bodies are changed, assassinating them and those who would spread word of the dreamscape to others.

SENTITIA: Set. Coastal settlement in the east of Zhariah^(2,) (Pop. c. 6,300).

SENTRY OF ARRATE NIOR, the: see ARRATE NIOR, SENTRY OF.

SENUA: Set. Major fortified city in the far east of LOEGRESS^(1.), close to the border with KOMMEA. Its people pride themselves on the city's ancient history, and it is believed to have been constantly inhabited since the FADING.

It was a major cultural centre in GALABRIA and, later, PRAETTANIA, and remained strong following the latter's collapse, becoming an ally of the warlord TORRVAN during his unification of the territories of ENAELLON⁽²⁾, GLYNNED⁽²⁾, and MOTTANIA⁽²⁾.

Today, it maintains links with Kommea and is home to various embassies and trade houses (Pop. c. 80,000).

SENUSET: Sct. Small city in the c of THETIS. The city appeared around a particularly well-preserved KHYTER using the rubble from an ancient FOURTH AGE ruin. Emeralds were found there in c. 2200 RM, and it has been a major emerald mine since then (Pop. c. 14,300).

SEOGHALA: Rvr. River in the north east of CHEIRA, flowing north east from sources in the LABR-AGHTUL Mountains, for 440-miles before meeting the BAY OF KHATOQ in the ROILING SEA.

SEPAHAUNAT: 1. Geo. Peninsula & archipelago off the north western-coast off SAMMAEA, forming a barrier between the SEA OF BATYAE in the west and the SEA OF ANIPTERRA in the east. The land is volcanically and geologically active and is renowned amongst explorers for its exotic appearance and the many cracks, vents, chemically-active lakes, geysers and lava flows, particularly along its western coastline. Earthquakes are also relatively common there.

The land is fertile and rich in both flora and fauna and its most dominant feature is the river NEPHILA, whose delta covers some 25,000 square-miles and is home to thousands of species of flora and fauna, as well a concentration of river settlements and industries of the Principality of Sepahaunat.

2. Also 'the Principality of Sepahaunat'. Dem. 'Sepahaunat'. Ntn. Nation located in idyllic climate in the north west of the continent of SAMMAEA, Sepahaunat is a relatively recent nation. It was founded in 3259 RM by Prince IQARHOT following just over a hundred years of relative peace following the reunification of TAZAYIL cities by the warlord SHEMAYAK in around 3130 RM.

Today Sepahaunat is a wealthy independent nation with a healthy economy. Ruled by Princess JEMMAHALA, the Principality is known for its rocky volcanic western coast, that stretches north to south for close to 1,000-miles; and the shallow waters off its eastern coast. Its people are expert mariners, favouring catamarans, and they are united in their worship of living-saints known as idolons, in the religion of SYBARR.

Its eastern borders are close to the fractured nation of ENITH, and its conscript armies are currently mobilising in the event that the civil conflict raging there spills over into Sepahaunat. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

SEPEIN: also 'the Domed City'. Set. Large city-state hidden in the deserts of central SAMMAEA, along the border between HOGGOTHA ISZ and AKANTHRA. The city has little to any contact with the outside world and is known to KORACHAN only through the depraved scribblings of a 23rd century explorer and scholar who sojourned in the lands, and most of her writings have since been discounted by contemporary scholars as the rambling of one driven wild by the harsh climate of the region.

Regardless, her writings spoke of an ancient dome of white concrete beneath which festered a city that thrived on its own decay and entropy. It was ruled by a triad of lich-kings and populated by a closed-population of perhaps 5,000 (at the time), all said to be descended from a group of seven individuals, who are regarded as flesh-saints. Every resident was made to choose one of the seven founders as a patron, who was considered to guard them. Their followers underwent ritual scarring of their own bodies, removing chunks of flesh and consuming them as a form of catechism. The eldest members of the city were grotesquely deformed, their bodies slowly being self-devoured. The more scarred and crippled one became, the more holy they were considered, becoming priests and holy men, often missing limbs and rendered near catatonic from pain and debilitating infections - all seen as gifts from the flesh-saints. All property belonged to the three lich-kings, themselves holy-men that transcended their own devoured mortal forms, said to be some form of OTHERWORLDER.

The city was linked to the outside world by dank tunnels, that also served as climate regulators, circulating air and excreting the city's waste, which festered in putrid swamps not far from the impenetrable dome. Since these accounts were written contact with the city was lost, and it is unknown if it even survives to this day (Pop. unknown).

SEPELITIA: Myt. Leg. Nm. Mythological hidden nation thought to lie in the depths of CARCERI, deep beneath the surface of CENTRAL LLACHATUL. Legends and rumours exist in various unrelated cultures across ELYDEN, particularly LLACHATUL, that speak of a nation of mortals that dwell deep beneath the surface within one of the great chambers of the Prison Carceri.

Though most scholars claim that these legends are just a conflation of the $\underline{ROPOHAII}$ that dwell beneath the $\underline{VARRACHON}$ and various local myths and legends, some believe that the nation of Sepelitia is a separate entity, and may be populated by various $\underline{MORTAL\ PEOPLES}$ (and the result of their unions over many generations) that are otherwise thought to be extinct aboveground.

The name Sepelitia is of KORACHANI root, and exists in various forms across most lands that are or were once under KORACHANI control, though different nations have different names for this mythical nation, including TAPHET in PARTHIS, and CATACHTHON in parts of NORTHERN SAMMAEA. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

SEPERATION, the: see also SUNDERED EARTH.

SEPHIAN: Sup. Rnk. Caste of SHAPERS native to ACTANORS (present-day AETHIOS) that appeared in c. 950 RM as a response to increasing ATRAMENTAL activity in the region. They were well-schooled and knowledgeable in the way the Atramenta manifests in Elyden, and specifically in the region surrounding their homeland. They were a policing force across Actanors, their duty to defend against Atramental corruption in all forms.

By c. 1175 they had evolved into a governing entity that oversaw the leadership of individual cities across the empire, acting as advisors to the ruling council. Over the next millennium they would gain more influence and would become the rulers of Actanors, but the arrival of the expatriated PATRICIAN ETHAND to Actanors in 2543 RM saw him opposing their rule. By the time of his founding of the ROYAL HOUSE OF ETHAND, the Sephians were no longer shapers and remained only as advisors, disappearing by c. 2750 RM.

From their ranks would emerge the $\underline{\text{NE'ARIM}}$, a more martial caste that would take over their classical policing duties, whilst eschewing their Atramental knowledge.

SEPHORIA: Rel. Str. Large idol in the north of STOLAS, depicting an anthropomorphic bird. It is believed that the idol is a depiction of the AL AKHI deity MERKABH. The shamen of the al akhi claim that the spirit of their deity visits the idol of Sephoria on nights when neither moon shines, and neither equinox nor solstice is in effect.

SEPT: 1. Dem. 'Septish'. Pol. Rulers of the ancient IROTHANI kingdoms of KATHAR BYAAT that once proliferated in what is now the east of SAMMAEA in the late THIRD AGE. Counted amongst the most powerful figures in the irothani culture, they were SCION-BORN, and close with their 'father', the DEMIURGE NYARLOTH, and many were scions born of unions between the Demiurge and other septs. Males practiced celibacy, devoting their lives to Nyarloth, and females ritually copulated with the Demiurge. This led to a bloodline that grew closer with Nyarloth with each passing generation, inheriting proportionately more and more of his traits over time. This practice ended many millennia ago, with the death of Nyarloth's' physical body and the interment of his spirit within the SOUL-ENGINE of MEHARRAAT, beneath the Septish city of PARYMESIA.

The Septs began as aides and clerics of the church of Nyarloth that arose in the wake of their father's deeds. They would go on to become TECHNOLOGISTS and clerics of the Demiurge, helping him construct the so-called Soul-Engine into which he planned to transfer his essence after succumbing to an ATRAMENTAL affliction of the body. The Demiurge RACHANAEL, who aided Nyarloth in the construction of the machine betrayed and killed Nyarloth upon its completion, hoping to take it for himself. The Septs retrieved the body as irothani troops pushed back Rachanael, denying him the Soul-Engine.

The Septs were able to complete the ritual of transmigration before Nyarloth died, transferring his essence, memories and thoughts to the Soul-Engine, leaving Nyarloth's body inert and rotting. Despite the success, the majority of the irothani turned to worship the discarded vessel that had been discarded by the Septs, coming to refer to it as THE HOST. The Septs urged them to revere the essence within the Soul-Engine instead of the shrivelled body but were branded as traitors by the increasingly fanatical irothani resulting in a civil war that toppled their kingdom.

Though the worshippers of the Host defeated the Septs, their own lands would soon also fragment. The Septs and irothani were almost wiped out, though enough of them remained to continue guarding the Soul-Engine. They remain there to this day, their bodies twisted from inbreeding, and the corruption of living for millennia such close proximity to their torpid god, though their minds remain strong even as the land around Parymesia, where the Soul-engine lies, slowly rots.

The nations of ANANTHUL, SABAISA and PORPHYR were populated by descendants of Septish exiles and immigrants, who mingled with indigenous humans and the remnants of the irothani, leading to the exotic appearance amongst the people of the PORPHYRI PENINSULA today, whose heads are slightly elongated and whose skin is pale, with a greyish tint.

- 2. Rel. Today the Septs remain in ANANTHUL, specifically in the settlement of $\underline{PARYMESIA}^{(4)}$, where they tend to the $\underline{SOUL\text{-}ENGINE}$ in which the spirit of the $\underline{DEMIURGE}$ $\underline{NYARLOTH}$ is interred.
- 3. Soc. Sup. Rnk. The oldest of shaping dynasties of the island-state of ARCHAEDON⁽²⁾ are referred to as septs, and many can trace their genealogies back centuries, possibly even to the founding council of the city of Archaedon⁽³⁾ in 3103 RM. They form the upper classes of Archaedoni society and are respected and feared by most, though despite the prestige that the great SHAPING septs carry, most members of the houses are little more than journeymen shapers, working in various industries and vocations.
- SEPTENTRIA: 1. Pol. Geo. One of the seven INDUSTRIES of RAONGEN^(2.), located in the north of the empire. Despite the harsh climate it is amongst the most industrious regions in the empire, and is known for its large open cast iron mines.
 - 2. Set. Major city in the north of RAONGEN⁽²⁾. It is the largest city in Raongen that is located north of the northern ARCTIC CIRCLE, and it is also the capital of the eponymous⁽¹⁾ INDUSTRY. Its main industry is iron mining, and the POURAN WASTES are replete with the resource, which is difficult to extract due to the harsh climate (Pop. c. 310,400).
- SEPTAURUM CITADEL, the: Rui. Str. Ancient black stone citadel perched on the lip of a crater, looking inside it, in the c of the ANUBIAN Desert, on the edge of the stone desert of THAS. The crater itself is filled with fine dust-like sand that acts like quicksand. The citadel itself likely dates back to the FOURTH AGE and is partially ruined.
- SEPU: Rel. Phil. Spiritualistic, animistic religion that was practiced in most of CEHOPHELA, until it was usurped by the AQQARADIAN faith that was propagated by the OTHERWORLDER SAPHAHAKH in c. 2500 RM. By c. 2600 RM it had become largely superseded by Aqqaradian, though it survives to this day in rural areas, particularly within the LOWER CITIES, which only serves to paint the distrust of these people in a harsher light. Its practitioners believe in WINII nature spirits that inhabit the natural world. Though the religion is waning, the COMING-OF-AGE RITUAL known as the GRAIAIN ANOINTING remains a common tradition. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

SEPULCHRAL PALACE, the: (not to be confused with the BASTION OF STEEL in KHADON; seat of power of the COUNSIL OF SEVEN and the ARCHPOTENTATE).

Rel. Str. Palace and throne of the UNDYING MACHINE RACHANAEL, seventh of the Two-and-Twenty DEMIURGES, located in KHARKHARADONTIS. The palace encompasses and powers the archaic TECHNARCANE engine known as the LEADEN THRONE that has sustained the Demiurge throughout the FIFTH AGE since its construction in 231 RM, that followed his rediscovery and freeing by the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR in 212 RM.

The environs immediately surrounding the Sepulchral Palace are wholly unnatural and are bound by no natural laws, caused by the DREAMS and deteriorating thoughts of the Undying Machine, as well as its physical proximity to the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region known as the PENUMBRA, despite not lying within it. It is famed across imperial territories for its fantastical landscapes and phenomena, which include, but are not limited to: rains of blood; monolithic lightning storms that have fused parts of the landscape to glass; poisoned air that infects those who tarry with AEPATHY and other worse ATRAMENTAL AILMENTS. But above all, nothing is constant in the miles surrounding the palace.

Worst of all is the ruin of the Sepulchral Palace itself, which ironically is now largely maintained through the sheer will and determination of Rachanael, despite the work of its DEMIURNE caretakers, whose toil is thankless and maddening. Metal melts, rusted columns writhe as though with a life of their own. Water freezes. Statues move as though alive. The crypts and corridors of the palace are twisted, more akin to the bowels of a beast than an architectural feature. A thick pall of shadow hangs in the air, weeping toxic rains into gigantic rotundas beneath domes that reach to unseen heights – the spirit of Rachanael, made manifest.

Its many crumbling sections are home to various ONEIROI (Dreamcreatures) manifested in the bitter thoughts of Rachanael. Foremost amongst them are SHADES that have spread across Kharkharadontis; and the GARGOYLES that flit around its haphazard spires and belfries.

- SEQAT: Set. Small city in the south west of the region of CARANARA, in the south east of Sarastro (Pop. c. 12,700).
- SEQUI: Lit. 'viper'. Dru. Recreational drug synthesised from the venom of OPAD'S VIPER that is a powerful hallucinogenic. See Vol II: Drugs and Addictions.
- SERA: Set. Settlement in the c east of KORACHAN, just north of the BAY OF LEMAS in the marshlands of SERAH. It was constructed atop a great vault that spans the so-called VAULTED MARSHES, though was abandoned in c. 3800 RM after its foundations begun sinking into the marshlands (Pop. c. 4,500).
- SERAH: Sup. Geo. Tainted marshlands at the mouth of the river ICHORIA along the border between KORACHAN and PELASGOS. The region is inimical to life and is the source of much of the taint in the GULF OF LEMAS. Korachani outcasts have been known to make the region their home, where the corruption of the place has claimed thousands, their corpses filling the marshes.
- SERAPEUM OF SERANACH: Rel. Rul. Ancient ruined temple in the south east of ETUA, in the north west of NORTHERN SAMMAEA. It is thought to have been a place of worship to ancient SERAPIS, possibly dating back to the THIRD AGE. A deep pit, now largely filled in with debris and sand, lies behind the remnants of the temple, and it is filled with ancient bone fragments.
- SERAPH, the: Rel. Veh. Obj. The merchant vessel that was captained by the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR in his early mortal years before his discovery of the SCRIPTURE OF SHADOW. Various parts of the vessel are purported to survive to this day as relics, chief amongst them the main MAST of the ship, which is contained within the BASILICA OF THE HOLY MAST in DEOCHAN. Other parts of the ship have been claimed over the years but none have been verified by the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE.
- SERAPI: Plr. 'serapis'. Mor. One of the original Two-and-Twenty MORTAL
 PEOPLES, and the children of the DEMIURGE ASHTERATH reptilian humanoids who, edged on by the excesses of Ashterath, became sadistic barbarians, a scourge to the other mortal peoples. They were cursed by the Demiurge TALANTEHUT to be servants to the sun and the crawl in the hot earth on their stomachs as punishment for their crimes.

Their tongue is the closest of any living creature to that originally wrought by the Demiurges for the first mortals, before the cataclysm of the BRIDGE_OF_ETERNITIES separated them into different nations. Little is known of their original form or culture, only that it was their deeply-rooted malefic nature that earned them the scorn of Talantehut, who changed their form and that of their descendants forevermore.

They are relatively common in the sun-drenched parts of ELYDEN – such as the deserts of SAMMAEA, and they are considered the rulers of the land of HOGGOTHA ISZ, which surrounds the WORLD'S CROWN Mountains – though little remains of any culture save base primitive tribal structures. A more civilised offshoot of the serapis, known as LACER, are known to exist. They once had many kingdoms in the heart of Sammaea in the FOURTH AGE, though the WAR OF SCOURGING left them almost extinct. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life: Sicthain.

SERDUN: His. Ntn. Historical nation in what is now eastern PARTHIS in the ancient FOURTH AGE. It was one of eight sovereign states to craft the SEALS OF THE COVENANT.

SERDUN, SEAL OF: His. Obj. Pol. Myr. One of eight ancient SEALS OF THE COVENANT that was discovered in eastern PARTHIS in 3488 RM. Its home moved various times following its rediscovery, though its latest home has been (museum) since 3892 RM, where it kept away from public viewing. Various legends have emerged surrounding the seal, particularly due it being kept away from the public, most of which are unfounded. Most common is that it is a powerful magickal artefact, capable of making its thrall those of weak will. Some believe that it is being used by the Parthisan government, though there is absolutely no basis for this belief.

SEREBOSK: Set. Small fortified city in the c of the HENDECARCHY of CHLORIS in the south of MALAN. It has a long history, and was once a major LARAMI^(1,) stronghold. Today it is a centre of the CULT OF ANAHITA (Pop. c. 18,000).

SEREDHA: Set. Small city in the c of CHEIRA (Pop. c. 17,000).

SEREIR: Set. Fortified city in the far west of ESHIR(2.), along the course of the river GHATA. Its main industry is copper mining (Pop. c. 25,000).

SEREM KORE: Geo. Sprawling desert in the north west of TULURKRYPH^(1.), in the c south of WESTERN MENISCEA, acting as a border between Tulurkryph and the south of SHAZGIN. Magnetic disturbances caused by the FIRMAMENT are not as pronounced here as in other areas a similar distance from the TRUE MENISCUS, though unnatural rock formations and rifts in geography still dominate the landscape, and magnetic forms of navigation (such as compasses) remain unreliable.

SERENDITRA: Set. Major fortified coastal city in the west of THE VORANDINE, in the region of NUREMITH, along the course of the river BILLADARA. It is the hub of the nations' kelp industry, where EVOLAM is harvested and refined before being exported (Pop. c. 110,000).

SERENII: Set. Settlement in the far south west of RAONGEN⁽²⁾. It is known for its historic brass foundries, though very few of them remain today. Brass objects, including door knockers and ornaments, have found their way across WESTERN LLACHATUL over the years (Pop. c. 4,200).

SERENTIA: Set. Settlement in the c of KORACHAN, in the west of the HERESI Plains. It is famed for the Chapel of the HOLY SWORD, that is made from a huge bronze bell that has had a door and windows cut out of it. The origins of the bell are unknown, but are unlikely to have been from close by as the settlement is surrounded by empty fields (Pop. c. 3,250).

SEREPHENE: Mil. Str. Major coastal fortress in the far west of TATAR, overlooking the entrance to the BAY OF EDDISA⁽²⁾.

SERHAN: Set. Settlement in the region of HANNASTRA in the c of THE SURRACH. It is famed for the great skull that can now be found, displayed behind a guarded reliquary in its main administrative district. The skull is around 3-yards long and hints at a predator with multiple eye sockets and rows of teeth. There are no present-day beings to which it can be compared, whether in the Surrach or elsewhere, and it is thought by some scholars to belong to a MESOCHTHON, though there is little evidence supporting this (Pop. c. 9,500).

SERIATA: Set. Major city in the c north east of KULIGALA, in the east of the CARCHEMISHI PENINSULA^(1.) in the east of SAMMAEA. It is a major industrial centre in the nation (Pop. c. 92,000).

SERIDOR: See. Coastal city in the north of KOMMEA. It is perched atop high coastal cliffs and its people are adept fishers (Pop. c. 32,000).

SERKAN: Set. Major city in KARAKHAS, that grew steadily following the nations' subjugation by the KORACHANI EMPIRE. It was one of the few areas that was not resistant to the growing imperial culture in the region, and grew rapidly following the appearance of the SHADOW MARCH through its territories around a century after the commencement of Korachani rule.

It became a prominent mercantile power until c. 1100 RM, when the focus of the Imperial administration was shifted to the coastal city of DEKANA, distancing Serkan from the centre of imperial influence, making the region surrounding the city more politically unstable.

Though worship of KHAR'ILLAE was curtailed under Korachani rule, her worship continued in the form of a pervasive MYSTERY CULT that usurped the city's government during the WAR OF SUNDERING, taking control. The mystery cult grew into a public religion as Karakhas liberated itself from Korachani rule, and this persisted well into its subjugation by SARASTRO following the SUNDERING OF THE KORACHANI EMPIRE in 3705 RM.

In its early days under imperial rule, the city was a hub of strife, with followers of the condemned Khar'illae clashing with imperial endocrines and ICONOCLASTS^(2.). Though the religion rapidly spread throughout the empire before its death at the hands of iconoclasts c. 474 RM, the city of Serkan remained home to an expansive semi-secretive mystery cult, which remains to this day. It is a major trade city with both the RED ROUTE and SALT ROAD converging behind its walls and its vaulted market is amongst the largest in the INNER SEA REGION, and is renowned far and wide (Pop. c. 205,000).

SEROCHAN: Ind. Set. Manufactory-city in the c of the UMBRA SOKHAR, specialising in the breeding of VISID SANGROPHAGES, which are important in ATRAMENTAL industries across the INNER SEA REGION (Pop. c. 14,900).

SEROMNIA: Set. Dre. Major city in the south east of THE VORANDINE, and home to the cult of DEMEVEDARAS. The presence of the fossilised body of the SCION beneath the city has resulted in a faint DREAMSCAPE that surrounds it, leading to a sharpening of senses and vivid DREAMS of a carnal nature, that has resulted in the formation of the decadent cult of Demevedaras forming there, bringing many people from surrounding lands to the city seeking delights of the flesh (Pop. c. 210,000).

SEROSH: Rvr. River in the north east of IO, flowing north for 210-miles from the north eastern-face of the GHOLA Mountains before emptying in the SEA OF TIAMA before reaching the sea, the river passes through 60-miles of wetlands, known as HABAKKEN.

SEROUSEN: Set. City in the c of AHRISHEN (Pop. c. 41,000).

SERPENT HELM, the: His. Pol. Obj. The crown worn by the DEIARCH in ancient MINTHA (present-day THETIS). It was crafted by the first Deiarch in c. 1650 RM and remained in use until Mintha fragmented in c. 2860 RM, after which it was lost. The crown was believed to be an item of FIRMAMENTAL FOCUS⁽²⁾, that enhanced any shaping performed by the bearer. Its present whereabouts are unknown, but it has been sought by the Thetishi government for centuries.

SERPENT MOTHER: Rel. Dei. Foul deity worshipped by the people of the demesne of KURATH in HOGGOTHA ISZ. Little is known of this deity and there remains speculation as to whether it is a real entity or an idol or symbolic god. It is depicted as a gigantic serpent with six humanoid arms and vestigial fin-like wings running down its back. Similarities to various depictions of the ASHTERATH have led scholars to question if the Serpent Mother is a corruption or aspect of the draconic DEMIURGE.

Though its origins are rooted in the demesne of Kurath, its worship has spread to other lands within the Hoggotha Isz through the actions of militant proselytisers, where it is becoming more common amongst LACER and SERAPIS. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

SERPENTFISH: Fau. Large fish common to cold waters of northern ELYDEN, mainly in the Seas of POLARIS and SUDUNIR. They are named after their serpentine form and are vicious predators that can grow to around 10-ft. In length. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

SERPENTINE: Ele. Mineral rock named after the similarities between its surface texture and that of snake skin. It is relatively soft, making it a common candidate for turning. Northern PELASGOS is replete with the mineral and turned drinking cups are still made there to this day, particularly the settlements of KLONA and SAPHACHAN. It is also common in METHUMN, TAAN AN, and the north of MOSTUE.

SERPENTS, SEA OF: Sea. Sea to the west of the INNER SEA that is said to be filled with reptilian beasts, from which its name is derived. The waters are quite deep, particularly close to the GATE OF EREBETH, making navigation in bad weather difficult.

It is higher than the Inner Sea, and water flows rapidly east across the strait, which made ancient navigation west of the Inner Sea difficult.

SERPOPARD: Plr 'serpopards'. Fau. Sinuous feline, common to forested areas in the east of SAMMAEA, including the WAELMIGH and SOPHAMYK rainforests. They are noted for their long prehensile tails, their black and red patterned fur, and their stretched appearance, all of which make them expert stalkers in the thick vegetation of their forest homes. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

SERROK: Dem. 'Serrokan'. Ntn. An equatorial nation situated in the south of the tropical rainforest of WAELMIGH^(1.) in the east of SAMMAEA, with coastal borders overlooking the SEA OF LETHEA in the west, and the MIROVEAN OCEAN in the east, and land borders with CHEIRA in the north and PORPHYR in the south. It has high precipitation and a very short dry season, and most of its land is covered in rainforest, with the north and east giving way to rocky and mountainous terrain. Its southernmost territories are dominated by the drainage basin of the river BEREKODRA.

Serrok emerged in 3337 RM after the collapse of the WAELMIGHI DYNASTIES led to the fracture of its empire into four separate states. Though the other three splinter states would later coalesce under the reign of the Cheiran SORCERER-KINGS, Serrok would remain fiercely-independent, thriving under the rule of its Alassh Dynasty, which remained strong through the appearance and growth of the CHURCH OF THE PROPHET OF THE EMPYREAN, which was founded in Cheira and whose followers worshipped an OTHERWORLDER who was unearthed, alive, in a necropolis, alongside holy texts in 3621 RM – the so-called PROPHET OF THE EMPYREAN.

The religion changed life in the region and came to dominate its culture, at least until 3782 RM, when further texts were discovered, this time incriminating the otherworlder, and casting doubt over its divine claims. The Alassh dynasty was perhaps the most devoutly faithful to the Church and, alongside its untold thousands of followers, suffered a crippling crisis of faith. The emperor killed himself in 3793 RM without leaving an heir, throwing Serrok into further chaos, out of which an accord was reached between warring sects of the Church – the only remaining political powers in Serrok.

In 3794 RM a new Kritarchy was established where members of all recognised religions in Serrok ruled in a council. This method of government remains to this day and has guided Serrok into the modern age successfully.

In the KORACHANI EMPIRE are other lands without the immediate borders of Serrok, the region is seen as a mysterious land of misunderstood culture. Though there is truth behind the anecdotes to reach foreign lands, there is much more to Serrok than skulking SERPOPARDS, policing forces that utilise trained baboons to intimidate lawbreakers, and deadly FUNGAL threats that lurk in steaming jungles. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

SERUM SEA, the: Sea. Sea in the east of EASTERN MENISCEA, between south eastern ENDUI and the north of EASTERN LARISH. It is known for its restorative properties, and its shores are known for their many hospitals and manufactories that process the water into politics and fomentations.

SESAL: also 'the Pyramid'. Ast. Con. Constellation in the NORTHERN HEMISPHERE. See Vol II: Constellations.

SESALIDS: also (Sesalid Meteor Shower). Ast. Magnificent meteor shower associated with the comet AIDRI-VELEA, that occurs between late RACHALEN and early MURDAD.

SESAM: Geo. Flat-topped mountain in the far north east of AETHIOS.

SESHA: Rel. Dei. Demigoddess widely worshipped in MALAN. She is a deity of wisdom and justice, and is closely associated with the IVORY MOON SIELLA. She is a canny SHAPER rides a DEUSAN and wields a legendary weapon known as the LANCE OF SALA, and the DHATH is sacred to her and her worshippers.

Her life is largely unknown due to her divine nature, for it is forbidden for mortals to question the nature of those of divine blood, but outside commentators have pondered if she was a SCION (possibly of NEITH^(1.)) or an OTHERWORLDER or an early-generation HALFBLOOD. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

SESHA, CULT OF: Rel. Org. Major religion organisation in MALAN, and secondary only to the CULT OF THE LADY. It is most prevalent in the HENDECARCHIES of AMILLAERE⁽¹⁾, STHAMAN, DERAEIA, and ATALLUA, though cells can be found across most of the FOREST KINGDOMS.

Its followers worship the demigoddess SESHA, a champion of Malani lore and myth, seeing her as a symbol of Malan – proud, strong, upholding traditions. She is regarded as a patron by many and idols made in her image – invariably mounted on a DEUSAN and wielding the LANCE OF SALA – can be found across the Forest Kingdoms. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

SESHAAL: Pol. Ser. Capital city of KASIHAAL, located in the c north west of the nation. It originated as a small fishing settlement on the edge of marshlands in c. 3650 RM, which grew over the years into a thriving mercantile centre that would go on to become the capital in 3769 RM. It remains a centre of commerce, though has a reputation for bland food. The region surrounding the city was mentioned in ancient apocalyptic writings as being the place where a great evil would be unleashed upon ELYDEN (Pop. c. 89,000).

SESHARRIB: 1. Geo. Fertile coastal region in the south east of VENTHIR, just north of the TROPIC OF RAH, along the north western coast of the IAPETAN SEA. Farmlands are common along the coast, most of them known for their pomegranate groves.

2. Set. Small city and fertile region in the south east of VENTHIR, known for its pomegranate groves (Pop. c. 17,000).

SESHARRIB, TREASURES OF: Int. His. Obj. Treasure hoard discovered outside the city of SESHARRIB^(2.) in the south east of VENTHIR in c. 3620 RM. The hoard is fames across the NEAR HEMISPHERE for its sheer volume and quality. It was discovered by a shepherd, but was quickly appropriated by the Venthiri government, where it was placed in the treasure vaults of TEIRA. It is rumoured that QUEEN HETEPHERES even took one of the items – a crown of size befitting her stature – which she wears to this day, as part of her technarcane orthoses.

Little is known of the source of the hoard, but it is thought to be the wealth of a FOURTH AGE empire, possibly hidden in desperation during a time of war or conflict, and never previously recovered.

SESLAID METEOR SHOWER: see SESALIDS.

SESSA: Set. Fortified settlement in the c north of TZALLRACH, along the course of the river BAELLI. It is a stop along the GREAT ROAD, and provides provisions and food to the caravans that pass through its borders (Pop. c. 8,000).

SESSAL: Geo. Scree-slopes in the north east of the UMBRA SOKHAR wastes, on the western face of the T'ILLU Mountains noted for the ILLURCAULS (soul-pearls) deposited there. The region was discovered in c. 2075 RM by BA'AKHI explorers searching for soul-pearls for use in their SIPHON ENGINES. Though unpopulated, the region was guarded by an order of HALFBLOODS (believed to be WYRDS) who harassed mining efforts throughout the regions exploitation, which lasted until c. 2450 RM, with the soul-pearls apparent consumption.

The halfbloods remained in the region, mourning the loss of their ward, allowing their failure to consume them. To this day the remains of armoured halfbloods can be found in the shifting dust of the abandoned mines.

SESSEMAGART: m. Mil. Pol. His. Per. (B. 2681 – D. 2776 RM) King of the Republic States of TISARA, who in c. 2720 RM began manipulating people and events to match his vision of turning Tisara into an empire. Over the next 4-years he would twist many of the lords of the council to his cause, even as he whipped the general populace and lawmakers into a nationalistic frenzy that led to his declaring war on ABATTUR in 2729 RM.

Emperor Sessemagart was a cunning strategist and was able to annex Abattur within a year, combining the two territories into one empire. He encouraged a homogenisation of cultures to strengthen bonds between originally disparate cultures, and by the time of his death in 2776 RM, Tisara was still in control of Abatturi territories.

SESSIA: Geo. Island off the south western coast of THETIS. Geologically, it is an extension of the ARITEAN peninsula.

SESTA: Mil. Str. Fort in the south of IZABAL^(1.), guarding the trade-route into Izabal from THE SURRACH. It is known for its large triumphal arch beneath which gathers a daily market.

SESTAMEOCH: Set. Centre-most of the three major LACER ENCLAVES in the far east of LIDEA, in the western face of the SHIBOTHA Mountain. The enclave is noted for its large idols dedicated to their deity, ASHTERATH (Pop. unknown).

SETALK: Set. Settlement in the north of VAALK, near the BAY OF VAR (Pop. c. 4,700).

SET: 1. Sup. Rnk. Common title for PENUMBRISTS within the KORACHANI
EMPIRE and its former colonies and territories, including the LOW-EMPIRE
OF SARASTRO, denoting the level of study achieved in their respective MINASTERIA^(2.) of SHAPING.

2. also 'the Atramentist'. Ast. Con. Constellation in the $\underline{\text{NORTHERN}}$ $\underline{\text{HEMISPHERE}}$. See Vol II: Constellations.

SETAR: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the north of \underline{IO} , overlooking the border with $\underline{SALOROC}^{(1.)}$.

SETAREH BARAQ: f. (B. 3645 – D. 3798 RM) Pol. Per. Historic queen of ROMOREA (2-) who ascended the throne following her FATHER'S death in 3698 RM, until her own death 100-years later. She was the first monarch of Romorea who truly enjoyed the fruits borne by the nascent industries of kingdom, and she saw firsthand its change from a handful of scattered settlements into a cohesive kingdom.

SETEM: Set. Small fortified city in the far south east of the BARRIER LANDS. It is the most isolated of the city-states and is a major producer of rubies. And though the central city itself is of a low population it is surrounded by dozens of smaller satellites which all owe fealty to it (Pop. c. 20,000).

SETERON: Geo. Island off the northern coast of KETESH, north east of the SEA OF BASSANDER, and part of the IKUAI DARBOW chain of islands.

SETH: 1. m. Myt. His. Per. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, a SCION of the DEMIURGE NEITH^(1.).

He is worshipped as a god by the TETHYSIAN KNIGHTS OF SETH. He was resentful of his half-sister TERATHA, who was showered with attention and gifts from their mother, and as a result grew distant from both, claiming the moon as his own domain usurping their followers. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

2. Set. Cliffside city in the east of ALTHA^(2.). In c. 1500 RM it was the major port of SAGITTARIA, huge, hugging a cliff, though has since become landlocked, a mile from the coast, and greatly diminished (Pop. c. 5,500).

SETHENYN: f. Rel. Dei. Martial deity of the LASCAR (2.) people in PRE-IMPERIAL LAASKHA, characterised by her seven arms, each wielding a different weapon. She guides and protects warriors and those who take risks. Her barrow-totems are found over ancient tombs across Laaskha, and this burial culture persists in rural areas despite the proliferation and normalisation of KORACHANI culture in the nation.

After the Korachani empire subjugated LAASKHA Sethenyn was retroactively converted into a saint of the UNDYING MACHINE by imperial ICONODULES and EXOCRINES, eventually becoming the PATRON SAINT OF LAASKHA, her history engineered through propaganda, making her a companion of the mortal ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR during his voyages before his discovery of the SCRIPTURE OF SHADOW. Such a companion did exist, though it is unlikely the two are linked.

As a result of this, Laaskha is the only Korachani territory in which a sect of the Church of the Undying Machine is worshipped, in which Malichar and Sethenyn are both worshipped at the same level. This is known as the Sethenyn Sect of the Church of the Machine and its worshippers wear a bracer known as a CRISS BRACELET. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

SETHENYN SECT OF THE CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE: Rel. The official religion of LAASKHA. It is a sect of the MACHINE: Rel. The official religion of LAASKHA. It is a sect of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE and is the only known officially-recognised sect of the UNDYING MACHINE to operate in KORACHANI territories. The main difference between it and the Orthodox Church of the Undying Machine is that the Sethenyn sect places the ancient native deity Sethenyn on an equal footing with the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR, an ancient act of propaganda that was required when Korachan conquered Laaskha millennia past. The tradition became so engrained in Laaskhan culture that it remains in effect to this day. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

SETHIA: Rel. Str. Monastery in the c north west of GNOTH, located on the western-face of the LOGON Mountain The monastery is one of the seven MONASTERIES OF THOUGHT.

SETHIGH: Geo. Mountain range in the AMMASHI^(1.) peninsula, forming a border between TAAN AN and AMMESH in the west and HABOT in the east.

SETHRE: Set. Settlement in the north west of the HENDECARCHY of AONIA in the north west of MALAN. It forms a part of a healthy trade route with TEMUJA (Pop. c. 8,900).

SETON: Rui. Ancient cliff-temple in the CALDERAN Mountains in the north of PELASGOS. The temple takes the form of a series of hewn chambers beneath a bas carving on the cliff-face, the details of which are lost to time.

SETRA: Set. Settlement in the west of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of CARIA⁽⁴⁾. The settlement is at the forefront of the industrialisation of the Haréshk and is expected to rapidly grow over the coming years as people from rural communities flock to its fledgeling manufactories (Pop. c. 5.500).

SETRU: Cur. Main currency in the FOREST KINGDOMS of MALAN. The name Setru goes back to the pre-Malani kingdom of AMILLAERE⁽²⁾, though it used a base 6 system at the time. Today, the Setru has been decimalised. See Vol II: Currency and Coinage in Elyden.

SETTARS, the: Dem. 'Settaran'. His. Ntn. Early FIFTH AGE nation that emerged in c. 580 RM from the void left by the collapse of the earlier culture known as the CHIWENOOL in the KAZZARAN (1.) peninsula. A culture of prudent traders and meticulous stone-masons and engineers, the Settars managed to water their otherwise dry homeland through ingenious aqueducts and great wells. In c. 700 RM a sect of dissident Settars known as the ASSEERI were exiled, and forced to travel across the GULF OF ESHIRON, where they settled in the region of eastern ATENARA, eventually forming the nation of ASSEERI in 712 RM.

The Settars eventually gave way to a sovereignty in c. 1150 RM, which saw dynasties of fickle kings and emperors who ruled to varied effect over the next millennium, from which the ALCHIARAN DYNASTY would eventually rise. See Vol III: Extinct States.

SETTARAN: Lan. Language spoken in the KAZZARAN^(1.) peninsula, primarily in TATAR and, to a lesser degree, in Kazzar, whose primary language, KAZIRAN, has borrowed much from PARTHISAN following centuries of colonialism there. The extant language of ESHIRIAN is descended from Settaran and has much in common with it. See Vol II: Languages.

SETTERUSH: Set. Settlement on the island of HAR FARRASH, in the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT, 120-miles north east off the coast of mainland (Pop. c. 14,600).

SAVAIAH: 1. Rvr. River in the south east of ZHARIAH⁽²⁾, flowing south east for 75-miles before meeting the BAY OF URDILA.

2. Mil. Str. Fortress in the south of ZHARIAH⁽¹⁾. Constructed between c. 3505 – 3540 RM as part of the larger TEIURAHAN lines to form the backbone of a southern defence against the twin threats of QARALAM and SHEZALIAH, though it was never used for its intended purpose.

SEVEN-AND-FORTY DISCIPLES, the: also 'the Seven-and-Forty'. Pol. Soc. His. The forty-seven followers chosen by the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR to be his advisors, shapers, and champions during the conquest of the SEVEN NATIONS between 7 – 84 RM. Following Malichar's disappearance after their victory in NÁRTHEL, the Disciples went on to become potentates and generals, with many prolonging their lives through ATRAMENTAL means. Many Patrician Houses of the Korachani empire are have once of the Seven-and-Forty as their PRIMOGENITORS. Alongside the SEVEN CHAMPIONS and the FOURTEEN APOSTLES, they make up the CHOSEN OF MALICHAR.

SEVEN-AND-FORTY DISTRICTS, the: the districts of the CITY OF ALMAGEST.

SEVEN-HEADED BEAST: Soc. Lan. Name given to the KORACHANI
EMPIRE by the free lands of the east following its rapid subjugation of surrounding nations (the SEVEN NATIONS).

SEVEN CHAMPIONS, the: Mil. His. The seven champions chosen by the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR during his conquest of the seven nations. Alongside the FOURTEEN APOSTLES and the SEVEN-AND-FORTYDISCIPLES, they make up the CHOSEN OF MALICHAR.

ST. VALENS was one of the Seven Champions.

SEVEN CITY-STATES, the: Soc. His. The seven original cities of the KORACHANI PENINSULA. Traditionally, these are considered to be: DEOCHAN, KHADON, BACHAN, CALDERA, KORACHAN, MAKHARA, and ZEPHANICHAN, though others have been accepted at various times.

SEVEN DEVILS, the: see IKUAI DAREBOW.

SEVEN-EYED GOAT, the: also 'Tophamael', 'the Goat of Rachanael', 'the Seven-eyed Goat', and 'the Sleeping God'. Rel. Dei. Deity often retroactively regarded as an aspect of the UNDYING MACHINE.

The figure dates back to early KORACHANI history, predating the unification of the SEVEN CITY-STATES under the banner of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR. After the introduction of the CHURCH OF THE IRON DEITY, (later to become the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE), the worshippers of Tophamael were persecuted by ICONOCLASTS⁽²⁾, with its imagery and idols destroyed, until by c. 120 RM all memory of the god had been virtually wiped-out, though some obscure references remain in some ancient religious texts.

Despite these attempts, worship of Tophamael continued in isolated rural areas that were hidden from the eyes of persecution, continuing to this day in some regions, particularly in the hills surrounding the HERESIAN PLAINS, and in Skaros, where its worshippers call themselves the <a href=CHILDREN OF THE SEVEN-EYED GOAT.

Little is known about the figure of Tophamael other than that it is goatheaded and is commonly interpreted as having 7-eyes. Some scholars have postulated that the 7-eyes are a reference to the 7 $\underline{\text{DEMIURGES}}$ that formed an alliance in the $\underline{\text{THIRD AGE}}$, with $\underline{\text{RACHANAEL}}$ as their leader. Others see similarities with the demiurge $\underline{\text{BAPHOMET}}$ though there is little evidence supporting this.

The teachings of the ancient PELASGOSI theosophist NETHROR were instrumental in leading to TOPHAMAEL being assimilated by the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, becoming an aspect of the UNDYING MACHINE, though most communities that worship the ancient god ignore this change to scripture, choosing to revere the ancient pagan depiction. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

SEVEN-EYED GOAT, CHILDREN OF THE: Int. Rel. Org. KORACHANI cult that worships a corrupt form of RACHANAEL known as TOPHAMAEL. The cult is extremely secretive and has, since its appearance in c. 3960 RM evaded detection despite protracted efforts by the MORÉHAN SANCTIFIED ORDERS OF THE INQUISITION, and IRON GUARD at rooting it out. It is believed to be most popular in SKAROS, with many thinking that it originated in the city of SYBARIS (4-), though the city has made great efforts at disproving these rumours.

Members believe that through enough reverence they may grant life to the capriform entity that they worship.

SEVEN FACES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, the: Phil. Complex philosophy with various facets and sects in the KORACHANI EMPIRE and nations where the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE is the primary religion. In its most commonly accepted form, the philosophy of the Seven Faces of the UNDYING MACHINE deals with how the faithful are expected to live their day-to-day lives. Each face represents a trait that the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE considers to be key to the understanding of their deity. These are: benevolence, chastity, temperance, fervour, vigour, generosity, and compliance.

In truth, outsiders might balk at these traits, for few of them truly represent the empire that surrounds the philosophy. Indeed, they could be seen to be the opposite of how many would describe the Korachani empire. Some commentators have said these are a tool of propaganda to brainwash the faithful into accepting their religion.

Despite this, the origins of this philosophy have been traced back to the early days of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. Such early records of the philosophy have links with the ancient duotheistic CULT OF LIFE AND DEATH that thrived in the KORACHANI PENINSULA before the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR united nations of THE INNER SEA under his empire. Looking at the Cult of Life and Death as a focus we can see that each of the Seven Faces of the Undying Machine is indeed one of two parts — the seven faces of life and the seven faces of death. What propaganda now decries as benevolence, chastity, temperance, fervour, vigour, generosity, and compliance were once also malevolence, immorality, indulgence, egoism, apathy, greed, and hatred. One could not be generous without understanding greed.

The dichotomy that was prevalent within this early facet of Korachani faith has since been largely forgotten, replaced by a more simplistic dogmatic system of worship.

SEVEN INSTRUMENTS OF DUSK, the: Myt. His. Obj. Mythic tools mentioned in the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN that, when brought together, will undo the GREAT DIVINE UNDERTAKING, returning the MATERIAL PLANE to the primal form of the SEA OF CHAOS, and ending all of creation and bringing about the end of ELYDEN.

Most references to the specific instruments are now thought to be apocryphal, and if the Mythologia Elyden ever detailed what the Seven Instruments are, such references are no lost.

They are thought to be ancient artefacts crafted by the DEMIURGES (sometimes specified to be NYARLOTH, SYNCHTHONITH, or VORROPOHAIAH) during the spread of the MORTAL PEOPLES, and are often equated with GODSTONES. See Vol IV: the Mythologia Elyden.

SEVEN LAWS OF ALCHEMIE: see MONASTERIES OF THOUGHT, THE.

SEVEN MAIDENS: 1. Lak. Seven major lakes in KOMMEA, which are synonymous with the Seven Maidens^(2,) of its myths. The lakes are:

AIBIELL^(1,1), AINE^(1,1), BRAINNE^(1,1), ETAINE^(1,1), FANDRA^(1,1), NEIMA^(1,1), and RAEHIA^(1,1).

2. Myr. Rel. Dei. Important figures in the myths of KOMMEA and HALEDONIA, roughly equivalent to a pantheon of deities closely associated with nature and the weather. The deities are AIBIELL^(2,1), AINE^(2,1), BRAINNE^(2,1), ETAINE^(2,1), FANDRA^(2,1), NEIMA^(2,1), and RAEHIA^(2,1). See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

SEVEN NATIONS, the: Pol. His. In KORACHANI history, the first nations conquered by the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR, until 84 RM, where he disappeared (beginning his ITINERARY in KHARKHARADONTIS). The nations are, in order of conquest; KORACHAN, AZAZEM, LAASKHA, VAALK, SKAROS, PELASGOS and NÁRTHEL.

KARAKHAS and Io, though conquered during this period, are not usually considered part of the Seven Nations, perhaps due to their location in greater SAMMAEA (Nárthel, being farther north than them, was often considered closer culturally to LLACHATUL than Sammaea) or the discord that followed their assimilation into the empire (particularly in the case of Karakhas).

SEVEN SYNCRETISMS, the: see SYNCRETISMS, THE SEVEN.

SEVEN TEMPLES OF THE MACHINE, the: Rel. Str. Seven temples that existed in the KORACHANI EMPIRE around c. 300 RM, each of some historical importance. The Seven temples were; the TEMPLE OF EPHESUS in KORACHAN, SMYRNIA in LAASKHA, PERGAMOS in PELASGOS, THYATIRA in ALMAGEST, SARDIS in LYRIDIA, FILADELFIA in VAALK, and RAODICEA in KORACHAN.

Similar to the pilgrimage of THE SHADOW MARCH, a great procession takes place between the seven temples. honouring the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR'S return from the OTHERWORLD, picking up faithful until it reached the TEMPLE OF RAODICEA in Korachan, where the first FEAST OF MALICHAR THE RISEN is celebrated on the anniversary of his return from the otherworld.

The procession first began 339 RM, the year Malichar returned to Korachan, and took exactly a year to reach the Temple of Raodicea, from which the tradition is derived. Those without the means to travel around the empire on the pilgrimage recreate its path in their home settlement, where they travel between seven different temples in symbolism of the Seven Temples of the Machine.

SEVEN THRONES, the: Pol. Soc. His. In the first centuries of the KORACHANI EMPIRE'S rule over THE INNER SEA, the seven Thrones were the litter bearers of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR, who would carry him on processions through the broadways of conquered nations and to temples during holy days. As the Archpotentate grew distant from the running of his Empire, so too did the Thrones come to be rarely seen in public, until their last recorded sighting in early 84 RM after the abdication of NÁRTHEL to Imperial rule. The individuals remained in service to the Archpotentate in absentia, guarding his chambers until their eventual deaths decades after his disappearance following his victory in Nárthel.

 $\underline{\textbf{SEVEN TRIBES, the}}. \ \text{see} \ \underline{\textbf{SEVEN NATIONS, THE}}.$

SEVENTY-SEVEN NAMES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, the:

Mys. Rel. Phil. In the Religion of the High-empire of Korachan, the number of apocryphal names prescribed to the Demiurge Rachanael by various sources. The seventy-seven names are often read as a liturgy before masses in his name.

SEVER TASHI: Cui. Soc. Culinary tradition common across central and northern MENISCEA, most prevalent in SHAZGIN, FATH, ETUL and VALA, where stackable containers are collected from people by couriers, labelled, filled with food, and delivered by courier back to the consumers, using the labels as addresses. It is mostly manual and office workers who have little free time to cook their own meals who make use of the service.

Large kitchens across major cities provide food for the service, and the couriers are either self-employed or work directly for the kitchens, using all manner of transports, including SKYSKIFFS to reach their customers in a speedy fashion. Some kitchens are subsidised by governments (as is the case in Shazgin) but for the most part people must pay for the services.

The term Sever Tashi refers to the receptacles, couriers and the tradition itself, which is thought to have originated in an early Fifith Age culture that predated the present regions where the sever tashi is SEVERANCE TREATY, the: Pol. His. Treaty signed in OPHAM in 592 RM, legally dissolving the nation of ERON SOTH, the territories of which were divided into two – the north west, centred around the city of OPRET (3.) and the south east, centred around the city of OPHAM.

SEWALUN: Set. Major city in the west of CEHOPHELA (Pop. c. 708,000).

SEWER GUARD, the: Law. Org. Specialised law-enforcement in the city of KHADON, KORACHAN, forming a part of the IRON GUARD.

SEWERCREEP: see MANES.

SEYADI: Rvr. River in the east of TZALLRACH, flowing south west for 310-miles from sources in the KHUN Mountains, before meeting its parent, the river LIATHAR.

SFALOSSA: Sec. Coastal city in the north west of LYRIDIA DHAI, known for its shipyards and ferries that ferry PETITIONERS OF THE MACHINE to and from SBARRAR in VÂRR. It also forms a part of the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 11,500).

SGABRA: Set. Small city in KERRAS PELLN, along the southern-face of the KELACHOT Mountains. Its main industry is granite mining (Pop. c. 17 200)

SH'AHRIN III: (B. 969 – 991 RM) Pol. His. The last queen of HOUSE ULLUREN in AHRISHEN. She acceded in 989 RM, though ruled for only 2-years. Her reign was cut short when she fell off her horse and was trampled, dying days later from her injuries. He died without her or siblings and left Ahrishen without a clear successor, and the kingdom crumbled in the decades following her death with various claimants to the throne.

This led to the first inter-monarchic period, that lasted until 1028 RM, when the Amnician Dynasty rose to power.

SHA HO: Geo. Island fort in the far south west of SAUA, south of the BLACK WALL. It guards the entrance into the SEA OF GITHKA.

SHA MORAKHY: His. Geo. Ancestral home of the SERAPIS, said to remain to this day in KHARKHARADONTIS, somewhere in the region of the AHLEM ARIS. Its exact location is unknown, and it is thought to be synonymous with the region of LEMURIA mentioned in eastern mysticism.

SHAACHAA: Geo. Rocky coastal region in the north of the nation of DURCHAA^(1.). The region is uneven, and covers over 120-miles of cliffy coastline.

SHAAM: Geo. Massif in the far north of the KAZZARAN^(L) peninsula in the north of SAMMAEA, forming a part of the larger ODU Mountains.

SHAARASH: Geo. Plateau in c north east of TRAKIA around 150-miles long, leading up to the ILIQUDH cliffs. It is 280-ft. tall at its highest point.

SHAAT LOTHA: Geo. Scrubland in the c north of THE SURRACH.

SHAB: Geo. Area of rocky hills in the north west of AHRISHEN, just south of the region of PELADA. It is noteworthy for the three gigantic featureless white monoliths that protrude from the waterlogged earth, relics of a past age.

SHABAD: Sea. Bay in the north east of MENISCEA, separating the native lands of ABARHAL in the south from the PARTHISAN colony of IBANNEM^(1.) in the north. Its waters are relatively deep and are currently controlled by Parthis, through the city GODAN.

SHABBAR: Set. Small city in the c west of SARASTRO, along the banks of lake AHI EH. It is a major producer of potash in the region (Pop. c. 16,000).

SHABRAZ: PIr. 'Shabrazig'. Mys. Sup. Rnk. SHAPERS in TAAN AN who guard the region of ZENEGE RES, ensuring that there are no spikes in ATRAMENTAL activity and that its domains do not expand beyond recognised areas. They oversee the operation of SIPHON ENGINES that protect its westernmost peripheries, and can also be found as adjuncts to the various UMBRA mines and derrick sites scattered across the region. Shabrazig are highly respected people across Taan An and many charismatic individuals go on to become PRAEFECTS.

SHADAEL: Lak. Lake in the south west of NÁRTHEL along the course of the river LOBKIR. Its waters are thought to lead into the caverns of YGGDRASA.

SHADE: also 'Shadow'. Int. Sup. Fau. Enigmatic supranatural creatures composed of wispy SHADOWSTUFF that is animated through the influence of ATRAMENTAL TAINT and the inextricable will of the UNDYING MACHINE RACHANAEL.

They originate in the wastes of KHARKHARADONTIS, close to the DREAMSCAPES surrounding the SEPULCHRAL PALACE, where the will of the Undying Machine remains strong, though they can manifest anywhere the ATRAMENTA has a degree of dominance, so they are typically restricted to the ATRAMENTAL HEMISPHERE.

They look like ghostly airborne black blankets or tendrils of wispy shadow and move like starling murmurations. They often warp their form to bear human-like faces or limbs, though they have little presence or strength within the MATERIAL PLANE, and are bound to the Atramenta. They can envelop living creatures, a tactic they employ to draw their life essence, which can leave a victim dead, its body shrivelled and its SPIRIT⁽¹⁾ (if it ever had one) destroyed. They often prey on pilgrims undertaking the SHADOW MARCH, and their attacks are seen as a test of will by the Undying Machine.

Some PENUMBRISTS are able to control or rebuke shades, and others can summon them from the Atramenta itself. These individuals often work as guardians in the pilgrimages of the Shadow Marches or are stationed along waypoints on the road.

Common folklore across the Korachani empire claims that they are the vanquished dynamisms of ancient powers – deities, SCIONS, OTHERWORLDERS – each killed and assimilated by the DEMIURGE Rachanael under the guise of UMBÁVGHAR millennia past. Others believe that they are merely GODSBORN that were created by Rachanael in ancient ages, before the SEEDBORN came to life. Regardless of their origins, they are enslaved to the will of Rachanael, and serve him across ELYDEN. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

SHADÉLST: Set. City in the north east of GREST^(1.) in the island-continent of BROR^(1.). It forms part of an industrial region though little is known as to what these industries are (Pop. unknown).

SHADOST: Set. Major city in the c west of GIBEAH. It is a major centre of the CHURCH OF ARAK (Pop. c. 110,000).

SHADOW: 1. Rel. His. Chief tenet of the CHURCH OF THE IRON DEITY before its evolution into CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. In its simplest form, the tenet names Shadow as the spiritual embodiment of faith in the IRON DEITY (later the UNDYING MACHINE). It is literally the shadow cast by the worshipper beneath the divine penumbra of the Undying Machine – the larger one's faith and devotion in the god, the larger ones' Shadow.

Those who undertake the SHADOW MARCH are said to have the largest Shadow, and of them only the most devout are willing to sacrifice themselves in the ULTIMATE COMMUNION with the Undying Machine.

The origins of the tenet of Shadow lie within the ancient text known as the SCRIPTURE OF SHADOW that was rediscovered by the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR upon the island of Maleth following his escape from slavery.

2. see SHADE.

SHADOW-BEAST: see HAGHOUER.

SHADOW OF CAMMOREA, the: Sup. Geo. Region of ATRAMENTAL TAINT in TARTAK.

SHADOW-IRON: see UMBRA^(2.).

SHADOW DANCER: Pol. Mar. Rnk. Spies and assassins of the ABYSSAL TEMPLARS, based in the city of GIBERON in the east of SAMMAEA. They are employed across the north east of SAMMAEA, commonly reaching as far as the ARID TRIPTYCH in the north and the nations surrounding the SEA OF LETHEA in the south west.

SHADOW IN THE DESERT, the: Sup. Geo. Unnatural growth of the ATRAMENTA within the inland regions of KHARKHARADONTIS in the early days of the FIFTH AGE OF MORTAL LIFE, culminating in c. –300 RM with great corruption to the land and its flora and fauna. This period of Atramental growth saw many nomads from Kharkharadontis fleeing their homes, in what became known as the KHARKHARADONTID EXODUS, that occurred between c. -550 and -350 RM.

SHADOW EATER: see OHI'MBRA.

SHADOW, HOLY: Rel. Obj. Holy sacrament in the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE that takes the form of a blessed oil-like substance that is sprinkled on the faithful at the end of masses via an aspergillum.

The production of Holy Shadow is a closely guarded secret, and is made in specific manufactories that are operated by their respective church. The oil is commonly believed to be made from organic oils mixed with minute amounts of SHADOWSTUFF and resins, which is blessed by high-ranking members of the church.

Members of the laity are only permitted to be anointed by the Holy Shadow following the completion of the FINAL COMMUNION OF SHADOW.

SHADOW HUNTER: Atr. Rnk. Org. One of the most common ranks within the ARÂTHUAHI ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION. Their role within the Order is more investigative, and they serve as the covert forces of the Order, contrasting with the more overt PURIFIERS, often working alone or in small groups. Little is known of them by the public, as they prefer to work in secrecy and under the cover of darkness.

Their appearance in a settlement usually comes after weeks if not months of work behind the scenes, and often presages the arrival of regiments of KNIGHT PURIFIERS to the area.

SHADOW INCARNATE, the: Sup. An aspect of ATRAMENTISM that is relatively well-known in the NEAR HEMISPHERE, though which is not as common as many non-SHAPERS believe it to be. Some Atramental shapers are able to manifest the ATRAMENTA as a nimbus of darkness that envelops them in shadowy wisps, as though all light is being sucked from the area surrounding them. Their eyes do not only grow black, as is the case with all acts of Atramental shaping, but they appear as empty voids distorting the shape of their faces. The air around them grows cold and minute arcs of electricity spark between their fingers and off their backs. Shapers able to manifest the Shadow Incarnate can use it to accomplish a myriad of different effects, including levitating, most devastating of which is unleashing it as a blast of electricity that can scorch bodies, render machinery useless, and destroy flora and fauna alike.

Though it is considered to be a SPHERE by many, it does not quite meet the commonly-accepted requirements of this. Any Atramental shaper is able to tap into the part of the Atramenta that grants the Shadow Incarnate, though not all shapers are equally adept at doing this. Some may have a natural talent for doing so where others might only be able to following years of training. PENUMBRISTS are most likely to find the overlap in skills needed to summon the Shadow Incarnate. In the KORACHANI EMPIRE, the MINASTERIA(2.) responsible for finding and training those capable of wielding the Shadow Incarnate is the same one responsible for Penumbrists, and their agents and recruiters of the ORDER OR PROSELYTISERS scour the empire for those who show an affinity for this aspect of shaping, so that they can trained in the hopes of becoming agents of Korachan.

The Firmamental equivalent of the Shadow Incarnate is thought to be the $\underline{\text{LIGHT UNDYING}}$.

SHADOW IRON: see SHADOWSTEEL.

SHADOW MARCH, the: also 'the Long Road' and 'the Pilgrims' Road'. Rel. Soc. The largest and most infamous of all religious pilgrimages undertaken by members of the Three Churches of the Undying Machine (primarily amongst them the Church of the Undying Machine), encompassing lands within the High- and Low-Empires and beyond, including the north of SAMMAEA. It circumnavigates The Inner SEA and its major nations, before making its way south across the Kharkharadontid desert to the prison Daekyn, where it ends outside the monolithic gates of the SEPULCHRAL PALACE. The March covers no less than 20,000-miles, most of which is little more than dirt paths, though its countless tributaries and side-courses make a true measure of its length impossible to determine. Pilgrims undergoing the Shadow March are most commonly known as PETITIONERS OF THE MACHINE and they are handed a pressed tin token known as a PILGRIM'S MARK that they carry with them throughout their pilgrimage.

Named after the tenet of Shadow observed by followers of the Church of the Undying Machine, the March originated in c. 400 RM, with the Archpotentate Malichar's victories across the Inner Sea following his return to Korachan as an Otherworlder and the subsequent rapid spread of the Church of the Undying Machine as his empire grew. The first official pilgrimage was led by the disciple Orrod, who would go on to become patron saint of pilgrims. The Marches struggled for the next centuries but later gained widespread recognition following the widespread circulation of the visions of Qorille of Negred, whose own participation in the March in 715 RM drew thousands of followers.

The Shadow March reached its peak in around 1500 – 2000 RM alongside that of the Korachani empire, with thousands of pilgrims, fanatics, flagellants and other faithful from all over the empire's territories undertaking the road, sometimes spending their savings to buy their freedom from the shackles of SLAVERY, only to spend a life under the yoke of the March and the call of the LEADEN THRONE. May people are pressganged by the Church to serve as pilgrims, in what is commonly known as the GREAT TITHE. Anyone found by the press gangers not in possession of their passports or proof of ownership can legally be rounded up in this way, with individuals shackled during the March to make up the numbers to serve as encouragement to others.

The SUNDERING OF THE KORACHANI EMPIRE in 3705 RM left a deep schism in the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, leading to it fracturing into two – the Church of the Undying Machine, which remained dominant in the high-empire, and the REFORMED CHURCH OF SARASTRO, which became the dominant faith in the Low-empire – though the March itself persevered, albeit with occasional conflict between different denominations.

Few have the strength or means to undertake the entirety of the March, with most attempting that road dying under the adversity of the road. More commonly, pilgrims would take the most direct route available, marching with their fellows for safety, stopping only at the largest and most revered of holy sites along the way.

All manner of opportunists; hucksters, traders, mercenaries, whores, ATRAMENTISTS, itinerants, bandits and brigands gravitate towards the Shadow March in the way insects are instinctively attracted to sugar. Amongst them would march PATRICIANS and other members from the Imperial administration, some on foot in self-imposed chastisement, others riding atop indriks and other exotic mounts or CONVEYORS.

Despite the enthusiasm and fanaticism of those who undertake the March, few make it to the Sepulchral Palace, as the dangers and horrors of KHARKHARADONTIS can attest to. Those that do make it are rarely sane, and their bodies are often withered, corrupted, by the Atramenta from years of marching under the gaze of corruption. Those travelling the Shadow March often wrap their bodies in unguent-scented bandages and covered in prayer flags and litanies in the hopes of protecting them from the Atramental influences. They rarely succeed.

SHADOW MONARCHY: also 'Prince's Court' and 'Shadow Court'. Pol. Org.

Tradition common in THE HARÉSHK, where the next in line to be Highmonarch is given their own court, known as a Shadow Monarchy, that is filled with advisors and allies, just like the true High-monarch's court. It is intended as a foil to the true monarchy, offering a fresh perspective on how to deal with current events and the petitions of the people. In many cases, new laws and reforms were born within the Shadow Court, though there have also been a few cases where a ruling High-monarch was deposed following the popularity of the Shadow Monarchy.

Though attempts have been made by some High-monarchs, following their ascent, to remove the Shadow Monarchy, this removal has never proved permanent, with most advisors and experts in the court seeing its use, despite the potential for chaos. Indeed, most of the courts' advisors embrace the potential for a change in regime, if it means strengthening the position of the Haréshk as a result.

SHADOW PILLARS, the: see KOHLSCITRA.

SHADOW RIG: Sup. Tec. An ancient ATRAMENTAL TECHNARCANE processing engine, dating back to the THIRD AGE and the irothani kingdoms of Kathar Byaat. All true knowledge of the rig is now lost and it remains in the tropical rainforests of Waelmigh, in the south west of Cheira, where it is still in operation, working autonomously, drawing all ambient Atramenta to it, where it is collected and stored. None in Cheira know how to operate the engine and it is ignored, for fear of what tampering with it might cause.

SHADOW SEA: Sea. Sea in the far east of the INNER SEA, dividing PELASGOS and IO from NÁRTHEL.

SHADOW TRIUMPHANT, CHURCH OF THE: Rel. Org. Main religion practiced by the people of the TEMPLAR STATES, since its widely-recognised fracture from the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE in 3128 RM.

It originated within the Shrine of the Shadow Triumphant, which was erected in the north west of the extant Templar States (then the north east of Khull) in 2563 RM during the ill-fated Ehrenisian Crusades, remaining a stronghold of the Church of the Undying Machine in the region for some time, guarded by Templar Knights^(1.), who continued to proselytise the teachings of the Archpotentate Malichar amongst the Ehreni people and the San nomads who travelled through their lands, whose travels further spread word of the faith.

Abandoned to their own fate in c. 2810 RM following the failure of a planned KORACHANI colonisation of the EHRENISIAN COAST, the Templar knights⁽²⁾ guarded their shrine with generous donations from Korachan and the help of volunteers who made the voyage west by themselves.

This eventually led to the formation of a small settlement around the Shrine, which would later become known as INDERACHAN(2.), from where the Templar knights established a small local government that concerned itself with spreading the word of the UNDYING MACHINE in surrounding lands.

In the following centuries the Templar knights' interpretations of religious texts would come to differ from those of the parent church, and in 3073 RM the sect was officially labelled as heretical by the Church of the Undying Machine.

Generations removed from the old crusade and colonisation attempts, many of their new teachings caught on, encouraging the templars to establish new shrines and churches in nearby settlements, where they eventually became powerful individuals, establishing a network of cities that by c. 3400 had become known as the Templar States, and which over the coming centuries would expand east into the TRISKETHIANDOMAINS, and, to a lesser degree, west into KHULL.

Though the Church of the Shadow Triumphant is the official religion of the Templar States, it exists hand-in-hand with the CHURCH OF EZROKAHAELL, which retains a great deal of influence in the region, with many cities divided between the two.

SHADOW TRIUMPHANT, SHRINE OF THE: Rel. Str. Large temple and shrine erected in 2563 RM in what is now the north west of the TEMPLAR STATES (what at the time was the north east of INGHULL, the precursor state to KHULL), during the ill-fated EHRENISIAN CRUSADES. The shrine survived the failure of the crusade, and continued to be guarded from native retaliation by well-equipped TEMPLAR KNIGHTS (2) and volunteers from the church, who established a small settlement around it.

Over a century later, the shrine would become the centre of the KORACHANI colony of INDERACHANI (1.), though it too would falter by c. 2810 RM, though the shrine nevertheless survived. Slowly, the teachings of the templars gained a foothold in the surrounding region, and they reestablished Inderachan as a settlement of itinerant monks who travelled the EHRENISIAN COAST, subtly spreading word of the UNDYING MACHINE. This allowed the Templars to spread their influence across what would later become known as the Templar States in their honour.

Their interpretation of holy texts changed over the years, leading to the formation in 3128 RM of the CHURCH OF THE SHADOW TRIUMPHANT – a sect of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE that is not recognised by the parent religion. Indeed, its practitioners were declared heretics in 3073 RM.

The Shrine remains an important site today, surrounded by the religious city of Inderachan, which is a bulwark of the Church of the Undying Machine in the region.

SHADOW IN THE WEST: Soc. Lan. Common term used in the free lands of the east in relation to the KORACHANI EMPIRE.

SHADOWED PACT, the: Leg. His. The VÁMAN ORDER'S transformation from the PALADINS OF THE SHADOW to its current form in the centuries leading to 1196 RM, when it was formally acknowledged, is said to have involved secretive pacts with members of the ancient ATRAMENTIST sects that they once hunted. Alternatively, others claim that the Paladins used the very object they once quested to destroy (the SHATTERED MIRROR) to acquire great riches and power, allowing them to ascent to the ranks of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION.

SHADOWISP: see UMBREKHA.

SHADOWBLOOD: Oth. Archaic term used for HALFBLOODS who were thought to have AEHARI blood. The term is old and not commonly used today, as genealogical studies of halfbloods has advanced beyond the old belief of their dichotomous nature.

SHADOWBORN CREATURE: see UMBRAN.

SHADOWSTEEL: also 'shadow iron'. Sup. Ele. An alloy of iron, carbon and UMBRA. Unlike DUSTSTONE, which is weakened by the ATRAMENTAL effect on its formation, shadowsteel inherits its more sought-after properties – it is light and easy to work, stronger than iron, and maintains a very sharp edge. The metal is expensive due to the TECHNARCANE processes required in its manufacture and is of great industrial and military value.

There are also rare examples of naturally occurring shadow iron, where Atramental influences on iron cause it to take on similar properties to shadowsteel. Shadow iron can be worked into shadowsteel through the addition of carbon and the refining to rid it of impurities.

The largest shadowsteel manufactory in the INNER SEA REGION is the manufactory of SACHARAL in the industrial metropolis of ZEPHANICHAN, in KORACHAN.

SHADOWSTUFF: see UMBRA.

SHADOW, TEMPLE OF THE: Rel. Str. Ancient mythic neolithic temple located on the island of MALETH^(1.) in the middle of THE INNER SEA that is of great importance to the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, and in particular the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE.

It was the resting place of the SCRIPTURE OF SHADOW, discovered by the merchant-prince MALICHAR in -23 RM, which allowed him to rise to prominence and become Archpotentate of the KORACHANI EMPIRE. The temple has since been built over by a large temple dedicated to Malichar and is a part of THE SHADOW MARCH to many pilgrims.

SHADRACH OF ALBEGNO: (D. 3711 RM) Arc. HALFBLOOD architect born in the KORACHANI city of ALBEGNO. He designed many monuments and structures in various KORACHANI cities, though in 3623 RM found himself gripped by a deep melancholy that saw him travel to GNOTH, where he spent months in a monastery, learning the teachings of URAKABARAMEEL. He returned to his ATELIER with a new understanding of the workings of ELYDEN and promptly designed the CENOTAPH TO ELYDEN — a vast hollow sphere in which is painted a facsimile of the surface of Elyden. He retired after completing this work, becoming increasingly introverted and misanthropic. He refused to explain what he learnt in Gnoth and what caused him to design the structure but claims that it was part of a great work shared between all of Elyden's artists, alive, dead and as yet unborn.

SHADURIA: Set. Settlement in the south west of TRAKIA (Pop. unknown).

SHAFEN: Set. Small fortified city in the far south east of KHAMID. It originated as a border fortress in c. 1300 RM, though a settlement appeared around it in c. 1750 RM as refugees from a PLAGUE gathered around it for safety. Since then, it has grown into a small, if affluent city along the route of the GREAT ROAD, whose merchants travel into MALAN and TZALLRACH to trade their goods (Pop. c. 16,200).:

SHAGGARACCID: Set. City and military region in the north east of LHACCIDA⁽²⁾. The city is dominated by ancient animal-headed colossi and is the base for a large portion of its military (Pop. c. 42,000).

SHAHAD: 1. Sea. Bay in east of the SEA OF BYSSOS.

2. See. Small coastal city in the west of \overline{TARTAK} , along the western-most tip of the $\underline{KARAKORI}$ headland (Pop. c. 12,000).

SHAHAL: Rui. Ruin in the east of SARASTRO, to the west of the KOROR Mountains It was once a town that was attacked by VENTHIRI forces during the WAR OF SUNDERING, and was razed. The ruin was built into a forward fortress that served as a staging post for Venthir throughout most of the war.

SHAHAN: Lak. Lake in the south of AHKA, forming part of the course of the river SASHAT.

SHAHAT: Set. Settlement in the east of NAARETH. Like most settlements in the region of JARRA, it is known for its apiarists and honey (Pop. c. 7 500)

SHAHIA: Set. Crossroads settlement in the east of TRAKIA (Pop. c. 9,000).

SHAIB: 1. Sea. Shallow sea off the eastern coast of VENTHIR, south of the VENTHA and north of the TORRENT OF KARROCK. It has diminished greatly since the retreat of ELYDEN'S seas and once stretched over 100-miles to the north west encompassing the present-day eponymous salt flars.

2. Geo. Salt flats encompassing 250-square-miles of what was once the bed of the SEA OF SHAIB.

SHAINEA: Set. Small city in the c north of LIDEA, known for its mining of brown coal. For miles around the city the landscape has been reduced to a hellish wasteland of abandoned quarries and strip mines. Once far larger, the city is waning as coal reserves begin to dwindle (Pop. c. 13,200).

SHAIPERA: Geo. Expansive region 60-miles south of the city of TAENIA in the west of THE SURRACH. It was, until c. 500 – 1500 RM, submerged beneath the waters of the SEA OF ESCHATA, though was exposed following the retreat of ELYDEN'S seas. Revealed by the sea's retreat was a vast petrified forest some 250-miles long. Though most of its trees are collapsed and appear as little more than stone pillars, some remain erect, an eerie sight along the stony coast.

SHAIPUR: Geo. Shallow mountain ridge in the east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER, emerging east into the west of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES, just south of the UNTANA plateau, west of the MUHUPUR Mountains. They are ancient and rounded and covered in mosses and other flora.

SHAIQR: Sec. Small city in the far east of PNESSA, overlooking lake FORII (Pop. c. 11,600).

SHAITUN: Set. Fortified city in the far east of ABACARDAT, in the south eastern foothills of the ZANBAURI Ridge (Pop. c. 32,000).

SHAIWWAL: His. Pol. Rnk. A historical caste of political advisors that were once common in the GOLDEN CRESCENT region of south eastern SAMMAEA, growing particularly influential in the AKHSARAYAN empire in c. 1880 RM. They originated as bards, poets and historians in c. 1200 RM and spent many centuries in this role, with most of them being itinerant wanderers and disseminators of news across the Golden Crescent, which made them culturally important, though they still retained little individual power.

This changed in Akhsaray, where they settled down, becoming important figures who established libraries and kept detailed accounts of happenings in the region, increasing their influence in the region, and by c. 1730 RM the shaiwwal LAVIYAT had become an advisor to the imperial court, beginning a precedent that continued until the period now known as the SILENCING OF THE SONG, when the shaiwwals were systematically persecuted within Akhsaray, forcing them to flee into other lands, after which the name fell out of use.

SHAKEL ANU: Geo. Dry plains in the c west of KARAKHAS, where CENTURY PLANTS are cultivated for use in the production of the perfume ASSIR.

SHAKHURAN: also 'the World's Throne'. Geo. Large mountain-chain in the c of SAMMAEA, which alongside the ACHARKHARAN and KARKARMIS Mountains, forms what are collectively known as the GREAT SAMMAEAN TRIAD, which together serve as a natural border, dividing the central Sammaean continent into three.

The Shakhuran Mountains are the western-most of the Great Sammaean Triad, and stretch as far West as the BAY OF LRITHA.

SHAL NERUDAK: Int. Arc. Gigantic metallic sphere, half-buried in the SHAMAS SHUGAL savannah in the c north of SARASTRO. It is thought to be around 80-ft. in diameter and its surface is pitted and worn, and of an unidentifiable nature that is immune to the effects of mor shapers trying to affect it. This inert nature has led some scholars to believe it is a relic of the DEMIURGES.

SHALAL: Geo. Waterlogged region in the south of AMMESH along the course of the river KUKHOR known for its tangle of braided rivers, oxbow lakes, and interconnected freshwater marshlands. Many settlements and features (particularly its stone temples and graves) here are raised above ground-level due to the waterlogged earth.

SHALAN: (10,300-ft.) Geo. One of ten peaks (colloquially known as the TEN PRINCES) of the south east of the A SAVI Mountains, in the north of AHRISHEN, named after an ancient prince.

SHALAT: Set. Small fortified city in the south west of the tribe of GOROR, in the south east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. The city is a major source of aluminium in the region (Pop. c. 14,000).

SHALE FORTRESS, the: Mil. Str. Fortress in the far north west of KHITAI, at the narrow isthmus between the NAARETHI peninsula and the headland of Khitai. It is well-guarded and has links to both the IAPETAN SEA and the GULF OF VEGATETH.

SHALE MOUNTAIN, the: see RILLATAIA.

SHALL: (14,900-ft.) geo. Dormant volcano in the east of HARÉSHK, in the City-kingdom of NICADA (1.). Ancient lava flows and ash are thought responsible for the region's fertility.

SHALLA: Set. Major city state and main conurbation in the HENDECARCHY of NHORA, in the north east of MALAN. Like many Malani cities, it is insular and unwelcoming of outsiders, and little is known of it. Despite this, Malani folk encountered outside their homeland do sometimes speak of Shalla, in the context of a religious centre (Pop. unknown).

SHALLAINÉ: Oth. Myt. Angelic being mentioned in the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN, who was killed by the DEMIURGE RACHANAEL in an ancient battle.

SHALLOW GATE, the: Int. Oth. Arc. Stone gateway built across a valley floor in the HISTA region of the north west of SKAROS, dating back to c. -200 RM. The area was believed by early FIFTH AGE LASCAR⁽³⁾ natives (ancestors of modern-day north eastern LAASKHA and south western Skaros) to be inextricably linked with the ATRAMENTA, drawing creatures reliant on the Atramenta towards it. The gate was built in an attempt to keep such creatures locked away in the area (though this attempt seems more symbolic that practical). By c. 700 RM the area had fallen into disrepair, with OTHERWORLDERS and SHADOWBLOODED creatures occasionally travelling to the area, with many of them carving messages onto the gate in various tongues.

SHAM LIMOTH: Mil. Str. Large coastal border tower along the north western RHEAN border, overlooking the north east of the SEA OF PYTHEA.

SHAMAH: Ind. Set. MANUFACTORY-city in the north of SARASTRO that is a major prison Inmates comprise close to half of the full population and do not leave the confines of their manufactory-homes (Pop. c. 15,000).

SHAMAHAK: Set. Settlement in the south west of the JAHADAT STATES, under the control of the city of HAYSHAB (Pop. c. 4,600).

SHAMAL, the: Geo. Region in the north west of ANUBIA covering an area of around 30,000 square-miles, forming a natural border with SARASTRO. The region is primarily a dry rocky desert with interestingly-shaped DUSTSTONE formations peppering it. It was explored in c. -250 RM by NATHI ALCHEMISTS who were searching for reagents for their research, and by c. -230 RM the first crude UMBRA mine was established in ATAMAHIA, with the raw umbra taken over 1,200-miles north east along a winding path to the alchemist-lords' stronghold in MIDAL. The mine fell silent by c. -170 RM with the decline of the Nathi kingdom following the 'LION HERESIES'.

The rise of the Venathi empire from the ruins of Nath saw the region repopulated in c.140 RM, with more mines appearing to sate the evergrowing needs of the alchemists in Midal. Encounters with Sarastroan pioneers, who were exploring the region directly south of the Shamal (known as Neyshabur – itself rich in umbra) increased over the coming decades. Such encounters often ended in conflict between mining crews and their benefactors, with matters escalating into the so-called 'WAR OF THE TRIPTYCH' in 161 RM. The conflict ended in 183 RM with a Sarastroan victory, after the fall of the Venathi empire (which was replaced by Venthir) in c. 170 RM. The rise to power of QUEEN HETEPHERES in 194 RM brought further war to the region, and the mines of Shamal had mostly returned to Venthiri hands by c. 250 RM.

Under Venthiri control once more, raw umbra was being transported some 1,200-miles east from the Shamal to the city of KITHAMAR, which processed the material, pumping it to the largest of Venthiri cities. The abandonment of Kithamar in 2821 RM, coupled with the dwindling umbra reserves of the Shamal led to the regions desertion in c. 2900 RM, though small private mines remain in operation to this day. The extraction of umbra has strengthened the flora and fauna of the Shamal, and some scholars have even postulated that the region is recuperating from the substances' former influence.

SHAMALAN: 1. (16,200-ft.) Geo. Peak in the EPITRACHON Mountains in the c of THE OLD FOREST.

2. Set. Fortified settlement in the north east of THE OLD FOREST, close to the border with the DESOLATION OF ASTUDAN. The settlement is known to trade with STYGA and the free-city of GÂTHA via the GÂTHAN ROAD (Pop. c. 20,000).

SHAMALK: Set. City in the c north of VAALK, along the course of the river RIPARIS. The city is one of many producers of food for the metropolis of ANAKARRA. It is also renowned for its sizeable church of the REFORMED CHURCH OF SARASTRO (Pop. c. 32,800).

SHAMAN: Sup. Rnk. SPHERE of SHAPING, commonly FIRMAMENTISM that harks back to an older more classical form of mysticism. It is commonly practiced by primitive cultures, with such shapers often being respected members of their respective societies. In more urbane environments they fulfil a role similar to that of OCCULTISTS.

SHAMAR: 1. Rvr. River flowing north west, originating in the OTINDHAR mountain, though with tributaries in the GHOLA mountain in Io. The river flows around 700-miles, acting as a border between Io and SARASTRO for around 260-miles, before emptying into the SEA OF TIAMA. The river is noted for its purity, and to this day its waters are clear and uncorrupted by the industry of the empire or the degradation of the Atramenta. A spring in western Io, close to the settlement of UGOT is believed to be the main source of this clean mineral-water.

2. His. Rel. In PRE-IMPERIAL IO, an ancient religion surrounding the river of the same name. Prior to the arrival of the KORACHANI EMPIRE in Io in 212 RM, the river was the focus of a pagan religion that originated from a local myth believing its waters to be a cleansing balm on ELYDEN'S skin. The cult appeared in c. -900 RM and lasted until c. 400, by which time the censors and ICONOCLASTS (1.) of the Korachani empire had abolished its worship. Despite the abolition of the cult surrounding the river, small pilgrimages continued to the river's source, where a crude temple was constructed near the river's source in the town of UGOT. Over the centuries the cult became corrupted into a sect of the imperial church, the temple appropriated by the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE and its waters sold to pilgrims on THE SHADOW MARCH, which was redirected there in c. 1500 RM. Though with the empire's forsaking of Io in the latter part of the fourth millennium RM, many pilgrims came to ignore the site, instead continuing from MALICHARA to HADASSALON en route to KHARKHARADONTIS.

SHAMAR'S TORRENT: Ast. Lan. Name common in the north of SAMMAEA for the galaxy, which on a clear night is easily visible in the celestial dome. It is noted for its dense clusters of stars that are easily visible to the naked eye, as well as nebulae and galaxies, which can be viewed through the aid of telescopes and other ocular devices.

The term is synonymous the $\underline{\mbox{RIVER OF STARS}}$ that was used in $\underline{\mbox{LLACHATUL}}.$

SHAMAS: Set. City in the north west of PARTHIS, known for its TECHNARCANE tradition. The city is a centre of the pragmatic movement in Parthis, and is home to the TEMPLE OF ARTIFICE, though it is also known for its reverence of the ancestor PYMANDER. The nobility of Shamas are renowned for their love of FLESHWOWEN and tailor-made pets, many of which have the faces of loved ones and ancestors. (Pop c. 150,000).

SHAMAS SHUGAL: Geo. Expansive savannah in the north of SARASTRO, extending across the border into NÁRTHEL. Its eastern-most reaches, leading to the western foothills of the JAELA Mountains, are populated by the primary TROGLODYTE⁽³⁾ population of Sarastro and are home to terebba pine trees, which are used in the production of turpentine.

SHAMASHI ENCLAVES OF THE SARASTROAN EMPIRE: also 'the Sarastroan Inquest' and 'Shamashi Inquisition'. Mil. Pol. Org. A major political organisation within the REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO that polices the state, enforcing various laws and tenets that emerged following the SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE that saw the KORACHANI EMPIRE fractured in two by a civil war.

Until the Sundering, the empire was policed by various forces that together were known as the SANCTIFIED ORDERS OF THE INQUISITION. Some of these Orders defected to Sarastro following the Sundering and by 3706 RM they had become known as ENCLAVES, each fulfilling a specific role, similar in many ways to the Sanctified Orders of Korachan. During these early years they clashed with the Sanctified Orders in what later became known as the SILENT WAR – a clandestine conflict fought for close to two decades between the forces of the HIGH- and LOW-EMPIRES.

In 3821 RM the Enclaves were restructured into a single entity, based in the LICHFORT of ARGEA and ruled by SATHEP THE RISEN himself. This is when the time when the term Shamashi Enclaves first came into common usage, with shamash being the Sarastroan word for purity and justice.

Each Enclave is concerned with a particular facet of the tenets of the respective Shamashi Enclaves, with agents, scriveners and soldiers who carry out the will of the respective Enclaves' ruler – the MUTTAHARCH, who answers only to Sathep the Risen.

The major Enclaves are, in alphabetical order:

 The Enclave of Aegis (HIM'AQSAL KHAMSAL), whose tenets include the public protection of its people and cities, though which covertly works to oppress those same people into complacency towards the hardships of life.

Founded in * RM, the Enclave's present Muttaharch is *.

- The Enclave of Iconoclasm (SHA'KKÍM KHAMSAL) whose tenets include the public maintenance of art and monuments celebrating Sathep the Risen, though which covertly works to suppress proscribed works of art and self-expression.

Founded in * RM, the Enclave's present Muttaharch is *.

The Enclave of Knowledge (HALIMAAH KHAMSAL), whose * re-education and propaganda

Founded in * RM, the Enclave's present Muttaharch is *.

 The Enclave of Purity (NADI'RAH KHAMSAL), whose tenets include maintaining water purity and distribution across the empire.

Founded in * RM, the Enclave's present Muttaharch is HAKARIM ELSHIFFRA.

The Enclave of Salvation (FADAJAT KHAMSAI), whose * religious enforcement

Founded in * RM, the Enclave's present Muttaharch is *.

Enclaves *

HIM'AQSAL KHAMSAL: also 'the Enclave of Aegis'. Pol. Org. One of the SHAMASHI ENCLAVES OF THE SARASTROAN EMPIRE, whose * oppression. public protection of its people and cities, though which covertly works to oppress those same people into complacency towards the hardships of life.

SHA'KKÍM KHAMSAL: also 'the Enclave of Iconoclasm'. Pol. Org. One of the SHAMASHI ENCLAVES OF THE SARASTROAN EMPIRE, whose * suppresses proscribed freedom of expression and art. Emerged from a stronghold of the Moréhan(?) order whose agents sided with Sathep. Works against and uses propaganda to decry the church of the undying machine

HALIMAAH KHAMSAL; also 'the Enclave of Knowledge'. Pol. Org. One of the SHAMASHI ENCLAVES OF THE SARASTROAN EMPIRE, whose * reeducation and propaganda

FADAJAT KHAMSAL: also 'the Enclave of Salvation'. Pol. Org. One of the SHAMASHI ENCLAVES OF THE SARASTROAN EMPIRE, whose * religious enforcement

SHAMASHI INQUISITION: see SHAMASHI ENCLAVES OF THE SARASTROAN EMPIRE.

SHAMAT: Gam. Boardgame common in the ARID TRIPTYCH dating to the FOURTH AGE. See Vol II: Games and Pastimes of Elyden.

SHAMATU: (5,400-ft.) also 'the Scar'. Geo. Jagged rocky terrain in the north west of EPIRU, in N'RAKH. The area is thought to be a vent for the ATRAMENTA given the warped terrain and flora found there. The corpses and tainted remains of young aanth undergoing their DREAM QUEST of ARDIKHALU litter the area.

SHAMATZAR: also 'the Shadow Warden'. m. Myt. His. Per. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, a SCION and son of the DEMIURGE AVRAHAM.

He was a powerful ONEIROMANCER and disliked the company of others. He destroyed the MORTAL city of Tamnavanda in a dream, only learning years later that the dream was mirrored in the real world. Distraught, he shunned mortal lands and could only be truly at peace in the wilderness, where the cacophony of their dreams and nightmares were stymied somewhat. He is one of the more enigmatic figures in the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN, appearing sporadically as a deus ex machina, through his powers of oneiromancy.

He was haunted by the nightmares of NELCHAEL (one of the twin aspects of DOPELLANICH) who finally drew him to the Demiurge, who flayed him, forever more wearing his skin as a cloak. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

SHAMUSH: Pol. Soc. Ind. PATRICIAN HOUSE in the REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO largely based in MHAROKK and LIDEA, known for its mining industries, largely sulphur and lead. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

SHAN: Set. Settlement in the c north west of SERROK (Pop. c. 2,200).

SHANA: Geo. 1. Mountains in the c west of VENTHIR.

2. Highlands in the east of VENTHIR.

SHANATA: Set. Settlement in the c north of MHAROKK, west of lake KARAT. It is known for its peppers and spicy cuisine (Pop. c. 8,500).

SHANATAN: Set. Oas. Fortified oasis-settlement in the far south east of SARASTRO, on the northern-most extent of the MOLACHARI DESERT (Pop. c. 3,500).

SHANATH: Rui. City-state in the ancient AMNATHI KINGDOM, that, following its dissolution in -589 RM became a controlling influence of the western NÁRTHELI STRAIT dominating trade in and out of the channel, which led to the signing of an agreement between the nine old Amnathi states in -328 regulating trade in the region.

Shanath continued to grow prosperous and fell to corruption in -174 RM, with its fiefs succumbing to chaos. The southern cities were taken by NÁRTHEL by -150 RM, while its northern cities were slowly absorbed by LYRADEA, which claimed its territories north of the NÁRTHELI STRAIT as its own in by -96 RM. The city of Shanath remained active under Nártheli control following this period, though diminished in strength.

Korachani dominance of the region following the wars of 84 RM led to the city being renamed Xanathos, though with the increasing pollution of the waters around the strait, it was abandoned c. 200 RM, and began sinking into the NÁRTHELI STRAIT by c. 270 RM, where it lies, half-submerged.

SHANJI: Geo. Solitary mountain range in the S of RAONGEN⁽²⁾, situated between lakes TAHONG and CALPURNIA⁽¹⁾.

SHAOJESEH: 1. Geo. Impact crater in the north of KHARKHARADONTIS, just west of the GAP OF SHADOWS, and remnant of an ancient and now legendary ATRAMENTAL BOMB test carried out in 3736 RM. The test was the largest known Atramental explosion in the history of the empire, and was designed to show the might of KORACHANI TECHNARCANE military capabilities. The blast was massive, causing an upheaval around 3-miles in diameter that solidified in mid explosion, leaving behind a blackened bloom-like feature, in parts like glass, and others like obsidian. It left the surrounding area an Atramental wasteland for miles around, and all life for miles around was extinguished in a moment. The blast was monumental in paving the way towards crafting bombs with a range of smaller effects, all of which could be better-controlled.

2. Also 'Breaker of Cities'. Sup. Tec. More specifically the name given to the bomb that created the above crater in KHARKHARADONTIS in 3736 RM. The bomb gained infamy across imperial territories, and was heralded as the Breaker of Cities, ushering a new arsenal of weapons that would defeat the enemies of KORACHAN. However, the technology rapidly made its way across the INNER SEA and beyond through espionage and reverse-engineering, leading to a tense stalemate, with no one nation willing to use such a weapon for fear of repercussions.

SHAOMATH: Lak. Lake in the IMMERUTH basin in the north west of LAASKHA. It is the c-most of 3 lakes in the region, all of which are remnants of a large bay that until c. 2600 RM stretched 175-miles east of the STRAIT OF SKAROS, beyond the city of FAALAR. The other 2 lakes are the Immeruth and the ERRTAH.

SHAONG: Alc. Str. Citadel in the c south west of RAONGEN⁽²⁾, along the course of a tributary of the river CARMILI. It is home to a sect of ALCHEMISTS and scholars who obsess over studying the secrets of the monstrous fungus of HAGGAD. Its main industry is the cultivation of wyrdwort, which is used in funerary rites across Raongen (Pop. c. 8,000).

SHAOS KHER: Eth. Original people of SAOSTANA who in the latter days of the FIFTH AGE settled the DELOMIG plains. In c. -1450 RM the people of the Delomig had divided into two groups; the KHERI nomads who were forced to the south by c. -1300 and the Shaos Kher (after which Saostana is named). By c. -1100 RM the culture of Shaos Kher had advanced to the point that it began to be known as Saostana (after the rulers of CARULA), from where the famed SAOSTANAN DYNASTIES would rise in -1019 RM.

SHAPER: Int. Sup. Rnk. One who can alter aspects of the MATERIAL PLANE, either through training, or innate talent, and usually a combination of the two, by tapping into the energies of the MATERIA OMNA – either through the FIRMAMENT or ATRAMENTA – to accomplish acts of SHAPING. Typically, shapers have talents within specific domains of the Materia Omna, known as SPHERES.

Shaping takes its toll on the body, and slowly corrupts both body and mind. Assuming a healthy diet and quality of life, most shapers peak at 30 – 35-years of age at most, with their shaping declining after reaching that milestone as their health begins to deteriorate. This is the price of shaping. Dietary supplements, controlled use of shaping, mediation and superlative training may put this up to 35-45, while the opposite (bad diet, sub-par living conditions, etc.) can put it down to 25 or less. Old shapers are frail and may show signs of dementia, or acute physical deterioration - a badge of honour, so-to-speak, and will be forced to become teachers or mentors, if capable of doing so. Those who are still active may make use of drugs or orthoses (such as IRON MANTLES (2.) or SOULSUITS) when shaping to help them achieve results that they were once able to achieve unaided. A common 'side-effect' of shaping is an increased appetite and tiredness. Eating and sleeping restore energy lost to shaping, though has given rise to the belief amongst commoners that shapers are lazv.

Though many people (particularly uneducated laypersons) believe that shapers have god-like powers within their sphere, the truth is largely more pragmatic, with shapers limited by individual skill, amount of training or knowledge, as well as the vagaries of the ARCANE TEMPERS, and not to mention limitations imposed on them by their governing bodies. The act of shaping itself is highly stressful and exhausting, and the type of powerful shaping that is popularised by mythology, legends, and pulp novels is simply beyond the grasp of the majority of shapers, and those that are capable of preforming such legendary acts are either beholden by law or simply disciplined enough not to, while others became famed (or rather, infamous) historical figures. These individuals have garnered the nickname BASILEANS in the KORACHANI EMPIRE, which was an old word for a ruler, signifying great personal power over others.

The use of shaping is typically highly regulated in civilised society, with many nations enforcing study and the issuing of licenses as a means of reducing devastating accidents and the potential for tyrannical figures wielding too much power. In the KORACHANI EMPIRE this is overseen by the various MINASTERIA^(2.) of Shaping, which train and issue licenses to shapers with abilities related to a particular sphere. See Vol IV: Shaping.

SHAPER, ROGUE: Law. Soc. In regions where SHAPING is regulated (for instance, in the KORACHANI EMPIRE, where individuals must be licenced to shape), those shapers who practice the art without honouring the necessary regional legalities are considered to be rogue.

Living on the fringes of society, and often retreating to the criminal underworlds of cities, or fleeing to the peripheries of civilised lands, or leaving civilisation entirely, rogue shapers are highly dangerous individuals – posing not only a danger to themselves, but also those they come into contact with.

In Korachan, warrants are issued by the respective MINASTERIA (2.) and the ORDER OF PROSELYTISERS for the arrest of such rogue shapers, and bounty hunters exist who make a living off of hunting for such rogues. Once arrested they are either forced to train in the relevant Minasteria, or they are incarcerated (with the aid of DAMPING ENGINES), or executed, depending on their prowess or desire for chaos.

SHAPER, The: also 'the Great Shaper', 'the Light and the Dark', and 'the Being of Two Halves', amongst others. Myr. His. In the cosmogony and ancient history of ELYDEN, the being responsible for the shaping of the SEA OF CHAOS into the FIRMAMENT ABOVE AND THE ATRAMENTA BELOW, in what is now known as the GREAT DIVINE UNDERTAKING, as well as the sowing of the 22 pods from would emerge the SEEDBORN MORTAL PEOPLES.

Little is known about the identity of The Shaper, and even the oldest texts of the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN go into very little detail on its nature. Of interest is that no major cultures or groups have ever worshipped The Shaper as a deity – or at least we have no record of this. For the most part, very few people have ever been privy to such knowledge, and even in these enlightened times, it is only a handful of scholars who possess such knowledge along with the competence to understand the implications. See Vol IV: Mythologia Elyden.

SHAPERS' GOSPEL, the: Sup. Vol. Series of three large scrolls discovered in a cave in the GURON HAAS region in the far north west of AHKA in 3899 RM. Thought to date back to c. 2100 RM, the scrolls are written in an old MULL script and are thought to have been penned by a FIRMAMENTAL SHAPER who had been persecuted by the KORACHANI EMPIRE. The texts were translated into AHKAN in the city of SAPEAHK and became popular amongst the middle and upper classes there for some time, finding their way across the INNER SEA REGION via the RED ROUTE.

The Gospels are an account of the life of the shaper, who is thought to have travelled to Ahka from the west of MENISCEA, acting as a form of missionary, spreading the word and teachings of the MINARET OF LIGHT in what they referred to as 'a heathen land corrupted by the Shadow'. Little is known of their fate, but it is suspected that they were captured or killed by Korachani forces shortly after the gospels were hidden in the cave. The originals are now kept in the library of Sapeahk.

SHAPING: Sup. The act through which a MORTAL is able to tap into the MATERIA OMNA to alter aspects of the MATERIAL PLANE, through the FIRMAMENT and ATRAMENTA, as a by-product of the SHAPING OF CREATION by the DEMIURGES ages ago.

To shape, an individual must attain a state of FOCUS^(1.), which is a form of higher consciousness in which they can perceive the Materia Omna, in the form of the INTEGUMENT. Once focused, the shaper is said to be ATTUNED, and can view the world through a spectrum that is unique to shapers, and which appears slightly different to every shaper. The act of focusing forms the bulk of training that most student shapers undergo, and the first time a shaper reaches a continued sustained state of attunement is a major milestone in their training.

Once focused, the shaper is able to manipulate the Materia Omna to achieve a specific desired result. Not all shapers can shape in the same way – one may have an affinity for plants, while another may only be able to shape the weather, or manipulate metal, or fire. Throughout the history of shaping, mortals have done their best to categorise shaping. These areas of expertise are referred to as SPHERES, and no two shapers have access to the exact same spheres, and while these spheres have a role in generalising skills for the purposes of categorisation, training or licensing, they are far from the unmalleable dogma that some make them out to be.

To aid in shaping, shapers may make use of a physical FOCUS (2.), a totemic device made from substances sensitive to their chosen sphere of shaping. Advancements in technology and the development of TECHNARCANA, have supplanted foci, in the form of devices such as ORTHOSES, IRON MANTLES (2.), and HEART ENGINES, all of which provide an artificial boost to a shaper's skills, allowing them to shape for longer, accomplish more difficult acts, and while exerting themselves than they otherwise might without such aids. Certain drugs and performance-enhances can also be used to aid in the act of shaping, though may be dangerous to use repeatedly.

The act of shaping causes the eyes of the SHAPER to turn white or black, depending on whether they are using the FIRMAMENT or ATRAMENTA, respectively. See Vol IV: Shaping.

SHAPING OF CREATION, the: Myr. His. Event in the mythology and ancient history of ELYDEN that took place in the FIRST AGE, when the DEMIURGES shaped the matter of creation following the so-called GREAT DIVINE UNDERTAKING of THE SHAPER, that separated the SEA OF CHAOS in the FIRMAMENT ABOVE AND THE ATRAMENTA BELOW, with the MATERIAL PLANE between.

Detailed in the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN, the Demiurges shaped the Material Plane, creating PLANETS (known as the ORBS OF LIFE), and shaping continents and oceans upon them, even going so far as to create life from the various elements that arose from their Shaping. See Vol IV: the Mythologia Elyden.

SHAR, the: Drc. Str. Org. Outpost in the DALMMA Mountains in the north east of the HENDECARCHY of DERAEIA in the east of MALAN, where ONEIROMANCERS observe the DREAMSCAPE of IWILL.

SHAR SURYAH: (B. c. 3850 – D. 3928) Mil. SERAPI warlord, who in 3893 RM became kratocrat of city of HITTA in MHAROKK, going on to become a popular leader. He openly defied the KORACHANI EMPIRE, which at the time was in control of Mharokk, winning various Mharokkin settlements over the next decades (many through his force of personality alone), leading to the formation of the Kratocratic State of Hitta in 3914.

Korachani armies met his forces outside the city of Hitta in 3913 RM, but were defeated, leading to a further rise in popularity, after which he would go on to gain control of Mharokk by 3920 RM, uniting it with Hitta under a single banner.

His assassination in 3928 RM (thought to be at the hands of SARASTROAN agents) threw his lands into disarray, and they fractured in 3929 RM, with his heir, SHAR SURYAH II, maintaining the lands of Hitta, while Mharokk itself was reclaimed by Korachan after a short war with Sarastro.

SHAR SURYAH II: (B. 3902) Pol. Son of the SERAPI warlord SHAR SURYAH, who in 3893 became autocrat of the city state of HITTA and would later claim MHAROKK itself. His assassination in 3928 RM threw his lands into disarray, and they fractured in 3929 RM, with his son maintaining the lands of Hitta, while Mharokk itself was reclaimed by Korachan after a short war with Sarastro.

SHARA: Geo. Expansive savannah and scrubland in central VENTHIR stretching from the KAUTULD in c Venthir to the coast along the TORRENT OF KARROCK.

SHARAA: Rui. Ancient FIFTH AGE YARAOMIC settlement in the territory of GHALATTA, in what is today the city of SARAT, in the north of the demesne of HARAPPA (3). It was one of few Yaraomic settlements of note, and was overtaken by KORACHANI forces in c. 300 RM during their conquest of northern SAMMAEA.

SHARA DOVE: Fau. Bird native to the north east of SAMMAEAN and parts of southern LLACHATUL, and named after the SHARA savannah of VENTHIR. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

SHARAK TI: Lan. Soc. The SAMMAECI word for a trade agreement, with roots in the intricate trade ceremonies of the ancient MEDHAMANNI EMPIRE. It carries a lot of cultural meaning and its usage is not fully understood by outsiders, though is believed to be akin to a verbal contract.

SHARAN: Set. Settlement in the south of ALAM BETHYL, in the east of the territory of GELAH. It lies entirely south of the northern POLAR CIRCLE and as a result its industries remains active all year round. It lies close to the border with CISNERIA, though there is little contact between the two due to the DIVUMMA Mountains lying between them (Pop. c. 7,300).

SHARATHA: 1. Geo. Large valley basin in the north west of LIMOTH^(1.) in the north of the emirate of OTHOTEL^(1.). It has a cooler climate than surrounding regions and is noted for its mist and many small caves.

2. Rvr. River in the west of LIMOTH^(1.), flowing south through the emirate of OTHOTEL^(1.) for 565-miles from sources in the KOTHA ICHOLLIGHA and EPHIREN Mountains before meeting the coast at the SEA OF KRYMEA.

SHAREN 'ASHA HADI: (B. 3903 RM) Pol. Present Queen of BA'AKH. She is known for her longevity, which is attributed to her UMBRAPHAGY and other ATRAMENTAL procedures. Sharen and her predecessors ruled as regents in the name of SATHEP THE RISEN, who is technically the ruler of Ba'akh.

SHARHAM: also 'Elyden's Vengeance'. f. Myt. His. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, a SCION of the DEMIURGE ARIMASPI. She is remembered on the island of ISEA as a champion of the natural world and an ally of those who dedicated themselves to the preservation of nature. She was a fearless fighter and travelled ELYDEN extensively, though always returned to Isea, which was said to be her birthplace. She is best known in IDRIIS for having defeated an ancient industrialised army in the late THIRD AGE, though eventually died of wounds sustained in the battle. A tree is said to have later grown on the spot where she fell, which is now known as the TREE OF SHARHAM.

She was close with the MORTALS and beasts (HAGHORIM) of that island and various lineages, some surviving to this day, claim her as a distant ancestor. Most notable is the kindred of QIADIR, that was amongst the staunchest of opponents of the ruling dynasty of ZAYIID. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

SHARAM, TREE OF: Leg. Flo. Large unique tree in the north west of IDRISS, on the island of ISEA. It is said to have grown over the spot where the SCION SHARHAM died years before after defeating an army of industrialists. The tree is now enclosed by the fortress of the SENTINELS OF ARIMASPI, which is known as the CHILAGRIA, and its fruit have restorative properties and are used by the members of order.

SHARIL: Set. Coastal settlement in the far south east of ELEKHID (Pop. c. 7.000).

SHARIM: Set. Major city in the c of ZHARIAH⁽²⁾. It is an industrial centre, and many engines and machines found in Zhariah are manufactured here. It is noted for the exotic appearance of its people, who have inherited the HALFBLOODED traits of the ancient ancestors (Pop. c. 121,000).

SHARIR: Set. Settlement in the c south of NÁRTHEL, along the course of THE SHADOW MARCH and the RED ROUTE. As a result, it has many hostels and inns that cater to those travelling through it (Pop. c. 10,000).

SHARLEH: Geo. Mountain-range in the KORACHANI colony of CRASSULA in the far north east of MENISCEA. The range stretches for 375-miles, dominating the eastern coast of the KIGOAN peninsula.

SHAROOK: Geo. Highland region in the west of ZHARIAH⁽²⁾, serving as a border between it and ABACARDAT and the JAHADAT STATES. In 2941 RM it became home to exiled royalists who would move west in QARALAM, subjugating it within only a few years.

SHAROTHA: Geo. 400-mile ridge in western ANDILUTH, serving as a border with MOAH. The ridge forms the north western-most part of the CAMMOREAN Mountains.

SHARRI: also 'Cliffs of Sharri', and 'Quarry of Sharri'. Geo. Expansive quarry in the c east of IMELKOT that is cut into the side of the MENEFIR Mountains. Over two miles long, the quarry cuts a straight line into the mountains, leaving a sheer drop over 250-ft. high to the bottom

SHASHAKAR: Set. Large city in the c north west of RHEA, to the south east of the AHRAN HIGHLANDS. After laws were passed in 247 RM giving the KARKAUTHI kings divine right to rule over the lands of ARRETOY, the city dissented, and three members of the Arretoyan royal family were killed. This began a period of strive that ended in 253 RM, with the independence of much of what had once been Arretoy.

Today, the city's populace is amongst the staunchest supporters of the COURT OF DREAMS (Pop. c. 40,000).

SHATHA LAI: Rui. Ruined tower thought to date back to the FOURTH
AGE, in the north of the CAUAT badlands in the c of CUTH.

SHATTERED GATE, the: Rui. Ancient edifice in the LERASA Mountains, in the south west of WESTERN LLACHATUL, along the border between AYAD and RAONGEN^(2.). It is in the form of a monumental gate with brass gates fused shut. Little is known of its origins, though it is thought to precede the WAR OF SCOURGING in the FOURTH AGE.

SHATTERED MIRROR, the: Int. Leg. His. Obj. An ancient MAGICKAL artefact that shaped the early centuries of the VÁMAN ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION.

The Mirror is a timeless subject of KORACHANI lore, its first mention likely dating back to pre-imperial times, where it was known as an ancient and powerful artefact, created by ancient gods. These descriptions match those of a GODSTONE, and DEMIURGES or SCIONS, respectively – all details that few if any are privy to). The object was believed to amplify the emotions and desires of those looking into it, giving them a myriad of visions of possible futures, ranging from fates that lead to their death to others that lead to glory and fortune. Some SHAPERS with an affinity for particular SPHERES (ANIMISTS, farseers, or SEERS^(1.), for instance) who used the Mirror might have gleaned the paths to reach their desired futures, making the Mirror incredibly dangerous.

Tales of the artefact became an important developmental touchstone for many shapers, whose years of training were more often than not fuelled by tales of its history.

The PALADINS OF THE SHADOW were an early Korachani organisation that shapers. Many of its members were shapers themselves, and grew up on stories of the Mirror, and sometime in c. 800 RM a group of these Paladins formed a sect that broke away from the main group, and devoted themselves to the search for the Mirror. Over the years this grew into an almost alchemical exercise in improving themselves rather than a search for a physical object, but nevertheless, the sect began to attract more and more members from the main order, until its members outnumber the parent organisation.

Amazingly, an artefact matching the Mirror's description and properties was found in an ancient stronghold in the PRISON CARCERI in c. 1080 RM. Little is publicly known of what happened to the Mirror once it was retrieved.

Its goal fulfilled, the sect returned to policing shapers in the empire, and it slowly evolved into the Váman Order within a century, being formally re-christened so in 1196 RRM.

Some claim that the Order used the Mirror to manipulate fate to achieve secret power within the empire – an act known within imperial urban legends and oral histories as the SHADOWED PACT – though these fanciful tales are ignored by serious historians.

SHATTERED PENINSULA, the: Geo. Rocky peninsula in the north west of IO. It forms the STRAIT OF GARAP that divides the SEA OF ETHA from the DAARKEN GULF. It is named after the many canyons and fissures that are found there.

SHATTERED ROCK, TEMPLE OF THE: Rel. Str. Rock outside the city of KORACHAN, where the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR destroyed the temple of LIFE AND DEATH, breaking its dolmen in two with a strike of his blade. The first temple of the UNDYING MACHINE was erected there, before the rise of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE emerged as an organised religion, and it survives to this day, as an important holy site, that is inaccessible to most to preserve its condition.

SHAUROLATHAHAN: Geo. Volcanic region in the far north of ELYDEN, in the WHITE SHEET. The region is renowned for its sulphur vents, many of which are buried beneath thick layers of ice, though geysers do protrude from the ice, forming conical vents that steam, as though in defiance of their surroundings.

SHAY: Geo. Mountain in the c west of SARASTRO, forming an extension of the OTINDHAR Mountains.

SHAYAAT: also 'the Singing Statues'. Int. Arc. Three colossi in the south eastern foothills of the LONELY MOUNTAINS in TEMUJA that take the form of vague humanoids with their hands cupped to their mouths. They predate the present Temujan culture and are likely a relic of the early NAHORIAN expansions north, though references made to them by the TUTELARY worship prevalent in Temuja indicates that they were appropriates as guardians of some form. They are named for the eerie whistling sound they produced when a strong northerly wind blows. They were likely used as a warning for frontier settlers of bad weather. They survive to this day and, though they are greatly weathered (one is destroyed), they continue to whistle the arrival of northerly winds.

SHAYANDI: Rvr. Major river in the north of KEPHUAAN flowing west and north for over 785-miles from sources in TAOGHLIN and MAO SAGHI Mountains, before meeting the coast at the VEREN ITRUSH. It is relatively fast-flowing for most of its course, and is home to various industrial centres.

SHAYKH: Fau. Creatures believed to be descended in some way from the DEMIURGE TALANTEHUT. They are incredibly ancient, dating back to the time when the Demiurges still walked ELYDEN, and are now desertdwellers and mystics, rarely making contact with other creatures. They are most common in SAMMAEA and its natural deserts.

Their bodies are gangly and alien, with long grotesque faces, not unlike those of horses or nectar-drinking insects. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

SHAZGIN: Dem. 'Shazgin'. Ntn. Nation in the c of MENISCEA. Its northern half is a vast highland plateau, which gives way in the c to lower scrublands and eventually deserts farther south, which are dominated by the rust Wastes of VERMES. It is ruled by a long-standing sultanate that has had various dynasties, the current one of which is the TAREQIAN DYNASTY, whose present ruler is ZARIFIRA II. Its people wear dhotis, which vary in thickness based on region and are typically of patterns made from similar colours, and they commonly make use of SEVER TASHIS in their eating habits. The ruling dynasty emerged from the older far-ranging empire of VALARIM, that collapsed early in the FIFTH AGE. Adults shave their heads once they become adults, following the RITE OF SHER, and long hair is seen as unclean and uncouth.

It withdrew from the FEDERATION OF FREE NATIONS OF MENISCEA in 3258 RM. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

SHEADIL: Set. Major city in the c south west of IMEAL. It is a permanent along the course of the SOVEREIGNS' ROAD trade-route (Pop. c. 85,000).

SHEB ALAM: 1. Geo. Mountain in the north east of ALAM BETHYL, its name derived from the beast of legend^(2.) that is common in the Myths of Alam Bethyl.

2. Myt. Fau. Mythological beast common in the legends of ALAM BETHYL. It is commonly depicted as a cimmerian-coloured feline the size of a horse, with seven eyes. Each of which allows it to see different things, including the MATERIA OMNA and the OTHERWORLD.

SHEBEH: Pol. Set. Capital city of EASTERN LARISH, overlooking the SERUM SEA. It is the seat of the eastern half of the TWIN CROWN and is a major port city (Pop. c. 274,000).

SHEDACCID: Pol. Set. Capital city of LHACCIDA⁽²⁾, located in the c north of the nation. It is a relatively small city and retains many of its classical architecture, and forms a part of the ISHMMARRAN TRAIL and caters to the many merchants and travellers that cross through it (Pop. c. 37,000).

SHEDAMMA: Geo. Expansive inland plateau region in the south of SAMMAEA, dominating the lands south of the WORLD'S CROWN mountain, where the TROPIC OF MAOCARHL forms part of its border. The region's climate ranges from temperate to the south west, to arid in the north east.

SHEDANKH: Pol. Soc. Patrician House in the Korachani empire based in the region of PSALDA in Korachan. The house has roots in Khamid, and was descended from the ruling Pharoant caste that was in power when Korachan subjugated Khamid in 3021 RM. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

SHEDIM: Rel. Rnk. A priestly caste in JURRAS^(2,) entrusted with the castingout of evil spirits and bestowing benedictions.

SHEDKHARKHEM IV: (D. 2384 RM) Pol. His. The last of the SAPETI DYNASTS in KHAMID, who was assassinated by NATIT HENSHEF in 2384 RM

SHEET WORM: Fau. Vermin common in wetlands, particularly those of mild ATRAMENTAL TAINT. The worms are amphibious and continue growing throughout their lives, moulting every few months as they outgrow their current skin, and can reach lengths of 10 – 12-ft. They move by undulating their ventral fins, which let them move on land and water with equal ease, and they can even burrow in shallow mud of sand in this way. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

SHEKEAH: Set. Coastal city in the east of GIBEAH, overlooking the YIBBUGHAN SHALLOWS (Pop. c. 45,000).

SHEKZEJETH II: (B. 1564 – D. 1611 RM) Pol. His. Queen of the AMNICIAN DYNASTY in AHRISHEN, who acceded in 1585 RM following her father's death. She was sickly from a young age, and court doctors thought she might have a rare form of AEPATHY that was resistant to treatment. She ruled largely by proxy, delegating work to members of her council. She became increasingly ill throughout her life and by 1611 RM she had reached the end of her days, and she had her court prepare her daughter Isbaaha for the role she would soon inherit.

Word reached AQEEL OF TANDENDER, a cousin of the family who had spent his life in EBUSHEN, and he seized the opportunity, travelling to AMNICA, arriving there just as the queen died. He carried out a coup d'état in the confusion following her demise, and killed her daughter, seizing the throne for himself, ending the line of Amnician rulers and instating the HOUSE OF TANDENDER in their place.

SHEL: Set. Settlement in the south west of GIBEAH. It is noted for its large foundries, where raw nickel is shaped into ingots, for transportation north to GUAZADEAH (Pop. c. 10,000).

SHER DHIA: also 'Granary Fort'. Str. Large circular forts with large courtyards common in the south of SHAZGIN. Their circular courtyards are flanked by tiered stores that are used by specific families to store grain, while the courtyard itself serves as a makeshift caravanserai, with room for trade caravans and beasts of burden inside it, and a larger granary that is used by the state. Families are free to use these granaries to store their crops though must donate 10% of the weight to the state granary.

The granary forts are considered as almost sacred places and are respected by the people, though are still manned by a handful of soldiers each and taxmen from the state coffers who ensure that people pay the 10% dues. They are common in rural areas and form the centre of most small farming communities, where they also serve as a central place where people can meet (such as during festivals, including the RITE OF SHER) or take shelter in the event of enemy attack or extreme weather (such as dust or rain storms). Families flee to the fortress, which is locked up from the inside and defeated by state soldiers stationed there and the families themselves, who take arms and stand on the highest stores which serve as ramparts.

SHERAHAD: Set. Large city in the c north of SARASTRO that is colloquially referred to as a female (Pop. c. 50,000).

SHEREF NEL: Set. Settlement in the south east of Khamid, in The Living Lands. It overlooks the sea of Pharanx from atop a high cliff; a reminder of the region's destructive past. Its main industry is viticulture.

Local legend has it that a far older smaller settlement once stood close to present-day Sheref Nel, and that the settlement was sundered in two during the CATACLYSM OF KHAMID in 101 RM (Pop. c. 17,400).

SHELF, the: see MAR ISS.

SHELL: see NULL.

SHELL MIDDEN: Soc. Geo. Waste mounds made up of discarded mollusc shells that are common in areas where oyster farming is common.

More specifically, the term is used for the numerous hills located close to the coast in the north west of KHULL, dating back to around 1 millennium. They are the product of ancient coastal people who would dispose of mollusc shells on an industrial level during the height of clamming and oyster farming. There are thousands of individual middens, and many of them are very large, rivalling hills in size, and most are overgrown, barely recognisable today.

Some manufactories now take advantage of this plentiful resource, collecting these ancient shells and using them in a variety of industries, including construction, and as fertiliser.

SHEMAYAK: (B. c. 3090 - D. c. 3150 RM) Mil. Warlord who in c. 3130 RM united the disparate city-states that inherited the failed pirate city-state of TAZAYIL, becoming the patriarch of the royal family that would go on to rule the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT, which was founded in 3259 RM. He is remembered fondly today as a hero and bringer of peace and stability to the region.

SHEN: Cur. Currency used in PARTHIS and its colonies and dependencies.
See Vol II: Currency and Coinage in Elyden.

SHENA: Geo. Mountain-range and surrounding highlands dominating the c of VENTHIR, dividing the SHARA plains to its south from the forest of MAPHANI^(1.) to the north and the plains of HAMSHEN to the north west. It's highest peak is known as HETEPHERES'S CROWN.

SHENTRA: Ind. Set. Major mining settlement in the north of AHRISHEN.
The city and satellite villages specialise in flint and shale production and the region immediately surrounding them is covered in open pits and quarries (Pop. c. 20,000).

SHEONE: Set. Small city in the south east of the emirate of LIMOTH^(2.) in Limoth^(1.) (Pop. c. 17,000).

SHEPHERDS OF THE ROAD: Org. The 'militant' arm of the MINASTERIA OF ROADS, the Shepherds of the Road are guards who patrol the most well-travelled roads of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, keeping both the roads and their travellers safe. Their main concern, however, is the safe transportation of trade goods, ensuring the continued sustenance of the KORACHANI economy. They are most common in the direct surroundings outside cities, where they keep an eye on traffic entering and leaving settlements, and ensuring that they stick to designated roads.

They are relatively well-equipped, with dark blue uniforms, and light metal pauldrons and breastplates, that are decorative rather than functional, and they carry single shot rifles and batons.

SHEPHERD OF ROT: Leg. Legendary figure common in the east of CENTRAL LLACHATUL in lands north of the SEA OF URAN, particularly the HARÉSHK, AHRISHEN and SAUA. The Shepherd of Rot is a solitary figure, commonly dressed in funerary vestments, who travels the land, speaking nonsensical words that are considered to be prophecies of the end times. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

SHEPHERD KING, the: (B. c. -100 – D. 903 RM) Pol. His. Ruler of the now-extinct nation of MHARAKA for over nine centuries. He discovered an ancient THYMI crown, gaining strange abilities as a result. Drunk with power, he subjugated a nearby town, and as people pledged their loyalty to him, he found himself growing stronger still. Over the course of a few tumultuous years, he subjugated most settlements along the NATIAL plains, uniting them under his crown, and he became known as the SHEPHERD KING – an insult created by his opponents that he took on as his own.

Until then the area was unstable, plagued by AATI attacks, though the Shepherd Kings unification of the tribes and city-states allowed them to work together, and the region was cleared by c. -20 RM.

His life prolonged by the crown, he founded a new capital – the city of KEKELIB – at the mouth of the river FATHA (now 85-miles from the coast), which rapidly became a powerful metropolis by c. 200 RM, its armies defending its borders (which had rapidly expanded west over the ensuing years) from KORACHANI incursion. In 407 RM the Shepherd King entered into diplomatic agreements with HOAMM, which provided Mharaka with many new trade enterprises and eventually the founding of ATRAMENTAL colleges in KHYMER in 523 RM.

He was assassinated under mysterious circumstances in 903 RM, leading to the Korachani subjugation of Mharaka over the coming decades, culminating in the siege and destruction of the city of Kekelib, in 933 RM. This saw the end of Mharaka, and the birth of MHAROKK.

SHER: Rui. Old capital of TARTAK built on the ruins of a far older settlement known as AHSHER. It was abandoned in 2053 RM due to the ATRAMENTAL poisoning of the river KHARAD. The city covered both banks of the river and stood on great stone pillars to survive its yearly inundations. Now it stands as an empty shell, its great temples crumbling into the BLACK MARSHES around it, its hollow edifices, once mighty, now home to little more than grotesques and degenerates that terrorise the region, inhibiting trade.

SHERRA: Set. Fortified settlement in the east of ALAM BETHYL, in the territory of TABERCIL^(2.) (Pop. c. 6,500).

SHERRI: His. Eth. Historical ethnicity that originated in the HOGGOTHA ISZ in c. -200 RM. They were forced south between c. 1200 – 1500 RM (possibly following the MT. KLAUVAKAN CALAMITY, or by increased SERAPI activity, settling in what are today SIMBARA and AKANTHRA, taking on the role of labourers and craftsmen, being absorbed by the native populations. Some clung to their nomadic heritage, slowly becoming a caste apart from others moving across the land, offering their services as seasonal workers and tinkerers, though they were largely disliked. They were most numerous in the former region, and though they became the backbone of the economy, they were never regarded with much respect, with very few of them achieving high social ranks.

The rapid spread of LAZANISM in Simbara in c. 2450 RM further ostracised the sherri people, leading to a greater class divide that saw them sink further into the lower classes over the next centuries. By c. 2700 RM they had effectively become a slave caste, working for meagre wages and living in simple slums and ghettoes, segregated from the other Simbaran peoples. It is not believed that this degeneration was the result of wickedness, but simply ignorance and a failure to see the results of slow changes.

The sherri were at the centre of the SHERRIAN CIVIL WAR that started in 2711 RM in the city of RELVERA, when a large sherri workforce was gunned down by overeager troops, leading to a 40-year guerilla conflict that ended with the sherri defeat. Following this, the remaining sherri began a slow exodus from Simbara, settling in VAUN, AKANTHRA, and CENGUISSE over the next centuries.

SHERRIAN CIVIL WAR: Mil. His. An important event in the history of SIMBARA that began in 2723 RM, though which was set in motion over a decade earlier with the mistreatment the sherri lower caste through the spread of LAZANISM, culminating in 2711 RM in the city of RELVERA, where a large SHERRI workforce was gunned down following an unfortunate escalation of events. This led to sherri workers across Simbara revolting. Over the years they gained the support of various natives, including the backing of people in the government, through which they were able to win themselves a portion of the Simbaran armed forces. These were used to good effect in 2723 RM, when they attacked fort PAWER, denying the defence a vital stronghold.

This began a conflict in which accepted forms of warfare were eschewed by the sherri forces in favour of guerilla style actions characterised by subterfuge, raids, and sabotage, which led to the war dragging on for over 40-years, ending finally in 2766 RM with the defeat of the sherri rebels and their allies.

It was a hollow victory, however, and not only was government left ailing, but the nation itself was in shambles, desperately in want of a charismatic leader. Simbara found one, in the shape of REXIMAND PROLGAPEA, who would later become the first emperor of a newly-united Simbara.

SHERTAL: Rel. Deity in the YAGHUKLI PANTHEON that is worshipped by various peoples in the BARRIER LANDS. Shertal is a deity of death and guardian of the underworld, whose belief likely stems from the deeper CHTHONIC MYSTERIES of HOGGOTHA ISZ. Worship of Shertal is widespread and people make offerings to her during their daily lives. See Vol IV: Gods and Pantheons.

SHERTUR PECE: (B. 1231 - D. 1271 RM) Art. Car. Explorer and artist who in 1261 RM joined the great KORACHANI expedition south to KHARKHARADONTID Kharkharadontis known as the UNDERTAKING. Born in MHAROKK, he was not an initial member and joined as the expedition passed south through his home town, where his navigational and artistic skills were seen as an asset. Indeed, during his years on the expedition his copious note-taking and sketches and art proved invaluable resources to people in the HEARTLAND learning of the discoveries in the SAMMAEAN wastes. He died in 1071 RM in the city of NOAVATUR of ailments brought about by his travels through ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED land, by then already famous for his art, particularly his oil paintings depicting the GLASS PLAINS OF CHUROTH, which became famous in Korachan, with prints of them found for sale to this day. The originals are now kept under lock and key in the IMPERIAL ARCHIVES in KHADON, where much of his work remains unpublished.

SHERUSALL: Sea. Bay in the south of the SEA OF ORRIDA, in the northern coast of the TEMPLAR STATES, overlooking the entrance into the inland sea of DORRA.

SHET: Mil. Str. Fortress in TERARA in the c of LYRIDIA DHAI, overlooking the border with COTHON.

SHETUR: 1. Geo. Hill, around 50-miles long in the c of SKAROS, overlooking the ISHLASCAR plains.

- 2. (1,400-ft.) Geo. Highest rocky peak in the eponymous hill^(1.).
- 3. Mil. Str. Fort in the c of SKAROS, along the highest point of the eponymous hill.

SHEZALIAH; Dem. 'Shezallahan'. Ntn. Nation in the far south east of Sammaea, to the direct south of ZHARIAH(2.). It emerged from Zhariah in 3502 RM following a period of strife, and its people are insular, rumoured to be practitioners of BIOMACHINERY. Its south eastern-most territories are dominated by the Atramentally corrupted region known as THE SOILURE, which is what fuels their biomechanical industries. When still part of Zhariah it was home to many royal palaces and necropolises, the largest of which survives today in the heart of the now-capital city OTHOROKK.

Today it is known for its agriculture, groves and gardens, and is ruled by a dual monarchy known as the BIMARID CROWN in which two regents form the head of state – typically siblings, cousins or similar close relations.

Its people have an ancestral hatred of Qaralam and Zhariah over past events. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

- SHIAAN: 1. Sea. Bay in the north of SAMMAEA, forming the northern-most part of the IGUZZEN lagoon. Its waters are relatively deep, compared with those of the lagoon, and remain fruitful to the fishermen of the region.
- 2. Set City in the west of $\underline{KAZZAR}^{(2.)}$, in the north of $\underline{SAMMAEA}$. Its main industry is fishing (Pop. c. 38,400).

SHIAD: Geo. Island in the sea of IDALA, off the south western coast of DANU. It was 'discovered' and named by the explorer BOHMIUS in 1526 RM. It is home to the OBSERVATORY OF PAZZAD, though is otherwise unpopulated.

SHIARTHAR: Geo. Plains in the c south of AZAZEM.

SHIB: Cur. Common coin denomination in THE SURRACH, produced through punch-marking. The Shib is commonly valued at 1/5th of an ARK. See Vol II: Currency and Coinage in Elyden.

SHIBBETH: 1. Lak. Lake along the course of the river SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾, forming part of the border between RHINOCOLOURA and ETHISTONITH.
2. Geo. Island in the eponymous lake. The remains of many dead merills can be found there, some thought to date back to the THIRD AGE or earlier.

SHIBBOLETH: 1. f. Myt. His. In the mythology and ancient history of ELYDEN, eleventh of the Two-and-Twenty DEMIURGES, whose children were the MERILLS.

She is depicted as a cursed and babbling being, with little care for the MORTAL PEOPLES or the politicking of her Demiurge siblings. Her tears are said to have created river Shibboleth^(3,).

Her known SCIONS are: ENNEI and LLACHATRA^(1.). See Vol IV: the Two-and-Twenty Demiurges.

- 2. Sca. An archaic name for the TORRENT OF KARROCK, common in the FOURTH AGE. Following the FADING, the name was forgotten, and it is today known as Karrock.
- 2. Rvr. River in SAMMAEA flowing north west for over 5,050-miles from sources beyond lake AKASM, in the DANOSOTH Mountains in the south of ETHISTONITH. The river flows through RHINOCOLOURA, AETHIOS, N'RAKH, PARAIYA, LIDEA and MHAROKK, before meeting the INNER SEA just south of the HARAPPAN^(2.) peninsula, at the BAY OF MHARKA, where silt deposited from the river has created the marshlands of ILASIMA. It also acts as a border between Paraiya and Lidea, and Mharokk and Lidea,

The river once featured prominently in the reproductive cycle of the MERILLS, where individuals on the cusp of reaching sexual maturity would return to the river's source in lake Akasm, though pollution and corruption of the river Shibboleth, as well as damming and industrialisation along its course has led to them dwindling greatly in numbers.

Though it shares a name with one of the Two-and-Twenty $\underline{DEMIURGES}$, it is unknown if the two are linked in any way, though in the ancient myth of Aethiosi nomads, the river was created by the tears of \underline{TEROTH} (daughter of the Demiurge $\underline{NEITH}^{(1.)}$) after she was raped by $\underline{VOLUPIS}$ (son of the Demiurge $\underline{SYBARIS}^{(1.)}$).

The river was dammed in 2943 RM in Aethios, forcing the KORACHANI EMPIRE into war against it, as the construction of the dam slowed the flow of the river downstream to a fraction of its previous output, leading to the dwindling of dozens of imperial cities. After decades of a largely uneventful war, a desperate Korachan was finally able to destroy the dam in 3017 RM, though the subsequent flooding of the river led to death and destruction downstream, causing more damage than the construction of the dam had in the first place. The dam was never restored and lies ruined to this day.

4. also 'the River'. Ast. Con. Constellation along the equator. See Vol II: Constellations.

SHIBA: Set. Abandoned city in TARTAK. Like most of its fellow settlements along the river KHARAD, Shiba was deserted when the influence of the ATRAMENTA on the river became too much. Unlike most other settlements, including the old capital SHER, Shiba is still maintained by a semi-permanent workforce of priests and hierophants who tend to the sinking idols of the Tartakhid pantheon.

SHIBANIA: Pol. Ser. Capital of ILLAKRAR, located in the c N of the nation (Pop. c. 2,500,000).

SHIBANORS: Set. Settlement in the c south west of AETHIOS, 25-miles north east from the river SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾ (Pop. c. 6,000).

SHIBARITH: Myt. Fau. An aberration thought to be a SCION or other creature of divine origins (given the possible etymological roots of its name, many postulate this is the DEMIURGE SYBARIS⁽¹⁾, or a creature somehow related to her). Vaguely humanoid in form, its stomach is grotesquely distended and resembles the bloated abdomen of an insect. Immeasurably old, and gifted an uncanny bestial intellect, it has become the living deity of a diaspora of people who began worshipping it sometime in the FIFTH AGE in the deserts of APLI in the north of BROR⁽¹⁾.

Willing (though brainwashed) supplicants donate their livers to the thing, which eats them raw in return for its psychic protection against would-be predators, intrusion from without and the FIRMAMENTAL storms that batter the region. Its appetite is voracious and other than supplicants, it feasts on the organs of sacrificed animals and prisoners. See Vol IV: Gods and Pantheons; and Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

SHIBB, TEMPLE OF: Rel. Str. Ancient temple named after the DEMIURGE SHIBBOLETH^(1.) in the south east of VENTHIR. It is said to be possessed by the essence of Shibboleth, and is built on the site of a great monument to the Demiurge, which was toppled centuries ago and now rests in the bottom of the TORRENT OF KARROCK.

Its monolithic dome – said to be close to a mile high and almost twice as wide – has its own weather, and it has been known to rain inside the unbroken dome at times. The air within is haunted by the cracking and whispering of materials that expand and contract with the change in temperatures between day and night; and the DREAMS of those who sleep near are plagued by visions and nightmares.

The temple was envisioned and constructed by the priestess HAMMOLEKETH THE HIGH, who employed masses of slaves and followers over a thousand years, between c. -50 – 600 RM to create the dome. Its construction was strangely ignored by QUEEN HETEPHERES of Venthir as well as other rulers and powers, and the temple is still overseen by Hammoleketh and the few who follow the cult of Shibboleth.

Some think that the temple (and the predating monument) was built over the resting place of the Demiurge Shibboleth^(1,), whose essence some scholars postulate is in POSSESSION of Hammoleketh's body, which has survived untainted for over 5,000 years, where it remains to this day, guarding the temple. Despite the claims there is little proof of this.

Given the manner in which most churches and states persecute foreign religions, it is unknown how the temple has been allowed to survive for this long without being opposed by groups such as the ICONOCLASTS⁽²⁾.

It is considered by many to be worthy of inclusion amongst the WONDERS OF THE ANCIENT WORLD, though is too 'modern' to be considered.

SHIBBOTHA: Geo. Main island in the archipelago known as the SHIBBOTHA ISLES, off the south western coast of SAMMAEA. It is the primary point of contention in the territorial dispute between KEPHUAAN, FALLAROUR, and the CORAL BARONIES, who both claim to be its rightful owners. This likely stems from the ruins of ancient cities located on the island (primarily RUOI and ELARI) and rumours that they were once industrial powers.

SHIBBOTHA ISLES: Geo. Island-chain in the south east of the SEA OF MERCUVIA, north of the SHIELD ISLES, to the west of KEPHUAAN. The islands are largely uninhabited and are contested by the states of Kephuaan, FALLAROUR and the CORAL BARONIES, which has led to soured relations between the two states and increased naval activity in the surrounding waters.

SHIBITH: Rvr. River in the c east of AETHIOS, flowing for 275-miles from sources in the ARAM Mountains before meeting its parent, the river SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾.

SHIBOTHA: Geo. Low rugged mountain and hills forming a natural border between the east of LIDEA, and the west of BA'AKH, which at their longest extent run for around 420-miles, covering some 45,000 square-miles of land, most of it hilly.

The mountainous area of the Shibotha – largely covering the centre of the range and its western hills – is home to a race of reptilian humanoids known as LACER; descendants of the SERAPIS, though more civilised.

SHIDAD: Set. Small city in the c north west of ABACARDAT, along the north eastern edge of the BITTER SEA. Like many settlements surrounding the UHBATAQI basin it is a major producer of salt (Pop. c. 3,000).

SHIDIS: Set. Settlement in the territory of FARIS in the south of SABIA (Pop. c. 4,300).

SHIDUK: See. Small city in the west of the JAHADAT STATES, under the control of the city of URDAH (Pop. c. 12,750).

SHIE: Plr. 'shie'. Mor. One of the original Two-and-Twenty MORTAL PEOPLES, and the children of the DEMIURGE SYBARIS^(1.). Their ancestral lands were known as DONISIA. They are mostly known for their second pair of lesser ventral arms, which, while lacking in strength, are nimble and capable of wielding tools and are often used to display an individual shie's jewellery. Their skin ranges greatly in colour, from russet to tan and brown to near black, with various shades and tints in between, often bearing patches and patterns, and they are often tattooed or ritually scarred. Their features are striking and are considered exotic and alluring by most other mortals.

They are not as sensitive to physical and sensory stimuli as the other mortal peoples, which has led many to follow their mother's path into hedonism and epicureanism, with many who are able to becoming libertines or bohemians. They also have a keen eye for colour (seeing a wider spectrum than, say, HUMANS) and composition, as well as an appreciation for the arts that surpasses that of most other mortals. They have two sets of vocal cords, giving them a wider vocal range than other mortals, as well as the capability to produce harmonious droning sounds. Their necks are wide and they speak in low tones, taking long breaths.

Never a numerous race, they scattered early on, stricken by wanderlust, and were perhaps the first race to encounter all of the other mortals, becoming minorities in great cities. They can be found in small numbers across ELYDEN to this day, where they work as entertainers and musicians—their secondary limbs allowing them to play specialised instruments, such as the ZIROL HARP, and the THITAR, amongst others. Most other races find them physically attractive, which has led to them being exploited across Elyden.

They rarely feature in major events in history, which appears to have been by design, and few records exist that link them to any wars or other conflicts and were it not for their presence in many imperial cities it is unlikely that we would even know about them at all. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life: Sicthain.

SHIELD ISLES, the: Geo. Series of islands in the south east of the SEA OF MERCUVIA, off the south western coast of KEPHUAAN, to the west and south of the CORAL BARONIES. The islands are so-named because in the region's myth, they guarded the mainland from sea-demons.

The isles have increased in size and number over the past millennium as Elyden's seas have steadily lowered, and they are today home to the ISLAND KINGDOM of FALLAROUR, whose capital is the city of OIZYSH.

SHIELD OF KATHISIS: His. Obj. Shield, wielded by the PROPHET KATHISIS during the exodus of his people into what is now TETHYSIA.

SHIELDWARDEN: Mil. Rnk. Hereditary rank of highest picket (settlement-guard) in the GREATTOWN of DUARIAHAHN in TEMUJA. The shieldwarden wears the Patrimonial Helm of the Shieldwardens, which has been passed down to new shieldwardens over many centuries.

SHIEUILL: Mil. Oth. HALFBLOOD leaders of the RYNDA militant caste in KASPIA. They are descendants of the only known halfblood line of ancestry of the WHITE ANGEL TAHIRA.

SHIG: Set. Small coastal city in the Free Land of TRINITANIA^(1,) northern coast of SAMMAEA, in the far north of KHARKHARADONTIS, overlooking the SEA OF UGOLOTH. It forms part of the SALT ROAD (Pop. c. 13,200).

SHIHIR: Set. Coastal settlement in the c south of EZASUH. The settlement is built around an ancient glass monument commonly attributed to SECOND AGE masters (Pop. c. 10,000).

SHIID: Rvr. Major river in the north and c of NOAVATUR flowing south east for 1,300-miles from sources in the OEIKITH Mountains before meeting lake SAURIAN.

SHIKAROU: Rvr. Wetlands in the north of PARAIYA, bordering the south west of LIDEA, along the course of the river SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾. Its waters are known to be populated by crocodiles and other river fauna.

SHIL: Set. Settlement and caravanserai in the north of IO, forming part of the short trade-route leading north into SALOROC (Pop. c. 6,400).

SHILIK: Set. City in the west of TARATI^(1.). Its main industry is metalworking, primarily the casting of iron, and the manufacture of steel and pig iron (Pop. c. 50,000).

SHIMACHI: Rvr. River in SAUA.

SHIMMERING CLIFFS: Geo. Expansive cliffs stretching for some 350-miles forming the easternmost expanse of the ARGENT Mountains, and a natural border between the east of MALAN and the west of TETHYSIA. The cliffs are named after the natural quartz deposits that glint in the morning sun, and they are infamous for lacking any natural passage across the majority of their length. They stand at over 1,800-ft. high at their highest point, where the TWIN FALLS OF VATULIA plunge into the desert below before flowing east as the river NYALLA.

SHIN: Lak. Lake in the c of BANT, along the course of river SCATURIA.

SHINAR: 1. Lak. Lake in the c north of SARASTRO.

- 2. Rvr. River in the north of SARASTRO, stretching north into the south of NÁRTHEL. The river flows south for over 450-miles from sources in the UEFIR HIGHLANDS, before meeting its parent, the river EBEVIR.
- 3. Ind. Set. Settlement and open-cast diamond mine in the DELOMIG region of SARASTRO. The settlement has roots in an earlier FOURTH AGE city atop whose ruin it is built (Pop. c. 9,000).
- 4. Mil. Str. Major fortress in the DELOMIG region of SARASTRO, guarding the diamond mines there.

SHINAR RIVER, BATTLE OF THE: His. War. Battle that took place between SARASTROAN defenders and VENTHIRI aggressors around the river SHINAR (2.) in the north of Sarastro in 3703 RM, during the early years of the WAR OF SUNDERING. Venthiri troops were attempting to cross the river to approach the city of TARSUS but were stopped at the river, leading to a large-scale conflict taking place there in which they were defeated and forced back.

SHIORI: Geo. Mountain-range in SAUA, in whose foothills the capital ADAIA is located.

SHIOSA: Set. Small city in the north of SAUA (Pop. c. 18,000).

SHIRAT: f. His. Pol. Per. (B. 2461–D. 2515 RM) The last true autocratic queen of TISHANNA (2.) who acceded the throne in 2480 RM. She reigned during the UTTRANI SCHISM, leading its troops to victory, and who helped establish the new borders between her lands and ABATTUR in the east. She was known for her level head and it was her restraint that stopped the Tishannan armies from taking all of Abattur following their victory in the war.

The years following the war were marked by an increased desire by many within Tishanna to abolish the monarchy and Shirat, childless and never truly comfortable with the monarchy, saw this mood worsen over the next few years, and acquiesced, putting into motion decrees that would end the autocratic powers of the monarch, downgrading them a more ceremonial role. This process was completed in 2513 RM with the founding of a new republic constitution in Tishanna (renamed TISARA alongside the constitutional changes), after which she stepped down as autocratic queen, becoming figurehead of the new republic. The feudal dukes and lords of the old monarchy became republic councillors representing the people who lived in their lands. Some were vocal about their displeasure with this change but these protests diminished over the next years.

She was assassinated by a misguided monarchist in 2515 RM, leading to years of mourning across Tisara, though her changes held true. Her nephew HACHEM assumed the mantle following her death, beginning a tradition that endures to this day.

SHOLYSH: Set. Coastal settlement on the island of ARRIARA in the west of the CORAL BARONIES. Its people's main diet consists of soft-shelled shrimp that lives in the waters around the SHIBBOTHA and SHIELD ISLES. These are boiled and eaten whole, usually in stews or with legumes, and as a result locals are known for the slight orange-pink tint to their skin (Pop. c. 6,000).

SHOUB: Set. Major coastal city in the c north west of SHAZGIN (Pop. c. 380.000).

SHIPRA: Set. Settlement in the south of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES, forming part of the IMYRI TRADE-ZONE (Pop. c. 6,500).

SHIRAF: Set. Major wine-growing region, named after the largest city, in the west of PARTHIS, overlooking the coast of the CAMARINAL SEA (Pop. c. 10.000).

SHIRAI NESHVARA: f. Mil. Pol. Per. (B. 3968 RM). A former slave who rose to prominence as a leader of one of PHYRR'S most feared mercenary companies, the Iron Shadows, and later becoming the overall general of its military forces in the war against Maenmist following the death of her predecessor, KASHTA DRAVYAN. Neshvara is known for her cunning and brutal efficiency in battle, never shying from using the troops under her command as pawns and fodder. This stems from a history of undertaking incredibly dangerous missions while in the Iron Shadows. Despite her origins as a slave warrior, Neshvara has gained a reputation for loyalty to the Imperiarch, though rumours persist that she may have her own agenda.

SHURUG: Set. Settlement in the west of KASPIA, overlooking lake ALGIA (Pop. c. 6,300).

SHMALL: Mar. Pol. Rnk. Political assassins in the nation of ACHRABAL, known to train in the city of SOSOL.

SHMEN: Set. Settlement in the c-south east of GIBEAH (Pop. unknown).

SHOAR: Geo. Roughland basin in the far north of RHINOCOLOURA. It's northern-most reaches, along the spine of the OGGADEN formation, form part of the border with AETHIOS.

SHOG HARRAB: Geo. Badlands in the south of SARAGOS. They are known for the remnants of an ancient sprawling stone city, known today as OANT.

SHOLA: Lak. Lake in the c south of AMMESH.

SHOLARAI: Set. Settlement in the c south west of AMMESH, situated along the northern shore of lake SHOLA (Pop. c. 6,000).

SHOLLAEA: His. Ancient FIFTH AGE YARAOMIC settlement in the territory of LEKKHUA, in what is today the settlement of SHONEA, in the c north of VAALK. It was one of few Yaraomic settlements of note, and was overtaken by KORACHANI forces in c. 850 RM during its conquest of VALKA.

SHOLZAUA: Set. Small city in the c of BANT, along the north westernmost shore of lake \underline{SHIN} (Pop. c. 18,000).

SHONDA'S EMPORIUM OF ANTIQUITIES AND ODDITIES: also 'Shonda's' Int. Bus. Str. Org. Premier PARTHISAN purveyors and auctioneers of antiques with branches in major cities and its headquarters based in TETHRA. It employs adventurers and brokers who operate across ELYDEN with orders to buy, steal, loot and otherwise acquire treasures for sale in the emporium. Many ancient artifacts pass through here before being sold. GODSTONES, SOULPEARLS, and other rare treasures and materials of the ancient world have been acquired and sold here, amongst many others.

SHONEA: Set. Small city in the c north west of LIDEA. Its primary industry is the cultivation and exportation of spices, in particular the BAHARAT blend, which is popular across much of NORTHERN SAMMAEA, being popular as far West as THE SURRACH. It is built atop the ruin of an early FIFTH AGE YARAOMIC settlement, which was known as SHOLLAEA (Pop. c. 18.000).

SHOR: Set. City in the south west of BROR (1.) (Pop. c. 50,000).

SHORAB: Set. Coastal city in the east of TAHALL, known for its drydocks and ship scarp yards (Pop. c. 43,000).

SHOREWALKER: Veh. Tec. Soc. Ambulatory machine constructed by the people of ANDILUTH consisting of a light metal or wooden frame that supports multiple spindly limbs that move under wind-power harnessed from large airfoils made from stretched animal hide. The shorewalkers are made possible by the strong prevailing winds blowing south from the SEA OF BYSSOS almost year-round and fit the nomadic lifestyle of the region.

The shorewalkers are used by itinerants who scour the flat expanse of their homeland for wrecks washed up on the shore, which can sometimes reach ten miles inland following harsh winter storms. Traditionally they are large enough to accommodate a single passenger and stowage, though a few have been encountered that are large enough for a group of people, though they can be unreliable, making them rare.

SHORBA: Geo. Escarpment in the c south of LYRIDIA, linking the KYTHI Mountains in the north with the HELIOPARNASSUS Mountain in the south. It forms the western border of the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region of RASSAPTREX, and a marked decay of its formations has been noticed in its south eastern face.

SHOSS: Set. Small city in the c of the TEMPLAR STATES. It originated as a fishing village in c. 1200 RM, and later became a thriving port and home to many fishermen. Following the lowering of sea levels, it found itself landlocked, some 90-miles from the present-day coast at lake DORRA. Though diminished, it remains productive, growing cotton that is used in the textile trade (Pop. c. 9,300).

SHOT SHADDAH: Geo. Stony desert in the north of ABACARDAT, along the TROPIC OF MAOCARHL.

SHOTAUR: Rui. Frozen dungeon half-collapsed in the permafrost of the far east of the LOST DEMESNE, north of the border with ALAM BETHYL.

SHOTHA: Dem. 'Shothan'. Ntn. Located in the c of LLACHATUL, just north of the OLD FOREST, Shotha is a land built atop of the ruin of the nation of ASIBAIA following the WAR OF THE ARTIFEXES that ended in 3014 RM. Following the war, ALMAGEST was left an independent republic, exerting a great deal of influence and pressure upon the STRAIT OF SKAROS and nations along its coast. Many battles were fought in Asibaia during the conflict and the region was left ruined, its people fleeing into Almagest as refugees after the end of the war.

The mercenary DESOLATI, apocalyptic warrior-monks who believe that true enlightenment can only be reached following the ultimate decay of everything, became involved in the war, selling their services as caravan guards, mercenaries, sell-swords and bolstering patricians' private armies. They prospered greatly from the conflict, their coffers and ranks filled like never before by the wars' end. They settled the ruins of the far north of Asibaia (Almagest's expansion east having already swallowed the rest of its old lands), forming a loose coalition of a few dozen settlements, many of which would go on to become sizeable city-states. They would eventually go on to form the nation of Shotha by around 3120 RM, with the capital of SUNDOR acting as a stronghold to the Desolati.

Despite their roots amongst the entropic eschatological Desolati, the people of Shotha are largely unobtrusive, using their position between Almagest and EASTERN LLACHATUL to act as mediators of trade, with caravans crossing the DESOLATION OF ASTUDAN to GATHA to buy and sell wares. Protected by the wealth and martial expertise of the Desolati, Shotha grew prosperous, but never expanded greatly.

In around 3810 RM the Desolati conquered the neighbouring region of FAEAMUN, which until then had been an independent city-state between it and Stolas. Eventually, the city would go on to become a new capital to Shotha, from where the Desolati rule to this day. The death of the city-state of Faeamun left the eastern-most borders of Shotha contested with the alien region of Stolas, and skirmishes between Desolati knights and misshapen AL AKHI are common to this day. See Vol II: Extant Nations and Realms.

SHOUDISH: Rvr. River in the c south west of LIDEA, flowing for 175-miles south from sources in the ORIAN Mountains before meeting its parent the river SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾, at the settlement of HIKMA.

SHOUTAR: Geo. Region in MENISCEA dominated by floating mountains, possible only through the firmamental effects of the TRUE MENISCUS. It is favoured by AIMANTS⁽¹⁾, who are able to manipulate the mountains.

SHRAMANA: Soc. Sup. Rnk. Amongst the NOREI of TEMUJA, SHAMEN who ARAKHAMÉ under the guise of KHAR'ILLAE. They advocated cannibalism and a martial culture, but were mostly killed in a great famine decades ago.

SHRAPNELLEERS: Mil. Rnk. In VENTHIRI military organisation, lightly armoured skirmishers who are known for use of various types of grenades and bombs, including ATRAMENTAL and ALCHEMICAL varieties. They originated in c. 2000 RM, when they used innovative alchemical bombs in combat.

SHRII: Set. Small city in the west of PNESSA (Pop. c. 12,000).

SHRIA JUCHAR, KHA OF THE SEVENTH GREATTOWN OF THE LAKE DISTRICT: (B. 3974 RM) Pol. TEMUJAN Kha.

Hers was one of the five names the High-Born Prince NAPHTALI of DUARIAHAHN revealed during the first council of the PLAINSLEAGUE in TEMUJA, 4006 RM.

SHRINE OF THE ARRACHI: see ARRACHI, SHRINE OF THE.

SHRINE OF MILAD II: see MILAD II, SHRINE OF.

SHRINE OF NOKON: see NOKON, SHRINE OF.

SHRINE OF OFFERINGS: see OFFERINGS, SHRINE OF.

SHRINE OF ORAST: see ORAST, SHRINE OF.

SHRINE OF THE SHADOW TRIUMPHANT: see SHADOW TRIUMPHANT, SHRINE OF THE.

SHRINE OF SOULS: see SOULS, SHRINE OF.

SHRINE OF ST. CHARISSA: see St. Charissa, Shrine of.

SHRINE OF THE TUOL: see TUOL, SHRINE OF THE.

SHUBRAT: 1. Geo. Island off the eastern coast of AHKA.

2. Mil. Str. Major AHKAN fortress on the eponymous island guarding the mouth of the river SASHAT, beyond which is the capital city.

SHUBAVAR: Set. Settlement in the c of SARASTRO, 30-miles south of the capital. It is a major producer of food for the city of ARGEA, which is moved north on fast-moving barges. It also forms a part of the RED ROUTE, and provides caravans with food and provisions (Pop. c. 6,000).

SHUGRA: Set. Fortified caravanserai controlled by the KNIGHTS AENEOUS in the south west of THE SURRACH, along the IVORY ROAD as it enters its most dangerous and ill-guarded stretch south, out of the Surrach, into CALCHODON (Pop. c. 2,000).

SHIUNOTH DYNASTY: Pol. His. Debased rulers that subjugated much of the north west of MULCIBER, in the west of the GROWING MOUNTAINS, in c. 2300 RM. The dynasty was known for its ATRAMENTAL SHAPERS, who squandered what wealth their ancestors had accrued on their own vices and pursuits of dark knowledge. The dynasty died out by c. 2850 RM, after which the region was overrun by AUERENI barbarians, before splintering back into disparate city-states after a 'dark age' lasting until c. 3000 RM.

SHUK RAZHA: Geo. Region of discontinuous permafrost that dominates the far north of KOLCHIS. Much of it is dotted with geysers and geothermal vents, making the climate in localised regions much warmer than they otherwise should be. SHUHAR: Set. Coastal settlement in the north east of VENTHIR. Its main industry is fishing (Pop. c. 4,000).

SHUIH: Plr. 'Shuihar'. Eth. Ethnicity in the c north of MALAN, across the HENDECARCHIES of HATON and AMILLAERE. Its people are believed to be descendants of ancient unions between SEITHIN and HUMANS, making them the heirs of the original people of Malan. They were persecuted early in the FIFTH AGE by various kingdoms, effectively leading to their near-extinction. It was only with the coming of the LADY AEGIS and her uniting of the eleven FOREST KINGDOMS that oppression against them ended, and their remnants were able to live in peace, though they maintained the nomadic lives that had been forced upon them during their persecution. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life: Fithnicities

SHUL: Rui. Ruined city in the far west of TZALLRACH. It once bordered the western-most reaches of lake KRISHTUL, though was destroyed in 101 RM by the CATACLYSM OF KHAMID, which also led to the draining of the lake into the SEA OF VENTHA.

SHULNOT: Geo. Major island-fortress in the prefecture of EROSENEA^(1.) in the north west of HOLOLACH^(1.), overlooking the BAY OF AMATRRA.

SHULOCH: Rel. Str. AGONIST monastery in the c of the ANASAR Mountains, in the c north west of PERGOST.

SHULUUN: Set. City in the north of SAUA, along the course of the river TARROKO (Pop. c. 48,000).

SHUNNED ONE, the: Myt. His. Common epithet given to the DEMIURGE
TALANTEHUT. She is worshipped in this guise by members of the ORDER OF THE FLAMING ROSE, though few members of the order are aware of this SHURA: Geo. Com. Pass in the c north east of KHAMID, crossing the gap between the NEFERATH Mountains in the north and the AHTEPTIS Mountains in the south, forming a part of the GREAT ROAD trade-route.

SHURAN DYNASTY: Pol. Ruling dynasty of ELEKHID since its independence in 3409 RM. The dynasty formed after the newfound independence of Elekhid saw its sibling rulers MORTHA and DEGLIA Shur wishing to be married, but unable to under the religious laws they inherited from their former parent nation PNESSA. Together they enacted reforms of the religion, which allowed them to be married, beginning the Shuran Dynasty, which has since been a matriarchy (discounting the rogue king UDRAN SHUR'S reign from 3694 – 3701 RM). The formation of the dynasty led to a schism within the church that ended in 3912 with the abolishment of the old church, being replaced with the SHURANISM, so-named after the new dynasty.

Following the events revolving around the ascent of the rogue king Udran Shur between 3694-3701 RM, a new law was enacted stating that should the current queen die with no legitimate heirs, one will be chosen from amongst the elders of the Shurani Church.

SHURANISM: Rel. Prevalent religion in the KINGDOM OF ELEKHID, which deifies the ruling female monarch as an embodiment of the EMPYREAL DEITY that they worship. It emerged in 3409 RM after the newfound independence of Elekhid saw its sibling rulers MORTHA and DEGLIA Shur wishing to be married, but unable to under the religious laws they inherited from their former parent nation PNESSA. Together they enacted reforms of the religion, allowing them to be married, leading to a schism that in 3912 ended with the abolishment of the old church, being replaced with the Shuranism, which was named after the new ruling Shuran Dynasty and its supreme ruler, Queen Deglia. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

SHURAT: Rui. Deserted city in the c south of VALBAR⁽²⁾. It was abandoned in 3934 RM following an increase in geothermal and volcanic activity in the region of ESZALA earlier that year. Toxic gases were slowly released from a nearby lake (which has since dried) killing most of its people overnight. The city became a ghost town in the span of 24 hours and has been deserted ever since, with most dead remaining in the beds they last slept in. Most people refuse to even get close to it due to the grim reputation the city has and it remains today, undisturbed.

SHUREIU, THE ONCE-GREAT: Flo. His. Stump of a giant redwood in northern JURRAS⁽²⁾. It was cut down in 2331 RM by KORACHANI occupiers and signified the end of a long period of redwood logging in the region. It was the largest such tree ever felled in SAMMAEA and had a circumference at the base of 180-ft. And was said to be over 450-ft. tall.

Its base was cut into many foot-thick slices and given to all the imperial governors and other allies of the Korachani empire as a gift by the COLNCIL OF SEVEN

The fates of individual disks differ greatly, and some remain in the possession of the present-day rulers, where others have been cut up and spread across THE INNER SEA and beyond, and in some cases their sad origins are unknown to their current owners.

SHURLIKOLANA: Leg. Myr. Sup. Oth. Mythic OTHERWORLDER said to dwell in the centre of the fabled LABYRINTH OF SHURLIKOLANA in the HOGGOTHA ISZ. The otherworlder has been spoken of in obscure SAMMAEAN myths since the SECOND AGE and though physical descriptions of it are often contradictory, all stories converge at its mastery of ONEIROMANCY. It is said that the otherworlder can see the dreams, nightmares, and desires of all beings in ELYDEN, and is able to act upon those desires, granting them their innermost wishes. However, the wishes are always twisted into mockeries of their original intent. A few historical characters are said to have had their fates shaped by Shaurlikolana, including the emperor of ancient SAMMON and the thrice-cursed tyrant of Charadan.

SHURU: 1. Geo. Island in the far south of KHAMID, just north of the STRAIT OF SAOR.

2. Set. Small city in the south of the eponymous island, known for its harbour and lighthouse (Pop. c. 18,000).

SHUU TURULL: Int. His. Rel. Obj. Ancient moss-covered multi-armed idol that was worshipped by the people of MEDHAMANN early in the FIFTH AGE. The recording of anything to do with the idol or the cult that surrounded it was prohibited, leading to very little being known of it today. Its origins are unknown, though it is believed to have predated the rise of the Medhamanni city states into a singular entity, and its fate is likewise unknown. Many scholars believe that the cult surrounding it may have been responsible for the eventual collapse of Medhamann, though this remains conjectural, with little evidence to back it. The lack of any physical evidence, including any remains of the idol, give the impression that it was destroyed or otherwise lost. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

SHY: see SHIE

SHYHTUM: Bev. Heady beer commonly brewed and drunk in KHAMID and TZALLRACH. See Vol II: Beverages.

S'HITH: f. Myt. His. One of the two facets of the DEMIURGE DOPELLANICH (the other being NELCHAEL).

S'hith is considered the wakeful part of the Demiurge and is an AUGUR of sorts, aware of all the waking physical world. She has been associated with RUNES, and various passages of the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN refer to her as a RUNIST. Accounts of S'hith vary wildly and in some sources, she is depicted as a SCIONIC CREATURE who has ascended and merged with the body of the Demiurge, and in others she is little more than an aspect of the Demiurge itself.

The variety of $\underline{\text{HALFBLOODS}}$ known as $\underline{\text{SITH}}^{(1.)}$ within the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI}}$ $\underline{\text{EMPIRE}}$ are often linked to this aspect of Dopellanich, though her true children are the $\underline{\text{CATACHIS}}$.

SIA: 1. Rvr. River in IO flowing west from the GHOLA mountain through the ELIHAMAGNA for around 50-miles, emptying in the DAARKEN GULF. The river flows close to the city of UR SITH.

2. Set. Small fortified city in the region of ADASICH, in the west of THE SURRACH (Pop. c. 9,000).

SIABA: 1. Sea. Sea to the far north of the SIPARIA that divides the territories of WESTERN LARISH into two.

2. Set. Major port and city in the c of WESTERN LARISH. With a formidable natural harbour hidden within the SEA OF SIABA^(1.), the city controls most of the trade between the disparate portions of the LARISHI^(2.) empire. While not indigenous to the region, the indrik is the city's emblem, and stems from an ancient tradition where the animal were ridden by its elite troops, a practice that has long since been discontinued (Pop. c. 168,000).

SIADRA: Geo. Shallow plains dominating the c of the TEMPLAR STATES.
The north and east of the plains were revealed by the waning of ELYDEN'S seas and remain largely infertile, unable to sustain crops.

SIADRAN: Lan. Language spoken by the people of the TEMPLAR STATES. It emerged between c. 2700 – 3000 RM, and its roots lie in the language spoken by the early FIFTH AGE EHRENI people, though has borrowed many elements from the Korachani that was spoken by the TEMPLAR KNIGHTS⁽²⁾. See Vol II: Languages.

SIAGONA: Geo. Rocky mountain-chain in the north west of SAMMAEA, surrounding the city-state of CADERE. The range measures some 340-miles in length and is considered an extension of the far larger SANTOREAN Mountains.

SIAHÓN, THE HARE: Myt. Rel. In TEMUJAN SPIRITUALISM, the TUTELARY SPIRIT of mercy and the persecuted.

SIAN: Rui. Religious ruin in the north of ELAT.

SIANUSTARIL THE REGENT, FIRST OF THE ELEVEN: f. Pol. Per. (B. 3883 RM) First of the Hendecarchs of Malan and ruler of the Forest Kingdom of Amillaere^(1.).

SIAREHET: Geo. Island in the west of the MAIDEN ISLES, off the south eastern coast of MENISCEA.

SIARONNOL: Set. City in the north west of SERROK (Pop. c. 30,000).

SIARRA, THE BEAR: Myt. Rel. In TEMUJAN SPIRITUALISM, the TUTELARY SPIRIT of the hungry. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

SIAUA-CHBON: Set. Major city in the south east of SERROK. It originated as a logging centre in the BEREPHASS rainforest and went on to become a major industrial city, and it is now the centre of a growing industrial revolution in Serrok (Pop. c. 182,000).

SIAUSA: 1. Geo. Island off the eastern coast of MENISCEA, in the PARTHISAN colony of EZHIRAYA $(^{2,})$.

2. Set. Settlement in the north east of the PARTHISAN colony of EZHIRAYA⁽²⁾, in the east of MENISCEA (Pop. c. 7,500).

SIB: Set. Small city in the c north east of VENTHIR, just west of HETEPHEROPOLIS. Its main industry is agriculture and it provides food and provisions to those travelling along the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 16,000).

SIB ANNAN: Set. Settlement in the c of SARASTRO, to the far east of the OTINDHAR Mountains (Pop. c. 6,600).

SIBALLA: Lake in the c north of the territories of ETHISTONITH in RHINOCOLOURA. In antiquity, the lake was the site of a sizeable MERILL city, which today lies ruined, above the shoreline of the lake which has diminished in size over the years.

SIBASSA: Rvr. River in the south west of N'RAKH.

SIBBION: 1. His. Ntm. Small nation in the north west of Western SAMMAEA, overlooking the SEA OF SAVAEN. The nation suffered terribly between c. 2880 and c. 3000 RM experiencing PLAGUE, drought and civil unrest. It was from these events that the SEA NOMADS emerged in c. 3000 RM, who came to live nomadic lives in their catamarans along the coast of the Sea of Savaen. Their leadership became corrupted and by c. 3130 RM they had become pirates, naming themselves the FIVE SAILS preying on coastal settlements of the ailing region they had been born to.

Sibbion was eventually absorbed by the CITIZENRY OF THALI in 3185 RM following years of political ennui in the wake of the above events, remaining now as a province of the larger region.

2. Province in the far north west of the CITIZENRY OF THALI, named after the historical nation^(1.). It is known for its coastal catamarans and fishermen.

SIBBRI: Sea. Bay in the far north of CENTRAL LLACHATUL, dividing the far east of RAONGEN⁽²⁾ from western VALBAR⁽²⁾. It was once far larger than it is today, but lowering sea levels have caused it to SIBLOU: Set. Small coastal settlement in the south west of PARAIYA, along the eastern shore of lake ALANCARAC. Its main industry is freshwater fishing (Pop. c. 7,800).

SIBRA: Set. Small fortified coastal city in the south east of OTINTH. Like most Otinthian settlements, little is known about it due to the nations' insular nature (Pop. c. 17,500).

SIBUSASA: Set. Fortified city in the south east of TZALLRACH. It is a major link with the scattered oases and settlements of the TURCAR Desert. It is home to many mercenaries who serve as guards for the trade caravans that cross the CHARA PASS (Pop. c. 15,000).

SIBYL, the: Pol. Ruler of LYRIDIA, and head of the order of AUGURS^(1.) and UBYRS. She has existed under various incarnations and vessels since before the rise of the KORACHANIEMPIRE (first documented sighting c. – 750 RM), though she is believed to have been ruler of LYRIDIA since the early FOURTH AGE if TROGLODYTE aural history is to be believed. She shares an intrinsic link with THE NINE and is able to interpret their visions better than any other.

Little is otherwise known of this enigmatic figure, and whether it is a title that is adopted by the nations' rulers, or if he is an individual. If the latter, the nature of her long life is also unknown.

SIBYLLINE BOOKS: Rel. Vol. Religious texts from the PENTATAEL (1.).

SICAN: Rui. Old sunken capital of HRIDAN, in the far east of ALMAGEST It was swallowed by collapsing DUSTSTONE canyons that appeared at its base in c. 1900. The city finally was finally abandoned in 1962 RM, after which the remaining Hridan territories were absorbed by Almagest.

SICERAN: Rvr. River in SAMMAEA flowing for 900-miles west through SUMA'YA, N'RAKH and PARAIYA from sources in the ENRATON and SHIBOTHA Mountains and the plains of BA'AKOB, where it meets with its parent, the river SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾.

SICHAAL: Geo. Rugged hilly region forming the border between the south east of VAALK and the north of MHAROKK. It is said to serve as a prison to a demonic enemy of NUTHEN.

SICLASET: Sup. Rnk. SHAPERS whose SPHERE allows them to manipulate crystalline objects, and which they can intrinsically use as FOCI(2.), allowing them to store ATRAMENTAL energy within them that they can later access. See Vol IV: Shaping.

SICRAD: Set. City in the south west of CHEIRA (Pop. c. 42,000).

SICTHAINEN TECHNA: see TECHNACHI.

SICUL: Set. Settlement in the c of CHEIRA, along the course of the river YAGNOTH PHATHAN. It is known for its reed cultivation, which is used in the production of various reed-items (Pop. c. 2,200).

SIDA: Rui. Abandoned SIPHON ENGINE in the east of LYRIDIA DHAI.
Belonging to house LLANA, the region was abandoned in c. 3470 RM, though has been a target of banditry in the years since.

SIDERA: Set. Settlement in the east of ALMAGEST, along the eastern bank of lake SURATT. Its main industry is hunting what little wild fauna remains in the region (Pop. c. 6,000).

SIDEREAL PHANTASM: see EMPYREAN SPECTRE.

SIDHE: His. Mor. Descendants of the DERUWEIDS who practice a horrific form of self-mutilation that is purported to bring them closer to the suffering of their DEMIURGE PRIMOGENITOR ACHAIAH.

After the Demiurge's transformation into the TREE OF AGEN, some of the deruweids adopted extreme asceticism and severe acts of ritual SHAPING that over the millennia brought them and their homes closer in both body and mind to their divine mother. These deruweids became known as sidhe, and their extreme change in culture led to a slow dwindling of their numbers. In the intervening years the sidhes became so broken of body and mind through the actions of their ancestors, that they forgot the reasons for their self-mutilation, and have forsaken the Tree of Agen, retreating into the shadows.

Sidhe culture in the past revolved around earthen mounds into which they would grow cuttings from the Tree of Agen. These mounds were the focal point for sidhe family groups and were they performed their rituals of mutilation, which would impart drastic changes onto the bodies of their descendants. Today they lie in ruin, the twisted yet fecund trees that grow from them now massive, and considered waystones and FIRMAMENTAL LEYS within the OLD FOREST, though some are haunted by singular deranged grotesque sidhes, who guard them.

SIDI: Sea. Bay in the east of LOEGRESS⁽¹⁾, forming the westernmost part of the SEA OF AKRY. Its water are deep and it is ringed by high cliffs, including the high promontory on which castle CAER SIDI⁽²⁾ was built in the FOURTH AGE.

SIDIA: Rvr. River in the far west of KORACHAN, forming the border between it and AZAZEM. The river flows for 170-miles south from the OTHACHA Mountains.

SIDION: Set. City in the north west of KORACHAN, along the river SIDIA and the border with AZAZEM (Pop. c. 30,800).

SIDION ROUYO: m. Mil. Pol. Per. (B. 3939 RM) GRANDMASTER of the CONCORDANTIST ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION since 3984 RM. Little is known of his background or present life, and he remains an enigma to this day, and what little is known about his is contradictory. Some believe he was born to a Patrician House indebted to the Order, while others suggest he was an orphan taken in by the Concordantists.

When seen in public he is always impeccably groomed, his gaze cold and illegible like that of a marble statue. He is recognised as a meticulous and strategic leader, preferring to operate from the shadows. As befitting the Concordantist Grandmaster, he is believed to maintain an extensive network of informants and agents, ensuring that he is always several steps ahead of any potential threat to the empire's stability.

Rouyo is also a high ranking member of the Church of the Undying Machine, and has taken on responsibilities that his Grandmaster forebears never had, the most important to him of which is ensuring that a steady stream of pilgrims (Petitioners of the Machine) reaches the Sepulchral Palace every year. Though seemingly a prosaic goal, this stance runs parallel to the Concordantist mission. Failure to sustain the Undying Machine through a steady stream of pilgrims might bring about a domino effect of changes that might spell the end of the empire.

SIDIRION: Geo. 1. Low mountain range in the north of SAMMAEA, serving as a border between the south of the TEMPLAR STATES and the north west of KARGAMA.

 Expansive hills to the north of the eponymous mountain^(1,1), dominating much of the south of the TEMPLAR STATES.

SIDERON: Set. Settlement in the west of the TARAHID ANNEXES, 8-miles from the city of PARSIMENIA, and known for its food production for the larger city (Pop. c. 9,000).

SIEGE OF ANAKARRA: see ANAKARRA, SIEGE OF.

SIEGE OF ARGEA: see ARGEA, SIEGE OF.

SIEGE OF CAER SIDI: see CAER SIDI, SIEGE OF.

SIEGE OF DAARKEN: see DAARKEN, SIEGE OF.

SIEGE OF EGORA: see EGORA, SIEGE OF.

SIEGE OF ETHRA: see ETHRA, SIEGE OF.

SIEGE OF MALETH: see MALETH, SIEGE OF.

SIEGE OF SARASTRO: see SARASTRO, SIEGE OF.

SIEGE OF SOLONIA: see SOLONIA, SIEGE OF.

SIEGE OF TAHMAL: see TAHMAL, SIEGE OF.

SIEGE of VILOMARRA: see VILOMARRA, SIEGE OF.

SIEGE OF VIRANUL: see VIRANUL, SIEGE OF.

SIELL NA: Rvr. Major river in the south of MALAN, flowing south west for almost 1,000-miles through the HENDECARCHIES of STHAMAN and CHLORIS from sources in the CARCAENT and USSIKA Mountains, before meeting its mouth at the BAY OF MUSSAR.

SIELLA: also 'the Ivory Moon'. Ast. Largest and more distant of ELYDEN'S two moons (with the other being the BLOOD MOON ARAKHAMÉ). It has a synodic orbit (full moon to full moon) of 47.2 days and a sidereal orbit (full orbit between a specific point in the sky) of 53.6 days.

In Mythology, Siella was once TEROTH, SCION daughter of NEITH^(1.), who was killed by KHARANI but later reborn as Siella.

SIELLA, TEMPLE OF: Rui. Ancient temple in BA'AKH. It was destroyed by ICONOCLASTS^(1.) of the KORACHANI EMPIRE upon arrival there.

SIELLA'S HARVEST: Soc. His. Historical harvests that took place when the IVORY MOON was full and the BLOOD MOON was new. It dates back to early FIFTH AGE pre-imperial KORACHAN, and was observed by the various city states of the KORACHANI PENINSULA. Priests of the CULT OF LIFE AND DEATH would sanctify the harvest, reserving some for the temple to use, and entire communities would gather under the light of the Ivory Moon and harvest crops in a few nights. It was a beloved tradition that saw people coming together and singing while they worked.

It remained a tradition in the early decades of the Korachani empire though it was quelled by agents of the UNDYING MACHINE due to its pagan roots. Despite this, corrupted versions of it may yet be found being celebrated in rural areas across Korachan.

SIELLAN HIGHLANDS: Geo. Highlands stretching for some 220-miles, from the south of the LION'S MAW to the west of ASISH, following roughly parallel to the western coast of the DAARKEN GULF, in present-day BA'AKH.

SIFFA: 1. Geo. Escarpment in SAMMAEA, along the border between the east of the BARRIER LANDS and the west of ROMOREA⁽²⁾.

2. Mil. Str. Fortress in the west of ROMOREA⁽²⁾, overlooking guarding its hinterlands from threats from the east.

SIGAR SKEPH: Set. City in the c south of the MULL CITY-STATES, along the course of the river TRALL (Pop. c. 20,000).

SIGHT, the: Sup. In the art of SHAPING, the ability to view the INTEGUMENT through FOCUS. While all shapers must possess the sight to be able to shape, it is also possible for a non-shaper to have the sight, through innate ability or skill. See Vol IV: Shaping.

SIGIL: 1. Mys. Soc. Obj. Protective symbol employed in the BRORI^(1.) nation of GREST^(1.). The Sigils are branded and tattooed onto prominent parts of a persons' body (such as the brow or palm) as both a symbol of devotion and a protective talisman. Followers of the HE'ELAN WRITINGS revere DAIMONS – patron SPIRITS^(1.) who people pray to or contact via occult rituals for aid or dark knowledge. The use of the sigil is said to bring a person closer to the associated spirit, making it easier for the person to be guarded.

The rulers of Grest – the administrative dukes as well as the three ARCHDUKES – have their own sigils that draw elements from their own patron daimons' sigils, that are also used by the people of Grest or protect and as a sign of respect.

2. Cur. Main currency of the BRORI^(1,) nation of GREST^(1,). Named after the sigils^(1,) of power that are used by the HE'ELAN ARCHDUKES that rule the nation, the coins are shaped in the image of the sigils. See Vol II: Currency of Elyden.

SIGILLED GATES OF HARRAN, the: Int. Sup. Obj. Small solitary structure in the OLD QUARTER of TETHRA, notable for its four intricate wrought iron gates set into niches, one on each side, corresponding with the four cardinal points. The structure appears to have been built that way rather than have doorways bricked up, meaning that it was intentionally designed without any doors.

Though its original purpose remains largely unknown to the general populace, public records dating back to 1739 RM state that it was constructed as a prison, though little mention is ever made about it other than that simple declaration. Even the origin of the structure's name remains unknown.

The gates emit a faint MAGICKAL aura and are guarded by a cadre of classically-trained SHAPERS who stand vigil over the structure at all times, one in front of each gate.

Today, most people pass by it, ignorant to its existence, thinking it's just an abandoned library.

SIGARIA: Int. Flo. Ancient, now-extinct tree once common in damp temperate climates across the south of LLACHATUL and the north of SAMMAEA. It is mentioned in the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN and other ancient accounts and is described as being a unique tree that grew to prodigious size, reproducing via spores instead of seed. As other seed-bearing trees became widespread, becoming more common in the habitats of the sigaria, they slowly overtook it, reducing the extent of its range until it remained only in small numbers in lands north of the SEA OF ORRIDA, including SEDISIA and OPHIUSSA.

In c. 3800 RM spores were discovered by AZAZEMI merchants, and efforts were made to grow the tree, in the hopes of creating a new food source. This led to an environmental disaster, within the city in which the experiment took place, AQLIA. The spores were deadly when inhaled, leading to a massed exodus from the city, leaving it abandoned and overrun by mutant strains of the tree, which remains there, isolated and prevented from spreading farther.

SIGIL OF SYNCHTHONITH: Myt. His. Obj. In world Mythology, a large stone tablet found in 1734 RM just north of the KOUKON region in the UMBRA SOKHAR wastes. It measures some 20-feet across, depicting what many believe to be the sigils and titles of the Two-and-Twenty DEMIURGES; an unprecedented find. The tablet is broken and badly weathered and few details can be reliably read off it. The tablet was moved north, and it now rests in the library of NUTHACHAN.

The Sigil is named after the Demiurge SYNCHTHONITH, to whom its construction is most commonly attributed.

When the Sigil was discovered, it was guarded by a caste of DVERGAI templars who were dispersed by the explorers who claimed the site in the name of the ARCHPOTENTATE. The dverg now roam the wastes of the south eastern Umbra Sokhar, homeless, doing what they can to honour the name of their Demiurge forebear. Some have even ventured north seeking the sigil.

SIGRA: 1. Geo. Island off the western-coast of SAMMAEA, off the coast of MACELLARIA. It is a tropical island, and its people are adept FIRMAMENTISTS and is home to an independent nation that bears the same name⁽²⁾.

2. Dem. 'Sigran'. Ntn. Independent nation on the above island^(1.). See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

3. Pol. Set. Capital city of the eponymous island-nation^(1.) off the western coast of MACELLARIA (Pop. unknown).

SIHIR: Sup. Pol. Sorceress-rulers of the jungles of the WOLD. They use an ability called THUAA, which is unrelated to SHAPING but also calls upon the MATERIA OMNA. They are thought to have a primal link to the DEMIURGES (or a specific Demiurge) and might be descended from a particular SCIONIC lineage, the PRIMOGENITOR of which might have been the first bearer of the ability.

SIJA: His. Ntn. Late FOURTH AGE empire that collapsed during the WAR OF SCOURGING. It is thought to have been located in what are now AKACHA, ILLAKRAR, the XETEAN STATES, and the far east of YSACYITHAIA, and was home to many AITHAR, as well as HUMANS and ILLIDRAEN who founded cities in great cliffside and mountaintop aeries. It is believed that they were allies of RACHANAEL in the war and that they were ultimately destroyed by allied forces.

SIKA: Rvr. Seasonal river in the east of KHARKHARADONTIS flowing into lake SARIS.

SIKHOGUM: Ser. Small subterranean city in the east of SYNCHTHONITH. It was founded as a boomtown of sorts in c. 3620 RM to exploit the subterranean lava flows of SYNCHTHONITH'S FOUNDRY. It is known for its QUICKSTEEL prospectors, who search the maze of old lava tubes for fresh flows of quicksteel, which are exploited – collected and refined – before being sold on (Pop. c. 18,000).

SIKKHIR: Med. Str. Hospital situated midway along the MARTYRS' ROAD in the c of KHARKHARADONTIS, in the c north east of SAMMAEA. It has been contested between KORACHAN and SARASTRO since 4001 RM, and lands around it are very dangerous, with skirmishes between the opposing forces often spilling over into the hospital itself, wounding or even killing staff and patients.

Despite this, the hospital is still in use, operated by volunteers and maintained through donations, offering its services to PETITIONERS OF
THE MACHINE who have succumbed to ATRAMENTAL MALADIES on the road, or who were otherwise injured

SILACHAN: Int. Geo. Str. Abandoned island mine 150 miles west of the KORACHANI PENINSULA, in the INNER SEA. It was settled by KORACHANI miners in c. 2800 RM after dense subterranean UMBRA was located there and mining operations were soon established. It was fortified over the years and became densely populated as the families of miners moved there, reaching a population of thousands during its peak in c. 3000 RM.

The mines went vertically deep underground, so much so that flooding and decompression sickness became serious dangers to miners there. In 2988 RM miners hit a large hollow that stalled progress. It was explored over the next few years and contact was made with wretched pale-skinned MORTALS, who would often attack miners in the deep tunnels.

Silachan was eventually abandoned by c. 3100 RM following increased conflict with the deep natives and waning yields. It remains deserted today its landmass much larger than it ever was while in use, due to waning sea levels, and it is though that it has served as a base to pirates and privateers at various times in the ensuing years. It technically remains a Korachani territory to this day, though is largely ignored.

SILADHEN: His. Str. Deep stone pits in the east of AHRISHEN, harking back to the regions' pre-history. The pits are hewn from the area's natural brown bedrock, reaching down dozens if not hundreds of feet. There are about 50 – 60 pits in an area of around 3 square-miles. Cold stale air rises from the pits, and lingers in the area.

The pits are thought to have been used by a proto-Ahrisheni culture as charnel pits, though the practice has lost favour. The pits are viewed by historians as being a predecessor to the current earth-and-sky-based religion in contemporary Ahrishen, where a worship of the chthonic underworld evolved into a reverence of the land above.

SILAEKRA: Geo. Arid highland region in the c north east of OBLEVIS in EASTERN MENISCEA, forming an extension of the larger ARATHAMMOS Mountains. The FIRMAMENT is so potent here that it is inimical to life; slowly petrifying any living thing that remains there for too long. It was used in ancient times as a place of punishment, where convicted men were chained there where they were slowly turned to stone. Most would die of starvation or pain before the process was complete but the shattered ruins of their once-flesh bodies remain as testament to the hostility of the place.

SILDELK RING, the: also 'the Sealords'. Pol. Org. One of the three ruling factions of AEONAS, with the others being HOUSE VODUS, and the PEOPLE'S COALITION. It is a major political, mercantile and military power, whose expansive fleets dominate the south east of the SEA OF NARANOR and the east of the BATHASHAL OCEAN.

SILEB: Lak. Lake in the c of SARASTRO, forming part of the course of the river LABAON.

SILENCING OF THE SONG: also 'Persecution of the Bards'. His. Period in the history of AKHSARAY where the SHAIWWAL – a caste of loremasters, bards and advisors that had grown incredibly influential – were systematically persecuted by fearful emperors over a decade of oppression that led to their effective extinction, with the few remaining shaiwwals being exiled to surrounding lands.

Shaiwwals were little more than itinerant minstrels until the appointment of LAVIYAT as an official advisor to the imperial court in c. 1730 RM. Her success set a precedent, with the court recruiting new advisors from the shaiwwals, who grew more powerful over time. The advisor shaiwwals granted their brethren more powers and legal immunities, allowing them to slowly infiltrate local governing bodies. Alarmed, merchants and nobles petitioned the emperor, leading to restrictions on shaiwwal political activities in c. 1873 RM. However, lax enforcement saw their influence grow again by c. 1880 RM.

Empress Qashida acceded as new empress in 1881 RM. Fearful of the political clout this lowborn caste had gained, and urged by further petitions from the empire's nobility, she banned lesser shaiwwals from holding any political positions, sparking public protests. They were prohibited from traveling in the next year, limiting the spread of news and adding to growing instability. Violent protests in ASHIQ led to the first of many arrests of shaiwwals across the empire. This stoked the flames of unrest amongst their followers. Law enforcement destroyed musical instruments, escalating tensions. The empress removed her shaiwwal advisors in 1883 RM, and established a new policing force, initiating mass arrests and executions. Many shaiwwals fled to rural areas, especially in the southeast.

An 1884 RM law allowed for shaiwwal executions without trial, resulting in thousands of deaths. By c. 1885 RM, most shaiwwals had been exterminated or were in hiding. The empress replaced them with sycophantic rulers, centralizing power and leading to the decline of the Akhsarayan empire, culminating in eventual collapse in c. 2500 RM.

Rumours of 'THE LAST SHAIWWAL' emerged in c. 1890 RM, rowing into a symbol of resistance to the common people. A popular demagogue was executed, with the empress naming him as the Last Shaiwwal, though it is now believed that this was a scapegoat. The empress banned any mention of shaiwwals following this, though this only led stories being passed down in secret. Today they remain a common legend in the descendant states of Akhsaray, representing freedom and resistance against tyranny.

SILENT CITY, the: common name referring to various cities and settlements across ELYDEN:

- 1. APHTHA, in TEMUJA.
- 2. CARIA^(6.), in THE HARÉSHK.

SILENT DOLLS: see SURROGATE MOPPETS.

SILENT SPIRES, THE: see KAMMA GHARADAN.

SILENT WAR, the: His. War. (3705-3722 RM) Clandestine war fought by various Orders of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION on many fronts within the LOW-EMPIRE OF SARASTRO in the years following its emancipation following the SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE in 3705 RM. The Orders fought for years behind enemy lines, gathering intelligence, running counter intelligence, disrupting supply lines and infrastructure, and sowing seeds of dissent, all in the hopes of preventing the upstart nation from stabilising following its creation.

They clashed with the traitor orders that had defected to Sarastro, which had become known as ENCLAVES (later renamed the SHAMASHI ENCLAVES OF THE SARASTROAN EMPIRE), with different orders being tasked with different objectives. The AIWAHAN ORDER, for instance, worked hard to retrieve sacred TECHNARCANE treasures that could not be allowed to fall into enemy hands, all while also sabotaging SARASTROAN technologies. Their efforts in covertly relocating and protecting these assets earned them the nickname 'Silent Guardians', which remains in use to this day.

SILENT WITNESS, the: Myt. His. Epithet by which the DEMIURGE ACHAIAH was once known.

SILENT WORD, the: Rel. Org. Monastic order in TEMUJA. The monks take a vow of silence and study the teachings of the LEGEND MAGHORA in the hopes of seeking enlightenment. They are generally misanthropic and only emerge from their monasteries on the SOLSTICETIDE FESTIVAL to solicit prayers from the common populace. Their major monasteries are the IKH SURA and the IKH KHOT.

SILEX: also 'Men of Glass'. Int. Sup. Tec. Silicate-based constructed anthropomorphs found in SHAZGIN, created through archaic TECHNARCANE arts thought to be derived by the teachings of the DEMIURGE DURUTHILHOTEP. They are created and controlled by a caste of FIRMAMENTISTS who are politically immune due to their sought-after abilities.

 $\underline{\hbox{\bf SILIAS}};$ 1. Pol. Name of the $\underline{\hbox{\bf CHILD-PRINCE}}$ of $\underline{\hbox{\bf AHRISHEN}}.$

2. Set. City in the north of AHRISHEN, 12-miles from the CHILD'S ESTUARY and major centre of his worship in Ahrishen (Pop. c. 34,000).

SILICIA: Set. Rural area in the region of SAKETHI in the east of PARTHIS, known for its sheep (Pop. c. 8,500).

SILIT: Mil. Str. Fortress in MELAIS, in the north of AZAZEM.

 $\underline{\textbf{SILK POISON}}\text{: see }\underline{\textbf{N'HATTA}}\text{.}$

 $\underline{\textbf{SILKEN CITY, the}}\text{: see }\underline{\textbf{EKALLU}}\text{.}$

SILKEN FORTRESS, the: also 'M'tekeh'. Mil. Str. Ancestral AANTH fort in the far north of N'RAKH. Defends against foreign incursion. Beneath the fort is a massive complex, built from ATRAMENTALLY-augmented silk-resin forming a 30-mile-long bulwark.

SILLAMÉ: Myr. Sup. His. AVATAR of the FIRMAMENT that appeared in the THIRD AGE, possessing the vessel of the DEMIURGE ALLAISHADA. Sillamé was the first avatar of the Firmament and was created by DURUTHILHOTEP in response to RACHANAEL stealing a spark of divinity from THE SHAPER, becoming the first Avatar of the ATRAMENTA, UMBÁVGHAR.

Sillamé was responsible for defeating the second Avatar of the Atramenta ULLUÍANNAU in the FOURTH AGE, ending the WAR OF SCOURGING. Ulluíannau was banished and its vessel, the Demiurge Rachanael, was imprisoned beneath the deserts of KHARKHARADONTIS, in the PIT OF DAEKYN.

SILMA: Geo. Small mountain range in the north west of NORTHERN SAMMAEA, serving as a border between the BARRIER LANDS in the south and KAZZAR⁽²⁾ in the north. The range is dry, particularly in the south, where it is characterised by cracked earth and lose rubble, making passage across these regions dangerous. In the far south it makes way to the deserts of OVARAM.

SILOEISIA ERATRAMEA: f. (B. 3933 RM) Pol. Per. LADY OF THE CABINET of VALBAR⁽²⁾, representing the nation of Almagest and holding the seat of chairperson, as is customary for the position. Lady Siloeisia hails from PATRICIAN HOUSE ERATRAMEA though maintains few links to the house.

SILVER CITY, the: see: AMUAR.

SILVER MOUNTAIN, the: Geo. KORACHANI name for the ARGENT Mountains.

SILVERBACK: Fau. Rare animal found in CENTRAL LLACHATUL, specifically in SAUA and the HENDECARCHIES of AONIA and MYEIN, in western MALAN, with fur that greatly resembles silver. They are prized for their pelts and have been trapped to near-extinction, particularly in Saua. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

SILVERFOLK, the: Leg. Folktale from the east of AHRISHEN, THE HARÉSHK, and TAMAR with roots in older legends, though which has been modernised with changing times.

The silverfolk are silvery-skinned beings with large jet-black eyes that stand beneath streetlights at night (in older versions of the tale, the figures would only be seen on cloudy nights when the Ivory moon was full, in a shaft of moonlight that penetrates the cloud cover). The silverfolk are never seen moving, but will follow solitary people moving at night, appearing closer whenever they look back at them without ever actually being seen moving. Those who allow the silverfolk to catch them see stars in their eyes and are said to have their souls sucked out of their bodies.

SILVERPEAKS, the: Geo. Coastal mountain in the north of LLACHATUL, extending for 150-miles north into the SEA OF BIELOST, forming a border between the east of SABIA and the west of KASPIA, along the Sabian border.

SILVERSWORD: Flo. Exotic woody herb that grows on the islands west of SAMMAEA, including THE DRAGON ISLES, THE COTRIAN ISLES, and the islands of the SEA OF CHHMAR. It has a single tough rosette that grows up to 10-ft. tall, above a dense cluster of fur-like leaves at its base. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

SIMAK: Law. Ser. Settlement in the south of VENTHIR, in a highland valley between the WORKNAH and KAUIN Mountains. The settlement exists to serve a large prison perched atop a sheer rise in the south eastern-face of the Worknah. The slaves are loaned to PATRICIAN HOUSES for work in mines and other industries, and are common in the gold mines north of the Worknah Mountains. The prison is divided into dorms by religion, and for the most part inmates are allowed to roam freely, though serious offenders are placed into solitary confinement (Pop. c. 2,000).

SIMAR: Rvr. Wetland in the north east of LIDEA, north of the region of TARETHI.

SIMBARA: Dem. 'Simbaran'. Ntn. Large empire in the south of SAMMAEA, dominating the SEA OF KRIHIEK. Geographically, it is divided in two lands, each of which is separated by the SEA OF KRIHIEK – NORTHERN SIMBARA, to the north and west of the sea; and SOUTHERN SIMBARA, to its south. Each territory has its own governing body (ENNERA and ITARA, respectively) that is ultimately subservient to the emperor and empress, whose throne is based in Itara. The empire is of a temperate climate, though its northernmost reaches are hot and dry, with the south being cooler and wetter. Southern Simbara in particular is forested and more densely populated.

It is a land shaped in many ways by its religion, LAZANISM, which was founded in c. 2420 RM by the religious prophet LAZAN, who prophesised that his rebirth as an OTHERWORLDER would bring about the apocalypse that will rid MORTALS of the sin and suffering caused by the DEMIURGES' hubris. The religion went on to become one of the most widespread in ELYDEN, where it now dominates the south west of Sammaea. The religion was indirectly the cause of a short but bloody civil, known now as the SHERRIAN CIVIL WAR that ended in 2766 RM. From the ashes of the war would emerge the PROLGAPEAN DYNASTY, which rules to this day and saw Simbara become an empire in 2789 RM.

The present age of Simbara is said to have started in 3612 RM following over three centuries of the empire being sundered in two following the divorce of the emperor and empress in 3266 RM. Until then, the constitution of Simbara gave the spouse of the incumbent emperor or empress equal powers of reign. The divorce saw the empire divided, with the emperor and empress ruling their respective demesnes until the marriage of their descendants in 3612 RM saw the empire reunited once more.

Influence of Nacre League *

The retreat of ELYDEN'S seas has been particularly devastating to Simbara, which until then was known for its great harbours and ports, which saw a diaspora of people resettling inland between c. 3100 – 3300 RM, after which new ports were established in deep harbours that were less rapidly susceptible to the lowering sea levels. The north west of Northern Simbara is known for its vast cotton fields, and the nation manufactures most of the textiles that are sold along the Nacre Road. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

SIMBARA, NORTHERN: Pol. Geo. One of two distinct political areas of the empire of SIMBARA, situated to the north and west of the SEA OF KRIHIEK. Its seat of power lies in ENNERA, though the throne of the emperor and empress is in ITARA. Northern Simbara is known for fine rubies.

SIMBARA, SOUTHERN: Pol. Geo. One of two distinct political areas of the empire of SIMBARA, situated to the south west of the SEA OF KRIHIEK. Its seat of power is in ITARA, where the emperor and empress hold their court.

SIMBE: Rvr. River in the north of ANDILUTH, flowing north for 700-miles from sources in the north of the CAMMOREAN Mountains. It rarely flows all-year round and is fed by snowmelt and flood-waters.

SIMEANAGH: For. Once-dense jungle in the far south of PNESSA. Like much of south western Pnessa, Simeanagh has been exploited by logging over the past centuries, leading to deforestation and the displacement of many creatures from their natural habitats, leading them closer to mortal lands.

SIMEIAN: Plr. 'simeians'. Eth. The people of the ancient city-state of AN SIMEIA, which was founded by the descendants of the OPRETIAN people, who were largely slain by OGHURS. Originally the offspring of women raped by pillaging oghurs, they continued breeding amongst themselves, creating a new race of sorts who came to call themselves Simeians. Though the city of An Simeia was destroyed in 941 RM, their bloodline lived on in the city of ROAH and surrounding regions. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life: Ethnicities.

SIMENIA: 1. Pol. Geo. CROWN DEPENDENCY of VENTHIR, located on a headland to the east of the kingdom. Once an island, it is now joined to the mainland by a narrow isthmus that can, during extreme tides, find itself temporarily submerged.

The island was originally deserted, used as a prison where victims of leprosy, AEPATHY, and PLAGUE were exiled to. A settlement, later known as Simenia⁽²⁾, later emerged, becoming a bustling port by c. 1400 RM. The island has been a Crown Dependency of Venthir since 1984 RM.

2. Set. Capital city of the Crown Dependency of Simenia^(1.) in the east of VENTHIR. It emerged in c. 1400 RM from the descendants of PLAGUE victims that were exiled to the island in past centuries, and has been the main port and link to the mainland since then (Pop. c. 39,000).

SIMEON THE SHAPER: (D. c. 1300 RM) Leg. Sup. Legendary shaper forming a part of myths and fables in EASTERN MENISCEA and the north west of MENISCEA. He is depicted as a rogue in most accounts, using his talents to cheat his way into power, though in others he is used as a parable to teach the values inherent in hard work and honesty. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

SIMHALUA: Mil. Str. Fortress of the SIMHALUAN mercenaries in the SOLON HIGHLANDS in the c of MHAROKK.

SIMHALUAN: Mar. Rnk. MHAROKKIN mercenaries, who continued to secretly worship NUTHEN following imperial dominance in Mharokk. They fought against the empire in the NUTHALUPRISING of 1263 RM and went into hiding outside Mharokk, foreseeing the empire's return to the area, which came in 2693 RM. Following the canonisation of Nuthen c. 3100 RM (imperial propaganda to placate the people of Mharokk), the Simhaluans returned there and became sanctioned warriors of the empire in 3174 RM, where they continue to sell their services.

Based out of the fortress of Simhalua in the SOLON HIGHLANDS, they act mostly as private security forces, trade escorts and swords-for-hire under the auspices of the empire.

SIMHAPARRAN: Set. Large city in the west of TZALLRACH, flanking the mouth of the river BAELLI. It is a major port and, alongside BALBETH and LUCCITARIA, is one of the gateways for both trade and travel into Tzallrach (Pop. c. 170,000).

SIMILANA: Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region in the far north east of the UMBRA SOKHAR wastes, close to the border with N'RAKH. The air here is difficult to breathe and those travelling within its borders for more than a few hours become short of breath, with some extreme cases of asphyxiation noted.

SIMINASH: Set. Settlement in the south west of NÁRTHEL. It is built on the ruins of a FOURTH AGE catacomb (Pop. c. 6,200).

SIMOLEUS: (B. 1467 – D. 1521 RM) Car. Ast. Cartographer and astronomer originating in DEOCHAN, who studied and later taught at the OBSERVATORY OF DEOCHAN. He popularised usage of the Observatory as the PRIME MERIDIAN and its usage became officially recognised across THE INNER SEA in 1832 RM.

SIMONTIEA: Pol. Rel. Soc. One of THE NINE WATCHERS, her visions said to tie to wealth and prosperity. She is one of the most revered of the Nine, partially due to the positive visions attributed to her.

SIMULAEKON: 1. Rel. Main religion in JURRAS^(2.), which is overseen by the JURRASI SYNHOD.

2. sing. 'Simulaeka'. Rel. Dei. In the religion of the JURRASI SYNHOD, massive iron idols, dating back to the FOURTH AGE and known since before the discovery in CALLOVIA of metal tablets that led to the rise of the Synhodic Dynasty in JURRAS⁽²⁾ and the eventual worship of the Simulaeka as idols.

The statues are thought to have been abandoned by a declining culture in the Fourth Age, until they were eventually rediscovered by the ancient Jurrasi people in 403 RM. They decayed further under KORACHANI rule, though came to be revered by a minority of nomads and rural inhabitants as the more urban areas were forced to convert to the teachings of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. This state continued until the eventual abandonment of Korachan from the region.

The arrival of the Jurrasi SYNHOD helped oust the INTERREGNUM from power and also served to unite the newly-independent people. They incorporated worship of the statues into their new religion as the Tetrarchy formed.

Most of the statues were relocated from their resting places to new positions where they could be seen by the faithful, and each statue has its own name and following, with individuals choosing a specific simulaeka as a patron. They are regarded as holy and cannot be touched outside of specific festivals. Anyone caught touching a Simulaeka will be apprehended by Synhodic troops and taken to a city where the hand that touched them is cut off in punishment.

Many aspects of Korachani culture had become so ingrained in local tradition, leading to a mishmash of aspects being incorporated into the worship of the Simulaeka. Today the statues loom protectively over Jurrassi cities, the memory of their former significance reverberating in the cultural memories of a people freed from the imperial yoke.

Following the regions vassalage to PARTHIS in 3696 RM the religion was allowed to develop without outside influence, and remains strong to this day despite the secularism promoted by Parthis. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

SIMUR: Set. Coastal settlement in the north east of TATAR (Pop. c. 6,400). SIMURGH: see SIMURV.

SIMURV: also 'Simurgh'. Fau. Bird common to the plains of the VESPERTINE LEAGUE. Females are fairly inconspicuous, with dark brown feathers and a small flash of red on the very tips of their wings and tail feathers, whereas males are a deep maroon with extremely long tail feathers that change colour from maroon at the base, to various warm colours, which differ greatly from bird to bird. Some may have patterns or stripes on their tails, while others may just be a solid colour, though most have a gradient.

The bird the national animal of the Vespertine League, and its feathers are prized across the region, and appear in works of art and fashion, with the most popular garments being large cloaks made from the feathers. There is a growing trade in the birds, with many poached, though farming has become more popular in recent years, as public sentiment has soured towards the practices of poachers. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

SIN BALAL ABIA: (B. 3921 RM) Pol. Governor of VAALK and powerful SET who is unflinchingly loyal to SATHEP THE RISEN.

SIN: 1. also 'the Queen of Blades'. f. Myt. His. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, a SCION and daughter of the DEMIURGE SYBARIS^(1.). * assassin, man slaves. killed all her children, bathing in their blood. had 1 daughter with (Scion of Kharani) who escaped and survived, now he's were fucked up.. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

2. Set. Major city in the region of SIN JEMMA. Its foundations are carved from the black rock of the area (Pop. c. 28,000).

 \underline{SIN} \underline{JEMMA} : Geo. Region in the c of \underline{THE} $\underline{SURRACH}$, in the $\underline{SURRACHI}$ \underline{PLAINS} . Its controlling city is \underline{SIN} .

SINA: 1. Geo. Once-river forming a natural border between the north of Io and western SARASTRO. The river dried in c. 2700, following the drying of its main source in OTINDHAR, Sarastro (the river flows seasonally, though its waters are not enough to support the communities that once thrived on its steep banks. What remains is now a winding canyon, making its way north to the small SEA OF TIAMA, a natural border without equal.

2. Set. Settlement in the c south of NÁRTHEL. It has become a caravanserai serving trade between SARASTRO and the city of PHENESH^(2.), which has become the nation's major link to eastern seas (Pop. c. 6,500).

SINDHARRA: Geo. Mountain-range in the c south west of CHEIRA.

SINEATER: 1. Soc. Org. Rnk. Pariah caste in the INNER SEA REGION, in regions where the Three Churches of the Undying Machine hold sway. Their wailing is considered to draw out the sins of the dead, purifying bodies before final rites are administered. They are ostensibly considered to be a part of the Church of the Undying Machine and the Reformed Church of Sarastro, though in truth they are not a formal part of either organisation, and are most common in rural areas and settlements isolated from the main inhabited regions of either empire. Individually they are shunned, though as a group they are respected, and well-paid by mourners, who employ them to pray over the bodies of the dead before they are claimed by the MORTUARY CULT for processing into

They exist out of the main church hierarchy, and hark back to a far older time, before even the Church of the Undying Machine existed, when individual sineaters were often OCCULTISTS. Their role has been largely subsumed by the FUNEREAL SODALITY in larger cities, whose members mourn for the passing of the dead against a donation.

Often women, they only wear black, even in their everyday lives, and cover their faces with rigid hooded shawls that bear the simple motifs of their parish and patron saint.

2. Soc. Rnk. Pariah caste in AHKA. Though the nation abhors organised religion, this caste is the closest thing to a religious order in Ahka. They are hired to oversee funerals and stand over the embalmed body of the deceased singing dirges that are said to take the sins of the deceased into themselves. They otherwise live in communes far from settled areas and are shunned by most due to their unclean nature, being the bearers of others' sin.

SINERMURIA OF CACHARIA: (B. 3951 RM) Pol. One of four ruling TETRARCHS of JURRAS^(2.), based in the city of CACHARIA.

SINITAS: Ind. Set. Major fortified coastal city in the west of SKAROS, overlooking the southern-most part of the STRAIT OF ANEON^(1.). The name Sinitas was first documented in a census in c. 3300 RM, at which time it was little more than a labour camp for workers and dredging barges that were required to keep the strait from silting up. Over the years, a settlement appeared near the camp, which steadily grew as the need to keep the strait clear increased.

It is home to one of the three LANGUES⁽¹⁾ of the GRIGORIAN ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION (Pop. c. 82,000).

SINGARRA: Set. City in the north of TARTAK along the banks of the river FARRAD (Pop. c. 26,500).

SINGING DUNES, the: Geo. Sandy desert region in the c north west of SABAISA, close to the coast of the far east of the SEA OF BIMARIA. Prevailing winds blow sand east, away from the coast, towards the hills of the EMSU ZHALCA Mountains. This causes the dunes to eventually collapse. This falling sand generates a low hum that gives its name to the region.

SINGING STATUES, the: see SHAYAAT.

SINISED: Pol. Royal house in the CITY KINGDOMS OF THE HARÉSHK, and the current ruling house, since 3793 RM.

SINNA: Set. Fortified settlement in the south of SARASTRO, in the ATABIRRUSH (Pop. c. 1,000).

SINNLECHA: Rui. Ruins in the north east of MULCIBER, around 55-miles south of the border with the SOLEYN TERRITORIES. The Sinnlecha was a major SHIE city in the first centuries of the FIFTH AGE, with some accounts claiming it had a population of 200,000. The city was destroyed following a war with the demon sultan AMENABAST in 979 RM, after which most of the shie were slain or enslaved, with the remaining numbers displaced to the north and south.

Many cities in the south west of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES have large shie population to this day.

SINOPIA: Set. City and region in the south east of the HENDECARCHY of CHLORIS, in MALAN. It lies along the southern bank of the river SIELL NA and dominates rural activities in the south of Chloris, its vast fields and bucolic lands stretching for miles around, the simple yet elegant red granite-skinned towers standing between them.

The city forms a vital link along the route of the Great Road, with merchants passing through it with good from across Central Llachatul (Pop. c. 270,000).

SINOSH: Set. Major coastal city in the north east of EASTERN LARISH, overlooking the entrance into the SERUM SEA. It has a large navy that guards the strait and protects the many ports and harbours surrounding the sea (Pop. c. 97,000).

SINSINIAH: Set. City in the south of HANNAH, forming a part of the NACRE ROAD. The city is ancient, with statues dating back to the THIRD AGE. Locals attribute their construction to now-forgotten gods and have a great deal of respect for them, punishing those found damaging them harshly (Pop. c. 33,000).

SINTA: Set. Major city in the c north of KARGAMA. It is a crossroads of trade and culture and is among the more metropolitan of Kargaman cities (Pop. c. 180,000).

SINTRA: Sec. Small city in the c south west of PARAIYA. Its main industry is salt mining (Pop. c. 6,500).

SINVERU: Set. City in the south west of RAONGEN^(2.), to the north of the URAHASH Massif along the course of the river SO FELX. It is a major industrial centre, and its main industry is the refining of OMNATITE that is mined in the surrounding region (Pop. c. 45,000).

SIPARIA: Sea. Sea in the south east of MENISCEA. Named by the Imperial explorer SIPARIS in 1437 RM, it was considered one of the FIVE SEAS of the pirate lore of the FIVE SAILS.

SIPARIS: (B. 1397 – 1443 RM) also 'Siparon'. PELASGOSI explorer, most remembered for his voyage west of THE INNER SEA, which reached as far as the SEAS OF NARANOR and ABRAXA.

SIPARON: see SIPARIS.

SIPHON: 1. Med. Tec. A form of VAT-GROWN LARVA⁽²⁾ that originates in the city of AGUR in BA'AKH, used to leach UMBRA from the ambient, making it safer. Their bodies are bloated and inert, their senses rendered useless during their artificial gestation. Though alive, they are largely unaware of the world around them and only dimly perceive pain and light, for instance. Their bodies are usually augmented by TECHNARCANE machinery, which controls the flow of umbra. ATRAMENTISTS and technarcanists tap into the umbra contained with these beings, often through the use of UMBILICALS or catheters, the infused shadowstuff heightening their perception of the Atramenta, increasing the potency of their shaping. These larvae are the source of the powerful SIPHON ENGINES that are used across ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED regions of the NEAR HEMISPHERE by Korachan to extract ambient umbra, which is then processed into umbra.

2. Sup. Rnk. Rare few siphons⁽¹⁾ are powerful SHAPERS in their own right; usually called SIPHON MAGNA. These individuals are commonly divided into two classes; the rarer, more powerful, individuals who naturally display such abilities, and those more commonly created through BIOMECHANICAL and TECHNARCANE means such as siphon⁽¹⁾ LARVAE⁽¹⁾.

SIPHON ENGINE: also 'dhalla machina'. Sup. Tec. Str. Complex and expensive TECHNARCANE machinery that draw off UMBRA and ATRAMENTAL TAINT from the surrounding land, condensing it into artificially created ATRAMENTAL substance that can then be processed into umbra, which is of great use to many industrial functions and processes.

The development and invention of siphon engines came about through extensive research into Atramental DISEASES such as AEPATHY, and centuries of studies conducted by ATRAMENTISTS and technarcanists.

Many siphon engines have at their core interred Atramentists or Atramentally-sensitive LARVAE⁽¹⁾, known as SIPHONS⁽¹⁾, that draw ambient Atramental energies towards them.

The first modern siphon engines were developpe in BA'AKH in c. 920 RM as a means of negating the widespread Atramental taint in the area.

SIPHON MAGNA: Soc. Sup. Rnk. Powerful SIPHONS⁽²⁾ who are in possession of their full faculties, usually created through BIOMECHANICAL and TECHNARCANE means. Siphon magna are an important part of advanced societies and are often on the forefront of exploratory teams, where they can sense and dissipate, to some degree, any ATRAMENTAL TAINT they may come across. Like the siphon⁽¹⁾ LARVA⁽¹⁾, they are commonly augmented through ORTHOSES such as IRON MANTLES⁽²⁾, which are designed to strengthen their skills and increase their fortitude against the ATRAMENTA. Many siphon magna become UMBRAPHAGES, unable to resist the temptations around them. Typically, siphon magna are too valuable to be wasted being interred in siphon engines, though this can be done through UMBILICALS married to the SHAPERS through OCCLUSIONS and orthoses such as HEART ENGINES.

SIPHON WALL, the: Sup. Tec. Str. Large array of SIPHON ENGINES in the west of AETHIOS, positioned between the eastern-most reaches of the BLEEDING PLAINS and the river SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾. The array serves to slow the spread of the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region as much as possible, as its effects on the waters of the Shibboleth could be catastrophic if the Bleeding Plains are allowed to reach it. The region is heavily fortified and guarded by entire regiments of the Aethiosi army.

SIPHON WELL: Tec. Obj. Self-flowing wells that are common in rural areas of AHRISHEN. Water drawn from these wells is used to water crops and livestock, but if left untreated is unfit for mortal consumption. The wells are made by drilling into soft earth to find pressurised water trapped beneath the surface. The change in pressure from the drilling of the hole creates a siphon that draw water out of the soft earth that flows of its own power for some time until the hope slowly seals itself which can take between days and weeks.

SIPPAR: Geo. Island in the SEA OF ASEER, off the south western coast of ACHAA⁽²⁾. It was 'discovered' and named by the explorer BOHMIUS in 1526 RM.

SIPYLANA: Geo. Mountain-range dividing the TARAHID ANNEXES from PARTHIS. Its south western face was mined extensively in the past, and the ruin of mines and quarries abandoned in c. 2590 RM now dot the entire region.

SIRAZHAD: 1. Geo. Low rocky mountains in the c west of SEDISIA.
 2. Set. Fortified coastal city in the south west of SEDISIA (Pop. c. 46,000).

SIREN: 1. Mor. Offshoot of MERILLS who are descended from rare individuals who do not share the GENERIC MEMORY of their merill ancestors. This allowed them to develop without the debilitating madness that affects their merill kin. Aware of the fate that awaited merills, the sirens separated themselves from them, thus remaining few in number, and today they are largely unknown, restricted to certain lands

They were discovered by modern mortals on distant shorelines in the east of $\underline{BROR}^{(1)}$, the records of which are now lost. A few were brought back to civilisation as novelties and oddities.

Though they are not sapient in the way HUMANS are, their photographic memory and perfect mimicry skills have made them perfect sideshow attractions, where they recite vast epics from memory. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

2. Soc. Rnk. In SAGITTARIA, a caste of untouchable seers whose dirge-like gibberish is said to be their communing with the OTHERWORLD.

SIRA: Geo. Mountain-pass in the c of the HAAGEN Mountain, linking the ARID TRIPTYCH with the rest of EASTERN SAMMAEA, through the plains of BAULDOR. It was a major trade-route between the two regions until c. 1900 RM, when the bandit stronghold of SIRIPHAGOS forced most traffic pass from other routes farther north.

SIRAS: Cur. The currency of SIRIPHAGOS, emerging in c. 2100 RM, named after the local word for salt; a far older means of trade that was established in the predecessor-city of SIRIPHAS.

It is a strong currency, backed by massed gold reserved in the city of Siriphagos, and its coins are accepted across the INNER SEA REGION, via trade across the SALT ROAD, amongst other trade routes It is the standard against which most moneylenders calculate exchange rates between currencies (of course it helps that most moneychangers are members of the SIRIPHAGAN ALLIANCE...). See Vol II: Currency and Coinage in Elyden.

SIRDAIRA: Geo. Dry highlands in the far north west of NAARETH, acting as a border with the far more arid region of ANUBIA to the west and SARAGOS to the east. Sirdaira is known for its picturesque rockformations and horizontal rainbow-like strata, though its dry climate makes it sparsely populated.

SIREN'S SONG, the: Sea. Veh. Pirate ship belonging to the FIVE SAILS fleet, on who the eventual pirate queen served before besieging DANNAR, becoming its queen and founding a dynasty that rules to this day. The ship remained in a drydock as a historical structure for many years, but was dismantled and scrapped in c. 3600 RM.

SIRI: Com. Ancient trade-route and predecessor to the SALT ROAD of today. It was in many ways the predecessor of the city of SIRIPHAGOS.

SIRI RAH: Geo. Long mountain-range in RHINOCOLOURA, stretching across its c-lands for over 300-miles.

SIRIPHAGAN ALLIANCE: Com. Pol. Org. A major trade consortium established in SIRIPHAGOS⁽²⁾ in 3709 RM comprising a federation of merchant houses from across the INNER SEA who make use of the intertwined network of trade-routes around the INNER SEA REGION, particularly the SALT ROAD and RED ROUTE. The alliance, together with the states in which the respective routes pass through, work together to maintain the routes, providing those who travel across them with protection, though many would argue that their main concern in safeguarding their interests – primarily their merchants and the goods that are bought and sold along the routes.

The Alliance also seeks out new routes and its representatives travel extensively, making alliances with new territories, in the hopes of extending their routes with the ultimate goal of seeking more profits.

Though membership in the Siriphagan Alliance is not mandatory for merchants to use the routes and buy and sell goods across them, it does grant certain boons – access to Alliance lodging, use of Alliance money changers (without the risks inherent in using independent money changers), guard services, and advantageous prices when dealing with fellow Alliance merchants.

Today the Alliance is made up of the Siriphagan ASKER HOUSES, the VARTAN CONSORTIUM, the Haréshki Merchant Guilds, the AHHAS pariah-merchants, the Anubian Merchant-lords, the BENESHI merchants of AHKA, the GREY MERCHANTS, the HITTAN Merchant-Princes, the HOAMMI Merchant-houses, the MARBLE COURT, the J'thanan Federation of Brokers, the LAZAWAN HOUSES, and the MAKHARAN Trade Corporation, amongst others. The Siriphagan Alliance is itself a part of the INNER SEA TRADE CONSORTIUM. See Vol II: Major Trade Routes.

SIRIPHAGOS: 1. Dem. 'Siriphagan'. Ntn. Landlocked nation located in the BAULDOR plains, in the north east of SAMMAEA, between the BETHET Mountains in the west and the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER.

The nation rose in c. 1920 RM after the rapid growth of the trade-city of SIRIPHAS and the rise to power of the FIRMAMENTAL caste taking the name ALIHEIOAN, which subsequently took control of surrounding regions and cities. Siriphagos rapidly became a centre of Firmamental research even as its merchant houses expanded their operations across the trade-route known as the SALT ROAD, which by c. 3000 RM had grown to pass through parts of SARASTRO, HAARAZHAL, ETHISTONITH, MULCIBER, LIDEA, and other nations and city-states between. This drew the attention of SARASTRO, which attacked it following the SARASTROAN SANCTION 3013 RM. This led to a decline and slow diminishing of its territories, leading to the construction of the FAROUT WALL, which was designed to defend against attacks.

Despite its best efforts, in 3525 RM Siriphagos was forced into vassalage under Sarastro, which allowed it to rule itself, in return for a yearly tithe for its use of the Salt Road. This state lasted until after the SUNDERING OF THE KORACHANI EMPIRE in 3705 RM, which left Sarastro in a state of chaos. This gave the ruling ASKER class the chance to eject Sarastro from their cities, after which they bolstered their borders. This saw most of the wealth of the region diverted to the construction of fortifications and the funding of its armies and the re-establishing of the Salt Road, at the cost of leaving its people to suffer.

The militarisation of Siriphagos continued over the next century, with a focus on protecting merchant caravans plying their trade along the Salt Road, and redirecting the route away from Sarastro to the west in search of new routes and cities to trade with. The $\underline{\text{WHITE LEAGUE}}$ and other mercenary forces became permanent fixtures of the region, and remain so to this day.

Its cities are cosmopolitan and home to people from across ELYDEN, including many MORTALS other than HUMANS, as well as HALFBLOODS and OTHERWORLDERS of various types. Many noble families from across Elyden also have offices here.

Its borders now far smaller than they once were, Siriphagos has slowly regained its statue a trading centre in the north east of Sammaea, and its wares travel far across both Sammaea, and Llachatul.

In 3934 RM a halfblood calling himself THE ALACRAN usurped control of the Asker, becoming a figurehead for all of Siriphagos. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

2. Set. Major city in the west of the plains of BAULDOR, subsisting since c. 1900 RM on trade and mercancy, establishing the SALT ROAD in c. 2000 RM. The city evolved from a smaller trade-town and caravanseral that has existed there since c. -1900 RM, developing into a major FIRMAMENTAL centre by c. 1800 RM, lasting for around a thousand years, until c. 2800 RM, where the ALIHEIOANS outlawed its use outside their ranks, leaving them the sole FIRMAMENTISTS in the region. Trade remained an important feature of the city's economy throughout its existence, and it was heavily fortified throughout its existence.

Today it is a bustling city of auction houses, trading halls, caravanserais, hostels, and warehouses. Merchants come here to do business and to relax, and it is known for its brothels, taverns and other places where weary merchants can distract themselves, and it is also home to various CHAPTERS(2.) of the WHITE LEAGUE whose FREE COMPANIONS serve as guards on the many merchant caravans that pass through the city (Pop. c.849,000).

SIRIPHAGAN: Lan. Language spoken in SIRIPHAGOS, including merchants of the SIRIPHAGAN LEAGUE, who have spread it across SAMMAEA via the SALT ROAD, making it well-travelled tongue. It emerged from the earlier SIRIPHASI in c. 2000 RM. See Vol II: Languages.

SIRIPHAS: Dem. 'Siriphaian'. Also 'the Free-city of Siriphas'. His. Ntn. Predecessor nation of present-day SIRIPHAGOS, emerging in c. -120 RM as a bandit camp preying on trade moving along the SIRI trade-route now recognised as the SALT ROAD, largely between GELHANA, the CITADEL MOUNTS and Actanors, as well as the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. By c. -50 RM the camp had evolved into a settlement that served the Siri trade-route, its outlaws and brigands instead becoming traders and caravanserais, the settlement calling itself Siriphas after the trade-route. This change was a natural progression of their vocation and the added security that came to the route following the growth of the Citadel Mounts.

As the caravanserai became wealthier, it found itself also growing in size, attracting people from surrounding areas. It was around that time, in c. 50 RM that its people began exploiting the vast natural salt tables along the east hills of the BETHET, trading the stuff the cities of DUN SVARR

(now Catachis), Dun Mhaq and Ellda (in the east of Gelhana) around 50 RM; source of the resultant trade-routes' name and forming a basis for their early currency (a barter system centred around salt). The appearance of the Korachaniempire in the region, both in the Citadel Mounts, and to the north west in Ba'akh, had an adverse effect on trade, though Siriphas had by then become essential to commerce in the region, its imposing walls commanding an uninterrupted view of the mountain passes and the plains of Bauldor to the east. The fortress of Nakh was erected along the north eastern-most reaches of the Bethet mountain in c. 200 RM to safeguard trade between Siriphas and the Citadel Mounts, which brought further prosperity to the region, leading to the appearance of small satellite towns in the west of the Bauldor plains over the next century, most of which were devoted to particular trades and gathering specific resources, for transportation west to Siriphas.

An attempt to take the city in 362 RM by Korachani forces occupying the Citadel Mounts, which by then had been renamed EHBOT, failed miserably, and the region was forgotten amid growing tensions with the tribes of the GROWING MOUNTAINS to the east. This led to a time of decreased trade, and Siriphas survived largely due to its command of the salt trade in the region. The AUERENI attacks against Ehbot brought further chaos to the region, though they had little direct effect on Siriphas, perhaps due to trade relations that had been established over the past centuries. But the time did lead to a loss of Siriphaian influence in the region. The closest Siriphas got to war with the tribes of Mulciber was in 481 RM, when the fortress of Nakh was taken by THLOLOTI marauders and the lands around NAURACH in Ehbot fell under Auereni control. This caused the collapse of Siriphaian trade north, crippling the city's economy. Soon the Auereni stopped trading with Siriphas, leading to more woes in the region and, in 545 RM, the city found itself under attack by the rogue ACTANROSI warlord ELBIAN who marched against them with a large army amongst which fought Auereni barbarians. Despite the city's defences, the attackers were able to make their way into the mountain passes above the city, allowing them a vantage point that led to the fall of the city, which was looted and razed.

Siriphas was abandoned, its people scattering to either its satellite towns or to the north, where they helped repopulate the war-stricken Ehbot which by Oth. Then had been abandoned by Korachan, renamed Arkos^(1.) by the survivors. The fortress of Nakh was rebuilt and settled in c. 675 RM, encouraging trade to return to the region and by c. 900 RM Siriphas was reborn. To the south, Actanors had surrounding lands locked in a war that would ultimately lead to the unification of the region and the birth of ETHAND; an act which by c. 1000 RM led to a spurt in trade with Siriphas.

The city fortified its lands over the centuries, growing into a powerful city-state that, at its height in c. 1750 RM boasted a population of no less than 250,000, including outlying vassals. Its mountain-forts were unassailable and equipped with the best of imperial-made artillery. As Arkos found itself faltering under the leadership of the Arkos caste, whose insular rule only served to push trade away, Siriphas continued to grow in power, though the city itself had reached a threshold and was beginning to shrink slowly. The rise of a halfblooded caste known as the ALIHEIO saw the city change rapidly c. 1900 RM, leading to its reemergence as a FIRMAMENTAL centre as well as hub of trade, seeing it renamed SIRIPHAGOS.

SIRIPHASI: His. Lan. Now-extinct language spoken by the people of SIRIPHAS. By c. 2000 RM it had changed to SIRIPHAGAN. See Vol II: Languages.

SIRIPHIS: Ast. Con. Main star of the constellation REXCANIS, forming its shoulder. See Vol II: Constellations.

 $\underline{\bf SIRISS} : \mathit{Set.}$ Major fortified city in the far south west of $\underline{\bf ELEKHID}$ (Pop. c. 120,000).

SIRONA: Set. Settlement in the east of ABATTUR, in the VOULLOR Mountains. It is known for its springs, the water of which are considered to have healing properties and are visited by the sick and dying who pray to ANDRASTE while bathing in them (Pop. c. 8,000).

SIRRIS: For. Forest in the north east of JURRAS^(2.). It is largely made up of alder, carob and elm woodlands.

SIRTA: Set. Fortified coastal city in the east of ESHIR^(2.) in the north western-most tip of the SEA OF MEREKA^(1.) (Pop. c. 30,000).

SIRUSH: Geo. Brushland and sparse woodland in the north west of GNOTH, to the east of the AGABERAN WATERS and the AEARN Wetlands. The region is healthy and thriving and is thought to have once been part of a vast virginal forest that dominated most of WESTERN LLACHATUL, but which was cut down throughout the THIRD and FOURTH AGES.

SIRUT: Set. Settlement in the c north east of GNOTH, situated on a level plain that forms part of the GRYPHOSS Mountains. It is known for its ancient SOULSTONE deposits (Pop. c. 10,000).

SISARA: Rvr. River in the east of TRAKIA flowing for over 1,000-miles east from sources in the south of the ROAHAN Roughlands and the south east of KHALHAT. It is one of the few rivers to flow year-round in the region and is important to trade in the east of Trakia. Its waters are tainted by the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region of TUKHRAGHON, though this is offset by the presence of the potent SIPHON ENGINE of SISARAKIA, which cleans and filters the water before it reaches the cities of BAHRAIA and OLNNAD.

SISARAKIA: Str. Tec. Major SIPHON ENGINE facility in the south east of TRAKIA, on the south eastern border of the region of TUKHRAGHON. It siphons ATRAMENTAL TAINT from the waters of the river SISARA and pumps the recovered UMBRA east to the city of BAHRAIA. It is the only siphon engine in all of Trakia and its upkeep is a major strain on the already weak economy of the region.

SISARON: Lake in the south east of TRAKIA along the course of the river SISARA.

SISCSAEN: For. Sparse jungles dominating the south east of RHEA.

SISHALEH MI: Set. Dre. Fortified settlement in the DREAMSCAPE of the NEPHILIMS' MAW, in the c north of BANT, in the c of the CARCHEMISHI PENINSULA^(1.), in the east of SAMMAEA. It is home to a large monastery of fanatics of the NEPHILIM, who seek out the worst of the phenomena of the dreamscape, which is thought to be caused by the Nephilim (Pop. c. 3,000).

SISHRA II: f. Pol. Per. (B. 3947 RM) Present queen-steward of KOMMEA, who has ruled since 4004 RM following the death of her father Thalyron. She was betrothed to a TETHYSIAN DEMIGOD since childhood and the two married when she acceded the throne, cementing Kommean vassalage to Tethysia.

Her eldest child, prince Abbarud IV is openly critical of Kommean vassalage and has shown nationalist tendencies as he amasses a strong following from across all social strata in the kingdom in what many political commentators believe are is the first act in an imminent revolution.

SISIT: Set. Settlement in the north of TARATI^(1.). Its main industry is iron mining (Pop. c. 6,800).

SISKEH: Rel. Rui. Ancient funerary temple located in the east of KHAMID, on the island of KHOHER. The temple is amongst the largest known funerary temples and is guarded by twin sphinxes, both damaged and badly worn by age. Little is known about the temple but its uncharacteristically large size is indicative that it was a royal temple. All known chambers are now empty, its riches plundered long ago.

SISKIN: Set. Major city in the region of SABBOQUA in the north of THE SURRACH. Before it became a large city, it was known as a settlement of woodworkers and falconers and lovers of all bird species. Though that part of its identity is no-more, birds still feature prominently in its architecture and cultural icons. The settlements under its control are amongst the major producers of lumber in the Surrach (Pop. c. 99,000).

SISMA: Set. Small city in the far south east of the HENDECARCHY of LONAR in the south west of MALAN. It is situated along the southern shore of lake OZGUR and its main industry is fishing (Pop. c. 15,000).

SISOSTI: Sea. Bay in the north of the SEA OF ETAGIRIA, to the east of the PHILIAN peninsula in southern HANNAH.

SISSAB: Geo. Highlands and hills in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of ALAMUT. The highlands are the source of the IALAN tributary of the river SAR and are rich in rubies.

- SISSEBA: 1. Geo. Valley in the north west of ATARAXIA, between the southern-face of the BLACK MOUNTAINS to the north and the TABIT Mountains to the south.
 - 2. Rvr. River in the north west of AHKA, flowing east for 445-miles from sources in the BLACK MOUNTAINS and the TABIT Mountains before meeting its parent, the river MALAKAH.
- SISSET: Lake in the c west of MALAN, along the borders of the HENDECARCHIES of MYEIN and AMILLAERE⁽¹⁾. It forms a part of the LAUL EGLEA river system and is situated at the fork between it and its tributary, the river ASURIAH.
- SISTERS OF THE SAIL: Int. Rel. Org. Order of nuns dedicated to SATHEP THE RISEN and the REFORMED CHURCH OF SARASTRO. The order is based in the city of ALACANT, and is curious in that it is funded by the spoils devotes privateers, and they devote their days to praying for their safe return home and plunder.
- SITAMET: Geo. Mountain in the north of SAMMAEA, in the KAZZARAN^(1.) at the border between TATAR and Kazzar. Like many of the mountains in the region, it is old and crumbling and prone to landslides.
- SITAMMA: Set. City in the c south west of TETHYSIA (Pop. c. 44,300).
- SITANAYAN: Set. Only major city in the region of lake PURRI in the north of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES. It is sustained by the waters of a nearby river that flows near year-round into the lake (Pop. c. 32,000).

SITAT: see DEAD LAKE.

- SITH: 1. Oth. Type of HALFBLOOD believed to be descended from a PRIMOGENITOR somehow linked to S'HITH, an aspect of the Demiurge DOPELLANICH. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

 2. also S'HITH.
- SITHACHORNA: Sup. Geo. Atramentally tainted region in the south east of SUOR. It is known for its crumbling duststone earth and the corrupted fauna that live in it.

The region is categorised as $\underline{\text{DANGEROUS}}$ by the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI}}$ INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

SITHAHAL: (14,900-ft.) Geo. A large flat-topped mound in the north of KHARKHARADONTIS, along the western-most arm of the EGERIAN RIDGE, west of the GAP OF SHADOWS. The mound is large, its slopes arid and hard unlike any other. No vegetation, natural or otherwise grows on its surface, safe for a sparse downy growth that is, despite the absurdity of the notion, best described as coarse hair, as though giant lay petrified on those steppes.

The site is located relatively close to the SHADOW MARCH, though most who see it claim a sense of unease, of a malignant yet latent hazard there that is best left undisturbed. Those who have explored its surface and the few shallow caves that lead into its bowels claim to be visited by prophetic DREAMS that manifested as potent déjà vu's in the weeks and months subsequent to their explorations, each episode accompanied by a feeling of cold and nausea.

The region's name is derived from ETHERI legends, what maintain a demon of ancient creed, its creator-worshippers long since destroyed in a great war, has slumbered there for so long that the earth itself has cocooned it within its embrace, where it sleeps for eternity.

SITHIA: His. Set. Ancient city in what is now the far west of MHAROKK. It is said to have been so old, that it could only have been built by a god (possibly a reference to a DEMIURGE). Its present location, if indeed it was even real, is unknown.

 $\underline{SITHRAL}:$ Set. Settlement in the c south of $\underline{VALBAR}^{(2)}$ (Pop. c. 7,000).

- SITRI: 1. Pol. Geo. One of three political territories (known as MANSIONS) in the nation of GREST^(1.) in the west of the island-continent of BROR^(1.). It is the second largest and southernmost Mansion of Grest and is home to many sparse woodlands.
 - 2. Pol. Set. Administrative centre of the eponymous^(1,) Mansion in the south of the nation of Grest^(1,) in the west of the island-continent of Bror^(1,). It is home to a major fishing fleet that plies the waters of the AHAGGAD^(1,), and for its major temple dedicated to the He'elan Writings, located just outside the city, in the southern foothills of the Kogilir Highlands. It is the seat of power of the Archduke Iebesh Yetzirah (Pop. c. 203,500).

- SITROR: Set. City in the south east of $\underline{GREST}^{(1)}$ in the island-continent of $\underline{BROR}^{(1)}$ (Pop. unknown).
- SITTRIAH: Ser. Settlement in the south east of ZHARIAH^(2.). Its main industry is the cultivation of cotton for the textile industry in INGASAR and SALIAH (Pop. c. 8,000).
- SITULA: Geo. Mountain in the north east of AQUARIIA, forming an extension of the western-face of the BLACK MOUNTAINS.
- SITVIGA: Set. Major city in the c of CHEIRA, originally known as Sit Vigra (Pop. c. 89,000).
- SIWAN: Set. Settlement in the north east of LIDEA. It forms a part of the RED ROUTE and has many hostels and inns that cater to merchant caravans that pass through it while travelling along the Route (Pop. c. 5,000).
- SIX, The: Pol. Rnk. In RHEA, six high-SKINEN who meet in conclave four times a year as part of the COURT OF DREAMS.
- SIX CITIES, the: Pol. Ntn. Small area in the west of THE SURRACH in the north west of SAMMAEA, covering approximately 20,000-square-miles of fertile coastal territory, overlooking the SEA OF AAREN. The local calendar (AB) is derived from the founding of AHINA and is currently in its 1523rd year.

The region's origins lie within the ruin of the EMPIRE OF AHINA, its population descended from a mix of KORACHANI colonists who remained there, the \underline{SAVI} natives, and people from the east of the Surrach. This had led to an interesting genetic and cultural mix that continues to this day. Ahina fragmented in around 3580 RM in the wake of a terrible PLAGUE. The population was decimated and many cities were allowed to fall into ruin. A string of warlords appeared following this time, subjugating the remaining populace of the region. The short-lived nation of $\underline{SAVIANA}$ emerged during this time, and war was common, reducing other inhabited cities to rubble and further savaging the population.

In 3791 RM, a loose coalition formed opposing the Tyrant Daaran who had risen to power in Saviana, taking over much of the western part of the region. Following a protracted war, the Tyrant was defeated in 3796 RM and the land was divided into 6 territories, amongst 6 generals, and the term, the Six Cities was first used in an official capacity to describe the region. These territories are roughly analogous with the extant states of Dakhra, Apinar, Nekharaal, Daath, Pegan and Tanass, though borders have changed over the years. The region of Alron emerged some 75-years ago, from parts of Dakhra and Pegan. Other autonomous states (such as Vanka and Moloch) have since appeared too. Each state has its own character, following a trend common in the greater Surrach.

The region is very fertile and has a climate favourable to farming, and it is densely-populated. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

SIY: Rel. One of five aspects of the PENTATAEL religion of ELAT and AYAD.

SIYAATI: Set. City in the c of ALMAGEST, along the course of the river NAHMOL (Pop. c. 12,000).

SIYYAT: Set. Small city in the north of the JAHADAT STATES, in the east of SAMMAEA, and capital of one of the twelve States (Pop. c. 45,800).

SIZAJASEL: Mil. Rnk. Title in SAGITTARIA given to military leaders.

SITT: Sea. Large bay in the north of MENISCEA, to the west of the SEA OF INGALAT. It lies along the northern POLAR CIRCLE.

 \underline{SKAAND} : Geo. Island off the north eastern coast of \underline{VAALK} , in the \underline{SEAOF} BASSANDER.

- SKAETAH: m. Pol. Mil. Per. (D. 1197 RM) Champion who spent his adult life bringing the disparate city states of the MEGHRANIZ BHOOKH under his banner, ultimately leading to the founding of ZHARIAH⁽¹⁾ in c. 1170 RM.
- SKAHAT: Set. Small fortified city in the south west of AQUARIIA, 17-miles from the border with GNOTH. Its main industry is logging and it is known for its falconry (Pop. c. 18,000).
- SKALL: Rvr. River in the MULL CITY-STATES, flowing south for 220-miles from sources in the EBUT SAT Mountains before emptying into the BAY OF BOKKA.
- SKALL SOTA: Set. Coastal city and major harbour in the south of the MULL CITY-STATES, along the mouth of the river SKALL (Pop. c. 45,000).

SKAPAR: For. Old woodlands in the east of SKAROS, forested to the brink of destruction by c. 3200 RM. The region was abandoned by c. 3300 RM and ignored, allowing it to slowly regrow, albeit sparser and weaker than before, and it now crosses the largely uninhabited border east with BASSORAH^(2,).

SKAR: 1. Rvr. River in the north east of SKAROS, flowing north west for 150-miles from the Skar Mountains to its mouth in the SEA OF APHOTIS, near FORT SKAR.

- 2. Geo. Mountain in the north east of SKAROS.
- 3. (6,631 ft.) Geo. Highest peak in the eponymous Mountain-range.
- 4. Mil. Str. Coastal fortress in SKAROS, overlooking the SEA OF APHOTIS.

SKARCHAN: Ind. Set. Mining settlement in the north west of the SKAR⁽²⁾ Mountains, founded by KORACHANI rulers in c. 1,000 RM. The mines are primarily concerned with coal and shale extraction (Pop. c. 4,200).

SKAROS: Dem. 'Skarosian'. Ntn. Vassal state located in the far west of CENTRAL LLACHATUL, overlooking the eponymous strait after which it takes its name, Skaros is a cold temperate nation whose land has been continuously exploited for its resources for millennia, leaving it a pockmarked grey wasteland bereft of any natural beauty.

It originated as a demesne of the LASCAR⁽³⁾ KINGDOM⁽²⁾ in the early FIFTH AGE was a major power in the region dominating the coast of the STRAIT OF SKAROS, but broke away in -68 RM. Following three decades of border wars, it was declared one nation, though struggled in the years leading up to its eventual subjugation by the nascent KORACHANI EMPIRE in 23 RM, making it the fourth of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR'S conquests. Three months later, its largest city and (then) capital, ASOKA was destroyed and in one night of bloodshed all its nobility was killed, mostly by Malichar.

The CHEIROAHIN were banished from Korachan in -2 RM, and it is thought their descendants settled in Skaros, leading to arise in PENUMBRISM there between c. 50 - 100 RM.

It was a major target of the RENAISSANCE CRUSADES, and many monasteries and institutions of learning were destroyed in the decades of the crusades, with many settlements waning in the ensuing years, during which the small nation of HRIDAN^(2,) would rise.

Now the oldest nation to be in continuous vassalage to Korachan, it has gone on to become a vital part of the imperial economy, providing raw resources for its many industries. It has since become famed for its foundry-workers, miners, and loggers, who are considered amongst the most accomplished and tested in all the empire. Indeed, some of the largest open-cast pits and manufactories are found in Skaros to this day, despite the gradual wane in the resources at the empire's disposal.

Its northern territories became a major battleground during the WAR OF THE ARTIFEXES and, half of the nation was handed over to ALMAGEST as part of the peace treaty signed in 3014 RM, leaving behind a scared and wounded nation that took many years to recover.

Following this, Korachan expanded the nation west across the strait in a bid to restore its territories, bringing war to the indigenous people there. Despite this, the region became a hotbed of unrest due to losses of the War of the Artifexes, and between 3300 and 3350 RM many of these new colonies, centred around the city of ARKAM, were allowed to break away, eventually becoming the nation of ATARAXIA in 3450 RM. In 3792 RM, after years of decadence and failing rule, the ruling PATRICIAN HOUSES were deposed by the TITHE-BARONS in a coup that was funded by the empire itself, and they have ruled Skaros since then as regents of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

SKAROS, STRAIT OF: Sea. Narrow sea dividing Western Llachatul from Central Llachatul, with Ahka and Ataraxia to the west and Laashka and Skaros to the east. It forms a northern extension of the Inner Sea. In 1111 RM trade up and down the strait was taken by the Korachani empire.

SKAROSIA: Pol. Set. The capital city of SKAROS, in the north of the nation. Originally called CATO, the name was changed to Skarosia by the KORACHANI EMPIRE after it moved the capital from ASOKA there in 23 RM. It became the home of the GALENIC ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION in 3015 RM following its expulsion from a newly-independent ALMAGEST. Since then, the Order has become a defining part of the city, and most of its agents are recruited from Skarosia and its satellites (Pop. c. 1,790,000).

SKAROSIAN: His. Lan. Now-extinct language that emerged from the earlier LASCAR⁽⁴⁾ tongue in what is now the south of SKAROS around 4,000-years ago at a time when the KORACHANI EMPIRE was expanding and subjugating its neighbours.

It was quelled by the Korachani advance, and rapidly forgotten. See Vol II: Languages.

SKAROSIAN GIANT: see GIANT, SKAROSIAN.

SKAROSIAN PLAINS: Geo. Expansive temperate plains dominating the north west of SKAROS. The northern-most reaches of the plains are riddled with ancient minefields – remnants of hostilities from the WAR OF THE ARTIFEXES, and as a result the region is shunned to this day. The area is also home to the largest population of DREKAVACS in SKAROS, which are a menace to livestock.

SKAROSIAN WASTES: Geo. Huge expanse dominating the north eastern part of SKAROS – a true waste, with little of value in it save wasted mines and ghost-towns.

SKEIN: 1. Geo. Pol. HOAMMI colony in the north of SAMMAEA. It is effectively a semi-exclave, being completely surrounded by the territories of foreign states – NUTHACHAN^(1.) in the west, and HARAPPA^(3.) in the south and east.

2. Set. Coastal city in the north of SAMMAEA belonging to HOAMM, overlooking the SEA OF NUTHEN. It is known for its natural steam vents, which are used by its many manufactories. An orange mist (chemical) hangs over the coast and its waters are stained the same colour. It forms a major link along the RED ROUTE, and its ports are busy with ships that transfer goods to the main Hoammi territories in the north (Pop. c. 62,000).

SKELERIELL: also 'THE STONE WINDOW'. Arc. Monument in the east of AQUARIIA hewn from a large mesa inside which is an ancient temple, reaching deep beneath the BLACK MOUNTAINS. Undeciphered hieroglyphs line the walls as do the tombs of ancient princes whose names are unknown.

SKELLUM: Set. Large caravanserai in the c of the DESOLATION OF ASTUDAN, along the trade-route crossing the Desolation, linking west and east (Pop. c. 2,200).

SKERETT: Geo. Hot savannah dominating the west of NASTAL^(2,) in the c of WESTERN SAMMAEA.

SKHIZIA: Set. Fortified city in the east of OTINTH, along the course of the river AM TUAHEM. It is the birthplace of a renowned local shaper, who is regarded as a national hero and whose large statue dominated its main square (Pop. c. 45,000).

SKINEN: lit. 'he who wields the sun'. Rel. Sup. Rnk. FIRMAMENTAL priests of SAEWAL in RHEA. Skinen is a title as well as a vocation, with those bestowed the name acting as local arbiters (the name itself is symbolic of the Rhean Sun-gods' power of judgement). They wear featureless gold-plated masks to remind people of the brilliance of the sun, and to distance themselves from those they judge. Most are shapers with Firmamental abilities.

SKITTERLIMB: see Czejiskezzik.

SKOGALA: Geo. Island off the northern coast of KULIGALA. It is home to the fabled LABYRINTH OF MAATABABRA and is largely unpopulated.

SKOPHOTH: Set. City in the CHAMBER OF DIRGES in the PRISON CARCERI, beneath the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. unknown).

SKUD: Cur. Lowest denomination of the KORACHANI CURRENCY, also known as a MAGGOT, which is in use across ELYDEN in the many colonies and dependencies of the Korachani empire. The coin is made of copper and is oval in shape, just under an inch long, and just over half an inch high. There have been hundreds of mints throughout the existence of the empire, all of which have different versions of the HIGH CONSULITE in profile on the backside, and different regional and topical images on the topside. See Vol II: Currency and Coinage in Elyden.

SKULFUR: Pol. One of seven ruling CLANS in CISNERIA, whose emblem is the giant elk, who embodies hard work, and is the guardian of farmers. The other clans are BERMION, DISLMA, GYSTAR, HOMMAL, KRAKYR, KRISLOR. SKULL: Soc. In many cultures across the INNER SEA, particularly the KORACHANI EMPIRE, skulls play an important role in funerary customs and the veneration of the dead.

Korachani funerary customs dictate that the body of most deceased be reclaimed for use in the manufacture of DROSS. This only leaves the skull of the deceased for the purposes of burial and veneration by surviving family members. After cleaning and preparation by the MORTUARY CULT, most skulls will be etched with an index number and the details of their bearer before being interred within FUNERARY TOWERS during a small ceremony with the friends and family of the deceased around an AGAPE TABLE. Families with the means to may have the skull of the deceased decorated – carved, etched, gilded, or covered in filigree or jewellery – and placed in a shrine within the Tower or a private shrine in their home, if they can afford it. Skulls interred within Funerary Towers incur a perpetuity tax. If unpaid, the skull is typically disinterred after 77-years (usually long enough for any direct relatives to have died) to make room for new ones.

The necropolis of GULGOLETH is an extreme example of this, and the skulls of executed WITCHES are inscribed with the sin and method of EXECUTION.

SKY CROWN, the: Obj. Crown crafted from a piece of meteoric iron, believed to have been made in the THIRD AGE. The craftsman who made it is said to have slit his wrists upon completing it, allowing the blood to drip onto the crown. It has since been lost and rediscovered various times throughout history, having been used as a royal artifact for centuries in early FIFTH AGE SYNCHTHONITHA before being lost again in c. 1370 RM. It is believed to have been retrieved sometime in the 35th century, after which it found its way into a private collection.

SKY-DEITY: Rel. Dei. God worshipped by the DONAGERS of ancient KOMMEA. Immigrants from ancient KASPIA, they brought some of their religious beliefs with them and the Sky-deity was a minor figure from the FROSTBLOOD pantheon.

The Sky-deity was a patron to mariners and explorer and was important to the ancestors of the Donagers, who sailed down the SEA OF IALCUS and settled shortly in extant TISARA before moving overland to the south east, settling in what are now LOEGRESS^(1.) and western Kommea, where they built open-roofed observatory-temples in honour of their patron, who over the next century grew into the sole deity of the Donagers. Though their subjects paid their respects to the god, he remained primarily a deity to the ruling caste.

Worship of the Sky-deity largely died out following the arrival of the CUNOMAGLIO to the region, though the belief was re-kindled centuries later by the descendants of the Donagers, and it remains a mystery cult in Loegress (and, to a lesser extent Kommea) to this day. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

SKY DEITY, IDOL OF: Rel. Str. Idol dedicated to the SKY DEITY found in the far north west of KOMMEA. It was constructed by migrants from KASPIA early in the 2nd millennium RM, though it lies ruined and largely abandoned to today.

Though the cult of the Sky Deity is still a practiced religion in Kommea, particularly amongst minorities (mostly those who identify as primarily Kaspian), the idol itself is unknown to most and ignored by the faith's clergy.

SKY GATE, the: Arc. Fantastical arch in the c north east of the URARAGHI Mountains, in the c north east of AMMESH. It spans two sides of a steep cleft and was constructed by unknown builders so that people looking at from one side could see the summer solstice sun rising through its semicircular arch.

SKY-LORD, the: Rel. Dei. Deity in the AHRISHENI CHURCH OF THE WELKIN SKY, who stands as chief of its pantheon, above the FOUR WIVES. Vestal virgins are known as HANDMAIDENS OF THE SKY-LORD. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

SKY MARKET OF PAZORHALA: Com. Set. Major trade-post located atop a LODELITH in the east of MENISCEA, in neutral territory in along the border between ENDUI, LAOD, and PHUT. It is controlled by a plutocratic council comprised of FIRMAMENTISTS and merchant-lords, who maintain its exclusivity through a simple tenet – the marker is open to anyone who can reach it – a difficulty for most, given that it commonly floats around a mile from the ground. It has large AIRSHIP docks, stables that cater to flying mounts, and is home to many Firmamentists and others who are able to control the firmamental forces of Meniscea. It trades in exotic goods that are sourced from across ELYDEN and is famed as far away as the INNER SEA, where it is considered by most to be a mythic locale.

SKY TEMPLE, the: see AELLCHTH.

SKYFIRE: Soc. Tec. LAASKHAN term for PYROTECHNICS.

SKYSKIFF: Int. Sup. Veh. Rare form of vehicle that relies on GRAVITIC WAVES in the ARCANE TEMPERS that affect the FIRMAMENT in the FAR HEMISPHERE, allowing solid objects to flow in mid-air, following the waves' paths. The use of FOCI^(2.) and various applications of SHAPING allow for larger objects to take advantage of the waves, that has given rise to skyskiffs – airborne vehicles that can be found following established routes in above the south west of MENISCEA. Nations where skyskiffs operate include ACHAA^(2.), AURUM^(2.), DANU, LANTUA, SABAEA, the south of SHAZGIN, VALA, VARU, and ZOHAK.

They can vary in size, and range from single-seater skiffs to large barges that are used to move goods and people from place-to-place.

SLAAN: Geo. Salt desert dominating the east of ANUBIA. Records dating back to the dawn of the Korachani empire depict the place as a dry prairie, with the subsequent desertification having happened over the following millennium.

SLAAUN: Geo. Badlands in the c west of LAASKHA, south of the ARCANTHEA Mountain.

SLACT: Set. City in the east of the TEMPLAR STATES. Its main industry is creating SOULSTONE-based TECHNARCANE engines that require a great deal of time and expertise to manufacture. In 2478 RM it was the site of a workers' UPRISING against the tyrannical ruling ADEPT caste, which escalated to a state-wide civil conflict that led to a change in regime in the TRISKETHIAN DOMAINS – the Adepts were deposed, replaced with the SOULSEERS (Pop. c. 67,000).

SLANOLL: Rui. Abandoned shipyards in the south east of TAHALL in the saltlands of HALITHEA, now 18-miles from the coast.

SLAVE-LORDS: Soc. SLAVERY is widespread in the tunnels and arenas of the PRISON CARCERI, where slaver-lords (fulfilling a role similar to other culture's merchant-lords) venture above-surface to capture people for the arenas and to put to work as slaves.

SLAVERY: also 'thraldom'. Soc. Slavery is common throughout ELYDEN, taking subtly different forms in different nations:

1. Slavery was not always part of the KORACHANI EMPIRE and was introduced only after the conquering of LAASKHA in 15 RM, where it rapidly spread through the growing empire to encompass many states and regions, where it became a common way of life, in most cases, until the SUNDERING OF THE SHADOW. Thralls in the empire serve many purposes ranging from hard labour to household chores, and some could rise to prominent positions within certain households, fulfilling the role of butler. Slavery was never as widespread in ALMAGEST and NÁRTHEL as it was in other regions, though in general there is little prejudice in what race, sex or class can become a slave – anyone, under the right condition can become a slave, and anyone can, theoretically, buy their way out of servitude.

Slavery takes various forms in Korachan, including INDENTURED SERVITUDE, DEBT BONDAGE, FORCED MARRIAGE, and PRESS-GANGING.

Many slaves bought at auction or market come from foreign lands, either captured by slavers and pirates, or the taken as the spoils of war. Indeed, today, many new slaves that reach the empire's shores come from the war-torn land of AHKA or are purchased from CYHLAGHARRI slavers or come from its own sanctioned pirates.

- 2. While slavery was abolished in $\underline{\text{RHEA}}$ in 1799 RM following a major uprising three years earlier, $\underline{\text{TETHYSIA}}$ continues to use slaves until this day.
- 3. Slavery has been a common part of $\underline{\text{VENTHIRI}}$ life for many years, in particular its blood sports involving them.
- 4. Slavery is still prevalent in CUTH. Slaves are natives; those stricken by disease or sun-fever, deemed to be unworthy of the god NERGAAL.

- 5. common in $\underline{\text{EDICULE}}^{(1)}$, where $\underline{\text{SAUAN}}$ and $\underline{\text{KHAMIDIAN}}$ slaves (as well as other $\underline{\text{HARESHKI}}$ captives) are taken to the slave-city of $\underline{\text{DELA}}$ and sold to merchants who in turn sell them to $\underline{\text{VENTHIR}}$ and $\underline{\text{NAARETH}}$.
- 6. Private slavery was abolished in PARTHIS in 3794 RM after the events of the COTIAN MUTINY spread across the republic, though forced marriages and press-ganging remain common amongst their PATRICIAN classes.
- 7. ZHARIAH^(2.) trains slave soldiers as mercenaries, known as the HYENAS, who are an infamous fighting force well-known around the south east of SAMMAEA.
- 8. TETHYSIA makes use of INDENTURED SLAVERY. These slaves enjoy many freedoms that others do not, including freedom of movement, and the right to a minimum of one day of rest and maximum number of hours that can be worked per week. In general, they are treated much better than slaves are elsewhere, and though they are not citizens, they are still considered valued and important members of society.
- Slavery is very common in the SEA OF MYMEREA, with many pirates based in the islands of UGURIIT, which ultimately led to the formation of the MYMEREAN ACCORDS to safeguard the coastal regions of the nations of EASTERN LLACHATUL.
- 10. the now-extinct state of MEDHAMANN in the south west of Sammaea was renowned for its over-reliance on a downtrodden slave workforce. Its collapse was in part due to starvation and disease running rampant among its slaves, leading to a collapse of its economy. Its descendant state of PHYRR continues this tradition.

SLAVES OF SENESCENCE: Mil. Pol. Org. Eschatological cult common in the north of Western Sammaea, particularly in the CITIZENRY OF THALI, SATHAII, and the Vespertine League, and parts of Khull, and Sepahaunat, though it is rapidly spreading, having appeared in recent decades in various ports and cities where foreign contact is common across the Sea of Orrida Region as well as farther east.

The cult emerged in c. 3880 RM in the Thalian metropolis of ILOXENRA, taking root there, allowing its ideologies to spread west and east from there. By 3932 RM the city's ruling institutions had become infiltrated by the cults' members, who toppled the government, proclaiming independence. Today, Iloxenra is the heart of their nihilistic philosophy and is a hub of cataclysmic demagogues, fanatical cultists, mercenaries, and the desperate.

The cult's beliefs claim that ELYDEN is dying, citing various political, ecological and economic disasters from throughout history. It provides no dates and claims no prophecy as to when the world will end, but preaches that mortals need to accept the inevitable if they are to find any sense of acceptance. Those who ignore or fight the inevitable collapse of civilization cannot be at peace. Its members travel far and wide, spreading the truth of the world to any who will listen, and many more who do not.

SLAYERS, the: Mil. Org. Military group in KHAMID whose members are drafted from the army and other military bodies to patrol the kingdoms' borders, and in particular the dangerous coastal cliffs that border the PHARANX and the RED ISLES, where various beasts and entities are often forced to the surface by volcanic activity. They are expert trackers and trappers, and most Khamidian maps are drafted by their navigators

SLEEPER, the: Oth. Leg. Dre. An unidentified being, possibly an ancient OTHERWORLDER or SCION, buried deep in the region of HALDATA in the east of the UMBRA SOKHAR wastes. Above it is a settlement and caravanserai, which is famed as the 'entrance' into the so-called Dream City of ONEIRACHAN, where ONEIROMANCERS and other mortals experience a DREAMSCAPE unlike any other.

The being is revered as a deity by the people of Oneirachan, who have come to see its construct as the true world and ELYDEN as littler more than a conduit through which the Dream City can be reached. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

SLEEPING GOD, the: see LASSITOR.

SLEEPING KING, the: Soc. Lan. Derogatory name amongst FIRMAMENTISTS for the ONÉSIMUS-PRELATE, common amongst many discontented SHAPERS of eastern LLACHATUL during the latter days of the FIFTH AGE who failed to recognise that the MINARET OF LIGHT maintained any of its powers from earlier times.

SLEEPING KINGS, the: Pol. Catatonic conjoined twins and rulers of FURUD in THE SURRACH. They act through proxy, their decrees often misinterpreted by servants who have no means of communicating with them.

SLEEPING QUEEN, the: also 'Bahma Tora'. Pol. Rel. Ancestral figure in SAUA, considered by many to be the rightful ruler of the united SA'WEH. An OTHERWORLDER, she is also the PRIMOGENITOR of many HALFBLOOD HOUSES within Saua.

She is worshipped as a goddess by many, including shapers and her halfblooded descendants. Collectively, her faithful are known as the DEII, and they are marginalised by the present government out of fear that their beliefs may unite the people of Saua against the DIADON. Her scholars were exiled to the HARÉSHK in c. 3760 RM due to such fears, and have since settled in the mountain-monastery of LELAKIG in UCHRON, taking her body with them.

Originally called Bahma Tora, she fell into a catatonic state in 3093 RM, during a time of great conflict on Sa'weh, which was unified by the first Diadon in 3108 RM. She has been kept in a FIRMAMENTALLY-induced state of stasis since then, and her followers have formed a cult of personality around her, effectively elevating to a deity. She is privately-worshipped in most of Saua, as well as in some parts of the Haréshk. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

SLIMA: wide valley in the south of PHYRR through which flows the river URRABANA on its way to the coast. The valley has been transformed over the years from a savannah rich in fields and farmlands into a vast industrial wasteland, scarred by strip mines and quarries, and industrial pollution and effluvium. The land is bleached of natural colour and stained in unnatural shades from the discards of chemical manufactories, the air is thick with smog, and the waters of the Urrabana tainted by industrial runoff. What plants and animals survive in this land have been forever tainted by the unabashed rape of Phyrr, and the mortal population suffers under its foul pall.

SLOECRUX: Sup. Geo. The centre of the Atramentally Tainted region known as the Bleeding Plains, in the west of Aethios. It is the first recorded region of Atramental taint recorded in what would eventually become the Bleeding Plains, in c 1000 RM. Where temporary travel in the Bleeding Plains is possible through the use of hardsuits, the level of taint in the Sloecrux is so extreme that no life is thought to dwell within, though the region has thus-far never been explored in full.

SLOW DEATH, the: Soc. Lan. Term used by scholars for a period of mythologic history in ancient ELYDEN. When the DEMIURGES created life, they thought little of the ecological niche that specific creatures would fill. The first centuries of life in Elyden were rife with bloody struggle as different creatures fought for specific terrains and food. Many died simply because their preferred habitats were saturated with competition. Others managed to evolve and develop in different climates. Many exotic creatures, including dragons, are thought to have been killed off by more adaptable or fortunately designed creatures.

SLOWCHANGE: Sup. Med. Supranatural metamorphic disease that originates in the region of FLAESCUS in the KHARKHARADONTID wastes. It is easily contracted from exposure to regions of the Flaescus with open sores, though takes a long time to incubate, and by the time its effects start to be felt, the individual is likely far from Kharkharadontis.

Symptoms include aching of joints and muscles, and by the time they are felt, the disease is already deep-rooted, with no chance of recovery. The aching feeling is the body starting to change, leading to mishappen limbs, distended organs, and worse mutations in extreme cases. The metamorphosis of the body continues until organs begin to fail, at which point a painful death becomes inevitable. See Vol II: Diseases and Illnesses.

SMAL: Pol. Mar. Rnk. Political assassins in ACHRABAL who sell their services to neighbouring regions. They are thought to utilise ATRAMENTAL means to help in their work.

SMARA: Set. Settlement in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of UCHRON^(1.) (Pop. c. 8,000).

SMOKING COAST, the: see OANT HAZA.

SMUGGLERS MEAT: also 'cured cheese'. Cui. Law. Due to the risk of diseases and spoilage, the KORACHANI EMPIRE forbade the transportation of meat over water to its colonies. MORTALS, being an innovative kind, improvised and came up with methods of smuggling cured meats - by encasing them in hard cheeses, on which there was no limitation of transportation. This was still illegal so the people who were in on this smuggling did not to eat these cured meats – typically salamis and sausages – in public, and were careful not to mention them, referring to the cheeses as cured cheeses.

The tradition continued well past the transportation of meats over sea became legal in 2782 RM, and the food remains a staple to those who can afford it in most Korachani colonies, as well as harbours in the INNER SEA REGION.

SMYRNIA: Set. City in the south west of LAASKHA and site of one of the SEVEN TEMPLES OF THE MACHINE. Due to this fact, the city is a major stopping-point along THE SHADOW MARCH. It's also noted for its libraries and colleges (Pop. c. 74,000).

SMYRNIA BRIDGE: Arc. Cast iron bridge with a span of 195 ft. that crosses the river SAMAPAR in LAASKHA, just outside the city of SMYRNIA, after which it is named.

It was designed by the famed engineer KORNELIUS MAGRIZAAR in 1921 RM and remains standing to this day, though some parts have been replaced over the past two millennia due to decay.

SMYURMA: Geo. Mountain range in the west of WESTERN LLACHATUL, acting as a border between the north of THE VORANDINE and RAONGEN^{2.)}. The range is old and its southern face is noted for its many shallow caverns, many of which open up into larger hollows deep beneath the surface in which dwell various creatures adapted to a sunless world.

SNAHHAN: Flo. Tree in the ANGMEHEN forest in Tethysia. The wretchedly coiled tree is incredibly old, and dates back to at least three thousand years, and has been used sporadically throughout that time as a place of worship, refuge and offering. It is largely abandoned now, the forest around it virginal, with a few DERUWEIDS that live near the forest sometimes venturing there for guidance, which they claim comes to them in visions begotten beneath its boughs. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

SNAKE, BASILICA OF THE: Rel. Str. BASILICA in KORACHAN constructed in 27 RM to commemorate the UNDYING MACHINE (still under the guise of RACHANAEL). The basilica is situated on an overhang overlooking the RUSTED ISLES, with stairs leading down from an impressive domed-temple into a huge natural cavern that is hewn into one of the largest cathedrals in the KORACHANI EMPIRE.

SNJEMET: Geo. Mountain-range in the c south of KHAMID, around 400-miles long, overlooking the PHARANX. In antiquity it served as a division between north and south of Khamid, itself a physical representation of the lower and upper classes, respectively.

SNOW GIANT: Leg. legend common in the north of LLACHATUL, where winters are harsh and boreal forests are commonly hidden beneath a thick blanket of snow and ice, and where blizzards and storms can make things appear eerie and mysterious. Large trees covered in thick layers of snow were often mistaken for gigantic humanoid figures in the haze, giving rise to the legend of snow giants.

Though few now believe in them, the legend remains common in places like SABIA, KASPIA, PERGOST, DURCHAA and VALBAR, with various folktales and nursery rhymes existing that involve these creatures, which are unpredictable and destructive, just like the natural world that inspired them. See Vol II: Legends and Folklore.

SNOWGHOSTS, the: Arc. Car. Milestone pillars in the north of PERGOST, denoting the end of civilisation. They cover about 750-miles of land, mostly in the KABBARHAELA wilderness, and numbered around 1,000 individual markers during the peak of their construction towards the end of the ELDRIAN empire in c. 2500 RM.

Today most are either destroyed or damaged, though as many as a few hundred remain in recognisable condition. The frigid winds of the place coat the pillars in a thick white ice, which stand out like ghostly figures in the storms common to the region, from which the mane is derived.

SO AORA: Rvr. River in the south west of RAONGEN⁽²⁾, flowing west for 470-miles from sources in the URAHASH Massif.

SO FELX: Rvr. River in the far south west of RAONGEN⁽²⁾ flowing west for 750-miles from sources in the CHIAVALLE Mountains and the URAHASH Massif before meeting the coast at the BAY OF ORAT.

SO PHARAU: Rvr. River in the south west of RAONGEN^(2.) flowing west for just over 500-miles from sources in the CHIAVALLE Mountains, before meeting its parent, the river GARAILI.

SO'ULDUR: Sup. Oth. Geo. Region in the c of SKAROS, where the OTHERWORLD is more easily reached than elsewhere. This trait made it the perfect home to the MINASTERIA⁽²⁾ of SULRACHARIIN, whose shapers study the otherworld and the SPIRITS⁽¹⁾ that inhabit it.

SOBBOSK: Set. Major city in the north of the HENDECARCHY of DERAEIA in the east of MALAN. It lies along the northern shore of lake VLARA and forms a part of the AEGISWAY trade route (Pop. c. 88,000).

SOBIS: Ind. Set. Settlement in the south east of KHAMID, south west of the NEFERATH Mountains along the course of the river NAHAL. Its main industry is the mining of lapis lazuli. Worked stones are sold to merchants passing by during their circuit of the GREAT ROAD trade-route (Pop. c. 6.000).

SOBRAKA: Set. Settlement in the east of JURRAS⁽²⁾. It was the centre of a dogged local resistance to the KORACHANI occupation in the early 5th century RM and required heavy policing over its many years of subjugation. Its economy revolves around small-scale mining and metalworking, activities that trace their origins to the area's long-standing tradition of reappropriating ancient sites for practical uses.

Sobrakan culture is deeply influenced by the JURRASI SYNHOD, with local festivals often centred around the veneration of the GODSTONES^(2.), two of which can be found outside the settlement (Pop. c. 7,200).

SOBRASHK II: m. Pol. Per. (B. 3939 RM) Current king of DURCHAA^(1.), elected by council in 3976 RM.

SOCHA: Set. Settlement in the east of KORACHAN. It was once a large city, existing on the edge of the open pit mine known as VOR SRIHHEN. A collapse of the mine caused part of the city fall into the abysm that was exposed, leading to its eventual abandonment. Part of the city was later repopulated, though it remains a shadow of its former self (Pop. c. 6,000).

SOCHARAD: Sct. City in the tribe of ESSENIA, in the far south west of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. The city lies on the edge of the ATRAMENTAL WASTELAND of PURULEA and is home to ATRAMENTISTS who study its corruption and the strange effects it has on the bodies of those exposed to it (Pop. c. 30,000).

SOCIETY OF ANCIENT ARTIFACTS & SITES: Org. A private society within the KORACHANI EMPIRE, that is responsible for the documentation and exploration of ancient sites and objects and, in some cases, their preservation.

SOCIETY OF THE CENTRAL BOTANICAL GARDENS: Org. Sodality of explorers who work on behalf of the CENTRAL BOTANICAL GARDENS of the CITY OF ALMAGEST to acquire rare and exotic flora for display in the glasshouses of the society.

SOCIETY OF FADING: Org. Scholarly organisation based in PARTHIS, dedicated to learning of the FADING between ages and specifically the Fading that followed the WAR OF SCOURGING from which the cultures of the (current) FIFTH AGE emerged. Its members are obsessed with learning as much as possible about the causes of the Fading and the way that cultures re-emerged from those dark ages, in a bid to better understand the present world and, hopefully, stave similar events from taking place today.

SOCIETY OF RACHANAELI INDOCTRINATION: also 'Society'. Rel.

Org. Organisation that originated within the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING

MACHINE in c. 1460 RM, following the conclusion of the so-called

ICONOCLAST WARS that had wracked its cities over the past decades.

Largely run by volunteers from amongst the laity (many of whom are VOTARIES), it serves to indoctrinate children into the traditions and rituals of the religion in preparation for their rite of the FINAL

COMMUNION OF SHADOW, whilst feeding them propaganda that feeds into imperial hatred of outsiders and other faiths.

The Society fractured into two 'wings' with the SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE in 3704 RM and now exists in both the KORACHANI EMPIRE and the REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO and Society buildings have become common in almost all cities within the TWIN EMPIRES.

The headquarters of the Korachani wing are located within the HOLY PRECINCT in KHADON, whereas those of the Sarastroan wing are in the city of ARGEA.

SOCQUON: Flo. Curious trees native to deserts and other dry regions in the north east of BROR⁽¹⁾, particularly along the peripheries of the BLACK DESERT in the north east of the nation of Bror⁽²⁾, central KASIHAAL, southern RASTAL and KASHAAL. The trees are notable for their large fleshy leaves and distinctly bifurcating branches that all arc upwards, making them appear similar to smaller succulents. Indeed, they thrive in dry landscapes due to them being able to store water for long periods of time. Socquon trees also have a distinct canopy with tough leaves that offer almost complete shade to the lower parts of the tree, where many small animals live most of their lives. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

SOD KALLAN: Geo. Salt flats in the east of ZHARIAH^(2,), stretching across flat plains that would have once been occupied by the south east of the SEA OF ISTHIS, prior to its shrinking centuries ago.

SODA NA: Set. Coastal city in the south west of ANANTHUL, close to the TROPIC OF MAOCARHL. It is situated along the DIATHI SANDS, a semi-arid coastal desert. It is the only major settlement in the area (Pop. c. 9.200).

SODALA: Geo. Region in the c north of THE SURRACH. Its controlling city is SODALOR.

SODALITIST: Int. Sup. Rnk. A rank within the various MINASTERIA (2.) of SHAPING within the KORACHANI EMPIRE whose members uphold the laws of the Minasteria. This includes enforcing licences of SHAPERS registered to that specific Minasteria as well as conducting internal investigations on existing members. They have the power and authority to police others amongst their Minasteria or those illegally practicing abilities associated with it. They often work alongside the IRON GUARDIANS, the ORDER OF PROSELYTISERS, and the certain LANGUES (1.) of the SANCTIFIED ORDERS OF THE INQUISITION, to uphold order in imperial territories and cities.

SODALITY OF ADVOCISTS: Org. Group active within the HIGH- and LOW-EMPIRES that advocates for the rights of MORTALS, particularly those in the lower classes, such as HELOTS and particularly SLAVES. For the most part the group is disregarded by those in power as well as the masses, who think of them as idealistic DREAMERS at best, or rabble-rousers at worst. Their supporters include slaves and helots, though they have little power or ability to seek the aid they need.

SODALITY OF SENSATION: Int. Soc. Org. Social club in KORACHANIoccupied cities around the INNER SEA, exclusive to PATRICIANS, royalty and other nobility. Though on the surface they are merely places where patricians can gather in peace amongst their kin, they are in fact hubs of debauchery, where the wealthy and influential can do as they please without concern for the law or repercussion.

In most cases this merely involves consuming exotic foods, drugs and alcohols, many of which have been obtained illicitly. When taken to its extreme, some members find themselves partaking in sadistic activities upon SLAVES and HELOTS. Many also claim that Sodality members are also initiated into a mystery cult, though little is known of the truth behind this.

SODALITY OF THE SOUL'S APERTURE: Rel. Org. Order of SARASTROAN shaper-monks that perform self-trepanation in mimicry of the actions of their ruler, SATHEP THE RISEN. They are considered extremists by most Sarastroans, and have earnt the derogatory nickname 'LICHKIN MONKS' as a result, though are widely credited as being the lynchpin through which Sathep was able to end the WAR OF SUNDERING through the SEGARRAN RITUALS, which required the sacrifice of hundreds of devoted individuals whose thoughts were attuned to those of the LICHKING.

The Sodality is based in the fortified monastery of $\underline{\text{SED QUIA}}$ to the west of the $\underline{\text{KRAONA}}$ badlands.

SODALITY OF TECHNARCANE RESEARCH: Tec. Ind. Bus. Sup. Org.
Guild in the SOCIALIST REPUBLIC OF ALMAGEST that appeared in c. 1120

RM, following the disbanding of the Confraternity of Natural Transmutation. Based in the city of Almagest, it became the centre of the ancient Korachani empire's Technarcane research and innovation in the region. As its influence increased, it set various standards for the technarcane industries, and it became a functional guild that, with the approval of the Almagesti government, began forcing technarcanists in all of Almagest to become members, effectively strongarming those who did not become members out of business. Industrial centres across the vassal nation became hotbeds of conflict between guild enforcers and free-agents between c. 1260 and 1310 RM, with many who opposed the enforcing of the guilds' laws rioting and attacking the Sodality's guildhalls.

By. c. 1320 RM, the Sodality had effectively monopolised the technarcane industry in the nation, forcing all technarcanists – be they individuals, ATELIERS, or monolithic manufactories – to bend the knee to its standards. The benefit was a standardised set of practices and measures that eventually became adopted across the Korachani empire, proving pivotal in its growing industrialisation. This led to increased communication between industry leaders across thousands of miles, helping to make materials and technarcane engines available across Almagest and the empire itself.

The Sodality grew rich from its role as a guild, and grew close to HOUSE ARTIFEX, eventually becoming a key player in the conflict that would later become known as the WAR OF THE ARTIFEXES. The war ended with Almagest fracturing form the Korachani empire and forming an independent nation in 3014 RM. The Sodality of Technarcane Research also left the empire and remains the main regulatory body in charge of Technarcane industries in Almagest to this day.

SODALOR: Set. Independent city in the region of SODALA in the c north of THE SURRACH, built along the inside of a large dam barring the river EMEL SUMI. The city is divided into 11 districts, and is renowned for its tiered construction, flowing water channels and stepped gardens, and lodestone mining, the operations of which are largely unseen, beneath the city. The peacock is its emblem, and peacocks are commonly seen flying from tier to tier amongst its hanging gardens.

It was founded of the ruins of an earlier CHEGRINTISH settlement (Pop. c. 71,000).

SODALITY: Soc. Specifically, in AANTH societies, close-knit family groups, commonly led by an ATTERKHAT.

A sodality commonly consists of a single matriarchal figure, a handful of K'HAT champions and as many as a few dozen others. Such sodalities are insular, making little contact with outsiders, though they are rarely hostile to one another.

SODELI: Set. Small city in the region of ADASICH, in the west of THE SURRACH (Pop. c. 17,000).

SODOGYAN: Set. Settlement in the east of PERGOST known for its many people of TURAAN descent (Pop. c. 6,000).

SOEIL: Set. Major harbour in the west of LARISHI^(2.) territories, serving as a major trade hub across the SEA OF LARISH^(1.) and linking the empire with other nations such as CAMAU and OBLEVIS (Pop. c. 151,000).

SOEKH: Set. Small city in the north of SERROK (Pop. c. 17,200).

SOFTSUIT: Tec. Sealed suit, reminiscent of deep-sea diving suits, commonly worn by worn by explorers and scholars when travelling ATRAMENTALLY- and FIRMAMENTALLY-TAINTED lands. They are commonly air-tight and made from thick leather and lined in lead or asbestos, though the design varies wildly by period and region.

The specially-designed REALITY SUITS (used to safely traverse DREAMSCAPES) are a form of softsuits, and are also hermetically-sealed, and act as a HEART ENGINE within which is interred a delicate LARVAE that controls the oneiric properties of the suit.

SOGASSA: 1. Geo. Originally an island off the south eastern coast of SAGITTARIA on which the mausoleum of the AUTOCRAT OF SAGITTARIA is located. Lowering sea levels throughout the third and fourth millennia RM saw it become part of the mainland, and it is now a peninsula jutting into the SEA OF DANAEL.

2. Set. City-state located in the north of SAMMAEA, at the base of the eponymous peninsula^(1,) to the south east of SAGITTARIA. It is a small region, only in control of a few settlements, but interest in it lies not in its armies, resources, or industries, but in its ruler – THE INTERMINABLE ONE.

Originally an advisor of the MEROVICHI DYNASTY, he betrayed them in 1567 RM, becoming the AUTOCRAT OF SAGITTARIA. He amassed a following of sycophantic sorcerers who governed and enacted laws in his stead. The prosperous inland SEA OF TROJA (1.) died under his rule as the Autocrat built monuments and palaces to himself. He was killed by a group known as the KNIGHTS-EXILE in 2163 RM, who went on to rule in his stead. His followers interred his body into a TECHNARCANE engine, where his spirit was allowed to live on in the independent city of Sogossa. There, he became known as the INTERMINABLE ONE and became the centre of a strong cult of personality that became a new religion that spread across Sagittaria.

The Interminable Ones' sorcerers were able to manipulate the Knights-exile after Sagittaria was weakened by a PLAGUE in 2758 RM, turning them into their puppets. Construction of an artificial body was commissioned in KHALHAT in 3582 RM, to which the spirit of the Interminable One was transferred. Reborn in flesh after nearly 1400-years of rule from within a machine, his rule became absolute, and none doubted his divinity – until his body was mortally wounded in 3612 RM. Seeing the body of their god destroyed, and his life taken, the people lost faith in him. The church and the sorcerers waned in strength after this, and Sagittaria entered a period of strife, fracturing into rival states, which were brought together again in 3751 RM.

The body was taken back to Sogassa and what remained of his consciousness was restored into the ancient technarcane engine that originally housed him. But his artificial body and mind were both greatly damaged, and he remained as a catatonic figure, only able to communicate to his sorcerers TELEPATHICALLY.

Sogassa remained independent throughout the ensuing fragmentation of Sagittaria, controlling the small peninsula to this day.

The city-state is largely inconsequential and, having few resources and little strategic importance has been ignored by its neighbours (Pop. c. 38,000). See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

3. Mil. Str. Fortress east of the city of $Sogassa^{(2)}$ in the south east of SAGITTARIA.

SOGHRALA: Rvr. Major river in the c south west of CHEIRA, flowing east for 1,400-miles from sources in the OBRAGHATUL and SINDHARRAN Mountains, before meeting its parent, the river YAGNOTH PHATHAN.

SOGIDIA: Ind. Set. Mining settlement in the north west of PARTHIS, in the southern foothills of the DUMACHA Mountains (Pop. c. 7,000).

SOGGORD: Ser. CHORSAIR city in the south east of TARTAK. The city is home to sky chorsairs who raid settlements around the SAHODOM Mountains to the south and the KELACHOT Mountains in the east (Pop. c. 40,000).

SOGOTHEKH, TOWER OF: Mil. Str. Watchtower in the ATHOLEITH region of the ARGENT Mountains, in the north of TETHYSIA.

SOHAEL: Geo. Rocky region in the south of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER, forming a border between the tribes of ESSENIA and LINARIS. The region is known to be rich in ADAMANTINE, and is home to many mines.

SOHBAL FERROLLI: lit. 'clean metal womb', also 'Steel Womb'. Sup. Med. Tec.

TECHNARCANE birthing vat, in which clones and UMBRANS are created, manipulated, gestated and born. They are very complex engines, requiring a large surrounding infrastructure and support staff, including SHAPERS and technarcanists, as well as DVERGAI and DEMIURNES, who are commonly overseers specific castes of technarcanists. Creatures born to steel wombs are commonly known as VAT-BORN.

SOHEI: Mil. Rnk. Conscripted troops in VÂRR common both during and after the KORACHANI EMPIRE'S presence there. Able-bodied men serve a compulsory term of 3-7 years in return for religious and social rights, the practice of which was maintained following the rise of the Korachani empire in Vârr, with citizenship granted after the full term is completed. Sohei are given the option to continue serving, which many do, as professional soldiers. ST. SOLUM is the patron of the Sohei.

SOHMON: Rui. Ruin in the west of TARTAK. Was troublesome and in 3707 RM broke away from Tartak, with much of the region north of the KARAME. SLAVERS, though by c. 3900 had died out.

SOHRAB: Set. Settlement in the c of VENTHIR (Pop. c. 6,600).

SOILURE, the: Sup. Geo. Major ATRAMENTAL WASTELAND in the far south east of SAMMAEA, in the south east of SHEZALIAH, extending off the coast into the SEA OF LERAMUGH. The region is characterised by a pulsing fleshy lattice-like growth of deep crimson that spreads over and beneath the land and floats on the surface of the Sea. Though made of flesh it is not considered to be alive in the typical sense. It does not reproduce or defend itself, but does grow, replacing 'dead' or damaged parts. It is largely responsible for the regions' development of biomechanics, which owes most of its early research to experimentations conducted in the region.

The region is categorised as a LEAST CONCERN by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

SOINNUG: Set. Small city in the west of KASPIA (Pop. c. 17,300).

SOJOURNERS, the: Org. Sodality that travels the lands of KHARKHARADONTIS surrounding the SHADOW MARCH, looking for corpses of those that have died during their travels. They catalogue and mark the bodies, with metal rods to which they affix prayers. Little is known of this group and which deity, if any, their prayers are directed towards.

SOJU: Bev. Alcoholic beverage common in ALMAGEST and SKAROS, as well as the HARÉSHK. It is made from turnips, added with sugars, and allowed to ferment in the dark. It is popular in Venthir, though is largely imported there from the Haréshk. See Vol II: Beverages.

SOKA RAM: Set. Settlement in the c north of CHEIRA, close to the border with PNESSA (Pop. c. 6,000).

SOKATTAR: 1. His. Soc. One of many early FIFTH AGE cultures that emerged in the c north of the PORPHYRI PENINSULA, in what are now the south of SERROK and the north of PORPHYR, between c. -800 – 324 RM. The name of the river SOCCATOROS is thought to be etymologically-linked to this culture. See Vol III: Extinct States.

2. Rui. Ruin of the capital city of the eponymous early FOURTH AGE culture, in present-day SERROK. It was once situated along the banks of the river BEREKODRA, but is now some 15-miles from its course.

 $\underline{SOKHA}: \textit{Geo.}$ Mountain-range in the c west of $\underline{SARASTRO},$ to the north east of the $\underline{KHO\;HAGOR}$ Mountains.

SOKHA PASS: Geo. Pass in the west of SARASTRO, between the KHO HAGOR Mountains in the west and the SOKHA Mountain in the east.

SOKHARA: Dem. 'Sokharan'. Ntn. Ancient empire that dominated the area now largely-occupied by the UMBRA SOKHAR and the far west of RHINOCOLOURA, early in the FIFTH AGE OF MORTAL LIFE. The empire emerged from refugees fleeing north from the wastes of KHARKHARADONTIS, which were suffering under the increasing influence of the so-called SHADOW IN THE DESERT, which left the desert grotesquely tainted and inhospitable to civilised life.

These refugees and immigrants mingled with the native populace, which had gathered in small numbers in the fertile endorheic basin north of the MOLOTH KHAMMOTHUL Mountains. Eventually they would spread and found city-states, from which the empire of Sokhara would emerge in c. < 300 RM.

The empire prospered and grew until around 290 RM, when territorial clashes with KARAKHAS, then under KORACHANI rule, became common. This political pressure increased greatly until the expansionist policies of Korachan brought war to Sokhara by 300 RM. Simultaneously Sokhara saw another mass exodus of refugees from Kharkharadontis following an increase in ATRAMENTAL-ACTIVITY there turned it into the wasteland we now recognise today.

Sokhara took in what refugees it could, and put them to use in the war against Korachan, which had encompassed all life in Sokhara by 340 RM. By then its imperial household had grown decadent and tyrannical, ruling over a nation that was made up of slaves that knew nothing but war.

Amid the war with Korachan the slaves revolted, overrunning the palaces of the ruling dynasty. The empire crumbled in 348 RM, allowing Korachani armies to march south, expanding their territories. Unease in Karakhas however made this Korachani victory short-lived, and its new territories were lost over the next 100-years as its armies were forced into the heartland of Karakhas to quell unrest.

During this time different branches of the Sokharan dynastic family would vie for control as degenerates continued pouring into Sokhara from the south and freed slaves caused havoc, reducing once-proud cities to rubble even as the corruption of Kharkharadontis began to expand north into Sokhara itself. It is around this time that the Korachani empire began to refer to the region as the Umbra Sokhar - the Shadow over Sokhar.

In around 580 RM, the so-called HORDE-KING emerged, bringing together hundreds of disparate tribes under his banner. He rolled across the remnants of Sokhara from east to west, destroying all in his wake, wiping the last traces of civilisation from the basin before dying to aepathy a few years later. The power vacuum left by his death led to the fragmentation of the horde, which would consume itself over the next decades.

This allowed the remnants of the Sokharan people, most of which were the descendants of freed slaves, nobles, and refugees from the south, to rebuild. They scattered, founding what would later become the major cities of the Umbra Sokhar – CATAFLAQUE, KADOTA, and TLATHAT. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

SOKHARAN EMPIRE: see SOKHARA.

SOKHAREN DESERT: Sup. Geo. Unnatural desert in the north of the UMBRA SOKHAR, forming part of the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region of DEARTH. Until as recently as c. 2500 RM the southern-most reaches of the desert were occupied by lake NUMINIA, the endorheic terminus of the river SPICIA, though drying of sources and damming of the river in various areas led to the drying of the lake after which the Sokharen desert was allowed to expand. The ruins of cities that once hugged the shore of the lake remain in the region.

SOKHON: also 'the Temple City'. Set. Major coastal city in the c of the CITIZENRY OF THALI, famed for its many clashing temples and holy buildings, all from a plethora of different faiths and denominations. It is open to everyone, and is also known for its many hostels and caravanserai, and has become a melting pot of Thalian culture and religion, where people from across the Citizenry of Thali travel to in pursuit of enlightenment, be it spiritual, material, or otherwise (Pop. c. 72,000).

SOKON: Set. City in the north west of RAHENG (Pop. c. 58,500).

SOLA VENKHÏR: f. Sup. Pol. Per. (B. 3888 RM) ARCHSHAPER and current head of the CONCLAVE OF TEN – the ruling body of ARCHAEDON^(2.). she became head in 3991 RM and is known for her level-headedness and respect for the DARESH – the religious philosophy that unites the island-state.

SOLACHAN: Geo. Barren area in the south of SARASTRO, bordering ANUBIA. The region is known for its infertile land and low trench-like canyons made up of DUSTSTONE and compact dust, cracked earth and rocky pinnacles. The sun tends to shine brightly here, and the small LODELITH deposits in the far south west of the region, close to the region of ELOTRAUSH, indicate that the area is FIRMAMENTALLY sensitive.

Rare periods of rain change the landscape into a land of rivers and an endorheic wetland that disappear as quickly as they come to life, sustaining a short-lived ecosystem that's adapted to the burst of life.

SOLANDER: Geo. Wide low limestone valley in the east of LYRIDIA, covering 300-miles of the course of the river BINI. In certain regions, the rocks are of a honeycomb texture and brittle.

SOLAKRA: Mil. Str. Fortress in the c north west of KORACHAN, whose forces guard the UMBRA pipelines that pass close by as well as providing protection to those travelling the RED ROUTE.

SOLAR HIEROPHANT: see HIEROPHANT, SOLAR.

SOLARAN: 1. Lan. Language of the now-extinct SOKHARAN EMPIRE in the UMBRA SOKHARAN wastes in the north of KHARKHARADONTIS. The language is used to this day by the many settlements in the wastes, though is corrupted from its original form See Vol II: Languages.

2. Cur. Currency in the UMBRA SOKHAR in SAMMAEA. The currency is actually an ancient coinage leftover from the now-extinct empire of SOKHARA. Individual coins are recovered in ancient stashes uncovered by the ETHERI nomads during their wanderings of the wastes, and they are quite wealthy as a result. See Vol II: Currency and Coinage in Elyden.

SOLATA: Mil. Str. Highland fortress in the c KORACHAN, between the AKAGHA and FATUACH Mountains. It guards the main eastern traderoute into KHADON.

SOLAUZMYR VEINS: also 'Vein Tunnels'. Sup. Geo. Grotesque tunnel system in the west of KHARKHARADONTIS, to the east of the ACHARKHARAN Mountains. The tunnels look like gigantic veins or fleshy tubes, with deep acid-filled pits, churning sphincters, and aberrant vermin scuttling in the depths. They are considered wholly unnatural—either the result of a deep pervasive DREAMSCAPE or ATRAMENTAL CORRUPTION, and are shunned by most.

They were described only once by a team of PARTHISAN explorers, following a 2511 RM expedition that went into the depths of Kharkharadontis, and there has been no published attempts at returning to it since SOLDAT: Mil. Rnk. Common term for rank-and-file soldiers in the PARTHISAN army.

SOLDRED FIELDS, the: Sup. Geo. Mildly ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region in the north of SKAROS, to the south of east of the STRAIT OF ANEON. The fields are shallow coastal plains that are characterised by their muddy nature and soft stone, both of which are caused by the Atramenta. The region is named after the PATRICIAN who first observed and described the phenomenon in c. 2700 RM.

During that time the northernmost reaches of the Soldred Fields were submerged in the waters of the APHOTIS and people regularly dove for pearls. As the corruption of the area increased the pearls grew dark, increasing their value.

The oyster industry eventually died as the water receded, and the corruption of the region increased, after which people left the area. Around a millennium later, in c. 3640 RM travellers discovered that the oysters had changed significantly from exposure to the corruption, and had started burrowing in the soft earth of the region. They still produced pearls, which by then had become extremely sought after. The settlement of VELAS was founded soon after, becoming a centre of SOLDRED OYSTER cultivation.

The region is categorised as a $\underline{\text{MODERATE THREAT}}$ by the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI}}$ $\underline{\text{INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES}}.$

SOLDRED OYSTER: Sup. Fau. Landlocked oysters native to the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED SOLDRED FIELDS in the north of SKAROS. They originated as typical saltwater oysters that mortals of the region exploited for pearls.

The first traces of Atramental taint in the region were observed in c. 2700 RM, after which most nearby mortals moved away. After close to a millennium of Atramental influence and receding water levels, the oysters were rediscovered by mortals, who found them greatly changed, their once aquatic habitat traded for the mud flats of the Soldred Fields. They still produced pearls, which by then had become extremely sought after.

The settlement of VELAS was founded soon after, becoming a centre of soldred oyster cultivation. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

SOLEAS: also 'City of Sights'. Set. City in the region of IBLIS, in c western LYRIDIA. It was the principal city of LYRADEA between 91 and 103 RM, before the ABULIA were moved to MYRA. Also known as the City of Sights, in honour of its loyalty to the Abulia and the AUGUR'S tradition (Pop. c. 23,800).

SOLEYN TERRITORIES, the: Dem. 'Soleyni'. Ntn. Nation in the north east of SAMMAEA, situated east of mountain clans of MULCIBER, south of ANUBIA and west of SUOR, overlooking the BRINE SEA. From the comfort of their homes thousands of miles away, the people of KORACHAN see the Soleyni as masochists who spend their days in PAIN-HOUSES in a stupor. The truth is far more subtle.

It is unknown to whose ancestry the Soleyni owe their heritage (be they human or some other race) though they are unlike any other people in ELYDEN; their tongue has no common root and has its own CUNEIFORM SCRIPT, their skin is covered in symmetrical achromatic patches, and their philosophy of KWEI teaches them to inflict pain upon themselves. The Soleyni are aloof, of an almost etheric nature, and foreigners often have difficulties in understanding their mannerisms. Traditionally, they were very insular, living in large walled city-states with a number of vassal satellites, that formed a trade network with each other. This tradition has decreased with the nations advance to the modern age, though its people remain somewhat insular, though the region of MYRI in the south west retains this antiquated custom and maintains a close trade network to this day, with each settlement in the zone providing a service or resource to the greater part.

Soleyn was founded in 1329 RM following the deposing of a tyrannical otherworlder, the demon sultan AMENABAST, who had subjugated the area since c. 940 RM. The entirety of present-day Soleyn and parts of western Mulciber and eastern Suor were under his control. This included a large SHIE population in its south west, most of which was enslaved to the whims of the noble sycophants beneath Amenabast.

A resistance emerged in c. 1321 RM centred around the city of ANSA and led by the champion RAHANKHEN. It rapidly gained control of the surrounding area, deposing the local government there. This earned the attention of the sultan, whose rule in the city of PAJUH began to be questioned. The resistance grew, and skirmishes with Amenabast's armies became more common, though this only served to steel Rahankhen and his allies, who marched upon the capital, gaining followers as they went. Shie slaves rioted in response to this. Many were killed, but it signalled the end for sultan's tyranny. A 2-year siege of Pajuh followed this, ending only with the surrender of the demon sultan's armies, many of whom defected to the side of Rahankhen.

Eventually only Amenabast was left opposing the armies and he was executed by Rahankhen in 1328 RM. This marked the birth of the MAHANTKHAI dynasty, which survives to this day, and the birth of the Soleyn Territories. The eponymous territories are the regions into which the domains of Amenabast were divided. Though there were originally 18, their borders have changed greatly over the centuries, and much of the western reaches of Soleyn were lost to Mulciber, leaving it with 17 smaller territories.

The enslaved shie were freed and granted rights of citizenship, though the act caused the region's economy to suffer in the short-term. It took many years for Soleyn to recover, though the discovery of vast copper reserves in the south west saw the economy take a turn for the better by c. 1500 RM.

The freed shie looked to Rahankhen as a saviour and many of them would come to devote their lives to the protection of the Mahantkhaj, a calling that has since become an official state position, exclusive to shie.

The people of Soleyn are skilled pyrotechnicians and produce fine POWDERGUNS that command high process and are exported north and south at great profit. They are famed for their heavy hand cannons, which require expert training and have become a mainstay of their armies.

The $\underline{\text{KWEI}}$ philosophy that originated in the south west of Soleyn in c. 2400 RM became a dominant force in the region, and promotes the use of pain and physical suffering as a means of reaching enlightenment, particularly in rituals such as $\underline{\text{COMING-OF-AGE}}$ and wedding ceremonies. It is believed that these may stem from a form of suffering as a form of redemption or a means of seeking perfection. In a more pragmatic sense, Kwei takes the form of willing labour, though there are some who take the concept of redemption through pain to an extreme, which is where most outsider's view of Kwei and Soleyn originates.

Vitiligo is relatively common in Soleyn, with as many as 1 in 10 people have it to some degree. In ancient times such individuals were thought to be touched by the otherworld and though the superstition remains in some rural areas, it is now largely dead, though many Soleyni with vitiligo may become occultists in light of past prejudices. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

SOLEYNI: Lan. Language of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES, that emerged in the early FIFTH AGE from the more primitive SOLEYNI CUNEIFORM. See Vol II: Languages.

SOLEYNI CUNEIFORM: Soc. His. Lan. The ancient written script of the SOLEYNI people. Originally written on clay tablets and walls with variously shaped bone pens (the practice of scrimshawing is common amongst the Soleyni people), the script has thousands of characters, each of which can take on hundreds of different meanings given context and position. This cuneiform is said to displease the KWEIAN ideal (personified in the ANGEL OF KWEI), and only certain basic cunes are allowed openly – all others must be used if the person writing also punishes himself after every use.

This is an ancient tradition that dates to the FOURTH AGE Aberanni age when literacy was rare and the Kwai philosophy was gaining much power, and though it is still the law, it is not (indeed, cannot be) enforced. The only time it is enforced is during the swearing-in of a new MAHANTKHAI, when he signs the BOOK OF KINGS and pierces his palm with a pointed thimble, allowing the blood to drop onto the paper. This form of writing went out of fashion long ago, and was replaced by the more modern Soleyni. See Vol II: Languages.

SOLGA: Pol. Geo. One of the nine kingdoms of ELALLIA, located in the east of the nation.

SOLID SEA, the: see HUSTHAT.

SOLIFATIA: Mil. Str. Fortress in the c south of GNOTH, close to the border with AQUARIIA. It is built atop an ancient FOURTH AGE ILLIDRAEN fort. It protects those travelling along THE WAY trade-route between the cities of PLEROMA in the north and AZOTH in the south.

SOLIPSISM: Phil. Philosophy that postulates that since an individual can only prove that what they know and experience is real, then everything outside of their own thoughts cannot be proven to be real, therefore making the rest of the world an illusion.

SOLIPSIST, the: A powerful FIRMAMENTIST SOLIPSIST exists in BA'AKH, wandering the deserts alone. The man has forsaken his name (reasoning that he does not need one if he is the only true being) though speaks with passers-by, believing that only by speaking with such illusions is he better capable of understanding his own mind.

SOLLANDITH: Geo. Hills and badlands in the south west of LYRIDIA, forming the northern part of the ETTHI Mountains.

SOLMORRA: Sea. Narrow sound in the west of the SEA OF ERENEA, in the south east of SABAISA.

SOLO: Cur. Currency used in the south west of SAMMAEA. It originated in the middle FIFTH AGE nation of SOLOGAMIA, better known as the CORAL KINGDOM, and the name continues to be used by its successor states, The CORAL BARONIES and FALLAROUR, which became distinct political entities relatively recently in 3889 RM, when Fallarour became an independent entity.

Since then, the currencies have also diverged somewhat, being distinguished by the newer Fallarouri Solo and the older coinage, which is remains known as the Solo. Both use relatively antiquated techniques in their manufacture with copper or tin planchets pressed between hammered steel presses. See Vol II: Currency and Coinage in Elyden.

SOLOGAMIA: also 'the Coral Kingdom'. His. Ntn. Official name for the historical CORAL KINGDOM, from which the extant states of FALLAROUR and the CORAL BARONIES emerged.

SOLOM: 1. Geo. Peninsula, around 65-miles long, in the south of the territories of ETHISTONITH in RHINOCOLOURA, protruding south into lake AKASM.

2. Set. Fortified coastal city in the far north of the territories of ETHISTONITH in RHINOCOLOURA, situated along the eponymous peninsula in lake AKASM. It is home to military forces that patrol the lake and the waters of the river SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾, as far north as the city of PARAETA (Pop. c. 13,000).

SOLOCH: Ind. Set. Settlement in the PARTHISAN colony of VARTA^(1.), almost 45-miles south west of the city. Its main industry is iron mining (Pop. c. 7,000).

SOLON: 1. founder of ancient laws and edicts in SARASTRO.

2. Geo. Highland region dominating central $\underline{MHAROKK}$, named after the ancient lawmaker in $\underline{SARASTRO}^{(1)}$.

SOLON NU: Geo. Pass through the west of the SOLON HIGHLANDS, linking the city of ATHON in the north with FALUA to the south.

SOLONA: Rvr. River dominating the north of SARASTRO, flowing west from the JAELA and KHO INNOR mountain that form Sarastro's present-day eastern borders, its course flowing for over 1,500-miles, before emptying into the sea of $\underline{\text{TIAMA}}$. The river has been a cradle to life throughout the $\underline{\text{FIFTH AGE}}$, and likely served a similar purpose during the $\underline{\text{FOURTH AGE}}$, with many ruins scattered along its banks.

SOLONIA: Set. Ancient city in SARASTRO, centre of a large mortuary cult. In –92 RM became home of the SAOSHYANTS. With the coming of the KORACHANI EMPIRE in 339 RM, the Saoshyants lost most of their power and fragmented, breeding with the immigrant imperial nobility to remain of influence. Throughout its existence under imperial rule, Solonia retained its mortuary traditions and became a centre of learning for those practicing the art of EMBALMING and, after c. 1200 RM, BATIKS. In 1312 RM the MINASTERIA (2) of BATIKIN was constructed there, and it remains active to this day, though SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE led to Korachan establishing a new Minasteria in the AZAZEMI capital of AGLAIA.

The city was besieged by Korachani forces during the WAR OF SUNDERING, and was taken in ASHTALEN of 3705 RM, allowing for the eventual SIEGE OF ARGEA.

As a result of its firmamental traditions, Solonia now forms part of both the RED ROUTE as well as the SHADOW MARCH, where pilgrims of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE stop there to honour the embalmed bodies of the city's most renowned religious figures (Pop. c. 205,000).

SOLOUMAR: Rui. The ruin of an ancient Korachani city in the south of ROVAST north east of TARTAK. It was once a great metropolis of around 800,000 bodies in c. 1600 RM, but as the surrounding lands continued to be exploited by the occupiers, the city was allowed to wane, until it was finally abandoned in c. 2720 RM.

SOLSTICE TEMPLE: Rel. Str. Ancient temple in the far north east of AETHIOS, just half a mile east of the SALT ROAD. It is occupied only seasonally, by NEGUSES of major settlements, who travel there with their most trusted cohorts to take part in a secretive ritual. The temple dates back to before the spread of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE to Aethios in c. 450 RM, and was abandoned following the construction of the TEMPLE OF THE MACHINE ASCENDANT in 589 RM. It was rebuilt after people of Aethios forsook the Church of the Undying Machine in the wake of KORACHANI attacks against them in c. 2950 RM, and remains in use to this day.

SOLSTICETIDE FESTIVAL: Soc. Cal. 2-day festival celebrated in TEMUJA marking the beginning of DEADHEAT (summer), usually coinciding with the closest full moon to the actual start of deadheat. The festival also coincides with the approximate death of the LEGEND MAGHORA, which is also celebrated during this time. Fire prayers are burnt at this time and the monks of THE SILENT WORD emerge from their monasteries and receive prayers from the common folk.

SOLTA: Cur. Currency of EZASUH^(2.), as well as the PARNASIAN STATES, which include its former colony of ELAT and its child states AYAD and GYZHA. See Vol II: Currency and Coinage in Elyden.

SOLUM: 1. Geo. Plains dominating the east of VÂRR, and comprising coastal lands revealed by the retreat of the SEA OF PROPONTIS and lands farther inland. The region is relatively dry and rough, though not without vegetation. The ruins of old settlements lie abandoned – wither due to the changed coastline or spent resources. Though some have since been resettled in the years following the rise to power of the REGENT-KINGS following the INTERREGES 'abandonment of Vârr in 3791 RM.

2. Rel. Dei. VÂRRAN deity and, under the subjugation of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, SAINT of the UNDYING MACHINE. The deity likely originated from the discovery in the early days of the FIFTH AGE of a great monument that became known as the SOLUM DISK. Under the rule of the ANAX-KINGS and the HIEROGOTHS, Solum became the dominant deity of Vârr and embodied a sun- and warrior-cult that survived throughout the rule of Korachan over Vârr, where it became a MYSTERY CULT amongst the INTELLIGENTSIA of the region.

Following its annexation of Vârr in 792 RM, Korachani propaganda had the deity declared a saint of the UNDYING MACHINE – falsely proclaimed to be one of RACHANAEL'S' SCIONS. This action was eventually reversed by the REGENT-KINGS, who rose to power in 3824 RM after decades of conflict in the wake of the INTERREGES' departure from Vârr in 3791 RM. Since then, worship of Solum as a deity has slowly begun to grow, replacing the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE as the dominant religion in Vârr, and strict measures have been made to remove Korachani bastardisation from its doctrine.

As a martial deity who values strength of mind, body and steel, Solum has a large military following, so much so that before and after the presence of the Korachani empire in Vârr, the church and military in that nation were a single entity, with many castes of warrior-monks existing (many of them surviving the imperial rule in remote monasteries), most-prominent amongst them the Order of Heart, Mind and Blade.

Religious tithes were paid not in money or goods but military service, which was and still is seen as an honour that few seek to shirk. Such people serving under Solum's armies are called the SOHEI. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

SOLUM DISK, the: Int. Ancient edifice that stands askew, half-buried in the plains of eastern SOLUM, some miles off the coast of the SEA OF PROPONTIS. The edifice was discovered in c. -750 RM by nomads who settled the area, becoming the descendants of the VÂRRAN people. The regions' religion and complex cosmogony is attributed to the Solum Disk, and its name is the same as its chief divinity. Though little is known of its history, it is believed to be a construct of the DEMIURGE VORROPOHAIAH; its untarnished solid metal body unlikely to be the result of mortal artifice.

SOLUM MA THAI: lit. 'Dawn Citadel'. Pol. Str. One of various retreats of the LADY AEGIS in the far east of the HENDECARCHY of DERAEIA in the east of MALAN, built in the ARGENT Mountains in c. 1000 RM, just above the SHIMMERING CLIFFS overlooking the PANTHALASSA desert in the north west of TETHYSIA.

Though rarely used, it is well-guarded by elite soldiers who are drafted from the family of the Deraeian HENDECARCH.

SOLUM'S CAVES: Geo. Caverns in VÂRR.

SOLUN: Geo. Expansive highland region in the north west of WESTERN LLACHATUL, serving as a border between central northern GNOTH and the east of RAONGEN⁽²⁾. The chain is known to be volcanically-active, including the very active MT. AESHMESAREPH.

SOMA RAS: also 'the Elixir of Life'. Leg. Geo. Legendary place believed by KORACHANI scholars to be in SAGITTARIA or EREBETH. Native legend claims the Soma Ras is a place where the MATERIAL and the FIRMAMENT overlap. Those who die here are often reborn as OTHERWORLDERS right away, their mortal bodies sloughing over the course of days or weeks, revealing the otherworlder beneath. This process is random, however, and the bodies of many reborn this way undergo a horrific degenerative process. Because of this only those truly desperate for eternal life seek out this place.

SOMALAN: Rvr. River in the east of RHINOCOLOURA, flowing north west for 270-miles from sources in the UGOSTAUTH plateau, before meeting l. NOHEHUN.

SOMBRA: Sup. Geo. Physically unstable region in the south of QARALAM in the south east of SAMMAEA, overlooking the SEA OF ENTARI. It is a desiccated place, where all surfaces peel and slough away falling upwards as though in defiance of the physical laws. This process is never-ending and the air is thick with scabrous flakes, often blown in the wind and carried to other lands. Very little life survives here.

Sombra is said to be located close to the tomb of a distant power (possibly a DEMIURGE or SCION) whose description is not comparable to any imperial accounts of the Demiurges or their kin, though which is probably responsible for the physical degradation of the area.

SOMNIAL: Sup. Geo. Drc. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region in the north of ETUA. It is considered a horrific DREAMSCAPE and is avoided by most, though there are some thrill seekers who seek it out for its grotesque sights.

The region is categorised as a MODERATE THREAT by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

SOMNIAR SCRIBES: Dre. Mil. Rnk. Civil rank within the SOMNIARECHI ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION, whose members are historians and archivists who bear testament to the lifecycle of DREAMSCAPES, keeping meticulous notes that may span millennia. Their work is invaluable in keeping the EPHIARACH KHARITA up to date with relevant information that can be accessed by the Order's agents.

SOMNIARECHI ORDER: Pol. Dre. Org. In the KORACHANI EMPIRE, one of the major SANCTIFIED ORDERS OF THE INQUISITION, whose primary goal is to keep its lands and peoples safe from ONEIROMANCERS and the DREAMSCAPES that mar its vast territories, as well as defending its people from the ONEIRIC CREATURES that are spawned in such places, which may at times escape into the natural world. Many members are accomplished Oneiromancers in their own right, or they may otherwise be SHAPERS with the ability to manipulate the thoughts of others.

The order was founded in 1189 RM, though various provincial forces had existed prior to this, dealing with localised dreamscapes and dream-related phenomena and shapers.

Its headquarters were originally located in LIDEA, though the SUNDERING of 3705 RM that saw the KORACHANI EMPIRE fractured in two found it cut off from the HIGH-EMPIRE OF KORACHAN, to which its loyalties remained, and it faced almost a decade of attacks by SARASTROAN forces that ended with the Order fleeing to the city of BAAYN in LAASKHA in 3710 RM, where it remains to this day. It maintains outposts across the empire, in regions known for dreamscapes or where the OVERLAY between the MATERIAL PLANE and the DREAMWORLD is particularly strong. There, its agents maintain a constant vigil, watching out for signs of changes to the area or the appearance of rogue ONEIROI. The Order maintains a large magickallydetailed globe in the courtyard of its LANGUE^(1.) that depicts in exacting details all the known dreamscapes in Elyden. The globe (known as the EPHIARACH KHARITA) is maintained by skilled SOMNIARIIN, who embellish it with dreamstuff to make it visible to any shaper with knowledge of its location though the DREAMWORLD.

The Order played a vital role in stymying the effects of the so-called $\underline{\text{ONEIRIC SCOURGE}}$ that wracked central $\underline{\text{VÅRR}}$ in 1305 RM. This led to the Order maintaining a heavy presence there for over 15 decades, during which various settlements were purged, including the great city of $\underline{\text{IBEDIA}}$. The operation was a resounding success and solidified the Order's reputation as an effective force against Oneiromantic threats. This led to the Order's development and deployment of $\underline{\text{TECHNARCANE}}$ structures known as $\underline{\text{LUCID BEACONS}}$, which work like $\underline{\text{SYPHON ENGINES}}$, safeguarding regions against the effects of dreamscapes and making dreamscapes less likely to emerge around them.

The order is unique amongst all the Sanctified Orders, in that it has no emblem or sigil, and its members do not carry a badge. Many of its members are recognised by the third eye tattoo that they bear on their foreheads, which is regarded by many outsiders as the Order's unofficial insignia.

Though known for its extensive use of Oneiromancers, most of the Order's agents are in fact non-shapers, serving not only in both menial roles; as clerks and administrators, or SOMNIAR SCRIBES – who bear testament to the lifecycle of dreamscapes, keeping meticulous notes that may span millennia; but also martial, as is the case with the PROSELYTES – legions of agents who cleanse inimical dreamscapes with specialist equipment. Despite this, the Order still maintains many ranks of well-trained shapers, including the famed DREAMFORGED and elite Somniariin agents.

The Order's present Grandmaster is SAIGUS CHIMEON.

SOMNIARII: Also 'Oneironaut', 'Oneiromancet', and 'Ephiarii'. Nou.
'Somniareat'. Plr. 'Somniariin'. Sup. Dre. Org. Mil. Rnk. Order of SHAPERS in the KORACHANI EMPIRE, whose MINASTERIA (2.) is shared with that of the SOMNIFERIIN, and has been based in the city of ERYX in SKAROS since 2981 RM. Members of the order are ATRAMENTAL shaper whose SPHERE allows them to interpret and manipulate DREAMS. They are perhaps the most ubiquitous shapers in the KORACHANI EMPIRE, and are interacted with by the most helots and work-slaves (save for perhaps OCCULTISTS, who are not regulated by any Minasteria).

They are most commonly found working as either dream interpreters, where they journey into their client's dreams and nightmares, interpreting them; or as exorcisers of dreams, where they destroy particular dreams or nightmares so that their client can no longer experience them. In this capacity they fulfil a role similar to that of a therapist. They can also create bespoke dreams upon request. These individuals are known as DREAM ARCHITECTS and can become notorious and/or wealthy from dealing with powerful and rich clients, for whom they delicately make specific dreams which are often enjoyed through the use of a TECHNARCANE engine.

Some Somniariin are able to enter a trance-like state (not unlike ASTRAL PROJECTION) through which they can project themselves into the dreams of others by traversing a mystical land known as the DREAMWORLD. This is a difficult act of shaping to accomplish and today is largely achieved by using technarcana. Once projected into this dreamworld a Somniarii can track the dreams of a particular individual, where they can influence their subconscious. Talented Somniariin can attack an individual in this way, causing permanent physical or mental damage through the stress caused by these attacks. These acts are known as ONEIROMACHY and are often employed by military forces to attack sensitive targets.

Perhaps most important is their role in keeping Korachani territories safe from the chaotic influence of DREAMSCAPES and the ONEIRIC CREATURES that inhabit them. Often forced to work in groups due to the size and influence of dreamscapes, they explore them (wearing REALITY SUITS when able to), using their abilities to tame the most extreme of effects and, in some cases, are even able to completely destroy hostile or otherwise unwanted dreamscapes. They may also become attached to expeditionary forces or far-flung military outposts as a first line of defence against potential dreamscape outbreaks. A rare few are able to tame or otherwise manipulate ONEIROI - the creatures spawned in dreamscapes. Even rarer is the Somniarii who can create oneiroi or dreamscapes from scratch. These individuals are thankfully incredibly rare and can be dangerous individuals - often becoming rogue elements capable of destabilising governments and economies, constructing their own horrifying demesnes that are difficult to penetrate or defeat with the aid of similarly-skilled Somniariin. See Vol IV: Spheres and types of Shaping.

SOMNIFERIF. Nou. 'Somniferear'. PIr. 'Somniferiin'. Sup. Org. Mil. Rnk. Order of SHAPERS in the KORACHANI EMPIRE, whose MINASTERIA (2.) is shared with that of the SOMNIARIIN, and has been based in the city of ERYX in SKAROS since 2981 RM. Members of the order are ATRAMENTAL shapers whose SPHERE allows them to specialise in sleep and sedation, with individuals possessing different specific skills.

This sphere might include the ability to anesthetise individuals through the use of shaping, as well as putting them into a more traditional sleep. Some can induce a coma, with the possibility of waking individuals from comas (be they natural, medical, or MAGICKALLY-induced). Some are able tame or temporarily soothe enraged individuals and/or animals. Some are employed by the MACTIFIED ORDERS OF THE INQUISITION, assisting (or rising to the ranks of) torturers and INTERROGATORS, where they lull those being questioned into a state of near-trance, making them more likely to answer questions honestly.

Outside of organised institutions, Somniferiin may become entertainers, practising hypnotism; or they might set up practices where they help those with sleep disorders find sleep. Somniferiin can also be adept criminals, using their abilities to carry out burglaries after temporarily disabling guards.

The most potent of Somniferiin are purported to be able to lull the thoughts of their targets so thoroughly that they can implant suggestions into their thoughts, effectively hypnotising them to do as they will. This is only of any true effect ton those of weak will, but historical tales of a single Somniferii making an enemy ruler or general turn himself over with a simple suggestion.

There is a degree of overlap between the abilities of Somniferiin and SOMNIARIIN (ONEIROMANCERS), though typically those shapers who classify as the former have no access to or skill with altering dreams and thoughts. The two often work together, with one putting individuals to sleep so that the other can manipulate their dreams. Somniferiin can also aid in ASTRAL PROJECTION, helping the ASTRAL TRAVELLER relax, which aids in the process. See Vol IV: Spheres and types of Shaping.

SOMNOR: Mil. Str. Large fortress in the south of KASPIA, defending the northern-most reaches of the KASPIAN PASS that winds through the western ILLIGARHI into TEMUJA. It originated as an ancient tower, though has been rebuilt many times over its history to bring it in line with modern military architectural designs, though has not been updated since c. 3920 RM.

SOMORAH: Set. Major city in the c of ELAT (Pop. c. 180,000).

- SOMRANG: 1. Pol. Geo. Region in the c north east of RAONGEN.
 - 2. Set. Main city in the above region, in RAONGEN (Pop. c. 65,000).
- SON DYUN: Set. City in the c of CUTH. Its main industry is logging (Pop. c. 42,500).
- SON UMELARA: Int. Rui. Ancient obsidian tower, forming part of the UMELARA wall that once stretched for over 160-miles in the c north of AQUARIIA, located in the southern foothills of the NUNAKI MOUNTAINS.

The wall as well as the tower are now ruined. A second tower, NUL UMELARA exists on the southern reaches of the wall, in the ATRAMENTAL WASTES of LAHOSHUR. Little is known of the wall's origins or where the obsidian, which is otherwise unknown in all of Aquariia, was sourced

- SONALLIN: Mil. Str. Major coastal fortress in the south of KEPHUAAN, overlooking the entrance into the BAY OF COMMARA. It is controlled by the city of NAMMARA, and its fleet guards the surrounding waters.
- SONATH: Set. Settlement in the c north of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES, south of lake PURRI (Pop. c. 5,750).
- SONDA: Geo. Large fjord dominating the coastline of the prefecture of SONTADRIS⁽¹⁾ in the south of HOLOLACH⁽¹⁾.
- SONDREA: Rui. Ruin in the south of LYRIDIA, though originally part of northern NÁRTHEL. This was once a prosperous coastal city prior to the silting of the STRAIT OF NÁRTHEL, though once it was cut off from open water it was stricken by starvation and disease and was allowed to falter into nothingness by c. 3800 RM, though for many years it clung to life as a caravanserai.
- SONG OF ACCAIA: Arr. A threnody dating back to c. 450 RM in the south of PELASGOS. It remains popular today, and has been adapted to operas and plays across the KORACHANI EMPIRE.

The Song of Accaia details the lament of the maiden Accaia, who is beset by multiple tragedies before her death.

- SONG ISHACACH: Geo. Expansive cavern and sinkhole in the far east of IACIO. It is self-contained and does not link with CARCERI and is famed for its verdant mouth, which was formed when a major hollow collapsed, forming a sinkhole, that led to deeper reaches of the cave. The cavern is also believed to be home to sickly white SERAPIS that are thought to have lived there since the FOURTH AGE, in some form of exile.
- SONG OF SUSHRA: Wea. Common name in ARERAQTH for the common persistent drizzling rain that wracks the YULIAN Peninsula. It is named after the SCION SUSHRA, who is said to have died in the mountains.
- SONGAN: Set. Settlement in the east of CUTH (Pop. c. 6,200).
- SONGIN: Set. Settlement on the island of HATAYOON off the south western coast of CUTH.
- SONI-VAPHRA: (D. 142 RM) Pol. War. Tyrant from the ancient FIFTH AGE city of THERASH, who in four decades was able to subjugate dozens of states and peoples under his banner, creating the THERASHIAN EMPIRE.
- SONKENG: Mil. Str. Fortress in the c south west of CUTH, overlooking the entrance into the SEA OF ERRA. It is home to part of the Cuthi navy, which patrols the waters.
- SONIM: Geo. Cavern in the far north of the KHARKHARADONTID WASTES, just south of the border with the UMBRA SOKHAR, in the region of HATHAMOTH. The cavern leads to the so-called CHAMBER OF STARS in the PRISON CARCERI.
- SONMEN: Set. Settlement in the south east of KREM. It is known for its goat herds (Pop. c. 6,000).
- SONN: For. Woodland region comprising some 500-square-miles outside the settlement of DESSA in the south east of KORACHAN. It is popular amongst imperial patricians for hunting.
- SONOEN: Set. Major fortified coastal city in the north east of MENISCEA, located in an exclave of ABARHAL (3.) in the eponymous headland (2.). It is surrounded by the PARTHISAN colony of IBANNEM (1.) (Pop. c. 80,000).
- SONOMRHIR: Set. Small city in the c of EZASUH⁽²⁾, known for its college of the supranatural arts and for the ATRAMENTAL sinkhole located beneath the college vaults. Though a relatively recent city, it is steadily growing (Pop. c. 20,000).

- SONOT: 1. Geo. Hill 5-miles north west of the capital of HOLOLACH^(1.), in the prefecture of Hololach^(2.).
 - 2. Mil. Str. Fortress in the prefecture of HOLOLACH⁽²⁾ in the west of Hololach⁽¹⁾, 4-miles north west of the capital, overlooking the river HEMAVAR.
- SONS OF REJHELLE: Rel. Org. Male members of the SECT OF REJHELLIAN OBSERVANCE.
- SONTADRIS: 1. Pol. One of eight prefectures in HOLOLACH^(1.), controlling the south of the nation. Its controlling city is SONTADRIS.
- 2. Set. City in the south of HOLOLACH^(1,) in the HOLIASOR Mountains and centre of the eponymous prefecture. Through its harbour it makes regular contact with the east across THE INNER SEA, and its markets are filled with exotic goods from the KORACHANI EMPIRE and PARTHIS (Pop. c. 1,853,500).
- SONTAS: Set. Major city in the c of the tribe of TATRAS, in the c south of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. It is known for its skyport (Pop. c. 55,000).
- SONTIMH: Set. Coastal city in the north east of EZASUH⁽²⁾, in the headland of CHODAH, overlooking the island of EUANAT. It is the main link between the mainland and the island (Pop. c. 41,000).
- SONUIAN: Geo. Island off the northern coast of KEPHUAAN, which, alongside, SAOKIAN, are separated from the coast by the shallow sea known as the VEREN ITRUSH.
- SOODOY: Set. Settlement in the east of the HENDECARCHY of CHLORIS in the south of MALAN. Its main industry is the breeding of MALANI MACAQUES, which are exported around the DARK SEA and INNER SEA REGIONS as exotic pets (Pop. c. 6,800).
- SOPARRA: Set. City in the c-south east of RHEA. It was once famed for its SHAPER colleges, these were closed after the HIEROMONARCHS came to power in c. 3160 RM. The city was a hotbed of unrest, and alongside IMMERIA and DHERBA, was pivotal in supplanting the Hieromonarchs from Rhea, leading to the rise to power of the COURT OF DREAMS, which came to rule in 3242 RM.
 - It remains today as a significant city, its shaping history now remembered, though the old colleges are now in ruin (Pop. c. 82,000).
- SOPATH: 1. Sea. Bay in the far east of ALTHA^(2.), overlooking the north of the SEA OF DANAEL.
- 2. Set. Small coastal city in the far east of $\underline{ALTHA}^{(2)}$, overlooking the Bay of Sopath⁽¹⁾.
- SOPHAMYK: also 'the Fungal Forest'. Sup. For. Strange forest in the east of SAMMAEA, considered a part of the larger WAELMIGH tropical rainforest, within the nation of CHEIRA. It comprises gigantic chitinous plants that are more akin to giant fungi than anything else, and which are unknown elsewhere in ELYDEN. The forest covers an area of some 15,000-squaremiles and the air within is musty and close, retaining heat and moisture. The remnants of a previous natural forest can be seen here beneath the fungal mass, rotting at an unnaturally slow rate and held together by the subterranean 'roots' of the present-day forest. Some postulate that the entirety of Sophamyk is a single organism, though there is little proof behind this.
- The entire region is home to strange barely-glimpsed creatures that have adapted to life amongst the fungal forest. The region was explored once by a KORACHANI expedition in c. 2980 RM, bringing back wondrous examples of flora and fauna Though all other expeditions to Sophamyk were unsuccessful.
- SOPHIA: Set. City in the c east of GNOTH, along the GNOTHI ROAD. It had an ancient heritage, dating back to the FOURTH AGE, where it was known for its philosopher kings and their code of laws, some of which are still used in Gnoth to this day (Pop. c. 20,000).
- SOPHIC CONCLAVE: His. Pol. Sup. Org. A historic council that served as the government of INGHULL (present-day KHULL), between its founding in 1521 and its deposing in 2851 RM.
 - Founded by the self-styled SORCERER-KINGS^(3.) of Inghull in 1521 RM following their annulling of the ROYAL LINE and their demoting of the title of monarch into a ceremonial one that carried little power, the Sophic Conclave was made up a handful of Sorcerers from within Inghull, whose members and roles rotated every few years to prevent stagnation of ideas and precepts.

The Sorcerer-kings themselves were descended from a line of advisors known as SUPHETS, who themselves originated within a religiophilosophical group known as the ORDER OF EPISTEMIC ESOTERY, whose monks valued knowledge and propagated the spread of information and news across OLD THERASH, including Inghull. Once the Sophic Conclave was established they began financing expeditions outside of Inghull, where monks could search for valuable books to add to their collections. This included magickal treatises and histories that the Sorcerer-kings valued.

The Sophic Conclave was responsible for expelling the AELORAN CHURCH from Inghull, and around six centuries after their rise to power they eventually ended the monarchy completely, though much of the old extended royal family remained as sycophantic followers and servants of the Sorcerer-kings.

In 2138 RM, 2-years after dissolving the MONARCHY, the Sophic Conclave relocated to a new capital, in EMEK TA', from where they ruled until their eventual downfall at the hands of the KHULLAN INQUISITION.

Starting as an alliance of rebels in 2702 RM who opposed the harsh treatment of miners in the south east of Inghull, the Khullan Inquisition rapidly grew into a powerful foe, its members systematically hunting and slaying the Sorcerer-kings. They eventually gained a sizeable following and were able to amass an army with which they marched against Inghull, taking advantage of the chaos wrought by a KORACHANI invasion of the surrounding EHRENISIAN COAST. The war ended in 2809 RM with the defeat of Korachan, leaving Inghull in turmoil and divided in two. Over the next decades, the Khullan Inquisition continued in its attack on the Sorcerer-kings, succeeding in eradicating them in 2851 RM. The Sophic Conclave was dissolved and replaced 2-years later by the elected council that was christened the ETERNAL ASSEMBLY.

SOPHIUSA: Pol. Set. Ruling city in the tribe of ILLPHAGOS in the west of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. It is a major trade centre along the SALT ROAD, and has contact with RHINOCOLOURA (Pop. c. 125,000).

 $\underline{\underline{SOPHRET}}$: For. Sparse woodland in the $\underline{\underline{OPRETI}}^{(1.)}$ scrublands in the c of \underline{OPHAR} .

SOPORA: 1. Lak. Lake in the c east of PARAIYA, along the course of the river NOTHIYA.

2. Set. City in the south east of Paraiya, founded in c. 2750 RM, when ancient ruins were resettled. The region was resettled by an emerging caste of people who moved there from Beluan in the north west and became the engineered city and capital of Sultanate Paraiya. It has since become the largest city in all of Paraiya and is shunned by the traditional nomadic castes who still wander the land. It forms a vital link in the Salt Road, and its upper classes enjoy buying exotic goods – be they food, jewellery, or object d'art – from merchants travelling the route (Pop. c. 821,000).

SOPOYANG: Set. Coastal city in the c south of CUTH, along the north western-face of the HAMMINGHENG Highlands (Pop. c. 28,500).

SOPPORIA: Set. Free-city the south east of SAMMAEA. It is an enclaved territory within the great nation of QARALAM. The city is known for little other than its NECROMANTIC culture, much of which is likely exaggerated by KORACHANI citizens obsessed with grotesque tales.

Those who die in Sopporia are said to be mummified with the special resins cultivated from the sap of a tumorous sacred tree and interred in home shrines where they remain as part of their families. Those whose families are of particularly long lineage live in sprawling sepulchres, their own living areas tiny compared with the space reserved for the dead, who are given far more importance than the living.

In part this culture may stem from the natural firmamental LACUNA that exists close-by, making contact with the otherworld relatively easy. shamen and mystics are a common sight in the city, with most families training at least one member in such arts so as to retain links with the dead.

It emerged from Qaralam, though broke away after its cultural beliefs drifted too far from what was acceptable in its parent state, though over the year it came to dominate a sizeable territory and many satellite towns around it. Despite the city's strange culture, it remains a powerful force in the region, controlling hundreds of square miles of land and dozens of vassal settlements (Pop. c. 420,000).

SOR: Ast. Common name used for ELYDEN'S star (sun) in the KORACHANI tongue. See vol II: the Heavens and the Empyrean.

SORABANDA: Art. Soc. Court dancers in the north of NORTHERN SAMMAEA who hide their entire bodies behind layers of crimson and black lace, wearing masks of brass coins over their faces. They train for many years to master a seamless style of movement that appears as though they are gliding. They are common in SARASTROAN lands, and can be found in most settlements as folk dancers, and in larger cities as professional dancers who perform for nobility.

SORAME: Lak. Long teardrop-shaped highland endorheic lake in the south east of the HOGGOTHA ISZ known for its high natron and alkaline content. Its water is corrosive to flesh and is known to calcify the bodies of any fauna that dies in the lake.

SORAYA VINDEX: f. Tec. Per. (B. 3928 RM) High-ranking member of the AIWAHAN ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION. She is old, though her body is now hidden behind TECHNARCANE ORTHOSES that provide her with strength, stamina, and heightened intelligence, though at the expense of her humanity – her face is a patchwork of scars and sutures where it is visible beneath her augmentations.

Officially bearing the rank of Keeper of ARCHAEOTECH, she is responsible for safeguarding the most dangerous technarcane objects that are kept by the Order within the VAULT OF VAURNOS. Her vigilance in her duties prevented PARTHISAN spies from tampering with a powerful device known as the GYRE CORE, and she was responsible for hunting them down before they could flee to their homeland.

SORIA KIEL: Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region in BANAA, in the far east of $\underline{ARKOS}^{(1)}$.

The region is categorised as a MODERATE THREAT by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

SORAKHEI: Eth. People of the areas of KARAKHAS and KHURAUR. See Vol II: Peoples and Races of Elyden.

SORAKHAEL: Org. Rel. Religious mystery cult of blood-worshippers based in the city of SERKAN, in KARAKHAS. Members come mostly from the nobility of KORACHANI descent.

SORCERY: 1. Nou. 'Sorcerer'. Mys. Voc. An innate ability to SHAPE that is possessed by few people. Though they do not require the training and discipline that normal shapers need, many will nevertheless go on to formally study at an institution of higher learning (such as the relevant MINASTERIA (2.) in the KORACHANI EMPIRE) to master their art and receive certification. It is believed that most sorcerers are descended from some form of being that controlled great powers, such as SCIONS, OTHERWORLDERS or HALFBLOODS.

The term is uncommon and unknown to most, and many of those that know the term mistakenly use it as a synonym for shaper. See Vol IV: Other Forms of Mysticism.

2. Rel. Rnk. The religion of ALAM BETHYL. Sorcerers are mystical figures who adopt an animal or ideal as their totem and strive to embody the ideal of their chosen totem throughout their lives, sometimes forsaking words and civilisation, exiling themselves from their own people to find enlightenment. Only after a long and arduous totem quest do they return to their settlements as spiritual leaders.

They once ruled Alam Bethyl but centuries of unopposed power led to their rule growing tyrannical. Eventually the people rose against them in c. 3450 RM, leading to a long civil war that ended in the betrayal of the Sorcerers by one of their own, eventually leading to their ousting and the formation of the FEDERAL ASSEMBLY, which rules to this day. Though sorcerers remain in Alam Bethyl, they do not wield the political and cultural power they once did, and the WARDERS caste, which once existed solely to protect the Sorcerers has been allowed to die out. In 3562 RM the Federal Assembly passed laws to limit the power and influence of sorcerers, and since then the tradition has waned.

Today they remain as occultists in more rural areas, and they are distrusted in the more urban cities, where industrialisation has seen people put less faith in them.

SORCERER-KINGS: 1. Pol. Rulers of the PLAGI city of KHARAKHARA, in KHARKHARADONTIS.

2. Pol. Rulers of CHERIA from 3337 RM, following the fall of the earlier WAELMIGHI DYNASTIES. Their rule is harsh, but through their expertise of the ATRAMENTAL arts they commanded great fear and respect, managing to unite Cheira with METAGRASH and the fractured lands of WAELMIGH in 3460 RM.

Their rule continued over the next 200-years, until the appearance of the new Church of the Prophet of the Empyrean in c. 3650 RM, which began to spread rapidly across Cheira and surrounding lands, centred around the city of Menitab. The Sorcerer-kings decried this growing cult of idolatry, punishing those found to be revering the OTHERWORLDER, though this only served to grow its spread. The city of Menitab eventually forsook the leadership of the Sorcerer-kings, seceding from the empire.

In 3679 RM the Sorcerer-kings moved against the city of Menitab and its allies, which included reinforcements from SERROK, which by then had absorbed the new religion and had become a close ally of Menitab. After a bloody war the armies of the Sorcerer-kings were no closer to defeating the heretical defence. Worship of the otherworlder became outlawed as a result of this, and all followers of the Church of the Prophet of the Empyrean were branded heretics, with those found to be practising the religion within Cheira executed.

In 3692 RM rumours emerged that individuals amongst the Sorcererkings were secretly worshipping the Prophet of the Empyrean, and that the religion was still alive, having become a secretive cult with roots across the empire. This led to a schism amongst the Sorcerer-kings in 3699 RM, with the followers of the Prophet of the Empyrean gaining the backing of the church itself and Serrok, giving them the upper hand, pushing the Sorcerer-kings out of power. Localised wars erupted in some regions of Cheira, and by the end of this period the Sorcerer-kings remained in power only in the city of Cheira and its immediate environs, with the rest of Cheira falling under the control of the Church.

In 3702 RM, following the appointment of the Church of the prophet of the Empyrean to state religion, the last vestige of the Sorcerer-kings was excited from the city of Cheira and the last 3 surviving members of the old ruling dynasty were exiled, moving north east into GIBEAH as refugees, ending their influence in Cheira.

3. Pol. His. Rulers of ancient INGHULL (present-day KHULL), who were eventually destroyed by the KHULLAN INQUISITION in a gruelling guerrilla campaign that lasted between 2702 and 2851 RM.

They rose to power in 1519 RM, after an ancient Atramental Treatise discovered by a Suphet on the isle of Jiridun in 1233 RM was translated following centuries of work in their stronghold in the city of Qarin Ta'. The suphets who studied the teachings of the Codex became sorcerers – masters of ancient Atramental arts that granted them great powers, with which they were able to overthrow the ruling Inghullan Monarchy, becoming known as Sorcerer-kings.

Each Sorcerer-king became the ruler of a city or territory within Inghull, and together they formed an overcouncil known as the SOPHIC CONCLAVE, which convened in the city of EMEK TA', which became their capital in 2138 RM. They were ruthless rulers and turned Inghull into an isolationist state, where they erected monuments and palaces in their own name whilst ignoring their own people.

They were eventually overthrown by a force of guerrilla resistors that became known as the KHULLAN INQUISITION, who hunted them down and rallied the people to their cause, eventually slaying the last sorcererking in 2851 RM. It is believed that some Sorcerer-kings were able to flee their wrath, most notable of which was \underline{TAL} , who went on to establish the small state of $\underline{TAL}\,\underline{ZHAAN}^{(1)}$.

SORCERERS: also 'Sorcerer-lord. Pol. Sup. Rnk. Rulers of TAL ZHAAN^(I.) and governors of its satellite settlements, who continue the ALCHEMICAL tradition established by the state's founder, The Sorcerer-lord TAL, since his disappearance in 3312 RM. They continue the alchemical tradition that was established by Tal over a millennium ago. Most rule their respective prefectures with an iron fist. Their harsh laws are well-observed, keeping the region of Tal Zhaan as a relatively peaceful land.

SORCEROUS CODEX, the: Sup. Vol. An ancient ATRAMENTAL treatise written across three copper-bound tomes of vellum. It was discovered by a SUPHET travelling to the island of JIRIDUN in 1233 RM and was studied for centuries in a monastery in QARIN TA' in an attempt to translate the writings. It was finally deciphered in 1519 RM, whereupon a select few suphets continued to study it, becoming SHAPERS of not inconsiderate power. Two years later they declared themselves as SORCERER-KINGS^(3.) and deposed the INGHULLAN MONARCHY, reducing the monarch to a ceremonial position that carried little power.

The Codex allowed the Sorcerer-kings to amass great power throughout their rule over Inghull, and it was highly-valued, never leaving their stronghold in EMEKTA'. Its whereabouts were lost following the fall of the Sorcerer-kings at the hands of the KHULLAN INQUISITION, though it is postulated that may have been taken by a Sorcerer-king before fleeing the Inquisitors' wrath.

SORCHAR: also 'Sorchari System'. Ast. KORACHANI name for the planetary system of which Elyden forms a part. Sorchar is comprised of a sun, SOR; and seven PLANETS: HAEL, ALGOL⁽²⁾, ELYDEN, CYKRANOSH⁽¹⁾, LIVIAD, GNIHLAS, and NIHAV. See Vol II: Planets and Satellites.

SORDOR: Int. Sup. Geo. Dumping site a few miles east of the city of ZEPHANICHAN in KORACHAN, where rubbish from the city and more specifically the waste product of ATRAMENTALLY-polluted water treated in the facilities of the AGUEA reservoir is dumped. The river ICHORIA flows just east of Zephanichan and its waters have been rendered sterile by the chemical runoff from the countless manufactories and industries in the city.

This water is treated to rid it of the worst of its pollutants, which are compacted into thick jelly-like bricks. Some of these are used in other industries, and what remains is dumped in Sordor.

Originally a small natural endorheic basin, Sordor has, over the centuries, been filled with these polluted blocks, with the lower-most layers becoming compacted over time into a glass-like substance. This is now extracted by slave miners who work under horrendous conditions, and the material is then shaped into jewellery and object d'art and sold to PATRICIANS.

The entire area of Sordor has become a hellish landscape, inimical to live, wretched and twisted by the sheer concentration of Atramental waste, betraying the bodies of any animals that are unfortunate-enough to wander into the region. Indeed, the only life that seems to thrive in the region are tiny winged insects that infest the air around it.

The region is categorised as $\underline{\text{HIGHLY DANGEROUS}}$ by the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI}}$ $\underline{\text{INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES}}$.

SORENIEN: 1. Sea. Bay off the west coast of CARNYNGA, forming the north eastern-most extent of the BAY OF NALN.

2. Pol. Set. City and capital of CARNYNGA, located in the south of the nation, close to the coast.

It is part of the famed * line of fortifications and the original city was once entirely hidden behind thick bastion walls, though it has since overgrown its ancient boundaries. Of note is the fortified * gate, which is a tripe gate that controls all flow of traffic in and out of the city (Pop. unknown).

SORGIN: Set. City in the c of the HENDECARCHY of CYRENIA in the north of MALAN. It was once the capital of the Hendecarchy but the appearance of the oracle MANESKARKON ZARRÉ attracted many followers, leading to a new city — ENIGOST (2.) appearing in the north, which would become the new capital by c. 3280 RM. Sorgin dwindled following this, with many of its fine structures being repurposed or simply left to rot. Today the outskirts of the city still bear tell-tale signs of its previous size, with ancient foundations protruding from untended soil. Despite this, it remains a crossroads of trade in the Hendecarchy, along the course of the river LAKOSH (Pop. c. 23,000).

SORKOR: Sct. Coastal settlement in the east of SAELEH^(1.). its main industry is the production of AHUREDH wine (Pop. c. 18,000).

SORO RHEQ: Set. Small city in the c north of CHEIRA. Its main industry is coal quarrying (Pop. c. 12,000).

SORO VOLATA: Str. Final resting place of the first VOLATA in the prefecture of SONTADRIS in the south west of HOLOLACH^(1.). The mummified body of the Volata is guarded by a sect of EVORADI nomads and is a place of pilgrimage to the faithful.

- SOROS PASS: Geo. Mountain pass cutting across the c east of the SANEM Mountain in SABIA. The path is narrow and flanked in many regions by sharp slate-like protrusions in the rock.
- SOROUDE: 1. Lak. Narrow lake in the c north of TZALLRACH, just to the north of the eponymous city⁽²⁾. It is around 13-miles long, and forms a part of the course of the river IZIAMI.
- 2. Set. Major city in the c north of $\underline{TZALLRACH}$, located along the course of the river \underline{IZIAMI} . It is the kingdoms' largest city, and is also the capital of the northern-most state of $\underline{KHUN}^{(2)}$. It is surrounded by miles of fertile fields and pasture, where most of its food is produced. It is known for its great domed council hall, where representatives from across Khun travel to petition the Onarchs and their council. The city lies along the route of the $\underline{GREAT\ ROAD}$, and its tiered market, located east of the river Iziami, is filled with produce and trade goods from across $\underline{CENTRAL\ LLACHATUL}$ (Pop. c. 1,824,000).
- SÖRR: Also 'honeywood in Temuja, 'goldbark' in KOLCHIS, 'goldtree' in VENTHIR and BELEGOR'. Flo. All these names and others are derived from the beautiful gold-coloured bark that this tree possesses.

Sörrs are native to the east of LLACHATUL and north east of SAMMAEA and grow to around 50-ft. in height, though individuals rarely reach that height. The trunk is long and thick, and doesn't usually grow perpendicularly to the ground. A Sörr's bark ranges in colour from a deep gold to dark brown, and individual trees can have different shades of colour on their trunks. Sörr leaves are a golden brown almost year-round, though this colour slowly disappears in autumn, leaving pale, translucent leaves that are ghost-like in appearance. Sörr wood is a rich golden-beige colour and is highly prized for its decorative use and is often used for ornamental purposes in important buildings. The wood itself is soft and easily worked. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

- SORUL: Set. Major city in the north east of TULURKRYPH⁽²⁾ in the south of WESTERN MENISCEA, known for its ancient FIRMAMENTAL traditions, and where acolytes are tested and undergo the TEST OF INVESTITURE (Pop. c. 135.800).
- SORUMI: Mar. Rnk. Caste of bounty hunters common in SAUA, who roam c LLACHATUL for fugitives.
- SORUS: Set. Major city in the north east of SARAGOS. It was besieged by VENTHIR in 3406 RM, though like other cities at the time, it survived relatively unscathed. Following the siege, it and other coastal cities had their defences upgraded, which has deterred other assaults. It was once coastal, though the slow retreat of the waters of the IAPETAN SEAS have left it around half-a-mile from the coast, with an intricate system of canals and levees linking it to the coast. It is one of the major smelters of meteoric iron in ELYDEN, which is a major export. The city has an expansive under-city water reservoir known as the Lake of Arches. So expansive is it that it is patrolled against illicit activities (Pop. c. 620,000).
- SORUTO: 1. Sea. Gulf in the west of PARTHIS, forming part of the CAMARINAL SEA.
 - 2. Set. Coastal city in the west of $\underline{PARTHIS}$, in the region of \underline{ERUTO} (Pop. c. 25,000).
- SORVEA: Set. Settlement in the prefecture of HOLOLACH^(2,) in the c of Hololach^(1,) (Pop. c. 3,800).
- SOSHALI: Rvr. River in the south of RAONGEN^(2.), flowing north for over 750-miles from sources in the JIANNAN Hills and the JENEN Mountains, before flowing into lake TAHONG.
- SOSHOA: Set. Small city in the north of PNESSA, at a fork where the river DABBARA meets the river YAGNOTH PHTHAN (Pop. c. 16,000).
- SOSHRIS: Pol. Set. Ruling city in the tribe of NUNEA, in the c east of MULCIBER, in the east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS. It is situated along the course of the river NETH, and its troops control the border with OSRIS (Pop. c. 70,000).
- SOSNYX: See. Small fortified city in the east of RHINOCOLOURA (Pop. c. 12,000).
- SOSOL: Set. City in ACHRABAL, known for its assassin college, where the political assassins known as SHMALL train (Pop. c. 50,000).
- SOSPIRA: Arc. Cistern and aqueduct in the north of VÂRR. None truly know where its waters come from, only that they originate beneath the feared mountain VARRACHON. The waters of Sospira flow east along

- aqueducts and, where the waterway has been damaged, river through most of Vârr before emptying into $\underline{PROPONTIS}$, and it waters many Vârran settlements.
- SOSSNAR: Set. highland settlement in the north east of the HAMAIADON Mountains, forming a part of the ETURED PASS. It is small and exists mostly to accommodate caravans and other travellers who cross the pass, which is closed for most of the year (Pop. c. 1,000).
- SOSSOR: Rvr. River in the south east of ELAT, flowing south west for 362-miles from sources in the PARNASIAN and the MUSSOR Mountains, before meeting the coast at the SEA OF DAZHAT.
- SOSSOUL: Set. City in the region of SÛR GHATH in the c south west of THE SURRACH. It is located along a bifurcation of the river HATHURAN known as the AHATHRA.
- SOSTAKAUR: 1. Geo. Island off the north western coast of KORACHAN, to the south west of the BAY OF LALLEH.
 - 2. Mil. Str. Fortified island city 57-miles south off the coast of northern KORACHAN. The city is a major source of fish and seafood for the coastal cities of western Korachan (Pop. c. 40,000).
- SOSTIS: Set. City in the south west of SKAROS. Though small, it forms part of THE SHADOW MARCH, where pilgrims are given trade options and respite from the rigours of the road (Pop. c. 35,000).
- SOTANAR: Sec. Small fortified coastal settlement in the south of the MULL CITY-STATES. It is known for its lobster fishing (Pop. c. 10,000).
- SOTEP: Mil. Set. Military city in the c of KHAMID, along the course of the river ARAX (Pop. c. 32,200).
- SOTERISTS: Org. Cult of salvation in VENTHIR.
- SOTH, CULT OF: Rel. Org. Religious cult in the far west of THE SURRACH, common in the city of DAATH. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.
- SOTH DESOTA: also 'the Living Idol. Int. Geo. Art. A stone colossus carved from a rocky pinnacle in the west of the UPPER DANOSOTH Mountains in the south of the territories of ETHISTONITH in RHINOCOLOURA, not far from the shore of LAKASM. Local legend names the being the colossus depicts as Zsanacha Atthat, an OTHERWORLDER cursed to wander ELYDEN for eternity. The legend is linked to reports of strange DREAMS that haunt the sleep of those who rest close to the colossus, echoing with memories of a thousand different lives.
- SOTH HAMMOMAR HANIHIL: Geo. Ancient cleft in the north west of RHINOCOLOURA, in the north east of the duststone formation IMOROR. The place is said to have been made when the DEMIURGE RACHANAEL smote the body of an OTHERWORLDER to the ground during a battle in the THIRD AGE. The incorruptible body of the otherworlder is said be imprisoned in the area, where it is endlessly tortured by corrupted PLAGI and AEHARI.
- SOTHAN: His. Lan. Now-extinct early FIFTH AGE language spoken by the people of ERON SOTH. It emerged from the FADING of the FOURTH AGE from the earlier languages of ERASHAN, and would lead to the extant language of OPHAMI. See Vol II: Languages.
- SOTHIS: 1. also 'the Helix Stat'. Ast. Con. It is the brightest star in the NORTHERN HEMISPHERE, forming the part of the constellation of ARAELL. See Vol II: Constellations.
- 2. Set. Settlement in SIRIPHAGOS. The High-Aliheian exiled the AUSPEXES in 2631 RM, granting them the lands of SOTHIS in the south east of BAULDOR on condition that they never set foot in the city again. There they settled an ancient ruin that would in time grow to become the city of Sothis, which grew into a major city in the region, though the increasingly dry climate of the region allowed it to dwindle in size. It thrives today due to its SARASTROAN government putting funds into it and through its position along the SALT ROAD (Pop. c. 120,000).
- SOTHRA: 1. Set. A relatively isolated PARTHISAN colony located in the south of CENTRAL LLACHATUL, nestled between the south east of LYRIDIA and the west of TAMAR, along the northern coast of the ABYSS OF ENESH. Of temperate climate, it is a small region with largely insignificant resources, so is largely ignored by its neighbours.

The colony was founded in around 3698 RM to take advantage of the trade-route that crossed the STRAIT OF NÁRTHEL, and went on to found various settlements nearby, including the colony of NISSA in the south east of the off the coast of $\underline{\text{CUTH}}$ in 3957 RM. However, the silting of the strait over the next century saw its intended purpose lost, and it instead became a diplomatic stronghold over 5,000-miles east of $\underline{\text{TETHRA}}$, where Parthis could maintain links with distant nations, such as $\underline{\text{VENTHIR}}$ and $\underline{\text{THE HARÉSHK}}$.

It remains a powerful, well-guarded region.

2. Main city and capital of the eponymous⁽¹⁾ PARTHISAN colony of SOTHRA⁽¹⁾. The city was originally a major port, handling shipping and commerce along the STRAIT OF NÁRTHEL, though as the strait silted up and eventually closed off entirely Sothra diminished, finding itself cut off from the coast. It was since reunited with the sea through a system of locks and canals, and is now home to many embassies and consulates, and is considered a hub of Parthisan diplomacy (Pop. c. 91,000).

SOTHY: also 'Tower of Sothy'. Rel. Str. Monastery-tower in the western foothills of PERIEDAS Mountains in the c east of TETHYSIA, dedicated to the art of THAUMATURGY.

SOTKETERU: Rui. Sunken ruins in the CARCASS in KHAMID. The ruins predate the ancient Khamidian culture and are thought to date back to the late THIRD AGE. The ruins are expansive and, in places, less than 20-ft. from the surface, which makes them popular with treasure hunters and tomb robbers.

SOTREA: Set. Hilltop settlement in the prefecture of HOLOLACH^(2.) in the west of Hololach^(1.) (Pop. c. 4,000).

SOTRIS: Set. Small city in the prefecture of EROSENEA^(1.) in the north of HOLOLACH^(1.). It is known for its red brick structures, and it is an industrial centre, with many manufactories and workshops flanking the very narrow fast-moving river ALLAMAR, which provides raw as well as electrical power to them in the form of various waterwheels (Pop. c. 14,000).

SOTTHAGA: Set. Settlement in the far north of the UMBRA SOKHAR, south of the RIPHAEA Mountains (Pop. c. 8,000).

SOTTHEA: Geo. Mountain-range forming a border between the MULL CITY-STATES in the west and AHKA in the east, which is itself an extension of the TOLIASOR Mountains.

SOUAD: Ind. Soc. Org. PATRICIAN HOUSE based in the north east of LAASKHA, famed for its production of the REVOLVERS known as IRONBACKS. The House's main manufactory is based in the city of LAANA in the east of Laaskha. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

SOUBA: Geo. Mountain in the north west of PARAIYA, forming part of the AGOUTRA range.

SOUBAHIEL: Int. Art. His. Gigantic head in LAMEDUA, in the north of VÂRR. Though various attempts to ascertain its origins have been made, little is known about the head, and it is still debated whether it is an artificial construct or the remnants of a once-living creature. The head is captured in an agonising pose, screaming at the sky, its featured petrified and worn by the elements.

SOUDAL: 1. Geo. Plains in the north west of RHINOCOLOURA.

2. Set. Settlement in the north west of RHINOCOLOURA. It straddles the course of the river APENA, and operates a ferry that links the city of PARAHADAI with the rest of Rhinocoloura (Pop. c. 4,000).

SOUKOON: Set. Fortified settlement in the north east of CUTH (Pop. c. 7 000)

SOUHON: Rvr. River in the north of LIDEA, flowing north for 165-miles from sources in the ORIAN Mountains, before meeting its parent, the river OUISH.

SOUL: see Spirit (1.).

SOUL-COUNTERS: see YAMABUSHI.

SOUL_ENGINE: Tec. Myt. TECHNARCANE engine into which the soul of the dying DEMIURGE NYARLOTH is interred. Its creation was an archaic process, immeasurably costly and very difficult to achieve, requiring the toil of millions of his children, the IROTHANI.

Located beneath the city of Parymesia, in the north east of ANANTHUL. It was constructed late in the THIRD AGE as a last-ditch effort by Nyarloth to prolong his life or rid himself of the mysterious disease that wracked his body. Later called the MEHARRAAT, it is rumoured that other Soul-engines exist, but the truth is unknown.

Known as PARYMESIA, it was allowed to rot following the waning of the irothani and the fall of their kingdoms in the FADING between the Third and FOURTH AGES. It remains tended to by the SEPTS today, though whatever remains of the Demiurge Nyarloth is but a shadow of his former self.

Lesser simulacra of the Soul-Engine exist, known as CANOPIC ENGINES, which were crafted by the irothani and their descendants during the years of their long wane, as 'tombs' into which their leaders were interred after death

SOUL-PEARL: see SOULSTONE.

SOULHAEK: Rel. Arc. Twin-bull-headed altars that were used in rites of an ancient religion in the early FIFTH AGE AMMASHI^(1.) peninsula, in what are now KEPHUAAN, TAAN AN and ADHERA. Little else is known about the faith though it is believed to have revolved around sacrifice.

SOULHAEK, TEMPLE OF THE: His. Rel. Str. Ancient FIFTH AGE temple in the south east of KEPHUAAN with the largest and most intact example of a SOULHAEK altar in all of the AMMASHI^(1,1) peninsula. The temple is now surrounded by the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region known as ZENEGE RES and has been largely forgotten.

SOULS, SHRINE OF: For. Hidden copse outside the settlement of BITHYN in ALMAGEST, the largest tree of which is a shrine to the SPIRITS of the dead. Few know of it, and it is guarded by warriors of the PANGAIA.

SOULSEERS: Sup. Rnk. Caste of SHAPERS that emerged from the ADEPT caste in early FIFTH AGE TRISKETHIA, following the discovery of SOULSTONES in the area. They first appeared in c. 500 RM as specialists in soulstone research and lore, and became skilled at reading individual stones to learn of the MORTALS to whom they once belonged. They were also keen scholars of the OTHERWORLD, and their competence at manipulating soulstones made them experts at navigating the otherworld and communicating with SPIRITS (1.) therein. They were covetous of their lore and shared it with few outside their order and none outside of Triskethia.

They were pioneers of the TECHNARCANE industries and in 1908 RM they successfully married soulstones with engines, paving the way for the rapid industrialisation of the region.

The SECOND TECHNARCANE REVOLUTION saw them learn that the Adepts had been using young shapers to power technarcane engines, reducing them to little more than mortal batteries. Concerned of what lay in their futures, they petitioned the Adepts to change their ways. Unsuccessful, many fled the TRISKETHIAN DOMAINS, while others mounted an organised insurrection, fortifying their stronghold in MINIUM and abandoning the Adepts, who spent years trying to win back the Soulseers, without success.

In 2479 RM the Soulseers aided a widespread workers' uprising across most of the Triskethian Domains, leading the charge into OBYRYTH, destroying much of the city, and storming the Adepts' palaces. The Adepts were slain, and the Soulseers took their place as rulers of the Domains, moving the capital to Minium.

They led the defence of their home against religious CRUSADES and war with KORACHAN and PARTHIS, though saw their power diminish greatly over this time. Pirates and privateers preved on their soulstone shipments. wreaking havoc on their economy. The Soulseers turned to their study, seeking a way supranatural means of averting disaster. They became consumed by a secretive project that sapped all funds from the Domains' coffers, leaving it in a state little better than when under the rule of the Adepts. Their goal was to give birth to an artificial OTHERWORLDER, known now as a LHAUAPARAN, and what was to be the crown of Minium and the focus of their rule over Triskethia instead became its doom. The soul-creature was born to a life of agony, and it lashed out at the mortals surrounding it at the culmination of the birthing process. The Soulseers fought back, enraging it further. Surrounded, it roared in pain, unleashing a psychic blast that obliterated every mortal in Minium, including the lhauaparan itself. The Triskethian Domains were left leaderless and the Soulseers were all but wiped out.

The few who were spared could not hope to maintain law and order in the Domains, which saw cities breaking away amid the chaos brought about by the collapse of the government, and by 2863 RM the region had degenerated to a series of states, each warring over soulstone deposits, manufactories that can construct technarcane engines, and ports that allow their exportation.

The remnants of the Soulseers repopulated Minium, which remains now as a stronghold to their kind, albeit far reduced in influence.

SOULSTONE: also 'soul-pearl, and 'Illurcaul'. Myt. Oth. Phil. Said by some esoterics and mythologists to be the fossilised 'life spark' or SPIRIT^(1.) of those MORTALS who perished before THE SHAPER gave mortals spirits and bestowed upon them the gift of the OTHERLIFE in the SECOND AGE. They take the form of perfect spheres with the sheen of pearls, ranging from 2 to 5-feet across, usually embedded in stone akin to fossils. Rarely, they are found lying freely on the ground, sometimes with desiccated flesh stretched across them. Though the colour and sheen of soulstones does not tarnish over time, some are cloudy and others are of a dull black appearance – possibly mirroring the actions of the spirit when contained within a live body. They are incredibly heavy, around three times what an iron sphere of equitable size would weigh, making transportation and use difficult.

Though relatively rare, soulstones are mystical objects, revered by cultures throughout ELYDEN'S history. They echo with a sadness of a people tethered to the material in a way that mortals cannot know. OTHERWORLDERS who come across soulstones are overcome by a melancholy that few outside their pantheon can understand and they refuse to touch them or allow them to come to harm; for within is said to be the essence of life.

True to that belief, many cultures, not least amongst them the KORACHANI EMPIRE, have used soul-pearls as little more than resources; siphoning from them with malefic abandon the essence of life.

Though uncommon, it has been known for contemporary corpses to give rise to soulstones, and reports of this have increased over recent years. IFIRMIANS are unique amongst the mortal peoples, in that they still carry soulstones following an ill-guided ritual they undertook following the gift of the otherlife, now referred to as the TAMING OF THE SPIRIT.

SOULSUIT: Sup. Tec. Obj. Technarcane suit, bearing similarities to SOFTSUITS or HARDSUITS that has at the core of its construction a SOULSTONE. The suit extracts information from the soulstone, effectively turning it into a co-pilot that handles the complex technarcane computations that are performed by the suit. As a result, many soulsuits have the opportunity to be larger and more complex than other hardsuits.

Soulsuits are often worn by SHAPERS (particularly ANIMISTS, who are able to communicate with the soulstone to an extent, making them the most effective pairing) who benefit the most from the additional computations, having the effect of greatly enhancing their shaping, allowing their acts to be more potent, durable or simply easier to achieve. In this context soulsuits can perform a role similar to that of an IRON MANTLE, though the former remains a far more specific and expensive version of the already costly technarcane equipment.

Aside from shapers, soulsuits can be useful for ASTRAL PROJECTING and DREAMWALKING, granting their wearers heightened senses, enabling them to more easily navigate these often extreme environments, though REALITY SUITS, being tailor-made for the purpose, are more adequate.

Some have expressed concern over using soulstones – already a rare and expensive commodity – for such prosaic means, citing the exploitation of a SOUL for material purposes as unethical. In truth, the process of creating a soulsuit is so expensive and costly that only a few are believed to be manufactured in the KORACHANI EMPIRE every year. Indeed, few have seen soulsuits in action and they are typically employed by governments, military, or paramilitary forces for extreme projects.

SOUMBA: Edu. Small city in the north of PARAIYA. It is a centre of ATRAMENTAL research and study (Pop. c. 15,700).

SOUNAR: Geo. Mountain in the c of VENTHIR, and an extension of the larger SHANA Mountains.

SOUND OF LUTO, the: also LUTO (1.).

SOUTH KINGDOM: His. Geo. In ancient KHAMID, name given to its southern territories, as determined by the SNIEMET Mountains that divided the land in two.

The South Kingdom was characterised by its wealth and was the chosen home of most $\underline{PHAROANTS}$ and their families, as well as the merchant-lords that came to dominate ancient Khamid. The entire region was almost completely destroyed in the CATACLYSM of 101 RM, resulting in the fragmentation of Khamid.

SOUTH TOWER, the: see ENEARHON.

SOUTHERN BRORI CURRENT: Sea. Warm surface ocean current in the north east of the SEA OF LERAMUGH that flows east along the southern coast of BROR (1.), before continuing east where it joins with the WEST WIND DRIFT.

SOUTHERN HEMISPHERE: Geo. The half of ELYDEN that is situates south of the equator, including all of the continent of BROR^(I,), a small part of southern MENISCEA and around half of SAMMAEA.

SOUTHERN PALADIN: see NORTHERN AND SOUTHERN PALADIN.

SOUTHERN PELASGOS: Geo. Common name for what is now the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS, before the region gained independence from PELASGOS in 3835 RM.

SOUTHERN REVENANT: see REVENANT, AZAZEMI.

SOUTHERN SAMMAEA: see SAMMAEA, SOUTHERN.

SOUTHERN SIMBARA: see SIMBARA, SOUTHERN.

SOUTHERN TROPIC: see TROPIC OF MAOCARHL.

SOVOKON: Set. Large city in the c east of NOAVATUR. It is a centre of industry, with many manufactories (Pop. c. 92,000).

SOVEREIGN-MILITANT: title of the ruler of OSSIEL, ILLATHUR.

SOVEREIGNS' ROAD, the: Com. Geo. Major trade route dominating the c of northern MENISCEA, passing through CEHOPHELA, IMEAL, and XYRPHAAT^(3,). The city of MEON in Imeal is considered the heart of the route, and is dominated by merchant houses, auction halls and great markets and caravanserais.

SOVEREIGNTY OF THAMUL: see THUMAL.

SOVROCHAN: His. Set. KORACHANI slaver colony established in NOAVATUR in c. 889 RM. It was the end of the infamous NOAVATRUI TRAIL, which stretched from the KARAKHASID city of KITHALOI across the UMBRA SOKHAR, linking the empire with its colonies on the far side of SAMMAEA. Today it is known as SOVROKA.

SOVROKA: Ind. Set. Following the abandonment of NOAVATUR by KORACHAN in c. 1200 RM, the colony of SOVRACHAN slowly became known as Sovroka. It would, over the coming millennia, find itself shorn from the coast, though it remained connected to the river SHIID and maintains a sizeable harbour. Today it is a centre of industry. (Pop. c. 398,000).

SOWN RACES, the: His. Myt. Mor. Ancient name for the Two-and-Twenty MORTAL TRIBES, and, more specifically, the seven individual mortals from each tribe born from the seeds sown upon the MATERIAL PLANE before the DEMIURGES were stripped of their powers of creation. See Vol IV: the Mythologia Elyden.

SOYAN: Set. Settlement in the far south west of RAONGEN^(2.). It is a major agricultural centre, with most of its produce going towards the upkeep of the capital. It is also known for its sheep rearing (Pop. c. 8,200).

SPADARA: Set. Coastal settlement in the far south west of GNOTH (Pop. c. 8,000).

SPAHIA: Ind. Set. Mining settlement in the c of PARTHIS, along the western-face of the BALAUR^(1.) Mountains (Pop. c. 9,000).

SPASAR: Mil. Str. Fortress in the KORACHANI colony of MADOUR, commanding an unobstructed view of the SEA OF ACHSHI.

SPATIAL GATEWAY: Int. Sup. Tec. A complex TECHNARCANE engine within the city of VRENA in PARTHIS. It takes advantage of a near-unique OVERLAY between the MATERIAL PLANE and the OTHERWORLD that affects temporal and spatial physical laws, allowing for the near-instantaneous transfer of matter from one area to another, with the aid of complex technarcane machinery operated by a constant CHOIR of SHAPERS, with it as either the origin or destination.

The overlay was officially documented in c. 3420 RM after centuries of accounts from SHAPERS and other sensitive to the MATERIA OMNA, and subsequently was extensively researched, with various technarcane equipment constructed over the site, attracting COMMISSARIES and other businesses, eventually leading to the appearance of the settlement of Vrena within the next century.

Studies into the nature of the overlay led technarcanists to speculate on its usage as a means of near-instantaneously moving objects to distant regions. Another technarcane complex was constructed outside LIRAET in TARTAK and over the next decades deep research was conducted, officially reaping rewards in 3772 RM, with the successful transference of inert matter. Eventually, organic matter transferred, leading to the first MORTAL test in 3781 RM, after which regular contact between the two complexes was established.

Construction of other complexes are rumoured to be underway in other Parthisan territories, but they have never been completed for a variety of reasons including high costs and limited resources, as well as distance from the primary complex in Vrena. The transference phenomenon is only possible through the overlay in Vrena, and as a result, the distance between it and the secondary complex (either destination or origin point, depending on the direction of transference) directly effects ease of transfer – the closer the two points, the easier the effect is accomplished, which is somewhat counter-productive to what the governments goals are – the near-instantaneous movement of goods and armies from one point to another.

SPECULOMANCY: Sup. Voc. Archaic now-forgotten form of SHAPING that was practiced by ancient CATACHIS. Expert mirror-makers, the catachis married this skill with the earliest form of SHAPING, resulting in the creation of mirrors with a surface so perfect ad unblemished that they were able to be used to trap a persons' essence. This was used by shapers to split their spirits^(1.) into various facets, or which were used to trap a dying person's spirit, allowing them to live on, to an extent, after the perishing of their mortal vessels. They also used this as a form of punishment, where the spirit was taken from a living person's body, effectively rendering the body comatose while the spirit was imprisoned.

This form of shaping died with the catachis millennia ago and the secrets to its execution are now thought dead, or forever lost. Artefacts related to speculomancy have occasionally been unearthed in the northern wastes of WESTERN SAMMAEA, including the VESPERTINE LEAGUE, NASTAL⁽²⁾, KHULL, and KARGAMA, leading to much speculation and excitement amongst historians and scholars of shaping. See Vol IV: Other Forms of Mysticism.

SPEHISIS: Sup. Geo. DUSTSTONE formation along the northern border between ETUA and the DAENED SULRACH. The formation takes the form of a branching canyon covering over 7,000 square miles, likely formed through the collapse of a subterranean river system centuries past. The entire formation is riddled with duststone caverns, some of which stretch into the bedrock for miles in all directions. Travellers from THE SURRACH claim that Deep Cults meet there.

SPHERE: Sup. Soc. In both ATRAMENTISM and FIRMAMENTISM, spheres pertain to the way an individual can SHAPE or influence his or her surroundings through the act of shaping, represented by many categories used in a widely recognised terminology, each of which is a sphere. An individual may be adept at healing or looking into the otherworld, for instance. Whatever the ability, that would be considered their sphere of influence.

Though the concept of spheres is widely recognised, different institutions or philosophies might have divergent interpretations as to what constitutes a particular sphere. In the KORACHANI EMPIRE, spheres are strictly codified and catalogued by the various MINASTERIA^(2.).

Not to be confused with $\underline{\text{SPHERES OF DISCIPLINE}}$, which are physical objects ($\underline{\text{FOCI}}^{(2,j)}$).

SPHERE OF DOMINION: Int. His. A beautifully ornate artefact depicting ELYDEN as a globe; the earliest-known object to do so. The item is old, and was discovered by the VENATHI EMPIRE in c. 300 RM in the GO BISAMMAM desert, after which it was moved north to heavily guarded repository for antiquities known as the HALL OF DOMINION. It is believed to date to FOURTH AGE and some have attributed its construction to the ILLIDRAEN.

SPHERE OF OTHMORDA: Int. Sup. Obj. A translucent crystalline sphere half-buried in the WHITE SHEET, at around 74° east 86° north. It is around 50-ft. in diameter and has thus far proven impervious to any harms at taking samples from it. Though largely transparent, parts of it have faint hints of blue, purple, pink, and violet. It glows fairly with an inner power, and has been detected to be mildly FIRMAMENTALLY-active, though little else is known of it.

SPHERES OF CREATION: Int. Ast. Myr. Classical name for the PLANETS of the SORCHARI SYSTEM, as depicted in the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN, as created through the SHAPING of the DEMIURGES out of the MATERA OMNA. As of printing, seven such orbs are known, including Elyden herself.

In order of perceived distance from the sun SOR, they are: HAEL, ALGOL⁽²⁾, Elyden, LIVIAD, GNIHLAS, CYKRANOSH⁽¹⁾, and NIHAV.

There is speculation regarding the nature of the Spheres of Creation, such as whether the other Spheres also contain life, or if there are other Spheres outside the Sorchari System.

SPHERES OF DISCIPLINE: Sup. Obj. Spheres, about 1 – 2 inches across, made of different materials that are sensitive to either the FIRMAMENT or ATRAMENTA. They are used in many cultures to train young SHAPERS, to help determine which forms of shaping (known as a SPHERE) a prospective shaper is most gifted in, if any.

Traditionally, the spheres are employed following at least a few months of training, after a student has learnt the intricacies of FOCUSING (1.) and reaching ATTUNEMENT with the MATERIA OMNA. They are presented to the student and placed on a level surface within easy reach. The student then concentrates on moving the spheres. The first sphere to move is considered to be the discipline (or sphere) the student has the greatest affinity for. In some cases, no spheres may move or multiple spheres may move. This is not a hard rule, and students who fail to move spheres may go on to become successful shapers, and the opposite may also true. See Vol IV: The Materia Omna.

SPHINGIFORM STATUES: Soc. Arc. Following the independence of VENTHIR, the sphinx queen HETEPHERES embarked on a lengthy and costly project across Venthir, toppling monuments and statues dedicated to the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR and the UNDYING MACHINE, replacing them instead with colossi and monuments in her image. Where before these structures were typically built either facing west to KHADON (the KORACHANI EMPIRE'S capital city) or south to the SEPULCHRAL PALACE (the throne of the Undying Machine), now they face her palace in HETEPHEROPOLIS and, more rarely, the east, and the rising sun.

Most famed of these Sphingiform Statues is the IDOL OF KHREMOSI.

SPHINX: 1. Fau. Children of the DEMIURGE ARIMASPI, not as loved by him as the GRIFFINS were, but known to have outlived their spoilt siblings, surviving as a race well into the FIFTH AGE, where ruins attributed to them have been unearthed in the jungles of WAELMIGH in the south west of CHEIRA. Some are thought to remain in MALAN, though for the most part they are believed to be all but extinct, save for the most famed example of their kind – the so-called 'Bitch-Queen' HETEPHERES THE STRANGLER, ruler of VENTHIR, who is commonly referred to as the last of her kind. They are thought to have shared a hive-mind consciousness, particularly with regards to their DREAMS, which are thought to have been shared across their kind as visions, and are possibly a contributing factor to their eventual demise. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

2. Sup. Soc. Sphinxes are a common figure in symbology and appear in many DREAMS and DREAMSCAPES. Some believe that this is a remnant of the hive mind their kind once shared and that the last surviving sphinx, queen HETEPHERES constantly experiences these dreams, possibly explaining her madness.

SPHINX, CULT OF THE: Rel. Main religion of VENTHIR, appearing between -1 and 10 RM in the wake of the appearance of the SPHINX HETEPHERES in what would later become the city of HETEPHEROPOLIS. Following her cessation to the KORACHANI EMPIRE in 361 RM, her cult became assimilated by the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE (it's leaders knowing that they could not quell the cult's fanatical worship in the region), and by c. 380 RM the cults tenets became corrupted, Hetepheres becoming known as a prophetess of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR.

In the years following the SUNDERING OF THE KORACHANI EMPIRE in 3705 RM, the Church of the Undying Machine lost much of its power in the region (though Venthir remained an ally to the HIGH-EMPIRE, even after its eventual independence in 3781 RM) and Hetepheres' cult re-established itself as the major faith in the region, maintaining is headquarters in the TEMPLE OF AEVITERNITY, in Hetepheropolis. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

SPHINX, LEGION OF THE: Mil. Org. An order of elite FARASIDS based in VENTHIR, who are loyal to QUEEN HETEPHERES. Their clothing bears her colours and the VENTHIRI CROSS, and sphinx feathers are also a common motif, with some wearing cloaks of such feathers, which are very hard to come by. They are spies, informants, warriors, and agents working across ELYDEN on her behalf, and are indoctrinated at a young age into the CULT OF THE SPHINX, and are often blind to the true ways of the world, instead believing that Hetepheres and Venthir are the pinnacle of truth.

The order originated millennia ago before the presence of the KORACHANI EMPIRE was ever felt in Venthir, and has undergone various changes over the years, even dying out entirely between c. 2100 – 3600 RM. In its earliest incarnation its members were knights entrusted with protecting the queen and her lands. The latest incarnation emerged following the independence of Venthir in 3781 RM and now forms part of a secret police beholden to Queen Hetepheres.

SPHINX OF LZARAKPA, the: Arc. Colossus in the nation of NOAVATUR, on the peninsula of land guarding entrance into the capital city. It dates back to 1321 RM and was built following the naval battle and great tsunami of 1303 RM that led to the official independence of Noavatur from KORACHAN.

SPHINX, PILLAR OF THE: Int. Rel. Arc. Natural red column in the Chapel of the Holy Sword, which is located on a steep hilltop outside the city of MENIAASOS in LAASKHA. It was taken from an ancient temple in the TEMPLAR STATES by knights returning to Laaskha from the EHRENISIAN CRUSADES in c. 2720 RM.

Legends say that the pillar was taken from was a Third AGE temple-complex, and that it carries the memory of SPHINX DREAMS from ancient rituals that were conducted there. The site of the original temple has long since been lost, though some people have reported having visions while standing close to the pillar.

SPHINXES GAZE, the: Soc. A COMING-OF-AGE RITUAL in VENTHIR that takes place in summer where those who turned 16 in the previous year publicly prostrate themselves before a statue of QUEEN HETEPHERES, whose gaze is said to bestow upon them the wisdom that makes them adults. This ritual is binding by law, and those who take part in it are considered adults, with all the responsibilities and expectations that come with it. Very rarely, Queen Hetepheres herself would oversee the ritual in HETEPHEROPOLIS, where the children of powerful nobility would pledge their allegiance to her personally. This has lessened over the years with her growing reclusiveness, and has not been the case for many centuries now.

SPHYNIA: Pol. Arc. One of many ancient basaltic sea forts within the CORAL BARONIES, located on the island of CYNCER just outside the city of CYNCER in the far south west of SOUTHERN SAMMAEA. It is the repository of the old CORAL CROWN, that was encased in glass following the fragmentation of the CORAL KINGDOMS.

SPHYNIA ITRUSH: Sea. Shallow sea in the CORAL BARONIES, off the south western coats of SAMMAEA.

SPHYRNIDONTIS: also 'the Inner Wastes'. Sup. Geo. Expansive arid wasteland dominating the interior of WESTERN SAMMAEA, encompassing some 4,000,000-square miles west of the SAMMAEAN TRIAD mountain-ranges, along the borders between the south of the VESPERTINE LEAGUE and NASTAL (2.), and the north east of BELEGOR, the north of SYNCHTHONITHA, and the north of GRARNEÂST. The region is a counterpart, of sorts, to KHARKHARADONTIS in the east, and is a nightmarish place of harsh winds, caustic dusts and stifling climates – hot and arid in summer and cold and dry in winter. Natural rainfall is uncommon as the majority of the region rests within the rain shadow of the monolithic mountain-ranges of the Sammaean Triad.

SPICE ISLES: Geo. Series of islands off the southern coast of SURUTUR, the largest being HATUR⁽¹⁾. They are famed for their cinnamon production. Most of the islands have had their jungles and forests cut down to make way for cinnamon production, and room where peeled bark can be laid out and dried.

SPICIA: Rvr. Major endorheic river once dominating the NUMINIAN plains in the c of the UMBRA SOKHAR wastes. The river once flowed east for a combined length of 2,800-miles from sources in the north west of the MOLOTH KHAMMOTHUL Mountains before ending in the endorheic lake NUMINIA⁽²⁾ in the north east of the Umbra Sokhar, to the east of the RIPHAEA Mountains.

The river has diminished greatly since c. 2000 RM, due to the drying and redirection of various sources, though it remains in a lesser form in the west of the Umbra Sokhar, where it flows for just under 1,000-miles before reaching its end at the city of KADOTA, where it is dammed.

SPIDER FINGERS: see ARACHNODACTYLY.

SPIDERHAUNT DEPTHS: Geo. System of labyrinthine caves in the lower levels of the PRISON CARCERI. The caverns in this region are known for their thick tangle of web-like growths and gigantic white eyeless spiders that dwell here.

SPINE, BASILICA OF THE: Rel. Str. BASILICA of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE in the city of AGLAIA (2) in c north western Azazem. It is named after the SCEPTRE OF ST. DAGH, an almost 4,000-year-old relic that is made from the spine of one the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR'S most trusted disciples, which has been kept there since 723 RM. It forms a stop along the SHADOW MARCH and is visited by many pilgrims to this day.

SPINE OF FANAGO: Int. Gigantic fossilised serpentine skeleton in the south of IACIO, north of the coast with the SEA OF MIROVEA. Exposed through the waning of the sea, the stone-like bones of the unidentified creature are thought to be some 300-ft. long and have been the source of legends and tales in the region for some centuries.

SPINE OF GERDRUN: Geo. Large escarpment running north to south in the nation of MAENMIST, from the SATAQ Mountains.

SPINE OF MHUADDIZ, the: Int. Ancient fossilised backbone in the c north west of KHARKHARADONTIS, in the territories of the MARKED PALL.

SPINE OF PELASGOS, the: see TEREKOIN.

SPINE OF YISHAKHALL, the: Int. Gigantic fossilised backbone forming a major ridge in the northern face of the HAAGEN Mountains in the west of ANUBIA. The spine measures some 100-miles in length. The only creature that could possibly have possessed a spine that size is a MESOCHTHON.

SPINNERS' TALES: Leg. Folk tales told by women spinning flax into yarn to pass the time in CENTRAL LLACHATUL, particularly AZAZEM, LAASKHA, and SKAROS. These tales were the source of many folk tales that survive to this day in Central Llachatul and the KORACHANI EMPIRE.

SPIRAFIR: Geo. Sup. Str. Floating fortifications in the far east of DANU, overlooking the SEA OF IPERIA. The fortification takes the form of dozens of large octahedron monoliths, colloquially known as GEOLITHS, that float in the air along LEYLINES, around 100-ft. from the surface. They are held together by runes and are of ancient design, possibly dating back to the THIRD AGE.

For miles around the fortifications, the ground is littered with the debris of fallen geoliths from days gone by. The fortress is manned by SHAPER-knights who are able to levitate from geolith to geolith while patrolling the eastern border of their homeland.

SPIRE OF ALLIANCES, the: see AMAR ELET.

SPIRE CITY, the: see SATHAII^(2.).

SPIRE ENGINE, the: His. Tec. Sup. An ancient Technarcane engine rediscovered in the jungles of GIBEAH in 3986 RM by HYRAM ZOARCH, High-Technoclast of the AIWAHAN ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION.

Taking the form of a 60-ft. high inverted funnel-shaped tower of near-calcified intricate machinery, the edifice was relocated to DEOCHAN at great cost, where its secrets – likely dating back to an ancient FOURTH AGE IROTHANI culture – were slowly unravelled over the next decade, granting the Aiwahan Order access to many forbidden technologies that remain out of the hands of the other Orders, and which might be considered heretical to some more fundamentalist thinkers within the EMPIRE.

The Spire was moved to the Order's LANGUE^(1.) in MALICHARICHAN in 3999 RM, and it is believed to remain there to this day, though the Order is incredibly secretive when it comes to the object.

SPIRIT: 1. Int. Myt. Phil. Rel. In the study of mythology and spirituality, the spirit is a divine mote imparted upon MORTALS by THE SHAPER that forms part of the SPIRIT CYCLE. Upon death, the vessel separates from the spirit; the former of which rots, its purpose complete; and the latter of which dwells on in the OTHERWORLD, gestating amongst other spirits of mortals dead and as yet unborn. Through it, morals are able to ascend to an otherworldly state following their death, in which they are reborn upon the MATERIAL PLANE as OTHERWORLDERS – aloof enigmatic beings that have for ages fascinated mortals.

The history of mortals and their relationship with spirits is a long one. The Mortal peoples are corruptions of IMMORTALS(1.) — beings intended to inherit a perfect realm once the DEMIURGES completed their SHAPING OF CREATION. The Demiurge's hubris and continued Shaping after the perfect realm was attained, corrupted the IMMORTAL SEEDS from which the Immortals would eventually be born, ultimately gave birth to MORTALS — imperfect simulacra of what the Immortals were intended to be.

Originally bereft of a spirit, the early mortals struggled to survive in Elyden – their nascent senses assaulted by a chaotic cacophony of stimuli. The Shaper gave them a spirit to help them navigate the imperfect world of Elyden. Originally, this was a physical object that would grow like a large pearl after the death of their mortal vessels – the first SOULSTONES. These soulstones are found today in fossilised form and they are extremely valuable to shapers, acting as unimaginably potent $\underline{FOCI}^{(2)}$ for rituals, or in the construction of potent $\underline{TECHNARCANE}$ engines.

In the SECOND AGE, The Shaper made the soulstones incorporeal, and for the first time a spirit was allowed to transmigrate to the otherworld, whereupon it may one day be reborn as an otherworlder. Those who had died before this great change would not have the opportunity to be reborn. Even after this edict, there have been a few documented cases where the spirit of a dead mortal remains attached to the vessel, growing into a soulstone. These individuals are not thought to be able to reborn as otherworlders, as their spirit is shackled to the Material Plane in the form of a soulstone. This is extremely rare and affect maybe 1 in 5,000,000 souls, though some maintain that it has become more numerous over the past few decades.

It is unknown what criteria, if any, are required for a spirit to be reborn as an otherworlder, though the amount of time following death and rebirth is arbitrary (possibly due to time flowing differently in the otherworld than on the Material Plane), and some otherworlder may be born almost instantaneously after their mortal death, and others may gestate for millennia before being reborn as otherworlder, if at all. See Vol IV: the Afterlife and the Spirit.

All other interpretations of spirits and souls are based on memories of this, corrupted through time and tempered by cultural tendencies into something else. The concept of the spirit has attained differing meanings and values in different cultures:

- 2. Phil. Rel. Soc. In some societies, the spirits of familiar figures (often called ancestral spirits) are revered with a respect and zeal that other cultures would reserve for a deity. This practice also extends to the worship of animals as spirits, where individual animals represent particular ideals. In Temuja, the worship of TUTELARY SPIRITS is common, for instance.
- 3. Phil. Rel. Soc. In other cultures, inanimate objects like stones, mountains, trees and rivers, have been attributed with spirits. This practice is common in SAUA, where all objects, places and creatures are said to have spirits. See Vol IV: the Mythologia Elyden.

SPIRIT CYCLE: Int. Myt. Phil Rel. The cycle of birth, life, death, rebirth and final death that most MORTALS go through, often taking centuries or millennia. The cycle encompasses the entirety of mortal life, and follows the transmigration of its SPIRIT, its gestation within the OTHERWORLD, its eventual rebirth as an OTHERWORLDER, and finally, the otherworlder's fading from existence.

SPIRITDANCING: Mys. Form of MYSTICISM once common across the east of MENISCEA, though which has dwindled over the past centuries with the rise of TECHNARCANA. Today, the practice remains in some rural areas of EIKARTHYEA and CYAE. It is unique in that it allows the performer to establish contact with the OTHERWORLD and SPIRITS^(1.) through the movements of their intricate dance, which is often aided through the use of hallucinogenic drugs. See Vol IV: Other Forms of Mysticism.

SPIRITDANCER: Mys. Rnk. One who practices the mystic tradition of SPIRITDANCING.

SPIRITS' DAY: Rel. Cal. Religious feast celebrated in TEMUJA and, to a lesser extent in SAUA, Spirits' day is the day on which an individual celebrates the day of his patron spirit. Most spirit in the eastern Temujan cultures are associated with a particular day in which special veneration is offered. People born on the day of such a feast celebrate the day every year. This is the closest thing to a birthday in Temuja and Saua.

SPIRITHOLME: Lan. Slang term in the KORACHANI EMPIRE for the nation of SAUA.

SPIRITHOST: Soc. Tec. Longstanding LAASKHAN and VAALKAN practice in which the SPIRIT^(1.) of a felled warrior is trapped on the MATERIAL PLANE, usually within TECHNARCANE armour. When worn and married to a SHAPER sensitive to spirits (such as an ANIMIST), the spirit of the dead warrior possesses them, guiding them to unrivalled feats of bravery in battle.

Other troops would rally around spirithosts, like banner bearers of old, and their deeds would inspire others.

Ancient LAASKHAN warfare revolved around spirithosts, who would serve as champions who performed ritual combat before the opposing armies as a means of settling disputes. The tradition was assimilated by KORACHANI occupiers and incorporated into the empire's military in c. 25 RM, though at this time the practice was incredibly archaic, with no technarcana and simple shaping being used to trap the spirit.

SPIRITHOSTS, TEMPLE OF THE: Rel. Str. Great hall in the east of LAASKHA, about 15-miles north of the capital in BAAYN. The so-called temple is where SPIRITHOSTS are decommissioned and lain to rest, in sepulchre-like warehouses, when they are either too old or damaged. The temple is not a religious place, but is revered by those who maintain the old martial traditions of those who reverse ST. SETHENYN.

SPIRITALKER: Sup. Rnk. Colloquial name for SHAPERS who are able to ASTRALLY PROJECT to the OTHERWORLD and communicate, through various means, with SPIRITS and unborn OTHERWORLDERS.

SPLENDOR SOLIS: Mys. Arc. Transcendental monolithic statue in the c north east of GNOTH, to the east of the DOLMEN Mountains. It shows the mythic ideals of GNOTHI MYSTICISM, with Beta killing Alpha. It is a place of pilgrimage where Gnothi scholars, mystics and contemplatives travel to in order to meditate.

Many historians and architects claim it should be listed as one of the WONDERS OF THE ANCIENT WORLD.

SPLINTERED FOREST, the: see DHERKAZ^(1.).

SPONDYLA: also 'Dragon's Spine'. Geo. Mountainous region in the c of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of SYRTIS⁽¹⁾. Renowned for its jagged ridges and the so-called Drakemount peak, it acts as a border between the City-kingdoms of ALAMUT and Syrtis.

SPRAWL, the: Lan. KORACHANI slang, referring to its largest cities.

SPRING OF RACHANAEL, the: Soc. Pol. Rel. Term used to refer to the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR'S ritual of indoctrination of close followers (offspring, lieutenants etc) within his cult of personality in the early centuries of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, which included many of his CHOSEN ONES.

It is thought that the 'spring' mentioned in the ritual's is a reference to a specific ATRAMENTAL LEY or LACUNA where the ritual took place. The location is now unknown, forgotten centuries ago after the last of Malichar's Chosen was indoctrinated.

SPURIA: Sec. Small city in the c of RHAMIA, forming a part of the GREY ROAD (Pop. 15,500).

SPURINA: (D. 2866 RM) Rel. VÂRRAN heretic executed by the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE for publishing a series of blasphemous and treasonous pamphlets between 2854 – 2866 RM that secretly became known as the GOSPELS OF SPURINA. This heretical propaganda espoused the history of the DEMIURGES and sought to disseminate it to the laity. They were banned and every instance of one found was burnt, with the person in possession of it tortured and killed. Despite the efforts of the church, the pamphlets were responsible for bringing knowledge of the Demiurges to the masses, which took centuries to nullify.

SRA DHAP: Set. Coastal settlement in the east of CHEIRA. It is known for its catamaran manufacture (Pop. c. 10,000).

SRAHASHAR: Set. City in the west of TARTAK (Pop. c. 18,000).

SRIAKIA: Set. Conurbation made up of six SOULSTONE mines surrounding a fortified settlement in the east of the TEMPLAR STATES, in the c north of the region of TRISKETHIA (Pop. c. 5,800).

SRIQDA: Set. Major inland city in the c south of ARERAQTH (Pop. c. 1,050,000).

SSAPHA: Rvr. Tributary of the river BOSTA in the east of KORACHAN, giving its name to the city of SSAPHACHAN.

SSAPHACHAN: Set. City that arose around the BASILICA OF THE SNAKE in KORACHAN in the latter days of the FIFTH AGE (Pop. c. 35,400).

SSAT YOD: Geo. Strange hollow conical mounds in the TOMB OF THE GODS, most broken, their shattered shells littering the ground. A few shards float above the structures. Within, the mounds are filled with corpses of humanoid creatures.

SSAV: Geo. Region in Hoggotha Isz known for its many reptiles.

ST. AALISSA: f. Rel. Per. (B. 1274 – D. 1201 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. Born in a small town in LAASKHA, she was canonised in 1533 RM. She is the patron saint of the martyred and the unjustly accused.

ST. ACHETUNA: f. Rel. Per. (B. 1903 – D. 1955) Saint of the Three Churches of the Undying Machine. Born in Karakhas, she was instrumental in rallying many civilians and work-slaves to the defence of the city of Sangatta in 1955 RM against attacks from barbarians from the south. She was martyred and was canonised in 2156 RM. She is now a patron saint to warriors and especially conscripts.

ST. ADEREN: see BISHOP ADEREN ON BASSORAN.

ST. AGAR: m. Rel. Per. (D. 792 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. He is remembered today as dying under the ARCH OF THE BLESSED along the MARTYR'S ROAD during a PILGRIMAGE to the SEPULCHRAL PALACE. He was canonised in 1103 RM and has since become a patron to those suffering from ATRAMENTAL AILMENTS.

ST. AGAR'S ROT: Sup. Med. Debilitating ATRAMENTAL AILMENT that may be contracted by prolonged exposure to fecund regions of ATRAMENTAL CORRUPTION, resulting in a rapid deterioration of the body. The ailment is characterised by a progression of symptoms, usually beginning with a loss of sense of touch, followed by a tingling of extremities. The ailment can be treated whilst symptoms are in these two stages, though further progression is difficult to cure, usually leading to death within a few months. If allowed to progress, the next symptom is a loss of strength in hands, arms and legs, with the eventual inability to walk or manipulate objects. Lesions then appear on the affected limbs, worsening into open wounds that emanate a foul smell. These wounds are resistant to treatment and continue to fester, attracting parasites such as flies and mosquitoes. The latter stage of infection results in black puslike substance accumulating around the wound that indicates organ failure. The appearance of this pus typically signals death within 48-hours and is highly infectious through touch or ingestion.

The disease is named after a PILGRIM who died in 792 RM while undertaking the SHADOW MARCH, whose death was one of the first widely-recorded instances of the rot, which led to further study and eventually a treatment. See Vol II: Diseases and Illnesses.

ST. AGYNES: 1. f. Rel. Per. (D. c. 620 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES

OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. Born in AZAZEM, she was canonised in 792

RM, after which she became patron to its people. Her apparently incorruptible body is lain to rest in the crypt of the THREEFOLD CHURCH in SAPROCHAN, her original home.

2. Set. Major city in south east of AZAZEM. It is a major industrial centre in the region, with many manufactories and warehouses lining the southern banks of lake ZEMEN (Pop. c. 420,000).

ST. AGYNES'S CLOCK: Alc. Obj. Str. Tower clock in the city of ST. AGYNES(2) in the east of AZAZEM, known for its intricate mechanism and five disparate dials, the purpose of which remain unknown to this day, over 1,100 years after it was made. It is named after its purported creator, the so-called ALCHEMIST OF ST. AGYNES, an ancient polymath of local infamy, who was killed in 2877 as a heretic. Opinions as to the purpose of the clock are varied ranging wildly from the outrageous (a countdown to the rebirth of ancient deities), the mundane (an astronomical clock) and everything in between.

ST. ALIT: f. Rel. Per. (B. 2981 – D. 3013 RM) Saint of the ALMAGESTI TEMPLE. She fought against KORACHAN in the WAR OF THE ARTIFEXES, and died in battle in the city of ETUN. She was one of the first saints canonised by the Almagesti Temple after ALMAGEST gained independence. She is now the patron saint of Almagest.

ST. AMALINDA: f. Rel. Per. (B. 1091 – D. 1134 RM) Saint of the CHURCH OF THE VOLUTE. Born in NAARETH, she became a preacher, and was canonised in 1973 RM by the Church of the Volute. She wrote the BOOK OF LAMENTATIONS, describing her visions, which have since become important parts of the Church of the Volute.

ST. AND: 1. m. Rel. Per. (D. c. 550 RM) Saint of the Three Churches of The Undying Machine. He is a Venthiri saint, and patron of ascetics.

2. Mil. Str. Fortified port established by the Church of the Undying Machine on the island of Rohdin in the south of the Sea of Orrida in 2535 RM as part of the Ehrenisian Crusades. The port was used well into the attempted Korachani colonisation of the Ehrenisian Coast following the crusade, and was finally abandoned in 2782 RM. It remains today, ruined, some miles from the present coastline.

ST. AND'S PEAK: Geo. Highest peak of the SHANA Highlands^(2,) in the east of VENTHIR.

ST. ANESTAN: m. Rel. Per. (D. c. 1420 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES
OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. A mercenary beholden to the state of KORACHAN, he performed many good deeds, spreading the word of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE and establishing martial traditions rooted in Korachani tradition in distant lands, many of which remain in place to this day. He is a patron to students of martial arts and soldiers.

ST. ANESTAN'S INSTITUTE OF MARTIAL STUDIES: Mar. Org. Martial training academy in the city of KORACHAN, located within an old star fort that once formed part of the old city's outer wall, but which has since become enveloped by buildings.

The institute teaches various styles of fighting – practical, combat, archaic, and ritual, amongst others. Trainees include PATRICIANS, FREEMEN, and members of the military. It is named after ST. ANESTAN, a patron to soldiers, mercenaries and others of a martial bent.

ST. AREVIK: m. Rel. Per. (D. 1113 RM) Saint of the ALMAGESTI TEMPLE, and earlier, the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. He was known as a lover of the sun and decried the empire's singular use of the ATRAMENTA and distrust of the FIRMAMENT. He was adopted in c. 3000 RM as the figurehead of a short-lived KORACHANI sun-cult that originated in ALMAGEST.

Following the WAR OF THE ARTIFEXES, the saint was excommunicated from the Church of the Undying Machine, though remained a part of the Almagesti Temple. His followers were persecuted in the empire and many fled into Almagest, settling in Almagesti-held SKAROS.

He was re-canonised in Korachan in 3307 RM following fears that a resurgence in underground cults dedicated to him might sway people from the church.

ST. ASPIRIA: 1. f. Rel. Per. (D. 3612 RM) Saint of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, and the REFORMED CHURCH OF SARASTRO. VENTHIRI PATRICIAN, saint and patron of Nobles in VENTHIR. In 3601 RM she gave birth to conjoined twins (named Rimmon and Mammon), who died soon after birth. Their body is now located in the TEMPLE OF PERGAMOS in PELASGOS, and is known as the RELIC OF ST. ASPIRA.

2. Geo. Island forming a part of the LABASHI^(2.) chain, off the coast of SABAEA. It is the largest island in the chain and was the first to be 'discovered' and named by the explorer BOHMIUS in 1525 RM.

ST. ASSUAN: m. Rel. Per. (D. c. 1810 RM) Saint of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, the REFORMED CHURCH OF SARASTRO, and the ALMAGESTI TEMPLE. He was an early EXOCRINE who travelled far east into MENISCEA, spreading the word of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. Though he had little permanent successes he is remembered now as the patron saint of Meniscea.

- ST. ASTREG: m. Rel. Per. (D. 2945 RM) Saint of the Three Churches OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. He is a patron saint of HOUSE MELANA.
- ST. ATHANAS: m. Rel. Per. (D. 1783 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES

 OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. He is now a patron saint of the MORTUARY
 CULT, where he is venerated with near-heretical passion by the cultists.
- ST. AZSALAS: f. Rel. Per. (D. 1933 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. She was an EXOCRINE who spent her days travelling with PETITIONERS OF THE MACHINE, and collecting religious texts during her travels. She died of AEPATHY, and was canonised in 2136 RM. She is now the patron saint of librarians.
- ST. BAEL: m. Rel. Per. (B. 2905 D. 2964 RM) Saint of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, and the REFORMED CHURCH OF SARASTRO. Known colloquially as 'the Exorcist', St. Bael was a IONIC ENDOCRINE born in ETHRA who travelled across SAMMAEAN KORACHAN, EXORCISING demons. He died in UGOT during an exorcism of a young girl and was canonised in 3121 RM. He has since become a patron to exorcists.
- ST. BARBAS: m. Rel. Per. (D. 3288 RM) Saint of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE and the REFORMED CHURCH OF SARASTRO, and patron saint of the city of KAIROR, NÁRTHEL.
- ST. BATHYRTUS: m. Rel. Per. (D. 251 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES

 OF THE UNDYING MACHINE and one of the FOURTEEN APOSTLES of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR. Famed for his longevity (he was supposedly over 300-years old when he died), he became a missionary in 85 RM following Malichar's disappearance, and worked tirelessly to spread word of the nascent CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. He outlived many of his fellow CHOSEN (the so-called SEVEN CHAMPIONS, Fourteen Apostles, and SEVEN-AND-FORTY DISCIPLES of the Archpotentate) and visited their bodies as they lay in state, ensuring their safe return to their homes or final resting places, oftentimes taking parts of them as relics.

Despite his unnaturally-long life (which theologians now believe was due to a miracle performed by Malichar following an injury sustained in Laaskha in 14 RM, at which point he likely already 60) he died in PARAIYA before Malichar was reborn as an OTHERWORLDER. His body was embalmed and taken north, where it travelled extensively as a relic carried by pilgrims along the SHADOW MARCH before ending in DEOCHAN, where it was laid to rest in a shrine within a church that was RENAMED IN HIS HONOUR.

Over the years, many of the relics he had collected were re-discovered from around the INNER SEA REGION and taken back to the Church of Bathyrtus, where they now form part of its famed Bronze wall of Lipsanothecae (relics).

ST. BATHYRTUS, CHURCH OF: Int. Rel. Str. Church in the city of DEOCHAN famed across the EMPIRE and wherever the UNDYING MACHINE is worshipped. The interior is gloomy and of lavish opulent design, with dark marble, gold and time-darkened frescoes and paintings covering its walls. The main church is flanked by four side chapels, and one of these in particular (nicknamed the Chapel of the Chosen) is the reason for the church's fame.

The Chapel of the Chosen terminates in a single solid wall of cast bronze, divided into small shrines known as lipsanothecae – nine vertical, by eight horizontal, with only 4 in the lowest row, leaving an empty space between them, in which stands an altar. There are 68 lipsanothecae in all, one for each of the SEVEN CHAMPIONS, FOURTEEN APOSTLES, and SEVEN-AND-FORTY DISCIPLES of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR.

Darkened by millennia of verdigris, the details in the wall may not be immediately apparent but a quick inspection reveals each of the 68 shrines to be a bust surrounded by ornate detailing. Within each bust is a glass space with room for a relic of the corresponding CHOSEN. Many of the lipsanothecae are empty and are unlikely to ever be filled, for the fates of some of the Chosen remain unknown, and of those whose fates are recorded, not all of their bodies were pillaged for relics. Others, such as the incorruptible body of ST. VALENS, are kept elsewhere. Many members of the Church of the Undying Machine have made it their responsibility to retrieve as many of these relics of the Chosen as they can to complete the shrine as much as possible.

The Church is visited by pilgrims, many of whom are members of the clergy, who know the histories of all the men and women represented by the Chapel, and it has even been visited by the Archpotentate himself on various occasions, usually under the cover of darkness, where he can be alone with the relics of his ancient companions.

- ST. BELUS: m. Rel. Per. (D. 777 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. He is a patron of Astronomers.
- ST. BERREA: 1. m. Rel. Per. (D. 2811 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES

 OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. He is an incorruptible saint buried in the TEMPLE OF FILADELFIA martyred in an attack by GODSLAYERS in 2811

 RM.
- 2. fortified port established by the Church of the Undying Machine on the island of Reddin in the south of the Sea of Orrida in 2534 RM in preparation for the Ehrenisian Crusades. The port was used well into the attempted Korachani colonisation of the Ehrenisian Coast following the crusade, and was finally abandoned in 2809 RM. It remains today, ruined, some miles from the present coastline.
- ST. BHEMAH: 1. m. Rel. Per. (D. c. 1070 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. He is a patron saint of VENTHIR, interred in the shrine of HAILIAR in the north west of Venthir.
 - 2. Sea. Bay in the south east of $\underline{\text{VENTHIR}}$, in the south west of the $\underline{\text{SEA OF}}$ VENTHA.
 - 3. Rel. Str. Org. Monastery in the c north of VENTHIR, in the SOUNAR Mountains. Its nuns are devoted to the CULT OF THE SPHINX, and revere the preserved bones of ancient SPHINXES said to be the ancestors of HETEPHERES.
- ST. CARO: m. Rel. Per. (D. c. 950 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. He is a patron saint of surgeons and butchers.
- ST. CARO'S CHARNEL HOUSE: Ind. Str. The largest DROSS production plant in the KORACHANI PENINSULA, it is used to provide dross to the BASTION OF STEEL in KHADON. The bodies of all clerks and menial staff who work in the Bastion are processed and used in the manufacture of the dross, amongst other ingredients.
- ST. CELYDDIA: f. Rel. Per. (B. 2821 D. 2911) Saint of the ALMAGESTI TEMPLE. ALMAGESTI flagellant who was canonized by the Almagesti Temple in 3014 RM and is now a patron to flagellants and self-mutilators across the various different sects of the Church of the Undying Machine around the INNER SEA.
- ST. CHARISSA OF KHADON: f. Rel. Per. (D. 2255 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. A KORACHANI saint from KHADON, she had visions of the UNDYING MACHINE'S plan in 2238 RM and went insane, spending the rest of her life babbling nonsense, though some theosophists interpreted her words as divinely-influenced. She is the patron saint of the insane.
- ST. CHARISSA, SHRINE OF: Rel. Str. Large shrine 7-miles north of KHADON, across the river KHAR. The shrine forms part of the SHADOW MARCH and is the resting place of ST. CHARISSA, a patron to the city of Khadon and the insane. Many who travel the Shadow March seek out the shrine to pray to St. Charissa for their sick.
- ST. CYRA OF THE FLAGELLUM: f. Rel. Per. (D. 1798 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. She was a flagellant who in 1797 undertook the SHADOW MARCH and became a leader of sorts, defending the pilgrims against slaver raids in SAMMAEA, dying when she was betrayed during a parley with the enemy. She was canonised in 2136 RM and became a patron of flagellants and pilgrims.
- ST. CYRAX: 1. (11,370-ft.) Geo. Peak in the north east of ACHERA, in the west of the CHACTHORNYS Mountains.
- 2. f. Rel. Per. (D. 3011 RM) Saint of the Church of the Undying Machine and the Reformed Church of Sarastro. She was martyred in 3011 RM during the War of the Artifexes in the settlement of Racha, in what would later become the small nation of Achera (1.). She was canonised in 3117 RM and would go on to become the patron saint of Achera.

ST. DAGH: m. Rel. Per. (D. 31 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. He was an ONEIROMANCER known for his visions, and in -2 RM he became one of the SEVEN-AND-FORTY DISCIPLES of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR.

His spine, alongside his FARAMON'S NODE, were preserved and encased in resinous substance and turned into a sceptre that was carried by the ARCHBISHOP of AZAZEM for centuries, though in 723 RM the Church recognised it as more vital as a relic, and had the cathedral of AGLAIA⁽²⁾ converted to a BASILICA, where it remains to this day.

Dagh was canonised soon after his death and became a venerated figure in Azazemi worship.

ST. DAGH, SCEPTRE OF: Rel. Obj. Relic of the Three Churches OF THE UNDYING MACHINE housed in the BASILICA OF THE SPINE in AGLAIA⁽²⁾, AZAZEM. It is the preserved spine of ST. DAGH – one of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR'S SEVEN-AND-FORTY DISCIPLES – who was noted as a powerful ONEIROMANCER.

The object was declared a relic by the Church in 723 RM, and the cathedral of Aglaia was converted to a BASILICA to contain the relic, which remains there to this day, attracting many pilgrims from the SHADOW MARCH to this day.

- ST. DELKA: f. Rel. Per. (D. 2510 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. She was canonised in 2731 RM and has since become a patron to mothers and midwives, and is the patron saint of the city of NEKODA.
- ST. DUCAS: see ARCHBISHOP MAGNUS VAMAS MICHAELLOS DUCAS.
- ST. DEMATER: m. Rel. Per. (D. 661 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. Originally from PELASGOS, he is now the patron of the dead.
- ST. DUMIA: 1. m. Rel. Per. (D. c. 336 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES
 OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. Born in AZAZEM, he is now a patron of ropers and caulkers.
 - 2. Geo. Island, part of the LABASHI^(1.) chain, off the coast of SABAEA, 'discovered' and named by the explorer BOHMIUS in 1525 RM.
- ST. DUORA: m. Rel. Per. (D. 2306 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. KORACHANI priest who was drowned. He later became a patron of rivers.
- ST. DYAD: m. Rel. Per. (D. c. 1200 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. He is a patron saint of weaponsmiths and, more recently, gunsmiths.
- ST. EARTA: f. Rel. Per. (D. 999 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. Martyr who died in ASOKA in SKAROS and whose tomb is still visited to this day as part of THE SHADOW MARCH. She was immortalised by the sculpture THE LAMENT OF ST. EARTA, by the artist AUXITUS BARADAS, following her canonisation in 1333 RM.
- ST. EIONA: f. Rel. Per. (D. c. 1200 RM) Saint of the CHILD-PRINCE in AHRISHEN. She received a vision near a lake of the Child-prince decades before his birth. The LAKE was later named after her.
- ST. ELMAR: 1. m. Rel. Per. (D. 1293 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. He was canonised in 1533 RM and has since become the patron saint of scapegoats, and those falsely attacked.
- 2. Set. Settlement in the north east of \underline{AZAZEM} , in the backwards $\underline{NARAMISH\ TERRITORIES}$. Its main industry is agriculture (Pop. c. 6,300).
- ST. ERASHUL: m. Rel. Per. (D. 999 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. SHAPER who prophesized the rebirth of the DEMIURGE RACHANAEL a century before the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR found him. He is now the patron saint of prophets.
- ST. ESPERION: m. Rel. Per. (D. 819 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF
 THE UNDYING MACHINE. He was an EXOCRINE and travelled extensively, spreading word of the KORACHANI church, while extensively cataloguing his discoveries.

His writings formed the basis of the first official edition of the ENCYCLOPAEDIA ELYDEN, which was released in 848 RM, and he has since become a patron to scholars and researchers. He was canonised in 1022 RM.

ST. FALLASCHI: m. Rel. Per. (D. c. 900 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES
OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. Born in RHAMIA to KORACHANI parents, he was canonised in 1022 RM, and has since become a patron to hunters and those born in foreign lands.

- ST. FATUH: 1. m. Rel. Per. (D. 1203 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. Born in the nation of KORACHAN, he was a sailor who worked closely with exocrines, spreading work of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE to distant lands. He was canonised in 1333 RM, and has since become a patron of sailmakers.
- 2. Geo. Island in the KRYMEAN SEA, discovered and named by the explorer BOHMIUS in 1524 RM.
- ST. FELLVALD: m. Rel. Per. (D. 23 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. He was a missionary assigned to KORACHANI forces marching west against the nation of SKAROS. He died to a rogue rifle shot in the battlefield outside the city of SKAROSIA after the ceasefire was announced following the victory against Skarosian troops. He was later canonised and became a patron to the unlucky and Skaros.
- ST. FELLVALD'S FOREST: For. Small woodland in the far north west of SKAROS, north of the STRAIT OF SKAROS, along the border with CISNERIA. Its trees have, since before the coming of mortals to the region in the early FIFTH AGE, been crooked and grey, their leaves sickly, their fruit bitter. It is named after ST. FELLVALD, the patron saint of Skaros, who never set foot in the region.
- ST. FIRDAUS: m. Rel. Per. (D. 3227 RM) Saint of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, and the REFORMED CHURCH OF SARASTRO. He was a lover of the natural world and pitied its death at the hands of industry. He has since become a patron to those who similarly love ELYDEN, though his followers have come to include loggers and AGISTERS, pray to him as a saint of the UNDYING MACHINE, for safe work within the industry. His birthplace is thought to be somewhere in the south of AZAZEM, and his remains are kept in the shrine of SUAMASANCT.

Though his origins are thought to lie in the pagan myths of lands west and north of $\underline{KORACHAN}$, there is a historical figure who bore the name and was canonised in 3513 RM.

- ST. FURCAS: f. Rel. Per. (D. 2881 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. She was killed by KARAKHASID nationals while working as a missionary of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE in the rural south. Her body was quartered at a crossroads, with the parts scattered unceremoniously across the nation. As KORACHANI influence in the nation grew she became a patron to followers of the UNDYING MACHINE in of the nation, later spreading throughout the empire as a patron of crossroads and travellers. She was canonised in 3121 RM.
- ST. GAEAL: m. Rel. Per. Saint of the Three Churches of the Undying Machine. He originated as the Eponymous Scion who was worshipped in corrupted form by late Fourth Age and early Fifth Age people, who worshipped him as an avatar of the savage aspect of the natural world. His worship was slowly culled following the growth of the Korachani Empire, and his image was also appropriated by the Church of the Undying Machine, which turned him into an imperial saint by c. 150 RM

Today he is a patron saint of animals and those who live in the wild.

- ST. GERBAH: m. Rel. Per. (D. c. 940 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. Born in LAASKHA, he spent his early years as a sailor who eventually became an explorer in c. 920 RM, leading expeditions west, beyond the SEA OF SERPENTS, bringing word of the UNDYING MACHINE to foreign lands. Today he is a patron saint of cartographers.
- ST. GOBHAN: m. Rel. Per. (D. c. 1720 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES
 OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. A SKAROSIAN inventor, he was persecuted by church radicals, and killed for his futurist beliefs. He was later canonised in 2136 RM, and is now a patron of technologists.
- ST. GODRUH: m. Rel. Per. (D. 2783 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. He spent the first 20-years of his life as a HELOT in a work house in northern AZAZEM, and bought his freedom, before going to seminary. Within 10 years he was a bishop in Azazem and rose to rank of ARCHBISHOP by 2769 RM. He was canonised for his work in spreading the word of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE to the masses in a manner everyone can understand, and later became patron to helots.

- ST. GUTHEN: m. Rel. Per. (D. c. 1720 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES
 OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. Created as an act of propaganda by the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE to help eradicate the influence of the deity GUTHEN from lands subjugated in MHAROKK, between c. 920
 1000 RM. He has since become a patron saint of the weak.
- ST. HALECHEN: m. Mus. Rel. Per. (B. 680 D. 723 RM) Saint of the Three Churches of the Undying Machine. Born in Pelasgos, he was a campanologist, becoming the most prestigious Bell-ringer in the Korachani empire, mobbing to Khadon in 699 RM. He was a famed bellringer and campanologist of the Bastion of Steel and was killed defending the bastion from an infiltration attempt by what may have been an assassin. He was later Canonised, becoming a patron of bell-ringers and campanologists.

There is rivalry between his followers and those of ST. MARAD OF THE BRONZE, with bell-ringing contests taking place on imperial feasts between rival churches.

- ST. HARMACHIS: 1. Geo. Island in the east of the SEA OF NARAMOR, off the western coast of the PREPOTENCY OF THREPHO. It was 'discovered' and named by the explorer SIPARIS in 1435 RM.
 - 2. m. Rel. Per. (D. c. 650 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. He is a patron saint of seafarers.
- ST. HERODEUS: m. Rel. Per. (D. 2995 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES
 OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. KORACHANI cenobite canonised in 3326
 RM for his work in spreading the word of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. He is the patron saint to CENOBITES, and many cenobite chapels across the empire are named in his honour.
- ST. HERODEUS, CHURCH OF: Rel. Str. Small church and accompanying priory of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE situated in an area of the HOLY PRECINCT that is dense with places of worship. The priory acts as a hostel and place of study to CENOBITES, who train there, and who also convalesce there following their return from ATRAMENTALLY CORRUPTED lands. It is also home to newly-discovered UNTOUCHABLES, who are indoctrinated into the ways of the cenobites and INCORRUPTIBLES prior to their dissemination across lands where the Church of the Undying Machine holds sway.
- ST. HEZEDIA: f. Rel. Per. (D. 1258 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. Born in VÂRR and discarded by her mother into an ORPHANAGE, she spent her life helping orphans to grow up in a system that cared little for them. She was canonised in 1333 RM and went on to become a saint of orphans.
- ST. HOVIK: 1. m. Rel. Per. (B. 3462 3494 RM) Saint of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE and the REFORMED CHURCH OF SARASTRO. He was a fervent worshipper of the Undying Machine who spent his adult life in the crusading in the EGRET CRUSADES, where he died. He was canonised in 3575 RM and became a saint of crusaders.
 - 2. Mil. Str. Fort on the island of MALETH.
- ST. ICASITHEA: (D. 1117 RM) Rel. Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. INDENTURED WORKER who spent her days in a MANUFACTORY. She received visions of the UNDYING MACHINE in 1113 RM and became regarded as a prophet, later being canonised, and becoming a patron to manufactory workers.
- ST. IDEAS: (D. 3144 RM) Rel. Saint of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, and the REFORMED CHURCH OF SARASTRO. He is buried in the city of ESEA in the southern LIDEA.
- ST. ILLID: (D. 2281 RM) Rel. Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. Born in the CITY OF ALMAGEST, he was a devout worshipper of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE and died of AEPATHY. He is now a patron of businessmen and PATRICIANS.
- ST. INDACHAL: (B. 2073 D. 2118 RM) Rel. Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. Born in NYARDOR, he became a SECTARIAN at a young age and spent his life working with the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, eventually founding the Nyardor Almshouse in 2107 RM, which cared for HELOTS and SLAVES whose bodies were broken after years of work in the city's manufactories of the city.

During his life, he was accused by various manufactories of promoting apathy amongst their workers. He was eventually killed by accident during an argument with such a manufactory manager. He was mourned by most helots in the city and the almshouse he had founded was renamed in his honour in in 2120 RM, and he was canonised in 2136 RM, after which his remains were moved to a reliquery within a new chapel that was constructed beside the almshouse in 2173 RM. He has since become a patron to helots, and AZAZEMI helots in particular consider him as a patron.

The reliquary was removed from the chapel in 3821 RM amid fears of imminent flooding, which unfortunately realised months later, destroying the chapel and badly damaging the almshouse. Three years later the reliquary was fitted to a decommissioned military landship that was sanctified for use as a mobile chapel known as the TABERNACLE OF ST. INDACHAL.

- ST. ININAR: (D. c. 400 RM) Rel. Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. KORACHANI polymath and patron saint of monks and scholars.
- ST. ISADARA: (D. 3644 RM) Rel. Saint of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, and the REFORMED CHURCH OF SARASTRO. A Laaskhan warrior who was martyred during a CRUSADE against the east. Her body, deemed incorruptible by the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE in a council held in 3728 RM, is interred within the TEMPLE OF ST. ISADARA in the c-south east of SKAROS.
- ST. ISADARA, TEMPLE OF: Rel. Str. Temple in the c-south east SKAROS dedicated to the imperial ST. ISADARA, whose incorruptible body is interred within. It forms a part of THE SHADOW MARCH.
- ST. JAGGANAUTH: 1. Rel. Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. Born in SARASTRO, he is now a patron saint of merchants.
- 2. Rel. Str. Org. Religious monastery in the far north of SARASTRO, in the southern-face of the JAHAL Mountains. Dedicated to the REFORMED CHURCH OF SARASTRO. It keeps two cannonballs in its reliquaries trophies from a siege against VENTHIRI troops that it withstood for months.
- ST. JERUSH: 1. M. Rel. Per. (D. 3151 RM) Saint of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. Born in LYRIDIA to KORACHANI parents, he travelled extensively across the KORACHANI EMPIRE as a preacher and was responsible for the Miracle of ASSITISI, which took place in the north west of Korachan in 3137 RM, where he healed three of his followers of AEPATHY simply by washing their lesions with water from the nearby river RHAE. He was canonised in c. 3210 RM following an investigation by the Church of the Undying Machine and a SANCTUARY established on the site that now attracts pilgrims.

He is now a patron of healers and of LYRIDIA DHAI.

- 2. Sea. Bay forming the north eastern part of the SEA OF PROPONTIS, along northern LYRIDIA DHAI and south western AHRISHEN.
- ST. JOSTAN: m. (D. c. 1320 RM) Rel. Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. He was an ALMAGESTI missionary who died in the OLTHARUN Mountains in the north of what is today VALBAR. while proselytising the word of the Undying Machine to the KEVERAN natives. He was canonised in 1333 RM, though is largely forgotten outside of Almagest.
- ST. KATHAREN: Rel. Per. Saint of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. An unidentified saint mentioned by name on a bronze inscription on an ANCIENT MACHINE half-buried in the ZOHELETHI BASIN in the east of PARTHIS.
- ST. KEMAL: m. Rel. Per. (D. 627 RM) A NAARETHI native who joined the party of the explorer NAVAH BERDEN when he reached Naareth in 597 RM. She soon converted from her native faith to the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE and became an EXOCRINE, spreading word of the UNDYING MACHINE to foreign lands. She remained in KZANADEM, establishing a small church dedicated to the Undying Machine, which preceded the establishment of the Korachani colony of Noavatur there centuries later.
- ST. KENTEON: m. Rel. Per. (D. c. 1200 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. He is the patron saint of LLACHATUL.
- ST. KINFAR: m. Rel. Per. (D. 944 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. Kinfar was a KORACHANI EXOCRINE who in

- 925 RM brought the Church of the Undying Machine to the city of Pachomia. The city would in 1862 RM become the centre of the imperial faith in the continent of Sammaea. He was canonised in 1103 RM following his death, his tomb in the cathedral of Pachomia becoming a place of pilgrimage to those undertaking The Shadow March.
- ST. KIREA: f. Rel. Per. (D. 351 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. She was an abbess in HIALIA when the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR returned to Korachan following his ITINERARY, and she founded the order of the BRIDES OF MALICHAR in 330 RM after receiving prophetic visions of the Archpotentate's return to life. She was canonised in 792 RM and is now a patron saint of nuns and other women serving in the Three Churches of the Undying Machine.
- ST. KYTHIA: 1. f. Rel. Per. (B. c. 600 D. c. 630 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. KORACHANI saint, and patron of healers and nurses, originating in the city of PELASGOS as a young woman who could heal the sick without recourse to shaping. She was canonised in the COUNCIL OF OCTIRA in 1136 RM.
- 2. Med. Str. Naval hospital on the isle of MALETH in the INNER SEA. It is known for its Great Ward a half-mile-long ward with high vaulted ceilings and large open windows to encourage the movement of clean air to help with convalescing patients. Its operating theatres and testing rooms are located deep underground, with all manner of ESSENTIAL SALTS and mortal fleshmatter stored in its deep freezers.
- ST. LAMETER: 1. Geo. Island in the east of the SEA OF NARAMOR, off the western coast of the PREPOTENCY OF THREPHO. It was 'discovered' and named by the explorer SIPARON in 1435 RM.
- 2. m. Rel. Per. (D. 932 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. Patron saint of Pelasgos, whose reverence is most common around the island south to the BROWN SEA. He became a missionary in c. 550 RM, spreading work of the machine around the islands of THE INNER SEA, before dying on the isle of MALETH in 932 RM, the Atramental afflictions slowly acquired through years of travel finally getting the better of him. His missionary work served to bring the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE to many Pelasgosi islands around the BROWN WATERS. He was canonized in 1111 RM.
- ST. LAQUAN: 1. Set. Small city in the c north west of AHRISHEN, controlling the DOIDAN canal^(2,) (Pop. c. 13,000).
 - 2. m. Rel. Per. Saint of the SKY LORD, revered in AHRISHEN.
- ST. LEKUINA: 1. Lak. Lake in the north of VÂRR, along the confluence of the river LEKUINA and ICHORIA, south of the VARRACHON Mountain.
 2. f. Rel. Per. (b. 2431 d. 2459 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. She was martyred in VÂRR in 2459 MR and is now the patron of those travelling over water or those drowned.
- ST. LIVYATHAN: x. Rel. Per. (D. 1876 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES
 OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. They were born in PELASGOS and did. *
- ST. LUCIA: 1. m. Rel. Per. (D. 1374 RM) Rel. Saint of the THREE CHURCHES
 OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. KORACHANI saint, and patron of ropers.
- 2. Sea. Bay in the west of KORACHAN.
- 3. Set. Settlement in the east of KORACHAN. It is considered a place of healing by the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, which controls a cave with healing spring waters that many pilgrims visit.

The water is bottled and sold by the church across the empire to those who would pay the price (Pop. c. 10,000).

ST. LURAC OF ONORTI: m. Rel. Per. (D. 3152 RM) Saint of the ALMAGESTI TEMPLE. Born the second son of a PATRICIAN HOUSE (its details now lost) in the city of ONORTI, he was sent to military school, where he trained for a role as a commanding officer. He was stationed in the far north east of the MARMARA Massif, where he also served as spiritual guide to his troops. He died in action defending the fortress against native dissidents, where he kept his men's spirits up during the siege. He was the last to fall, defending a chapel dying in action during a last stand in which the fortress was lost.

He was canonised in 3221 RM and is now a patron to soldiers and other professional warriors in ALMAGEST.

ST. LURAC'S BASTIONS: Arc. Flo. Part of the expansive lines of fortifications that cradle the city of ALMAGEST, named ST. LURAC of

- ONORTI. The bastions are now home to the MESANIN GOLIATH, a millennia-old GIANT FICUS that has become a part of the city's heritage.
- ST. MADDOCK: m. Rel. Per. (D. 2256 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES
 OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. Archbishop of ALMAGEST between 2201 – 2256 RM, who was canonised in 2319 RM. He is now the patron saint of Almagest.
- ST. MALICHAR: m. Rel. Per. (B. -41 D. 133 rB 231 RM) Saint of the Three Churches of the Undying Machine. Following his rebirth as an Otherworlder and subsequent unification of the nations around the Inner Sea, the Archpotentate Malichar was canonised in 331 RM, becoming a saint of the church he was already a figurehead of. Since the fracturing of the Korachani empire, his status within the Reformed Church of Sarastro, and the Almagesti Temple has changed, though he remains an important figure.
- ST. MALICHAR, BELL OF: Rel. Obj. Large bell located in the main belfry of the CATHEDRAL OF ST. MALICHAR in KHADON. The bell was blessed by the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR in 341 RM and since then various miraculous events and properties have been attributed to it, most well-known of which is the deep echoing sound that it makes when it is rung. The sound was not evident until the blessing of the bell and it can be heard for miles around, across the entirety of the city and beyond, acting as a beacon of sorts. Other miracles attributed to the bell include The Bell's Lament: where the bell rings of its own accord, creating an eerie, mournful melody that echoes through the city, foretelling significant events across the empire; and the Bell's Judgment: where the bell is said to toll louder and more thunderously in the presence of deceit or malevolence, as if passing judgment on the intentions of those nearby.
- ST. MALICHAR, CATHEDRAL OF: Rel. Str. CATHEDRAL of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, located in the city of KORACHAN. It is home to the BELL OF ST. MALICHAR, which has been attributed with miraculous properties since it was blessed by the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR in 341 RM.
- ST. MALICHAR RELINQUISHED: Art. Obj. Famed statue of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR in white marble. He stands around 20-ft tall and is sculpted in meticulous detail, so-much so that those who witness it are mesmerised by the authenticity of its form. It depicting as a classical warrior, standing triumphant over the bodies of his foes. In one hand he holds the sword TARTARUCH in its scabbard, and is presenting it to the people, while his right arm reaches for the SCEPTRE OF INCHION, as it is presented to him by a nameless patrician.

It was commissioned following his return to KHADON in 331 RM as an OTHERWORLDER and was completed in 339 RM and has since become famous across the empire, attracting visitors to this day. The gesture symbolised his return to power (and life) and an end to his crusading (the presenting of the sword to the people), indicating his readiness to rule as Archpotentate (accepting the sceptre) – the Archpotentate is returned!

The statue was originally placed in a plaza outside the BASTION OF STEEL in Khadon, but was later moved within the edifice in 864 RM. Following public outcry at the removal of the beloved statue from public access it was later moved within an open shrine that was tailor-made to house it in 903 RM where it has remained ever since.

- ST. MALICHAR RESURRECTED, BASILICA OF: Rel. Str. BASILICA of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE in AGLAIA (2-), in AZAZEM. It was the home of the RHODANNE HEART relic between 822 and 1004 RM, when it went missing for many years.
- ST. MARUT: m. Rel. Phil. Per. (D. 3298 RM) A prominent member of the WAY OF MEGILLAR, who received a vision of a cavern, and in 3298 RM descended into it, knowing it would be his end. He was canonised as a martyr of the philosophy and the cavern would later go on to be known as the PIT OF ST. MARUT.
- ST. MELARHUR: m. Rel. Per. (D. 211 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES
 OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. Mighty VAALKAN warrior, whose skeleton is displayed in open plate armour within a temple in the now-ruined city of ASTH along THE SHADOW MARCH, east of BELL OF OMENS. He was a mighty warrior who fought against CALEGLAASI barbarians alongside church troops. He is considered a patron of the dead, especially martyrs.

- ST. MARAD OF THE BRONZE: m. Rel. Per. (D. 211 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE from PELASGOS. He is a patron of campanologists and church caretakers, and there is rivalry between his followers and those of St. Halechen, with bell-ringing contests taking place on imperial feasts between rival churches.
- ST. MARAD'S CALL: Soc. Common term in the HIGH and LOW-EMPIRES for a particular morning peal sounded from church towers across the TWIN EMPIRES calling the faithful to prayer.
- ST. MASTEMA: 1. m. Rel. Phil. Per. (D. 3471 RM) Saint of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. She was a church missionary spent many years doing work in the WOLD region of WESTERN SAMMAEA before being killed by hostile natives. She was quartered and her limbs were tossed into the SEA OF ABRAXA^(1,1), while her head and torso were displayed outside the fortified gateway into the city of SORENIEN as a deterrent to others. She was canonised in 3513 RM and became a patron to those who are unjust targets of hostility and scapegoats.
 - 2. Mil. Str. Heptagonal island sea fort 105-miles off the western coast of KORACHAN. It was constructed in c. 3800 RM on a tiny rock that was revealed by waning sea levels, and is known for its 20-ft. thick reinforced concrete iron-clad walls. It is shaped like a seven-sided ring with a circular interior courtyard in which stands a low tower with viewing ports that command an unparalleled view of the surrounding waters.

The outer ring of walls has some rooms built within it, but most of the structures are within the tower or deep below the sea level, and accessed by ladders and spiral stairs. These lower rooms include ammo depots and other stores. The tower houses a 13.7" battery gun, identical to the primary weapons on a PATRIARCH^(2.) class KORACHANI WARSHIP, and the outer donut has various smaller artillery on it.

It was the pet project of one of the members of THE SEVEN and, despite being envisioned as a vital fortification, its guns have thus far never been fired in anger, though it remains garrisoned to this day.

- ST. MITRA: Rel. Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, created by ICONOCLASTS^(1,) early in the vassalage of PELASGOS to KORACHAN as a form of propaganda designed to weaken the hold of the MITRAN faith that was practices by Pelasgosi people in the early years of IMPERIAL subjugation there. The Church deemed St. Mitra a companion of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR in his earlier travels and a chosen disciple of the UNDYING MACHINE.
- ST. NAGGATH: m. Rel. Per. (D. 2323 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. He is the patron saint of colliers.
- ST. NANAEL: m. Rel. Art. Per. (B. 2712 D. 2754) Rel. Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. Born in the city of DEOCHAN, he spent much of his life saving pieces of art, eventually founding a repository and library in lower Deochan where damaged pieces of art paintings, statues, manuscripts could be preserved, restored, or simply safely kept the city. He is now a patron saint to the arts and culture, and is also one of several well-regarded saints in the city.
- ST. NEMESIS: Rel. Saint of the Three Churches of the Undying Machine. Living saint with a long history in the Korachan Empire. Originating in the early decades of the rise of the empire, Nemesis was an appropriated Pre-IMPERIAL legend who was turned by propagandists into an ally of the Archpotentate Malichar who helped him unite the seven tribes under his banner.

The title was adopted by one of Malichar's true lieutenants in 37 RM until his death in 62 RM, after which he was elevated to a saint.

It is believed by imperial ASTROLOGERS that he was reborn as an OTHERWORLDER in 666 RM whose identity was finally confirmed and traced in 687 RM. After this, the otherworlder was used in imperial propaganda as a living saint, and remains a powerful tool of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE to this day.

- ST. NETHROR: m. Rel. Per. (D. 889 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. An ancient PELASGOSI theosophist whose beliefs popularised and eventually led to the assimilation of the ancient pagan religious being TOPHAMAEL within the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. He was canonised in 1333 RM.
- ST. NOMELA: 1. Geo. Valley in c west of ALMAGEST, along the course of the river DANUR, named after St. Nomela, who wandered there in c. 3455 RM.

- 2. m. Rel. Per. (B. 3428 D. 3469 RM) Saint of the ALMAGESTI TEMPLE. ALMAGESTI saint from the city of MARKAS, spent ten years wandering the ARTUL AKAEL, contracting AEPATHY before dying. She was canonised in 3560 RM, and the area of her wandering was named after her. He has since become the patron of wanderers and itinerants.
- ST. OPILLIO: m. Rel. Per. (B. 1704 D. 1802 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. He was archbishop of LIDEA between 1744 1802 RM and is now the patron of Lidea.
- ST. ORROD OF THE MARCH: m. Rel. Per. (D. c. 440 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. He was one of the first pilgrims to undertake THE SHADOW MARCH in its current form, and remained on the March until his death, having travelled the entirety of the course at least three times. He is now the patron saint of pilgrims.
- ST. ORSORA: 1. Med. Str. Insane asylum outside of the city of KORACHAN, named after the eponymous saint⁽²⁾. It was built on a small island that had previously been used as a prison for lepers and plague victims.

It was abandoned in 3352 RM, after the island became landlocked due to waning sea levels, and the site remains shunned to this day, claimed by occultists and shapers to be haunted by the tortured SPIRITS^(2.) of the thousands of victims to have died there.

- 2. f. Rel. Per. (D. 997 RM) Saint of the Three Churches of the Undying Machine. Born in Korachani, she contracted leprosy and spent the last of her days travelling along the Shadow March. She is now a patron of the saint of lepers and the insane, and a knightly order (known as the Paladins of St. Orsora) was founded in 1336 RM in her name.
- ST. ORSORA, PALADINS OF: Rel. Mar. Org. Knightly order founded in 1336 RM devoted to caring for sufferers of leprosy and those with mental disorders, particularly those undertaking the SHADOW MARCH. The order is named after its patron, ST. ORSORA, who devoted her life to the Shadow March after she contracted leprosy.

The order is based in the city of ATLEAS in KHARKHARADONTIS, and are characterised by their armoured ACERGENIC SOFTSUITS and can often be found helping PILGRIMS.

ST. OTTALOT: f. Rel. Per. (D. 1581 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. She spent her last year's walking up and down the 103 stairs outside the BASILICA OF KHADON, garnering quite the following amidst penitents who followed her. She died on the stairs in 1581 RM and was canonised in 1973 RM, becoming a patron saint of stairs and those who continued her tradition.

The stairs were built over in 1723 RM, becoming a chapel of the Basilica. The body of St. Ottalot was moved to a crypt there in 1974 RM after her canonisation, and she is revered there as a Saint of the UNDYING MACHINE to this day, with her followers ascending the stairs on their knees to reach the chancel where they can pray before the altar.

- ST. PHITHIOT: m. Rel. Per. (B. 1295 D. 1351 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. KORACHANI saint and EXOCRINE, who died in THE SURRACH. His body was embalmed and brought back by a SHADOW MARCH travelling north and laid to rest in his birthplace, in KALLAVARA. His body remains on display in a large shrine that is still visited by those undergoing THE SHADOW MARCH to this day.
- ST. PRIMASA: 1. Rel. Set. Fortified city in the LAEUSCA region of the south of SKAROS. It lies along a commonly-used route of the SHADOW MARCH (Pop. c. 38,200).
- 2. m. Rel. Per. (B. 1319 D. 1391 RM) Saint of the Three Churches of the Undying Machine. Archbishop of SKAROS between 1344 1391 RM. He was canonised in 1513 RM and is now the patron saint of Skaros.
- ST. PSALLIA: f. Rel. Per. (D. c. 450 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. Born to wealthy PATRICIANS in the south of KORACHAN, though she renounced her wealth and became an itinerant, contracting AEPATHY that crippled her, though she continued helping the poor until her death. She is the patron saint of those suffering from skin diseases.
- ST. QORILIE: f. Rel. Per. (D. 738 RM) Saint of the ALMAGESTI TEMPLE, and earlier, the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. In 713 RM she received visions of the RHODANNE HEART and gained a massed following. Later that year she made a short pilgrimage to the church where it was held, where she began proselytising. The CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE got wind of this and saw her growing popularity, and made her a figurehead of the church in KHADON. She travelled across KORACHAN with the Heart and in 715 RM undertook the SHADOW MARCH, attracting thousands of followers. She received new, violent, visions throughout her five years on the road and returned to Khadon a changed woman, hardened by what she had seen during the pilgrimage, her memories tempered by the visions.

As she grew older her visions became more vivid and violet, and she continued to be used by the Church in its propaganda, returning to the March twice before her death. Her relative health in her later years saw many referring to her as an INCORRUPTIBLE, which elevated her to new heights within the church.

She was canonised just 1 year after her death, in 739 RM and is a patron to PETITIONERS OF THE MACHINE. A statue dedicated to her was erected along the MARTYR'S ROAD soon after her death, and it remains a touchstone to pilgrims to this day.

ST. RAHANA: f. Rel. Per. (D. c. 320 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. She was a SARASTROAN convert to the Church of the UNDYING MACHINE, who was flagellated by ARGEAN troops and hung from the city walls as a symbol to Korachani attackers. Following the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR'S victory in Sarastro in 339 RM, she was canonised as a saint of the Undying Machine, though fell into obscurity. Despite this, her name was adopted by two separate religions many years later – one in IPANAH (2.), and another farther away, in the Six Cities region of THE SURRACH.

ST. REEDRA, CHAINED: f. Rel. Per. (D. -1 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. She was an early adopter of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE in the city of KORACHAN, soon after the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR'S toppling of the TEMPLE OF LIFE AND DEATH in -2 RM, during a time of religious upheaval in the KORACHANI PENINSULA when the teachings of Malichar and the SCRIPTURE OF SHADOW are not yet accepted by all. She was vocal of her belief in the Archpotentate's words and followed him during his early sermons, becoming one of his SEVEN-AND-FORTY DISCIPLES. She was killed less than a year after her conversion, when she was accosted by a group of worshippers of the CULT OF LIFE AND DEATH and chained viciously up to the ruins of an old temple outside the city and left for dead.

She was canonised soon after, becoming a patron to followers and the faithful alike. Today the chain that killed her is a relic in the CHAINED.

ST. SAAR ADI: m. Rel. Per. (D. 2767 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. He died in ZHEMILACH in the west of LIDEA during the SAMMAEAN PLAGUE and was canonised in 3513 RM and soon became a patron to plague victims.

People turned to him in their millions during the time of the Great Contagion, with some churches even elevating him above the Undying Machine and the Archpotentate Malichar, causing the Church of the Undying Machine to decanonise him out of fear of a religious schism. He was canonised in 3701 RM.

ST. SAASTA: f. Rel. Per. (D. 1728 RM) Saint of the Three Churches of The Undying Machine. Once-incorruptible body of a saint that was interred in the sepulchre of the Black Cathedral in the town of Hacat in the north of Almagest. The cathedral was a popular site along the pilgrimage of The Shadow March, however, in 2653 RM, the body began to show signs of Atramental Corruption, making the site lose favour with the Church of the Undying Machine, which withdrew funding and troops from area, allowing the town to fall to SCAVEN. She has since become a patron of those whose bodies have been corrupted by the Atramenta.

ST. SABUSH: 1. Mil. Str. Fortress in the north west of VENTHIR, housing the main garrison defending its western border against SARASTRO.

2. m. Rel. Per. (D. 2116 RM) Saint of the Three Churches of the Undying Machine. Sarastroan military general, who was canonised in 2287 RM for his work within the Church of the Undying Machine.

ST. SACAIDA: 1. Int. Geo. Phantom isle, supposedly located far off the south western coast of AEONAS in WESTERN MENISCEA, in the SEA OF MERCUVIA. The location was included in many historical maps designed by cartographers based in the INNER SEA REGION, though it is now known to be imaginary, possibly a form of fictitious entry that was often employed by cartographers to protect their works from possible plagiarism.

Interestingly, belief in the island has become so popularised over the centuries that natives of the ISLAND STATES OF IRY largely believe that the island was a real location, explaining its disappearance on an ancient nature deity having destroyed it in a fit of retributive anger.

2. f. Rel. Per. (D. 1487 RM) Saint of the Three Churches Of the Undying Machine. She was an Exocrine who travelled far east on a merchant exploratory vessel operating off the western coast of Western Meniscea. She was killed by natives alongside most of her crew, though was responsible for spreading knowledge of the Undying Machine to various peoples and cultures. She was canonised in 1533 RM and is now a patron to exocrines, and missionaries, as well as cenobites.

ST. SAMACHA: m. Rel. Per. (D. 2871 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES

OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. Legendary KORACHANI figure, claimed by legend to be the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR'S wet nurse. She is now the patron saint of midwives and wet nurses.

ST. SAMIHULA: x. Rel. Per. (D. 1622 – rB. 2866 RM) Saint of the Three Churches of the Undying Machine. Saint and Otherworlder, whose incorruptible body is kept under the aegis of Church-funded troops in a large reliquary in the north east of Nárthel. The structure forms part of The Shadow March.

ST. SANSA: f. Rel. Per. (D. 2594 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. She is a patron of women and female martyrs.

ST. SAUAEL THE PEACEMAKER: m. Rel. Per. (B. 3010 – D. 3076 RM)

Saint of the ALMAGESTI TEMPLE. He was born in the city of PALLATI amid the chaos of a newly-independent Almagest and became a diplomat, whose skills at mediation earnt him accolades. He travelled far and wide, using his skills to resolve conflicts and promote unity among nations. He was killed in SKAROS while mediating a dispute between warring PATRICIAN houses factions, becoming a martyr for peace.

He was canonised in 3103 RM, becoming a patron to diplomats, negotiators, and those seeking reconciliation. In 3187 RM a church of the Almagesti Temple dedicated to him was built in the Skarosian city of ETUN in honour of his deeds in the nation, making it the only church of the Almagesti Temple to be built in the Korachani empire.

ST. SAUAEL THE PEACEMAKER, CHURCH OF: Rel. Str. Church in the city if ETUN in the north of SKAROS, built in 3187 RM and dedicated to ST. SAUAEL of the ALMAGESTI TEMPLE. It is the only church of that religion in all of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, and it exists solely through the goodwill of the people of Etun, where Sauael was killed during a diplomatic mission in 3076 RM. It is kept open at great effort by volunteers, donations, and guards from Almagest and Etun alike, and its parishioners have clashed with those of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE on many occasions.

ST. SETHENYN: m. Rel. Per. (D. 973 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES
OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. KORACHANI saint and ONCE-DEITY of LAASKHA, now considered patron of Laaskhans.

ST. SHIBBOLETH: Rel. Saint of the Three Churches of the Undying Machine. Saint of the Korachani empire, canonised in 503 RM as a means of propaganda to quell resistance to the religious conversion of Aethiosi locals to the Church of the Undying Machine by imperial missionaries sent there.

St. Shibboleth would become the patron saint of Aethios, but with the death of the Church of the Undying Machine as a religion in the region following Korachani declaration of war against Aethios after the construction of the dam of AESAPIA in 2943 RM, the St. was largely forgotten.

ST. SIMEOL: 1. Str. Major dam in the SOCIALIST REPUBLIC OF ALMAGEST, crossing the narrow strait dividing the SEA OF SAECULA from the ALMAGESTI CHANNEL. The dam divided in two, with an island as its centre-point. The western-most portion is some 5-miles long, with the east part just under 3-miles, and there is a large copper statue of St. Simeol crowning the island, looking towards vessels approaching from the south. Its construction was a major undertaking, between 3522 – 3758 RM, costing untold coin and thousands of lives. Today it controls the waning of the SEA OF SEKHEM, allowing the CITY OF ALMAGEST to maintain the same water-level despite the slow but consistent lowering of FLYDEN'S seas.

A series of large lift locks allow the raising and lowering of ships between the waters of the Sekhem, and the natural lower waters beyond, which can between 80-100-ft. lower at times, averaging 90-ft. The dam generates hydroelectric power for the city of Almagest as well as others in the region and is heavily guarded.

- 2. f. Rel. Per. (D. 2832 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. Martyr who drowned in defence of her hometown against invading forces and later became the patron saint to those travelling across waterways within the KORACHANI EMPIRE and the SOCIALIST REPUBLIC OF ALMAGEST. She was canonised in 3100 RM.
- ST. SISTINA: 1. m. Rel. Per. (D. 1082 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES

 OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. Polymath martyred during the RENAISSANCE CRUSADES. He is the patron saint of artists.

 - 2. Soc. Str. Large FUNERARY TOWER located in the heart of KHADON. Thought to be the largest such tower in KORACHAN, it is said to contain the skulls of 100,000 dead.
- ST. SITTIHON: m. Rel. Per. (D. 1337 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES
 OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. He was a mariner who explored parts of the north western coast of BROR^(1.), to which he is now a patron.
- ST. SOLUM: Rel. Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. Patron saint and once-deity of VÂRR, though after the KORACHANI conquest of NOUVAR in 792 RM and the arrival of its EXOCRINES and ICONOCLASTS⁽²⁾, imperial propaganda had the deity declared a saint of the UNDYING MACHINE falsely proclaimed to be one of RACHANAEL'S SCIONS.

Though SOLUM was originally a deity of the sun and martial strength, its domains were corrupted to represent the strength of steel embodied in the sun orb. The blade with the solar disk behind it became a common symbol of St. Solum and following the rise of the REGENT-KINGS in 3824 RM it became the official flag of Vârr.

The regent-kings annulled the ancient decree of the imperial church and have elevated Solum to a deity once more, whose worship is slowly usurping that of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE as the main religion in Vârr.

- ST. TAHLOSH: see TAHLOSH.
- ST. TAHLOSH'S GARDEN: see FLAESCUS.
- ST. TARATA: f. Rel. Mus. Per. (D. 1172 RM) Saint of the Three Churches
 OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. She is a patron saint of musicians.
- ST. TATHARAH: m. Rel. Per. (D. c. 300 RM) MHAROKKIN martyr who went on to become an unofficial saint to slaves across the INNER SEA. He led a SLAVE revolt that led to the emancipation of thousands of slaves, whose descendants still pay respect to him as a patron.
- ST. TEMMAL: f. Rel. Per. (D. 1023 RM) Saint of the THRE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. Exocrine martyred while travelling in the south of ETHISTONITH. She is the patron saint of SAMMAEA.
- ST. THEFARIA: m. Rel. Per. (D. c. 821 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. Born in the south of KORACHAN, he was a fisherman and devout follow of the UNDYING MACHINE. He died defending his fellow workers from a chorsair attack, and was canonised in 999 RM. Today he is a patron saint of fishermen.
- ST. TORASZMA: m. Rel. Art. Per. (B. 2684 RM 2722 RM) Famed KORACHANI composer, born in KHADON to imperial clerks. His ASCENSION OF THE ARCHPOTENTATE IN G MINOR is considered one of the most powerful pieces of music ever written, earning him a place in the imperial annals as a cultural hero. His tomb in the countryside outside Khadon is topped by a 100-ft high marble eidolon that is visited by patrons of the arts to this day. He was CANONISED in 2913 RM, becoming a patron saint of music.
- ST. TURQUAN: m. Rel. Per. (B. RM 899 1000 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. Archbishop of MHAROKK between 923 and 1000 RM. He is now the patron saint of Mharokk.
- ST. UALLAR: 1. Geo. Small island 450-miles off the south eastern coast of SAMMAEA, between the SEA OF ENTARI and the LERAMUGH. Discovered by the KORACHANI EMPIRE in 2815 RM, the island is noted for the many merills noted swimming near atolls to its east.

- Though their numbers have dwindled of late they remain common to the region.
- 2. Rel. Saint of the Three Churches of the Undying Machine. Originally a Gerician deity known as Hadon, he was appropriated by Korachani Iconoclasts and turned into a saint off the Church of the Undying Machine after years of propaganda. The Korachani saint took on the psychopomp aspect of the original deity, and became a patron saint of the dead, and travellers. Images of St. Uallar adorn many FUNERARY TOWERS across the empire.
- ST. URBICUS OF DAEKYN: m. Rel. Per. (D. 383 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. He was the first known CENOBITE to travel DAEKYN and return to KHADON, completing the journey in c. 380 RM. He died of AEPATHY he contracted during his pilgrimage and remains associated with the SHADOW MARCH to this day, even though the March did not appear until around 20-years after his death. He was canonised in 503 RM and has since become a patron to PETITIONERS OF THE MACHINE and cenobites.
- ST. URBICUS MARTYRED, CHURCH OF: Int. Rel. Str. Temple constructed in the ill-fated KINGDOM OF THE HOLY LAND OF KHARKHARADONTIS in c. 2930 RM, dedicated to ST. URBICUS, patron of pilgrims undergoing the SHADOW MARCH. After the Kingdom's collapse in c. 3060 RM the church was attacked by beast-featured DEGENERATES and sacked. It was later dismantled by the KNIGHTS OF THE MARCH and carried north and eventually reconstructed in 3121 RM outside the city of BAAYN in LAASKHA (the city has since grown, enveloping the church), where it is still visited by PETITIONERS OF THE MACHINE, before beginning their voyage south across the INNER SEA.
- ST. VAHER: 1. m. Rel. Per. (D 1231 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. KORACHANI saint and patron of leaders.
- 2. Geo. Island in the east of the SEA OF NARAMOR, off the western coast of the PREPOTENCY OF THREPHO. It was 'discovered' and named by the explorer SIPARON in 1435 RM.
- ST. VALENS: also 'Valens of Korachan'. m. Mil. Rel. Per. (D. 82 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. He was a trusted lieutenant of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR and became one of his SEVEN CHAMPIONS.

He died in 82 RM from injuries sustained during the siege of NÁRTHEL in 82 RM, and his body was visited by Malichar prior to his burial, where it is said that he blessed him, rendering his body incorruptible. He was canonised soon after his death, and is body was moved to a chapel in Nekir, which was later rebuilt into the BASILICA OF ST. VALENS, becoming a shrine where his body, encased in a glass coffin, became a relic, visited by thousands of pilgrims every year.

Indeed, St. Valens' body looks little different today to the day of his death, over 39 centuries ago. Today he is a patron of Nárthel and is considered a cultural hero, despite the political changes that the nation has seen in the intervening years, including becoming a protectorate to VENTHIR.

- ST. VALENS, BASILICA OF: Rel. Str. BASILICA of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE in NEKIR, NÁRTHEL. It is home to the incorruptible body of ST. VALENS, who was one of the SEVEN CHAMPIONS of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR, who died during the siege of Nárthel. His body is kept in view in a chapel within the basilica, where it is visited by thousands of pilgrims every year.
- ST. VAREA: 1. Geo. Small island 58-miles off the north western coast of PELASGOS, in the SEA OF LISASSA. The only significant structure on the island is a Pelasgosi prison to those who practice the FIRMAMENTAL arts.
 2. f. Rel. Per. (D 1622 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. Wrongly imprisoned for decades and executed, she was later canonised in 2822 RM, becoming a patron to prisoners.
- ST. ZARNOTHUA: m. Rel. Per. (D. c. 120 RM) Saint of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. He is a patron saint of AZAZEM and was a revered general in the early days of the KORACHANI EMPIRE.
- ST. ZIGURA: 2. Mil. Str. Fortress in the c south of the SARASTROAN colony of IPSISSIMA^(1.).
 - 1. m. Rel. Per. (D. c. 3260 RM) Saint of the $\underline{\text{THREE CHURCHES OF THE}}$ $\underline{\text{UNDYING MACHINE}}$. He was born in Sarastro, where he is most popular, and is a patron saint of travellers and frontiersmen.

- STACHMLER REVOLVER: *Tec. Obj. 7-s*hot REVOLVER common amongst the forces of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE (due to its belief that the number 7 is sacred to the UNDYING MACHINE).
- STACK: Lan. IMPERIAL (mostly urban) slang, used mostly in reference to large high-rising buildings common in the larger of IMPERIAL cities, equitable to the word cage.
- STADA: Int. Rui. Ghost-town in the northern hinterlands of MHAROKK.

 Apocryphal scrolls from a 1st millennium sect of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE were unearthed here in c 2230 RM, detailing the true lineages of the MORTAL PEOPLES.

Following the scrolls' discovery, the outside world lost contact with the town. When merchants next travelled there weeks later, they found a ghost town, its every last resident slain, with no trace of the scrolls. Some postulate that the KORACHANI government was responsible for their deaths, covering up whatever truths were contained on the scrolls.

What we do know comes from second hand accounts of merchants and travellers who passed on the information to neighbouring towns whose words were not silenced by whoever made the town disappear.

- STADIUM OF THALLA: Rui. Amphitheatre dominating the ruin of CONTH in the north east of LIDEA. Following the sacking and razing of the central Conthian city in 193 RM by NAAHI armies, its buildings were allowed to fall into ruin, slowly bleaching under an unforgiving sun as the coastline retreated with the slow yet inexorable drying of ELYDEN'S seas. Most of its buildings crumbled over the years, leaving only the Thallan Stadium standing, which became refuge to the remnants of LACER SLAVES that escaped captivity following the city's sacking. The lacer slowly increased in number, making the stadium their nest and as the centuries passed, they became a nuisance in the region, harrying travellers and merchants, leading to a CRUSADE against them by the recently occupying KORACHANI EMPIRE, which by c. 940 RM had nullified the threat of the THALLAN lacer completely.
- STADIUM OF TULO: Rui. Ancient rock-hewn amphitheatre in the south of SAMMAEA, now acting as a border marker along the borders between CENGUISSE, ELALLIA, and the SYCHTAN PREFECTURES. It is heavily damaged from earthquakes and centuries of neglect, though has been used as a highland meeting place and a refuge at various times in history. Most famously, it served as a base to a secretive mystery cult that had been exiled from Cenguisse in the 33rd century.
- STADTIA: Set. Fortified settlement in the south west of SARAGOS. It is famed for its MONITOR⁽²⁾ trainers (Pop. c. 10,000).
- STAELOLOGY: 1. Ast. Historical form of astronomy practiced along the western coast of SKAROS, prevalent in ALMAGEST, where it originated.
 2. north. 'Staelear'. Ast. Sup. Also, in ALMAGEST, used to denote a form of ATRAMENTISM.
- STAFF OF THE FLAME-KIN: Myr. His. Obj. Stone-like staff used by AZER champions, and believed to have been constructed by the SCION MENILEK. Ancient accounts describe it as a powerful FIRMAMENTAL artefact, amplifying the abilities of its wielder so as to make them nigh-on unstoppable. Today it is inert, on display in the MUSEUM OF ANCIENT ARTEFACTS, in TETHRA, PARTHIS.
- STAGOIS: 1. Geo. Region in the south east of the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS, known for its idyllic weather. Though once famed for its arable farmland it is now a centre of industry.
 - 2. Set. City in the south east of the $\underline{\text{FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS}}$ (Pop. c. 38,000).
- STAIRS OF ARTUT: Int. Rui. Ancient hewn stairs ascending the 11,050-ft. miles in the southern peak of the NGHALLEAL Mountains. Little is known of their origins, though they are thought to date to the late FOURTH AGE or early FIFTH AGE and are unlikely to be directly related to a DEMIURGE. They are in surprisingly good condition, though are worn in places, and are designed for a gait larger than a normal HUMAN, indicating GIGANRI design.
- STAIRS OF IMPILET: Int. Rui. Solitary stone staircase in the middle of the woods in the west of the FOREST OF PSALMS in the c of KORACHAN. There are no records owing an origin to the stairs, they are first mentioned in local legend in c. 1250 RM, after which claims have increased, often placing the stairs in different locations within the forest and elsewhere.

Since c. 2000 RM the stairs have become ubiquitous in the folklore of northern Korachan, commonly being attributed to FAE or other unexplained phenomena.

The stairs are named after the first popularised account of their discovery, from a small settlement south of MAKHARA. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

- STAL: Lak. Lake in the south of the HENDECARCHY of DERAEIA in the east of MALAN, forming a part of the river ENDULLI.
- STALLATH: Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTAL WASTELAND in the north west of ANUBIA. It was used By the KORACHANI EMPIRE as a testing ground for artillery and experimental ATRAMENTAL weapons, including large bombs, between c. 2850 3080 RM. Originally dry plains, the region has been reduced to a grotesque land of charred glass craters and warped landforms peppered by unnatural Atramental terrain. Mutated creatures haunt these wastes, posing a danger to nearby settlements. Anubia, VENTHIR and SARASTRO all mount sporadic expeditions into the peripheries of Stallath to cleanse them of threats, but it is never enough.

The region is categorised as $\underline{\text{HIGHLY DANGEROUS}}$ by the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI}}$ $\underline{\text{INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES}}$.

- STAMMUN: 1. Rvr. River in the south of the PARTHISAN colony of EZHIRAYA^(2.), flowing south for 260-miles from sources in the ARATHAMMOS Highlands before meeting the coast at the BAY OF KARSUS^(1.).
- 2. Rvr. Wetlands in the midspan of the above river^(1,) in the PARTHISAN colony of EZHIRAYA^(2,).
- STAMP: Rel. Obj. Colloquial term in regions where the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE hold sway. Stamps are simple tin press-stamped portraits of saints that are made in CATHADEMACHI that are popular amongst the faithful, and which are worn as necklaces by many. Many devout followers of the church are compelled to purchase every variant pressing, and dedicate a room in their house to the hundreds, if not thousands of individual stamps they collect.
- STANDING ROAD, the: Geo. Road in c western GNOTH, around 85-miles long, built over the AEARN wetlands. It is named after its elevated road, in placed 20-feet above the surface of the wetlands.
- STANDING STONES OF ARAK: Rui. Ancient FOURTH AGE standing stones in the jungles of BERDERA in the north west of GIBEAH. They were rediscovered in the early Fourth Age and became the basis around which the religion of Arak was established. By the time of the appearance of the ASTERI the standing stones had lost most associations with the religion and had been abandoned to the elements.
- STAORA: Int. Fau. Mor. Corrupted creatures common in KHARKHARADONTIS and surrounding areas. They have imperfect bodies that borrow features from AUROCHS and humans, their features are commonly misshapen and grotesque. In their lowest form they are barely sentient, though many are capable of manipulating tools. Such creatures often congregate in tribal herds, living pseudo-civilised lives. Rare individuals. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.
- STAR: Luminous dot of light appearing in the night sky. The term star can refer to one of two things:
 - 1. also 'True Stars'. Ast. Distant suns, galaxies or $\underline{\text{PLANETS}}$ visible in the night sky.
 - 2. also 'Soul Star'. Myr. Oth. The gestating SPIRITS of dead and unborn MORTALS. After death, the SPIRITS of most mortals transmigrate from the mortal bodies into the OTHERWORLD, where they are believed to appear as stars in the night sky. These are distinct from astronomical stars and when viewed through a telescope appear as glowing energy or vitality in the sky.

The birth of a new OTHERWORLDER on the MORTAL PLANE is heralded by the extinguishing of such a star, and it thought that the stars' energy is transferred into the creation of the physical body of the otherworlder. See Vol IV: the Afterlife and the Spirit.

STAR AIELLN, the: Soc. An eleven-pointed star with a blue eye or circle in its centre that is a common symbol across the FOREST KINGDOMS of MALAN. Many people, particularly members of the courts of the HENDECARCHS themselves, have tattoos on their foreheads in faint white ink depicting the star. They symbol features prominently in the kingdoms' heraldry, including their flag.

STAR, MAJOR: Int. Ast. Myt. In the study of the otherworld, Major Stars are CELESTIAL OBJECTS⁽²⁾ that shine with a particular brilliance, whose eventual death presages the birth of an OTHERWORLDER of great influence or power, or which will otherwise reshape the politics or history of ELYDEN in some significant way.

The death of a Major Star is seen as a portentous event, and scholars of the otherworld and mythographers will study the event in detail in the hopes of establishing any knowledge of what may follow. Such dabblings in astrology are looked down upon by modern scholars and scientists, who increasingly disparage them as foolish mysticism with no basis in facts. Despite this many states and peoples still adhere to these old traditions, appointing committees to study the sky and otherworld for clues as to what may follow the death of a Major Star. See Vol IV: the Afterlife and the Spirit.

STAR JELLY: Int. Sup. Alc. Oth. Phen. Strange gelatinous substance that is sometimes found in early morning outside, usually on rocks, the ground, or sometimes in the branches of trees or roofs of buildings. It is translucent with colours ranging from pink, purple, red or sometimes blue, but universally faint and clear.

The jelly is believed to be secreted by the OTHERWORLD and falls to ELYDEN at night. It is thought to be related to the gestation or birth of OTHERWORLDERS and has value in OCCULT rituals, and is used by ALCHEMISTS as well as the CLONING industry, though its rarity means the substance has not found widespread use, despite its varied applications. It is most commonly found in the region of MAATHYL in the c of ALAM BETHYL, and its cultivation has become a niche industry there. It is similar to the more common IELLY RAIN, though the two are unrelated.

STAR-FATED BIRTHS, the: Leg. ALMAGESTI myth that details the origins of three cultural heroes, whose births were presaged by a falling star. Together they went on to found the CITY OF ALMAGEST. It is thought by many to be an analogy of the three settlements (Almagest, AZZII, and EPHEMERIS) whose growth would go on to form present metropolis of Almagest.

STAR OF HAZAL: Ast. His. Comet that was sighted across LLACHATUL in 2936 RM. It was named after the DEOCHANI astronomer who first observed it.

STARGAZERS, the: Int. Myt. Oth. An ancient PARAIYAN legend, remembered now only in a few settlements in the south of BELLN and amongst the ETHERI nomads of the UMBRA SOKHAR;

The Stargazers are gigantic spidery-limbed OTHERWORLDERS that dwell in the badlands in the north of the Umbra Sokhar wastes. Each finds a solitary butte and makes it its own, and begins its life's work.

Each stargazer finds a bright soul amongst billions and attunes itself to the mortal in possession of that soul, and spends every moment psychically corrupting it. This dramatic act influences the mortal's actions in life, and when it finally dies, its soul becomes a new star in the night sky. It is this star that the stargazer sits silently watching, sometimes for days, sometimes for centuries, until it finally disappears, after which a new stargazer is 'born'. Old stargazers eventually die, their bodies mummifying and remaining empty until eventually the death of a star gives them life once anew.

Paraiyan legend identifies a particular domain of the sky as the target of these 'stargazers' vigilance; so-called ORTLU.

STARS, THE ORDERS OF THE: Org. Order of VIRAGI in the HARÉSHK, who eschew their material wealth for a life of devotion to ASHKERON. They view death as a part of life and their role was warriors overlaps that of priest STARWOMB: Med. Sup. Temporary organ that grows in the abdomen of a male MORTAL impregnated by an OTHERWORLDER, allowing them to carry a HALFBLOODED child to term.

The starwomb is expelled following the birth, though the birth itself is rarely straightforward, leading to complications that can result in the death of the parent or child due to the male body not being adapted to childbirth. Of all the mortal people, male SHIE and KERATIN are the most likely carry a pregnancy to full term.

STASIL: Set. Colosseum-city in the c north of the UMBRA SOKHAR. The city is built within the ruin of an ancient amphitheatre that is today half-buried. The dwellings are built in the old structures beneath the seating of the ancient amphitheatre, on top of which is a large market. The exterior of the colosseum is now half-buried beneath the accumulated debris of the land outside (Pop. c. 18,200).

STASIM: Ind. Set. Dre. Settlement in the c north east of VALBAR⁽²⁾, in the region of PIL AUSH⁽¹⁾. The settlement emerged as a boomtown in the wake of silver being unearthed in the DREAMSCAPE of Pil Aush⁽²⁾ and grew from then. Miners work in 'simple' REALITY SUITS to counter the illeffects of the dreamscape, and the mines are overseen by ONEIROMANCERS who work hard to aid in the extraction of the silver (Pop. c. 3,200).

STAT: Law. Soc. Code of laws established by the ancient FIFTH AGE nation of VESPER^(2,). Today, the VESPERTINE LEAGUE uses an updated version of the stat, which is enforced by a hereditary policing caste known as STATORS.

STATOR: Law. Rnk. Caste in the VESPERTINE LEAGUE that serves as a policing force. The title is hereditary and after three years of training, upon the reaching the age of 18, an individual is given a KAITT tattoo to symbolise their lifelong duty to the post.

Though originally envisioned as a force of order and good, today there is no small amount of corruption within the caste, which has attained a position of power across the Vespertine League, with some individuals becoming regional rulers or governors. In some areas multiple ASONAS are connected by dynastic families of stators who rule as tyrants, enforcing their own version of the STAT – the code of laws established by the ancient state of KETHAR.

STATE COUNCIL: Pol. Org. Government ministries in the LOW-EMPIRE OF SARASTRO, and the equivalent of the government MINASTERIA (1.) of the HIGH-EMPIRE OF KORACHAN.

STATUTE OF RIGHTS: Pol. Law. Law created in 1455 RM following the massacre of KORACHANI pilgrims undertaking THE SHADOW MARCH in the south west of VENTHIR 2-years earlier. The law was intended to protect followers of the UNDYING MACHINE, regardless of their nationality, during their pilgrimage to and from the SEPULCHRAL PALACE.

The Knights of the March became a pivotal role in upholding the laws of the Statute of Rights, safeguarding the passage of those undergoing the Shadow March, to the best of their abilities.

STEAM CANNON: Wea. Tec. Obsolete weapon that relied on pressure generated by a steam boiler to launch projectiles. They were boosted by SHAPERS (known as ESTMANIIN in the KORACHANI EMPIRE) who could manipulate heat and steam, who were able to increase pressure or accuracy as needed, making the cannons far more effective than they otherwise would have been.

Steam cannons were very popular in the armies of the middle FIFTH AGE though were largely superseded by more modern artillery and gunpowder weapons.

STEEL BLIGHT, the: also 'Rlarut'. Rui. Ancient idol in the west of Ahrishen, close to the border with Rhamia. The idol is made of pitted steel and is thought to date back to the late Third Age. It is shunned and the land around it is blighted. For many years it was thought to be Atramentally Tainted, though this is seemingly untrue, though the cause of the lands' waning around it remains unknown.

STEEL CATARACT, the: Rvr. Str. The largest dam in the KORACHANI EMPIRE, located in the c north east of VÂRR, in the region of LAMEDUA. It stems the flow of the river ICHORIA south, generating large quantities of electricity for the east of KORACHAN. Though the region of Vârr was abandoned by the INTERREGES in 3791 RM the city of ARGOLIA just south of the dam remains in Korachani control.

STEEL CITADEL: Mil. Str. Fortress in the south west of present-day ALMAGEST. Its roots date back to the late FOURTH AGE, but by the time HUMANS were starting to repopulate the region in the first centuries of the FIFTH AGE, all that was left was a large mound, its once-expansive foundations crumbled beyond recognition.

The site of the old fortress remained a prime spot, commanding good views of the surrounding area, and over the years various structures were built atop it. The Steel Citadel was erected in c. 1500 RM to guard what was then the border between SKAROS and Almagest, though following the WAROFTHE ARTIFEXES, the border moved south. Today the fortress is home to highway guards, who oversee the south western roads of Almagest.

STEEL DRUM: Mus. Obj. Percussion musical instrument made from a steel sheet beaten into the shape of a drum. The instrument is common in the VESPERTINE LEAGUE, where each state has its own beat, which traditionally was used to inspire troops in battle, but which today is more often used during festivals or political activities.

STEEL LEGIONNAIRE: Mil. Med. Tec. CLONE employed within the elite STEEL LEGIONS of the KORACHANI military.

Steel Legionnaires were the epitome of what the TECHNARCANE arts of the Korachani empire were capable of and were on the forefront of the field for the centuries of their creation, from the creation of the primitive first inception in 2304 RM, until the disbanding of the Legions in c. 3890 RM.

They were giants amongst the stunted malnourished helots and slaves that made up the bulk of Korachani cities, and commonly stood between 6' and 6'6", weighing up to 240-280 lbs. with black featureless eyes and hairless bodies with pale alabaster-like skin.

They were equipped to the best of the empire's capabilities and were rightfully feared in battle, but the cost to create and maintain the legions proved to be their undoing and starting in 3845 RM the legions began to be culled, in what became known as the MANUMISSION OF THE CLONES. Many were simply killed, and others were freed. Those who were freed struggled to adjust to life as freemen after what may have been centuries in active service. Many ended their own lives, and those who remained sank into jobs that suited their physical capabilities.

STEEL LEGIONS, the: Mil. Tec. Rnk. Elite arm of the KORACHANI military, comprised of VAT-BORN CLONES INCEPTED through the most advanced TECHNARCANE techniques known to the empire. They were a natural successor to ancient forms of artificially-created life, such as HAEMONCULI.

Grown in VATS, augmented with ORTHOSES and OCCLUSIONS, equipped with the best the empire could provide them with, the Steel Legions were the best organised fighting force of the FIFTH AGE. Led by the most well-educated of the Empire's ARCHPATRICIANS (themselves enhanced and clad in HARDSUITS), the Steel Legions were superior in all ways to their contemporaries and formed the stoic backbone of the Imperial Armies, which were otherwise filled with conscripts, slaves, Atramental-dead, unruly mercenaries, flagellants and fanatics. The first CLONED STEEL LEGIONNAIRES appeared in 2304 RM following innovative research in the region of YAGGUTH in the north of the KHARKHARADONTID desert, though an elite fighting force made of ATRAMENTALLY manipulated HUMANS had existed for centuries prior to that. Despite the same name being used, the two had nothing in common,

The SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE brought about great changes to the fracturing of its forces, with some defecting to the REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO. Soon after this, the empire experienced political reforms in the shape of the DISSOLUTION OF THE MINASTERIA, which saw all government offices disbanded and reformed as new ORDERS OF THE SANCTIFIED INQUISITION. This included the imperial armies and the Steel Legions, which were replaced by the ill-fated ELAIMAN ORDER, which was disbanded in 3779 RM and replaced with the old military structures after years of struggles, decreased effectiveness, and spiralling costs.

It was during this time that the high costs of incepting, training and equipping vast armies of Legionnaires were brought to the fore, leading to a marked decrease in the number of new Legionnaires incepted (partially to offset the costs incurred by the Dissolution of the old military structure). Beginning in 3845 RM, the empire was not only producing a fraction of the numbers of Legionnaires it once was, but it had also begun culling existing clones in a bid to cut costs.

Thousands of Steel Legionnaires were slain and many others were MANUMITTED, forced to register in MANUMISSION OFFICES across the empire. This lasted until c. 3890 RM, though new Legionnaires were eventually INCEPTED after this, though they never again reached the numbers of previous years, and were used as elite troops rather than a mainstay of imperial armies.

STEEL OGHUR: Mil. Med. Tec. In post-industrial regions (including the SOCIALIST REPUBLIC OF ALMAGEST, the KORACHANI EMPIRE, the SECULAR REPUBLIC OF PARTHIS, and the REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO) where TECHNARCANA is a common tool, steel oghurs are a form of TECHNACHI; an unholy blend of ATRAMENTAL artifice, technology and BIOMECHANICAL arts. Constructed around an oghur-like core, usually a LARVA, that, upon its INCEPTION is grafted to ORTHOSES or grafts of varying complexity that will dictate its role thereafter.

Due to the difficulty and cost inherent in creating them, they are used sparingly in warfare as shock troops inured to pain and gross injury, though they can be found as individuals attached to the private forces of incredibly wealthy and influential individuals. Their metallic shells and the strength granted by their construction make them potent shocktroops. They are similar in concept to GOLEMS(I.), though are far less sophisticated.

STEEL PALACE: Mil. Str. Solitary citadel in the south of ALMAGEST. It stands watch over trade-routes and abandoned open-diamond mines which were once owned by PATRICIAN HOUSE SATINA. The citadel is overseen by general-patricians and small contingent of STEEL LEGIONNAIRES.

STEEL STAFF: Flo. Herb indigenous to the island of BROKEZS off the eastern coast of NOAVATUR. It is highly prized for its purported aphrodisiacal qualities, though does not thrive off the island so it can only be acquired by those willing to go to the island as the island cannot be sullied by any permanent structures, as per decree of the ruling council of Noavatur.

STEEL WOMB: also SOHBAL FERROLLI.

STEEL BUTTERFLY: Soc. Mar. Assassin based in ENDUI who uses FIRMAMENTAL treatments to remain physically young. Though she appears like a young woman of 18, she is in fact close to 200-years old. She trained in the STEEL GARDENS OF SHUON and remains its most infamous alumnus.

STEEL GARDENS OF SHUON: Mar. Str. Assassin academy in ENDUI. Its most infamous alumnus is the STEEL BUTTERFLY, a 200-year-old woman with the appearance of a child, who has carious out assassinations across ELYDEN.

STEELSAGE: Rel. Rnk. Erudites in TETHYSIA who spend their lives in the IRON FIELDS, serving as priests and guardians there. They consider themselves the most accomplished steel cultivators and workers of the fields, and their work is prized throughout the GODSHOME as the finest. Most metalworkers in Tethysia study under the tutelage of the Steelsages.

STEELWRIGHT: Ind. Rnk. Hinterland metalworkers and machinists who specialise in repairing broken AMBULANTS and CONVEYORS, and carrying out general mechanical repairs. They are scattered along well-travelled roads throughout civilised areas around the Inner Sea and other industrialised regions, often alongside inns or caravanserais, serving travellers who need their services.

Most steelwrights have an unspoken agreement amongst their own kind, where individuals work in typical radius of around 25 – 30-miles, avoiding others. Should two steelwrights meet, tradition dictates that they share resources and reach an amicable arrangement delineating their respective territories.

STEEPLEJACK: Voc. One who works in tall structures such as spires, chimneys, towers, cupolas, domes, etc. to carry out repairs. They are common in large cities, particularly in the vertical peninsula of the city of ALMAGEST.

STEFANIA: Pol. Soc. Bus. PATRICIAN HOUSE in the KORACHANI EMPIRE known for being a member of the ATROPI HOUSES. Its ancestral home was the manufactory city of LARATHA, which is now abandoned, and the house is based in the CAMASSIAN STRONGHOLD, though it controls various farmsteads across lands surrounding ATROPHY.

Its main role within the cooperative lies in the protection of pipelines, both in the form of building and towers and fortresses, as well as manning them with privately-controlled troops. These troops also guard the various distribution points and pumping stations and constitute one of the largest private forces in Korachan. Due to its size the allegiance of the forces is divided between the other members of the Atropi Houses, and its jurisdiction lies solely within the administration and logistics of the military arm of the Atropos. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

STER: Set. Settlement in the north of the TEMPLAR STATES, in the region of AVVIRAM. Agriculture forms its main industry, specifically the growing of the TSAMMA plant (Pop. c. 6,400).

STEL: Soc. Voc. Stilt-walkers of AHRISHEN. In order to traverse the oftenwater-logged areas of Ahrishen, its people have adopted the use of stilts, which usually take the form of 2-4-feet-high wooden stilts.

STELLARIUM MAGNA: Pol. Org. Secretive group based in ALMAGEST, with cells in various cities and nations across the INNER SEA. The group originated as a fraternity of astronomers in c. 2100 RM, and has existed continuously since then, though its goals have shifted over time to influencing matters of high society and politics. Some claim that they played a role in the WAR OF THE ARTIFEXES and the eventual independence of Almagest in 3014 RM, though there is little direct evidence of this.

STELLARIUM OF IARUS: see IARUS, STELLARIUM OF.

STEMMA: Set. City in the south east of \underline{SABIA} , in the northern face of the \underline{FARIS} Mountains. The city is known for its cliff-face college (Pop. c. 20,000).

STERBHEL: Geo. Area in BA'AKH dominated by jagged iron growth, not unlike rusted blades protruding from the ground. The iron is oxidised and useless for industry, so is ignored by locals. The earth of Sterbhel is dry and without life, shunned by flora and fauna alike.

STERIA: also 'the Grey Wastes'. Geo. Colourless and lifeless desert in the north west of the VESPERTINE LEAGUE. The only trace of life remains now in the desiccated skeletal remains of centuries-dead trees. It is utterly devoid of vibrancy and, and objects brought into it from without will slowly be drained of colour. Similarly, anyone spending any amount of time within its barrenness will find themselves sapped of emotion until they die, withered and thought or will. Needless to say, it is shunned and has never been explored in full.

STERKEM: Ast. Major constellation in the SABIAN religion.

STERLNG SOCIETY, the: Int. Org. Secretive institution based in the city of ALMAGEST. It operates in the shadows of many metropolises across ELYDEN, recruiting what it would refer to as 'sterling individuals' to further its purposes – though what that purpose might be is unknown to those outside the society.

STESHA EMANSSA: (B. 3918 RM) Pol. Current governess of the NAARETHI vassal KHITAI. She is rumoured to be a HALFBLOOD or SCION, and does little to quell such stories.

STETECH: Ind. Set. Small fortified mining city in the west of EREBETH. The city and the entire region are known for their rubies (Pop. c. 15,500).

STEWARD, THE: Oth. Ancient OTHERWORLDER believed to have originated in the ERASHAN empire, making it at least 4,000-years old. The being appeared in the ancient nation of OPHAM in 608 RM, becoming a charismatic figure there, its anecdotes and ancient parables gaining a massive following in the region. Within the span of a few years the Steward became a figurehead of the nation and surrounding lands, bringing a resurgence in old Erashan legends and myths.

Fearing its rising popularity and the threat it posed to the ruling councils' influence, the creature was exiled in 611 RM following a farcical trial. Its teachings were slowly abolished and the region tried to steer itself away from its Erashan ancestry, gaining cultural influences from neighbouring PARTHIA instead. Followed by a few hundred of its closest devotees, the Steward wandered the lands of ESCYSIUM for over a hundred years, returning to Opham when the shadow of war with CYHLAGHARRI OGHURS threatened it in c. 750 RM. None know what happened to the otherworlder during its itinerary of those wastelands, and it refuses to speak of such things when asked. Pardoned and granted control of several auxiliary armies, the Steward aided in the defence of the region, and an earlier plea for aid sent to Parthia was answered, leading to Parthia taking control of Opham in 757 RM.

Despite its vassalage, Opham welcomed back the Steward and its teachings rapidly swept aside what cults had appeared in his absence. By c. 800 a religion known as the CHILD'S ADVENTISM appeared, after the strongest legend and supposed prophecy the Steward recounted, detailing the arrival of a child emperor who on the passing of its 7th year would unite Opham and surrounding lands as one glorious empire. Its followers became powerful members of the church and with passing years, some became members of the ruling council of Opham, with the Steward itself becoming head of the council in 835 RM. This saw Opham totally embracing the religion, and the nation itself was renamed the Kingdom of Opham following the abolition of the council and the election of the Steward as regent in the child emperors' absence.

Under the Steward's leadership the region prospered. The abandonment of PARTHIS by the ruling INTERREGES in 967 RM left Opham free for the first time in close to 2-centuries. Its territories grew even as prospective children were selected from the populace and placed on the throne, removed on their 8th birthday if the prophecy hadn't been fulfilled, replaced by another child, with the Steward overseeing as head of church and state.

The Kingdom of Opham ended in 1465 RM, after the neighbouring states of $\underline{\text{OLNNAD}}^{(1.)}$ and $\underline{\text{HOLOTHAN}}^{(1.)}$ usurped its trade-routes. What was once Opham became known as the $\underline{\text{CHILD'S REALM OF OPHRAM}}$, and the traditions of the Child's Adventism continued to be honoured throughout tumultuous times and the rise and fall of surrounding city-states.

In 2856 RM the Steward received the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR and the two spoke at length, before the Archpotentate returned back to Korachan. Whatever they spoke of remains unknown to this day.

Finally, in 3119 RM, all conditions of the prophecy were fulfilled. Word of this spread across the land, reaching a far east as the SEA OF BYSSOS. There was much rejoicing, and the Steward oversaw a great ceremony in which it took the child into an ancient temple that had been awaiting just this day for millennia. Though two entered, only one emerged – the child emperor, its body bearing traits of the Steward, its eyes filled with all the wisdom and experience of the otherworlder. None know fully what happened in the temple, but since that day, the CHILD EMPEROR has ruled a united Ophram, which is now known as the CHILD'S REALM OF OPHAR.

STEWARD'S SHRINE, the: Rel. Str. Large shrine in the city of OPRET⁽³⁾ in OPHAR, dedicated to the STEWARD who in 3119 RM sacrificed itself to elevate the CHILD EMPEROR to divinity, granting him the gift of unageing eternal life and great wisdom and insight.

STEZA: 1. Geo. Major island and surrounding archipelago to the south west of TZALLRACH, covering less than 500-square-miles and forming the western-most region of the PARAI DEIS.

2. Sea. Bay in the south west of the PARAI DEIS and parent of the river NATHER^(1.).

3. Sec. Only major settlement on the eponymous island. Its culture is little different to that of TZALLRACHI classical civilization and nobility is noted for paint the upper half of their faces in red ochre to symbolise their link with nature (Pop. c. 20,000).

STHAMAN: Pol. Second of the HENDECARCHIES of the FOREST KINGDOMS, located in the south of MALAN. Its capital is the city of ATHELIAT, and it is ruled by the HENDECARCH Queen LYSERITH ONÉSIMUS.

It is FIRMAMENTALLY-AFFLICTED, and is known for its lush humid forests, giant flora, and relatively large walled cities, most notable of which are TOBOSK and IMALDAN. Though there is a capital, ATHELIAT, the kingdom is known for its ever-moving ruler, the halfblood-queen Lyserith Bator, whose government is known as the FLOATING COURT.

STIBIA: Set. Settlement in the c south of GNOTH. It is known for its antimony mines (Pop. c. 4,400).

STIGHO WALL, the: Geo. Treacherous basalt rock formation in the DAARI peninsula of NÁRTHEL), extending some 50-miles into the mainland. Little flora or fauna exists in the lands, and what does has adapted to life in the niche environment. A staircase known as the AISLE OF STIGHO leads to its crown, where an ancient platform is found.

STIKH: Set. Settlement in the c of VALBAR⁽²⁾. It serves as a stopping point for travellers and merchants moving from the PIL AUSH in the east and the city of ELMIAD in the west (Pop. c. 5,800).

STILT CRICKET: see STRIDER.

STIPA: PIr. 'stipas'. Mor. Artificial race created by the LHAUS in c. -1200 RM. Dull-witted and lanky, they were little more than brute labourers to be abused in construction projects around their territories. Little is known of their fate, though titbits of knowledge indicate that the lhaus were overthrown by the Stipas, leading to their near extinction. Without leaders, the stipas dwindled, though they remain in various territories in the north of SAMMAEA. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life: Asicthai.

STIVAR: Ind. Set. Mining settlement to the north east of the city-state of GÂTHA in the south east of the DESOLATION OF ASTUDAN. The settlement mines iron as well as VIRGIN STONE thought to be unchanged since the creation of ELYDEN. The stone is valuable in sculpture and architecture and is used in religious icons throughout Gâtha (Pop. c. 6,000).

STIZEU: Dem. 'Stizeua'. Mys. A discipline prevalent in the free lands of the east, particularly in TEMUIA and parts of north western MALAN. At its core, it is a school of thought concerned with the mysticism of thought and perfection of the self. Tattoos and other forms of scarification form an important part of this belief, for words and symbols inscribed on the flesh are believed to affect the body and mind of a stizeu, though such rituals are not common and are usually associated with a symbolic ascension to a new spiritual tier.

STOA OF TRATHIS: Arc. An ancient covered portico on the island of VIKUL. It is thought to date back to the early FOURTH AGE, when the island was much smaller and the stoa was its dominant feature. Its original purpose is unknown, though it was likely a meeting place, possibly for mariners.

STOGHRA: Set. Coastal settlement in the west of METHUMN, in the HENAKARAIAN peninsula. Its main industry is agriculture (Pop. c. 3,750).

STOLACHTOL: Geo. Rocky desert in the south of the DESOLATION OF ASTUDAN. It receives very little rain (perhaps a few times a decade), and when it does, it floods, collecting into the course of the river ADHUTASH.

STOLA: Geo. Stone wasteland in the south west of the DESOLATION OF ASTUDAN. Its name is believed to be linked to the region of STOLAS, to the north west.

STOLAS: Dem. 'Stolast'. Ntn. Native name for the TOMBS OF THE GODS, in the c north of LLACHATUL, to the north of the OLD FOREST is home to wretched aviform mortals, known as ALAKHI, who owe their roots to the DEMIURGE MALACHAI, whose torpid body is said to lie buried beneath their lands, likely giving the region its common name.

The al akhi are a debased offshoot of a nobler race of bird-like mortals known as the AIKLAHS, which were driven to near-extinction years ago. Restricted to the region of Stolas, the al akhi are pathetic twisted beings whose culture revolves solely around the worship of a monolithic totem in the middle of Stolas that depicts their deity MERKABH, which scholars believe to be a corrupted form of the demiurge Malachai or possibly one of its scions.

The region is a grey wasteland with little known resources and the al akhi have few relations with their neighbours and maintain little contact with them outside of sporadic trade for essential items, which is done in temporary camps outside their territories, which is where the little we know about the region comes from.

Though they have no desire for expansion, they guard their land fiercely and guard their borders against outside attention, though their technology is primitive at best – were another industrialised nation want to invade their lands, the al akhi would be unable to resist. However, there exists a great deal of superstition and dread around their lands, leading most outsiders to shun the place. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

STOLAS VALLEYS: Geo. Region in the c south of STOLAS renowned for the DUSTSTONE formations and canyons.

STOMMA: Set. Coastal city in the south west of HABOT, overlooking the west of the BAY OF ESSIA (Pop. c. 41,000).

STOMARA: Set. City in the c south east of HABOT, along the course of the river VAIAUANTI (Pop. c. 44,000).

STON: Set. Major settlement in the c north east of KEPHUAAN, in a shallow valley to the south west of the TAOGHLIN Mountains. It is one of the largest industrial centres in Kephuaan and is known for its sprawling maze-like manufactories and the narrow alleys dividing buildings (Pop. c. 220,000).

STONE BONES: see STONE MAN'S DISEASE.

STONE CHILDREN: Sup. Med. Common condition in MENISCEA where the foetuses of pregnant women calcify in utero. In the majority of cases the foetus is killed before birth – in some instances remaining in the body indefinitely, and in others being expelled. In rare instances the foetus is not killed and is born with an unchanging variant of STONE MAN'S DISEASE, more commonly known as STONE BONES. It is more common in nations closer to the MENISCUS, and has its highest recorded occurrence outside of the Meniscus in the nation of DANU.

STONE CORRIDOR: Com. Geo. Trade-route in the north east of SAMMAEA, forming a part of the larger SALT ROAD. The signing of the RECKONING OF PEACE in c. 2950 RM between SIRIPHAGOS and the tribes of MULCIBER, fostered an uneasy friendship and increased trade along the Salt Road.

A well-guarded trade-route emerged between $\underline{ARKOS}^{(1)}$ in the north to $\underline{NOAVATUR}$ in the south, which came to be known as the Stone Corridor due to the rough terrain through which it passed. Overseen by Siriphagan merchant lords, this trade-route brought renewed security to a dozen different nations, and lasted until 3103 RM — the year of the $\underline{SARASTROAN}$ $\underline{SANCTION}$, where the $\underline{KORACHANI}$ \underline{EMPIRE} granted autonomy to $\underline{SARASTRO}$ and its ruler, and attacks on nations involved began en masse. This led to the fragmentation of the road and the forces that had once been drafted to defend it, and land trade south to Noavatur dwindled following this. See Vol II: Major Trade Routes.

STONE FOREST, the: see NITTHAL.

STONE JELLYFISH: see GOMAZOA.

STONE MAN'S DISEASE: Sup. Med. FIRMAMENTAL malady centralised in scattered regions that are FIRMAMENTALLY TAINTED, such as the immediate area surrounding the TRUE MENISCUS, in which the flesh of those subjected to it slowly calcifies. The process takes between 1 and 2 weeks to complete though most die well before that time as organs begin to fail and bodily functions surrender. Brief exposure usually brings little more than aching joints and headaches, though constant exposure exceeding 6-hours normally brings irreversible damage.

Some $\underline{\text{OTHERWORLDERS}}$, $\underline{\text{HALFBLOODS}}$ and other $\underline{\text{SCIONIC CREATURES}}$ are immune or less susceptible to the disease.

STONE, ORDER OF THE: Rel. Org. Order of individuals that emerged on the island of GEMARIS in 2189 RM following the disappearance of the SABRIYAN STONE in ASSEER and the resultant fragmentation of its government. Members of the Order referred to themselves as SEEKERS OF THE STONE (which over time was simply abbreviated to Seekers), and tasked themselves with searching for the lost GODSTONE. Its members lived off donations from the laity and hundreds took up the call to arms, searching far and wide for the Stone. The Seekers founded the settlement of AGAIR at the base of their monastery home, and it became a stable base to members of the Order, which by c. 2382 has established chapters in most cities across Asseer, from which they were able to fight organised crime and re-establish the courts of CANON LAW.

By c. 2300 RM the Order of the Stone had largely curtailed regional crime and helped to unite the disparate city states with a thriving trade network, allowing Agair to become a capital to a newly united region. Their Seekers provided protection along the frequently-travelled traderoutes, helping keep the land safe, and were reorganised into regional policing forces, with chapters in most major cities. The link with the Seekers of the Stone was sundered in this time, though the Seekers continued the tradition of searching for the Sabriyan Stone for many centuries, until their eventual disbanding in 3202 RM.

STONE REALM, the: see SYNCHTHONITHA.

STONE OF RENOUNCEMENT, the: Rel. Str. Altar in 10 dating from c. -120 RM, towards end of the LITHIC PERIOD. The Stone of Renouncement was a sacrificial altar dedicate to THE VOID, bas carvings of bull on its sides (symbolic of the ancient Io Custom of sacrificing bulls). Willing laypersons would lay down on the stone, becoming ascetics, refusing food and drink until their bodies withered and died. In 217 RM it was emptied by the KORACHANI occupiers, sanctified in the name of the MACHINE, becoming a chapel to the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, after which it became known as the Temple of the Renouncement. A HEART ENGINE was installed in its heart, and it became a centre for mechanical communion with the UNDYING MACHINE.

STONE STACKING: Soc. A common pastime in GNOTH and amongst various giganri cultures across ELYDEN, the stacking of stones to form a freestanding tower. Most settlements have a designated area - either a square within the settlement or a field outside its borders - where individuals can go to practise their hobby. Similar to stone stacking is stone arranging, where individuals arrange stones and pebbles into geometric patterns and freestanding arches. See Vol II: Games and Pastimes of Elyden.

STONE TREE, the: see AGGACTHAR.

STONE WINDOW, the: see SKELERIELL.

STONNARA: Rvr. The deepest point of the ACCA HOAL endorheic basin, in the north of TAAN AN, in the south west of SAMMAEA. It was once a large lake that was fed by runoff from damaged parts of the great CREPHITHISS aqueduct, though following its repairing by the AMMASHI⁽³⁾ people in the mid FIFTH AGE it slowly dried up, leading to the present depression, which at its deepest is 125-ft. Below sea level.

Some seasonal rivers, the largest of which is the river MERREANTI, do flow into it, though they rarely collect enough water to form any sizeable lakes for any considerable amount of time.

- STORAGH: 1. Rvr. River in the c north of VAALK, flowing for 150-miles from sources in the TRAAL Mountains and the KAULSA highlands before meeting the BAY OF SALTRA. For most of its course the river flows through the steep-sided valley known as the RUPTURE.
 - 2. Geo. Natural limestone bridge crossing the river Storagh⁽¹⁾ about 25-miles from the coast. The formation is used as an actual bridge, helping to link north western and eastern VAALK. The bridge was once located close to the old coast, though the retreat of THE INNER SEA has seen it move steadily inland over the past centuries.
- STRABIA: Set. Small city in c of the plains of BEHISHIA in the c of PARTHIS, known for its vast plains and cattle manufactories. It also forms part of the RED ROUTE, and is a source of food to those travelling along the trade-route (Pop. c. 20,000).
- STORACHAN: Set. Fortified city in MARACHA, in the far north west of THE SURRACH. It is known for its well-made forts and horse ranches (Pop. c. 20,000).
- STRAIT OF ALMAGEST: Sea. Narrow strait, 180-miles long, dividing the SEA OF SEKHEM from the SEA OF APHOTIS. It is named after the city of ALMAGEST, which lies along its mid-span. Its waters are relatively fertile, though do not receive much circulation, on account of the narrowness of the strait.

STRAIT OF GATH: sea GATH, STRAIT OF.

- STRAIT OF KHADRA: Sea. Narrow strait dividing the GHOUL ISLES from THE SURRACHI mainland. The strait is some 100-miles long and at its narrowest, is around 7-miles wide.
- STRAIT OF NÁRTHEL: 1. His. Sea. Geo. A historical strait, 700-miles long, linking the east of THE INNER SEA (in the form of the SEA OF SPIRES) with the west of the DARK SEA (in the ABYSS OF ENESH). The strait was, during its height, a well-travelled passage, linking west with east, facilitating trade and helping move exotic items across LLACHATUL and SAMMAEA.

Its diminishing was first documented in c. 2800 RM, and cartographers and geographers continued noticing its narrowing over the years, even as coastlines across ELYDEN slowly contracted as sea-levels gradually diminished. First evidence of silting was recorded in c. 3400 RM, 85-miles west of the settlement of DETH in south eastern LYRIDIA.

The KORACHANI EMPIRE, at the time still a major power, spent a great deal of effort and money in keeping the strait open, though these efforts were abandoned following the SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE in 3705 RM, after which the LOW-EMPIRE OF SARASTRO tried for decades to maintain the route, but such efforts were eventually abandoned in 3757 RM, leading to its permanent silting. Until that point the strait was only closed seasonally, when tides and waters from contributing river dried.

The closing of the Strait of Nárthel had potent repercussions on trade and diplomacy across Llachatul and Sammaea. It crippled trade east with MENISCEA. The nation of VENTHIR broke away from Korachan following the closing of the strait, and political tensions only rose in the area, particularly as the diminished trade and travel between west and east led to a converse increase in contact between north and south, leading to tensions with NÁRTHEL and LYRIDIA.

Many cities that until then had been small coastal settlements on either side of the strait grew in the following decades, becoming harbours of note, passing sea trade from west and east between them overland. Of note were the cities of KAELRATH and PHENESH in Nárthel, which became metropolises, bringing wealth to the region.

It is now thought that QUEEN HETEPHERES of Venthir wants to reopen the strait so that her vassal Nárthel can monopolise its sea routes, yet she is a fickle queen and is as likely to change her mind as she is to order the beginning of the massive undertaking.

2. narrow bay, 425-miles long, and only remnant of the true Strait of Nárthel $^{(L)}$, in its west, following its closing in 3757 RM.

STRAIT OF SAOR: Sea. Strait separating the DARK SEA from the SEA OF VENTHA. It was once the only pass between the two seas, though following the CATACLYSM OF KHAMID in 101 RM, the Sea of Ventha grew to the north east, giving rise to the BOILING SEA.

The strait is contested between the two warring regions of $\underline{\text{LALAUN}}$ and $\underline{\text{BAOST}}$, forcing vessel to head north through the more dangerous Boiling Sea.

STRAIT OF SHIBBOLETH: Rvr. Mouth of the river SHIBBOLETH (3.), dividing MHAROKK in the north from LIDEA in the south.

STRAMINEA: Geo. Expansive Mountain forming the southern-most border of THE SURRACH in the north west of SAMMAEA. The range is known for its pale straw-like colour and stretches west-to-east for close to 2,000-miles, from the SEA OF ESCHATA in the west to the tower of SACHLOAL in the east.

STRATAMAL: Sec. Small city in the north east of THUMAL. Its main industry is iron mining. It is surrounded by spend KORACHANI strip mines, though still manages to maintain operations of what iron reserves are left. It forms a part of the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 20,000).

STREET PROPHET, the: m. Per. Political agitator and demagogue who is active in the forums and markets of KHADON who had gained notoriety since her first documented appearance in 4004 RM. She is wanted by the authorities for her heretical beliefs and has gained a sizeable following of people over the years, who follow her every word. She is deeply critical of KORACHANI policies and the way its workers, particularly SLAVES, are treated.

STREGACHA: Rui. Ancient stone tombs, in the south west of the HENDECARCHY of CYRENIA, in the north of MALAN.

 $\underline{STREGOSS}\!{:}$ Set. City in the c of $\underline{OPHIUSSA}$ (Pop. c. 29,400).

STRENGTH OF AMMASH: Art. Arc. Rui. Gigantic stone and metal monument now located in the c south of KEPHUAAN, but built in the nation of AMMASH⁽³⁾ through forced labour in 2217 RM. Even the plinth on which the statue stands is a monolithic thick stone, and it is riddled with deep tunnel-like corridors and rooms. The statue itself is hollow and covered in a skin of sheet metal, and is made in the form of a winged woman, hands held high as though in reverence of the sky. In fact, the hands are angled towards the old capital of Ammash, HAMMA, and represent loyalty to the state.

The monument was abandoned following the collapse of Ammash and now lies in ruin, parts of its skin peeled off, its internal framework rusting and bowed. It has been occupied at various times by bandits, brigands and other groups.

STRENK: Flo. Poi. Twisted succulent that is similar to a vine, common in N'RAKH and other parts of external KHARKHARADONTIS. The trees are influenced by the ATRAMENTA and are a few of the only trees that seem to thrive in its presence. They have a wide stumpy central trunk about which fan hundreds of supple water-filled vines covered in poisonous thorns that are attracted to vibrations in the ground near them. The bones of past prey litter the ground at their feet like trophies. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

STREPOR: Ser. Coastal city in the far west of the region of SÛR GHATH in the west of THE SURRACH. Its harbours are quite busy and the sounds of ships are known to reverberate across the crater-like bay (Pop. c. 50,000).

STRIBOS: Str. Palace of the WHITE ANGEL TAHIRA in HRIMA, KASPIA.

STRIDER: also 'Stilt Cricket'. Fau. Gigantic cricket-like vermin, around the size of a horse, relatively common to otherwise-inhospitable inland regions of SAMMAEA. They are well-adapted to both the dry climate as well as the ATRAMENTAL TAINT common to the KHARKHARADONTID area, and are amongst the most common living creature there. They are lobotomised by mahouts and trained to act as mounts – the most hardy and reliable to those foolish or desperate-enough that need to cross the inland deserts.

Unburdened, they are naturally accomplished jumpers, though this ability is stymied when they are laden with provisions and saddles. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

STRIGO: Com. Set. City in the c of AHRISHEN, along the north westernmost reaches of lake RANAGA. Like most settlements in the c of Ahrishen, it is linked to the AHRISHENI WATERWAYS by canals and a series of locks that allow travel between lake NAIDA in the west and lake Ranaga in the east along the river ARESH⁽²⁾ (Pop. c. 28,000).

STRIGOI: M 'moroi'. Sup. Rnk. Feared ATRAMENTISTS said to have transcended death, their spirits hollow, yet bound to their bodies, preventing death, yet denying them full life. The name is thought to have derived from a sect of female Atramentists. that once operated from the city of STRIGOIA, MALAN.

STRIGOIA: Set. Large fortified city in the south of the HENDECARCHY of CYRENIA, in MALAN. It is renowned throughout the east for its PENUMBRIST tradition, somewhat of an oddity in Malan, whose people favour Firmamental traditions. The city trades ATRAMENTAL goods with AONIA and, less commonly, TEMUJA.

Following the civil war of 3682 RM, in which the combined armies of AONIA, HATON and NHORA marched against the Cyrenian HENDECARCH, Strigoia was fortified, becoming the centre of a series of defensive in the south of Cyrenia, remaining so to this day (Pop. c. 73,400).

STRIX: Fau. Giant owl, up to 3-ft. long, with an 8-ft. wingspan. They are common in the north of CENTRAL LLACHATUL, and are nocturnal predators, preying on small animals. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

STROBIA: Set. Fortified settlement in the north west of TERION, overlooking the SEA OF SYRTASH^(1.) (Pop. c. 10,000).

STROBILIA: Geo. Slag wastes in the c of KORACHAN, just north of the mining conurbation of KALLAVARA.

STUD OF SERVITUDE: also 'stud' or 'stud of citizenship'. Soc. Small metal stud embedded in the forehead of FREEMEN that work within the bureaucracy of the HIGH-EMPIRE OF KORACHAN to mark them apart from others, be they other freemen, slaves, or HELOTS.

Though far from fool proof, such studs are easily used by censors and the iron guards of cities to identify and segregate those who make up the imperial bureaucracy, who in many cases have leave of access to areas or buildings where others (slave, helot or freemen alike) may not have access to. As a rule, work-slaves are restricted to only certain wards or districts, while those of higher castes, including freemen and helots, are somewhat freer in their movements. Because of this, an underground market in false studs existed, though their implementation is neither cheap nor safe – the penalty for those found brandishing such marks is death.

Studs can be made from a variety of substances and can take various forms or shapes, which together form a record of their place of manufacture and use. For instance, a brass 5-pointed star in Khadon may indicate a specific year of manufacture and, making identification and safeguarding against counterfeiting easier for law-enforcement. The PASSPORTS of freemen with a stud of servitude would indicate so. It is possible for individuals to have more than one stud, with each referring to a specific workplace or honour.

The studs were introduced in c. 3800 RM in Khadon and rapidly spread to other large cities around the empire, where they became an everyday part of life by c. 3830 RM.

STUL: Geo. Massif comprising the northern-most reaches of the NGHALLEAL Mountains and is around 7,000-square-miles.

STUMP OF SHUREIU, the: see SHUREIU, THE ONCE-GREAT.

STURAS: Geo. Mountain in the south east of NAARETH, overlooking the GULF OF VEGATETH.

STYAYAT: Mil. Str. Fortress in the c south of KASPIA, guarding isolated settlements within the LILTHAOST Forest against IBHAH attacks. It is built from ancient runic LODESTONES and its maintenance is overseen by skilled AIMANTS^(1.).

STYGA: Set. City in upper CARCERI, beneath the south east of the DESOLATION OF ASTUDAN. The settlement appeared after major flooding of upper Carceri in 3600 RM and grew with the influx of refugees from the eruption of ANTILLIA in 3706 RM. The city is unique in that it forms part of Carceri though is situated partially above the surface. It is a rare place of trade along the GÂTHAN ROAD between the upper world and Carceri, and it trades west with SHAMALAN and north east with GÂTHA (Pop. c. 32,000).

STYGAS: Sca. Small sea in the east of SAMMAEA, located between NOAVATUR and PNESSA. It once led into the SEA OF SUPPA, though lowering sea levels in the 4th Millennium RM saw it cut off, with the Stygas becoming northern-most part of the SEA OF LETHEA, leading to the GULF OF SAURIAR (which replaced the now dry Sea of Suppa) via a narrow strait across the FAMMIN wetlands.

STYGEON: Set. Settlement in the c north of GIBEAH. It is thought to have links with the ABYSSAL TEMPLARS, tough little is really known of it (Pop. unknown).

STYGIAN LYNX: Fau. Furtive felid that lives in the liminal area of near-surface caves between the PRISON CARCERI and lands that lie above it, including KORACHAN, AZAZEM, PELASGOS, VÂRR, and the OLD FOREST. They are around 4-ft. long (including their tail) and have ashgrey fur with pale faces and large black eyes, with tufted ears and long whiskers that aid them in navigating the darkness. They can often be seen on the surface, where they sometimes venture in search of food. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

STYLGIA: Geo. Island off the coast of PELASGOS, created through ancient volcanic activity — its dark, angular volcanic formations stand like columns, rising sheerly from the BROWN WATERS. Vents of gas pepper the area, constantly burning.

STYLIA: Set. City in the c south west of SAMMAEA, in the far west of the ACHARKHARAN Mountains in the north east of MAENMIST (Pop. c. 15,000).

STYLITE: also 'Pillar Monk'. Rel. Rnk. Radical monastic order within the REFORMED CHURCH OF SARASTRO, most common in IO, and BA'AKH, whose adherents live lives of asceticism atop stone pillars, praying and fasting in honour of the UNDYING MACHINE. The first Stylite was Malhilla, an Ionic monk who was cast out from his order for unknown reasons in c. 800 RM and who became a hermit, living on a small monolith outside a small town in the west of Io. He became infamous and people brought him food and clothing, enabling him to live the rest of his days in solitude, praying to the Undying Machine. People also came to him with requests and he would pray for their health and safety. Upon his death others continued the tradition, and it slowly spread west across the SEA OF ETHA to Ba'akh.

STYLITH: also 'Stylith Forest'. Geo. Ancient expansive karst formation running for over 125-miles between the KHO HAGAR and the EHBOT Mountains, forming a border between SARASTRO, IO and ARKOS (1.). The region was once a flat plateau, though water and wind erosion have carved narrow channels which over time became pillars and walls of natural stone. In c. 2320 RM the region became the battleground in a war fought between Sarastro and Arkos, which left large swathes of the region toppled, which are now shattered across the landscape amidst the unwanted relics of war.

STYMEN: lit. 'steam room' or 'chamber'. Soc. Str. Communal bathing houses in PARAIYA built from mud bricks and woven reed frames over naturally occurring steam-vents that occur across the west of the nation. They serve as meeting places for the otherwise nomadic people. Some stymens have grown over the years into caravanserais, becoming settlements of sorts, with few permanent inhabitants.

STYRGE: Fau. Large dark-furred bats native to CENTRAL LLACHATUL.

Common to coastal cliffs and cities, they are most numerous around the SEA OF APHOTIS, and particularly the spires of the city of Almagest. They have small bodies and comparatively large wings, and are carnivorous, feeding on small insects and other vermin, as well as scavenging on the blood and fluids of carcasses. In rare cases they can swarm much larger creatures, causing them to suffocate. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

SUAMASANCT: Rel. Str. Shrine in the south of AZAZEM where the remains of ST. FIRDAUS are buried.

SUAMORM: Set. Small city in the north west of PORPHYR, to the south west of the RYKK Mountains (Pop. c. 17,000).

SUARA: Rvr. River in the north west of KORACHAN. Though its waters gave birth to the city of NORACHAN, it only flows seasonally now.

SUARHEN: Set. Settlement in the c west of AHRISHEN. It was once a thriving port, though it saw an exodus of industry and trade following the retreat of the SEA OF PYREA. Its main industries are now sheep herding and salt collecting from the KORAYEN salt flats to the north (Pop. c. 2,000).

SUATHU: Bev. Herbal drink common in TEMUJA and SAUA. It is little more than water flavoured with herbs. It is commonly drunk in winter months around a fire pit as elders tell stories. It can be mildly alcoholic, depending on the way it is made and what plants are used to brew it. Vagabonds and travelling soldiers are known to drink this.

SUBA: Ind. Set. Mining settlement in the region of DAAR in the north east of VENTHIR (Pop. c. 4,200).

 \underline{SUBAAT} : Set. Small city in the island of \underline{KHEMET} , in \underline{KHAMID} (Pop. c. 16,000).

SUBADIA: Set. Major city in the c north east of ATARAXIA. Its main industry is the mining and refining of iron, much of which is sold to merchants travelling the RED ROUTE which passes through its territories (Pop. c. 162,000).

SUBAHASS II: (B. 3909 RM) Pol. Current emperor of Trakia. He is a known UMBRAPHAGE who prolongs his life through arcane methods.

SUBBAR: Lak. Lake in the tribe of JACITTA in the c west of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER, along the course of the river DAKHAN.

SUBBEAH: Set. Settlement in the c north of GIBEAH (Pop. unknown).

SUBBOREA: Set. Small city in the c-south east of KASPIA (Pop. c. 12,750).

SUBÉ: also 'the North Tower'. Mil. Str. One of two towers in the west of TEMUJA (the other being the ENEARHON) that flank the pass of the TAHNOL MAER, guarding the entrance into Temuja from the DESOLATION OF ASTUDAN.

SUBRA: Ind. Set. Coal mining settlement in the prefecture of HOLICHRIS in HOLOLACH^(1,). The settlement arose to serve the many coal-quarries that emerged in the region in the first centuries of the 4th millennium RM and now finds itself a part of THE WAY trade-route, selling its coal to passing merchants (Pop. c. 2,500).

SUDEUBA: Ind. Set. Settlement in the south of TZALLRACH. Its main industry is iron-mining (Pop. c. 7,200).

SUDI: Mil. Str. Fortress in the far south east of KHAMID, along the border with MALAN. The fort guards heavily trafficked trade-routes linking the two nations

SUERES' BRIDGE: Arc. Large wrought iron bridge in the city of ALMAGEST linking two disparate peninsula districts with each other, crossing over the harbour beneath. It became famous in 1779 RM for a duel between two PATRICIAN princelings, and since then has maintained a reputation for duelling and gang wars. Increased guard presence starting in c. 3970 RM led to a decline in such activities, though night-time challenges and quarrels are still associated with the bridge.

SUBDAR: 1. Sea. Bay in the north of GIBEAH.

2. Set. Coastal settlement in the north of GIBEAH (Pop. Unknown).

SUBRANA: Set. Settlement in the south of KARAKHAS, north of the KELACHOT Mountains. The city is ruled by a supposedly undying PATRICIAN, the last surviving member of a HOUSE whose name has been lost to records and whose origins are known to lie in VÂRR (Pop. c. 10,000).

SUBRESA: Ind. Set. Fortified mining settlement in the west of EREBETH. The settlement and the entire region are known for their rubies (Pop. c. 4,800).

SUCCEDEA: Rui. Early FIFTH AGE SOULSTONE quarry in the north east of the present-day TEMPLAR STATES. It was the first major open caste soulstone quarry in ancient TRISKETHIA and was operational for close to a millennium, from c. -25 RM to its abandonment in 863 RM. It remains now as an expansive tiered pit on the side of the cliffs between UPPER and Lower Triskethia, and is visible from miles around, as are the vast mounds of overburden and tailings that were excavated by hand during the quarries' life, now overgrown and largely naturalised.

SUCCESSOR-KING, the: (B. unknown) Pol. Ruler of OPHIUSSA from 3752 RM. His origins are unknown, though he is believed to be a HALFBLOOD or SCION of some kind.

The Successor-king was a young SHAPER who emerged as part of the Ophiussan resistance in the years following the SUNDERING OF THE KORACHANI EMPIRE. The Ophiussan autocracy had a close relationship with Korachan and it suffered amid the chaos of the empires sundering and many Ophiussans took it as a symbol to begin resisting the autocracy.

He rose in the ranks of the revolution, coming in control of a cell within the capital in DRAK LON⁽¹⁾, and was eventually directly responsible for the assassination of the autocrat.

Having nurtured relations with many allies over the years, the young shaper assumed leadership of Ophiussa and took on the mantle of Successor-king. He abolished laws and customs that oppressed the common people, gaining their trust, and made efforts to foment relations with neutral parties, avoiding the favouritism that eventually led to the collapse of the previous regime. Relations were forged with PARTHIS and ALMAGEST though, Ophiussa remains neutral in military matters.

Of long life from his mysterious heritage, he rules the nation to this day from the fortress of Drak Lon^(2,).

SUCCORATOR: Pol. Rak. Rank within the SANCTIFIED ORDERS OF THE INQUISITION, whose members are charged with providing aid to those who most need it, similar to hospices and charities. They are most common amongst the ARÂTHUAHI ORDER.

SUCCOTH: Set. Major city in the north of ATARAXIA, along the course of the river TARIA (Pop. c. 90,000).

SUCCUBUS: see ONEIROI.

SUCCUL, THE RAVEN: Mys. Rel. In Temujan Spiritualism, the TUTELARY SPIRIT of the dead. She is seen as the guardian of spirits. It is believed that each spirit, upon passing from this world to the next, is guarded by a raven, which protects it for all time. The killing of a raven is seen as an evil act – representing not only death of a sacred animal, but the eternal quenching of a spirit. Ravens gather near corpses and funerals to see off the spirit and accept in into the new world. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

SUCHARIIT: Dem. 'Suchariit'. Ntn. An autonomous nation situated on the island of NERITA in the far west of the INNER SEA, guarding the GATE OF ERBETH. The population of Suchariit is concentrated in the many harbours and ports, which are home to ORDER OF THE GATE – the mighty navy that, since the signing of the ACCORD OF THE GATE signed in 2824 RM between the major nations of the Inner Sea, has guarded the merchant fleets of accord members passing across the Gate of Erebeth.

The city of Suchariit emerged in 3342 RM after the diminishing of the Inner Sea gave rise to the island of Nerita along the midspan of the strait between the nations of TAHALL and SAGITTARIA. From humble beginnings it rapidly grew to ensure that no single entity or nation would monopolise trade across the Gate, in accordance with the signing of the Accord, though the nation of Tahall was given the right to tax westward trade across the Gate, through the toll city of BARATALL. Since then, the city has grown to accommodate the increase in trade across the Gate, with tits harbours housing great storage yards, caravanserais and auction houses where trade crossing the Gate could be sold, taxed or stored.

Since then, it has established sizeable shipyard facilities that cater to the needs of all forms of vessels and its drydocks are famed across the Inner Sea and the SEA OF ORRIDA. (Pop. c. 175,000). See Vol II: Extant Nations and Realms of Elyden.

SUCHLAN: Set. Settlement in c of THE OLD FOREST, along the shores of lake IAGANNATH, and south of the EPITRACHON Mountains.

SUDA: Set. City situated in the region of JAZKIA in THE SURRACH, in the north west of NORTHERN SAMMAEA. The city is sizeable and possesses a renowned mercenary force that is well-recognised along the length of the GAUL trench (Pop. c. 92,000).

SUDANN: Set. Coastal settlement in the south east of GIBEAH (Pop. c. 5,000).

SUDARA: Set. City in the north east of HABOT, in the foothills of the MAR SAHIGH Mountains (Pop. c. 6,300).

SUDD: 1. Rvr. Major wetlands in the west of AHRISHEN, covering 5,000 square-miles around the river ARESH⁽²⁾, south east of the city of TAHIREN.

2. Mil. Str. Major fortress in the c east of THE SURRACH, under the control of the city of SURDA.

SUDDUKA: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the c south west of SAUA, in the southern-most expanse of the BLUE Mountains along the course of the river DANILLI. It is located close to the border with THE HARÉSHK, and guards GREAT ROAD trade-route, that passes through the region.

SUDEK: Fau. In SUZIVIAN TAXONOMY of life, creatures that are capable of flight. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

SUDERA: f. His. Per. Dissident MHAROKKIN PATRICIAN who was exiled into the wilderness in c. 950 RM. Close to starvation, she was rescued by a kindred of YARAOMIC PEOPLES who nursed her back to health and accepted her as one of their own. She spent over 50-years with them and throughout that time was shown secrets that no outsiders had ever been privy too, which she collected in detailed journals. They were mistakenly unearthed by Yaraomic lorekeepers known as IARAOM GRABBA in a cave outside TAKUH in 1340 RM.

They were the oldest and most complete second-hand accounts of their customs and myths ever discovered and were used to reconstruct many lost and fragmented aspects of their ancestor's lives, and remain an important part of Yaraomic culture to this day. Foremost amongst the writings was the tale of the KING-WHO-WASN'T, a prophesised champion and direct descendant of the ancient SHEPHERD KING of MHARAKA, who will one day reunite the Yaraomic People, resettling the city of KEKELIB, giving them back their home.

This legend remains one of the most persistent aspects of Yaraomic culture and unifies its people across vast distances.

SUDESAAN: Set. Small fortified coastal city in the west of KAZZAR⁽²⁾, in the region of TASALOTT. It is known for its trophy hunting, the spoils of which are trades south, where they find their way on the market along the IVORY ROAD (Pop. c. 15,000).

SUDHA: Set. eastern-most of the TETRARCHY capitals in JURRAS⁽²⁾. It is a major stop along the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 338,200).

SUDIA: Ser. Small settlement in the c of KORACHAN, some 20-miles of the wastes of UCHOS. It also forms part of the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 2,800).

SUDIVA: Set. Fortified city in the north of CISNERIA, in the DIVUMMA
Mountains, and forms the backbone of the holdings of CLAN GYSTAR. It was once at the heart of the UMBRA industry in Cisneria, after reserves were first discovered there in c. 3630 RM. The region around the city was exploited for the next centuries, with any other cities and siphon engines appearing around it, all vassals to Sudiva, which became very powerful and influential.

Over time the production of umbra decreased, leading to the slow abandonment of its vassal towns, and all that remains of them today are the rusting engines and ghost towns, echoing a past prosperity. The descendants of these deserted mining communities moved south and most are now guards of the pipeline that runs south to Velverda and east to Essevera.

Sudiva continues to operate despite waning umbra reserves in the area, mostly due to it being the centre of clan Gystars industries and a great source of income. 'Hardy like a Sudivan' is a common saying in Cisneria, denoting the perseverance and hard work of the people of this city (Pop. c. 50,000).

SUDLATU: Set. Coastal highland region in the west of KORACHAN.

SUDON: Rui. Arc. Large stone throne in the hinterlands of the south of GNOTH, just north of the border with OPHIUSSA. The throne is ancient, dating back some millennia to the early centuries of the FIFTH AGE, and is large – certainly too large for a present-day GIGANRI, indicating it was created for something larger, though it is speculated that the first giganri were larger than their present-day descendants.

The throne is ruined, covered in lichen and moss, the nickel arch that once crowned its back now broken, its inscriptions now marred and illegible. There are few ruins in the surrounding region to corroborate its origins and its source remains a mystery to this day.

SUDOR IFAH: also 'the Crying Forest'. For. Tropical forest dominating the c of BANT, in the CARCHEMISHI PENINSULA^(1.), in the east of SAMMAEA. It is known for its incredibly humid air and is known to locals as the crying forest on account of this.

SUDRAH: Mil. Str. Fort in the south of EZASUH^(2,), guarding the delta of the river EZASH.

SUDROHIR: Rvr. Coastal wetlands along the north eastern coast of EZASUH⁽²⁾, overlooking the SEA OF LIAKARRA.

SUDRUM: 1. Geo. Small island off the northern coast of KHULL. The island was revealed in c. 3380 RM and has slowly grown in size since then, following the lowering of ELYDEN'S seas.

2. See. City and harbour in the north west of \underline{KHULL} , overlooking the above island (1.) (Pop. c. 120,000).

SUDUKI: Set. Settlement in the far north of PORPHYR. It is located in the region of BASHINDA, which is noted for its rich ore reserves. Its main industry is mining (Pop. c. 5,500).

SUDUNIR: Sea. Sea dividing the north west of LLACHATUL from the north east of MENISCEA. The name has fallen out of fashion over the past centuries, and has now largely been replaced by the SEA OF ERTHYDEA.

SUDUNIR BASIN, the: Geo. Drainage basin formed by various continental divides in the continents of LLACHATUL and MENISCEA, including parts of the LLACHATULI DIVIDE. The basin comprises part of the north west of Llachatul and the east of Meniscea and all rivers within it drain directly into the SEA OF SUDUNIR.

Nations and territories that are at least partially within the Sudunir Basin include: ELAT, RAONGEN⁽²⁾, and THE VORANDINE, amongst others.

SUDYN: Set. Farming settlement in the c south of LAASKHA, in the region of KAARAFFAR (Pop. c. 3,700).

SUEATI: Rui. Abandoned fortress in the c of KHARKHARADONTIS, that once guarded the eastern-most lands of the KINGDOM OF THE HOLY LAND OF KHARKHARADONTIS. It was abandoned alongside the Holy Land in c. 3060 RM, and remains today, an expansive crumbling ruin thought to be populated by DEGENERATES and outcasts.

SUECTUNA: Rvr. River in the c north of OPHAR, flowing north west for over 350-miles from sources in the NEGUAR Mountains and the plains of OPRET^(1.).

SUED: Set. One of 5 isolated self-sufficient city-states in the south of DURCHAA^(1,) whose people revere the so-called Gibbering serpent – an entity believed to dwell in the darkest reaches of the MAW OF DORMORRO. They clash with rival cults, each of which is based in another city-state near the Maw, and has its own beliefs surrounding the Maw (Pop. c. 2,800).

 $\underline{SUESSUD}; \ \mathit{Set.}\ Major\ city\ in\ the\ \underline{ZOHELETHI\ BASIN}\ in\ the\ c\ east\ of\ \underline{PARTHIS}\ (Pop.\ c.\ 133,000).$

SUEVRA: Set. Coastal settlement in the north of KORACHAN, near the mouth of the river ENDRACH. The settlement is a source of fish and other seafood, most of which is transported to TANTAL and DEOCHAN (Pop. c. 2,500).

SUEVRAN BASIN: Geo. Large basin in the north west of KORACHAN, bordered by the OTHACHA, RHAECHA, RUTHUNODA and SUDLATU Mountains.

SUEZHUNI ISLANDS: Geo. Island-chain off the northern coast of the SULTANATE OF ABACARDAT, made up of six major island the largest of which is AZZANA. The islands are uninhabited and of little value to Abacardat, which largely ignores them. Rumours of a chorsair base somewhere in the island-chain have been ignored until now.

SUFFRAGANEUS: Plr. 'Suffraganeuses'. Rel. Rnk. Amongst worshippers of the ASSEERI PANTHEON in ESHIR^(2.), keepers of temples where idols of the various patron saints (Demigods) are located. They maintain the temples and organise the yearly festivals that take place, where members of the laity take the idol and carry it throughout the streets of the city. In the past, when the Pantheon was overseen by a single organised institution that help much more power, the Suffraganeuses were also more powerful, and they wielded great power across their cities.

 $\underline{\text{SUFRA}}$: Geo. Region in the south west of $\underline{\text{LYRIDIA}}$, rich in gold, but contested between $\underline{\text{LYRIDIA}}$ and the free state of $\underline{\text{DACIA}}$.

SUGGAN: Set. Coastal city in the north east of the BARRIER LANDS, overlooking the south of the SEA OF ESCHATA (Pop. c. 43,000).

SUGHRA: Lak. Highland lake in the c west of the MULL CITY-STATES in the TOLIASOR Mountain-chain.

SUGUNDA: Geo. Grassland in the c north of SAGITTARIA and home to most of its wildlife.

SUGUNIA: Set. Major city in the south east of SURUTUR. It is a hub of logging and other woodland industries (Pop. c. 750,200).

SUHA: 1. also 'THE NEGLECTED ONE'. m. Myt. His. Per. In the mythology and ancient history of ELYDEN, a SCION of the DEMIURGE ASHTERATH, named after his abandonment upon birth. He was a scourge upon the ancient landscape, a calamity given mortal form. He hunted in the hinterlands of civilisation, becoming a legendary figure until his defeat at the hands of OSSELDOR (a scion of RACHANAEL). See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

2. Set. Coastal settlement in the far south east of $\underline{ATARAXIA}$ (Pop. c. 5,200).

SUHE: Dem. 'Suhish'. His. Ntm. Now-extinct culture that occupied the EZASUHI PENINSULA between c. -900 and 109 RM, in what is present-day EZASUH⁽²⁾. SAGITTARRI exiles landed on the peninsula in c. 17 RM following their persecution in Korachan. They established their own settlements, but over the coming decades they subjugated the native Suhe people, and by 109 RM the region had become known as Ezasuh, the Korachani name for the land. See Vol III: Extinct States.

SUHISHI: His. Lan. Now-extinct language that was spoken by the people of SUHE, an early Fifth Age culture that existed on the EZASUHI PENINSULA, who were overthrown and absorbed by SAGITTAARI immigrants. See Vol II: Languages.

 $\underline{\underline{SUHLKERA}}\!:$ Mil. Rnk. Warrior-caste in \underline{TAHALL} trained in the college of DASALL.

SUHRSIP: (B. 2743 – D. 2902 RM) NOAVATURI explorer who first fully charted the SAMMAIDAN OCEAN. In 2802 RM he witnessed a powerful FIRMAMENTAL eruption off the southern coast of BROR^(1.) that crippled the economy of the island-nation of ARCHAEDON^(2.) In 2812 RM he documented and studied the people of the CORAL BARONIES.

SUHUVAR: Ind. Expansive network of open cast iron mines in the c of PERGOST, abandoned towards the end of the ELDRIAN empire. Now derelict, they are ignored and have been largely reclaimed by nature.

SUIT, ACERGENE: see ACERGENE SUIT.

SUIT, DIVINIFUGUE: see DIVINIFUGUE SUIT.

SUIT, HARD: see HARDSUIT

SUIT, REALITY: see REALITY SUIT.

SUIT, SOFT: see SOFTSUIT.

SUIT, SOUL: see SOULSUIT.

SUKA: Mil. Str. Fortress in the far north of ROMOREA⁽²⁾, in the southern face of the STRAMINEA Mountains, guarding one of two sources of the BARAQ AQUEDUCT, which provides water to the capital, IONOL, over 54-miles away.

SUKETH: Set. Major city in the south of THETIS, in the PETEHAROTHIS region. Like many other cities in the region, it is fortified against the harsh winter sandstorms that wrack the Peteharothis, and opens its doors to the nemis nomads in winter as they seek shelter. It is also a major religious city, with various temple and shrines to the diverse pantheon of KATHISIS, as well as a great cathedral to KATHISIS himself (Pop. c. 117.000).

SUKH, GULF OF: Sea. Gulf forming the southern-most part of the SEA OF DEKANA in north western KARAKHAS.

SUKKALMAD: Pol. Soc. For many centuries between c. 900 – 1800 RM, the most powerful PATRICIAN HOUSE in VENTHIR, dominating trade around the ARID TRIPTYCH. It remains today, and is a major operator of sea shipping and transportation across the DARK SEA and to the east. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

SUKKOTH: m. Myt. His. Per. In the mythology and ancient history of ELYDEN, a SCION of the DEMIURGE ALLAISHADA who is mentioned in the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN for having gone on a long redemption quest after having becoming corrupted by an ancient MESOCHTHON and being castigated by his father.

He spent his last centuries as an itinerant, helping those he came across. He is said to have died in the early FIFTH AGE in what is now THE SURRACH, in a pre-CHEGRINTISH city that is now ruined, and was buried within a stone temple whose location has since been lost. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

SUKRAHIR: Set. Coastal settlement in the north east of EZASUH⁽²⁾ (Pop. c. 10,000).

Sett. 1. Settlement in the south west of LYRIDIA DHAI (Pop. c. 3,800).
 Settlement in the c south west of ALMAGEST, overlooking lake BITHYN^(1.). The settlement lies along the course of the RED ROUTE and is known for its hard savoury pastries, which are sold to merchants as trail food (Pop. c. 5,400).

SULAD: Sec. Coastal settlement on the island of SONUIAN off the northern coast of KEPHUAAN (Pop. c. 4,400).

SULAEN: 1. Geo. Hills in the north of MECHABET, running for over 200-miles west-to-east overlooking the coast of DHAN and ERUISA.

2. Mil. Str. Fortified bulwarks along the DHAN coast in the north of MECHABET, PARTHIS. Though mostly in decline, parts of the wall remain intact – a series of high bulwarks jutting out of the cliffs, facing the once-submerged coastal shelf of Sulaen.

SULALACH: Rui. Ruined city in the prefecture of ERESENEA, in the west of HOLOLACH^(L). The city was abandoned in c. 3480 RM as the retreat of the SEA OF LIAKARRA became too costly to maintain. At its height in c. 3120 RM the city boasted a population of no less than 25,000.

SULAMIA: Set. Fortified settlement in the west of ZHARIAH^(2.) in the SHAROOK Highlands. It originated in 2941 RM as a base to exiled members of the House of HINOL who would later march into Qaralam to found a new sultanate. It was abandoned after that, though people eventually gravitated to the region, becoming trappers and hunters, selling pelts and hides to the east (Pop. c. 8,000).

SULAR: Lak. Lake in the east of LAASKHA, in the east hills of the ARCANTHEA Mountain along the course of the river PARRAN.

SULATH: Set. Town in the far south of ALMAGEST, surrounding a high walled citadel; an old MANUFACTORY. Though disused for centuries, lights can occasionally be seen shining in the upper levels of the fort (Pop. c. 6,000).

SULCA: Set. Small city in the c of ERET⁽²⁾. It was the location of an ancient legend involving the persecution of a divine-born monster which was eventually slain there. Few now remember this tale as it belonged to a predecessor culture that was destroyed long ago (Pop. c. 17,200).

SULESIA: Rui. Ancient coastal city in present-day OPHIUSSA. It was once a major polity in the region but found its influence waning as the coastline slowly retreated. It waned throughout the first millennium RM and was abandoned in c. 1020 RM.

SULESIAN: His. Lan. Now-extinct language in present-day OPHIUSSA, common around the city of SULESIA. As the OPHIUSSAN LEAGUE began to consolidate the cities of the region, their many languages began to coalesce into what today is known as NALENI. See Vol II: Languages.

SULHAFAT: Set. Fortified city in the far south east of THE SURRACH, positioned 10-miles north of the TROPIC OF RAH, guarding a wide valley that leads into ETUA. The Sulhafati people are insular and hardened by years of war with the ETUANI nomads (Pop. c. 11,750).

SULLAR: Rvr. River in the c south of NAARETH, flowing south for 400miles from sources in the IROTHA and CEPHAS Mountains. It is one of two major tributaries of the river ABASHERA, the other being the TULAR.

SULLUHIR: Set. Small city in the west of EZASUH^(2.). Its main industry is logging (Pop. c. 13,500).

SULLUKUR: Geo. Badlands in the south west of KHULL, close to the border with the VESPERTINE LEAGUE.

SULPHUR ROAD, the: Com. Geo. Trade-route between KORACHAN and VÂRR, named after the sulphur trade that once moved west into Korachan from Vârr. Though the sulphur trade is now dead, the name remains, denoting the over 600-mile stretch of road linking HERESI in the west with NOUVATAI in the east. See Vol II: Major Trade Routes.

SULRACH: 1. Oth. Lan. KORACHANI word for the OTHERWORLD.

2. Geo. Wasteland.

SULRACHARII: also 'animist', 'Astral Projector'. Nou. 'Sulracharear'. Plr.
'Sulrachariin'. Sup. Org. Mil. Rnk. Order of SHAPERS in the KORACHANI EMPIRE, whose MINASTERIA (2.) has been based in the city of LARACE in the region of SO'ULDUR in the c of SKAROS since 3058 RM. Members of the order are ATRAMENTAL shapers whose SPHERE allows them to communicate with SPIRITS (1.) and interact with the OTHERWORLD, perhaps most famously being capable of ASTRAL PROJECTION.

Most Sulrachariin turn to roles of guidance, offering their services to people who seek to contact the otherworld. This is usually relatives seeking closure with the spirits of dead relatives, though they are often called upon by law enforcement to look for evidence or clues directly from the dead. This is hardly a science and the shaper will be the first person to admit that communication with spirits can be quite oblique, with them rarely providing straight answers, and often leading to more questions being asked. They can also be EXORCISTS, often working for the MINASTERIA OF EXORCISMS, where they cleanse places and people of malevolent spirits.

Sulrachariin often find themselves working in symbolic roles within the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, using their closeness with spirits and the otherworld in a theological capacity. Some become ordained as priests and become popular speakers and demagogues, using their abilities to gain the support of their congregation.

They can sometimes serve as psychopomps to the spirits of the recently dead, helping them find their way to the otherworld and navigate through it. Other Sulrachariin are capable of Astrally Projecting their thoughts into the otherworld, where they undertake astral travels, exploring the otherworld and its denizens. The more accomplished of these shapers can even do this to other willing MORTALS, a difficult process that can be facilitated through the use of drugs or TECHNARCANE machinery. Some unfortunate Sulrachariin may be interred in HEART ENGINES, where they are lobotomised to destroy their individuality, forced to spend their lives in misery, working until their bodies eventually give out. This is often used as punishment by the Minasteria for Sulrachariin who break the laws of their kind.

Those of a more martial inclination may become guardians to or from regions where the OVERLAY between the otherworld and the MATERIAL PLANE is strong, making it dangerous for mortals to be close by.

Some Sulrachariin are able to TELEPATHICALLY converse with OTHERWORLDERS, who typically become more aloof the longer they spend on the Material Plane, making communication with mortals difficult. It is normally difficult to penetrate the thoughts of otherworlders and these Sulrachariin may be able to retrieve memories and fragments from their mortal lives even if they are unable to communicate with them. See Vol IV: Spheres and types of Shaping.

SULSUN: Set. Settlement in the south east of KREM. It is known for its goat herds (Pop. c. 6,000).

SULTA: Sea. Bay in the east of LAASKHA, its waters largely still.

SULTANATE: Pol. Rnk. A state of country ruled by a Sultan. The nations of ABACARDAT, PARAIYA, QARALAM, SABAISA, SHAZGIN, and the SOLEYN TERRITORIES, are currently all sultanates.

SULTANATTE, JAHINN: Pol. Org. The government of ABACARDAT, which is ruled by the JAHINN⁽²⁾ caste.

SULTANATE, PARAIYAN: Pol. The ruling government of PARAIYA since 3821 RM. *

SULTAN'S TRAIL, the: Rel. Soc. Pilgrimage in ABACARDAT. It follows places of importance to the IAHINN caste⁽²⁾. Every new Sultan must undertake the trail alone (with their entourage within safe distance observing them, but not interacting with them). Once the Sultan completes the trail, pilgrims are free follow in their footsteps. Some Sultans have either failed or refused to undertake the trail, meaning that pilgrims are forbidden by law from doing it, though some stubborn ones still undertake it. Those caught doing so are brought before the Sultan, who decides on their fate.

SULUS: lit. 'fresh water'. Set. Fortified city in the far east of the tribe of ILLPHAGOS, along the border with Jacitta in the west of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. Once-capital of Illphagos, it was left ruined by an earthquake in 3599 RM and was abandoned following an outbreak of ATRAMENTAL PLAGUE 100 years later. The capital was then moved to SOPHIUSA. Today Sulus is a major city along the SALT ROAD (Pop. c. 30,000).

SULUSKHA: Rui. Abandoned city in the south of LAASKHA. The city was a thriving port, and a stop along THE SHADOW MARCH, with a population of 300,000 at its height in c. 3100 RM, though it began to dwindle by c. 3200 RM, when the SEA OF DUULAA dried up, leaving behind a salt-filled basin. The city was abandoned by c. 3350 RM and decays to this day.

SUMA'YA: 1. Dem. 'Suma'yan'. Ntn. Situated in the north of SAMMAEA, just west of the DAARKEN GULE, Suma'ya is a dry land whose history has been marred by ATRAMENTAL TAINT. It is of a semi-arid climate with hot dry summers and mild winters.

It emerged to occupy the political void left by the departure of KORACHAN from the south of BA'AKH in 3103 RM after 3-centuries of stewardship under the DOMNITORS. While the north of Ba'akh was handed over to SATHEP THE RISEN during the SARASTROAN SANCTION, the south was allowed to rot, with only SARASTROAN slavers paying it any attention.

Political strife engulfed the region following its abandonment as a leaderless populace squabbled amongst the degenerate-filled ruins of their occupiers' old cities to claim the few working siphon engines that would keep them safe from the growing ATRAMENTAL TAINT that was slowly engulfing their lands. The land fractured into rival warring cities that attacked their neighbours even as they struggled to survive, and by around 3310 RM a nameless ATRAMENTIST emerged as dominant in the city of Suma'ya⁽¹⁾, having subjugated his neighbours and driven all degenerates out of populated areas, where they were left to wander the wilderness between cities as their industries were restored.

A form of stability returned to the region in the decades that followed, by which time the Atramentist had become known as the TYRANT OF SUMA'YA. A cult of personality developed around the Tyrant, developed into a crude religion that by 3416 RM had become known as the CULT OF SACRIFICE.

Prior to its independence, the region had advanced SIPHON ENGINE technology, developing a method where sufferers of AEPATHY and LARVAL SIPHONS were interred within the engines to control the leaching of ATRAMENTAL energies from the ambient. Before long people were willingly sacrificing themselves to the process, bringing prestige to their families and instilling a hierarchy of class based on the number of sacrifices a family made to keep the Atramenta at bay.

The Tyrant preached insularity and xenophobia, and after his death and deification as the PROPHET OF THE RAVENOUS HEART in c. 3900 RM, the nation continued to withdraw from the international platform, avoiding the attentions of its larger neighbours where possible. It maintains a presence amongst other nations via the SALT ROAD, though it is very selective with who it allows within its borders, and foreign merchants are only allowed into the cities of THRAYA in the south and ERU'YA in the north. Between those two cities, it only allows its own merchants to travel and trade. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

2. Pol. Set. City and capital of the eponymous nation, occupying the southern territories of Suma'ya⁽¹⁾. The city was founded millennia ago by DHAMATEANS during a massive outbreak of ATRAMENTAL TAINT that had left much of their lands ruined. With the city of AGUR filled to bursting point with refugees, those who could not enter its walls were left to wander the wastes of DHAMATEA, until in -451 RM they found the relatively safe region around the river AGA. Though the inimical advance of the Atramenta left the region heavily scarred, abandoned, by c. -100 RM

Following the rise of the Telraasi Atramentists who restored Dhamatea and Dhea, renaming them Ba'akh in -29 RM, Suma'ya was taken by Telraasi lieutenant Ateth, who set about rebuilding the city. The city slowly recovered, though never became more than a moderately-sized settlement, serving the larger Thraya in the south, which had become a large caravanserai. With the handing over of Ba'akh to the DOMNITORS in 2732 RM, Suma'ya was effectively abandoned, allowed to govern itself. It grew somewhat in this period, though without imperial patronage, the rise was only ephemeral, and the city had diminished into a frontier town by c. 2900.

The full imperial abandonment of the region in 3097 RM saw the city diminish further, with a succession of warlords and tyrants taking control of its fraught people, until in c. 3265 RM a charismatic orator emerged. A cult of personality emerged around the figure, and by c. 3300 RM he had elevated the city to greatness, subjugating surrounding nations, taking their populace to Suma'ya, where the city prospered greatly.

The city grew east to the banks of the river Aga from the original settlement founded in .451 RM, abandoning the hewn escarpment district to erosion and weathering. It grew over the next centuries to the point that it was able to counter the sporadic SARASTROAN forays into the region. It remains now as the safest city and capital of southern Ba'akh, which was in 3502 RM renamed Suma'ya (Pop. c. 298,000).

SUMAAR: Sct. Coastal city in the south east of NAARETH, overlooking the GULF OF VEGATETH (Pop. c. 50,000).

SUMANDA: Geo. Crescent-shaped cliffs around 115-miles long, overlooking the SEA OF URADA in the KORACHANI colony of AMONDOR, south of the TOLIASOR Mountains.

SUMARRA: Sea. Bay forming the western-most part of the SEA OF LIAKARRA in north western EZASUH⁽²⁾.

SUMASSA: Set. Conurbation in the north of AHKA, controlling dozens of rural hamlets in a 20-miles radius. The region surrounding the main city of Sumassa is fertile and known for its varied crops (Pop. c. 20,000).

SUMAT: also 'the Half City'. Set. Sumat lies across the border between KHURAUR and KARAKHAS and is partially controlled by both governments. It is a vital part of the SALT ROAD and taxes trade that passes across its gates, growing wealthy as a result (Pop. c. 33,000).

SUMBRAT: Set. Coastal settlement in the north of EZASUH^(2,). Its primary industry is crab farming (Pop. c. 8,000).

SUMEA: Set. Settlement in the c north west of LIDEA, known for its coal production. It forms a part of the SALT ROAD, and much of its coal is sold off to merchants (Pop. c. 6,200)

SUMERA: Set. Settlement in the PARTHISAN colony of NISSA in the far south of CUTH. Its main industry is the mining of BLOODSTONES (Pop. c. 3,400).

SUMESI: Sct. City in the c west of AHOPAH. It is home to the fabled CRUCIBLE OF THE ACCORD and the birthplace of the religion of ISTAR^(2.) It forms a part of the VAEVECTAN TRAIL and is a major economic centre (Pop. c. 80,000).

SUMI: Lan. Geo. KNAESSI word meaning river.

SUMMANDER VALTARIS: (B. 3941 RM) Pol. Ruling Oligarch of the island-nation of OD MEGINNAS^(1.).

SUMMANDI: Set. Small city in the north of METHUMN, along the course of the river HELAGHILRA (Pop. c. 13,750).

SUMMAR, the TEMPLE-CITY OF: Set. Free-city in LLACHATUL, to the north of ATARAXIA, and in the far west of CISNERIA, in the BLACK MOUNTAINS. It exists outside of the political structures of the clans of Cisneria, though is considered part of the holy-Kingdom nevertheless. Little is known of the temples after which it is named or what divinities they revere (Pop. c. 50,000).

SUMMER FLOWER: Bev. Wine produced in the region and city of ABEBE in the north west of TZALLRACH. See Vol II: Beverages.

SUMMER WARS: period in the history of KOLCHIS, between 1325 and 1513 RM, characterised by civil strife and insurgent groups that stood against the ruling regime. It is so-named for the relative inactivity in the dark winter months, and the sudden burst of activity in summer, with warlords campaigning and armies marching and fighting before retreating for the winter. The period is also known for the many ALMAGEST incursions into the land, characterised by coastal pirate raids.

SUMMON: Lake in the east of KORACHAN, along the path of the river ICHORIA.

SUMMOTIA: Set. Small city in the region of TUSENTAL in the c of THE SURRACH. Summotia is known for the cave-dwelling hermits who live outside the city proper – a tradition dating back centuries (Pop. c. 20,000).

SUMNETH: Set. Fortified settlement in the far north of AETHIOS. It is located in the region of DAGESARETH and its main industry is the quarrying of SOULSTONES on an industrial level (Pop. c. 10,000).

SUMOCHADEA: Set. Major city in the far east of EREBETH, presently at the border of contested territories with CYHLAGHARR. The city was once a hub for the noble families and households in Erebeth and was known for its fine food and art. Today it is a changed city, diminished, its eastwards deserted and bombed to ruin, with much of the Erebethian military recruited from there (Pop. c. 48,000).

SUMPTUARY DECREE, the: Int. Law. His. Decree enacted by the COUNCIL OF SEVEN in the KORACHANI EMPIRE in 3715 RM as a part of austerity measures introduced in the wake of the SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE that limits spending on personal items by all its people, from HELOTS to PATRICIANS, though there are differences based on class, with patricians granted far more leniency. The Decree was never truly enforced, though some who disregarded the law found themselves used as examples to others.

Various loopholes have been found and exploited by KORACHANI people over the years, with most patricians fully disregarding it.

SUMRAH: Set. Farming region in the north west of BASSORAH⁽²⁾, comprised of many individual villages under the protection of a larger central town, close to the border with SKAROS (Pop. c. 6,200).

SUMRAMRU: Rvr. River in the south west of TAHALL, flowing for 330-miles from sources in the HARKONNA Mountains before emptying in the SEA OF SERPENTS.

SUN JESOON: Ind. Sct. Mining settlement in the east of KREM. Like most settlements in the region, it is a major source of AIMANT (Pop. c. 6,500).

SUN KOWAN: Ind. Set. Mining settlement in the east of KREM. Like most settlements in the region, it is a major source of AIMANT (Pop. c. 7,200).

SUN TACA: Set. City in the west of SURUTUR. It is a hub of military activity, and its forces patrol the border with RHEA (Pop. c. 40,000).

SÛN: Sea. Sea to the east of the SHADOW SEA forming the first part of the SEA OF TIAMA and dividing the nation of SCYTHEA.

SUNAESS: 1. Geo. Small island 11-miles off the SATHERI peninsula, along the north western coast of PELASGOS.

2. Set. Settlement on the above island in PELASGOS (Pop. c. 3,000).

SUNBULB: Sup. Flo. Woody vine-like tree with gnarly bark and tough twisting branches that is common to the east of MENISCEA, particularly rocky regions of EIKARTHYEA, CYAE, TAHOMIA, and ENDUI. Its branches form a cradle around which grow large orange fruit known as bulbs that grow to around 18" ide and are semitranslucent, with soft nectar-like pulp that is considered a bitter-sweet delicacy.

Its fruit are an incredible source of nutrients and are considered a panacea by those who eat them, claiming that they contribute to their longevity, though overconsumption has the side-effect of turning ones' eyes and hair orange, and creates calcium that accumulates in the body, causing bones to deform over many decades.

As a result, communities of people that eat sunbulbs as part of their regular diets have pale skin, orange hair and eyes and their elderly have strange hunches and misshapen bodies.

Modern ALCHEMICAL medicine can extract the benefits of the fruit and nullifies most of the ill side-effects, producing an expensive medicine that grants long life to those that consume it regularly. The production of this medicine has become a lucrative business and it is rare to find wild sunbulbs in inhabited areas as their cultivation is now privatised. This is particularly the case in Ednui, where it has become its main industry. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

SUNBASKER: Fau. Large SYNAPSIDS native to arid regions of the south of SAMMAEA, notably the wastes of MAENMIST, PHYRR, and HOGGOTHA ISZ. They are massive, growing up to 25-ft. in length, with disproportionately-small heads. They are omnivorous, eating anything they come across, and are named after their sedentary lifestyle, in which they spend most of every day basking in the sun. some scholars have postulated whether they draw sustenance in this way, though this is asyet unconfirmed. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

SUNDALA: Ind. Set. Mining settlement in the east of Krem. Like most settlements in the region, it is a major source of AIMANT (Pop. c. 6,500).

SUNDERED BELL, the: His. Obj. A historic bronze BELL now in a museum in the GREATTOWN of DUARIAHAHN in TEMUJA. The bell was the first one cast after the unification of the disparate tribes of Temuja by the LEGEND MAGHORA, being used for centuries within Duariahahn.

It was struck by lightning in 3152 RM and was severely damaged, though remains a beloved artefact of the founding days of Temuja.

SUNDERED EARTH: also 'the Separation'. Geo. Region in the west of TZALLRACH, directly south of the BROKEN LANDS. The land in this region is broken into clefts; remnants of the CATACLYSM OF KHAMID. Earthquakes are common, as are collapses of coastal shelves into the sea, which are rebuilt by occasional volcanic outbursts along the coast.

SUNDERED STATES OF FARAVAR, the: His. Ntn. Short-lived independent region that appeared in the south of present-day SARASTRO (then known as SAOSTANA).

As Saostana fell under the rule of the SAOSHYANTS in -172 RM, many regions who had recognised the sovereignty of the SAOSTANAN DYNASTIES opposed this change in leadership. In the south, the city of FARAVAR and its closest allies, HAGRADEA and MORULAURGO, failed to honour the Saoshyants, and in -138 RM joined with the newly risen Dynast Sakhon Re, declaring their independence from Saostana, leading to the birth of the 'Sundered States of Faravar'. Sakhon Re was welcomed in Faravar as a symbolic leader, particularly as the line of ARGDUNS following Oracai had grown weak since her death. Despite Sakhon Re's assassination in -132 RM, Faravar remained independent from Saostana, the capital of the so-called Sundered States.

The fragmentation of the NATHI KINGDOM to the east led to Saostana growing more confident, reclaiming many of its lost territories by -90 RM. Within a few decades the Saoshyants had made clear their intentions and in -51 RM they declared full war on the Sundered States, eventually occupying Faravar in -37 RM, bringing the rule of the Sundered States to an end after little more than a century of independence. See Vol III: Extinct States.

SUNDERING OF THE KORACHANI EMPIRE, the: Pol. Rel. Com. His.

Major political, social, religious and economic event that saw the KORACHANI EMPIRE fracture into two separate entities on the 23rd of NIHAVALEN 3705 RM – THE HIGH EMPIRE OF KORACHAN dominating the south of CENTRAL LLACHATUL, and the REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO, in the north of SAMMAEA, south of the INNER SEA – following the WAR OF SUNDERING, that broke out in 3703 RM following the VENTHIRI declaration of war on Sarastro.

This sundering took place after a lengthy period of unease that began in c. 3562 RM, when the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR withdrew from public life. Various events are now believed to have contributed to the war, including:

– the foundation in ARGEA of the blasphemous SARASTROAN ORTHODOXY late in the 37th century RM. Its main tenet was a refuting of the divinity of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR. This caused a schism within the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, leading to a widespread internal conflict within the Church that led to fighting within the HOLY PRECINCT. The matter was resolved on the 21st of ALGOLEN 3704 RM, with the CONCLAVE OF KHADON, which ratified the existence of the Orthodoxy, which was formally established in Argea.

- the declaration of war by Queen Hetepheres of Venthir on Sarastro on the $11^{\rm th}$ of Cykranalen 3703 RM, that cascaded into the War of Sundering.
- most of the territory of \underline{JURRAS} is taken as a vassal of $\underline{PARTHIS}$ on the 6^{th} of \underline{MURDAD} 3703 RM after years of independence.
- the BA'AKHI proclamation of freedom in 3704 RM as a direct consequence of the chaos that followed the War of Sundering. It was able to fully break free from Sarastroan vassalage in early in 3705 RM, months before Sarastro itself broke away from Korachan.
 the possible actions of the group known as the PATERNOVA. Now believed to have had a hand in shaping certain events that together contributed to the state of unease around the Inner Sea at the time
- over a century of corruption and mismanagement by THE SEVEN, who squandered much of imperial riches on mercenaries and extravagances they could not afford.

SUNDERING OF TONGUES: Lan. Myt. His. In the mythology and ancient history of ELYDEN, the punishment the MORTAL RACES suffered after the dream of the DEMIURGES to reach THE SHAPER using the BRIDGE OF ETERNITIES was destroyed. As punishment the Demiurges were shorn of their powers of creation, and the mortals were scattered throughout Elyden, their tongue – but one language at that time, known as the UR-TONGUE – sundered into dozens of different languages, robbing the mortals of the boon of communication amongst each other. See Vol IV: the Mythologia Elyden.

SUNDOR: Set. City in SHOTHA, in the c. north of LLACHATUL and until c. 3810 RM its capital (after which the capital was moved to FAEAMUN). It was built by refugees of the many wars and conquests of the region and was a stronghold of the DESOLATI and remains a centre for their mercenaries to this day (Pop. c. 40,000).

SUNKEN CITADEL, the: see AMOTHIL.

of the war.

SUNKEN CITY, the: see also KITHAMAR.

SUNKEN GARDENS OF STENNIA: Soc. Flo. Str. Public gardens in the city of DEOCHAN that run for a straight 2-mile stretch, allowing citizens a respite from the harsh realities of work.

 $\underline{SUNNAD}\!\!:$ Set. Settlement in the south west of \underline{SERROK} (Pop. c. 3,800).

SUNNANA: Rvr. Small river flowing west for 60-miles from the TISTAR hills, forming a border between south eastern LYRIDIA and north western TAMAR. It is a tributary of the river KORNA.

SUNNIFERÉ: Set. Fortified coastal city in the east of the BARRIER LANDS, along the course of the IVORY ROAD. It is known for its militant caste, whose members take protection money from merchants travelling along the road. They are known to clash with the KNIGHTS AENEOUS (Pop. c. 48,000).

SUNOTHA: Set. Conurbation in the c of KORACHAN, in the region of RUTHUNODA, and last major remnant of the farmlands of what is now the plain of TUL l'GHMIH. Major producer of livestock, mostly for consumption in the larger cities around the peninsula (Pop. c. 32,000).

SUNSEEKER: His. Obj. Shield belonging to the eastern hero ARIOCH OF MOETIA.

SUNSTONE: Ele. Rare metamorphic rocks that are common in FIRMAMENTALLY TAINTED areas. They possess an innate energy that causes them to heat up and produce their own light. Though named for the latter property, their most important use is the former, which allows them to power engines, typically by immersing them in water, which produces steam, which, when pressurised, can power turbines, producing electricity. The steam is cooled, collected and reused as water in a process known as the DANDRAXAN CYCLE.

Sunstones are incredibly valuable but are likewise very dangerous, and emit highly concentrated Firmamental taint, which is inimical to living creatures causing them great physical and mental harm and also death via prolonged or concentrated exposure. See Vol IV: the Materia Omna.

SUNSTONE ENGINE: Sup. Tec. Mechanical engine or power station that produces energy through the use of one or more SUNSTONES via the DANDRAXAN CYCLE.

SUNT: Geo. Hilly region in the west of NORTHERN SIMBARA.

SUNTANA: Set. Small coastal city in MARACHA in the far north west of THE SURRACH (Pop. c. 18,400).

SUNTARA: Mus. Obj. Soc. Handheld sting musical instrument that is common in LIDEA, MHAROKK, and HARAPPA⁽³⁾. Bands made up of up to two dozen performers are a common sight in squares and markets in these regions, and their sounds carry across most of their cities.

SUNTOS: Rui. Abandoned city in the c of PELASGOS.

SUNÛNA: Set. Rural conurbation in the west of KORACHAN, supplying food to the city of NEKODA, which lies 17-miles to the south (Pop. c. 2,800).

SUOR: Dem. 'Suori'. Ntm. Located to the south of ANUBIA and west of NAARETH in the north east of SAMMAEA, Suor is a subtropical nation that lies south of the Tropic of Rah. The north is dry, and the south is dominated by verdant savannahs. Weather varies little throughout the year, with the north having a rainy season that lasts around 2 months, with this increasing to 4 months.

Suor was founded in 3496 RM, following close to thirteen decades of chaos and persecution at the hands of the genocidal EGRET CRUSADES that were perpetrated by the KORACHANI EMPIRE against so-called 'heathen' peoples. Ironically the region had been observing a corrupted form of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, which had been introduced there by the imperial explorer NAVAH BERDEN millennia earlier, in 598 RM. He brought with him many imperial customs, some of which persist to this day, including the reverence for crossroads, which has resulted in a long-standing caste of road guardians known as BASSORANS^(1.).

The Crusades decimated the region around the SEA OF ORMA, leaving little in the form of a unifying government as opposing groups vied for power. The OTHERWORLDER ARHARNAZHA I emerged from this period with a dedicated following and a brood of HALFBLOOD offspring, which still form the ruling caste of the Suori theocracy to this day.

The Theocracy is recognised as an authoritarianism by outside nations, and its power is concentrated in a few large coastal cities, where the majority of the nation's population is found. Smaller rural settlements exist outside of the main influence of the otherworlder's regime, or otherwise to provide its major cities, such as KIASH and MEGARA with resources.

Suori settlements are traditionally built on hilltops, which are entirely covered in stone buildings, at the centre of which is a large church dedicated to the Suori Church of the Machine. The hearts of these hilltops are filled with catacombs, where the dead are buried. The people of Suor are expert glassmakers and ironworkers and their large greenhouses and conservatories are famed throughout Sammaea, most famed of which is the conservatory-city of Kapurra, which is grows tropical plants that would otherwise not survive in this climate. See Vol III: Extant Realm and Nations.

SUPHET: Pol. Rnk. Regional advisors common in the VESPERTINE LEAGUE and KHULL.

Their origins lie in the persecution of the ORDER OF EPISTEMIC ESOTERY by the AELORAN CHURCH in the $12^{\rm th}$ century RM. Some monasteries escaped judgement due to their isolated locations, largely in the state of INGHULL (later Khull), where members became itinerants, traveling from town to town teaching science and bringing news to isolated people. Some settled down, becoming advisors to regional rulers, with the name suphet first being used late in the $11^{\rm th}$ century.

of Most are elected, though they have been known to be appointed by their superiors, often as repayment for a favour or in particularly corrupt times or areas.

SUPHLATUS: Geo. 1. Common name in KORACHANI-speaking lands given to regions that are barren, often as a result of industry. It may also refer to specific regions:

2. dusty region in the north of SAMMAEA, bordering the north west of HARAPPA(^{3,)} and HOAMMI territories south of SKEIN. The region was a major agricultural centre for many centuries though abuse and mismanagement left the place barren, the farmlands abandoned.

3. wastes in the c of Almagest, surrounding the City of Almagest, to the south east of the Sea of Sekhem and the north east of the Strait of Saecula. The region is noted its many the ruins, detritus and Duststone formations that fill it, all attributable to millennia of pollution from manufactories and industrialised cities, most of which are now in ruins.

The region was so popular with past industrialists due to the geothermal activity in the nearby region of $\underline{CATHULSO}$ that made the region much warmer than its latitude would otherwise have allowed. Indeed, much of the coastline is blanketed in steam that issues from the myriad vents to the north and south of the $\underline{CITYOFALMAGEST}$.

SUPPA: Geo. Sea. Now-dried shallow sea in the east of SAMMAEA that once formed the northern-most expanse of the SEA OF LETHEA that divided the nations of NOAVATUR from PNESSA. Today all that remains of the sea is the GULF OF SAURIAR, which snakes its way into south western Pnessa.

The sea was once a much larger body of water that was home to many coastal settlements with harbours, ports and docks, with a decent fishing trade, though signs of its diminishing were first felt just before 3000 RM, Within 200-years much new land was exposed, including the once-submerged ruins on which the fortress and later capital of IRUT MARKA later appeared.

This diminishing led to a bottleneck appearing between Noavatur and Pnessa that became known as the Gulf of Sauriar, which is now the only link between what remains of the Suppa and the Sea of Lethea, via the STYGAS and the FAMMIN wetlands. north of the bottleneck are many lagoons, salt flats, and salty lakes as a testament to the old sea. Around these geographical features are the many abandoned ruins of ancient coastal cities, many of which were abandoned in the wake of the sea's retreat.

SUPPAR: Set. Settlement in the c west of ALMAGEST, overlooking the SEA OF SAECULA. It pipes raw UMBRA from the north to the capital in Almagest (Pop. c. 4,000).

SUPPLICANTS OF THE LEVIATHAN: Org. Apocalyptic cult that has gained popularity in the north east of BROR^(1.), particularly in RASTAN, KASHAAL and AKHELIZ. The cult has attempted to resurrect, through various means, a MESOCHTHON.

SUPPLICATION OF THE SHADOW: Rel. Seven prayers uttered by priests during the midnight prayers to the UNDYING MACHINE, within the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. The faithful were called to prayer by the tolling of church BELLS.

SUPRANATURAL: Sup. Abilities which are considered rare or near-impossible to achieve through mundane means. Typically, the acts of SHAPERS are referred to as being supranatural as they call upon the MATERIA OMNA to achieve them. See Vol IV: the Materia Omna.

SUPRAVISA: Set. Major city in the east of EPHATTA, in the south west of SAMMAEA. It was once coastal, its streets dominated by canals, but has been permanently landlocked since c. 3400 RM, is now landlocked, though it remains connected to the coast by a large manmade watercourse, with only a small part of the city still using its old canals. (Pop. c. 150,000).

SUPREME LEADER: Pol. Rnk. Elected ruler of LIMOTH⁽¹⁾, chosen by an electoral college made up of the EMIRS⁽⁴⁾ of its five federal districts. The present Supreme Leader is DEOTOTH MUAKKAR.

SUPREME OLIGARCH: His. Pol. Rnk. Historical ruling title of the empire of MEDHAMANN, beneath which were various sycophantic magnates and plutocrats who controlled their own demesnes – each an industrial wasteland populated on one end of the spectrum by exploited SLAVES and decadent plutocrats on the other, with little in between.

SUPREME REVOLUTIONARY ARMY: Pol. Mil. Org. One of many political bodies that is currently vying for control of the failed state of ENITH in the north west of SAMMAEA. It is considered a monarchist faction that supports a return to power of the old monarchy that was ousted in 3984 RM. Though most of the royal family was slain in the violent coup of the government, there remain a few individuals with a claim to the throne, whose supporters founded the Supreme Revolutionary Army.

SUQ: Com. Sprawling marketplaces that dominate city thoroughfares in nations across the north of Sammaea, from THE SURRACH to VENTHIR, including in LIDEA and MHAROKK, amongst others. Despite regulation and law enforcement, the trade of contraband and illegal items remains rampant in most sugs.

SUQ DRANA: Set. City in the north east of CHEIRA (Pop. unknown).

SUQAL: Set. Settlement in the north east of LIDEA, known for its tea production (Pop. c. 6,000).

SUR: 1. Rvr. River and tributary of the river CHANI in the east of KORACHAN.

2. Rui. Ruin in the north west of LAASKHA, abandoned following the change in coastlines in the first centuries of the fourth millennium RM.

SÛR GHATH: 1. Geo. Region in the south west of THE SURRACH, known for its multicultural cities, populated largely by MULLS, DVERGAI and HUMANS, with humans commonly forming a lower caste.

2. Pol. Set. Fortress-city and capital of the eponymous region⁽¹⁾ in THE SURRACH. Much of the city is built in a cliff face and it is renowned for its hewn vaults, some of which go very deep beneath the surface. Most famous are the so-called HAMMER DEEPS. (Pop. c. 67,000).

SUR'ACH: Rui. Deserted city in the west of SUMA'YA, within the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region of RUATHA. Once a major umbra extraction centre, it city was abandoned following the KORACHANI retreat from BA'AKH after three centuries of wane under the custody of the DOMNITORS.

SURABOSK: Set. Fortified city in the north east of the MALANI

HENDECARCHY of CHLORIS. It forms a part of the GREAT ROAD (Pop. c. 49 200)

SURACHAN: Rui. Abandoned city in the far east of LAASKHA, 20-miles from the border with AZAZEM. Prior to the RENAISSANCE CRUSADES, the city was prosperous and home to an influential university. The city was attacked by KORACHANI forces in 1091 RM and razed, its scholars and ATRAMENTISTS burnt as an example to others. The bodies of the slain – numbering in the hundreds of thousands – litter the land around the ruin for miles around.

SURASEA: Rvr. River in the c north of SAGITTARIA, flowing for 475-miles from the north eastern foothills of the KARAKATHARI Mountains before emptying in the SEA OF EBORRA. It has been known to run dry on rare occasions.

SURATT: Lak. Endorheic lake in the north east of ALMAGEST, fed by various rivers.

SURDA: 1. Geo. Region in the c east of THE SURRACH.

2. Set. City-state in the eponymous region in c east of THE SURRACH. Historically, it was known for its tanning industry (Pop. c. 37,000).

SUREN: Ind. Set. Mining settlement in the far south east of TEMUJA, to the west of the SWORD HILLS. It is known for its copper production (Pop. c. 6,200).

SURHET: f. Sup. Pol. His. Rel. Per. (B. 3855 – D. 3931 RM) Historical TETHYSIAN DEMIGODESS (Daughter of the incumbent GOD-KING) who married prince LLYIM of KOMMEA in 3871 RM. Her marriage into Kommean royalty exempted her from the ritualistic slayings that accompany other demigods upon the execution of their parent (the Godking) when a new God-king is chosen, and she lived her days as the royal consort of king Llyim until her death.

Her marriage into the Kommean royal family solidified ties with Tethysia, and the ascension of Llyim to king in 3883 RM became the final step in a political union decades in the making that saw Kommea become a vassal of Tethysia, which it remains to this day.

SURINA: Set. Major city in the north of LAASKHA along a wide pass between the EKALSCA Mountains in the west and EHRANDEA in the east. It is a part of the RED ROUTE, leading to the south east of SKAROS (Pop. c. 84,000).

SURMAS: Myt. His. in the mythology of northern KHARKHARADONTIS, a famed DIALLACH^(1.).

SURNA: Rui. Tec. Abandoned SIPHON ENGINES in the far north of CISNERIA, in the DIVUMMA Mountains. The settlement was abandoned in c. 3850 RM after dwindling umbra reserves made the upkeep untenable.

SURRACH, the: lit. 'many lands'. Dem. 'Surrachi'. Ntn. KORACHANI name for the land of SAVIUD, which occupies an expansive 4,000,000-square-mile area of the north west of SAMMAEA, bordering IZABAL⁽¹⁾, EREBETH, CYHLAGHARR, KHALHAT, and the DAENED SULRACH, some 6,000-miles away from the politicking of the INNER SEA area, though it is still not entirely outside its sphere of influence. The region is known for its many disparate states, city-states, and small demesnes of loosely allied people who share many cultural and ethnic similarities.

Around 2–millennia ago, Korachan was exploring the world outside the INNER SEA REGION, funding colonisation efforts in many regions, including the Surrach. Major efforts at colonisation were made in c. 2300 - 2400 RM, but due to more pressing matters at home as well as difficulties in area the empire was attempting to exploit led to the abandonment of the colonisation effort, though many groups chose to remain there. Some ruins and relics of this original century of colonisation efforts remain, largely in ancient fortresses and harbours, some of which are still in use to this day. Elsewhere, various imperial ruins can be seen.

Until c. 2760 RM the region was a single entity, known as the empire of SELAHIM, that sprawled from the western-coast to the SURRACHI PLAINS in the east. The suicide of emperor Drakugh in 2761 RM after the region was sundered by a great earthquake and volcanic eruption in 2759 RM left the empire leaderless and without direction. The thirteen Ankhs, his closest confidantes, could not elect a leader and their squabbles and power grabbing rapidly descended into a civil war which gripped the region for 13 years, at the end of which the land was divided between the 7 surviving Ankhs and the coalitions of states that had formed during the war. A state of uneasy truce emerged though political backstabbing remained common, leaving borders in a state of constant flux and the emergence of new states commonplace.

By c. 3000 RM the region had become known as Saviud, which means 'conflict' in the native tongue. It was during this time that the region became characterised by its many disparate charismatic leaders, whose ideals shaped the cultures of their respective domains. Though now regarded as tyrants and despots, records show that they were mostly revered (though the verity of our sources is debatable, at best) by their subjects. By c. 3400 RM, the region of Saviud had taken on a cadence little different to that of today, though many city-states and demesnes have come and gone since then.

The region is most characterised to outsiders by its fragmented nature, though this is in no way an indication of an unhealthy culture. The Inner Sea, with its many rivers feeding it and (originally) better climate, was more conductive to the formation of larger nations. THE SURRACH in general, and the western-coast in particular, are in a drier climate with scattered resources. This has made it more difficult for settlements to unite as nations as they have elsewhere. As a result, most settlements in the Surrach appear over places that are rich in a particular resource. This means that most cities tend to have a particular character where most industries and exports revolve around that particular resource. Many cities are dominated by high towers that are built by rich families and dynasties as status symbols as much as they are for defence. Others are known for their street-orchards, with fruit harvested by appointed officials from across the city. Its western coast is known for its high number of ancient merill ruins, exposed in the last centuries by receding waters.

Trade between city-states has become a vital part of life, and merchant caravans are a common sight, snaking across the many territories, trading important commodities and exotic items across the IVORY ROAD. These merchants are an important source of news and lore, and they are famed for their tall tales, otherwise known as SURRACHI TALES. Both sea trade along the western-coast and land trade east into PARTHIS, via its colony in VARTA⁽¹⁾, are also common.

Though each region has its own language, and in many cases each individual city having its own dialect, there is a common root, SAVIUDI, dating back to the original language of CHEGRINT, though divergent evolution has led some areas to now be very different to each other. There exists a pidgin tongue that is commonly employed by merchants and travellers, that uses the simpler words from ancient CHEGRINTISH, that are used to facilitate trade and communication. It is this language that has allowed the region to thrive, even as each territory maintains its own identity.

The south of the Surrach is known for its somewhat disparate culture, including the custom of binding the skulls of new-borns to create elongated skulls, and the chthonic deity they worship in rock-hewn temples known as hypogea. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

SURRACHI CROWN, the: Gam. Prestigious endurance mounted race that takes place across THE SURRACH once every five years. Competitors from any of the Surrachi city states ae welcome, as well as those from the BAKHRAN STATES, MARACHA, ERET⁽²⁾, the SIX CITIES, TERION, ENNAIAH, and KEKHEMM.

Any mount is allowed, though horses are most common, with riders valuing their speed. Riders must make the 6,000-mile circuit alone, without changing mounts, and with specific supplies. They are not allowed to make contact with any outsiders, and any found breaking these rules are disqualified.

The prize is the ubiquitous Surrachi Crown – a replica of an ancient crown of unknown provenance with dozens if not hundreds of legends tied to it. A replica of the crown is made every five years specifically for the contest

SURRACHI PLAINS: Geo. Plains forming the centre-most part of the territories of THE SURRACH, characterised by dry grasses, shrubland and sparse woodlands in the north. It is populated by DERREN nomads and many disparate settlements, much like the greater region. The plains are peppered with ruined towers that once belonged to the empire of SELAHIM that crumbled in 2774 RM.

SURRACHI TALE: Soc. People in THE SURRACH are known for their tall tales, a cultural trait that is accepted there but which outsiders do not often understand. Caravans and travel between cities are a part of everyday life in the Surrach and travellers have grown up telling campfire tales, which are typically filled with embellishments and obvious falsities. This is par for the course in the Surrach and people take these stories with a pinch of salt, knowing that the journey of the tale or the emotion it elicits in those that hear it is more important that the truth of the words. This often leaves foreigners hearing such tales flummoxed at the obvious lies and wonder why the Surrachi people are so gullible.

SURRAN: Geo. Hilly grasslands in the north of TEMUJA, to the west of the ALLIS Mountains. The region is noted for its farmlands and fields.

SURRASTA: Eth. A desert people in the south of SAMEKON. They are known as falconers, and are long-range hunters.

SURRAT: Set Settlement in the north of the region of HANNASTRA in the c east of THE SURRACH. It is known for its game-hunters, who are guardians of the settlement, protecting it from the predation of scavengers and carnivores (Pop. c. 10,000).

SURRIN: Rvr. River in the west of BASSORAH^(2.).

SURROGATE MOPPETS: also 'silent dolls', and 'grim manikins'. Int. Soc. Obj.

Despite advances in medicine, child mortality rates remain tragically-high in the polluted industrial lands of the KORACHANI EMPIRE. Infertility is more rampant than it has ever been in the empire's history, and while PATRICIANS have the means to circumvent this (through surgery, the use of ATRAMENTAL methods and other methods), HELOTS, SLAVES and even most FREEMEN must resort to other ways to cope with the premature death of a child or their umpteenth failed attempt to conceive.

This has led to the developed a strange and unsettling tradition, where real children are substituted with dolls and similar objects such as marionettes or small manikins. These dolls, which range from finely crafted works of art to crude effigies barely resembling children, serve as emotional stand-ins for infants who have died in childbirth, succumbed to illness at a young age, or that simply never were.

As a result, dolls are important objects across KORACHANI culture, to the point where they are more commonly identified with grieving parents than playing children. They are dressed, cared for, and even cradled in public, much like real infants. This practice is so deeply ingrained that in some cases, families never have another child, preferring instead to pour their maternal and paternal instincts into these lifeless forms. Though the COUNCIL OF SEVEN and the LEAGUE OF PATRICIANS look upon the practice with scorn (knowing that the empire requires a fresh supply of children to keep its military and religious industrial complex working), but the practice has become so pervasive that it persists regardless of any past attempts to eradicating it.

In certain regions, entire cemeteries are dedicated not to actual graves, but to spent dolls that have been discarded after decades of service. These morbid sanctuaries, filled with rows upon rows of dolls, are sacred places of mourning. Locals often visit these cemeteries to honour the memories of their lost children, leaving offerings and gifts to the dolls, hoping to keep the spirits of the departed at peace.

A darker aspect of this tradition lies in the belief that the spirits of dead children, particularly those who passed under tragic circumstances, sometimes POSSESS the dolls meant to represent them. These possessed dolls are said to move on their own, weep in the night, or display eerie signs of life that may at times require EXORCISMS. However, instead of fearing this, many of the parents see these haunted dolls as a gift from the UNDYING MACHINE providing them a final connection to their lost children. Some parents may speak to and care for the possessed dolls as if they are actual children, keeping them close for years, or even generations.

For outsiders or foreigners, this entire tradition is seen as grotesque, unsettling, and macabre – a disturbing manifestation of grief in an already bleak and poisoned landscape. However, in Korachani culture, this practice is deeply tied to familial love, loss, and the soul's fragile connection to the living world.

The practice is most common in nations that have been a part of the empire for a long time, including industrial or high-population areas in AZAZEM, LAASKHA, SKAROS, PELASGOS, and Korachan itself.

SURRUR: 1. Geo. Island off the southern coast of the PANTHEON ISLES. SURUAZA: Set. Small coastal city in the far north west of TZALLRACH

(Pop. c. 20,000). SURUHIR: Set. City in the c north west of ELAT (Pop. c. 39,300).

SURUMBRA: Sup. in the ATRAMENTAL arts, UMBRA that has been granted a semblance of life through the actions of ATRAMENTISTS, specifically PENUMBRISTS. The practice is rare and particularly difficult, and is used to imbue host mortals with certain traits granted by the surumbra. If the host is of a weak enough will, the Penumbrist can control his thoughts through the actions of the surumbra. Typically, the host is a slave or prisoner who is of a weak will, and rarely, a willing volunteer. Traditionally, the POSSESSION of the VESSEL was accomplished through shaping alone, though today it is likely done through TECHNARCANE means.

SURUNTA VIS: Geo. Grasslands and sparse woodlands in the west of OPHIUSSA dominating the west of the river MARAGA. The region extends 120-miles east from the NAJAFRET labyrinth to the river. It was once thought to be old growth, though was largely cut down in the FOURTH AGE, though has slowly started to recover.

SURUTUR: Dem. 'Suruturi'. Ntn. Nation in the far south east of LLACHATUL, to the south east of RHEA. It is typified by high rugged hills to the west and south and vast flat coastal plains that until c. 1000 - 2000 RM were mostly beneath sea level. Originally a territory of ARRETOY, Surutur became a kingdom in 2934 RM, with the rise to power of the YALOLIAC REGIME, a tyranny in which albinos are seen as having been granted divine right to rule.

An insular nation, Surutur is located to the far south east of the continent of Llachatul, overlooking the equatorial waters of the $\underline{\text{SEA OF}}$ Krymea. It is a land typified by high rugged hills to the west and south, and vast flat coastal plains that were revealed between 1000 - 2500 RM by waning sea levels. Jungles rapidly overtook these areas, and they now make up the most plentiful habitat in Surutur.

Originally a territory of Arretoy, Surutur became a kingdom in 2934 RM with the rise to power of the Yaloliac Regime, whose tyrannical ruling house reveres albinos. In-breeding is common amongst the royal house, and children born into the house who are not albinos are drafted into an elite army known as the BOTHA NTIGHA.

The kingdom is xenophobic, known mostly to outsiders through its cultivation and production of cinnamon, which is enjoyed by many cultures in MENISCEA as well as the east of Llachatul and SAMMAEA, where the spice can fetch handsome prices. Otherwise very little is known of it, and few individuals outside of trusted merchants are allowed in its cities. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

SUSADA: 1. Lak. Lake in the c east of TZALLRACH. It is noted for the large island at its centre^(2,).

2. Geo. Island in the above lake^(1.), in the c east of TZALLRACH.

SUSHRA: f. Myr. His. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, a SCION of the DEMIURGE SYBARIS with AVRAHAM. She is said to have fallen deeply in love with the beauty of ELYDEN and spent her days travelling across the unexplored wildernesses that her parents and their siblings had shaped, cataloguing areas of rugged primal beauty that were untouched by mortal step. She had an ethereal voice and was famed for her singing, which was the tool through which she SHAPED.

Her fate is unknown but legends from EASTERN MENISCEA say that she fell so in love with the YULIAN Mountains that she lay down and fell asleep, becoming a part of the land.

Had a child with a powerful otherworlder *. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

SUSIATH: Sea. Long narrow bay in the north of ARERAQTH, to the south of the SEA OF POLARIS.

SUSRA: Geo. Scrub plains in the north west of SAMMAEA, in the territories of the city-state of CADERE.

SUSSA: Set. Small city in the east of SARASTRO, along the course of the river SEMARAH (Pop. c. 15,000).

SUSSEA: 1. Geo. Small island 85-miles north west off the SATHERI peninsula, in the north west of PELASGOS, between the SEA OF LISASSA and the BAY OF LEMAS.

2. Set. Settlement on the above island. It is the western-most settlement in Pelasgos (Pop. c. 6,000).

SUSSURA: Set. Settlement in the far south of the BAKHRAN STATES in the north west of THE SURRACH, in the foothills of the THISATHON Mountains. Its southern borders are guarded by a deep fissure that is known for its murmuring winds (Pop. c. 8,200).

SUSSUTIEL: Sct. City in the north west of OSSIEL, in the west of MENISCEA, some 70-miles from the SEA OF MIRA. The settlements' roots lie in c. 2100 RM, where it served as a small support-settlement serving nearby quarrying operations, which slowly increased in scope. Within decades the town had become a large city populated by miners, metallurgists, merchants and those supported their business. As the quarries and mines grew into a vast open-cast pit, the city came to be situated at its edge, overlooking the great tiered maw.

By c. 2450 RM the pit had become so large that the city, though still thriving and boasting a population of perhaps 50,000, was deemed too distant from the mine's deepest reaches, over a mile below, and many municipal structures were moved down to abandoned tiers of the pit. Many followed, constructing their homes within the bedrock itself, leaving only the antiquated nobility living in the old city, which became a ghost town. Over the years the old city became a necropolis with old stone houses serving as mausoleums for the lower classes and what remained of the (by then) inbred noble castes. Others were buried closer to the heart of the pit; something that became ingrained in their religion and culture, which diverged from the customs of its parent nation Ossiel.

By c. 2730 RM the pit had become one of the largest such structures in Elyden, rivalled only by those in VÂRR, and excavations turned to shaft mining, which bore platinum in great quantities. Eventually the mines struck a great hollow (believed by some chroniclers to be the depths of CARCERI) from which emanated a sickening stench. Mining stopped and the city lost contact with the outside world. Merchants arriving there three years later found a deserted place, mummified bodies drained of fluids. The place was ignored by Ossiel and its ruler ILLATHUR, though decades later the ruins were repopulated by daring opportunists who risked cave-ins in new mines. A new settlement appeared taking the new name Sussutiel.

Some exploration of the depths has taken place, with word of monolithic hollows in which lay forgotten idols half-buried in dust and ash. The strange material from which such idols are built have drawn some miners deeper into the pit where small settlements appeared. Little is known of them or their fates (Pop. c. 16,000).

SUSURIA: Set. Major port and city in northern SAGITTARIA, at the mouth of the river SURASEA. It is a major stop along the course of the IVORY ROAD (Pop. c. 1,020,000).

SUT NOGHAR: Set. City in the south east of the MULL CITY-STATES (Pop. c. 32,000).

SUT TAMA: Lake in the west of TAMAR, fed by the river KORNA.

SUTALLEKA: Set. Settlement in the c south west of JURRAS⁽²⁾. Its main industry is agriculture, and it forms a part of the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 6,000).

SUTAR: Set. Coastal settlement in the south east of $\underline{\text{HARAPPA}}^{(3)}$ (Pop. c. 9,000).

SUTTARICH: Set. Coastal settlement in the south west of TARTAK (Pop. c. 4,800).

SUTARR: Set. Island-settlement 11-miles off the eastern coast of VAALK (Pop. c. 2,200).

SUTH: Set. City in the c north of BA'AKH, built atop the ruin of a far older city, which was the birthplace (or repository, in the form of a great library) of the SUTHI language (Pop, c, 12,000).

SUTHI: Lan. Language once common in the north of SAMMAEA, including MHAROKK, and LIDEA, that originated in the ANCIENT SUTHI that was spoken by the FOURTH AGE nation of MOGADDA.

Today it has largely been supplanted by the languages of their respective oppressor states, though it remains spoken by minorities and isolated areas despite attempts from controlling governments to suppress it. In BA'AKH it has evolved further into the BA'AKHI language that is spoken today. See Vol II: Languages.

SUTHI, ANCIENT: His. Lan. Now-extinct language in the north of SAMMAEA, including MHAROKK, and LIDEA, that gave rise to modern Suthi. See Vol II: Languages.

SUR: Sea. Bay to the west of CARNYNGA, forming a northern extension of the larger BAY OF NALN. The FIRMAMENTAL college of ETIZOR is located to its west.

SUTARA: Set. Coastal city in the north east of KHULL, overlooking the MAZARINE SEA. It is popular amongst treasure hunters who explore the sea in search of wrecks, many of which are the subject of legends of sunken treasure, who are based in its port (Pop. c..33,000).

SUTRACHRIS: Set. Coastal city in the south west of HOLOLACH⁽¹⁾, just west of the HOLIASOR Mountain-range. Its cave-like harbour is famed for its vaulted architecture, with individual covered piers with streets running above with warehouses, stores and offices. It is known for its organised crime, with roots as deep as the prefecture of SONTADRIS (Pop. c. 39,400).

SUTR: Set. Fortified MULL city in the far north of the MULL CITY-STATES, in the TOLIASOR Mountains (Pop. c. 17,800).

SUTRAD: Set. Small coastal settlement in the prefecture of EROSENEA^(L) in the north west of HOLOLACH^(L), known for its large salt pans (Pop. c. 2,200).

SUTT: Sea. Sea to the south of AHKA and the MULL CITY-STATES, characterised by many islands and shallows. Its waters have recently been site to many naval battles and blockades between the KORACHANI EMPIRE and the REPUBLIC OF PARTHIS.

SUTTAN: Mil. Str. Fort in the prefecture of ALITENEA⁽¹⁾ in the north east of HOLOLACH⁽¹⁾ in the SABASSOR Mountains along the course of the river SABAAR.

SUTTRA: Set. Coastal settlement in the south of PARTHIS, in the region of GATH. The settlement appeared in c. 3250 RM following the abandonment of the larger city of BACATRA due to retreating coastline and changing climate (Pop. c. 20,000).

SUTURA: Set. Settlement in the c north east of OPHAR, at the east of the UIDASH wetlands (Pop. c. 2,300).

SUUR'KA: 1. also 'the Shelf. Geo. Geographical region in the east of the eponymous tribe⁽²⁾, in the east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER, bordering the west of ANUBIA. The area is a badlands valley filled with wide-brimmed flat-topped plateaus, table Mountains and rugged buttes. There is much more locked within the formations of the region, though arid conditions of the area have made their exploitation difficult. The ruins of many KORACHANI colonies dating back to c. 400 – 410 RM dot the region, their mining operations seemingly abandoned midway around 505 RM.

2. Pol. Soc. Tribe in the north west of MULCIBER, in the GROWING MOUNTAINS, in the north east of SAMMAEA. Many of its present-day cities and forts are built atop the ruin of KORACHANI colonies dating to c. 400 – 420 RM. The region was exploited heavily by Korachani industries, and the land is dotted with the ruin of FREESTONE and SOULSTONE open cast mines and quarries that have since been reclaimed by nature. Of note is the ruin of CHEGOL, where a gigantic soulstone was once excavated. The remaining pit has since been the target of opportunistic mining in the centuries since its abandonment in c. 900 RM, largely due to the persistent rumour that it is the final resting of a SCION.

3. Eth. One of the indigenous people of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. They are once the most feral of the tribes, known for their jade war paint. Though they have outgrown that barbaric heritage, the memory remains as a stigma.

SUURANT: Set. Settlement in the far north of the region of KURDA in the GRONT Mountains in the east of THE SURRACH (Pop. c. 10,000).

SUURD: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the east of ROMOREA^(2,) overlooking the border east with KHARKHARADONTIS.

SUUTA: 1. Geo. Island around 45-miles off the south western coast of KORACHANI PENINSULA.

2. Set. Coastal city on the above island $^{(1)}$ off the south western coast of $\underline{HOAMM}^{(1)}$ and belonging to $\underline{KORACHAN}$. It is situated along the north-south shipping lane between Korachan and $\underline{NUTHACHAN}$, forming a vital part of the trade-route (Pop. c. 32,500).

SUUTRA: Geo. Expansive wooded rocky hills in the c north of LAASKHA, forming an extension of the EHRANDEAN Massif that lies to the north.

SUVAYA: Rui. Ancient harbour city in the c of BISBUT, in the north east of the PARTHISAN PENINSULA, though it was ruined and abandoned by the dwindling coastlines of ELYDEN and the eventual disappearance of the inland sea of ABRAS⁽²⁾, which remains now as a lake to the south of the ruined city.

In its golden age in c. 1500 - 1700 RM, it was a gigantic harbour city, well-defended, its shipyards the envy of most nations around THE INNER SEA, with a large hilltop citadel that remains today as a hollow shell, overlooking the river valley to the east. It was abandoned in c. 2400 RM after centuries of waning.

SUZHASHAL ID: Geo. Great plains dominating the interior of NOAVATUR. It was once a lush jungle, though extensive logging by KORACHANI colonies and their successor state Noavatur between 1000 – 2500 RM saw the region dwindle in size. The region is now made up of shrubland and plains, though the forests and great trees that once thrived there never recovered from the massed industries.

The region is largely uninhabited today, and abandoned ruins of old logging works can still be found there, as do the remains of ancient quarries pepper the region, as do rows upon rows of desiccated treestumps, which are the only reminder to most of what once existed in the area.

SUZEN: Set. Settlement in the north west of VIRAHAN, just 30-miles from MT. AITHNA. The settlement, like others in the region, is known for its fertile soils and is one of few areas in Virahan known to produce wine (Pop. c. 4,800).

SUZIV: (B. NÁRTHEL 2963 – 3384 RM) polymath: painter, sculptor, ATRAMENTIST, locumn, TECHNARCANIST, inventor, botanist and writer. He devised, amongst other things, a standardised system of categorising and naming lifeforms, which became known as the system of SUZIVIAN TAXONOMY once it found universal approval in 3254 RM. He also devised greater implementation of the Atramenta in the application of technarcana and theorised many machines (such as steam cannons, clockwork engines, ornithopters) that later became realities.

He augmented his body with technarcane ORTHOSES throughout his life, allowing his body to endure far beyond its natural span. Suziv claimed that his old body died in 3012 RM, when so little flesh remained that could barely be called human any longer.

SUZIVIAN TAXONOMY: classification of taxonomy of life devised by the polymath SUZIV, which found universal approval in 3254 RM. The system categorizes animals in the following orders * . See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

SVA: also 'the Barricaded City'. His. Set. In antiquity, one of the five major cities of the CITADEL MOUNTS. One of the three high-towers constructed by UHLSAATI survivors of a war against AUERENI barbarians in c. -1150 RM, Sva was the southern-most settlement, overlooking the river THAUR, facing south. The city was fortified, its many towers and citadels ready for further Auereni attentions, though (for the time, at least) the city was safe. Being the city closest to the devastation left after the Auereni wars, the city attracted more refugees than any other settlement, and grew rapidly, becoming the largest Citadel Mount by -800 RM, the great city at its base rapidly outgrowing any walls constructed for it, earning the city the moniker of 'the Barricaded City' in c. -750 after all the old walls that proliferated its streets as districts continued growing. As the city continued to grow south it came to encompass an estuary of the river Thaur; and a great river harbour was constructed, its canals and tiers helping it become attract trade and commerce. This led to the LORDS OF THE MOUNTS bestowing upon the city the epithet of DUN SVA in -513 RM, in honour of its accomplishments in the region.

The arrival of KORACHAN to the region in 352 RM saw the city renamed DUN SVARR (after its imperial name), and it was heavily fortified by imperial engineers in the years following imperial subjugation of the region.

SVATH: Plr. 'Svathi. Eth. Ethincity and ancestors of the people of LYRIDIA and NÁRTHEL. The name originates from ancient SVATHI culture and ethnic group that dominated the region in antiquity. Following KORACHANI domination of the area in 84 RM, their descendants were largely suppressed where they survived as the lower classes and slaves, with many groups pushed outside of the settled areas where they became known in Lyridia as the TROGLODYTES. In Nárthel, they became an itinerant people who travelled the hinterlands of the Nárthel, the west of VENTHIR and the south of Lyridia, where they grew slowly in numbers as Korachani presence lessened in the north and north eastern areas c. 2500 RM. See Vol II: Peoples and Races of Elyden: Ethnicities.

SVATHI: Lan. Language spoken by the SVATHI people, which is still spoken in corrupted form (through many KORACHANI loanwords and influence) in NÁRTHEL and Dacia, where it is officially known as KORACHA-SVATHI, though most people just call it Svathi. See Vol II: Languages.

SVATHI, ANCIENT: His. Lan. Now-extinct language that was spoken by the people of the late FOURTH AGE SVATHI DOMAINS. It has since been corrupted by the long presence of KORACHANI in the region into modern Svathi. See Vol II: Languages.

SVATHI DOMAINS: His. Ntn. Early FIFTH AGE culture that emerged in the south east of CENTRAL LLACHATUL, in what are today dominated by LYRIDIA, LYRIDIA DHAI, and the south west of AHRISHEN. The culture was quashed during the early centuries of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, and their descendants went on to populate much of LYRADEA. See Vol III: Extinct States.

SVETEA: Geo. Expansive region of near-permanent permafrost in the west of VALBAR⁽²⁾. There are few settlements in the region, and it is mostly given over to fortresses and garrisons guarding the western border with RAONGEN⁽²⁾.

SVETT: Rvr. Wetlands in the c east of VALBAR^(2.), at the shallow confluence where the river ULLIOGOT meets the ENGOROT. The region is rich in wildlife and is sparsely populated.

SVIZIA OF THE CARALL, ELEVENTH OF THE ELEVEN: also 'the Many-armed Queen'. f. Pol. Sup. Per. (B. 3921 RM) Eleventh of the HENDECARCHS of MALAN and ruler of the HENDECARCHY of ATALLUA. She is famed, revered, and feared for her appearance. Though HUMAN, she was born with two sets of arms, giving her a striking appearance. Clearly the result of ATRAMENTAL TAINT, she nevertheless overcame the challenges posed by her twisted form (for not only does she have extra limbs, but her torso is twisted and disproportionate) to rise to the rank of ONÉSIMUS, and later governor, eventually being chosen to replace her predecessor as Hendecarch in 3987 RM.

Like all the Hendecarchs, she is unnaturally long-lived though remains one of the youngest rulers of the FOREST KINGDOMS. Though her physical condition limits her mobility, it has not stymied her ambition. Since becoming Hendecarch she has founded an order of militant SHAPERS known as the ENDRIAN ORDER, who follow her studies, who act as elite palace and bodyguards.

SWERTHA, WITCH OF BLADES: also 'the Hag Witch'. (B. 3974 TZALLRACH) Sup. A powerful FIRMAMENTAL adept in SPHERES aiamancy and PAHHURISM, with fair martial skills. Born Ia Pahaelan, the only child of a regional ANARCH who encouraged her Firmamental abilities, she was orphaned in 3990 RM when her father was assassinated and his rule overthrown by rivals. Cast out in the deserts of eastern Tzallrach, she wandered for years, an opportunistic mendicant nursing a thirst for what was rightfully hers. Her powers matured, her resolve tempered by a harsh life, she returned to her home in AREL in 3999 RM, slaying those who deposed her family (who she learnt were of VENTHIRI blood), blanketing the stairs of her ancestral palace with their flayed skin. She ruled Arel for 3 years, a short reign of fear, ended by her wanderlust.

In 4002 RM she travelled to Venthir, adopting the moniker witch to instil fear in the people of that land, preying on those who would oppose Firmamentists SWEVEN: Pol. Set. Dre. Administrative capital of TAES. Its ruler, the ONEIRODYNIC EMPRESS, does not rule from Sweven, but rather resides in the DREAMSCAPE fortress of CODUS CEVIR, where she is the only 'living' creature, issuing her commands via oneiromancy, which are interpreted and acted upon by her government in Sweven. It forms a part of the VAEVECTAN TRAIL and is the southern-most stop along the route, where it is a major stop for merchants travelling in the region (Pop. c. 118,000).

SWIRLING CITADEL, the: see PURULOSH VAGHAR.

SWORD, the: Rel. Soc. Common symbol within the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, and particularly the KORACHANI EMPIRE. The symbol is perceived to be a protective ward against evil spirits and harm, and it is commonly referred to as the ARCHPOTENTATE'S Blade. The CATHADEMACHS of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE make a healthy trade making and selling the items.

The symbol is likely derived from the SWORD TARTARUCH, that was wielded to great effect by the Archpotentate Malichar during his unification of the empire.

SWORD HILLS, the: Geo. Hills that act as natural border between the south east of TEMUJA and the west of MALAN. The hills rise just north east of the eastern-most reaches of the SCHISM and head north for around 180-miles. They are relatively treacherous close to the Schism, though become less rough farther north.

They are named after the copper reserves located in its western foothills, from which most ancient Temujan weapons were made.

SWORD OF AGES, the: Myr. Leg. Obj. Legendary blade of unknown origin and age, currently in the possession of KING CITHAERON of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of SYRTIS^(1.). The sword, a broadsword of archaic design, was instrumental in Cithaeron's rise to power and the 'unification' of the HARÉSHK region in the last three decades of the FIFTH AGE.

SWORD DANCER: see ARA KHIN.

SWORD OF JUDGEMENT: Obj. Sword made in the city of TANTAL in KORACHAN in 1341 RM as a weapon for the IRON ANGEL to wield. It was crafted from the finest SHADOWSTEEL from the western-most reaches of the KHARKHARADONTID DESERT and imbued with Atramental properties (not unlike a powerful ATRAMENTAL FOCUS), which, when wielded by a SHAPER or a creature close to the Atramenta (such as the Iron Angel) acts as an Atramental conduit.

SWORD OF PREPOTENCY: His. Pol. Obj. Symbolic sword that lies on a table in middle of the parliament chambers of the nation of YSACYITHAIA. It belonged to the first uniter of its predecessor state, ILIMNILL and remains a powerful cultural and political object to this day. It is historically wielded by the LORD OF THE ACCORD, but this honour is largely symbolic now. It is used during induction ceremonies, but otherwise remains on the parliament table, untouched. There are instances when the sword was used – it was taken by a parliamentarian in anger and swung against another during a heated argument, inflicting a terrible wound, for instance. It was also once stolen, but was retrieved over 100-years later then a dead nobleman was going to be buried with it, before it was identified and returned to the parliament chambers.

SWORD-TREE, the: see FAERTH^(2.).

SYASHAN: Rvr. Major river in the east of SAMMAEA, flowing north for 1,740-miles from sources in the UHBATAQI Mountains⁽⁴⁾ and surrounding ranges, including the ZANBAURI Ridge, the ENWATIQ Mountains, and the MIDIAN SABIQ, before emptying in the BAY OF MARD, in the south west of the SEA OF LETHEA. It flows through the JAHADAT STATES and the SULTANATE OF ABACARDAT on its way to the coast, and many of its tributaries are seasonal, flowing either due to snowmelt and floods from short but intense winter storms.

SYBARIC COAST: Sea. Coastal waters in the north of SKAROS, north east of the STRAIT OF ANEON and the city of SYBARIS^(2.). The waters are characterised by their shallowness and relative fertility and the coast is peppered with many small villages that subsist on the creatures that dwell in it.

SYBARIS: 1. Also 'the Queen in Heaven', 'Shitharish', 'Xie Varriz', 'Shid'thawi', and 'Ashi Ariss'. f. Myt. His. In the mythology and ancient history of ELYDEN, fifteenth of the Two-and-Twenty DEMIURGES, whose children were the SHIE.

Though little is known of her specific exploits, she is believed to have left her mark across various cultures in disparate ages, whether through her own actions or the travels and actions of her many SCIONS, and came to be worshipped under varying guises. She appears, in corrupted form, as a consort to the primary gods of other cultures and pantheons, which invertedly allowed her to prosper as other Demiurges dwindled to be replaced by the false gods that now proliferate.

Her known SCIONS are: BELPHETAR, DEMEVEDARAS, HEUXERES, SIN, SUSHRA, SYTRY, and VOLUPIS. See Vol IV: the Two-and-Twenty Demiurges.

- Geo. Island in the DRAGON ISLES chain off the western-coast of SAMMAEA.
- 3. Set. Main city on the above island^(2.), off the western-coast of SAMMAEA, belonging to DHA NAR (Pop. c. 16,000).
- 4. Set. City in SKAROS. Founded in 571 RM as a coastal caravanserai that served barges travelling along the eastern Skarosian coast. It began taxing Skarosian waterways in 1111 RM, through PATRICIAN decrees, which filled the Empire's coffers. A percentage of the income overflowed into the city, and by 1261 RM Sybaris was officially recognised as one of the wealthiest Imperial cities along the coast. The city descended into decadence, forsaking its trade roots; becoming instead a refuge for Machiavellian exiles, debauched HALFBLOODS, libertine rulers, escapist patricians, nihilists, and hedonists alike. Its businesses catered to their expensive tastes and were renowned amongst patrician circles throughout the INNER SEA REGION (Pop. c. 112,000).

SYBARITE: 1. person who lives in, or is native to SYBARIS^(2.).

- 2. Rel. Rnk. Worshipper or priest of the Demiurge SYBARIS^(1.).
- 3. Soc. Rnk. specifically, courtesans based in the city of SYBARIS⁽²⁾. Though outwardly, they are little more than high-class prostitutes, some of them from part of an informal guild, where they act as spies, assassins and informants that act across THE INNER SEA.

SYBARR, CULT OF: Rel. Main religion in the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT in the north west of SAMMAEA. The religion makes copious use of OPIATES in its rituals, and it's holy figures, called IDOLONS, living saints who are revered like reliquaries, are kept in a trance-state through intravenous feeding of opiates. The church was founded in 3444 RM following a meteorite impact destroyed the city QAM RON. A single survivor would go on to fund the church and become its first idolon. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

SYCHTA: 1. His. Nm. Precursor state to the SYCHTAN PREFECTURES. The name Sychta is often used interchangeably with Sychtan Prefectures to this day.

- 2. Set. City and once capital of the SYCHTAN PREFECTURE (Pop. c. 155.300).
- SYCHTAN PREFECTURES: also 'Sychta'. Dem. 'Sychtan'. Ntn. Empire dominating the south west of SOUTHERN SAMMAEA, north of the SEA OF SAMMAIDU, ruled since 3711 RM by the ALGHATE SOVEREIGNTY and divided into 107 prefectures.

In c. 3180 RM the north of what was until then a united nation encompassing extant northern territories of the Sychtan Prefectures and CEGANE (the current south of Cegane was another nation that was later absorbed by the prefectures) was gripped by a bloody civil war between three opposed parties that left its lands devastated and entire ethnic groups slaughtered. Many fled to the north eastern coast, establishing allied polities that were able to drive out the war, later solidifying into the so-called Sanctuary States, which would later become known as Cegane.

Its culture is distrustful of the ATRAMENTA and SHAPERS in general, though it not averse to using them when needed. The c of the Prefectures' territories is dominated by a large void in the Arcane Tempers, that renders much of the area similar in effect to the NULLAMBIT. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

- SYCHR: Set. Fortified city in the c south of KOLCHIS, along the mouth of the river DOERIA. It is one of few major settlements in the region and is heavily fortified against attack from the south (Pop. c. 36,400).
- SYCHRE: Set. Small fortified city in the west of KASPIA, in the eastern foothills of the ERESHKIGAL Mountain. It is known for its mountain men who dwell in the Ereshkigal, trapping and hunting. In winter they descend from their mountain homes to sell pelts and musk to the settlement, which are in turn traded with GÂTHAN merchants travelling through the settlement along their circuit of the GÂTHAN ROAD. Furs fins their way across the INNER SEA REGION via these merchants (Pop. c. 12,000).
- SYCHRITE: Mar. Rnk. Warrior-caste common in the DESOLATION OF ASTUDAN, the east of ALMAGEST, and part of the OLD FOREST.
- SYDHA: Com. Set. Trade-settlement in c western JURRAS⁽²⁾, located to the west of SYNHODOS Mountains. The settlement appeared originally as a caravanserai where merchants travelling the SYDHAN PASS could safely rest, and the settlement emerged from there and remains primarily as a safe haven to those travelling across the Mountains (Pop. c. 4,700).
- SYDHAN PASS: Geo. Long Mountain pass connecting the north west and the south west of JURRAS^(2,) across the c western reaches of the SYNHODOS Mountains.
- $\underline{SYDIA} : \mathit{Set.}$ Settlement in c-south east of $\underline{SAGITTARIA}$ (Pop. c. 4,000).
- SYDRIC: Set. Small city in the c of LOEGRESS^(1.) (Pop. c. 13,750).
- SYDYK: Set. City in the far north west of VAALK, built on the ruins of an ancient city-state. According to legend it is home to divine septuplets, and the number seven and seven-fold saint are common motifs here. The city is built along a narrow strip of land that separates a lake from the coast. Channels and lochs link the lake to the coast, and it serves as an effective harbour (Pop. c. 27,000).
- SYH: Set. Coastal settlement in the south of the emirate of LIMOTH⁽²⁾ in the c south of Limoth⁽¹⁾. Its main industry is fishing (Pop. c. 4,900).
- $\underline{\text{SYLAMIN}}$: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the east of $\underline{\text{ALAM BETHYL}}$, in the western foothills of the $\underline{\text{BAND}}^{(2.)}$ Mountains.
- SYLLAN: lit. 'vendor'. His. Com. Rnk. Old KORACHANI term for small-time vendors and merchants found in most small settlements. They once formed a subcaste that stood between the HELOTS and FREEMEN, though have since become freemen. Many of them acted as middlemen between the consumers and vendors, selling objects they did not own, taking a small wage in return for their services.
- SYLOR TA: Set. Small city in the north of KHULL, in the eastern foothills of the DRITT Highlands (Pop. c. 14,200).
- SYLVARA: Rui. Spent open cast copper mine in the c north west of OD MEGINNAS.
- SYMARI: Int. Str. Monolithic steel monument in the c of south western VENTHIR. Construction began in 361 RM as the nation was handed over to the KORACHANI EMPIRE by QUEEN HETEPHERES, and was completed in 372 RM. The statue depicts a gigantic cowled form, stylistically common in many imperial lands, its arms outstretched, facing north west towards Korachan; centre of the empire.

Though now little more than a tarnished figure, more rust than metal, it remains a place of importance to imperial history and religion, where it is visited by those undertaking THE SHADOW MARCH, though it has little religious significance other than the commonly held belief that the statue depicts the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR, which it does not. In truth the figure depicted is symbolic of Venthir, looking towards its new parent state.

The statue remains visible even following the independence of Venthir in 3781 RM and many scholars and historians believe it should be listed amongst the $\underline{\text{WONDERS OF THE ANCIENT WORLD}}$.

- SYMENIA: 1. Geo. Flat plains comprising the peninsula that comprises most of the territories of SALOROC and the north east of IO.
- 2. Rui. Ruins in the north west of SALOROC, thought to be the most intact remnant of an ancient FOURTH AGE civilisation known as LOMATHAA. The IONIC peninsula is commonly named after these ruins.
- SYMETE: Geo. Ancient word for what is now thought to be the SYMENIAN^(1,1) peninsula. The region is noted as being home to the LOMATHAAN people from which the HAAGENI culture that predated IO were descended.
- SYMHERO: 1. Lak. Shallow lake in the south east of KAZZAR⁽²⁾, along the course of the river VETAGAME.
 - 2. Rvr. Wetlands in the south east of $\underline{\text{KAZZAR}}^{(2)}$, surrounding the eponymous lake⁽¹⁾.
- SYMOLEA: Set. Cliff-top fortified coastal city in the south east of LYRIDIA DHAI, overlooking the STRAIT OF NÁRTHEL (Pop. c. 20,000).
- SYMPHONY OF SKYFIRE: Soc. Rel. Cal. A large cultural FIREWORK festival celebrated across LAASKHA during the two solstice holidays, where rival church clubs and their followers compete for the loudest and most impressive display of pyrotechnics. Such events can last for days and are accompanied by feasting and revelry and often escalate into fights between rival gangs.
- SYNAPSID: Fau. Form of archaic THEROPSIN that were prevalent in ancient epochs. Though many examples remain today, they are considered to be primitive creatures by many scholars. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.
- SYNASTRA: Rui. Ruins in the south east of GNOTH, 60-miles from the coast of the SEA OF LIAKARRA. In c. 2400 RM it was a major philosophical school, though was destroyed in a sudden earthquake which left it flooded. Hundreds of years later it re-emerged as the sea-levels around ELYDEN diminished. Much of its knowledge was lost and is now destroyed beyond hope of recovery, though many Gnothi archaeologists have explored its ruins in the hopes of finding something of value.
- SYNASTRIA: Set. Small city in the east of KULIGALA, in the east of the CARCHEMISHI PENINSULA (1.) in the east of SAMMAEA. It is known for its ancient astronomical tradition and it today home to a college where many Kuligalan KINGROUPS send a member of their KINTOWER to study (Pop. c. 19.200).
- SYNCHTHONITH: f. Myt. His. In the mythology and ancient history of ELYDEN, fifth of the Two-and-Twenty DEMIURGES, whose children were the DVERGAI.

Her known \underline{SCIONS} are: $\underline{BUKAVAH}$, $\underline{DREJIKAH}^{(2.)}$, $\underline{GOROLAVARTUR}$. See Vol IV: the Two-and-Twenty Demiurges.

- SYNCHTHONITH, SECTS OF: Rel. Sole known religion practiced in CHTHYRID. The DVERG that practice this religion are very secretive, and have revealed little of it. What is known is that temples are subterranean, and that each settlement has its own sect, with its own rituals and doctrine, which may differ from the MOTHER'S AXIOM, the holy text on which all the sects are based. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.
- SYNCHTHONITH'S ATLAS: Int. Car. Str. Gigantic subterranean chamber seemingly-hewn from the ancient roots of the UMBRALA Mountain in the south east of THE chamber is mostly collapsed now, the movements of the mountain over the eons having destroyed its most beauteous wonders, however a series of collapsed tunnels lead to a chamber that remains largely untouched, but for the dust and ruin of ages that mar its skin within the chamber is an archaic fossilised machine that is believed to be an orrery of the IMMATERIA within which ELYDEN is placed. Few have seen this chamber, given the area's location deep within ATTORAN territory, though the few scholars who have returned claim that if they could have more time to study the machine their understanding of the Immateria and the nature of Elyden and the material and immaterial planes would be increased irrevocably.

SYNCHTHNITH'S CHOIR: Sup. Org. Largest permanent assembly of DVERGAI in ELYDEN. It is believed that the CHOIR has existed, uninterrupted, since the first days of the MORTAL PEOPLES and that the current iteration of the choir is composed of the most direct descendants of the original seven dvergai.

The choir is composed of hundreds of individual dverg SHAPERS, chanting unendingly in their guttural tone in hewn halls beneath the BRMYIRID mountain in CHTHYRID. It is said that their chanting makes the caverns tremble and that it can be felt in the depths of CARCERI. Members of the choir know no life outside their vocation and their work only ends in death, their bodies emaciated from their devoted dirges. Few outside their race have had the privilege of experiencing this phenomenon, and its true purpose is not fully understood.

SYNCHTHONITH'S FOUNDRY: Sup. Geo. Vast subterranean hollows and lava tubes (the remnants of ancient underground lava flows) beneath the nations of SYNCHTHONITHA and ADHERA, crossing the SEA OF ASDU Though largely extinct, the region is known for its occasional lava flows and the far rarer flows of molten metal. Attempts have been made to exploit these flows, and though no large-scale operations have been successful in the long-term, there have been various smaller operations that have succeeded, most prominent amongst them the subterranean foundry of SIKHOGUM.

There are hundreds of square miles of tunnels, and though most are now dry, new flows of so-called QUICKSTEEL can sometimes erupt from deep within ELYDEN, streaming sluggishly before they dry up.

SYNCHTHONITHA: also 'the Stone Realm'. Ntn. Nation in the south of WESTERN SAMMAEA, situated between the realms of EPHATTA, LIEVTHRA, BELEGOR, NASTAL^(2.), and GRARNEÂST. It overlooks the SEA OF ASDU and is of a tropical to semi-arid climate.

The region is named after the DEMIURGE SYNCHTHONITH due to the geometric, regular formations that the canyons and mesas that dominate various parts of Synchthonitha. Though evidence strongly suggests that a Demiurge's hand lies behind its shaping, there is no known link between the two.

The area covers no less than 700,000-square miles (and possibly far more, stretching inland) and is covered in all manner of geological features, all of which are angular and artificial-looking, as though hewn and largely untouched by the passage of time. The region is also noted for its many gigantic bass carvings and undecipherable glyphs, many of which are located in hewn caverns and crypts, which mirror the geometric forms of the terrain itself.

Further strengthening the hypothesis that the Demiurge Synchthonith is responsible for the region are the numerous DVERG settlements that are found there; mostly independent of one another. Little is known of the place, as it has not been heavily documented by KORACHANI explorers, though it is known that a precursor state was in control of an artefact known as the SKY CROWN, which was worn by its regent for close to a millennium, until 1370 RM, after which it was lost following the unfortunate destruction of its capital in an earthquake.

Geographically, much of the west of SYNCHTHONITHA as well as the east of Ephatta are dominated by water-carved canyons, from seasonal floods, some of which are gigantic and greatly impressive. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

SYNCRA: Geo. Region in the north of THE SURRACH. Its controlling city is SYNCRASIA.

SYNCRASIA: Set. Large city in the north west of THE SURRACH. It is known for its metropolitan culture, large towers, subterranean districts and fortifications (Pop. c. 87,500).

SYNCRETIA: Set. City in the c east of GNOTH, along the eastern shore of lake KETER. It is known for its study of world religions and their evolution from possible sources in the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN. Its relative proximity to the border with AQUARIIA sees some trade pass across the border along

THE WAY trade-route between the two nations, and as a result its markets are rich with produce from the east. It is one of few cities in Gnoth that is open to foreign merchants (the other being OPUSCULA in the west), and as a result the Gnothi stretch of the Way is largely undertaken by GIGANRI merchants (Pop. c. 19,000).

SYNCRETIC TEXTS, the: Phil. Rel. Vol. The holy texts of the SEVEN SYNCRETISMS, penned by various monks and holy figures between c. 2610 – 2700 RM in AETHIOS. They contain the basic principles on which the philosophy is based and remain an integral part of the Sven Syncretisms to this day.

They advocate peace and respect for nature and other mortals, and challenge less-accepting religions (particularly those over which the UNDYING MACHINE resides as chief divinity) and their followers.

SYNCRETISMS, the SEVEN: Phil. Rel. A major religion practiced in free lands in the c north east of SAMMAEA, having appeared in AETHIOS in c. 2620 RM and later spreading to neighbouring lands, including ARKOS (1.), BARATHEA, J'THANA, MULCIBER, and SIRIPHAGOS, amongst others, in smaller numbers.

It is a nontheistic (godless) religion that is better described as a philosophical tradition that has adapted many spiritual teachings from the across Sammaea throughout the FIFTH AGE, espousing peace and freedom of thought without persecution. It is named after the disparate philosophical and religious beliefs on which it is based, many of which have since died out elsewhere, and its main holy manual is the so-called SYNCRETIC TEXTS.

The tenets of the Seven Syncretisms have spread from Aethios rapidly along the SALT ROAD via free trade (for instance, the SIRIPHAGAN ALLIANCE, whose caravans often travel with SYNCRETIST monks), bringing knowledge of this enlightened faith to people that have known only centuries of subjugation and thankless dogma.

This in turn has brought about new conflicts as established religions, including the Church of the Undying Machine, and the Reformed Church of Sarastro, amongst others, have made great efforts to stall its continued spread, ultimately only serving to strengthen it and its beliefs amongst its followers. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

SYNCRETIST: Rel. Common name given to followers of the SEVEN SYNCRETISMS, including its monks, as well as laity.

SYNCRIS: Set. City in the south of the BAKHRAN STATES at the edge of the MEGGROLL forest the north west of THE SURRACH. Its main industry is logging. Since the Bakhran States moved south against the region of Saggar the city has been fortified and is a major recruiting and training centre for its armies (Pop. c. 35,500).

SYNDHAS FALLS: (14,200-ft.) Rvr. Series of waterfalls in the SYNHODOS Mountains in the c of JURRAS^(2.). The highest fall has a recorded height of almost 5,000 ft.

SYNHAPT: Fau. Bat-faced SYNAPSID animal native to the ARID TRIPTYCH region of EASTERN SAMMAEA and the south and east of KHARKHARADONTIS. It is a heavy, carnivorous creature, its body the size of a horse's, though bulkier. Is well-adapted to harsh conditions, and its body is particularly resilient to the ATRAMENTA, and some scholars postulate that its present form may be due to exposure to the Atramenta. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

SYNHOD: Rel. Dominant religious caste in JURRAS⁽²⁾, in charge of the worship of the SIMULAEKA. Originating from teachings based on ancient metal tablets unearthed in ruined temple of CALLOVIA in the SYNHODOS PLATEAU⁽²⁾ in 3121 RM, a few decades before the departure of KORACHAN from the region.

The teachings spread across Jurras via trade networks, and it became a strong MYSTERY CULT that served no small part in the eventual overthrowing of the INTERREGES in 3167 RM, becoming public in the years following the creation of the Tetrarchy, and being elevated to a state religion soon after. GODSTONES^(2.), which are commonly-found in the Synhodos Massif^(1.), are important relics of the church, which devotes considerable resources to excavating the artifacts.

The figureheads of the Synhod developed into a religious dynasty by c. 3200 RM that persists even under PARTHISAN rule. To most foreigners this is structurally indistinguishable from a monarchy, and most outsiders mistakenly regard the Synhod as the governing body of Jurras, rather than the Tetrarchy. In many ways, they could be right, as the Synhod wields great political influence and has the power to force the Tetrarchy into a vote to oust one of its members, if so desired.

To avoid inbreeding, Synhodic patriarchs breed with hierodules, who upon giving birth were sacrificed to KHAR'ILLAE, which is a demigod to most Jurrasi people. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

- SYNHODOS: 1. Geo. Massif dominating the c of JURRAS^(2.) and forming a large part of the region's culture and religion due to the many GODSTONES found there.
 - 2. Geo. Plateau in the c of JURRAS^(2.), to the south west of the Synhodos Massif, and north of the GAP OF HURA.
 - 3. see GODSTONES (2.).
- SYNOCHAS: Mys. Rel. In KORACHANI mysticism, one of the three intelligences of the EMPYREAN. See Vol IV: Other Forms of Mysticism.
- SYNOD: 1. Rel. Org. Within the ecclesiastic organisation of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE; an assembly of the churches highest-ranking officials ecclesiasts and PRIMATES to decide church matters.
 - 2. Pol. Soc. Bus. PATRICIAN HOUSE based in the city of EPHUTAS in JURRAS⁽²⁾, controlling many lands across the ALMANA PLAINS in which it grows saffron and cultivates grapes for the production of wines. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.
- SYNORIS: Set. Coastal settlement in the south east of OPHIUSSA (Pop. c. 4.000).
- SYRAKASH: Set. City in the west of VENTHIR, slowly settled by refugees following the eventual disappearance of the city of KITHAMAR beneath the sands of the GO BISAMMAM desert in c. 2821 RM (Pop. c. 18,700).
- SYRK TA': Set. Settlement in the c north east of KHULL. It originated as a crossroads tavern, and grew steadily with trade from the TEMPLAR STATES. It still caters to travellers and merchants to this day (Pop. c. 5.500).
- SYRMA: Set. Small city in the c of J'THANA, along the course of the river J'DRA'AT. Its main industry is the cultivation of ALOE (Pop. c. 20,000).
- SYRON: Set. Coastal settlement in the west of THE VORANDINE, on the island of KEYUSH^(1.), overlooking the SEA OF BYRIS. Its main industry is the harvesting of EVOLAM kelp that is vital to various modern ATRAMENTAL industries, including CLONING and FLESHWRIGHTING (Pop. c. 4,800).
- SYRTA: Rui. Abandoned in the west of THE SURRACH, in the KNAGHTA BRINE FLATS. It was consumed by silt following the retreat of the BAY OF KNAGHTA centuries ago.
- SYRTASH: 1. Sea. Sea in the west of THE SURRACH, forming a division between CHATOYANT, FLAVESCA, and TERION.
 - 2. Set. City and harbour overlooking the eponymous sea in the region of FLAVESCA in the west of THE SURRACH (Pop. c. 40,000).
- SYRTIS: 1. Pol. One of the eight HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOMS, known for its backbone-like ridges in its landscape.
- 2. Pol. Duchy in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of Syrtis⁽²⁾. Despite its idyllic reputation it had recently been beset by growing ATRAMENTAL TAINT.
- 3. Pol. Set. Capital of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of the same name (L) and home of king CITHAERON and the ARCHCLERIC MOSTOS, who now carries ALLIAH'S HOURGLASS. It forms a major stop along the GREAT ROAD, where goods from across the INNER SEA REGION are bought and sold (Pop. c. 480,000).
- SYRYSA: Set. City in the south east of TATAR, in the west of SAMMAEA.
 It is a major stop along the IVORY ROAD and is one of few cities in the area to still trade in ivory.
 - It was a major independent city throughout the rule of the ALCHIARAN DYNASTY, and many key figures who were instrumental in the dethroning of the dynasty emerged there. Since then, it has remained a powerful political, economic and industrial centre (Pop. c. 263,400).
- SYSHALLIH: Geo. Stepped plains in the south east of LYRIDIA, where many cavern-settlements can be found. Some of them are thought to date back thousands of years, and have been home to hundreds of generations of LYRIDIAN TROGLODYTES.

- SYTNA: Lak. Lake in the north of ALMAGEST, created by the damming of the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED river KETTCHA in 3721 RM. Its waters remain tainted but the city is able to refine and process the water so that it is usable.
- SYTRY: m. Myr. His. Per. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, a SCION of the DEMIURGE SYBARIS and possibly now an OTHERWORLDER, said to have inherited the Demiurge's yearning for worship. In many KHARKHARADONTID cultures (BA'AKH and IO in particular), he is said to control the affairs of lovers. Though descriptions of his form are widely varying, most accounts show him as a winged man with a bestial head. He is said to have created the MIRROR OF SYTRY, a potent artefact that reveals him to anyone looking into the mirror. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.
- SZALLA: Pol. Set. Capital city of SABIA. It is home to the court of the VITYAZ-THANE and is known for its nobles and foreign embassies. It is also the termination of the northern-most leg of the GÂTHAN ROAD, and sees much trade from the south (Pop. c. 391,400).
- SZALLOST: Sea. Narrow gulf to the south of the SEA OF BIELOST in the east of SABIA.
- SZAMAR: Rvr. Wetlands in the c north west of ARKOS⁽¹⁾, forming the delta of the river FALX as it meets the SEA OF ERIA.
- SZANDOR: (B. 3951 RM) Pol. Present Hegemon of the ELLIADHAN LEAGUE of KASPIA.
- SZAR: Cur. Main currency in SABIA, KASPIA, and the inhabited regions of PERGOST, dating back to the height of the ELDRIAN empire, when its territories extended far to the north in what is now Pergost. See Vol II: Currency and Coinage in Elyden.
- SZAS: Mil. Str. One of the high-towers of the CITADEL MOUNTS, built following the fragmentation of the UHLSAATI people and the rise of the Citadel Mounts in c. -1150 RM. During the time of the Citadel Mounts, the city became somewhat of a buffer between the predations of the west and the safety of the people. Growing wealthy from taxation of traffic travelling along the river FALX, the city was neither a hub of trade nor a metropolis; though was renowned for the arches and natural land-bridges that linked the spires and mesas on which it was built. Revenue from its taxation went almost exclusively into defence of the region, particularly the Atramentally-induced exodus that had been taking place from KHARKHARADONTIS since the days of the Uhlsaati people. Originally little to worry about, the number of refugees increased greatly in c. -550 RM, as did their maladies and deformities. Every decade they would move closer to Szas, their diseases affecting more locals. In c. -490 RM its doors were closed to the things and towers were erected to defend its lands, with the MISSHAPEN THINGS shambling from the south west shot on sight, their bodies burnt. By -400 RM the refugees were no longer recognised as human, their movements more hostile. Travel around the ARAAHT became dangerous and a caste of knights had appeared in Szas specifically to help the region against that dark exodus. With orphans and volunteers making up their ranks, the KNIGHTS OF SZAS would sally out from Szas helping outlying settlements under its jurisdiction, hunting the foul creatures. Over the years hundreds of knights fell to ATRAMENTAL disease and the claws of those beast, but their actions were paramount in keeping the Araaht free of taint. The beast, once slain, were piled into great mounds and burnt, with the largest such mound becoming infamous for the 20,000-bodies it was said to contain and is remembered now as Chonum.

The actions of the Knights of Szas earnt the city the epithet of Dun Szas in -382 RM and the knightly tradition in the city became its pride, with a great granite fortress being built outside its walls in -352 RM. The people of Szas maintained a distrust of the Atramenta, a belief which by c. -300 RM would give rise to the CHURCH OF CLEANSING, a fundamentalist cult that required strict dietary laws and prayer. Under this religion the city grew a reputation for dour souls and cheerless festivals, though the city thrived as trade with the recently-founded city of THRAYA to the north west took-off.

Despite this trade, the city slowly dwindled (in no small part due to the trade activities of the mount of DUN KANACH), becoming misanthropic and distrustful of outsiders. As the Atramenta took hold of the nation of DHAMATEA to the north west, contact with Thraya was severed, and the Citadel Mounts lost contact with foreign nations to the west. The Knights of Szas became mythical figures, figureheads of the church and gaining much influence and by c. 55 RM they had risen to control the city and its environs, effectively sundering Dun Szas from the Citadel Mounts. It would remain independent until the arrival to the region of the KORACHANI EMPIRE in 352 RM, after which it would be renamed DUN SZASS, becoming part of the colonies of EHBOT.

SZENYA PASS: Com. Geo. Trade-route passing through the west of ERESHKIGAL, linking eastern SABIA to the western KASPIAN provinces. Two towers (the TYRS BERGEN) protect a narrow switchback on the western face.

SZIKAL: Rel. Founder of the order of the SZIKALIAN HERMITS in the east of THE SURRACH in c. 3400 RM.

SZIKALIAN HERMITS: Org. Order of monks in the east of THE SURRACH, with scattered monasteries in Mountain regions.

SZIZIH: Law. Str. Ind. Desert prison in the c south west of the VESPERTINE LEAGUE. Its prisoners here hail from across the Vorandine and are serving life sentences for heinous crimes. They spend their time mining METEORE by hand, which is used in construction projects around the League.

SZMEJNA: 1. Geo. Coastal region in the north of SABIA, which stretches for over 250-miles from the city of Szmejna^(2.) in the north to the SANEM Mountains in the south. Most settlements along its shore subsist on fishing and whaling, and are a source oil and AMBERGRIS.

2. Set. Coastal city in the north of SABIA in the far north of the SEA OF BIELOST. The city is known for its whaling fleet, which specialises in whale- and rahab-hunting (Pop. c. 35,200).

SZNJALLA: Set. Small city in the c of SABIA. It is home to a religious order dedicated to the FROSTBLOOD (Pop. c. 15,000).

SZUL: Set. Coastal settlement in the c of SABIA, overlooking the BAY OF OTROST. Its main industry is fishing (Pop. c. 4,600).

T

T'FASA: Set. settlement in the c north of N'RAKH (Pop. c. 6,000).

T'GETTA: Geo. Rocky region in the south of N'RAKH. It is one of the more arid regions in the nation and is characterised by boulder-fields, and scattered ALOE and CENTURY PLANT growth with fauna adapted to the hot climate.

T'GISSA: Ind. Set. Pumice mines in the west of N'RAKH (Pop. c. 6,600).

T'ILLU: (8,250-ft.) Geo. 1. Rugged Mountains running south east just west of the border between N'RAKH and the UMBRA SOKHAR wastes. The formation is grey and dusty, and much of it crumbles under the influence of the ATRAMENTA. The waters flowing from the hills are dark and shunned by living creatures, though those that thrive on the Atramenta, such as UMBRAPHAGI, seek out its waters.

The western reaches of the Mountains are composed of pumice, which is used in engineering works throughout N'rakh.

2. (8,250-ft.) Volcano in the eponymous Mountain-range.

T'TSADA: Set. Settlement in the c north of N'RAKH. Its main industry is the mining of ADAMANTINE, an ancient industry that dates back to the days of the ancient THYMI empire that once dominated the region (Pop. unknown).

T*TSIKA: Set. Settlement in the c north of N*RAKH. Its main industry is the mining of ADAMANTINE, an ancient industry that dates back to the days of the ancient THYMI empire that once dominated the region (Pop. unknown).

TA OMA, the: lit. 'the Regents' Towers'. Set. City in the c of AHRISHEN, covering both sides of the river ARESH^(2.), just north of lake IPHIADA. The name originates from two ancient towers that formed the foundation of the city. Each tower is made up of six linked buttresses, which rise some 300-feet, before coming together in a large central citadel that rises another 100-feet. They were repaired over the course of the FIFTH AGE, starting during the reign of the Regent Tauam in c. -200 RM, after which a settlement appeared at their base.

The settlement slowly grew until it reached its peak in c. 2900 RM. It has since diminished, though remains a major presence in the area, with both the GREAT ROAD and the GREY ROAD trade-routes passing through it (Pop. c. 71,500).

TA'HALU: His. Set. Ancient FIFTH AGE city-state located in present-day ELAT, deep in the LINA shelf. Little remains of the city-state but what fragments of history populate other nations' records. It is perhaps most famous for its metallurgical schools, from which the technique of forging cold steel is said to stem millennia past.

It also appears in some legends as the place-of-origin of the so-called IDOL OF RIDERA.

TAA KRI: Rel. Str. Monastery of the ORDER OF LORE on the island of SAEMDIS in the BROKEN LANDS.

TAAL: 1. 2. Set. Settlement in the east of OPHAR, noted for the ancient ruined temple once dedicated to the AZOSAOTHI^(1.) pantheon. Its main industry is feldspar mining (Pop. c. 3,000).

TAAMARAS: Geo. Ice sheet in the north of LLACHATUL, in the north east of RAONGEN^(2.).

TAANAL: His. Ntn. Historical league of cities in the AMMASHI^(1.) peninsula in the south west of SAMMAEA, in what is now the nation of TAAN AN. The league formed in c. 2790 RM in response to the solidifying of various surrounding states and unions in the peninsula, not all of which were friendly to its cities.

Its cities remained strong throughout the period now known as the $\underline{\text{AMMASHI STRUGGLE}}$ whilst under the mutual protection of the league, and they fended off periodic attacks and incursions from surrounding lands, primarily $\underline{\text{KAPHAAR}}$ in the south west, and $\underline{\text{RAMERRI}}$ in the south east.

The signing of the AMMASHI TREATY in 3594 RM brought renewed stability to the region, under which the League of Taanali cities prospered, leading to its fusing as a single political entity in 3633 RM, after which it became known as Taan An. See Vol III: Extinct States.

TAAN AN: Dem. 'Taan Anan'. His. Ntn. Nation in the AMMASHI^(1.) peninsula in the south west of SAMMAEA, along the TOPIC OF MAOCARHL. Its climate varies from arid in the north to savannah in the south, and is of dry hot summers and cool winters, with a short intense wet season.

The region is dominated by the dry endorheic basin of ACCA HOAL in which is found an expansive aqueduct system. It is mostly dry and is well-known in KORACHAN for the vast ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region that dominates its easternmost territories, which collectively are known as ZENEGE RES, the Umbra Veil. Zenege Res is extensively mined for UMBRA, and is the nations' main industry.

It emerged from the earlier $\underline{TAANALI}$ leagues, which unified into an $\underline{IMPERIAL\ MONARCHY}^{(1.)}$ in 3633 RM after the signing of the $\underline{AMMASHI}$ \underline{TREATY} decades earlier brought stability to the region after a millennium of conflict. It has since maintained close links with the $\underline{MARSHALLS}^{(2.)}$ of \underline{RAMINA} , who revere the $\underline{MONSTRANCE\ OF\ FEALTY}$ as a powerful political and cultural relic that was instrumental in leading to the signing of the Treaty.

A parliament was founded in 3782 RM, though the title of emperor remained as a ceremonial role. It is organised into twenty-two PRAEFECTURES, each of which is led by a PRAEFECT. Together, the twenty-two Praefects form the parliamentary cabinet that rules Taan An, at the head of which is an Arch-praefect who is nominated from amongst the praefects every 7-years to act as a chair.

The nation is famed across ELYDEN for its ancient monolithic waterways, collectively known as the AQUEDUCT OF CREPHITHISS, whose waterways from a network dominating most of the settled lands of Taan An. The aqueduct is a relic from a past age and was restored at great cost by the people of Ammash to full working order over many centuries in the 2nd millennium RM. It collects spring water and snowmelt from surrounding mountains and ancient artificial aquifers known as KIRATU, and feeds it through gravity to the arid north, in the Acca Hoal Basin, where it supplies dozens of cities, including the capital CUR APON, with clean water for drinking and irrigation. The many years of maintenance have moulded its people into competent hydraulic engineers, who have since constructed many reservoirs, cisterns and grand steam-operated pumps. Of note are the SADROS, a widespread volunteer corps who perform maintenance on the aqueduct and protect it from natural damage, as well as mortal threat. The Sadros are well-regarded across Taan An and veteran members are highly respected, becoming citizens, and often rising to prominent roles within their respective Prefectures.

Taan Anan cities are also known for their busy facades, with intricate stone balconies, patterned hide and canvas shutters, and electrical cables criss-crossing its streets, which are typically narrow and constructed diagonally to the passage of the sun to provide more shade, particularly in the north.

The assassination of the Emperor by unknown forces in 3889 RM led to the nation becoming more insular, cutting ties with distant allies and trade-partners, relying instead on ancient alliances with its neighbouring states within the Ammashi peninsula. This led to it entered into a landmark agreement with KEPHUAAN in 3915 RM where the neighbouring states collaborated on TECHNARCANE research and infrastructure projects, which helped to bring it into the modern age, the benefits of which it continues to reap today. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

TAANA: also 'the Red Minaret'. Set. Stronghold in the PEREIDAS Mountains in the south east of TETHYSIA, overlooking the north east of LIMOTH^(1.), ruled over by a hereditary position that has overseen the defence of the region since c.2200 RM (Pop. c. 2,100).

TAANHA: Sea. Bay in the far north west of LAASKHA, along the border with SKAROS. In the bay, at the mouth of the river LLORTHA is the city of IKATHIA. The sea's waters are largely sterile due to the large amounts of lose soil and sediment that fall into it due to the barren slopes of the IKATHIAN HEADLAND.

TAAR AL: His. Set. Ancient city in what was the north of NAARTH. The city was conquered by NATH in -540 RM and became the western-most city of its kingdom for many years, until its fall in c. -170 RM. Following the fall of Nath, Taar Al survived as a singular city-state along the border between what would later become VENATH. It became very powerful through an ancient mystical tradition, of which little is known today and expanded between c. -150 and -50 RM as Nath crumbled. The CULT OF THE SPHINX spread there by c. 60 RM, becoming the primary religion. By 161 RM Tarr Al, was partially responsible for fomenting unrest in NAARETH, which led to war between Naareth and Venath, leading to independence the next year.

It was later abandoned under mysterious circumstances, though was later resettled in c. 1000 RM as $\underline{\text{TAAROM}}$.

TAARAN VALA: Mar. Martial art practiced in VAALK. It emerged in the years following the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR'S attack on the city of MEKENA in 2309 RM following decades of mismanagement by the ruling government, known as the HEPTARCHY, led to uncontrolled organised crime in the east of Vaalk. The attacks brought order to the nation though left the populace feeling distrustful of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, which also had a hand in the attacks, leading to the deaths of thousands of innocents in their CRUSADE against the wrong-

As a result, many lost faith in the church and turned instead to martial disciplines. Vaalk had always been a nation where martial prowess was valued, and many found it easier to put their faith in their own bodies than distant uncaring deities. By c. 2315 RM the practice of Taaran Vala had emerged in the city of UDSSER as a force of self-discipline and meditation, and rapidly spread across Vaalk. Though not a religion, many came to regarding it as a substitute to the Church of the Undying Machine, which continued to wane throughout the Korachani empire's continued tenure in Vaalk. And despite measures to quell its spread, it continued to be practiced in underground cells, though it became public once more with the arrival of the SARASTRO as is occupier in 3736 RM.

TAAREN: Geo. Rocky hills in the west of TATAR, in the north of SAMMAEA. The hills from the western-most part of the BOSPAR Mountains.

TAARFA: Rvr. River in the south of SARAGOS, flowing north for 290-miles before reaching its estuary, the BAY OF NADA. The flow of the river is dictated by the rainfall throughout the year, and it is not uncommon for its flow to diminish.

TAAROM: Set. City founded in c. 1000 RM in what is now the south of SARAGOS. It was constructed over the ruins of the far older city of TAAR AL; an ancient NAARTHI city, whose demise is shrouded in mystery. Taarom remained an independent state, controlling surrounding settlements for some miles around, and remained close with VENTHIR, its neighbour to the north. The appearance of the nation of SARAGOS to its north saw it distanced from Venthir, and by c. 2400 RM the two had become close allies. This partnership culminated in 2702 RM, where Taarom became a part of Saragos, and grew to become its largest southern city at the time.

Today it is the main Saragosi manufacturer of AIRSHIPS, and is a major link between Saragos and PORPHYR, operating sky-routes to BETYL and beyond (Pop. c. 347,500).

TAASH: Lak. Endorheic lake in the c east of VAALK fed by seasonal rivers that flow north east from the AVARANI hills. In times of great flooding the lake has been known to overflow, resulting in a temporary river that flows north west towards the coast, rarely reaching it, however.

TAAT: 1. Geo. Island in the AMAARI WATERS, south of PERGOST.
2. Set. Small city on the above island. It is a major outpost of the TURAAN people of the MAADAN ISLES (Pop. c. 12,800).

TABA ATEL: Set. Small city in the c south of NÁRTHEL (Pop. c. 20,000).

TABA NU: Geo. Pass across the UEFIR Highlands in the c of NÁRTHEL.

TABANID: Str. Ancient fortress in the c of KORACHAN, in the foothills of the FATUACH Mountains. The fortress was abandoned in c. 2300 RM, and was restored by HOUSE USHAR, who controls surrounding lands and villages to this day.

TABERCIL: 1. Geo. Rocky foothills of the western BAND⁽²⁾ Mountains.
 Pol. Geo. One of nine political territories in the far south east of ALAM BETHYL.

TABELLIA: Set. Coastal city in far east of ANDILUTH, in the BAY OF KANAT. It is known for its drydocks and safe harbour and is rapidly growing, becoming one of the mains cities in Andiluth (Pop. c. 20,000).

TABERNA: 1. Pol. Duchy of PALUS^(1.), in the CITY-KINGDOMS OF THE HARÉSHK. The duchy is locally known as the wooded realm, after the wooded lands (the IRORIEL to the north and IRSALLIEL to the south) that flank its borders.

2. also 'the White city'. Set. City in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of PALUS^(1.). Crowned by an ancient hilltop fortress that is now abandoned, the city slowly grew outwards to encompass the hill in its entirety and now stands proudly as a tiered landmark with bright whitewashed walls and red tiled roofs, beyond which are miles of farmland. It also a link along the GREAT ROAD trade-route (Pop. c. 38,100).

TABERNACEA: 1. Geo. Ancient shallow sea dominating AQUARIIA before c. 3000 RM. The waning of the sea became noticeable in c. 2500 RM and continued to 3100 RM, after which it dwindled and disappeared, leaving behind brine pools and salt flats. It was once home to many harbours and ports, most of which are now deserted, reclaimed by the land.

2. Geo. Region in the south of AQUARIIA once occupied by the eponymous sea, but now reduced to brine pools and salt flats. It is shunned by most and few settlements can be found there.

TABERNACLE OF ARBESUH: Rel. Str. Subterranean temple in the PRISON CARCERI, said to be located somewhere beneath AHRISHEN. It is known for the size of the natural chamber in which it was built, which is comparable to a small continent, as well as the fossilized-like surface of the structure. Its ceiling is covered in thousands of needle-like stalactites, from which water drips constantly. The chamber is said to be inhabited by bat-like creatures with wings that can envelop their prey.

TABERNACLE OF DAPHEILLA: Rel. Str. Ancient stone-carved temple in the south of the OZZARUN Mountains, thought to date back to an unknown late FOURTH AGE culture. It is noted for its grotesque architecture and monstrous caryatid columns, and once had expansive catacombs beneath it, though it is now thought that most of these were destroyed in a series of earthquakes in the 29th century.

TABERNACLE OF HELITHTIS: Rel. Rui. Expansive religious complex dating back to the days of the UALLA MIGHAN empire, in what is now the south of CHEIRA. Most of the complex is now ruined, wither reclaimed by the WAELMIGH^(1.) rainforest, or collapsed beyond recognition. Its present name comes from the most intact part of the ancient complex – a vast multi-chambered tabernacle that remains largely undisturbed to this day, and which is said to be infested with NAGA.

TABERNACLE OF IASTANITHE: Rui. Ancient temple-complex on the island of VEADRA in the ROILING SEA. Little is known of the culture responsible for its construction, but it is thought to date back to a time of conflict in the region during the THIRD AGE.

TABERNACLE OF SHABAT ASHUAT: Rui. Ancient FOURTH AGE tabernacle contained within a temple in the western-face of the KHO INNOR Mountains in the east of SARASTRO. The tabernacle forms part of the route of the SHADOW MARCH and is venerated by pilgrims. The tabernacle is said to have been created by the last PLAGI to worship the DEMIURGE RACHANAEL before his total abandonment of them in favour of HUMANS.

TABERNACLE OF ST. INDACHAL: Int. Rel. Str. Veh. Large landship that served as a mobile shrine dedicated to ST. INDACHAL, and that contains a large reliquary in which his mummified body is interred. The reliquary was rescued in 3821 RM from a chapel just outside NYARDOR in AZAZEM that was threatened (and later destroyed) by flooding. Three years later, it was fitted to a decommissioned military landship that was sanctified for use as a mobile chapel (often referred to as TABERNACLES^(2,)).

It has spent the last 180 years traveling in a wide circuit around Azazem, visiting settlements and churches, bringing the shrine to HELOTS who revere St. Indachal as a patron.

TABIT: Geo. Mountain-range in the far west of ATARAXIA, forming an extension of the BLACK MOUNTAINS.

TABLET OF ESHUROD: Str. Stone platform in the c of GNOTH, in the forest of OFANIMAH. The tablet was constructed by the famed conjoined twin philosophers BOHAL AND TRISIMON and the place remains popular amongst their followers.

TABOR ALEN III: f. Pol. Per. (B. 3972 RM) Present QUEEN-REGENT of ALLASAN.

TABORS: Set. Major city in the east of AETHIOS, along the course of the river NARRATI. It is a major industrial centre, and is well known for its multi-tiered public baths and hanging gardens (Pop. c. 180,000).

TABRAATI: Sct. Fortified city in the south of the tribe of KANAATI, in the c north of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 32,000).

TABRIS: Pol. Set. Capital of ISESETH (Pop. c. 338,900).

TACAR: Set. Small city in the c south of HARAPPA⁽³⁾. It is a part of the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 40,000).

TACENT: Set. Independent city in the c of THE SURRACH. Almost all citizens of the city have taken a vow of silence, but music plays a vital role in life there. Its people are so skilled that many find themselves far from the Surrach as performers, the vows of their old lives forgotten (Pop. c. 13,800).

TACHA: Rvr. River in the west of KORACHAN, flowing 100-miles west from the FATUACH Mountains.

TACHIKON: Rui. Ruined metallic tower in the north west of LYRIDIA

DHAI. The tower is rusted to oblivion and is thought to date back to the third century RM, though ATRAMENTAL CORRUPTION in the area south of the tower has stopped large-scale exploration attempts.

TACZHHEAL: Set. Settlement in the c of OKKHAM (Pop. c. 10,000).

TADAREH: Set. Coastal settlement in the north west of the mainland PANTHEON ISLES. It is twinned with the settlement of UKYANDUR⁽²⁾, and the two maintain a ferry service across the narrow strait that divides them (Pop. c. 8,000).

TADARIDA: Pol. One of five districts of the TARAHID ANNEXES, and seat of power.

TADASA: Ind. Set. Fortified tin-mining settlement in the c east of TZALLRACH, along the course of the river LIATHAR (Pop. c. 6,800).

TADAT: Set. Settlement in the north east of RHINOCOLOURA. It is known for its ochre production (Pop. c. 6,000).

TADDA: Set. Settlement in the east of NOAVATUR, along the western edge of the SAURIAR jungles (Pop. c. 6,000).

TADDATRA: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the north east of ATARAXIA, in a wide valley in the southern-face of the BLACK MOUNTAINS guarding the border with CISNERIA. It works alongside SCIDDA, and their rangers are experts at patrolling the wooded hills and mountains of the north of Ataraxia.

TADDISA: Set. Small city in the east of RHEA (Pop. c. 31,700).

TADEROOKH: Set. Ancient ruined citadel perched atop a rocky expanse of the TELKHUM ridge in the c of the BARRIER LANDS. It dates back to the late CHIWENOOL kingdom, and was built in c. 400 RM to serve as a bastion, overlooking its southern borders. It remains now, in remarkably good condition, as a stark reminder of the region's bleak history. In c. 1500 RM KORACHANI explorers found a series of lead plates dating back to the last days of the Chiwenool kingdom that recorded the many depravities perpetrated by its shapers against the lower classes.

TADESSA: Rvr. Seasonal river in the c east of THE SURRACH, flowing south west for 340-miles from sources in the GAMIGAHUA massif before emptying in lake AMATAN. The river is seasonal, flowing intensely for a few months, and has been known to not flow in particularly dry years. Over the past centuries the frequency in which it has flown as decreased, with it running dry for as many as 3 years between rains.

TAELRIS: Soc. Pol. PARTHISAN PATRICIAN HOUSE that in c. 3480 RM colonised the island of JIRIDUN (now OD MEGINNAS (1.)) alongside Houses of CAELMONT, SELVARSHI, TENDARI, and VALTARIS. Together, those Houses formed trade arrangements with the local government of Jiridun, marrying into each other and with local nobles to secure power. This allowed the Houses to settle the land, taking over overlooked industries that were of importance to Parthis.

In 3597 RM House Valtaris orchestrated a ruthless culling of its household, including House Taelris, where many ancillary parts of the House were either sent to Parthis or other far-flung corners of Elyden, effectively castrating them of power and denying the House the privilege of inheriting any of the holdings of the family. This was a damning act that earned the PATERFAMILIA of House Valtaris the enmity of House Selvarshi and the other Houses, and it is thought that he was responsible for many mysterious deaths and disappearances, but it ultimately paid off and by 3630 RM the family tree had been sheared down to size, consolidating the power amongst a handful of individuals, and ultimately serving a death knell to the House Taelris and the other Houses with which it had once been allied. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

TAELL DAN: Rel. Str. Shrine in the c east of LOEGRESS⁽¹⁾. It was built following king TORRVAN'S death in 2657 RM and takes the form of a large open-topped rotunda with a wide loggia in the centre of which lies the king's ornate marble sarcophagus.

The shrine was once a place of devotion and pilgrimage and a small town appeared around it, but it had begun to wane by c. 3800 RM as his memory was replaced by that of more recent monarchs. It remains intact today but is in disrepair, the sarcophagus cracked and covered in moss and vines.

It was once guarded by four royal guards, but this tradition ended when then monarchy was abolished following the rebirth of the Taellannir centuries later.

TAELLA: Geo. Mountain-range in the north east of TAMAR, forming an extension of the CATRIGA Mountains.

TAELLANNIR, the: f. Int. Myr. His. Oth. Pol. Per. (B. 3091 – Rb. 3139 RM)

OTHERWORLDER and ruler of LOEGRESS^(1.) in the north east of EASTERN

LLACHATUL.

Born close to a millennium ago, she was an ARCHSHAPER and main advisor to king TRIDUAN. Respected and feared in equal measure, many believed she was the true power behind the throne, with most laws and edicts seemingly coming from her.

In 3139 RM, during a session of petition, when the royal was filled with people awaiting their turn to petition the king, she fell violently ill and was taken to her quarters where she was examined by a court physician who could not explain what was befalling her. Her body underwent a horrific change overnight, moulting violently into a brilliant alien creature of glass-like form that levitated above her bed. Her visage had been cast off to reveal a featureless mask-like face with three white eyes that exuded brilliant chromatic light. Those present were awestricken and prostrated themselves before her, knowing full well what a momentous change they had seen.

Amongst them was Triduan, who knew right away that his days as king were numbered. He knew, as he saw the otherworldly reincarnation of his advisor floating out of the castle, her form illuminating the sky, beckoning the people from their slumber, that they would flock to her. He made an address the next day, saying that Taellannir had transmutation herself to help the people of Loegress. Almost immediately, a cult of personality emerged around her, centred around the castle of Caer Sidi. He became her shepherd and spokesperson and spent his time trying to understand the purpose behind her transmutation, though she was enigmatic at best, of few words, and what words she did utter were seemingly without meaning. Triduan's remaining advisors tried to unravel her words, and they would go on to become the forebears of the present-day HIEROPHANTS of the ORDER OF THE TAELLANNIR - caretakers of her mortal form and proselytisers of her transcribed words and whisperings. As the cult of personality rapidly evolve into a religion, the public lost all vestige of interest in the monarchy and Triduan, despite his wellintentions, became vilified amongst the faithful, until in 3142 RM he went into self-imposed exile, leaving the kingdom to the Taellannir and her Hierophants, who ruled on her behalf for the next 750-years, interpreting her word as divine will.

In 3177 RM she spoke to her Hierophants, who after weeks of deliberation Interpreted her words, concluding that she had set before them a quest in the highlands of the HOLLOW COASTLINE. Three months later they found the glass-and-marble AETHERIAL THRONE and hauled it back to Caer Sidi where it remains to this day.

On the 777^{th} year of the Loegrean calendar (3919 RM) she abandoned her duties and floated northeast across the SEA OF AKRY, never to be seen again. Her final words to her court were 'guide my people until the coming of the pale sun' – a phrase that remains controversial to this day, with theologists debating the significance unsuccessfully.

Loegress is now ruled by elected Hierophants, who serve as stewards in her absence. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

TAELLANNIR, ORDER OF THE: Rel. Org. The main organised religion in LOEGRESS⁽¹⁾, in the north east of EASTERN LLACHATUL. It emerged in c. 3140 RM following the miraculous rebirth of the OTHERWORLDER TAELLANNIR, who emerged fully-formed from the yet-living body of the eponymous ARCHSHAPER and advisor to king TRIDUAN, in 3139 RM.

A caste of Hierophants rapidly emerged from the remaining courtly advisors, to tend to the glass-like body of the otherworlder and proselytise in her name, interpreting her vague and sparse words for the people.

The religion grew rapidly over the next decades, quickly spreading across Loegress as well as some neighbouring lands, including western Kommea and parts of ABATTUR and MEHITIEL. In Loegress, the waxing influence of the Hierophants led to the monarchy losing favour and king Triduan saw the inevitable and of the monarchy and decided to pre-empt a possibly-violent transfer of power, so in 3142 RM he signed over his bloodline's claim to the throne in exchange for a civil changeover of power that saw him and his direct family exiled to the east, alongside their followers and possessions. This gave the Order of the Taellannir full political and religious control of Loegress, which remains in place to this day. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

TAENIA: Set. Coastal settlement in the west of THE SURRACH, in the region of ADASICH (Pop. c. 8,000).

TAERIN: 1. One of the seven INDUSTRIES of RAONGEN⁽²⁾, located in the south west of the empire. It is homes to the few UMBRA mines in the empire, and is also a major agricultural centre.

2. Set. Major city in the c of south west of RAONGEN⁽²⁾ on the south westernmost shore of lake TAHONG. It is a major industrial centre and is home to the largest OMNATITE refinery in Raongen. (Pop. c. 2,400,000).

TAERON: Mor. Bestial humanoids, afflicted by the shadow, native to the northern ice-wastes of TETHYSIA. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

TAERTH: Int. Arc. Ancient granite monuments on the southern face of the HETHA Mountain in TARTAK.

TAES: Dem. 'Taes'. Ntn. Small equatorial nation in the south east of MENISCEA, along the equator. It is of a tropical climate, though the many DREAMSCAPES present within its territories mean that the climate here varies wildly, depending on the effects of independent dreamscapes.

It adopted the Church of the Undying Machine in c. 1535 RM following imperial missionaries and SOULSTONE miners travelling there, which slowly became more popular than its ancient deity, known as the GOD ADRIFT.

It has since come to be ruled by the ONEIRODYNIC EMPRESS, a timeless figure of child-like features unrivalled powers of ONEIROMANCY, whose presence has diminished the influence of the Church of the Undying Machine in Taes.

Its main industry is the mining of DREAMSTONES – supranatural ores that are reactive to DREAMS and sought after by ONEIROMANCERS. The substance is mined from a few of the major dreamscapes in the region, including \ast and \ast .

The region was stuck by plague in c. 3720 RM, which left it isolationist and sparsely populated. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

TAFAZA: Sea. Bay in the south east of NOAVATUR, to the north of the SEA OF RTHAS.

TAGAGNACH: Set. KORACHANI enclave in the far north west of the UMBRA SOKHAR wastes, 65-miles south of the border with KARAKHAS. The enclave is home to the MINASTERIA of AEHAROCKEAR, which was forced out of their old headquarters in KITHALOI in the south of KARAKHAS in 3706 RM following the SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE.

It is an influential force in the study of the ATRAMENTA and mounts many expeditions into the Umbra Sokhar and KHARKHARADONTIS to perform experiments. Its members often accompany the SHADOW MARCH south as experts to help against Atramental DISEASE that may befall pilgrims along the route south. It is also a centre of research into the development of Atramental weaponry, particularly ATRAMENTAL BOMBS (Pop. c. 18,500).

TAGAN: Mil Str. Fortress in the KORACHANI colony of AMONDOR (1.). It forms a part of the RED ROUTE, and its soldiers guard the short part of the route that passes through the colony's territories before veering north to the MULL CITY-STATES.

TAGANAL: Set. Small city in the c of ALAM BETHYL, along the course of the river KEGHOK (Pop. c. 12,000).

TAGANAL, SANCTUARY OF: Phil. Str. Monastery of the UNION OF
THE FIERY HAND, situated in the south of the VUZUNGI Mountains in the c of ALAM BETHYL. It is relatively close to the settlement of TAGANAL, which maintains a seasonal route to the monastery.

TAGASTA: Set. City in the c north west of LIDEA. It is a centre of trade, linking the industrial west with the more rural east via the SALT ROAD and the RED ROUTE, both of which cross its borders (Pop. c. 41,000).

TAGGET: 1. Pol. Geo. One of the nine kingdoms of ELALLIA, located in the far north east of the nation, dominated by the plateau of ARANAULL.
2. Pol. Set. Large city and capital of the kingdom of Tagget^(1.) in the north east of ELALLIA. It is a major mercantile centre and forms a part of the NACRE ROAD (Pop. c. 95,400).

TAGHA: Rui. Abandoned tin mine in the north of present-day VENTHIR, though it part of KORACHANI-controlled NÁRTHEL when it was in use.

TAGHABAND: Set. Coastal city in the c south west of NOAVATUR. Its main industry is logging, and it it's known for its large harbour, which is situated along the course of river VERESAMIID (Pop. c. 40,000).

TAGHAIRM: Geo. Expansive plains dominating the north of KASPIA. They are noted for their many lakes and winding slow moving waterways that often freeze in winter and make up its north western-most reaches.

TAGOTH: Set. Settlement in the east of TETHYSIA, built within a gigantic fossilised ribcage (Pop. c. 10,000).

TAGRAB: 1. Geo. Island in the SEA OF BALIMAN, belonging to GIBEAH.

2. Set. Main settlement on the eponymous island (Pop. c. 12,000).

TAGRII: Set. Settlement in the c east of ELEKHID in the NARAVASH
Mountains. It forms a part of the main trade-route snaking across the east of Elekhid, connecting the capital of Eneph with the harbour of ADALOMM (Pop. unknown).

TAHALL: Dem. 'Tahallan'. Ntm. Located in the south of LLACHATUL, overlooking the GATE OF EREBETH, Tahall is positioned in a headland that enjoys an ideal temperate climate and various resources and, perhaps most importantly, many deep natural harbours that over the years have protected its ships and settlements from the elements and outside interference.

Like EZASUH^(2.) and SAGITTARIA, Tahall is descended from the SAGITTAARI people of the KORACHANI PENINSULA, who became persecuted by the followers of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR and his CHURCH. They fled and scattered across the west of the INNER SEA, with most settling around the Gate of Erebeth. Those who settled north of the Gate would mingle with the pastoral natives, focusing on agriculture and fishing, eventually controlling trade across the Gate of Erebeth, making them wealthy; while those who settled the south became more warlike, sending privateers against merchant ships of other nations. The lands north of the gate opposed this and became embroiled in a war of ideals against the south in 76 RM. This led to their separating into the nations of Tahall and Sagittaria.

The centuries after the schism saw Tahall expand, settling the many natural harbours of its coastline, giving birth to a nation of navigators, fishermen, sea merchants and privateers. Prisoners from their sea raids were taken back home and trained as an elite corps of marines who became infamous. It secured the Gate of Erebeth taxing passing vessels and attacking those who did not pay the toll. Other nations grew weary of this and eventually, in 2781 the ORDER OF THE GATE was founded by various nations and magnates to safeguard passage across the Gate and to defend merchant ships from the predations of Tahall, weakening Tahall's position. Their ships clashed with those of the Order for many decades, leading to the signing of the ACCORD OF THE GATE in 2824 RM, ending Tahalli monopoly of trade across the Gate in exchange for the legal right to tax certain items heading west across it.

In 3647 RM Emperor Vardyan I of PARTHIS established a partnership with Tahall, giving it TECHNARCANE machinery and other technologies that Tahall could not manufacture alone, in return for a stake in the levies accrued from trade crossing the Gate of Erebeth. The agreement brought Tahall into the modern age and saw it become a more powerful presence in the west of the Inner Sea – its navy was bolstered with new technologies and its cities enjoyed economic and physical growth following this.

Tahall has since become a major economic power in the Inner Sea and the SEA OF ORRIDA and all vessels and it named one of the richest nations in the near world by many in the Inner Sea – though the truth of this is disputed. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

TAHALLIAN: Lan. Language spoken in TAHALL that, alongside modern SAGITTARIAN, shares its roots with EZASUHI and, before that, the SAGITTAARIAN dialect of early KORACHANI tongue spoken by the SAGITTAARI people. See Vol II: Languages.

TAHARA: Set. Small settlement in the south of the TARAHID ANNEXES, along the course of the river DHOTA (Pop. c. 8,200).

TAHARDAR: Geo. Island in the c-south east of the PANTHEON ISLES archipelago, in the east of LLACHATUL.

TAHARDUR: Set. Coastal city on the island of TAHARDAR, in the c-south east of the PANTHEON ISLES (Pop. c. 45,000).

TAHET: Ind. Set. Mining settlement in the c of ALMAGEST, in the north of the GAEFANG Mountain It is one of few mines in the area that are still operational.

TAHIEL: For. Forest in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of ALAMUT^(1.).

TAHIL: Set. Fortified city in VAALK, home to the GRIGORIAN SANCTIFIED ORDER OF THE INQUISITION until 1263 RM, where it was moved east to KYDONIA. The city is known for its many infirmaries and a large hospice that serves PETITIONERS OF THE MACHINE returning from THE SHADOW MARCH. The city has a long-standing tradition of gladiatorial fighting, dating back to before the age of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, and it is thought that the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR fought here, earning his freedom in -7 RM(Pop. c. 92,500).

TAHIRA: Rel. Dei. See TAHIRA, THE WHITE ANGEL.

TAHIRA, CULT OF: Rel. Main religion in KASPIA, devoted to the worship of its deity, the WHITE ANGEL TAHIRA, who was discovered in c. 1500 RM by the ELDRIAN peasant girl HULDAH at the ANGELS' LAKE. Members of the cult have an austere outlook on life, likely derived from the harsh weather and climate. Hard work is celebrated with drink and feasts, and funerals are celebrations of the deceased ones' life. Other otherworlders are viewed with suspicion and religious that worship them otherworlders are viewed with suspicion and religions that worship them are reviled. Its priests are referred to as wings, as in wings of the angel, and they are high-ranking and respected members of Kaspian society. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

TAHIRA, THE WHITE ANGEL: also 'the White Angel'. Rel. Dei. Divine being that is worshipped as the head of the CULT OF TAHIRA in KASPIA. She was discovered in c. 1500 RM in ELDRIA by the peasant girl HULDAH at the ANGELS' LAKE, bringing about a religious renaissance that remains to this day in Kaspia.

The White Angel is thought to be an OTHERWORLDER, though little is known of her origins. She is reclusive, living in the cold halls of the palace of STRIBOS on the HRIMA Mountains, which is a place of pilgrimage to her worshippers. What purpose or motive lies behind her return to ELYDEN is unknown, and scholars of the OTHERWORLD doubt that even she remembers. Her early rule was noteworthy for her many parables, including that of how she came to lose her wings, which have been incorporated into the culture of Kaspia and are visible in art and architecture of the Hegemony, and are known as the WINGS OF TAHIRA. Her word is enacted through the will of the Prophetess Huldah and the Cult of Tahira. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

TAHIREN: Set. Major city in the far west of AHRISHEN, along the mouth of the river ARESH^(2.), close to the delta. The city is the only major harbour and shipyard in all of Ahrishen since the retreat of the SEA OF PYREA. The city appeared in c. 3400 RM at the then mouth of the river Aresh though deposition from the river has led to the rapid growth of the delta (Pop. c. 1,170,000).

TAHKI: Rvr. River in the south west of SAMMAEA, flowing west from the SHAKHURAN Mountains and the SASTAKAUR MASSIF until it meets the BAY OF LRITHA in the far east of the SEA OF MERCUVIA.

TAHLIB: Mil. Law. Org. A policing force in the HENDECARCHY of CYRENIA, whose members are diviners, following in the footsteps of their ruler MANESKARKON ZARRÉ. Originally a force of law, they used their powers to predict crimes and make Cyrenia one of the safest regions of MALAN, but their purpose seemed to change over the years, much as the character Zarré had, and they became a force of tyranny, using their powers to extort people for crimes that they had not (and would not) commit.

Their headquarters are in the TEMPLE OF THE TAHLIB in ENIGOST^(2.), though they have a major presence in most cities in the Hendecarchy, also maintaining a small presence in the capitals of other Hendecarchies to extradite those who have fled Cyrenia.

TAHLIB, TEMPLE OF THE: Rel. Pol. Str. Major administrative complex and palace of the HENDECARCH in the city of ENIGOST (2.) in the north of the HENDECARCHY of CYRENIA. It originated as a temple where the OTHERWORLDER ZARRÉ could live, though grew into a large complex, particularly following their elevation to Hendecarch. The founding of the TAHLIB saw a new annex added where the new policing force could train in the FIRMAMENTAL arts of divination. It was slowly added to over time, required the demolition of large swathes of the city on no less than three separate occasions, with statues and new annexes added and larger more lavish quarters constructed for the Hendecarch, who became more reclusive over time.

In 3682 RM it became the last line of defence for Zarré and their forces when the armies of \underline{AONIA} , \underline{HATON} and \underline{NHORA} marched against Cyrenia in a bid to put Zarré in their place. For whatever reason, the LADY AEGIS intervened and forced the besieging armies to retreat, leaving the Temple of the Tahlib untouched.

TAHLOSH: m. Per. (D. 329 RM) KORACHANI explorer who was instrumental in gathering founding and leading the first major expedition into central KHARKHARADONTIS and who is remembered for discovering the FLAESCUS, which is still known to many as ST. TAHLOSH'S GARDEN.

He was canonised in 792 RM and has since become a patron to those studying the Atramenta and travelling in ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED

TAHMAL: 1. His. Rel. one of the ancient major regions of the AMNATHI KINGDOM, which dissolved into nine separate states in -589 RM; of which Tahmal and the surrounding towns was one. The southern-most state, it became heavily influenced by the rising SAOSTANAN power to the south east, to which many of its people would later migrate. A close alliance formed between the peoples c. -500 - -300 RM, at which point Tahmal had largely forsaken its SVATHI roots, where it became the home of the Saostanan Ziggurat—culture, starting in c. -450 RM. Following this time, its culture took on more of the Saostanan influences that it encountered, its people mingling with the natives until c. -200 RM, when their coalescing had led to the appearance of the SAOSHYANTS, who would in turn rise to power by -172 RM.

2. Set. Major city in the far north west of SARASTRO, along the course of the river SOLONA. It is one of the longest constantly-populated cities in the ARID TRIPTYCH. It was originally a coastal city, though the slow retreat of ELYDEN'S seas and the expansion of the river's delta eventually found it some 35-miles from the coast, and the river's course was engineered to remain within the bounds of the city, keeping it connected to the coast.

In c. -200 RM it was the birth-place of the merchant-class known as the SAOSHYANTS, who would unite the lands around Tahmal^(1,) into Sarastro, though they later moved their halls upstream to the city of SOLONIA, in -92 RM. In 114 RM the burgeoning VENATHIEMPIRE won Sarastro through the conquests of the ASANATE DYNASTIES, though the death of the fanatical LABAISINGH in 151 RM led to the fracturing of the empire, and Sarastro broke free in 157 RM, where it remained an independent nation until the return of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR almost 2-centuries later.

The city was captured by KORACHANI armies in 328 RM during its SIEGE OF SARASTRO, but the city slipped from imperial grasp two years later due to the strength of rule of the Saoshyants. In 339 RM it was taken, along all of Sarastro, by the risen Archpotentate Malichar and his DEMIURNE and PLAGI forces in a single night, after which it was rapidly converted to imperial culture, with an influx of imperial patricians and freemen arriving until c. 500 RM.

It was the site of a protracted siege during the WAR OF SUNDERING, with combined VENTHIRI and Korachani forces attacking it, eventually taking it on the 9th of KORAHALEN 3795 RM, though it is eventually returned to Sarastro as part of the SARASTROAN TREATY.

Today it is a major trade city in the north west of Sarastro, its port filled with trade ships and merchant caravans that cross it as part of their circuit of the Red Route (Pop. c. 208,000).

3. Str. Also, the name of a great minaret in the city of the same name^(2.), built in c. -150 RM under the supervision of the first SAOSHYANTS, where their lords were buried until their migration to SOLONIA in -92 RM.

TAHNOL MAER: Geo. Gap between the ILLIGARHI and ENEÁRHI Mountains, called 'the Gateway to the West' in the common tongue of the east.

TAHOM: 1. Geo. Mid FIFTH AGE culture in the east of EASTERN MENISCEA, in what is today the north of TAHOMIA. In c. 3100 RM it annexed the southern state of MEDINEA⁽²⁾, and later YDONTA in c. 3250 RM

Its southern territories were targeted by KORACHANI colonisation attempts beginning in 3776 RM, with the establishment of the settlement of VIARACHAN. The colony faltered a few decades after initial landfall was made, with the remnants of the Korachani immigrants becoming assimilated by local culture over the coming years with their own culture slowly growing weaker. The region later became known as TAHOMIA, after the Korachani name for the region.

2. Int. Rui. Ancient geometric ruin in the c north east of TAHOMIA, thought by KORACHANI explorers who saw it to have been the work of a DEMIURGE. The ruin is thought to date back to the THIRD AGE and is of stark shape and form, now covered in vegetation, its once lustrous surface oxidised, but otherwise undamaged. It is shunned by surrounding people.

TAHOMIA: Also 'MEDINEA'. Dem. 'Tahomite'. Ntn. Kingdom in the east of EASTERN MENISCEA, made up of seven states. Its people emerged from a KORACHANI colonisation attempt made in TAHOM^(L) in 3776 RM, which was abandoned within decades, with many Korachani natives remining behind, adapting their culture to that of the local Tahom people. Over time the region became known as Tahomia, which was the Korachani name for the colony.

Some aspects of Korachani culture do remain, particularly the tradition of burying the dead in FUNERARY TOWERS, which has developed into a major part of their religion and culture. The north west of the nation is known for its reserves of crystalline FIRMATITE, which are used in TECHNARCANE industries and exported at great profit. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

TAHON XAN: Geo. Expansive region of escarpments and rocky outcrops in the north east of THE OLD FOREST covering some 50,000 square-miles.

TAHONG: Lak. Endorheic lake in the c. of WESTERN LLACHATUL, along the border between THE VORANDINE in the west and RAONGEN⁽²⁾.

The lake exists solely due to the presence of the WHITE SHEET, which dams the flow of the river CARMILI north, stopping its flow into the SEA OF IGRASIA.

TAHOURA: Ind. Set. Small coastal city in the west of PARAIYA, overlooking the great lake ALANCARAC. Its main industry is the mining of SOULSTONES. Some of the stones are taken north east and studied in the city of SOUMBA (Pop. c. 14,000).

TAHRAT: Set. Large conurbation in the north of MHAROKK, along the course of the river NUTHA, comprised of 5 separate settlements whose main role is that of food production for the larger cities of northern Mharokk, as well as providing provisions to merchants passing through the city while travelling along the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 4,200).

TAHUDUN: also 'the Hidden River'. Rvr. River in the north east of EASTERN LLACHATUL, flowing for over 450-miles through eastern ABATTUR into western LOEGRESS from sources in the VOULLOR Mountains before disappearing down a sinkhole in Loegress, where it continues to flow for hundreds of miles, disappearing into yet deeper inaccessible hollows. The river is believed to have once led to the coast, as a valley with notable signs of river erosion winds its way to the coast.

The river partially flows through the Atramentally tainted region of Aehkaurolor for an approximate 5-miles stretch, though this does little corrupt its waters.

TAHUON: Pol. Geo. One of the seven INDUSTRIES of RAONGEN^(2.), located in the west of the empire.

TAIDA: Set. Settlement in the south east of AMMESH (Pop. c. 8,000).

TAIHA: Rvr. River in the west of TISARA, flowing some 1,175-miles from its most direct source in the LAESHU Massif. The river empties at the end of the USEAN GULE, where the capital of USEA is located.

TAION: Set. Settlement in the c of IO, along the course of the river TANOSH (Pop. c. 5,000).

TAIPOETH: For. Rainforest in the south east of ELEKHID. It is one of few areas where the MANNA tree now grows naturally, and many settlements in the region have come to grow it for its resin, which is a valuable trade item.

TAIROKO: For. Wetland forest in the c north west of SAUA. The region is very humid and in the wet season floods, leading to many structures being constructed on stilts.

TAISALAN: Set. Settlement in the c of HABOT, in the southern foothills of the EKAGHI Mountains. It is a centre LAZANIST teachings, and offers refuge to priests from across the AMMASHI^(1.) peninsula who travel there to study (Pop. c. 8,000).

TAISHIGH: Geo. Mountains in the south of AMMESH.

TAISLEMMAT: Set. Settlement in the c of METHUMN. It is known for its stone craftsmanship, with local masons producing intricate carvings and robust structures that reflect the region's ancient heritage (Pop. c. 8,000).

TAISLER: Set. Coastal settlement on the north east of the island of CAMARA in the north east of the CORAL BARONIES, off the south western coast of SAMMAEA (Pop. c. 4,800).

TAISLERA: Set. Major city in the c south east of TAAN AN, at an important junction along the AQUEDUCT OF CREPHITHISS. It is home to a large contingent of SADROS, whose expertise is key to maintaining the aqueduct (Pop. c. 118,000).

 $\underline{\text{TAISLET}}$: Set. Small city on the island of $\underline{\text{SAOKIAN}}$, off the northern coast of $\underline{\text{KEPHUAAN}}$ (Pop. c. 13,250).

TÁIWA: Sea. Lagoon in the west of the Maiden Isles, between the major islands of VOIRIN, LETRIHET, and EPEHET. It is known for its crystal-clear waters and bountiful flora and fauna.

TAK RETH: Set. Small fortified city in the east of KOLCHIS. Its citizen levy is amongst the best-trained in all of Kolchis, and its conscripts patrol the nations' eastern border against the attentions of ALMAGEST (Pop. c. 16,200).

TAKALLUM: Set. City in the west of the JAHADAT STATES, under the control of the city of HAYSHAB (Pop. c. 40,000).

TAKANA: Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTALLY- and geologically-active region dominating the northern foothills of the MOLOTH KHAMMOTHUL Mountains in the south of the UMBRA SOKHAR wastes. Earthquakes are common here, as are landslides. Where the terrain levels out it is dominated by rends and cracks and otherwise uneven terrain from previous quakes. Thin strands of SHADOWISPS float from these fissures and float on prevailing winds across the Umbra Sokhar and beyond, poisoning whatever they touch. Very little life survives in the region, and what does is unlike that found elsewhere, having learnt to survive in the otherwise inimical landscape.

TAKENA: Mil. Str.

TAKHI: Geo. Ancient canyon system in the south of KHAMID, in present-day island-chains to the south of the RED ISLES and the PHARANX. Before the CATACLYSM OF KHAMID in 101 RM, the canyon stretched for no less than 400-miles, though remains now in scattered remains dotting a few dozen islands.

TAKIN: Set. Settlement in the west of THE SURRACH, known for its large horned goats (Pop c. 4,000).

TAKIYAH: (B. ? – D. 2693 RM) Pol. DESPOSYNI and first ruler of the KORACHANI ROYALTY, who rose to power in 2517 RM following THE CONSULITE'S counsel with THE DREAMER in the wake of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR'S disappearance in 2503 RM. His rule was to begin close to 500-years of Desposyni royalty, in a period that would later become known as the RULE OF THE DESPOSYNI.

TAKRAJA: Set. Small city in the c of TEMUJA, situated along the course of the river AIHANE, forming part of the GÂTHAN ROAD (Pop. c. 12,800).

TAKRE: Rvr. Major river in CENTRAL LLACHATUL, forming a border between the east of SAUA and the west of MALAN. It flows for 1,220—miles from sources in the MEMNIDS, MERA and KARPAROS Mountains before emptying into the BAY OF GITHKA. It is one of the main drainage basins in SAUA.

TAKUH: Pol. Set. Capital city of MHAROKK since its fall to SARASTRO in 3728 RM, remaining so following its later return to being a KORACHANI vassal in 3930 RM.

Its location along the western bank of the river SHIBBOLETH^(3,) means that it sees trade from deep in SAMMAEA, though conflict with SARASTRO since the nations' later capitulation to Korachan has seen the strait of Shibboleth at the mouth of the river become a target to Sarastroan privateers.

The city formed the centre of the MHAROKKIN CAMPAIGN – a part of the greater WAR OF SUNDERING that saw LIDEAN forces (under the command of dissident Sarastroan generals known as SARAKASHARS) moving across the Shibboleth into Mharokk. It was taken by Lidean forces on the 16th of ALGOLEN 3705 RM, remaining under Sarastroan control until the rest of Mharokk fell to Sarastro in 3728 RM.

The surrounding region remains heavily patrolled and fortified to this day (it is home to one of the four fabled 150-ton cannons known as the FOUR ANGELS), ensuring that merchant caravans travelling along the RED ROUTE can reach the city intact. The city also operates busy ferries that cross the Shibboleth to LIDEA (Pop. c. 1,152,000).

TAKUH, BATTLE FOR: His. War. Major battle that took place around the city of TAKUH in the south east of MHAROKK, along the western bank of the river SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾, between the 17th – 28th ALGOLEN 3705 RM within the larger MHAROKKIN CAMPAIGN, which was itself a part of the WAR OF SUNDERING.

Following months of escalating conflicts within the Mharokkin Campaign, an invasion fleet from LIDEA crossed the Shibboleth on the $17^{\rm th}$, leading to over a week of intense fighting around the metropolis, which suffered under heavy bombardments and repeated assaults, falling finally to allied dissident forces on the $26^{\rm th}$. The next two days were characterised by desperate fighting, with allied imperial forces trying desperately to take back the city, but ultimately failing, and losing the city of KENEARTH on the $28^{\rm th}$.

The victory at Takuh allowed Sarastroan forces to form a beachhead, and more troops poured into Mharokk as a result, and they were able to march as far west as DASSK, which they took on the 5th CYKRANALEN though, they were ultimately pushed back. The later BATTLE OF NATJAL saw SARASTROAN forces defeated and ultimately pushed back east.

TAKWIN: Med. Alc. Tec. Sup. A form of early FIFTH AGE ALCHEMY that was practiced in various areas in NORTHERN SAMMAEA, possibly inspired by the art of KLADOS that is practiced today in KHALHAT. It was most common in MHAROKK, though has since been supplanted by more modern forms of CLONING and FLESHWRIGHTING.

TAL: (D. 3312 RM) Sup. Pol. Ancient KHULLAN sorcerer-lord who in c. 2830 RM was persecuted by the KHULLAN INQUISITION alongside the rest of his kin. He fled east, settling in the IALO ABGAN region, which at the time was largely empty following decades of a vacuum left by the collapse of the KORACHANI colony of INDERACHANI. There he built the tower of TAL ZHAAN over a KORACHANI ruin, as a palace where he could continue his research. Over the ensuing years he was able to rally the local populace to his cause, adding to his tower and establishing a trading post at its foot, where he could buy and sell alchemical items.

In 2875 RM he learnt of the Idol of EZROKAHAELL through traders. Intrigued, he visited the temple-city of DERAUC, where he was denied access to the idol, which by law could only be worshipped by locals. Enraged, he vowed that he would possess the idol. Two years later he declared war on the city and following a gruelling 2-year siege, finally succeeded in defeating the city's inhabitants, claiming the idol as his own. Late in 2891 RM, he had the idol taken to Tal Zhaan, where he encouraged its widespread worship, and founded an order of monks and missionaries whose purpose was to spread the word of the idol and the RELIGION that revolved around it, while aggrandising his own name and accomplishments.

He was successful in his endeavour, and over the coming decades was able to attract more people to his burgeoning city, with new satellite settlements appearing around it. In c. 3220 RM he established a permanent army and government and annexed territories from neighbouring Khull and TEMPLAR STATES, formalising the state of Tal Zhaan, which remains to this day.

Little is known of his later life, as he retreated into obscurity within his great tower, which by the date of his formal declaration of disappearance in 3312 RM, had grown to encompass surrounding fortifications and expansive labyrinthine catacombs and tunnels, thought by some to cover the entirety of the larger city area. He was unnaturally-long-lived, adding further fuel to unfounded speculation regarding his death, which persists to this day. He left in his wake a well-ordered land with a rigid hierarchical government at the head of which are the SORCERERS — alchemist-governors who now rule Tal Zhaan.

TAL ZHAAN: 1. Dem. 'Zhaani'. Ntn. Small independent landlocked state in the north west of SAMMAEA, nestled between KHULL in the west and the TEMPLAR STATES in the east. It is of a dry temperate climate, with long hot summers and mild winters.

It was formally declared an independent entity by the Sorcerer-lord TAL in c. 3220 RM following the annexation of surrounding territories and the establishment of true borders and the raising of a permanent army in the political vacuum that had been left in the region following the collapse of the failed Korachani colony of INDERACHAN centuries earlier.

It remains an independent region today thanks to the rule of its SORCERERS, and the ruler of the city of Tal Zhaan^(2,) is the ruler of the entire region by default.

The region is famed for being the home of the ancient soulstone idol of EZROKAHAELL, which was moved there in 2891 RM following a short war with its home city of DERAUC. It is the only recognised religion in Tal Zhaan today, and is also worshipped in smaller numbers in the Templar States and parts of eastern Khull. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

- 2. Set. Primary city and capital of the above state^(1.), in the north of SAMMAEA. The city became prominent following the rediscovery of the ancient idol of EZROKAHAELL, which led to a religious revolution in the region. The city predates the appearance of the eponymous state and is thought to date back to c. 2830 RM, when it was founded as a solitary tower by a rogue sorcerer-lord from KHULL (Pop. c. 250,000).
- TALAGLIA: Set. Major coastal city in the far north of CHAUTULA, along a narrow isthmus in a long peninsula protruding north into the SEA OF PANOTIA. It is famed for its canal that bisects the isthmus, granting access to the larger SEA OF SIPARIA (Pop. c. 462,000).
- TALAKAIR: Sec. Small city in the south east of ESHIR⁽²⁾, relatively close to the border with the VESPERTINE LEAGUE. It is known for its advanced manufactory, though little is known about what it produces, with even locals being left in the dark as to its primary purpose (Pop. c. 13,000).
- TALAL: Geo. Mountains in the south west of LLACHATUL, dominating the north of ELAT and forming part of the border with AYAD.
- TALAMU: Set. Fortified settlement in the c east of the BARRIER LANDS (Pop. c. 6,000).
- TALANESS: Set. Small city in the east of the tribe of INDAAR, in the east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 13,000).
- TALANTAHUT: also 'the Shunned One'. f. Myt. His. In the mythology and ancient history of ELYDEN, fourth of the Two-and-Twenty DEMIURGES, whose children were the VALTHAS.

She was a major Demiurge in the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN, whose actions were instrumental in the history of the Demiurges and their eventual fall into obscurity. She, alongside ARIMASPI, opposed the construction of the BRIDGE OF ETERNITIES.

She is worshipped in corrupted form by the CYNOTHROPI of ANUBIA, and also forms an important part of the beliefs of the ORDER OF THE FLAMING ROSE.

Her known SCIONS are: AIU, DALAK HOTHABBIR, and PATHEA. See Vol IV: the Two-and-Twenty Demiurges.

- TALASOK: Set. Small coastal city in the east of NOAVATUR, known for its drydocks, which specialise in breaking apart and scrapping old transport ships (Pop. c. 20,000).
- TALASOMED: Fau. form of gigantic octopus common in the tropical waters of the east of LLACHATUL. Classification and Taxonomy of Life.
- TALATT: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the south east of the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT. The fort is the base for the western armies of Sepahaunat and guards its western border from foreign attentions.
- TALEGATH: Geo. Expansive karst massif in the c of SERROK. It is labyrinthine and covered in dense vegetation, making it very difficult to navigate. Indeed, it remains largely unexplored to this day. The jungle of UNGORORO dominates its northern border, making exploration of this region even more difficult for mortals.
- TALENTARI: Geo. Mountain-range in the west of SAMMAEA, to the south of the more impressive and expansive SANTOREAN Mountain. Its eastern face is renowned for its rolling red hills and water-carved canyons, reaching slowly east and south.
- TALGENN: Myt. His. In the mythology of northern KHARKHARADONTIS, a famed DIALLACH.
- TALL: Set. Settlement in the c of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of EDICULE^(1.). It was once a grand harbour, but the retreat of the SEA OF EDALA, as well as the movements of the river EDICA north, have left it diminished over the past centuries. It is now known for its saltpans, and it sells salt cultivated to merchants travelling along the GREAT ROAD trade-route (Pop. c. 2,000).

- TALIS: Set. Settlement in the far south of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of NICADA(1.). The settlement appeared following the increased effects of the diminishing of the SEA OF URAN evidenced around 3800 3900 RM, as is largely populated by the descendants of those who fled newlylandlocked coastal towns abandoned in that time. It has since become a wealthy trade settlement (Pop. c. 30,000).
- TALISKAFAR: Set. Coastal settlement in the east of NOAVATUR. It is a major producer of reeds (Pop. c. 6,000).
- TALITH: Rui. Abandoned city in c south west of AQUARIIA, 50-miles from the present coast. It was once a coastal city, though became landlocked following the retreat of the SEA OF LIAKARRA.
- TALLA: Set. Settlement in the south of the BARRIER LANDS, in the west of the HOUSHNAM region. It is a major producer of rubies and is surrounded by small mines (Pop. c. 6,000).
- TALLAHAN: Geo. For. Vast region of sparse woodlands in the north east of MALAN, crossing the south east of the HENDECARCHY of HATON into the north of DERAEIA and the south west of NHORA. It is home to an ancient nomadic people who travel in large caravans hauled by TALLATHERES. Each caravan is a house to an extended family that when still can expand to comfortably accommodate all members of the family. It is believed that these nomads, known as the SHUIH, are descendants of unions between ancient SEITHIN and HUMANS.
- TALLATHERE: Fau. Large therops native to the region of TALLAHAN in MALAN. They are characterised by their tough hides and backs that slope from large powerful shoulders to small hind legs. Their forelimbs move on their knuckles, and they have powerful necks that support squarish heads that are famed for their large bony protuberances. They are difficult to tame but the SHUIHAR nomads domesticated a small number of the animals centuries ago, which now form an integral part of their nomadic lifestyles. They are related to nandi bears though are larger, potentially able to carry mortals. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.
- TALLAR: Com. Set. Major mercantile city in the north east of the HENDECARCHY of CHLORIS, in the south east of MALAN. It is a major stop along the GREAT ROAD trade-route and is known for its trade yards and warehouses (Pop. c. 120,200).
- TALLAS: 1. Myt. Lan. The sun in CUTHI mythology and language.
- 2. m. Myt. His. Per. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, Tallas was a SCION of the DEMIURGE NERGAAL. He was evil and took pleasure in inflicting PLAGUES upon mortals. He was eventually cast down by the mortal champion AHEFAK.

Though it is undeniable that the two are etymologically linked, it is unknown how the sun in Cuthi myth took on the name of Tallas. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

- TALLAS, TEMPLE OF: Rui. Ruined ancient temple in the RAOGON forest in the c east of CUTH. It is named after the scion TALLAS⁽²⁾ and was the resting place of the CANTICLE OF WORMS.
- TALLUH: 1. Lak. Lake In the c of AQUARIIA, along the course of the river ISARRA.
 - 2. Rvr. Wetlands surrounding the above lake in the c. of AQUARIIA.
 - 3. Set. Settlement in the c of AQUARIIA, along the course of the river ISARRA. It is known for its cultivation of rice (Pop. c. 8,000).
- TALMESH: also 'Bearer of Dawn'. m. Myt. His. Per. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, a SCION and son of the DEMIURGE AVRAHAM and ALLAISHADA. The MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN depicts him as a roguish figure who ultimately becomes honourable and a champion of MORTALKIND.

He and the Demiurge ASHTERATH clashed po many occasions, and the two eventually became bitter rivals. Talmesh is said to have been the only person to infiltrate the great fortress HINDESSEL, where he wounded Ashterath after fighting his minions for a day and a night, taking the fabled DAWN CROWN as his prize. In later passages of the Mythologia he is much changed and is depicted as a radiant figure who brought knowledge of agriculture and craftsmanship to various mortals. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

TALONUH: Set. City in the c of EZASUH(2.) (Pop. c. 29,000).

TALOS: Mil. Rnk. Elite unit in the PELASGOSI military. They are VATBORN, like STEEL LEGIONNAIRES, though are more akin to the SICTHAINEN TECHNA. They stand around 7-feet tall and are the most expensive and elite units in the Pelasgosi army, and are often mistakenly compared with golems^(L).

TALOU: Set. Settlement in the far north east of PARAIYA, along the border with LIDEA, along the banks of the river SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾. Its main industry is the cultivation of cotton (Pop. c. 8,000).

TALTRA: Set. Small city in the c north east of JURRAS^(2.) in the south eastern hills of the BERRAN Mountains (Pop. c. 12,000).

TALUS: 1. Geo. Scree-filled hills in the west of THE SURRACH, forming the western-most part of the THISATHON Mountains.

2. Mil. Str. Fortress in the far north east of RHAMIA, guarding the GREY ROAD north into the OLD FOREST.

TALV: Set. Settlement in the c of SURUTUR. It is a centre of mastodon breeding, many of which are used in industries in the area, and in the capital in BUTO (Pop. c. 8,000).

TAMAAS: Set. Large city in the far south of LANTUA, in the south east of WESTERN MENISCEA. It is known for its hunting grounds where nobility from miles around spend their days chasing game (Pop. c. 75,000).

TAMAH: 1. Lak. Lake in the east of AZAZEM, along the path of the river UGONEM.

2. Mil. Str. Fort in western AZAZEM guarding the region of ATROPHY, which is a major producer of dross. Its forces protect the south western routes of the region.

TAMAM SHUD: Law. Str. Expansive prison in the c of VENTHIR. Unlike prisons in KORACHAN, where people are put to work, in Venthir prisons are based on pure apathy, with lack of activity forced upon prisoners to make their stays (which are commonly until death) as tedious and boring as possible. Recordings of litanies and mantras proclaiming the power and brilliance of QUEEN HETEPHERES play all day and night, slowly brainwashing inmates, further adding to the tedium.

TAMANNAN: Set. City in the south west of METHUMN. It was the founding city of the order of VODARCHS in c. 3050 RM (Pop. c. 40,000).

TAMANTI: Rvr. River in the AMMASHI^(1.) peninsula in the south west of SAMMAEA. It flows south west through the CAMOTHUR Basin for 560-miles from sources in the URARAGHI and the MAO SAGHI Mountains. It serves as a border between KEPHUAAN in the north and AMMESH in the south, and the fork where the river VERTANDI meets it is home to the mercantile city of EHBREDA, which is shared between the aforementioned pations

TAMAR: 1. Rr. Main river and source of water to many cities in the eponymous nation. The river flows south east from the KYTHI Mountains emptying in the HARMACHIS.

2. Dem. 'Tamaran'. Ntn. Nation located in the south east of c LLACHATUL, overlooking the DARK SEA. Tamar is a land of idyllic climate and terrain, making it perfect for agriculture, and it is famed for the quality of its food produce, including vegetables, fruit, meat and alcohols, which find their way on dinner-tables across Llachatul and SAMMAEA.

Tamar emerged from the ruin of the tyranny of THAMAR, which had been ruled for centuries by a ruthless caste of FIRMAMENTISTS called CAZHANS who rose to power in 843 RM after discovering ancient Firmamental texts in around 750 RM. They ruled until 1319 RM, when the last of the Cazhans was killed after decades of strife. The decades following their overthrowing saw the noble house ELYRIA, their ancient ties to the KORACHANI EMPIRE long-forgotten, grow in prominence, becoming its rulers in 1354 RM, with the region taking on the name of Tamar. The Elyrian Dynasty saw Tamar become an economic power, exploiting its resources to fuel the growing industries of powers in the west. Tamar became a political and economic ally to many major nations in the late 3rd and early 4th millennia RM, with wealth flowing towards it even as its resources began to wane. Instead, it returned to its ancient traditions of agriculture, becoming a major supplier of food to Korachan.

Tamar grew confident in this time, taking the isle of Berek from THE HARÉSHK in 3563 RM, though it was later returned in 3741 RM as part of new trade and defence agreements, though the Haréshk failed to honour these when SARASTRO attacked Tamar in 3754 RM, leading to their alliance breaking down.

Tamar was eventually taken by Sarastro in 3760 RM, and it remains a vassal to this day, with the Elyrian Dynasty ruling as regents in the name of SATHEP THE RISEN, though many believe that they retain affiliations with the Korachani empire, secretly feeding it Sarastroan secrets.

The people of Tamar are hardy and of dark olive skin, inherited from the ancient GOETHAN⁽²⁾ people from whom they are descended, and make fierce soldiers, hard-workers and stubborn politicians, whose characters are renowned across the Dark Sea. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

TAMARA: Ser. City and capital of TAMAR. The city's roots can be traced to at least -800 RM, possibly longer, and it is one of the longest permanently-settled cities in ELYDEN, with necropolises and ancient rock-cut tombs from varying periods of history now scattered throughout its districts, many of which are now converted to other more mundane uses, though it is not uncommon for workers digging wells and cisterns to break into previously-forgotten tombs.

Today it is a metropolitan hub and forms a vital link along the \underline{GREAT} \underline{ROAD} , with trade shipped up and down the river $\underline{MESISA}^{(1.)}$ (Pop. c. 1,430,800).

TAMARACHIS: Geo. Vast plains dominating the nation of TAMAR, stretching from its south western coast to its eastern reaches for almost 400-miles.

TAMARAN: 1. Lan. Main language spoken in TAMAR⁽²⁾ prior to its subjugation by SARASTRO. Today the official language of Tamar is SARASTROAN, which is spoken in all official capacities, though Tamaran is still spoken at street-level, including markets, and most common vocations. See Vol II: Languages.

2. Set. Small city in the c of $\underline{MHAROKK}$. The city is the centre of the cult of $\underline{UMBRAPHILIA}$ that's prevalent in the region and was its birthplace in c. 3824 RM (Pop. c. 20,000).

TAMARAT: Set. Fortified settlement in the north east of TZALLRACH, along the course of the river SEYADI (Pop. c. 10,000).

TAMAR ILLIDU: 1. Geo. large pass in the south east of N'RAKH, dividing the STERHBEL and AGRABU Mountains. The pass is the only reliable passage between the plains of ARAAHT in the south east of N'rakh and the nation proper. The lands east of the pass become a contested region during a lengthy war between N'rakh and ARKOSIA after an expedition in 995 RM revealed the region to HUMANS, though by c. 1100 RM the humans were pushed east, the AANTHA territories following them.

2. Int. Soc. AANTH birthing pits in N'RAKH, beneath the pass of the same name. The region is riddled with deep labyrinthine caverns, each guarded by an aanth gossamer fort. The passages converge in a large pit known as MAALKAT in which lives their kinds' eponymous birthing goddess Maalkat.

TAMARIS: Set. Settlement in the c south of JURRAS^(2.), in the south of the INNORDOS Mountains (Pop. c. 6,500).

TAMASSA: 1. Set. Fortified city in the south west of METHUMN. It is a major centre of the AUREATE FELLOWSHIP, and SOLAR HIEROPHANTS come here to study and teach, spreading knowledge amongst their peers (Pop. c. 28,000).

2. Rui. Ruined city in the $\underline{ELLSALEN}^{(3)}$ basin. It was abandoned following the waning of the Ellsalen $Sea^{(1)}$, which disappeared altogether by c. 3400 RM

TAMESIS: Set. Following the dissolution of the AMNATHI KINGDOMS in 589 RM, Tamesis would eventually rise alongside NICATH, and ENESH into the confederacy and, later, nation of NÁRTHEL. Tamesis grew into a powerful coastal city, controlling fishing and much trade along the eastern coast of the SHADOW SEA, though overfishing and pollution (largely from the profusion of manufactories appearing in the PROPONTIS) would reduce the influence of the city. Tamesis was the first Nártheli city to fall to the armies of KORACHAN, in 83 RM and it became one of the most imperialised of Nártheli cities.

Though the city proper finds itself about a mile from the coast, a port has been built allowing it to trade west with PELASGOS (Pop. c. 37,000).

TAMIGINIA: Int. Str. Metal pillar in the c of GNOTH. Little of the object's history is known to outsiders, though it is understood to be an ancient structure that is without corrosion or impurity. Some GIGANRI scholars attribute it to the DEMIURGE URAKABARAMEEL.

TAMING OF THE SPIRIT: Int. Mor. Sup. Myr. His. One of many tragedies surrounding the MORTAL peoples of ELYDEN. For many millennia following the dawn of the mortal peoples, the cycle of life and death amongst mortals was well established – the death of any mortal saw a solid mass known as a SOULSTONE slowly grow in the decomposing vessel.

In the middle of the SECOND AGE this changed. THE SHAPER intrinsically altered the nature of mortal life, granting every mortal a SPIRIT (1.) that upon death left the mortal vessel, eventually to become an OTHERWORLDER.

A large part of IFIRMIAN culture revolved around soulstones, and this fundamentally change to their beings was seen as the end of their culture.

Desperate, they undertook a major ritual, gathering hundreds of SHAPERS who sacrificed themselves in a CHOIR the likes of which had never been attempted. Through it they were able to tame these new spirits, transmogrifying them back into physical matter – small soulstones embedded in their chests.

The main difference occurred upon death. Where before the soulstone would grow within their rotting body, devoid of personality or life, now it contained the totality of their consciousness, giving life and essence to the expired body. Though to all intents and purposes the body was dead (with cessation of the circulatory and nervous systems, and no need for food, or rest), all effects of death and decay were altogether nullified through the influence of the soulstone.

The stone continued to grow within the chest, sometimes breaking the surface of the skin, becoming visible in the solar plexus. In this manner the individual could remain 'alive' for centuries, if not millennia after death, earning the ifirmians the nickname IMMORTALS that persists to this day, though few alive know the story behind it.

The pearl, despite its influence on the body, was unable to heal grievous wounds, and could be damaged, leading to sudden death of the individual. Over time though, the bodies of these undead ifirmians would eventually become unusable, leading to a slow fading of the self and consequent catatonia. Following this, decay speed up until, within a few years, the body withered and decayed like any mortal body, leaving a pearl in the chest cavity.

Perhaps as many as three quarters of those ifirmians alive during the time of the ritual were affected by it, and of those only half gained its full effects, with the others either living for less time or with the link between stone and body bearing some hindrance. Almost all of those ifirmians born after the ritual were subject to its effects with only very few each generation unaffected by it, marking them out as oddities.

The Taming of the Spirit did have other effects, including difficulty in conceiving and a much-prolonged gestation, which ultimately led to their downfall. Also, living ifirmians became ravenous, requiring calorie intakes roughly four times that of the average HUMAN, with this hunger abating upon death. Despite this, they required very little sleep, surviving on no more than a few hours every day, during which they were rendered effectively catatonic until wakefulness claimed them, trait that continued after the expiry of their mortal bodies. They also stopped dreaming, and lost the ability to become ONEIROMANCERS, perhaps their most defining trait to this day. Most ifirmians whose mortal bodies have expired bear their pearls proudly, though others, particularly those in human lands, hide them out of fear of fear or judgement.

 $\underline{TAMIRA}\!:$ Rvr. River in the c of $\underline{TAMAR}\!,$ and child of the river $\underline{TAMAR}\!.$

TAMMAKIR: 1. Geo. Dry grasslands in the c west of METHUMN that appeared with the waning of the BAY OF LRITHA in the 4th millennium RM. It is named after a major city^(2.) that was abandoned following the sea' retreat.

2. Rui. Ruined city in the west of METHUMN that was abandoned in the 4^{th} millennium RM with the waning of the BAY OF LRITHA crippled its economy, which until then had been based around shipbuilding, repairing, and breaking. The rusted hulls of many ships lie on their sides outside the uninhabited ruin.

TAMMAN: Set. Small city in the south west of the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT. Its primary industry is copper mining (Pop. c. 20,000).

TAMMANA: Set. City in the south west of AMMESH in the south west of SAMMAEA along the north western shore of lake COL. It was once the capital of the state of AMMASH⁽³⁾, and was stormed 2550 RM, leading to the collapse of Ammash soon after. It waned after this, its many lavish government buildings falling into ruin, many of which were plundered for newer construction projects. Though it is now only a shadow of its previous self, it remains today, an important city and centre of agriculture in Ammesh, with terraced fields surrounding the city, peppered with old ruins and forgotten monuments (Pop. c. 47,000).

TAMMAPAR: Set. Settlement in the c north of PHYRR in the region known as the DISHKAR MAZE (Pop. c. 8,000).

TAMMARA: Set. Coastal settlement in the c south west of HABOT, overlooking the far north west of the BAY OF ESSIA, just east of the mouth of the river MEDDERANDI. It is a major agricultural centre (Pop. c. 7,000).

TAMMASA: Set. Small coastal city in the south east of KEPHUAAN, overlooking the BAY OF COMMARA^(1.) (Pop. c. 16, 000).

TAMMASUN: Ind. Set. Settlement in the south east of TEMUJA. Its main industry is the quarrying of quartz crystal, which is considered to be amongst the finest and abundant on LLACHATUL, and which finds its way across the INNER SEA and DARK SEA REGIONS as object d'art (Pop. c. 8.500).

TAMMEN: Set. Settlement in the c N of the BARREN LANDS (Pop. c. 7,000).

TAMMLET: Set. Coastal settlement in the south of KEPHUAAN, overlooking the BAY OF LEPHAINA. Its main industry is fishing (Pop. c. 7.200).

TAMRANT: Set. Settlement in the region of HAPANTHA in the c east of THE SURRACH (Pop. c. 8,000).

TAMREF: Pol. Set. Capital city of DHA NAR, situated along the south western coast of the nation. It is the south eastern-most stop along the BROKERS' ROAD trade route and its terminus. The loot of pirates and privateers are sold here before making their way north along the trade route (Pop. c. 100,000).

TAMSRAH: Dem. 'Tamsrahi'. For. Thickly wooded region in the south west of the OLD FOREST.

TAMURA: Set. Coastal city in the north east of the PARTHISAN colony of EZHIRAYA^(2.), in the east of MENISCEA (Pop. c. 27,500).

TAMURATH: Geo. 1. 80-mile-long Escarpment in the north of SAMMAEA, along the border between NÁRTHEL and SALOROC.

2. pass roughly in the middle of the above escarpment that links the $\underline{NARTHEL}$ city of \underline{TRETA} and the $\underline{SALOROCAN}$ city of \underline{MYTDAR} in a short trade-route.

TAMUZ ION: Rui. Veh. Sunken ship in the UMHABBHI Reef in the c of the MAIDEN ISLES, in the BATHASHAL OCEAN.

TANA: Ast. Only known moon of the PLANET LIVIAD. See Vol II: Planets and Satellites.

TANADOU: Set. City in the south of PARAIYA, surrounded by large tracts of arable farmlands (Pop. c. 29,000).

TANAMSARAT: 1. Geo. Expansive shallow canyon system in the south west of ETUA that is believed to have been a large river system as recently as the late FOURTH AGE. The ruins of various small settlements dot its borders, echoing a once-thriving culture that is believed to have ended before the FADING of the Fourth Age.

2. Set. Settlement in the south east of Etua, overlooking the above canyon^(1.). Little is known of the city but it is believed to be a centre to the priesthood of the CULT OF THE GIBBERING WORM (Pop. unknown).

TANARET: Geo. Geometric basaltic formation dominating the coast of the far north west of the VESPERTINE LEAGUE between the cities of VERMIS and FOSSAL. It was once the site of an ancient pirate fortress though no trace remains of it today.

TANASS: Set. City in the SIX CITIES region in the west of THE SURRACH in the north west of SAMMAEA. It is fed by the river APINE. Founded by ATRAMENTISTS and FIRMAMENTISTS exiled in ancient AHINA, Tanass continues the traditions of its founders, promoting their use as a means of bettering life. Perhaps fittingly, given its obsession with otherworldly forces, it is ruled by an elective magocracy, though the last elected official seized power 7-years ago, revealing himself to be an otherworlder. Since then, the region has become antagonistic and insular (Pop. c. 32,500 [c. 18,000 excluding slaves]).

TANAT: Rui. Ruined manufactory about 55-miles south west of DEKANA in the c north of KARAKHAS. The manufactory was once a major iron refinery, but it was destroyed during an uprising in 3704 RM, during events that culminated in the short-lived independence of the nation the next year, before it was reclaimed by SARASTRO in 3707 RM.

The manufactory is now a ruin, and has been a haven to bandits and other lawless groups since then, with some even making use of its machinery to create weapons and equipment over the years.

TANAX: Geo. Massive cave-system in the north of ATARAXIA, to the south of the HARAHI RIDGE in the BLACK MOUNTAINS. The caverns are gigantic, filled with many varieties of endemic flora and fauna.

TANDENDER: Rui. Ruin in the c of VIRAHAN. Once the capital of the UNITED KINGDOMS OF EBUSHEN. When the Kingdoms were subjugated by King OSHORN I of AHRISHEN in 2612 RM the capital was sacked, and was later abandoned, allowed to fall into ruin. Few alive in Virahan today know the history of the region.

TANERA: Set. City in the c of LYRIDIA DHAI, in the territory of TERARA. The city is known for its gangs, which have recently been clashing over control of a major cemetery (Pop. c. 17,500).

TANGLELEAF: Flo. Poi. Hardy plant found in arid-temperate regions throughout ELYDEN, most notably VÂRR, northern PELASGOS, LYRIDIA, NÁRTHEL, SARASTRO and VENTHIR. Very long-lived, the plant is characterised by its low height and sprawled growth that is dominated by two often frayed and tangled leaves and the fleshy interior and edible taproot. Though difficult to cultivate due to its slow growing process, the plants' leaves provide a fibre suitable for weaving coarse textiles and the taproot is edible, though difficult to extract. Its fruit – berries that grows around its fleshy core – are mildly poisonous. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

TANGLEWEED: Geo. Area in the north east of VIRAHAN and western BAATAN around southern foothills of the DUIÁRHI, composed of a dense thicket of briars, stretching perhaps a hundred and 50-miles long and a dozen deep. At its densest, the Tangleweed is an impenetrable mass of DRAGONSHEDGE, reaching in places a hundred feet high, where it has wrapped itself around ruined towers holding the crumbling structures together. At its sparsest its fruit are harvested by the AHRISHENI.

TANIA: Sea. Bay off the eastern coast of EASTERN LARISH. Its waters form part of the larger SEA OF LYNNAE.

TANID: Set. Settlement in the c of KORACHAN, in the region of RUTHUNODA. It is a major producer of livestock and poultry, mostly for consumption in the larger cities around the peninsula (Pop. c. 8.200).

TANIH: Set. Settlement in the c south of AQUARIIA, abandoned in 2756 RM following the retreat of the SEA OF TABERNACEA.

TANITH: Set. City in the c east of TETHYSIA. It is known as a crossroad city, and has become a hub of trade over the past centuries, with many markets and caravanserais appearing to cater to the merchant caravans that pass through it. It has come to link the north, south, west and east of Tethysia and is known for its melt of Tethysian cultures and cuisines (Pop. c. 44,000).

TANITH OF THE TWOWORLDS: Oth. A near-timeless HALFBLOOD who wanders the saltlands of NÁRTHEL and SARASTRO, who is known to make a pilgrimage to the AISLE OF STIGHO every nine years. His first documented appearance was in c. 2800 RM, and his pilgrimages have remained relatively consistent since then, missing few years.

His last such endeavour attracted a cadre of historiographers and annalists in his wake, all eager to learn more of the place's history. Their postulations indicate that the place is a temple, the halfblood a relic of a now-extinct priestly caste responsible for it, though the halfblood refused to offer any insight into the endeavour.

TANNUS: 1. Lak. Lake in the c north east of TISARA, forming a part of the course of the river ACIONNA. The farthest part of the lake downstream leads to the Tannus⁽²⁾ waterfall.

2. Rvr. (1,100-ft.) waterfall in the c north east of TISARA, along the course of the river ACIONNA the fall is near vertical and TANOSH: Rvr. River in the west of IO, flowing west for 140-miles from sources in the south of the GHOLA Mountains before emptying into the GULF OF DAARKEN.

TANTA: Set. Coastal settlement in the south east of OPHIUSSA (Pop. c. 12,000).

TANTAL: Set. City in the north west of KORACHAN, dating back to c. 905 RM where it began as a caravanserai for travellers and pilgrims en route to AZAZEM. Tantal grew from humble beginnings into a relatively wealthy trade centre where it survived outside the burgeoning administrative buildings of the Empire, an entity almost unto its own. In 1235 RM it was attacked by dissidents in league with oghurs, where it was plundered before Korachan could mount an adequate defence. It was greatly reduced in size and strength, though continued to be visited by daring caravans.

In c. 1560 RM large deposits of an extremely tough metal (christened TANTALUM^(1.)) were unearthed there, precipitating a metal-rush that saw the city reborn. It had become a major industrial centre by the end of 2000 RM, and it was famed for its mines and metal foundries.

By c. 2600 RM its mines began to yield smaller bounties, and it saw itself transformed into a mercantile hub once more, linking ALMAGEST, Azazem, LAASKHA and SKAROS in the west, with PELASGOS and Korachan in the east via the RED ROUTE, though as true sea-routes were established, making trade quicker, it lost its foothold in the west and fell back to its industrial identity, with dozens of foundries and manufactories dominating its skyline and day-to-day life there. Today, it still forms a vital link in the Red Route, with its industry supporting the columns of AMBULANTS that crawl into its territories (Pop. c. 158,000).

TANTALAN: His. Lan. Now-extinct language spoken by the late FOURTH
AGE people of TENTAEL. The present-day language of TARAHAN is descended from it. See Vol II: Languages.

TANTALUM: 1. Ele. Dense metal used to make tough alloys.

2. Set. Originally known as Tentalet, Tantalum was the capital city of Taraha from 423 – 1932 RM, whereupon the ruling pentarchy moved the capital to UTRERIA due to the encroaching HOGHSOTHAMON region and the closeness of the latter to Parthis. A disastrous earthquake that crippled most of the east of Taraha in 2002 RM forced the capital to be moved back to Tantalum, which was renowned for its centuries-old rigid hierarchal caste structure, solid power-base and harsh laws. Those traits, coupled with its central position and trade-holdings made it easy candidate for capital.

Tantalum became the centre of the TARAHID pentarchy where representatives from other city-states would convene. The city is known for the large siphon engines outside its south western walls, which toil to prevent the corrupted region of Hoghsothamon from encroaching further (Pop. c. 452,000).

TANTALUSS: Set. Settlement in the c west of THE SURRACH. It is known for its distilleries, where the most famed, ALABANDA, (triple-distilled goat's milk) is made (Pop. c. 10,000).

TANTATHAN: Flo. One of many ancient gigantic tree stumps, situated in the south east of CISNERIA. The stump has a circumference of some 300-ft. and once formed part of an ancient forest that is thought to have been cut down by ancient industries in the FOURTH AGE.

Early in the FIFTH AGE the stump was hollowed out, and dwellings were built within it, forming the basis of a short-lived culture that died out by around 400 RM. The culture left no written records so little is known of it but is thought to have ranged from the north of present-day ATARAXIA into ALAM BETHYL and is known amongst KORACHANI historians only as the TREE-DWELLERS.

TANTH: Rui. TARTAKHID ruin a few miles south of KARAKOR, across the BAY OF BITAN. Once a thriving port the region fell following the retreat of ELYDEN'S Seas. And remains now as a ruin.

TANTHA: Set. Settlement in the c of the emirate of OTHOTEL^(1.), in the west of LIMOTH^(1.). It is the sole major remaining copper mine in Limoth and is a remnant of the ancient industrial centre of ULUDIR, which lies abandoned and wasted to the north east (Pop. c. 6,800).

TANTUR: Geo. Island off the south eastern coast of SURUTUR forming a part of the SPICE ISLES.

- TANUIT: Pol. Influential noble family in the HENDECARCHY of AONIA in western MALAN. For many centuries a minor house, with minor generational wealth, and a large palace in a tranquil part of lake SEHUTH, the family grew to prominence with the elevation of then grandson PHARANDEAL to HENDECARCH of Aonia. With this, came never before considered heights of social importance, and in the decades since the appointment, the family has grown in power and influence, with many members having been given positions of authority
- TANZ: Set. Village in the c of AZAZEM, on the southern foothills of the AAORA Mountains. It is known for its ALOARE distilleries. (Pop. c. 1,200).
- TAOGH: Set. Small coastal city in the west of METHUMN, in the HENAKARAIAN peninsula. Its main industry is fishing and agriculture (Pop. c. 14,000).
- TAOGHLIN: Geo. Mountain in the south west of SAMMAEA, in the AMMASHI^(1.) peninsula. It serves as a border between KEPHUAAN in the south west and TAAN AN in the north east.
- TAOUR: Set. Cotton-growing region in the north east of MADOUR, dominating the lower course of the river AVARADA (Pop. c. 4,500).
- TAPH: Set. Small city in the east of the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT, in the delta of the river NEPHILA. Its main industry is the cultivation of rice (Pop. c. 14,500).
- TAPHET: Lan. Myt. Leg. Ntn. Common name in PARTHIS for the legendary buried city that is known in KORACHANI lands as SEPELITIA.
- TAPOB: Set. Settlement in the north of OKKHAM, in the far north west of the Okkhami Mountains. Its main industry is sericulture the production of silk from caterpillars of the giant ORUNA moth that is endemic to the lower mountains of Okkham (Pop. c. 8,000).
- TAPRUL SOCZHDAE: Set. Settlement in the c of OKKHAM (Pop. c. 8,000).
- TAPUR: Set. City in the c south of Parthis, along the confluence of the river ESHMUN and DEDEIMUN. It is a major trade hub and forms a part of both the Parthisan Road and the Red Route (Pop. c. 18,000).
- TAQUELLANE EMPEROR: m. (D. c. 1900 RM) His. Per. Ancient ruler of CEHOPHELA who rose to power in c. 1050 RM, uniting the various peoples of Cehophela under his banner. He was responsible for the construction of the famed HALLOWED CITY in 1272 RM, which remains the administrative capital of Cehophela to this day, and it is rumoured that he was a powerful SHAPER, though if that is the case, he was very careful to keep those powers secret. Many attributed his unnaturally long life to these powers, though others claimed he was a SCIONIC CREATURE.

 His death in c. 1900 RM led to the fragmentation of his empire, which

His death in c. 1900 RM led to the fragmentation of his empire, which collapsed into nine defrauding states that were later reunited by the OTHERWORLDER SAPHAHAKH.

TAR DAGGALLEOCH, the: Sup. Geo. Dre. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED DREAMSCAPE in the south of SAMMAEA in the driest region of SHEDAMMA, that is famed across ELYDEN for its unique spacio-temporal distortion.

It is an aberration in the film between the MATERIA OMNA and the MORTAL PLANE, not identifiable with any other known phenomena such as a LACUNAE, LEYS or otherwise, where times and space are thought to expand from a fixed point in space and time, known to most as the eye. It is impossible for one to venture into it and survive, due it's expanding nature – anyone who finds their way inside it cannot move away from it more quickly than the rate at which it is thought to be expanding itself.

The phenomenon has only been documented by a handful of ONEIROMANCERS and SHAPERS whose talents fall with the rare SPHERES of time and space, through observing negative space and the effects of surrounding lands, for the entire cursed region falls beyond other methods of detection. Indeed, it is only known due to the blind spot it creates to those sensitive to the Materia Omna.

Despite this, the region has been recognised by natives of the lands since at least the early FIFTH AGE, where it appears as a manifestation of the realm of the dead, where bodies were once disposed of.

Little is otherwise known about its origins, or indeed if it's even natural or a product of the DEMIURGES ancient artifice.

- TAR YO- DHAI: also 'the Old Forest'. For. KORACHANI name for THE OLD FOREST, which once covered most of the lands of CENTRAL LLACHATUL. The KORACHANI EMPIRE, in its 4000 years of rule, destroyed most of Tar yo- Dhai, and what remains of it is restricted to the north west in what is now the Old Forest, and the far west in the FOREST KINGDOMS of MALAN.
- TARAB: Set. City in the north of the CITIZENRY OF THALI, and cultural twin to LASAR (Pop. c. 50,000).
- TARACEH: Set. Fortified settlement in the region of DACHRATU in the north east of THE SURRACH. Its main industry is coal-mining, and it is known, alongside its neighbouring states TULLANT and KURDA, for its albinism, which affects 1 in 500 individuals born there. (Pop. c. 50,000).
- TARACHA: Rui. Abandoned port in the c-south east of ARKOS^(1.), in the far east of the SEA OF ERIA and once a major shipyard to imperial-controlled Arkos. Today the rusted ruins of dozens of ships litter the sand and crumbling docks, 4-miles from the present-day coast.
- TARACHAR: Rvr. River In the prefecture of TERECHANT^(1.) in the c of HOLOLACH^(1.), flowing for 270-miles from its source in the south of the TOLIASOR Mountains.
- TARACHUN: Rui. Abandoned SIPHON ENGINES in the far north of CISNERIA, in the DIVUMMA Mountains. The settlement was abandoned in c. 3840 RM after dwindling UMBRA reserves made the upkeep untenable.
- TARAGEA: major river dominating KASPIA, in the north of LLACHATUL.
 It flows for around 1,200-miles from sources in the ILLIGARHI and ERESHKIGAL Mountains, before meeting the coast at the SEA OF BIELOST.
 Its delta is expansive and often freezes in harsh winter months.
- TARAH: Set. City in the c south west of AQUARIIA, along the course of the river ISARRA. It is known for its rice production, and it provides food and provisions to merchants passing through the city while travelling along THE WAY trade-route (Pop. c. 28,000).
- TARAHA: His. Ntn. Predecessor nation to TARAHID, lasting from 423 1932 RM. It was founded by a SCION in the city of TANTALUM, who united various people who inhabited the ruin of a far earlier FIFTH AGE tyranny.

Taraha became a powerful region, defending itself against foreign predations, including the attentions of KORACHAN, PARTHIA, OPHRA, as well as roving OGHURS. A flux in ATRAMENTAL activity brought unease to the region and a change in regime in 1932 RM saw the capital moved to UTRERIA, and the establishment of a PENTARCHY to better rule its disparate states, which by then had become known as the TARAHID STATES. See Vol III: Extinct States.

TARAHAN: Lan. Language spoken in the TARAHID ANNEXES, the INTERURBAN STATES, and TRAKIA. In the former two cases it has been largely supplanted by PARTHISAN, though it is still spoken in an unofficial capacity, largely amongst the lower classes.

Trakian dialects, particularly around the city of HOLOTHAN, include traces of ancient BAKORAN. See Languages of Elyden.

- TARAHID STATES: Dem. 'Tarahan'. Ntn. Successor nation to TARAHA in the north of SAMMAEA, made up of five states, each ruled by a PENTARCH. Appearing in 1932 RM, it lasted until 2417 RM, when the Pentarchy was brought to an end with the assassination of four members by the fifth, who retained absolute power. He ruled for four years as a puppet of KORACHAN, and in 2421 RM he allowed the empire to enter Tarahid as conqueror. See Vol III: Extinct States.
- TARAHID ANNEXES, the: Dem. 'Tarahan'. Ntm. Known informally as TARAHA, the Tarahid Annexes are located at the base of the PARTHISAN PENINSULA in the north of SAMMAEA. They are of a dry temperate climate with rugged hills, sparse yet densely clumped woodlands, and great manufactories that are famed for their baroque HARDSUITS and Atramentally-bred horses.

Originally called the Tarahid Annexes in 3323 RM, the region is steeped in blood, and the very landscape was forged in countless battles over many millennia. The SADIATTHAN plains were the site of battles during the WAR OF SCOURGING and bones can still be found there to this day. After the FADING of the FOURTH AGE, an OTHERWORLDER subjugated disparate people around the LOTHAL hills, and the present-day city of \underline{BADH} is built near the ruins of this 5,000-year-old fortress. The otherworlder's eventual death led to a long period of strife as its scions squabbled over its territories. This period lasted until 423 RM, when one scion was able to unite the disparate lands under the banner of \underline{TARAHA} , based in the city of $\underline{TANTALUM}$.

Taraha became a powerful region, defending itself against foreign predations, including the attentions of KORACHAN, PARTHIA, OPHRA, as well as roving OGHURS. A flux in ATRAMENTAL activity brought unease to the region and a change in regime in 1932 RM saw the capital moved to UTRERIA, and the establishment of a PENTARCHY to better rule its disparate states, which by then had become known as the TARAHID STATES. A devastating earthquake toppled much of the new capital and surrounding regions in 2000 RM forcing the Pentarchy to move back to Tantalum, beginning a period of decline that saw corruption dominate the government and the elections of new Pentarchs.

In 2417 RM the Pentarchy was brought to an end with the assassination of four members by the fifth, who retained absolute power. He ruled for four years as a puppet of Korachan and in 2421 RM allowed the empire to enter Tarahid as conqueror.

This subjugation lasted until 2974 RM, at which point Korachan left the INTERREGES in control of Taraha to manage a populace that had grown unruly. In the tumult leading up to its abandonment, a large portion broke away, founding the so-called INTERURBAN STATES in 2895 RM, while the WHITE LEAGUE became a large presence in the Tarahid States, claiming the city of YULKA as a stronghold.

Following the departure of the Interreges in 3047 TM, it fractured into multiple states, remaining in a state of flux for close to a century. By c. 3112 RM its southern-most expanse had stabilised and spread farther south over the coming decades, eventually becoming known as TRAKIA by 3155 RM.

The remaining states of Trakia stabilised into three states, with their rulers calling themselves Pentarch, after the old rulers of the Tarahid States, which was the cause of some confusion to foreign dignitaries. In 3136 RM the three states were united after years of political marriages and in 3323 RM Annexed by PARTHIS, coming to be known as the Tarahid Annexes

Aside from its skill in cloning and breeding enhanced horses, Taraha is also known for its AKHSI caste of merchants which are drawn from CYCLOCEPHALIC foundlings and which command great respect despite their physical frailties. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

TARAIA: Set. Major coastal city in the north west of SAGITTARIA (Pop. c. 63.000).

TARAKESH: Set. Major city in the c of MHAROKK. It was, prior to the nations' defection to SARASTRO in 3728 RM the capital, though this was later moved to TAKUH, where it remains to this day. Tarakesh dwindled in size and influence after the capital was moved, though it remains a thriving city, known for its libraries and repositories of ancient oral traditions, some of which date back to the FOURTH AGE (Pop. c. 232,000).

TARAKH: Sea. Bay to the north of KARAKHAS, south of the highlands of ENEKH.

TARAKTA: Rvr. River in the north east of ATARAXIA, flowing south from the BLACK MOUNTAINS for 200-miles before emptying in the STRAIT OF SKAROS.

TARAL: Set. Rice-producing settlement in the region of HYRCANIA in the south of PARTHIS. Most of the rice is shipped to other regions of PARTHIS due to the difficulty of land-transportation in the region (Pop. c. 6,500).

TARALT: Set. Small coastal city in the far north of the KAZZARAN peninsula^(1,) in the north of the nation of the same name⁽²⁾. It is a major producer of Thyme and other herbs (Pop. c. 12,800).

TARAMAR: Sea. Relatively shallow sea in the south of the INNER SEA, between PARTHIS and JURRAS^(2.). Its waters are characteristically of a brown tint and quite salty.

TARAMUN: Rvr. River in the c south west of PARTHIS, flowing for 145-miles south west from the southern-face of the SIPYLANA Mountains before meeting with its parent, the river MENTHAS.

TARANAN: Rvr. River in the east of SARASTRO, flowing west from sources in the north west of the KHO INNOR Mountains for 225-miles, before meeting its parent, the river BOSRAN, itself a parent of the river SOLONA.

TARANIS: Geo. Expansive frozen region of coastal fjords in the far north of PERGOST, overlooking the SEA OF POLARIS. It is estimated that this region occupies over 115,000 square-miles, and it is largely uninhabited by mortals.

Its shores are known for their violent tempests and lightning storms, and are locked beneath sea ice for most of the year, being revealed in summer months when the sea ice retreats to the north. Despite this, hundreds of glaciers can be found in the region.

TARANTEH: Rui. Ruined metropolis in the c-south east of SAMMAEA, in the north east of HANNAH. The city is vast, though largely buried beneath the ash of the region, and is attributed to ancient VALTHAS – the children of the DEMIURGE TALANTEHUT, before their decline.

TARANTO: Set. Administrative centre of the north west of PARTHIS (Pop. c. 180,000).

TARARA: Set. Settlement in the c of TAAN AN. It is unremarkable, though serves as a link between the western and eastern PRAEFECTURES, and ha many inns and caravanserais (Pop. c. 7,000).

TARARNDR: Wea. South western wind common in the west of the INNER SEA that blows from NORTHERN SAMMAEA over the DANAEL and CAMARINAL.

TARASI: Set. Settlement in the south west of THUMAL. Its main industry is copper mining (Pop. c. 6,400).

TARASSI: Rvr. River in the north east of ATARAXIA, flowing south from the BLACK MOUNTAINS for 170-miles before emptying in the BAY OF OSRAZ.

TARATI: 1. Dem. 'Taratian'. Ntn. Prosperous state and vassal to VENTHIR situated between the far north of ANUBIA and the north west of Venthir, controlling an area just under 50,000 square-miles. Tarati is dominated by rocky highlands to the north west and the east, with only two major passes leading out – one to the north into Venthir, and another to the south west, leading to the city of ANUBIS. Within its borders Tarati is a rich city-state surrounded by endemic spice plantations and mines, the produce of which are exported at great profit to neighbouring nations.

The city has its roots in the FADING after the FOURTH AGE, when it was settled by survivors of the WAR OF SCOURGING who lived simple pastoral lives until 116 RM, when the dominant VENATHI EMPIRE settled surrounding lands. This culminated in minor skirmishes between the vastly superior Venathi military and the peaceful Taratians, ending in Tarati's occupation by Venathi forces after which its resources were exploited.

Bloody unrest in $\underline{SARASTROAN}$ cities in 157 RM forced the occupying empire to reconsider its Taratian colony, abandoning it in 159 RM after further defeats in $\underline{NAARETH}$ crippled its resources. Following this the Taratian people returned to their pastoral lives and began trading with the $\underline{KORACHANIEMPIRE}$ after its arrival in the area in c. 350 RM.

Tarati continued trading with the Korachani empire over the next centuries following its dominance in the area, though diplomatic manipulation of its ruling classes ensured that by 1100 RM the Imperial PATRICIAN HOUSES of KYDOR, LYCTUS, MELIA and HIMERAN had secretly gained control of the city-state's major commercial and governing bodies. Unrest in 1305 RM saw the four ruling houses (by then united and known as the TETRAN) challenged by a caste of HALFBLOODS calling themselves THE AVATARS who had been steadily growing in influence over the past years. In 1308 RM Korachan abandoned support of the Tetran, who remained there as custodians, fighting against the Avatars over the next centuries. This left Tarati weakened and without tradepartners, forcing the Tetran into an alliance with the Avatars.

By 2210 RM trade was beginning to recover, though the Tetran (by then a decadent dynasty almost a millennium old), like most of the city's population, was filled with halfbloods. All links with the Tetran's original four houses had been lost, though dialogues with the Korachani empire were rekindled in 2913 RM, allowing the empire to use Taratian territories as a base for its troops in return for new trade rights. Descendants of the Avatars opposed this and rose against the Tetran, demolishing its palace in 3013 RM and executing its leaders in a bloody coup that cost the lives of thousands of civilians and militants. The Avatars instated their own ruler; the self-styled AVATAR ENCARR who rebuilt the fallen palace, appointing four halfblood lords to oversee the running of the city in a mockery of the deposed Tetran.

The Avatar Encarr was assassinated in 3421 RM, and Venthir occupied it soon later, remaining as a parent state to this day, though the tradition of four lords remains, and they are still called the Tetran. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

- 2. also 'City of Avatars'. City and capital of Tarati^(1.), and home to its ruling body, known as the TETRAN throughout its various incarnations, since c. 900 RM. It forms a major stop along the Red Route, and links VENTHIR in the north with ANUBIA in the south (Pop. c. 250,000).
- TARATIAN: His. Lan. Now-extinct language once spoken by the people of TARATI. It emerged from ancient FOURTH AGE NATHI, though by c. 2000 RM it had taken on many traits from the KORACHANI following years of close contact with the EMPIRE.

It was outlawed following the VENTHIRI occupation in 3421 RM, out of fear of loyalty to the AVATAR ENCARR, and was quelled over the next decades, until it was declared a dead language in c. 3550 RM. See Vol II: Languages.

- TAREEHA: Set. Major fortified coastal city in the east of ELEKHID, at the mouth of the NUBBIOR. It is now a major producer of food (Pop. c. 250,000).
- TAREFI, PLENIPOTENTIARTY TO THE MINARET: Sup. Pol. Rnk. Fourth PLENIPOTENTIARY of the MINARET OF LIGHT, whose spheres are associate with earth, sand, dryness.
- TAREQ I OF FATIMAR: m. Per. (B. 3766 D. 3859 RM) Pol. His. The first sultan of the TAREQIAN DYNASTY, which is named after him. The current ruler is the Sultana ZARIFIRA II.
- TAREQIAN DYNASTY: see DYNASTY, TAREQIAN.
- TAREQIAN SULTANATE: see DYNASTY, TAREQIAN.
- TAREST: Set. Settlement in the north of ALMAGEST. It is a major producer of musk ox wool, which is highly valued (Pop. c. 6,000).
- TARETAL: Mil. Set. Militant city in the c south of RHAMIA (Pop. c. 36 400)
- TARETHI: Geo. Lowland coastal region in the north east of LIDEA.

 Originally forming the coastal shelf of the INNER SEA, the past few millennia have seen the sea shrinking in size, seeing the Lidean coastline marching slowly north. The region is dry and flat, relatively featureless save the fossils of ancient oddities brought to the surface by the seas' inexorable retreat.
- TAREZEAT: Set. Fortified settlement in the south west of GIBEAH. Its main industry is nickel mining (Pop. unknown).
- TAREZIA: Set. Small city in the north of the island-state of ARCHAEDON^(2.). It was once the capital of the state, though the FIRMAMENTAL disaster now known as the CONFLAGRATION OF LIGHT left its magocracy dead or crippled, leading to the collapse of the government and the region descending into conflict for the better part of two centuries. It remains today, though it greatly diminished from its former self, with many of its once proud minarets and domes now ruined and crumbling (Pop. c. 17,000).
- TARFAN: Geo. Region in VENTHIR, to the east of the GO BISAMMAM desert, noted for its crawling dunes of fine sand that in wet seasons capture moisture and rains, leading to the formation of thousands of small pools of fresh water. These promote spontaneous growth of flora and entice otherwise dormant fauna to them, though they do not last for long.
- TARHA: Lak. Lake in the c of THE HARÉSHK, forming a border between the City-kingdoms of PALUS and ALAMUT.
- TARHAR: Set. Greattown in Temuja situated along the route of the Great Road (Pop. c. 25,000).
- TARHUNNAM: Geo. Collapsed cave in the wilderness of the south east of the OLD FOREST near the border with AHRISHEN. It is now a huge sinkhole, covering some 100 square-miles, with small tunnels leading into deeper caverns below, which link to the PRISON CARCERI.

- TARIA: Rvr. River in ATARAXIA flowing south for 306-miles from sources in the south of the BLACK MOUNTAINS, before meeting its parent, the river ASTAHKH.
- TARIAN: Geo. Island off the south western coast of the AMMASHI^(L) peninsula, forming a part of the AMMASHI FREE-ISLES.
- TARIFAN: Pol. Soc. Small PATRICIAN HOUSE based in the north of SKAROS. It is a generational landowner in the region and employs many helots and slaves in its lands. Its people are superstitious and most of its estates contain multiple shrines dedicated to patron saints, whom they revere fanatically. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.
- TARILLA: Set. Settlement in the c of MHAROKK, south of the SOLON HIGHLANDS. It is known for its quality limestone mines (Pop. c. 8,750).
- TARIMO: Set. Small city in the c of SAUA, in the c of the FARAVARI Forest (Pop. c. 17,000).
- TARIMOR: His. Soc. One of the kindreds of ancient ASSEER, in what is now present-day ESHIR^(2.).
- TARISA: 1. Sea. Small bay in the north of SALOROC, south west of the wetlands of NAGAMOTH.
- 2. See. Large coastal city in the north of SALOROC. It is a major industrial centre, and its peripheries are dominated by large manufactories, whilst its interior is characterised by open spaces where caravans passing through it while travelling the RED ROUTE can pause to trade goods. Its ports are busy with merchant vessels that cross the SHADOW SEA, linking the Red Route with LABASHI (Pop. c. 280,000).
- TARIZII: Set. Settlement in the west of PNESSA (Pop. c. 3,400).
- TARJUMAN: Pol. Rnk. Diplomatic position within the HIGH- and LOW-EMPIRES. They are trained in dedicated LYCEUMS across and serve as interpreters, where they are often found in embassies or within the retinues of INQUISITORS of the SANCTIFIED ORDERS OF THE INQUISITION.
- TARKA: Rvr. River in the south of AZAZEM, flowing for 180-mile from the AAORA Mountains, before emptying into the BAY OF TARKUSH.
- TARKUSH: 1. Sea. Bay in the south of AZAZEM, named after the city of Tarkush^(2,).
- 2. Set. Major coastal city and port in the south west of AZAZEM built close to the neolithic ruins of an ancient race. Historically, it was a hub of trade, linking the western KORACHANI states to these in the east.

It is home to a large armoury, known as the GRAND ARMOURY, which provided many of the heavier pieces of artillery used by the imperial army during the WAR OF SUNDERING. It was destroyed during the war, leaving half the city toppled and hundreds of people dead. The city had largely recovered by c. 3810 RM (Pop. c, 72,000).

- TARMAAN: Set. Settlement in the east of HARAPPA(3.). It is part of the RED ROUTE and has many hostels and inns where travellers can stay (Pop. c. 10,000).
- TARMES: Set. Settlement in the west of KARAKHAS known for its cattle, which is bred for food and their hides, which are sent to KERMES, 10-miles east (Pop. c. 4,000).
- TARN: Set. Settlement in the north west of KARGAMA, along the course of the river WOLMASH. It was once famed for its many tailors and designers who had a royal warrant of appointment, producing ceremonial outfits and costumes for the KARGEMMAN DYNASTIES, bringing a great degree of fame and wealth to the region, though the abolition of the monarchy in 2809 RM saw the city wane, with hundreds of craftsmen suddenly without a job. The settlement is still known for its fine tailors to this day (Pop. c. 3,350).
- TARNAGOR: Set. City in the north of LOEGRESS^(1,), along the course of the river DRUITHAL. It is a bustling port city and its westernmost reaches are also known for their farmlands persimmon orchards (Pop. c. 35,000).
- TARNAH: Ind. Set. Granite mining settlement 9-miles south east of the city of MENIAASOS in the south west of LIDEA (Pop. c. 2,100).
- TARNAIA: Set. Small city in the c north west of PNESSA, along the course of the river BESYL (Pop. c. 12,500).
- TARNDRIA: Com. Set. Major coastal city in the north of KARGAMA, overlooking the BAY OF JERIDA. It is the largest port in Kargama and is busy with merchant ships, many of which sell trade across the SEA OF ORRIDA (Pop. c. 110,300).

TARO: Set. Coastal settlement in the east of HARAPPA(3.). Its economy revolves around its natural harbour, which is well-protected from the harsh winters of the INNER SEA. (Pop. c. 6,000).

TAROKA: Sup. Rnk. One who reads the TAROKKA, often an OCCULTIST.

TAROKKA, the: also 'Tarok', 'Teruk', and 'Teroch'. Sup. Soc. Gam. Obj. A pack of 64 playing cards, common around the INNER SEA, particularly in AZAZEM, KORACHAN, PELASGOS, and, SKAROS, where they are used in various card games and in mystical traditions.

Their roots are thought to date back to the early FIFTH AGE KORACHANI PENINSULA, where they were used as pictographic representations of ancient holy texts of the CULT OF LIFE AND DEATH. These aids were soon banned by followers of the nascent IRON DEITY (who would later become known as the UNDYING MACHINE), though they remained in use in HOAMM, where the religion flourished. The use of the cards in mystical traditions in Hoamm diminished with the rise of its monarchy and by c. 1300 RM they were being used by sailors as playing cards, with hundreds of variants appearing in different regions across the Inner Sea.

The Patrician mystic MANTEGNA, who had studied the Cult of Life and Death and the tarokka's use in its ceremonies, revived their use in mystical traditions in Korachan in c. 1740 RM, and they have since become a staple of occultists and mystics across the Inner Sea.

Increasingly, the tarokka is used by mystics and occultists, usually in urban areas, as a means of divination or spiritual exploration. For the most part this is considered charlatanism, though a few genuine SHAPERS have been known to use the Tarokka in their divinations.

The tarokka is comprised of sixty-four cards divided into suit and face cards. There are fourteen different suits; each suit made up of three numbered cards - one to three. The suits vary from region to region though are most commonly: crowns, cubes, moons, pyramids, septacles, shadows, shields, spheres, stars, suns, swords, temples, towers, and wands. Variants include books, coins, mirrors, masks and scrolls. There are twenty-two face cards, commonly called the untouchables. In most versions of the deck, the untouchable cards are the same, though regional variants occasionally replace a few face cards with more appropriate figures. The face cards are (alongside common alternatives to some cards, in parenthesis): The Deity (the Lord), the Hierophant (the Angel), the Dragon (the Sycophant), the Shadow, the Helix, the Ivory Moon (the Mystic), the Blood Moon (the Berserker), the Beast, the Shaper (the Heathen), the machinist, the Bomolochus (the Slave), the pawn (the gaol), the Tree, the Traitor, the Doppelganger, the Harlot, the Corpse (the Scales), the Artisan, the Ascetic (the Automaton), the Itinerant (the Flood), the Sun (the Plague) and the Flame (the Tower). The Bomolochus is sometimes used as a triumph (a card with elevated value) in some variants of the game. See Vol II: the Tarokka.

TARON: Set. Settlement in the west of AYAD. Its main industry is marble quarrying (Pop. c. 4,200).

TAROS: Geo. Massif forming a border between the north east of BASSORAH⁽²⁾ and the south west of THE OLD FOREST.

TAROUONGONA: Set. Settlement in the east of NOAVATUR. It is a major caravanserai, with large timber yards (Pop. c. 10,000).

TARPETH: Set. Fortified city in the south east of GNOTH, overlooking the BAY OF SUMARRA. It was once coastal, maintaining links with EZASUH⁽²⁾ and AQUARIIA, though the slow wane of ELYDEN'S seas saw it landlocked in c. 3700 RM. Today it forms a link in THE WAY trade-route, leading north to SYNCRETIA (Pop. c. 43,000).

TARRA: 1. Rui. Ruined city in the east of JURRAS^(2.), in the region of HURA. The settlement is thought to date back to c. -1000 RM and the remnants of a large temple complex can still be observed, half-buried.

2. Set. Settlement in the c south of CISNERIA, in the foothills of the BLACK MOUNTAINS (Pop. c. 2,000).

TARRAGA: Geo. Region in the east of SARASTRO. It was once known for TARRAGONS, which formed a large part of local mythologies.

Following the rise of the KORACHANI EMPIRE and the culling of the beasts, its notoriety for the creatures fell, though a few still remain.

TARRAGON: 1. Fau. Large reptilian carnivores common in arid regions in the north and north east of Sammaea, including NÁRTHEL, NAARETH, SARASTRO, and VENTHIR, as well as the more habitable parts of KHARKHARADONTIS. They are bipedal, reaching a height of 20-ft. when stood upright, though they can gallop on all fours. They are related to the PHYLACTERS and are of a foul disposition and temperament, and cannot be domesticated. Over the years various people have attempts to tame them, with few successes. Of note is Sarastro, which has had a small tradition of tarragon tamers since the days of SAOSTANA, and its military is famed for its tarragon-riders, who are largely ceremonial in role today.

They are the apex predators of their environments, though the encroachment of mortal lands and the slow death of the natural world has seen them become increasingly rare over the last centuries. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

2. also 'the Desert Beast'. Ast. Con. Constellation along the equator. See Vol II: Constellations.

TARRAS: Geo. Island in lake C'DATA, in the west of ARKOS(1.).

TARPEIA: 1. Rel. Geo. Ancient religious site in the north of the tribal territories of DATHOA, in the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER.

2. Set. Settlement in the far north of the tribe of DATHOA, in the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. The settlement is part of the SALT ROAD and is known for its caravanserais (Pop. c. 3,000).

TARPHAS: Set. Dominant city in the south east of SAMMAEA, forming part of the LEAGUE OF XETEAN STATES. It was once a metropolis famed throughout ELYDEN for its affluence and for a populace that, at its peak in c. 3120 RM was said to be over 1,500,000. Contact between Tarphas and the north dwindled as the STRAIT OF NÁRTHEL began to silt up, and by c. 3800 contact with the Inner Sea had effectively ended. Its waning population is unlikely to be related to this, as relation with its immediate neighbours remains strong, though many of its ancient structures have been converted to necropolises to house the unnumbered hundreds of thousands of bodies of the dead.

Tarphas is now a ruled by a powerful lich, who surrounds himself with an influential entropic cult that looks to the world's decay with a morbid fascination, advocating its advance and philosophies such as enforced euthanasia and nihilism (Pop. c. 32,000).

TARRI: Set. Settlement in the c of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of CARIA⁽⁴⁾. It is famed in Caria for the ancient ruined arch that lies outside its peripheries, likely dating back to the days of GOETHA (Pop. c. 4,600).

TARRISETTA: Sec. Small fortified city in the south of CISNERIA, serving as a link between the south west of Cisneria and the south east (Pop. c. 13.600).

TARRIT: Set. Fortified settlement in the far south of PHYRR, overlooking the BAY OF PELLARIG^(1.). It originated as a fortified port that was home to naval vessels that patrolled the entrance into the bay, though as the sea levels receded its location lost strategic importance and it was eventually abandoned in c. 3500 RM. Its ruin was later repopulated, becoming the nucleus of a new settlement. Once a centre of fishing, the industry died out as pollution in surrounding waters increased, and the settlement has been dwindling over the past century. Indeed, it was only the influx of refugees fleeing east since the outbreak of the NACRE WAR that has seen Tarrit survive in any form to this day, and it is now a refuge to the homeless and a place of convalescence (Pop. c. 4,000).

TARRO: Sea. Bay in the east of VÂRR, along the northern coast of the SEA OF PROPONTIS.

TARROKO: Rvr. River in the c north of SAUA.

TARRUGO: Str. Cui. Communal ovens that are common across THE SURRACH. Most households have a large amphora-like pot (known as a BEKA) that they use for daily meals. The Beka is taken to a market, where it is filled with meat and fat (or hard dross substitute), grains or legumes, spices, herbs, and seasoning, before being taken to the Tarrugo, where it is sealed and slow-cooked for half a day before being taken back home.

These gigantic ovens dominate most settlements in the Surrach and there can be multiple ones in larger settlements, with dozens in larger cities, and are as much a focal point as temples or churches are in other regions. TARSIEL: For. Sparse forest and grasslands in the west of THE HARÉSHK, notably the city-kingdom of NICAEA.

TARSING: Soc. Med. Process in SARASTROAN culture where the small finger of the left hand is removed. This is done for aesthetic value and cultural mores where it is seen as a sign of dedication and noble character. It is also seen as a sign of affluence as few manual workers are able to afford the cost or recovery of the procedure.

TARSUS: Set. City in the north of SARASTRO, noted for its soapstone and tale production; and its holy sepulchres, which for part of THE SHADOW MARCH. It is also home to the ASCETIC ORDER OF STYLITES, an extremist order of the REFORMED CHURCH OF SARASTRO that starve themselves atop pillars (Pop. c. 152,000).

TARTACHA: Ind. Set. City in the c of TARTAK. Its main industry is the mining of cinnabar and the extraction of mercury. The area surrounding the city is heavily polluted and covered in tailings ponds, which are toxic (Pop. c. 41,000).

TARTAK: 1. Dem. 'Tartakasid'. Ntn. Nation located in the north of SAMMAEA, to the south east of the SEA OF BYSSOS in a temperate-hot region to the north of the CAMMOREAN Mountains.

Tartak emerged from the militocratic state of HETHA, which in -87 RM fractured into two following the assassination of its elder council by its general, who became an autocrat, allowing the region to fragment – the north was scoured and its rulers exiled, fleeing farther north, eventually founding the nation of JURRAS⁽²⁾. The autocracy expanded, raiding surrounding lands savagely, taking treasures and knowledge with them to the capital of AHSHER (later Tartak), which became renowned for its riches and artefacts.

The city of Tartak⁽²⁾ was besieged by the KORACHANI EMPIRE and destroyed in 419 RM, beginning over five centuries of subjugation, which ended with its ceding of governance to the INTERREGES in 923 RM and their eventual abandonment of it altogether in 967 RM. During its tenure over Tartak, Korachani industries spread across its lands, with mining, logging and fishing operations reducing its territories to wastes.

The withdrawal of the Interreges and Korachani PATRICIANS from the state brought an influx of immigrants, including the so-called EXILED KING, who claimed direct ancestry from PRE-IMPERIAL PARTHISAN Royalty. A SHAPER of unmitigated power, he soon inserted himself as ruler of Tartak, viciously culling his opponents whenever they would rise against him. In 2053 RM he poisoned the wells of the city of SHER, effectively turning it into a ghost town. Chaos reigned for the next decade, before Korachan reclaimed power and later moved the capital to LIRAET in 2064 RM.

Parthis besieged Tartak in 2123 RM, taking Liraet in 2131 RM. Following years of war, a treaty was signed between Parthis and Korachan in 2132 RM, which saw Tartak become a vassal to the former, though Korachan kept the territory of AIORACH for 2,000 years. Parthis would spend the next centuries eradicating all remnants of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE that had reappeared during the empires' latest tenure there. Some of the remaining religious leaders fled south, disappearing into the UMBRA SOKHAR region.

Tartak has remained under Parthisan rule since then, becoming a major source of UMBRA for the power. The exploitation of resources continued, and following introduction of Parthisan law in 2127 RM, the WHITE LEAGUE established many fortresses in Tartak, as did the GODSLAYERS, whose frequent forays into the Umbra Sokhar and KARAKHAS became the basis of many local legends and customs.

The signing of the COVENANT OF KHURAUR in 3478 RM left the city-state of KHURAUR, which borders the east of Tartak, independent. Parthis immediately established links with Khuraur, trading part of its eastern border in Tartak in exchange for trade exclusivity and other privileges. In c. 3600 RM attempts were made to unite the two lands under a singular government but people from both states resisted for decades before the plans were abandoned. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms

2. Rui. Ancient city founded in HETHA in c. -20 RM. The city became a hub of culture and literature, where spoils of warfare were taken to be studied and displayed. It was largely responsible for the change in culture that overtook Hetha around the dawn of the first millennium. The city was besieged by KORACHAN in 417 RM and was destroyed, where it remains, abandoned.

TARTAKASID REGENTS, the: His. Pol. Line of ancient TARTAKASID rulers who were renowned to be of gigantic stature. The present ruler of Tartak, SANAKHA, is distantly related to the Tartakasid Regents, and is referred to as the Giant-king and stands 7-ft. tall.

TARTARUCH: also 'the Sword Tartaruch'. His. Leg. Ohj. Ancient sword crafted c. –3000 RM in the height of the FOURTH AGE. Conceived in the dreams of the Savant-king of CEEROPIA (now Sabia), the broadsword was forged of METEORE mined beneath the north east of THE OLD FOREST, and ATRAMENTALLY-enchanted, making it incorruptible, near-indestructible, and capable of channelling and amplifying the SHAPING of its wielder. It became the subject of many tales and legends in the ancient world, with whoever went on to wield it invariably becoming a powerful figure.

The sword was lost in c. -800 RM by the champion HEDERO OF YIIMA, who was undertaking an atonement quest. It was eventually found by the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR in -6 RM in VAALK, and it remains in his possession to this day.

Today, the Sword Tartaruch is a potent religious SYMBOL, adopted by the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE as a symbol of the strength of the Archpotentate Malichar and it is seen as an icon across nations where the Church of the Undying Machine is the dominant religion, where it is more commonly referred to as the HOLY SWORD, or simply the Sword. It is also considered a sign of virility in the empire, and many wear a pewter sword necklace which is said to garner the protection of Malichar.

A 3,000-year old replica of the sword, incredibly valuable and a fine artefact in its own right, is kept as a relic within the ORATORY OF SWORD, in the HOLY PRECINCT in KHADON, with some claiming that it is indeed the original sword. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

TARTISEI: Geo. Shallow plains in the south of WESTERN THANO that was once a river delta. Waning sea levels saw the BAY OF SJIT retreat, leading to the delta moving east, leaving a fertile plain in their wake. Though south of the northern POLAR CIRCLE, the northern lights are still quite noticeable here.

TARUDHA: Set. Settlement in the region of ILLASAN, in the south of JURRAS^(2.), whose primary industry is the growing and spinning of cotton (Pop. c. 7,900).

TARUSTAN III: (B. 3847 – D. 3889 RM) Pol. Last king of the CORAL KINGDOM, after whose inexplicable death in 3889 RM the region was thrown into chaos for years from which an accord was struck between the 118 barons to rule together, which they do to this day. His death was never explained and many still believe that he was assassinated.

The symbol of the king's power – the CORAL CROWN – remains unused, preserved in a glass case behind what would have been the kings' seat in the Baron's Council Chambers.

TARUULA HAAL: Sup. Geo. Small yet highly ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region in the north east of SAMMAEA, around the border between the far east of KHARKHARADONTIS and the west of the territories of ETHISTONITH in RHINOCOLOURA. The region was once dry scrubland, though what flora once lived here have become warped by the presence of the ATRAMENTA.

The region is categorised as EXTREMELY DANGEROUS by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

TARVAA SORHEI: His. Sup. Last documented witch to suffer the THREE DEATHS before the WITCH WARS subsided.

TASAFEL: Set. Fortified settlement in the south of NARTHEL, along the route of THE SHADOW MARCH. It is known for its many hostels and for its military caste that can be hired as guards for the March (Pop. c. 7,500).

TASAGAN: Set. Settlement in the south east of CUTH, on the eastern face of the peninsula of HAMMINGHENG. It is one of many producers of EMBALMING resins in the region (Pop. c. 7,000).

TASAII: Set. Large group of rural settlements in the south east of KHALHAT, 25-miles east of the capital in KHARAT. The region produces most of the food consumed in the capital (Pop. c. 4,800).

TASALAGOR: see WHITE FORTRESS, THE.

TASALOTT: Geo. Peninsula in the c of the KAZZARAN peninsula^(1.) in the west of Kazzar^(1.). It is sparsely forested and noted for rough terrain along its west and south eastern coasts. Most settlements found in Tasalott are known for hunting, particularly NARTINA, and the sale of trophies such as horns and ivory, most of which are moved south to be sold east along the IVORY ROAD.

TASAMMA: Ind. Set. City in the south west of HABOT, along the southern foothills of the SETHIGH Mountains. It is an industrial centre, with many manufactories (Pop. c. 41,000).

TASAN: Set. Settlement in the south east of HABOT. Its main industry is the quarrying of fossils that are found in the foothills of the MOROSIGHI Mountains, which are then sold south and traded along the NACRE ROAD (Pop. c. 6,800).

TASARACH: Ind. Set. Mining settlement in the north of the KORACHANI colony of CRASSULA, in the far north east of MENISCEA. It is a major producer of gold (Pop. c.8,500).

TASDARQ: Set. Settlement in the region of FURAKISH in the south east of KHARKHARADONTIS.

TASEM: Set. Fortified trade settlement in the north east of SARASTRO, leading to a route north into NÁRTHEL known as the TASEMIN GATE. The city has grown rapidly following the silting of the STRAIT OF NÁRTHEL, as it has become a major link in the trade-route east to the city of PHENESH⁽²⁾ and sea trade beyond (Pop. c. 32,000).

TASEMIN GATE: Com. Geo. Trade-route linking the south of NÁRTHEL with the north of SARASTRO, specifically the city of TASEM. It is not a physical gate, though it is thought that a large keep once stood in the general area now referred to as the Tasemin Gate.

TASH: Rui. Ancient HARAN colony in the lands of GOETHA, appearing in c. -560 RM, rising to become a powerful coastal trade-city within less than

The city was destroyed by MELAYAN raiders and their FIRMAMENTIST leaders in 991 RM, part of its eastern walls liquefied, allowing their armies entry and sack it. The now-solidified ruins of the wall still remain to this day, in the north west of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of EDICULE^(L), as testament to the abilities of those raiders.

TASHATARAS: 1. Sup. Geo. An ATRAMENTALLY CORRUPTED area covering some 1,500-square miles in the north east of SUMA'YA, forming the south eastern reaches of the badlands of BAAL DAGON. Most of the area south of here was, as far as records and lore indicate, an Atramentally-active region (most evident around the area known as RUATHA) dating back to at least the FOURTH AGE, possibly earlier.

The region once fell across a well-travelled trade-route that linked the then nations of DHEA and DHAMATEA, though in around -800 RM merchants and travellers began noting strange activity and the withering of the terrain in the region, particularly 50-miles south of the caravanserai of ECHA. The mesas and buttes that had characterised the badlands crumbled under the influence of the ATRAMENTA, their rock growing brittle, taking on the appearance of dull pumice. UMBREKHA (gossamer like threads of UMBRA that are carried on winds and updrafts, slowly corrupting whatever terrain or life they finally settle upon) was ejected from freshly-formed vents in the ground, the strands carpeting the region in insipient umbra, attacking life.

In -793 RM Dhean ATRAMENTISTS explored the region, finding a large schism in the earth, to which the corruption was traced. No life was found around it for around half-a-mile, and what trees remained were dead, their skeletal trunks twisted and corrupted into grotesque forms. The region became synonymous with the parable of the tempter-demon Tashataras⁽²⁾, a primeval chthonic being that was punished by the SCION TERATHA.

The region's corruption reached a crux for some time, though another outburst of activity in -491 RM led to the widening of the schism and an increase in corruption, leading to the abandonment of the city of ECHA in -463 RM. Another active period in c. -110 RM left Dhea crippled and Dhamatea was effectively destroyed; its people fleeing to the north and south, where they became refugees. Following the unification of the two nations as BA'AKH in -29 RM and their perfection of the construction of SIPHON ENGINES in c. 320 RM, a large facility was approved for construction in c. 450 RM, with hopes of reducing the taint and restoring the region to normalcy. However, the digging of foundations for the siphon engines resulted in a large earthquake, which destroyed their attempts and further widened the fissure, revealing a wretched creature, antediluvian and grotesque, buried there, chained in place, FIRMAMENTAL bonds restraining it. It was the same Tashataras that was mentioned in the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN.

The region is categorised as HIGHLY DANGEROUS by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

2. also 'the Dweller in the Pit'. Myt. His. A primeval chthonic being that was punished by the SCION TERATHA in the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN. The name was eventually used for a region (1.) of ATRAMENTAL CORRUPTION in the south east of SUMA'YA, in which the chthonic being had been buried and imprisoned.

Discovered in c. 450 RM, it was found, chained in a deep hollow, held in place by Firmamental enchantments. In their fear, the people of Ba'akh called upon their most potent ADUMBRAESKI, who done their utmost to strengthen the seals on the place. Concrete was poured into the hole and it was sealed, forsaken, its name and memory stricken from records.

And so was the region forgotten, but in 714 RM, following the arrival of the KORACHANIEMPIRE to the region and its ceaseless need for umbra, the region was broken into and the creature, thought now to be a MESOCHTHON of the antediluvian world, was awoken. The being rampaged throughout Ba'akh for weeks, destroying (or ignoring) entire regiments of the imperial armies, its footfalls causing the earth to weaken and shrivel, umbra pouring from the prints like blood. It was finally destroyed by a ATRAMENTAL CHOIR of 343 Set, all of which were consumed by the deed. The being was slain atop an ancient ruin remembered only as INTH, its body fused with the plains of southern Ba'akh, becoming an unholy wretched feature that remains to this day shunned by sane beings.

TASHI: Sea. Bay in the north of the Sea of SEA OF ORRIDA, to the north of the Sea of Serpents. It is bordered by the states of SEDISIA, GNOTH and OPHIUSSA, to the north west, north, and north east, respectively.

TASMETUM: Pir. 'tasmetae'. Tec. Mil. Military HARDSUITS common in the REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO. They originated in VAALK (originally VAALTHA) at the tail-end of the WAR OF SUNDERING, and their use spread from there. Where most other hardsuit-clad troops in the INNER SEA REGION are used as shock troops and in siege environments, the tasmetae serve as elite forces, often working far from friendly support, or behind enemy lines.

TASLACH: Plr. 'Taslai'. Oth. KORACHANI word for doppelgangers, who are thought to be a rare form of HALFBLOOD. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

TASSAH: 1. Lak. Lake along the border between BASSORAH^(2.) and THE OLD FOREST.

2. Set. Trade city in the far east of BASSORAH⁽²⁾, along the shores of lake Tassah⁽¹⁾. The city trades east with THE OLD FOREST (Pop. c. 89,000).

TASSAR: Lake on the border between north western BASSORAH⁽²⁾ and south eastern SKAROS, along the course of the river ULAARA.

TATAOL: Geo. Isolated island in the middle of the BHATHASHAL Ocean. Interestingly, the island is a near–perfect antipode to the city of KORACHAN.

TATAR: Dem. 'Tataran'. Ntn. Geo. A small independent nation in the c north west of SAMMAEA, in the peninsula of KAZZAR^(1.), east of the GULF OF ESHIRON. Its climate varies from hot and dry in the south, to more temperate in the north, though its coastal areas are known for mist as moist sea air meets the dry air moving west from the land.

Its people are descended from an early FIFTH AGE culture known as the CHIWENOOL, which fragmented in c. 500 RM, paving the way for a more prudent meticulous culture of traders, stone-masons and engineers known as the SETTARS, who, despite the dryness of its climate, managed to water their civilisation through ingenious aqueducts and great wells. The Settars eventually gave way to a sovereignty in c. 1150 RM, which saw dynasties of fickle kings and emperors who ruled to varied effect over the next millennium.

The ALCHIARAN DYNASTY came to power in 2417 RM, managing to bring a level of unity to a people that had been fractured since the rule of the Settars. In 2643 RM they became trusted allies to OTINTH, aiding the nation in a war against the Church of the Chained God and Sedisia, bringing a degree of new wealth to the kingdom that further solidified its prosperity.

The discovery in 2995 RM of the plant ASHHAR'S CROWN and its life-prolonging properties led to a change in hierarchy in Tatar, with the Alchiaran Dynasty becoming renowned for their artificially-long lives. They grew incredibly rich and powerful by creating artificial scarcity and selling sterile cultivars to the highest bidders. The newfound wealth of the Dynasty did not filter down to the common people, whose lives became increasingly difficult.

The arrival of the GODSLAYERS in the neighbouring nation of KAZZAR^(2.) in 3148 RM brought a degree of uncertainty to Tatar, with intermittent CRUSADES launched against the followers of its ancient CHIWENAN RELIGION. These attacks were responsible for annexing large swathes of Tataran territories, leading to a lasting enmity between the two nations.

With their newfound longevity the Alchiaran Dynasty fomented a cult of personality that threatened to overthrow the millennia-old religion of the region, and by c. 3250 RM worship of the Dynasty had overthrown that of Isiratuanism. This garnered the attentions of the neighbouring Godslayers, who renewed their crusades against the nation, infiltrating its cities and spreading heretical thoughts amongst its people. They gained a sizeable following in the independent region of SYRYSA, whose people became vocal detractors of the Dynasty and its members' deification.

This escalated into a civil war in 3363 that dragged on for years and led to the near-destruction of Syrysan lands, but by 3372 RM they were able to amass a loyal following who late in autumn of the same year stormed the palace in ASHHAR, slaying the royal family. The fields where Ashhar's Crown was grown were razed, with only a tiny plot escaping their scrutiny, from which all extant Ashhar's crowns are grown today.

In place of the Alchiarans, the Syrysan resistance instated a republic drafted from all cates and classes, with an emphasis made restoring the voices of the common folk. They severed ties with the Godslayers, who proved unable to quell their fervent devotion to their nameless deity.

The republic remains in control to this day, though abuse of Ashhar's Crown is rampant among the upper-classes who now control the senate as a gerontocracy, with most senators being a full century older and far richer than the people they represent.

The people of Tatar are seen by outsiders as sinister – a generalisation warranted by their fervent worship of an eldritch unknowable deity, which dominates many aspects of their lives at home, and which many Tatarans living abroad are quick to share with others. Its people remain notable engineers and architects, and their palaces and manufactories have a distinctive art deco style that resonates across Elyden. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

TATAROS: Ind. Set. Manufactory-city in the west of SARAGOS, along the banks of the river ISRAFA between the mountains of AGGOSHETH and the IROT (Pop. c. 38,000).

TATAROSH: Ser. Settlement in the west of RHAMIA. Its main industry is lead mining (Pop. c. 6,000).

TATARYA: Set. Fortified settlement in the far south of the TOGARMAH region in TEMUJA (Pop. c. 16,500).

TATHARA: Lake in the east of THETIS. As recently as 2,000 years ago the lake formed part of the inlet of KATENNA, though its slow demise with the waning of Elyden's seas left a small part of it behind, forming lake Tathara, which now lies along the course of the river TSAMETITH.

TATHASHETH: Leg. Demon of KORACHANI legend, commonly identified with TEVISHPHET of SAMMAEAN myth.

TATRAL: 1. Geo. Island in the prefecture of SONTADRIS in the south west of HOLOLACH^(L).

2. Set. Settlement on the eponymous island in the prefecture of SONTADRIS in the south west of HOLOLACH^(1.) (Pop. c. 1,200).

TATRAS: Pol. Soc. Tribe in the c south west of MULCIBER, in the GROWING MOUNTAINS, in the north east of SAMMAEA. It is one of the flatter territories in Mulciber, and is bordered by the SAROD Mountains to the north west, and the ORUSOT Mountains in the east. Its southern border is dominated by lake THAIOT, which also serves as a border with OURANASSA. It is known for its five ancient monuments, which date back to the FOURTH AGE and are believed to have been constructed by an ancient aiklah civilisation that once ruled the region.

TATRASAN: Geo. Mountain-range in the south east of the territories of ETHISTONITH in RHINOCOLOURA, forming part of the natural border with PNESSA. It forms part of the expansive ETHISTONI HIGHLANDS.

 $\underline{\text{TATRIS}}$: 1. Lak. Fjord in the prefecture of $\underline{\text{SONTADRIS}}$, in the far south of $\underline{\text{HOLOLACH}}^{(1.)}$.

2. Set. Small settlement in the prefecture of SONTADRIS, in the far south of HOLOLACH^(1.) overlooking the eponymous fjord. The settlement is known for its strong red wines, which are popular in the region (Pop. c. 5.300).

TATRUSH: Set. Fortified city in the south of JURRAS⁽²⁾, 15-miles from the border with TARTAK (Pop. c. 20,000).

TATTRAMANAH: Sup. Geo. Major ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED desert in the south of KHARKHARADONTIS, south east of the SEPULCHRAL PALACE. It was explored in c. 1200 RM by KORACHANI explorers, but proved to be impenetrable and remains largely uncatalogued to this day. The KHARKHARADONTID SCRIPTURES were discovered here and taken to KHADON.

TATTURA: Set. Major cotton growing region in the south east of JURRAS^(2.). At its nucleus is an old walled city, which is surrounded by dozens of miles of cotton fields and farmsteads (Pop. c. 33,500).

TAU ISIS: See. City in the far east of KHAMID, on the headland of KHARR (Pop. c. 20,000).

TAULEN: Set. Major city in the c south of SEDISIA, in the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region of EGUAOT. It is a major producer of raw UMBRA, with thousands of mines and siphon engines within its territories (Pop. c. 150,000).

TAULLEO: 1. Lak. Lake in the west of CHEIRA.

2. Set. Settlement in the north west of CHEIRA (Pop. c. 6,000).

TAUREL: Mil. Str. Coastal fortress in the south west of TZALLRACH, guarding entry into the BAY OF ATTAS.

TAURIAK: Set. Small city and UMBRA extraction facility in the far south of TARTAK (Pop. c. 15,500).

TAURU: Geo. Large region of dry plains in the north west of TARTAK. Like many regions that were subjugated by KORACHAN, the scrub plains of today are but a shallow echo of the thriving landscape that once existed here. Exploited for its resources and abandoned when they were spent, small pockets of virginal landscape still remain, hidden in valleys, where they act as a reminder of what was taken from this land.

TAVVADRA: 1. Pol. KORACHANI colony off the western coast of SAMMAEA, just south of the metropolis-state of CADERE. It is largely independent and serves as a link between Korachan and equatorial Sammaea. The island of IRREDIVIVA, 550-miles north west of Tavvadra, and its neighbours, were used extensively in the testing of ATRAMENTAL weapons, including bombs.

2. Set. Main city in the above colony, belonging to the KORACHANI EMPIRE. Founded in c. 2420 RM, it was once coastal, though has since become landlocked. Its link to the sea is now the city of EROCHAN.

It is home to one of the three LANGUES⁽¹⁾ of the GRIGORIAN ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION (Pop. c. 80,000).

TAYAMAR: 1. Geo. Rocky peninsula in the north west of Venthir, between the BAY OF BEÁR in the north and the BAY OF DAVKA in the south

2. Set. Small coastal city in the south east of the above peninsula $^{(L)}$ in the north west of VENTHIR. It was once a major harbour, shipping tin and copper from mines in the west, though as the industry waned, so too did its harbours (Pop. c. 3,400).

TAYARU: Sct. Settlement in the north of the TEMPLAR STATES, in the region of AVVIRAM. Its main industry is agriculture, specifically the growing of the TSAMMA plant. The settlement originated in c. 1600 RM as a large coastal watchtower that overlooked the BAY OF SHERUSALL, which when the settlement was founded was far larger than today. The slow retreat of the sea and the diminishing of the bay saw the need for watchtower diminish, though the settlement remained active, with the tower being converted into the governors' palaces in c. 2900 RM, for which it is still used today (Pop. c. 8,700).

TAZAAR: Set. Settlement in the c of VAALK, north of the MALL VORAKAN, 5-miles from the coast of the SEA OF BASSANDER. The settlement is known for its limestone quarries, which are still used to this day (Pop. c. 2,900).

TAZAM: Lan. Language that originated in c. 2000 RM from the earlier VESPERTINE language, during the apex of the of the pirate-city of TAZAYIL, in the north west of SAMMAEA. It remains today as the main language of the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT. See Vol II: Languages.

TAZARANT: Set. Independent settlement in the south of THE SURRACH, between the deserts of THAMAAZ in the west and CARNETABAEL in the east. It is known for its MONITOR (2) paddocks and its mounted monitor knights (Pop. c. 20,000).

TAZAYIL: Set. City in the east of the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT, in the north west of SAMMAEA. Once an independent pirate stronghold that terrorised the coast of north western Sammaea, the city and its outposts became landlocked by c. 2500 RM, by which time it had diminished in power and influence, leaving a power-vacuum in the area.

In c. 3130 RM the warlord SHEMAYAK united the various kindreds and warring groups that had emerged from its ruin. Within a century, the city had been repopulated, and the surrounding LEHLAV region was brought under his control. The influence of Tazayil grew from there and its armies brought the entire Sepahaunati peninsula together under its banner. In 3259 the name of Sepahaunat was officially recognised as the name of the nation. For the first time, and Tazayil became its capital (Pop. c. 1,100,000).

TCZHEEAE: Set. Fortified settlement in the west of OKKHAM, along the RASURE COAST. It is a producer of the drug LETH (Pop. c. 8,000).

TEAAMA: Geo. Massif in the west of THE OLD FOREST, close to the border with BASSORAH^(2.), and forming part of the TAROS massif. The region is rocky and covered in ancient water-formed canyons. Vegetation covers the area in intermittent zones that are dense and difficult to traverse.

TEACUP SOUP: Cui. Bev. Leftover meat cooked in a broth of onions, garlic, herbs and spices, served in spare teacups with flatbread. The broth is constantly left on heat with new ingredients added to it as the volume decreases.

The dish is common in tea/coffee shops across the southern coast of the INNER SEA REGION, particularly in MHAROKK and LIDEA.

TEARS OF ELEND: see UGOLOTH.

TEARS OF ZAQQIM: see ZAQQIM, TEARS OF.

TEBAQAFAIKON: Sec. Small city in the c south west of NOAVATUR (Pop. c. 15,500).

TEBENIT: Set. Settlement in the c-south east of GIBEAH (Pop. c. 7,200).

TEBERCHAA: Set. Settlement in the c of the nation of DURCHAA^(1.), some 9-miles south east of the capital. It is a major producer of food for the capital (Pop. c. 7,200).

TECHNA: also 'the Engine'. Ast. Con. Constellation in the SOUTHERN HEMISPHERE. See Vol II: Constellations.

TECHISA: Mys. Rnk. Mystic caste thought to originate in the ANUBIAN
Desert, who in c. 3840 RM arrived in the ruin of DUN SVARR in EHBOT and resettled it with their followers, naming it TECHISUN.

TECHISUN: Set. City in the c of ARKOS^(1.), built over the abandoned remains of DUN SVARR, which was left largely deserted following raids by SARASTROAN slavers culminating in c. 3522 RM.

The city remained empty until c. 3840 RM, when a caste of mystics calling themselves $\underline{\text{TECHISA}}$ travelled there from the north, settling the ruins of Sun Svarr. There, they founded the religious city of $\underline{\text{TECHISUN}}$, which has become a dominant force in the region by c. 3960 RM, and which now forms a part of the $\underline{\text{SALT ROAD}}$ (Pop. c. 28,000).

TECHNA SOUBIED: lit. 'matriarch engine'. Sup. Med. Tec. A rare and complex HEART ENGINE designed to provide mobile access to CLONING and INCEPTING, usually used on military campaigns, to provide instant access to the manufacture of organ replacements and even clones whilst in the field.

At the pinnacle of ATRAMENTAL and TECHNARCANE, these engines are time-consuming and incredibly expensive to manufacture, and their maintenance is also resource-intensive. The first one was constructed in 3374 RM in PELASGOS and since then less than a dozen have been manufactured, and as of 4007 RM only four remain in use – two in PARTHIS, one in the HIGH-EMPIRE OF KORACHAN, and one in the LOW-EMPIRE OF SARASTRO – and it is unlikely that new ones will be constructed in the near-future due to limited resources and the cost of their upkeep.

In the core of the matriarch engine is an ATRAMENTALLY-sensitive LARVA that is highly attuned to sphere involving bodily manipulation and healing, which, when coupled with the advanced orthoses and technarcane machinery in which it is interred, is capable of manufacturing replacement organs or limbs in a matter of days using donated blood, marrow and flesh from the recipient. They are also equipped with BIRTHING VATS that are capable of incepting clones or HAGHOUERS in a matter of weeks, though each matriarch engine is unique and details may vary from one to another.

While in the field each such engine is accompanied by a veritable army of TECHNARCANISTS, technologists, ATRAMENTISTS, DEMIURNES and others, who work to maintain the engine and ensuring that the output is uncorrupted and of perfect working order. They are also typically guarded by well-trained and often augmented or vat-born elites.

TECHNACHI. lit. 'Technological beast'. Also 'Technachi'. Sup. Med. Tec. A construct of the TECHNARCANE arts common throughout the industrialised world (including the SOCIALIST REPUBLIC OF ALMAGEST, the KORACHANI EMPIRE, the SECULAR REPUBLIC OF PARTHIS, and the REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO, amongst others), that melds flesh and machine.

A technachi is a TECHNARCANE machine constructed around a mindless VAT-BORN core, usually a LARVA, that, upon its INCEPTION is grafted to ORTHOSES or grafts of varying complexity that will dictate its role forevermore. The resultant creatures, best described as mechanical constructs with a fleshy core, fulfil various roles; often as cogitators. A rare few carry a great presence within the ATRAMENTA (their base flesh formed from a basis made up from the brains of sacrificial SHAPERS) with abilities greater than the most powerful womb-born shapers, though most are little more than automaton brutes. A common example of a technachi within the Korachani empire is the MONITOR⁽¹⁾. Though costly to produce, once incepted their upkeep is relatively easy.

Though similar, a technachi, HEART ENGINE, and IRON MANTLE^(2.) can be distinguished in a few ways that are commonly understood within the technarcane fields:

A technachi is generally a series of orthoses or grafts based around a vat-born creature or a clone of artificial origin, bred and incepted specifically for the task at hand, and will, more often than not, perform like an automaton with little personality or individual characteristics.

An iron mantle normally takes the form of orthoses or technarcane grafts or a harness or HARDSUIT applied to a sapient womb-born mortal with an individual personality and full mobility.

A heart engine is a more extreme form of technachi, often encasing a mortal body (be it vat- or womb-born) within a technarcane engine that can at times encompass entire rooms and, which by default, is immobile and commonly catatonic. See Vol II: Technarcana.

TECHNAGI: Rnk. Tec. The lowest of skilled ranks within the TECHNARCANE vocation, performing line duties on MANUFACTORY floors. Their main roles are studying and implementing uses of technarcane knowledge.

TECHNARCANA: Sup. Tec. A marriage of classical SHAPING traditions (usually ATRAMENTISM) and knowledge of the MATERIA OMNA with technological techniques that provide an automation of processed that previously required much effort on the part of the SHAPER, and which may augment or otherwise enhance the acts of shaping of an individual shaper.

Most commonly found throughout the industrialised world (including the SOCIALIST REPUBLIC OF ALMAGEST, the KORACHANI EMPIRE, the SECULAR REPUBLIC OF PARTHIS, and the REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO, amongst others), this usually takes the form of engines and machines that are powered by supranatural elements, which are fuelled by electricity and/or $\underline{\text{UMBRAEUM}}$ or $\underline{\text{UMBRISKA GAS}}.$

More complex engines, though not necessarily less common, are engines that tap into the forces of the Materia Omna to produce results that may mimic the feats that only SHAPERS would otherwise be capable of. Indeed, such machines may at times have in their core the body of a shaper or other creature (such as a LARVA) that is otherwise sensitive to either the ATRAMENTA or the FIRMAMENT. Such machines can take the form of IRON MANTLES⁽²⁾, which are ORTHOSES or suits worn by shapers to enhance their abilities; or HEART ENGINES, where often unwilling shapers are surgically grafted to engines.

Technarcana is responsible for many otherwise ubiquitous aspects of life around the Inner Sea, including the manufacture and distribution of DROSS, purification of air, CLONING techniques, the construction and maintenance of AMBULANTS, the application of advanced orthoses (including softsuits and HARDSUITS), and the construction of SIPHON ENGINES, amongst many others.

The origins of technarcana lie with the teachings of the DEMIURGE NYARLOTH, whose passion was in mechanics and crafting automatons, and who was a keen student of both the Atramenta and the Firmament, particularly interested on their implementations with his constructs. In 331 RM the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR SOJOURNED in PORPHYR (a land with many links to Nyarloth's ancient creations and his domains) with DEMIURNES he gathered in DAEKYN, and learnt many technarcane secrets from TELEANYARA APEXEIDE, taking them with him to KORACHAN. Those secrets were rapidly disseminated throughout the empire, from which they soon spread and began to evolve to match the different cultures around the INNER SEA REGION and beyond. This is accepted as the reason why technarcana and the generally high-level of technology are concentrated around that area of Elyden today. See Vol II: Technarcana.

TECHNARCANE ELEVATION: His. Cultural and technical regression (though deemed by some to be a revolution) that followed the TECHNARCANE RESCISSION. It was typified by a stagnation of technological progression, and a descent into irrational attitudes towards technology, particularly TECHNARCANA, with the idolisation of archaic technologies that most had lost the secrets to making, which only served to further their deification.

The centuries following the decline of the RESCISSIONISM movement saw many of the demiurnes and technologists across the INNER SEA falling into a cycle of revering the machinery they operated, which in turn caused them to further defy the engines, making them revere them yet further. This became known as the Technarcane Elevation, a status quo that remains true to this day around the INNER SEA REGION, particularly in the KORACHANI EMPIRE.

The Church of the Undying Machine and its many sects and offshoots were quick to monopolise on this, 'discovering' new scriptures that overstated the title of Rachanael as the Undying Machine, linking him to the new movement, strengthening the tenets of the church.

Indeed, some think that the Church of the Undying Machine was responsible for sowing the seeds of discord that originally led to the rise of the Rescission movement, though if this is the case, the subsequent benefits were unlikely to be their end goal.

Over the centuries, the Church of the Undying Machine has doubled down on this stance, leading to the present situation where mortals are beholden to archaic technology, unwilling through indoctrination to step out of its shadow. Some nations have slowly moved away from this mentality to embrace progress, though others, such as KORACHAN and its dependencies, still cling to these archaic beliefs. Even nations that are otherwise advanced may harbour isolationist settlements that cling to extreme versions of this draconian custom.

TECHNARCANE RESCISSION: His. A regressive movement that gripped the INNER SEA REGION early in the 4th millennium RM, where people from a wide range of cultures, and social backgrounds came to decry technological innovation, believing that it was causing more harm to society than good.

The movement emerged in the north of SKAROS in c. 3019 RM in response to the economic recession that hit the region in the wake of the WAR OF THE ARTIFEXES. It spread rapidly from there, reaching the capital in the KORACHANI EMPIRE in KHADON by 3021 RM, where it caught on amongst many lawmakers and patricians, from where it spread across the INNER SEA. It reached a climax in 3026 RM, with large mobs gathering in industrial centres, destroying machinery, in particular technarcane engines, many of which were relics that have not been replicated since.

Thousands of TECHNOLOGISTS, TECHNARCANISTS, DVERG, and DEMIURNES were slain in the widespread conflict, and the imperial army was required to quell unrest in many regions, with a horde of rioters slaughtered outside the BASTION OF STEEL in the summer of 3026 RM. The movement died down after the massacre, which saw many of its leaders killed, though many of its tenets had by then become ingrained in the collective consciousness of the Inner Sea Region, leading to a decline in technological advancement and a reliance on existing technologies. Over the ensuing decades this led to a growing irrationalism towards technology, particularly technarcana, and the near-idolisation of many technologies. This brought about a decline in knowledge of the workings of such engines as their deification increased. The centuries following the decline of the RESCISSIONISM movement saw many of the demiurnes and technologists across the Inner Sea falling into a cycle of revering the machinery they operated, which in turn caused them to further defy the engines, making them revere them yet further. This became known as the TECHNARCANE ELEVATION, a status quo that remains true to this day around the Inner Sea Region, particularly in the Korachani empire.

Parthis and its dependencies emerged largely unscathed from this time of conflict, and today these lands are amongst the most-forward thinking in terms of technology and their attitudes towards innovation.

TECHNARCANE STATION III: Int. Ind. Sup. Str. An isolated TECHNARCANE manufactory or facility in the c north of SKAROS. Of stark brutalist design it is known for its concrete walls that contain row upon row of slats hiding intricate technarcane engines, above which can be seen corroded metal pipes and smokestacks.

The structure was constructed in 3616 RM and began working the next year, after which the surrounding woodlands began to wither, their trees turning a sickly yellow. Today the woodlands are known as the $\underline{\text{YELLOW}}$ $\underline{\text{FOREST}}$, their original name forgotten.

The true function of the facility remains shrouded in mystery to this day. Its SLAVE workers are kept segregated and know little other than what they interact with directly, leading to more speculation and rumours.

There are no major settlements in the area and few people even know of the building's existence. It remains unknown why the facility was built in this area in particular.

TECHNARCANII: Nou. 'Technarcanear'. PIr. 'Technarcaniin'. Sup. Org. Rnk. An order of SHAPERS in the KORACHANI EMPIRE whose MINASTERIA⁽²⁾ has been based in the city of ZEPHANICHAN in eastern KORACHAN since 1409 RM Its members are ATRAMENTAL shapers whose SPHERE of influence involves technology and TECHNARCANA, and they are experts at interfacing with machines and communicating with HEART ENGINES and LARVAE interred within them. They are amongst the most widespread and far-reaching shapers in the Korachani empire and can be found working within the government, various industries, the military, and anywhere else machinery and technarcana are utilised.

In their most mundane application, they act as supervisors in manufactories and other industrial areas, using their abilities to calibrate the delicate technarcane machinery, delegating instructions to larvae, and soling malfunctions and glitches.

In the military they might be trained in combat, piloting RIGS or other engines of war. Alternatively, they may, with the aid of IRON MANTLES and other equipment designed to enhance their powers, be used to deal in long-range espionage or sabotage. They can also control in real time the many biomechanical shock troops employed by the army, including STEEL OGHURS and other forms of TECHNACHI.

In a more civic background, they may serve as information brokers; or might collaborate with FLESHWRIGHTS grafting orthoses and other enhancements onto people. The more unscrupulous examples may take part in illegal bodyjacking, whereby they take control of other people's orthoses and equipment.

Individual Technarcanii are typically augmented with OCCLUSIONS through which they interface with machinery, including rigs, by using UMBILICALS. Often, they will leave umbilicals of different registers or gauges attached to their occlusions (particularly the base of the neck), ready for use, though this is considered reckless by many technologists. See Vol IV: Spheres and types of Shaping.

TECHNARCANIST: Tec. Rnk. One who is involved in the field of technarcana. The term is generic and not a specific rank, though different states and organisations may use it as an official rank. For the most part, technarcanists are minor Atramentists, giving them a small suite of abilities related to their work. More accomplishes technarcanists might receive more dedicated shaping training, though would likely fill more senior ranks to most other technarcanists. See Vol II: Technarcana.

TECHNARCH: Soc. Pol. Ind. Rnk. Governors and overseers of the great fortress-manufactories and city-manufactories of PHYRR who answer only to the IMPERIARCH. Much like the Imperiarch they have slowly altered their bodies with IECHNARCANE grafts and ORTHOSES, which have prolonged their lives at the expense of their humanity, making them alien figures that evoke fear and awe in their subjects. No two are alike, though all take delight in the unique gifts and traits and that their enhancements provide them with.

TECHNARCHY: also 'technocracy'. Pol. Org. 1. form of government where rulers are technologists or members of the scientific community, or otherwise learned individuals. Examples include PORPHYR and SARAGOS.

2. Specifically, the government in PORPHYR. It is an absolutist monarchy, though has only ever had one ruler – TELEANYARA APEXEIDE, a SCION of NYARLOTH, and ancestor of the SEPTS of ancient EHLBEZUN.

TECHNO CUSTODIAN: Tec. Rnk. A civilian rank within the AIWAHAN ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION. Members are often technologists or engineers and are tasked with protecting and restoring important pieces of technology and TECHNARCANA, many of which pre-date the rise of the KORACHANI EMPIRE and are considered relics of a past age. Though it is not typical, they do sometimes carry out field work, travelling with agents in the search of ARCHAEOTECH where their skills often prove invaluable. As a result, some individuals do have field or combat experience, though this remains uncommon.

TECHNOCLAST: Pol. Rnk. Rank within the AIWAHAN ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION, concerned with destroying heretical technologies and removing TECHNARCANA from the hands of the KORACHANI EMPIRE'S enemies.

TECHNOCRATIC OATH: Soc. The tenets of the AIWAHAN ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION, introduced by the Grandmaster MACHAEUS ZIDEON in 3971 RM. Neophytes must memorise them and swear by them upon their indoctrination, and they dictate the actions of the Order as a whole, pushing its agents to turn to the use of TECHNARCANE ORTHOSES – an act that seems to be on the rise over recent decades.

TECHNOCRATIC REPUBLIC OF SARAGOS: Dem. 'Saragost'. Ntn. See SARAGOS, TECHNICAL REPUBLIC OF.

TECHNOLOGIST: Tec. Rnk. One who is involved in one of various disparate fields of technology, usually the manufacture of technical equipment or involved in practical work. Many technologists are involved in the maintenance of TECHNARCANE machinery and the many heart engines employed in technologically-advanced cultures.

TEDEA: Sea. Reef 1,000-miles off the coast of eastern GIBEAH, just north of the island of ZAKKAR.

TEDRATEA: Mil. Pol. Str. Bastion on the northern shore of lake INGES in the c of IMELKOT, constructed by the IMELKAN DYNASTY between 1371 – 1423 RM.

TEGNO GIEVI: (B. 3974 RM) Pol. Present Knight-governor of SHOTHA.

TEHDU: (15,200-ft.) Geo. One of ten peaks (colloquially known as the TEN PRINCES) of the south eastern A SAVI Mountains, in the north of AHRISHEN, named after an ancient prince.

TEHEAH: Set. Settlement in the c west of GIBEAH (Pop. unknown).

TEHEN: Set. Settlement in the east of AHRISHEN with a road leading east into VIRAHAN (Pop. c. 10,000).

TEHETH: Geo. Presently the north western shoreline of the BITTER SEA, in the east of SAMMAEA, forming the north eastern coastline of ABACARDAT. Prior to the retreat of ELYDEN'S seas the region was part of the main sea, but today it has been left as a salty coastline, bearing the echoes of its previous incarnation. The wrecks of abandoned ships litter the region, serving as a memory of the life that once flourished there.

TEIRA: Pol. Set. One of two capitals of VENTHIR (with duties shared with the city of HETEPHEROPOLIS, fulfils a more ceremonial role and is the residence of the regent QUEEN HETEPHERES, while Teira is a more administrative centre). Teira rose from the ruin of the NATHI KINGDOM to challenge the city of VENATH in c. -50 RM, which had rallied many other settlements together. Though Venath emerged as the true city of the region (granting its name to the nascent VENATHI EMPIRE), Teira remained a powerful city and with the appearance of the sphinx Hetepheres there in -3 RM, it became the centre of a powerful personality cult by -1 RM, of which she was the head. Her worshippers travelled throughout Venath, spreading word of the cult, though in 8 RM the armies of Venath marched against Teira, exiling her and her followers to the ruins of ENAATH.

Hetepheres' disappearance in 57 RM left Teira the centre of her cult, which by then had spread throughout the cities of the region. The CATACLYSM OF KHAMID brought chaos to Venath in 101 RM, though Teira was luckily spared from harm due to the intruding LATUARAN peninsula. That, and the death of king LABAISINGH in 151 RM had left the city of Venath in chaos, which allowed Teira to wrest control of the empire in 154 RM, though by then it was crippled beyond repair, and the return of Hetepheres in 194 RM led to the coalescing of the sundered empire and the funding of a new capital in Hetepheropolis in 201 RM. Teira became a separate entity, outside of the new Venthiri state.

By then KORACHANI culture had slowly made its way into Venthir and Teira found itself as one of the most imperialised of its cities, a caste of imperial patricians known as the ASHURA rising in power, eventually being corrupted into a monarchy that became the cities' governing body following Hetepheres' abdication to Korachan in 361 RM and Teira's eventual assimilation into the nation. The city was almost destroyed by PLAGUE in 1002 RM, after which it closed its gates to the outside world, though trade was restored exactly 20-years later in 1022 RM and the city began its slow recovery.

The rise of a TECHNOCRACY in MIDAL in 1293 RM left the Ashura powerless and the house had all but disappeared by c. 1300 RM. The technocracy was moved to Teira in 1402 RM at the behest of Hetepheres following a bloody civil conflict, though was later abolished by her in 1906 RM due to paranoia.

Though the golden-age of Venthir had ended by then and the surrounding lands were in decline due to the rise of the Atramenta, Teira (alongside Hetepheropolis and MYRMICA) enjoyed a time of growth, after which it would emerge as the largest of imperial cities, boasting a population at its height in c. 2800 of 12,000,000 bodies, the greatest of the so-called GEMS of imperial lore at the time.

That number declined with the loss of Venthir's UMBRA processing plants and the death of KITHAMAR in 2821, though it remained a metropolis of various cultures, surviving relatively unchanged through the turmoil of the SUNDERING OF THE KORACHANI EMPIRE in 3705 RM, after which it would later slowly regain its technarcane identity, becoming one of the Venthir's few industrial cities (Pop. c. 2,830,000).

TEIRAN NECROPOLIS: Rel. Str. An expansive subterranean necropolis situated beneath the city of TEIRA in VENTHIR. It is winding, with many long tunnels across multiple different levels. The corridors are flanked by floor to ceiling ledges on which rest bodies on open display. Though not mummified, they are drained of fluids and rubbed with a salty paste before being clothed in death robes and being interred, and most naturally mummify. As they get older and fall apart, they are moved to charnel houses – deep hewn rooms – where bones are simply placed atop of each other. Any riches they were buried with are technically returned to their families at this point, but curiously very few of them are ever returned.

The crypts are expansive and stretch beneath most of the city, and construction works often break into its tunnels. The large population and ever-increasing number of dead mean that old chambers are constantly being repurposed with new extensions being built almost constantly. Its oldest reaches are around over 4000 years old and some private crypts still include remains in them to this day.

TEIRIS: Rvr. River in the north of VENTHIR.

TEITIAN: Geo. Coastal hills and rocky area in the south east of HABOT. Prior to the waning of ELYDEN'S seas in the 4th millennium RM and the disappearance of the SEA OF ELLSALEN(1.), the hills were a chain of islands stretching west to east for over 200-miles. The islands were once inhabited by fishing communities, many of which have since disappeared. Those that remain that have adapted over the years to a landlocked life.

TEIURAH: Mil. Str. Major fortress and bastion in the south of ZHARIAH^(1.).

Constructed between c. 3505 – 3540 RM to form the backbone of a southern defence against the twin threats of QARALAM and SHEZALIAH, though it was never used for its intended purpose. Most of the bastion is now ruined, though part of the fortress remains manned, serving as the gateway through which the NACRE ROAD trade-route passes from Zhariah into Shezaliah. It has a large vaulted market and many of its old stores have been converted into storerooms and yards for merchants.

TEKRACHT: geo. Rocky escarpment in the east of PELASGOS, close to the border with KORACHAN.

TEL BARA: Set. City in the c south of LYRIDIA, along the course of the river HELISSOS (Pop. c. 14,500).

TEL GAMON: Ind Set. Fortified gold-mining settlement in the c-south east of LYRIDIA (Pop. c. 2,700).

TEL HALA: Ind. Set. Fortified gold-mining settlement in c LYRIDIA, along the northern face of the KYTHI Mountains (Pop. c. 3,200).

TELA: Soc. COMING-OF-AGE RITUAL in RHEA that is undertaken by all youths (known as prospects) on the first summer solstice of their 17th year. All eligible individuals undertake three tasks. The first is a task of thanksgiving, where the individual speaks before their family and community leaders, showing gratitude for what they may otherwise take for granted. The second task is one of fortitude and self-sufficiency, where individuals are taken to the wilderness no closer than 50-miles from their home at dusk, and left there to make their own way home. The third task is one of aptitude, with individuals asked to interpret a passage from the holy book of SAEWAL in a manner that is true to their character.

Upon completion of all three tasks that year's prospects are invited to a feast where they eat mastodon meat for the first time. Signifying their ascent to adulthood.

The three tasks are not contests and there is no measure of 'best' or 'worst' – all participants are invited to the feast, even if they do not complete all three tasks, though many do find their futures shaped by exemplary performances. Those who do well in the task or fortitude are invited to train to become MENHITA, elite border guards.

TELAKA: Set. Major city in the east of AHKA, along the delta of the river AMALTHEA. It is best known for 'THE ORDEALS', an ancient epic that has shaped the lives of its people for many years.

The city has been attacked by KORACHANI forces many times over the past decade, leading to a significant loss of population. At its peak in c. 3780 RM, it boasted a population of near 100,000, today it has decreased to a third of that (Pop. c. 78,000).

TELATH: Set. Settlement in the c of ALTHA. Its main industry is tinmining (Pop. c. 8,000).

TELEANYARA APEXEIDE, DIVINE MAKHANATE AND PRAEDICATE OF NYARLOTH: f. Myt. Pol. Per. (B. unknown) in the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, a SCION of the DEMIURGE NYARLOTH born in the THIRD AGE, making her amongst the oldest continuously living beings in present-day ELYDEN. She is the ruler and founder of the nation of PORPHYR and continues to rule it to this day.

She stands taller than any human, and her pale body is covered in all manner of archaic ORTHOSES, many of which would be considered fine relics and artefacts by other nations, with technologies that cannot be replicated today. She is aloof and reclusive, and rarely emerges from her palace, which was built at her behest above an ancient SOUL-ENGINE⁽²⁾ in 1635 RM. The MAKHANATE rules on her behalf.

She is considered one of the most powerful beings in ELYDEN, having been born to the SEPT caste of the IROTHANI kingdoms of KATHAT BYAAT, who ritually mated with the Demiurge Nyarloth. Not only is she a scion, but dozens of generations before her are also direct scions of the Demiurge, making her genetically extremely close to the Demiurge, with more of his blood coursing through her veins than she has mortal blood. It is well in her power to conquer as many nations as the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR had during the peak of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, if not more-so, if only she was of a more aggressive personality.

In Porphyr she is synonymous with the phoenix, which is a heraldic creature representing strength and wisdom. The design features on the national flag of Porphyr in duplicate – one representing Teleanyara, and the other representing Porphyr itself.

Children? * yes. but traits of father were not strong in her bloodline and within a few generations they were like mortals. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

TELEGRAPHY: Tec. Generally, telegraphy is the transmission of messages using codes, but more specifically it has become a shorthand term for electronic telegraphy, which is common in all developed nations in Elyden, particular around the INNER SEA REGION.

Electronic telegraphy uses electrical signals to rapidly transmit text messages through the use of telegraphy machines. Cities are connected with each other in an intricate wired network, allowing messages to be sent amongst each other against a fee per letter used, which has led to many abbreviated terms and shorthand becoming popular to save money.

Areas that have not yet been connected to a telegraphy network can still make use of the service, which is operated by shapers who are able to relay messages to others of their kind until they reach a telegraphy office. In the KORACHANI EMPIRE these are known as COGNITARIIN.

Electronic telegraphy grew in popularity in c. 3720 RM in PARTHIS, though within a decade it had spread across the Inner Sea Region.

TELELITH: (5,150-ft.) Geo. Massive crater in the UHBATAQI peninsula in the east of SAMMAEA. Over 50-miles wide at its widest point, little is known of the origins of the crater, though it is thought to be extraterrestrial in origin and immeasurably old, possibly dating back to the FIRST AGE.

TELEPATHY: Sup. Form of SHAPING in which an individual can read the thoughts of others. Some telepaths are able to plant thoughts or communicate with others at a distance, though specific abilities vary wildly from individual to individual. In the KORACHANIEMPIRE telepaths are known as COGNITARIIN.

TELEMA: Rui. Ancient stone colossus in the west of THE SURRACH, in the south west of the THISAMON Mountains. The settlement of TELEMON is situated within the great colossus, which is said to date to the THIRD AGE and has crypts and hewn caverns that reach deep into the earth.

TELEMON: Set. Settlement in the west of THE SURRACH, in the south west of the THISAMON Mountains. It is notable for being mostly contained within a colossus carved from an ancient peak of the range (Pop. c. 4,300).

TELIAN: Set. City in the c west of VIRAHAN (Pop. c. 42,400).

TELILASH: Rvr. River flowing north through the tainted regions of the TARAHID ANNEXES. Its origins can be traced to the southern face of the ASOGHAQUA Mountains, where it flows east and then north for some 400-miles, before emptying in the CAMARINAL SEA. The river was once a source of life and water to dozens of settlements along its stretch, the greatest amongst them being the cities of TENTAEL (later TANTALUM) and AKHAR, though by c. 2500 RM the increased corruption of the land – most noticeable in the expansive region known now as the HOGHSOTHAMON, caused the river to run foul, leaving most settlements along its banks deserted by c. 3000 RM.

TELITA: Set. Coastal settlement in the far south west of ELAT. Its people practice an ancient form of stilt fishing – with fishermen standing on poles in shallow waters, waiting for hours at a time to fill their quota (Pop. c. 4,000).

TELKHUM: Geo. Long rocky ridge in the c of the BARRIER LANDS. It once formed the southernmost extent of the CHIWENOOL kingdom.

TELLASH: 1. Rui. Abandoned city in the contested region between the south east of EREBETH and western CYHLAGHARR.

2. Set. Major fortress 30-miles north west of the ruined city.

TELLIC: Set. City in the c west of SABIA. The city is the centre of its law enforcement and military (Pop. c. 17,800).

TELLORS: Set. Small city and surrounding rural area in the c of AETHIOS, in the south of the LIDONUSAN PLAINS. The regions' main industries are agriculture and cattle ranching (Pop. c. 15,000).

TELLURARII. Also 'Lascharii'. Nou. 'Tellurarear'. Plr. 'Tellurariin'. Sup. Org. Mil.

Rnk. An order of SHAPERS in the KORACHANI EMPIRE, whose MINASTERIA (2.) has been based in the city of PALA (3.) in KORACHAN since 1845 RM. Its members are ATRAMENTAL shapers whose SPHERE of influence involves the stone and the earth, and they are experts are locating and manipulating it. Superficially similar to FERRIMIN, who have control over metal, the two fulfil distinct roles in Korachani industry and culture.

They are most commonly found working in the mining and quarrying industries, where they first locate specific stones and minerals, and then guide mining operations, ensuring that all available resources are located and extracted. They also play a role in the refining of these resources, where they are capable of removing impurities and altering the appearance of stones to be more aesthetically-pleasing, or to possess desirable traits for use in industry.

They are invaluable in the construction industry and military, where they are able to clear rubble or form rudimentary structures or hollows. Many trenches and simple fortifications owe their origins to the frenetic work of teams of Tellurariin who are often forced to work under enemy fire. The most powerful Tellurariin are capable of rapidly disrupting stone from the ground, interrupting enemy movements. They may also be able to use small stones as projectiles, though only the most legendary of Tellurariin are capable of lifting boulders in the way depicted in pulp novels and legends.

They make fine sculptors and stonemasons, shaping block of stone into sculptures or masonry for use in architecture. They can also restore old blocks, cleaning them, and returning sharp angles to stones that have become weathered. They are also of use in agriculture, where they can identify the chemical makeup of soil, advising farmers on what supplements they can use to make the best out of their farms. See Vol IV: Spheres and types of Shaping.

TELLURIA: 1. Sup. Geo. DUSTSTONE formation in the c of AZAZEM, riddled with black jagged rocks and the ruins of old quarries and opencast mines. The region is dominated by a gigantic sinkhole – the remnant of collapsed caverns beneath the feature.

2. Sup. Geo. Atramentally Tainted region in the c south of the Umbra Sokhar. The corruption has left the earth of the entire region brittle, like duststone, and the terrain is unstable, filled with sinkholes, buttes and honeycomb formations that are avoided due to their danger.

The region is categorised as a MODERATE THREAT by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

3. Geo. Vast cavern network in the above Atramentally Tainted region⁽²⁾, formed by ancient water carving through stone rendered brittle by the taint.

TELLURIC: Geo. Basin in the south of ALMAGEST between the cities of PALLATI and PERGAMON. It was once covered in fields, though there were abandoned centuries ago and have been reclaimed by nature, though the soil had degraded to such an extent that little grows there naturally now other than weeds and the hardiest of plants.

TELLURION, the: Oth. Winged OTHERWORLDER who guards the ORERRY OF CANOLLEGH. Living as an aesthete, the Tellurion converses with those who know his archaic tongue and display an intelligence it deems worthy of discourse. The creature is largely passive, though attacks those who touch the orerry it guards.

TELON: Rvr. River in the c north east of AETHIOS, flowing south west for 200-miles from sources in the AKHET and SESAM Mountains before meeting its parent, the river SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾.

TELQATEAH: Set. Major coastal city in the c north of GIBEAH, founded in 1474 RM following the birth of the septuplet OTHERWORLDERS known as the ASTERI in MOUNT ASTER (4.) in the c of Gibeah in 1348 RM. the city was founded specifically to serve as a home to the Asteri, for whom a monolithic palace was constructed with seven annex spires - one for each of the Asteri.

The city was instrumental in the eventual independence of Gibeah from UALLA MIGHA in 1727 RM through the cultural schism that the Asteri engendered there. It became the capital of independent Gibeah and remains so to this day, a major political and religious centre (Pop. c. 820,000).

TELRAAS: lit. 'the Waning Shadow'. His. Rnk. Also ADUMBRAESK. In the ancient nation of DHEA (the predecessor of BA'AKH and SUMA'YA), an order of ATRAMENTAL wardens and scholars whose efforts to understand the ATRAMENTA as a means of combatting it led to various innovations, such as hermetically sealed leather suits worn in Atramentally-active regions to protect the wearer (later known as SOFTSUITS) and, perhaps their greatest legacy; the construction of the first rudimentary SIPHON ENGINES in ALBA in -92 RM.

Records gleaned from the fortress of TELRAASA in the east of LIDEA, place the origin of the Telraas in c. -470 RM, in the city of ECHA in response to a massive swell in ATRAMENTAL ACTIVITY around 80-miles south of there. That rise in the Atramenta left the region scarred, renamed TASHATARAS, after a hellish region in the nations' religion The Dheans became distrustful of anything related to the Atramenta, especially SHAPERS. Shapers came to be persecuted, forcing the newlyformed Telraas into secrecy. From the catacombs of Echa they studied the Atramenta and its domains, occasionally moving south in crude softsuits to study the region, recording the grotesqueries and misshapen flora and fauna. They remained there, using their knowledge to implement changes upon the ruin of Echa, which was abandoned in -463 RM, dabbling in true Penumbrism and rudimentary technarcana as a means to combat the spread of taint. Elsewhere in Dhea, spurred by fundamentalist priests, Atramentists continued to be demonised.

It was after another a series of severe Atramental surges that culminated in c. -110 RM, devastating southern Dhea as well as most of Dhamatea, that the Telraas revealed themselves to a beleaguered people in -103 RM, where they spread across the region, helping its cities. They helped those suffering from Atramental afflictions, giving them ALCHEMICALLY-treated unguents and poultices to mitigate symptoms and stall the spread of further disease. In -92 RM they successfully erected the first siphon engine in ALBA; a crude animal-pumped machine that slowly siphoned umbra from the immediate vicinity and collected it as UMBRISKA, which was dumped in lead-lined pits some miles outside the city. By -73 RM the city was habitable and the Telraas adopted it as their home and stronghold.

From there the order gained a massive following and much influence, and by -30 RM it had become a ruling force in Dhea and much of Dhamatea, with the champion AKH rising to full power. His martyrdom the next year to advanced Atramental taint led to the unification of Dhea and Dhamatea into Ba'akh (named in his honour), though as his death brought a new semblance of government to the region, so did it lead to its fragmentation. Its charismatic and much-loved leader gone, Ba'akh was divided amongst his 17 lieutenants, and remained so until 318 RM. Throughout this time Ba'akh was ruled by the Telraasi council, though their power began to wane by the end of the 4th century RM, where they were superseded in 408 RM by a mercantile caste that had grown powerful following the ratification of trade with HOAMM and the beginning of exportation of umbriska produced by the many siphon engines that had appeared across Ba'akh in the ensuing centuries.

In 446 RM descendants of those last ruling Telraasi founded the ORDER OF BAALBETH, a knightly order that would for the next centuries harass the action of the MERCHANT-KINGS and disrupt trade of umbra and umbriska from their fortress in the LION'S MAW.

When the KORACHANI EMPIRE conquered Ba'akh in 634 RM, the Telraasi were finally sundered, with those claiming loyalty to Korachan becoming the ADUMBRAESKI and those failing to renounce their old views being executed, effectively ending the Telraasi order.

TELRAASA: Mil. Str. Fort in LIDEA, on a plateau in the north of the SHIBOTHA Mountain, built in c. 675 RM following the persecution of members of the TELRAAS and the ORDER OF BAALBETH in BA'AKH following its conquest by the KORACHANI EMPIRE in 634 RM. Originally, the fortress became a base where members continued their covert war against imperial trade and use of umbra, though such activities waned over following centuries, partially due to the rapid rise of Atramental-based industries.

Though the ORDER OF BAALBETH had largely disappeared by c. 1450 RM, the fortress remained the home to FIRMAMENTAL scholars, though fell into disuse by around 1800 RM, where it became sporadically home to various ephemeral groups and bands, though is now ruined.

TELTAHET: Geo. Island in the north west of the MAIDEN ISLES, off the south eastern coast of MENISCEA.

TEMA: Rvr. River in the prefecture of TERECHANT^(1.) in the c north of HOLOLACH^(1.). The river flows for 45-miles north from the NAS SOR peaks before meeting with its parent, the much larger river RUAVAR.

TEMAKK: Ind. Set. Major coastal city in the far south east of MHAROKK, overlooking the STRAIT OF SHIBBOLETH. It is an industrial centre, producing machinery that is used across the nation and also forms a part of the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 130,600).

TEMANAT: Sup. Sea. Tainted waters off the north eastern coast of BA'AKH. The region was once known for its offshore ATRAMENTAL rigs, which now lie in ruins, rusted in the diminishing SEA OF ETHA, looming like ghosts in the misty waters.

The region is categorised as a MODERATE THREAT by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

TEMBEK: Set. Small coastal city in the south west of SEDISIA (Pop. c. 6,750).

TEMELACH: Set. Twin city in the prefecture of TERECHANT^(1.) in the c east of HOLOLACH^(1.). The cities straddle the banks of the river TEMA and are known for their large chalk quarries (Pop. c. 12,400).

TEMELEUCH: see HERO OF A THOUSAND BATTLES.

TEMELUCHON: Oth. Type of HALFBLOOD HOUSE traditionally found in PELASGOS, whose traits make them natural fighters. Many such halfbloods are warriors and mercenaries. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

TEMERACHAN: Set. Independent KORACHANI colony in the far north of LLACHATUL, along the border between the nations of DURCHAA^(1,1) and ALMAGEST, and the lands of VALBAR. It is a remnant of imperial colonialism, and dates back to c. 2800 RM, before the WAR OF THE ARTIFEXES led to Almagest's independence from the Korachani empire. after the war, the empire was unable to hold on to Durchaa, which by 3101 RM would break away and become an independent nation of its

Despite this, the city of Temerachan, which until then was a refinery for the umbra pipelines that fed raw UMBRA south to the heart of the empire. The umbra pipelines have long since fallen into disuse, but the city remains under tentative Korachani rule, though its purpose, of which there must be, is unknown. For there must be a reason for a city to remain under Korachani rule, with no apparent resources of note, so far from the HEARTLAND.

Temerachan is heavily fortified and is one of few present-day regions with a standing force of STEEL LEGIONNAIRES (Pop. c. 40,000).

TEMMA: Sec. City in the south of TZALLRACH, along the course of the river CHIEN. It is a major agricultural centre in the region, with fields stretching up and downstream for a dozen miles (Pop. c. 29,800).

TEMMIGOR: Rui. Ancient city buried in the sands of the far north west of the Dune Sea, in the east of ETUA. Very little is known about the city, and it is believed to date back to the FOURTH or possibly THIRD AGE. It is thought to be well-preserved beneath the dunes though has not been well-explored.

TEMPESTARII: PIr. 'Tempestariin'. Sup. Org. Mil. Rnk. An order of SHAPERS in the KORACHANI EMPIRE, whose MINASTERIA (2.) has been based in the city of AGLAIA (2.) in AZAZEM since 2036 RM. Its members are ATRAMENTAL shapers whose SPHERE of influence involves the weather, and they are experts are manipulating it and predicting it, and they are amongst the most common and widespread shapers in the Korachani empire. The Minasteria is named after a caste of storm-callers who served amongst the armies of ancient SKAROS and ALMAGEST. The term is seen as roughly analogous with the firmamental sphere of CELUREISM.

Most Tempestariin are either employed by the MINASTERIA OF AGRICULTURE, where they manipulate the weather to aid in the growth of crops, as well as keeping them safe from the elements; or aboard ships as maritime meteorologists, who aid in plotting safe passage and producing wind to aid in navigation, lessening the effects of storms.

They are also employed in cities across the INNER SEA REGION, where they help to keep streets clear of fog, smog and rain. Others continue the tradition of the ancient storm-callers, and summon great tempests that they unleash against their enemies in battle.

Many Tempestariin, particularly those in the military, find themselves overseeing TECHNARCANE HEART ENGINES, guiding and assisting the LARVAE interred within them. See Vol IV: Spheres and types of Shaping.

TEMPLAR: generic term for a knight sworn to defend a temple. The word may have a more specific meaning, based on region or organisation:

- 1. Rel. Mar. Rnk. Guardians of PARISHES in nations in which the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE is the dominant religion.
- 2. Tomb-guardians in AHRISHEN, charged with performing cavern burial rituals and guarding the tombs of the dead.
- 3. Rnk. Descendants of imperial-commissioned guardians of the TEMPLE OF THE OLD ONES in VAALK, who, following the SUNDERING OF THE KORACHANI EMPIRE, remained there, their descendants making their home in the ruins. It is believed that they worship an ancient idol in the area, though they are fiercely insular and xenophobic, guarding the place without abandon.

TEMPLAR KNIGHT: 1. Rel. Org. Rnk. Elite troops of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, that emerged as a result of its many CRUSADES into heathen lands. The Templars were responsible for rapidly erecting fortified churches in heathen lands, which would become the centre of future colonies. They were also charged with defending the churches and protecting those who lived nearby, as well as conducting missions into deeper native territory, where they would proselytise the word of the UNDYING MACHINE.

2. Pol. Rnk. More specifically, the guardians of the Shrine Of the Shadow Triumphant in the north west of the extant Templar States, where they are rulers. They emerged following the retreat of Korachani colonisation attempts in the Ehrenisian Coast in c. 2810 RM, when they willingly stayed behind to protect the Shrine and the nearby settlement of Inderachan^(2.) from desecration.

Over the years, they would continue proselytising the word of the UNDYING MACHINE, putting influence on certain holy texts while ignoring major aspects of the holy doctrine of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. Eventually, this led to them being declared as heretics by the parent church in a conclave that was held in 3073 RM. Just over half a century later, in 3128 RM, they formally established the CHURCH OF THE SHADOW TRIUMPHANT, which remains the main religion of the Templar States and which also has a small presence in surrounding lands.

Their influence continued to increase after this time, when various surrounding settlements came under their control, and by c. 3400 RM they were in control of a few dozen cities, which collectively become officially known as the Templar States in 3402 RM, following the Council of Inderachan ratified its claim amongst the neighbouring states of KHULL and KARGAMA.

TEMPLAR, PARISH: Rel. Mar. Rnk. Every parish in the KORACHANI EMPIRE has a standing guardian whose duty is to protect the parish and its priest from harm. These Templars are typically noble-blooded, and wear traditional knightly garb — considered outdated by any other measure, but which they wear proudly, wielding large swords or gunblades in defence of their parish.

TEMPLAR STATES, the: Pol. A coalition of states to the south west of the SEA OF ORRIDA, in the north west of SAMMAEA. It is of a warm temperate climate, and has short winters with light rain, though its climate has gradually changed over the past centuries with the dwindling of the BAY OF DORRA as sea levels have dropped.

The region is named after the TEMPLAR KNIGHTS^(1.) that accompanied early Korachani colonisation attempts of the region, whose presence is inextricably linked with the history of the Templar States. The Templar knights were part of a CRUSADE initiated by the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE that in 2534 RM targeted the EHRENISIAN COAST. As was common amongst the knightly order, their first action upon making landfall was organising the construction of a fortified church in the north west of the extant Templar States (then under the control of KHULL). Completed in 2563 RM, it was named the SHRINE OF THE SHADOW TRIUMPHANT and became the rallying point to the crusading forces, with the burgeoning settlement of INDERACHAN^(2.) appearing around it in the following years.

The crusade pushed deep into Khullan and $\overline{\text{TRISKETHIAN}}$ territories for many years though was ultimately unsuccessful. The crusading armies fled, though the Templar knights⁽²⁾ chose to remain behind to guard the Shrine in c. 2595 RM, and were eventually responsible for the slow spread of the imperial religion to native lands accomplishing in centuries what the crusading armies had failed to do in decades.

Korachan returned to the Ehrenisian Coast a century later with more armies, hoping to colonise the region, in particular TRISKETHIA, which was rich in SOULSTONE deposits. For years its fleets blockaded ports, with troops attacking coastal targets, but the people of the Ehrenisian Coast were able to mount a unified defence. The unforeseen arrival of PARTHISAN troops in 2752 RM, brought chaos to the conflict, and they attacked Korachani and native forces alike. In 2771 RM Parthis withdrew from the war, but by then the defence had fortified its coast, and was able to counter the remaining Korachani offensives, leading to Korachan withdrawing in c. 2810 RM.

Again, the Templar knights choose to remain behind, and in 2809 RM a treaty was signed between them and the surrounding natives, with a promise that their continued presence in the enclave of Inderachan would be tolerated so long as they make no offensive actions against their neighbours. Inderachan became a haven to itinerant monks who began proselytising the word of the UNDYING MACHINE in surrounding cities. The annihilation of the ruling SOULSEER caste in the Triskethian Domains in 2852 RM created a power vacuum to the east of the Templar knights' territories, allowing their influence to spread farther, resulting in more cities turning to their faith and accepting them as leadership figures.

Over the years, their interpretation of holy texts began to diverge from those of the Church of the Undying Machine, leading to a distancing from the mother church. By c. 2900 RM the Knights templar had begun to clash with the heathen worshippers of a new deity in the region that was known as EZROKAHAELL. Neither faith was able to fully dominate the region and the two came to coexist despite the Templars' sect being branded as heretical by the Church of the Undying Machine in 3073 RM. This led to the official founding in 3128 RM of the CHURCH OF THE SHADOW TRIUMPHANT.

By c. 3400 RM, the Templar knights had become rulers of a substantial tract of land, spreading far east of the capital of Inderachan, and their territories had unofficially become known as the Templar States, a name that was ratified two year later during a council with neighbouring peoples. In 3746 RM the Templar States annexed the remnants of the Triskethian Domains, farther increasing their territories and securing the lucrative soulstone industry that had caused the latter states' collapse years earlier. In 3782 the capital of the Templar States was moved to the metropolis of OBYRYTH.

The people of the Templar States have been tempered into religious and cultural acceptance thanks to the diverse cultures surrounding them, and share little with their Korachani ancestors. Their language, known as SIADRAN, owes more to their EHRENI ancestors than it does the LANGUAGE of the first Templar knights.

The region remains one of the, if not the, largest exporters of soulstones in ELYDEN, and its Soulseers are unrivalled in their expertise on the subject, and their soulstone-based TECHNARCANA is coveted around the world.

Rumours abound in Korachan that the people of the Templar States secretly worship one of the craven deities of neighbouring KARGAMA, though this is refuted the Knights themselves. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

TEMPLARS OF THE MACHINE: Org. Militant branch of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE in the HOLY LAND OF RACHANAEL, once based in the city of SATACHAN, prior to the Church's abandonment of the region in 1241 RM following the sacking of Satachan. The templars fled east into KORACHAN with thousands of refugees.

Some of the templars remained in the south west of LLACHATUL, roaming the area as mercenaries, spreading their belief in the UNDYING MACHINE to lands where the Korachani empire never reached. Despite this, a particular sect amongst them turned to the worship of a corrupted depiction of the Undying Machine in their desperation. By c. 1500 this corrupted idol, which they carried with them in their travels, became known as the CHAINED GOD, and worship of it spread to VETHRANDA and, later, OTINTH and SEDISIA, where it remains the major religion.

The templars can still be found, spreading word of the Undying Machine, across the west of Llachatul, though they offer no fealty to the Korachani empire.

TEMPERANCE, SANCTUARY OF: Rel. Str. Ancient temple located in the east of RAONGEN⁽²⁾, in the region of YASH UYUN. It dates back to the FOURTH AGE, when the region was inhabited by the empire of HELMINTH. A caste of ascetic GIGANRI wardens from GNOTH has guarded the temple since before the FADING of the Fourth Age, as per the words of an ancient philosophical text. When their vigil began the temple was but a solitary structure, yet today, it is surrounded by the city of TIRO which first appeared in c. 2230 RM. the giganri were allowed to remain and the tradition continues to this day, with official treaties existing between Raongen and Gnoth specifically due to this.

The temple is now enveloped by TECHNARCANE machinery related to the UMBRA industry of Tiro, and is all but forgotten by the local populace, though it is still respected by the giganri who guard it. Heat generated from the machinery surrounding it keep the temperature around it to a tolerable level, and the giganri have constructed a small garden around it within the machinery.

Little is known of the philosophical text that the giganri guarding the temple follow and they do not speak with outsiders.

TEMPLE OF THE ABYSS: see ABYSS, TEMPLE OF THE.

TEMPLE OF APHRAS: see APHRAS, TEMPLE OF.

TEMPLE OF AEVITERNITY: see AEVITERNITY, TEMPLE OF.

TEMPLE OF AL GHUL: see AL GHUL, TEMPLE OF.

TEMPLE OF ANAHITA: see ANAHITA, TEMPLE OF.

 $\underline{\textbf{TEMPLE OF ARTIFICE}}\text{: see }\underline{\textbf{ARTIFICE}}, \underline{\textbf{TEMPLE OF}}.$

TEMPLE OF BETUL OLIA: see BETUL OLIA, TEMPLE OF.

TEMPLE OF BHARSHAET MAGOS, TEMPLE OF.

TEMPLE OF BLOOD: see BLOOD, TEMPLE OF.

TEMPLE OF THE BOIL: see BOIL, TEMPLE OF THE.

TEMPLE OF THE CHIEN DA: see CHIEN DA, TEMPLE OF THE.

TEMPLE CITY, the: see SOKHON.

TEMPLE OF THE CRADLE: see CRADLE, TEMPLE OF THE.

TEMPLE OF DARHAM: see DARHAM, TEMPLE OF.

TEMPLE OF THE DEMIURGES: see DEMIURGES, TEMPLE OF THE.

TEMPLE OF DIS: see DIS, TEMPLE OF.

TEMPLE OF THE ELEMENTS: see ELEMENTS, TEMPLE OF THE.

TEMPLE OF THE ELEVEN KINGDOMS: see ELEVEN KINGDOMS, TEMPLE OF THE.

TEMPLE OF EMREZEN: see EMREZEN, TEMPLE OF.

TEMPLE OF THE EMPYREAN, NEW: see EMPYREAN, NEW TEMPLE OF THE.

TEMPLE OF FAZAUT: see FAZAUT, TEMPLE OF.

TEMPLE OF THE FEAST OF THE SOLSTICE: see FEAST OF THE SOLSTICE, TEMPLE OF.

TEMPLE OF THE FORGOTTEN GODS: see FORGOTTEN GODS, TEMPLE OF THE.

TEMPLE OF GINENDEL: see GINENDEL, TEMPLE OF.

TEMPLE OF THE ICE PRINCESS: see ISATZ, TEMPLE OF.

TEMPLE OF THE IDOL OF BAPHOMET: see IDOL OF BAPHOMET, TEMPLE OF THE.

TEMPLE OF ILLATH: see ILLATH, TEMPLE OF.

TEMPLE OF ISATZ: see ISATZ, TEMPLE OF.

TEMPLE OF THE JAHINN: see JAHINN, TEMPLE OF THE.

TEMPLE OF THE JANISAARS: see JANISAARS, TEMPLE OF THE.

TEMPLE OF KETHREDHI: see KETHREDHI, TEMPLE OF.

TEMPLE OF KHAR'ILLAE: see KHAR'ILLAE, TEMPLE OF.

TEMPLE OF KIHOTA: see KIHOTA, TEMPLE OF.

TEMPLE OF THE KHANATE: see KHANATE, TEMPLE OF THE.

TEMPLE OF KYTHEA: see KYTHEA, TEMPLE OF.

TEMPLE OF THE LADY: see LADY, TEMPLE OF THE.

TEMPLE OF LACEAISCARRA: see LACEAISCARRA, TEMPLE OF.

TEMPLE OF LIGHT AND DEATH: see LIFE AND DEATH, TEMPLE OF.

TEMPLE OF THE LIGHT: see LIGHT, TEMPLE OF THE.

TEMPLE OF THE MACHINE ASCENDANT: see MACHINE ASCENDANT, TEMPLE OF THE.

TEMPLE OF METISOLLA: see METISOLLA, TEMPLE OF.

TEMPLE OF MITHRAR: see MITHRAR, TEMPLE OF.

TEMPLE OF NEMESIS: see NEMESIS, TEMPLE OF.

TEMPLE OF THE NEPHILIM: see NEPHILIM, TEMPLE OF THE.

TEMPLE OF THE NEVERDYING: see NEVERDYING, TEMPLE OF THE.

TEMPLE OF THE OLD ONES: see OLD ONES, TEMPLE OF THE.

TEMPLE OF THE PANTHEON: see PANTHEON, TEMPLE OF THE.

TEMPLE OF PARTHIA ATEX: see PARTHIA ATEX, TEMPLE OF.

TEMPLE OF THE PATRICIANS: see PATRICIANS, TEMPLE OF THE.

TEMPLE OF RENOUNCEMENT: see RENOUNCEMENT, TEMPLE OF.

TEMPLE SEA: see ESH NEMES.

TEMPLE OF THE SEED: see SEED, TEMPLE OF THE.

TEMPLE OF SHADOWS: see SHADOWS, TEMPLE OF.

TEMPLE OF THE SHATTERED ROCK: see SHATTERED ROCK, TEMPLE OF THE.

TEMPLE OF SHIBB: see SHIBB, TEMPLE OF.

TEMPLE OF SIELLA: see SIELLA, TEMPLE OF.

TEMPLE SLEEP: Soc. Rel. Religious practice common in the Neolithic phase (c. -600 – -300 RM) of AHRISHENI history. Holy-men would select inspired youths, subject them to rituals that would render them catatonic, before burying them in hypogea alone, where their dreams would be interpreted as omens. It is believed that this practice originated in LYRIDIA with the worship of the ABULIA and was later introduced to Ahrishen by merchants and travellers.

 $\underline{\textbf{TEMPLE OF THE SOULHAEK}}\text{: see }\underline{\textbf{SOULHAEK}}, \\ \underline{\textbf{TEMPLE OF THE}}.$

TEMPLE OF THE SPIRITHOSTS: see SPIRITHOSTS, TEMPLE OF THE.

TEMPLE OF ST. ISADARA: see St. ISADARA, TEMPLE OF.

TEMPLE OF TALLAS: see TALLAS, TEMPLE OF.

TEMPLE OF THE TREE: see TREE, TEMPLE OF THE.

TEMPLE OF THE THRICE-BORN PROPHET: see THRICE-BORN PROPHET, TEMPLE OF THE.

TEMPLE OF THE TWO-AND-TWENTY: see TWO-AND-TWENTY, TEMPLE OF THE.

TEMPLE OF UNDARRA: see UNDARRA, TEMPLE OF.

TEMPLE OF THE VARPULIS: see VARPULIS, TEMPLE OF THE.

TEMPLE OF THE VOLATA: see VOLATA, TEMPLE OF THE.

TEMPLE OF ZAR NISHUBHAL, the: see ZAR NISHUBHAL, TEMPLE OF THE.

TEMPOR: Set. Coastal settlement in the south of emirate of LIMOTH⁽²⁾ in Limoth⁽¹⁾. Its main industry is fishing (Pop. c. 4,700).

TEMPORAL KINGDOM: Phil. Common term used by members of the LEGIO EPHEMERA to represent the many civilisations of the MATERIAL PLANE, that despite their politicking, wrangling, and preening, are all doomed to collapse so that the next generation of nations and states can rise in their place. The term is specifically used in reference to the many cultures and nations that have come and gone in the FIFTH AGE.

TEMSAN: Rel. Str. City in the c of MHAROKK, south of the SOLON HIGHLANDS. It is known for its gold mines, though production is greatly diminished from its peak in 3360 RM. It lies along the main northern route of the SALT ROAD (Pop. c. 20,000).

TEMUJA: Dem. 'Temujan'. Ntn. Free nation located in the c north east of CENTRAL LLACHATUL, known in KORACHAN as TEMUR, Temuja is a highland landlocked nation bordered by mountains to all sides apart from its south eastern-most borders, which it shares with MALAN. Its climate is continental, with long wet winters and short dry summers. There are few trees within its borders, but it is famed for its fertile plains and steppes on which a multitude of wildlife thrives, most notably the horses for which its people are known.

Where other nations, including heathen lands such as nearby AHRISHEN and even SAUA, have embraced the industrialisation of our times, Temuja struggles to abandon its heathen spirit-worship and largely pastoral ways.

Given its formidable natural protection from the world beyond its borders, Temuja has withstood scrutiny from afar, including various attempted CRUSADES that have otherwise successfully penetrated into other heathen lands. Its people are insular, at least where the Korachani empire is concerned, though are thought to enjoy economic and cultural relations with its neighbours, particularly BAATAN, Malan, Saua, and VIRAHAN.

Due to this, little is known to us about its politics, military and culture, though a few titbits have made their way to the HEARTLAND.

It is ruled by a KHAN (a tradition inherited from its ancient founder), who oversees a representative council known as the PLAINSLEAGUE. Its cities, known as GREATTOWNS, send representatives to the capital, who sit in a council to vote on matters of state and to put forth petitions to the Khan and his advisors. Its military favours defensive and evasive tactics, with great fortresses situated in the mountains surrounding its lands, looking beyond its borders, outside, particularly to the west onto the DESOLATION OF ASTUDAN, from which various incursions have come in the past. Traditionally, it was known for its expert horse-archers, though today many have traded bows for crude single-shot

Rifles that would be considered antique curios by imperial quartermasters. Its people practice a heathen form of animism, where the spirits of the dead are revered. Above these familiar spirits are the so-called TUTELARY SPIRITS – each with the traits of a particular animal with which it shares a visage, to which prayers are directed in times of need. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

TEMUJAN CALENDAR: see CALENDAR, TEMUJAN.

TEMUJAN DEATH WORM: see HARHAI.

TEMUJAN SPIRITUALISM: Mys. Rel. Religion practiced by the people of TEMUJA, which venerates a pantheon of spirits (known as TUTELARY SPIRITS), each of which holds dominion over a particular aspect of life. These spirits are prayed to in times of need, though every person chooses a tutelary spirit when they come of age to serve as a guardian spirit. See Vol IV: Religion and Cults.

TEMUJIN: Lan. Language of TEMUJA. The alphabet forms the basis of three distinct tongues: courttongue; an official language spoken by nobility and officials. All records are kept in courttongue; Low Temujin: the common tongue, spoken by everyone. The written form is somewhat crude, especially as many who speak it cannot write; and TRADETONGUE: a language common throughout the east (as well as other lands, including GÂTHA). See Vol II: Languages.

TEMUR: Lan. KORACHANI name for TEMUJA.

TEN PRINCES, the: Geo. Mountain-range in the north west of AHRISHEN forming the south eastern-most expanse of the larger A SAVI range. The name is more specifically used in relation to the ten largest peaks of the range, which are named after princes from Ahrisheni history. The peaks, from north to south, are: TEHDU, LEHANN, DAHEN, SANGEN, EDENNA, RENGAR, EHSHUL, RASHA, ENNU, & SHALAN.

TENASAAR: Rvr. River in LLACHATUL, to the north of THE INNER SEA, acting as a border between the east of HOLOLACH⁽¹⁾ and the west of the MULL CITY-STATES. The river flows for 450-miles from its source in the south east of the TOLIASOR Mountains before reaching its mouth at the BAY OF BOKKA. The southern-most 120-miles of its course are flanked by low cliffs, forming a canyon system up to 10-miles wide at its widest.

TENDARI: Soc. Pol. PARTHISAN PATRICIAN HOUSE that in c. 3480 RM colonised the island of JIRIDUN (now OD MEGINNAS) alongside Houses of CAELMONT, SELVARSHI, TAELIS, and VALTARIS. Together, those Houses formed trade arrangements with the local government of Jiridun, marrying into each other and with local nobles to secure power. This allowed the Houses to settle the land, taking over overlooked industries that were of importance to Parthis.

In 3597 RM House Valtaris orchestrated a ruthless culling of its household, including House Selvarshi, where many ancillary parts of the House were either sent to Parthis or other far-flung corners of Elyden, effectively castrating them of power and denying the House the privilege of inheriting any of the holdings of the family. This was a damning act that earned the PATERFAMILIA of House Valtaris the enmity of House Tendari and the other Houses, and it is thought that he was responsible for many mysterious deaths and disappearances, but it ultimately paid off and by 3630 RM the family tree had been sheared down to size, consolidating the power amongst a handful of individuals, and ultimately serving a death knell to the House Tendari and the other Houses with which it had once been allied. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

TENDAT ITRUSH: Sea. Small coastal sea off the west coast of TAAN AN, in the south west of SAMMAEA, flanked to the west by the islands of VARIAN and CYDARIA.

TENDUT: Com. Set. Small fortified city in the south west of TEMUJA. It forms part of the GREAT ROAD trade-route that links the nation with BAATAN^(1,), VIRAHAN and AHRISHEN beyond. As recently as c. 3750 RM it was little more than a loose collection of villages and goatherder huts that developed into a caravanserai, which continues to grow today as caravans and merchants pass by, bringing money and trade to the region (Pop. c. 18,200).

TENEJU: Set. Coastal settlement in the far south east of RAONGEN^(2.), overlooking the island of COII in the BAY OF ORAT. Its main industry is the cultivation of EVOLAM KELP (Pop. c. 4,300).

TENEROSA: Set. Settlement in the c of IZABAL^(1.). It is a major course of iron to the nation (Pop. c. 7,500).

TENERRA: Geo. Flat plains in the north of HARAPPA(3.), which are prone to flooding.

TENE: Rvr. River in the north of HARAPPA(3.), flowing north following a bifurcation from the river TOTHA 7-miles west of the city of TOTH. It has a sizeable delta that is used for farming.

TENEAT: Set. Coastal settlement in the south east of GIBEAH (Pop. c. 4.000).

TENELLA: Rvr. River in the north of WESTERN SAMMAEA, flowing south east across the north of KARGAMA for 600-miles, before meeting with its parent, the river WOLMASH.

TENELOCH: Set. southern-most of the three major LACER ENCLAVES in NORTHERN SAMMAEA, between LIDEA and SUMA'YA. Though the other two are in eastern Lidea, Teneloch lies in lands contested between Lidea and N'RAKH in the western face of the SHIBOTHA Mountain, overlooking the GASHAN valley.

Tenelochi lacer are the most outgoing of their kind in the region, bringing conflict to Gashan traders and pilgrims undertaking THE SHADOW MARCH to ASOA. They are also protective of their lands and have been known to ally with the LIDEANS in defence of AANTHA raids, though deals made with SIRIPHAGAN merchant lords have allowed an offshoot of the SALT ROAD to access its territories to reach the south east of Lidea (Pop. c. 4,400).

TENGAR: Geo. Roughland region in the west of TEMUJA, between the LONELY MOUNTAIN of EROCH MAER, and the southern-most reaches of the ENEARHI Mountains. The region is known for its rounded volcanic plugs that diminish to the north as they meet the VALAR PRINCIPALITIES.

TENIM: 1. Sea. Bay in the south of LIMOTH^(1.), in the west of THE CONSTELLATIONS island chain.

2. Mil. Str. Major coastal fortress in the south of LIMOTH^(1.), guarding the entrance into the BAY OF LIMOTHEA^(2.).

TENON: 1. Set. Major harbour and city overlooking the SEA OF YMEA in the north west of the CITIZENRY OF THALI. It forms a part of the region of SIBBION^(2.)(Pop. c. 124,000).

2. Ind. Set. Mining settlement in the c of SABIA (Pop. c. 4,100).

TENRA: (5,300-ft.) Geo. Peak in the EROCH MAER in TEMUJA. It is home to the High-temple of DHU TENRA and the BELL of DASTAN.

TENRA, THE GOOSE: Mys. Rel. In the spiritualism of TEMUIA, the tutelary spirit of the sky, representing freedom.

TENTAEL: Mil. Str. Fort constructed in the north of SAMMAEA by the FOURTH AGE culture of ERASHA, later becoming the city of ERON SOTH, with the old citadel becoming a dwelling to the ruling family with the city growing around it. It became capital of OPHAM in 757 RM.

In 1462 RM the CHILD'S COURT was relocated to HOLOTHAN (by then known as OPHRAM), leaving Tentael a shadow of its former self. It would re-emerge years later as the city of TANTALUM.

TENOU: Set. Settlement in the south of PARAIYA, in the region of GOUSON. Its main industry is herding and animal husbandry (Pop. c. 2.000).

TENTH: Set. Settlement in the c north of GIBEAH. It has major links with the CHURCH OF ARAK, and was one of the first settlements to be affected by the birth of the ASTERI otherworlders in 1384 RM (Pop. c. 8,000).

TEOMAH: Com. Set. Trade town in the north west of MOAH. The settlement trades north west with DHAR in KHALHAT (Pop. c. 7,800).

TEORU: Geo. Region in c north east of KHARKHARADONTIS known for its many tar-pits. Local legend claims the pits are bottomless, and creatures that lose their lives in them are transported to the underworld where they are granted a semblance of life and haunt the lands above.

TEPHRA: Set. Settlement, known for its arable farming, in the c west of THE SURRACH, in the HATHURAN valley between the THISATHON and MISHANOS Mountains. Its soil is known to be fertile, possibly from ash deposits and lava from the nearby MT. DRAR (Pop. c. 10,000).

TERA: Lake in the c of ALMAGEST, forming part of the flow of river DANUR.

TERAMA UNA: Str. Major fortress in the c-south east of JURRAS^(2.), in the northern foothills of the INNORADOS Mountains. It is the headquarters of PATRICIAN HOUSE OTTUSARA and is considered one of the most heavily fortified and well-defended non-military structures in ELYDEN today. It is home to REVAHAZ OTTUSARA VIII, the present-day paterfamilia of the House, who rarely leaves the safety of his citadel.

TERAMAPHIA: 1. lit. 'Angel's Lake'. Lak. Lake in the north of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of PALUS. Its name is derived from angelic visions experienced by a girl there in 2287 RM, prophesising the death of the king and end of the monarchy eight years later. The name emerged in 2295 RM.

2. Oth. Name given to the OTHERWORLDER that is said to have appeared before a young girl at the edge of the eponymous lake^(1.) in 2287 RM. The cult of TERAMAPHIANISM became responsible for various hospices around the HARÉSHK as well as surrounding lands, such as the south of AHRISHEN and TAMAR.

3. Set. City in the north of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of PALUS. It was a major city in the Haréshk, its growth fuelled by pilgrims who sought out the lake^(1.) where an otherworlder appeared^(2.) in 2287 RM.

It has since begun to recover and, after the ruination of SAUL during the same conflict (the duchy's former capital), Teramaphia has found itself on the way to becoming the region's new centre.

4. Rel. Str. Temple erected on the edge of lake Teramaphia^(1.) in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of PALUS, around which a settlement later appeared^(3.), growing slowly into one of the region's larger cities (Pop. c. 15,500).

TERAMAPHIANISM: Rel. MYSTERY CULT prevalent in the HARÉSHK that is observed by women, in which the OTHERWORLDER TERAMAPHIA^(2.) is worshipped. The cult is responsible for operating hospices throughout the Haréshk, as well as in parts of Ahrishen and Tamar. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

TERAPH: 1. Geo. Island inside lake KETER in the c of GNOTH.

2. Rui. Ancient gnostic temple on the above island in the c of GNOTH.

TERARA: 1. Pol. One of three prefectures that make up LYRIDIA DHAI, which was became a free nation following the disappearance of it tyrannical ruler disappeared in 3742 RM, following years of subjugation before which it had been a KORACHANI INTERREGNUM since 1704 RM. 2. Pol. Set. City in the south west of LYRIDIA DHAI, and one of the few cities to remain under the control of the INTERREGES, effectively acting as the regions' capital, serving pilgrims undertaking THE SHADOW MARCH. The city is also renowned for the hall of reliquaries behind its main cathedral, which is visited by many pilgrims. The city was famed in antiquity (under the LYRADEAN government at the dawn of the first Millennium) for its fishing fleet; a trait that remained true throughout the first millennium of KORACHANI dominance, after which overfishing and the pollution of the sea saw its trawling diminished.

Following the departure of the last of the Interreges in 3742 RM, Terara became one of three major cities in Lyridia Dhai and by 3892 RM its territories had become firmly established around the idol of $\underline{\text{MALICHAR}}$ $\underline{\text{OZHA}}$, with $\underline{\text{VEPAR}}$ taking the north and $\underline{\text{COTHON}}$ the south east. Today it forms a vital link in the $\underline{\text{RED ROUTE}}$ (Pop. c. 331,400).

TERARINE: Set. Settlement coastal city in the north west of THE VORANDINE, at the mouth of the river GALK. Its main industry is the harvesting of EVOLAM kelp that is vital to various modern ATRAMENTAL industries, including CLONING and FLESHWRIGHTING.

Like many other coastal settlements in the north west of the Vorandine, Terarine has recently reported increased cases of people going missing at sea, with merill abductions blamed by an increasingly distraught populace (Pop. c. 7,400).

TERATHA: f. Myr. His. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, a SCION of the DEMIURGE NEITH^(1.), and was considered amongst one of the purest and most beautiful of the scions.

She was a deity to various regions, including, most recently, PRE-IMPERIAL BA'AKH in the form of the religion known as THE TERATHA.

She was considered the favoured of her mother's children and many of her siblings resented her for it. Many contemporary accounts depict her as vacuous and blind to the darkness of ELYDEN, having lived a sheltered light under the cosseting light of Neith. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

TERATHA, the: Also 'Cult of the White Moon'. Rel. Religion of DHEA and, until the dominance of the KORACHANI EMPIRE in the region, BA'AKH. The religion's roots lie in the early FIFTH AGE in c. -1400 RM, when the predecessor of Dhea, ASADEA, uncovered the remnants of an ancient temple in the SIELLAN HIGHLANDS some 85-miles west of the DAARKEN coast. Believed to be dedicated to the DEMIURGE NEITH(1.1), the temple was explored and its carvings interpreted as divine will (indeed, the carvings would go on form the basis of the Asadean language and even gave the highlands in the vicinity their name – Siella being the name for the IVORY MOON), with a religion of sorts emerging from them and the astronomical observations that had become common in the region. observations of the Ivory moon were central to the growing faith, which promoted purity and martyrdom.

The appearance of SVATHI migrants and their appropriation of Dhea and their founding of new settlements there in c. -1250 brought much chaos to the region. Their subjugation of the Asadean natives, who became the lower classes of the rising Dhean culture, saw the cult of Siella becoming ever-more popular, to the extent that it filtered across the region, finding a home in many of the new cities, where it developed into disparate sects, each developing past its original roots. This led to a diglossia of the religion, with various cities rivalling one another and the purest form remaining alive through the lower-classes – the descendants of the original Asadeans.

It was to this religious climate that the HARA emerged. She penned the now-legendary BOOK OF TERATHA in -943 RM, following three years of visions under the light of the full Ivory Moon. Through her work was the original Cult of the White Moon reestablished and the various false sects abolished, with the HIGH-TEMPLE OF TERATHA built in c. -905 in the city of QRA(3), which became the home of an emergent religion; the Teratha. The new religion helped unify the disparate cities of Dhea. Ora grew powerful through the religion and Lara's leadership, whose death in -831 RM led to a year of mourning there. Her body was buried beneath in the temple, and the Book of Teratha is kept above her tomb. Both became potent relics of the faith, the faith prospered through Lara's passing.

Ora was attacked by CONTH in -813 RM. The siege was short and bloody, ending in the sacking of the city and the looting of the temple, during which the body of Lara and the Book of Teratha were lost, alongside other treasures and relics. The Teratha, much like the city of Ora, never truly recovered, though it lingered through the coming centuries, finding strength through the regions' hatred of the ATRAMENTA and its effects. As Dhea and its southern neighbour DHAMATEA found themselves assailed by the Atramenta in c. -190 RM, the Teratha found a following once more amongst those affected by its corruption, turning once more to the writings of Lara in search of solace. Dhea and Dhamatea emerged from that time as the nation of Ba'akh, which adopted the Teratha as its faith.

The appearance of Korachan in Ba'akh in 633 RM left the worshippers of Teratha devastated – over 600,000 innocent followers of the Teratha were taken from settlements across Ba'akh to the platform of HADAAL where they were sermonised by the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR before they were taken north as slaves to imperial cities. That day signalled the end of the Teratha as an organised religion – EXOCRINES and ICONOCLASTS (2) scoured Ba'akh, obliterating all sign of the religion, slaying its faithful and destroying its holy places, until some centuries after the first appearance of Korachan in the region, it was destroyed.

Despite its obliteration in Ba'akh, the Teratha survived through the thousands of slaves that were sent across the empire. They took the religion with them and spread it amongst the slave-caste of the empire's cities, becoming a secretive cult. The cut was unearthed by iconoclasts and various cells destroyed between 750-1000~RM and though its main adherents were destroyed it is thought that the cult remains to this day. See Vol II: Religions and Cults.

TERATHA AND VOLUPIS: Myt. His. The tale of TERATHA and VOLUPIS is one of immense age, dating back to the FIRST AGE OF MORAL LIFE. Somehow it is still told in regions of northern SAMMAEA, particularly in AETHIOS, though to what degree time has corrupted it is unknown. What follows is a transcript of the tale as told by an Aethiosi DIELOT:

When the world was new, its skin only freshly shaped; the harsh caress of time still unfelt, there were the FATHERS AND MOTHERS. Seven mortal children were gifted to each of the Fathers and Mother by the Sire, but they were lesser offspring of greater parents. The true scions of the Fathers and Mothers were those born of a union between the mortals and Fathers and Mothers. Two such scions were Teratha and Volupis. Volupis was lustful and while he could lay with any woman he wanted, he desired only Teratha, whose vestal beauty was second only to her Mother's. Teratha refused Volupis seven times before he took her forcibly. Teratha was distraught and cried herself into an early grave, where her eyes became the spring of a great river. In the river was born the unwanted child SCIDRA, who forsook his father's line and wandered the land, spreading iov and merriment.

The Aethiosi tale differs from other, more reliable accounts of the story, in a few notable instances. The river mentioned in the story is almost certainly the SHIBBOLETH, which is commonly attributed to the DEMIURGE of the same name. The story seems to overemphasise the wanderings of Scidra, perhaps in homage to the djelot; himself a person who spreads joy through his tales. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

TERATOMA: Set. City-state in the east of SAMMAEA, just north west of the FLAMING SEA. The city is located on a natural ATRAMENTAL LACUNA, thought to link directly to the BLACK FOUNTAIN, lending both the land around it as well as the flora and fauna that inhabit its environs a tainted appearance. Its people, tainted humans, are ATRAMENTISTS of the highest-degree and devote their lives to collating its effects. It is located close to the rift valley of HUAEZON (Pop. c. 43,000).

TERATOPHILIA: Soc. Sexual attraction to those DEGENERATES and WRITHENS commonly attributed to those of the HIGH- and LOW-EMPIRES and other regions where such creatures are common. In the majority of cultures, it is considered a sexual aberrancy, though in others it may be tolerated or even encouraged.

TERATORN: Fau. Large vulture-like bird, common along the north eastern coast of SAMMAEA, from NÁRTHEL in the west all the way to GIBEAH in the east, where it is most common.

At their largest, individuals have been recorded as having wingspans of up to 18-ft. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

TEREA: Sea. Sea off the north western coast of WESTERN SAMMAEA, to the north west of SATHAII.

TEREBBA: Set. Small city in the north east of SARASTRO. Its main industry is the distilling of turpentine from its vast terebba pine groves, which have been in use for millennia (Pop. c. 12,000).

TEREBBA PINE: Flo. Trees common to the north east of SARASTRO and north western VENTHIR that are used in the production of turpentine.

TEREBINTH, ORDER OF: Org. Ascetic order in GNOTH, founded in the city of TIPHARET in c. 900 RM. The order is still based in the city, though has temples across Gnoth and beyond, including AQUARIIA, OPHIUSSA, eastern RAONGEN^(2.), and SEDISIA. The order maintains the forest and other natural regions in Gnoth, particularly close to settled areas.

TERECHANT: 1. Pol. One of eight prefectures in HOLOLACH^(1.), controlling its south east, around the plains of EGRISS. Its controlling city is Terechant^(1.).

2. Set. City in the c-south east of $\underline{HOLOLACH}^{(1)}$, along the course of the river \underline{RUAVAR} . It forms a vital link in $\underline{THE\ WAY}$ trade-route, providing lodging to merchants and large auction houses where they can trade (Pop. c. 52,500).

TEREEN: Rvr. River in c CUTH, flowing south west for around 275-miles from sources in the MO-ORASSIM and CUTHADDUAM Mountains before reaching the SEA OF BALIMAN.

TEREJA: Set. Cluster of as many as two dozen settlements in close proximity to each other in the c north of TEMUJA. It is a major agricultural centre, with miles of fields surrounding it (Pop. c. 17,500).

TEREKION: also 'the Spine of Pelasgos'. Geo. Large rocky mountain, stretching for 500-miles down most of PELASGOS. The name Terekion is a corruption of ancient old Pelasgosi earth deity, from the early FIFTH AGE.

TEREKON: Set. Major coastal fortified city in PELASGOS, named after the slag mountain TEREKION at the foot of which it is found. The VÁMAN SANCTIFIED ORDER OF THE INQUISITION was founded here and its presence was responsible for the growth of the city. Today it forms a vital link in the course of the RED ROUTE and it has also been home to the IMPERIAL COLLEGE OF FABRICATED INCEPTION since 3718 RM, before which it was located in the MHAROKKIN city of EBERUK.

It was a major military harbour during the WAR OF SUNDERING, and suffered against SARASTROAN naval harassment throughout the conflict, though tis military institutions later moved elsewhere (Pop. c. 480,000).

TEREO: Set. Small city in the south east of the tribe of LEGEO, in the c south of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. It is known for its secretive SHAPERS, and its government is thought by some to be puppets of powerful ATRAMENTISTS (Pop. c. 12,000).

TERESIC: Rvr. River in the c of OKKHAM, flowing 250-miles west from sources in the Nesae and Okkhami Mountains, before emptying into the BAY OF REHNOSS.

TERESTA: Set. Settlement in the c south of TAHALL (Pop. c. 8,500). *

TEREVAS: Soc. Org. One of the 17 Grand Houses of the Nacre League. The House is based in the nation of Phyrr, though has over the years found its ranks 'infiltrated' by various Technarch bloodlines that have united with it in marriages of convenience designed to increase the reach of the Phyrran IMPERIARCH.

House Terevas specializes in the arms trade, dealing in weapons, armour, military supplies, and TECHNARCANA, and is known for producing some of the finest weapons in SOUTHERN SAMMAEA. It is very selective of its trade partners, being careful not to arm potential enemies. As a result, its brokers are shrewd negotiators and have a notable black list of individuals and entities, many of them third or fourth parties acting on behalf of other Houses, that they do not trade with. The house is a key arms dealer to the forces of the Nacre League and its closest allies, particularly in the ongoing NACRE WAR with MAENMIST, which has made the House (and its defacto controller, the Imperiarch of Phyrr) very wealthy.

TERIA: 1. Set. Main city in the region of TERION, in THE SURRACH (Pop. c.55,000).

2. Lan. Saviudi dialect spoken in TERION. See Vol II: Languages.

TERION: Dem. 'Terion'. Ntn. Autonomous region to the west of THE SURRACH in the north west of SAMMAEA. A series of insular rulers between 1800 – 2100 RM led to it declaring its independence from the Surrach, which it maintains to this day. There is little land travel in and out of Terion, barring merchant caravans trading essential goods. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

TERMADA: Set. City in the c west of SABAISA. It is located along the course of a river and has a small yet thriving harbour (Pop. c. 38,000).

TERMAGANT OF BELDAM, the: Oth OTHERWORLDER born of the star WORMWOOD, which was extinguished on the night of the 3rd KAIONAL of ASHTALEN. The date of her rebirth is unknown, but is commonly thought to be uncharacteristically close to the death of the star that presaged her rebirth.

TERMITE WORM: Sup. Fau. Gigantic vermin found in the east of the HOGGOTHA ISZ that have evolved over millennia of exposure to ATRAMENTAL forces, likely originating far to the north in KHARKHARADONTIS. They can grow to 30 – 50-ft. long and are named after their appearance, with heads and mandibles echoing termites and their long worm-like bodies. They are fearsome hunters, spending their days half-buried in scree, dust or soil, pouncing upon prey (which includes MORTALS), that they detect through sound and vibrations.

Tales abound in AKANTHRA and KHAR NADUL of denizens of the Hoggotha Isz breaking these abominations and riding them like steeds. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

TERN: 1. Lake in the c of KASPIA along the course of the river TARAGEA.

2. Set. Settlement in the c of $\underline{\text{KASPIA}}$ at the edge of the above lake (Pop. c. 4,000).

TEROMAXIA: Set. Major city in the south of ATARAXIA, along the course of the river TEROSH. The city is an industrial centre and is dominated by manufactories. The waters of the river downstream of the city are tainted by the many industries that pump waste into it (Pop. c. 390,000).

TERONUH: Set. Small fortified city in the east of ELAT. It is a military centre and thought to be a hub of Elatin espionage in the east (Pop. c. 20,000).

TEROSH: Rvr. River in the south of ATARAXIA, flowing east for 450-miles from sources in the KATTAR and AGNOS MOUNTAINS before meeting its parent, the river MALAKAH.

TERRACE OF THE SYBARITE: Rui. Ruin along the border between the south of PARAIYA and the north of the UMBRA SOKHAR wastes. The ruin takes the form of a half-crumbled platform with granite tiles set in an intricate pattern that can only be appreciated fully from above. It is the site of a sporadic pilgrimage of SHIE and other related individuals that takes place every six years, at the time of the closest full BLOOD MOON to the Summer Solstice. Occasions when the full moon falls on the night of the solstice attract the most pilgrims. This event was last documented in 4007 RM, when both moons were full on the night of the Summer Solstice and the howls of the revels could be heard from miles away and lasted for days.

TERRESH: Geo. dry canyon system in the south of KARGAMA, forming its southern border with the VESPERTINE LEAGUE. It was once a tributary of the river Wolmash, though its course ran dry millennia ago. Signs of the old river remain to be seen to this day.

TERRION: Fau. Flying lizard common in MENISCEA. Around the size of a wild cat, they are able to fly through lift generated by their oversized fore limbs, which bear webbed skin between their elongated fingers, which stretches to their abdomens. They have long tails, which they use for stabilisation while in flight, and for balance while on the ground. Their hind limbs are atrophied and bear a single large claw that is used to attack prey, defend themselves as well as to perch on branches and cliffsides. They are common in relatively arid areas and subsist on blood - they attach onto larger animals using the claw on the hind limbs to produce blood and to hold on to the target while they drink the blood. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

TERRIS: Set. Largest city in the prefecture of SONTADRIS in the south of HOLOLACH^(1.). The city is famed in the region for its 2.5-mile lock, connecting lake LO HAIVAN with lake LO FARRAVAN. (Pop. c. 50,000).

TERRITORIES OF OPHAM: Dem. 'Ophamt'. His. Ntm. Emerging from the nation of ERON SOTH following the signing of the SEVERANCE TREATY of 592 RM that saw the nation sundered in two (the other half becoming the PRINCIPALITY OF OPRET). Harsh taxes initially saw the region grow powerful, its borders to the west and north strengthened against CYHLAGHARR and PARTHIA, respectively. An OTHERWORLDER appeared in 608 RM, spreading belief in a new cult that would change the region's history forever. The cult was based around an ancient ERASHAN legend of a line of child emperors who would unite all neighbouring nations as one. In 611 RM the being was exiled by the ruling council of Opham, fearful of its growing influence.

The early 8th century RM brought with it increased hostilities with the OGHURS of Cyhlagharr, who in 723 RM attacked OPRET, laying waste to the vast majority of its cities by 740 RM, allowing the oghurs to march against Opham. Forced to seek the aid of PARTHIA (at the time under KORACHANI control), Opham was able to counter the oghur invasion, though at a cost; it became vassal to Korachani-occupied Parthia in 757 RM. The war also saw the return of the prophetic otherworlder, who by now was calling himself THE STEWARD, whose influences and prophecies spread once more Opham found its lands exploited under Korachani rule and its people were heavily taxed. A new capital was established in the city of TENTAEL. The old legends spread by the Steward over fifteen decades prior took root in the city-state of NAAL, attracting imperial attentions. Legions of censors were sent there in 851 RM to quell the rising religion, though by then the cult, known as the CHILD'S ADVENTISM, had already spread to Opham. By 853 RM the cult has become the official religion of Opham, with the Steward regent to the child's throne following the abolition of the ruling council. The region was renamed the KINGDOM OF OPHAM. See Vol III: Extinct States.

TERROT: Set. Settlement in the c south of AYAD (Pop. c. 5,000).

TERRSHARRIKON: also 'Obelisk of Terrsharrikon'. Int. Str. Ancient black obelisk in the WAELMIGH jungles in the east of PNESSA. The obelisk is 300-ft. high and of flawless smooth glass-like surface that allows light to pass through it. The obelisk is translucent despite its dark colour, and looking through it will reveal a kaleidoscope of reflections of the surrounding area. Little is known of its origins, though it is thought to date to the THIRD AGE.

TERSER: 1. Geo. Region in the north of THE SURRACH, in the north west of the NGHALLEAL Mountains. It is rocky and of a relatively high elevation, though is fertile, and is 18,500-square-miles in area.

2. Pol. Set. Controlling city in the eponymous region in the north of THE SURRACH, east of the STUL massif.

It is known for its hardy highland people and their precarious arable farms, and its genealogists, and its 36 familial lines (Pop. c. 20,000).

TERTULIA: Rui. Ancient GELHANAN ruin in the far south of ARKOS^(1.), comprising an acolyte village and a funerary complex where the dead were prepared before being taken to the valley of Gelhana for their final repose. Little remains now of the ruin save the crumbling temple, its once bright interior faded.

TERZIA: Str. Ancestral estate of an ancient PATRICIAN HOUSE of VELIT located in the east of AZAZEM, amid sparse woodlands. The estate and its mansion have belonged to the house for over a millennium and is now decrepit, with the members of the House wearing centuries-old clothes, clinging to their ancestral wealth as it slowly bleeds away.

A small settlement exists at the base of the hill, and its inhabitants have their own legends that revolve around the Velit family, whose members have always been reclusive, collecting what taxes they are owed through intermediaries who themselves have little contact with the family (Pop. c. 2,000).

TESAHUN: Geo. Major coastal fort in the north east of KHITAI, guarding the sea of KOURIA from piracy.

TESCORA: Geo. Desert in the south of KARAKHAS that has close links to the ATRAMENTA. This closeness manifests itself as static-rich air and thick corruption that lays heavily across the land, intensifying the deeper one moves into the region. Technarcane engines, erected in c. 3250 RM, gather this electricity, storing it in massive pylons, for distribution around Kharkharadontis. The largest such engine, known as Tosleth is located in c southern Tescora.

The region was host to a rebellion in 3452 RM where a powerful magnate, together with his allies, forsook the empire. The act led to a short, but bloody military campaign, which ended in imperial forces securing the region, defeating the magnate and his troops.

The region is categorised as a $\underline{\text{MODERATE THREAT}}$ by the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI}}$ $\underline{\text{INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES}}$.

TESE: Set. In the south east of the tribe of TATRAS, in the c south of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. It is known for its goat herds (Pop. c. 2.500).

TESEKH: Set. GREATTOWN in the south east of TEMUJA, located along the course of the GREAT ROAD trade-route and is known for its great domed caravanserais and open markets. It has many embassies and representatives, mostly occupied by diplomats from MALAN. As a result, the city is one of the most rapidly growing in Temuja (Pop. c. 150,000).

TESHALA: Geo. Long peninsula dominating the south western coast of IAISHA. It is around 400-miles long and serves as a breakwater, protecting the mainland from cold sea currents and winds.

TESIA: Set. Northern-most major city in the CEHOPHELAN EMPIRE, located along the coast in the north west. The city is dominated by a gigantic SIPHON ENGINE that is maintained at great cost and effort to the Cehophelan people, guarding it from the FIRMAMENTAL region of LADDHER, just north of the city's environs. The city is of religious and cultural importance to the Cehophelan people as it is where, many years ago, the nine tribes of the Cehophela were brough together by the messiah SAPHAHAKH (Pop. c. 77,500).

TESSERACT MAZE, the: see PHROESTHOTH.

TESSIA: Rel. In many NORTHERN SAMMAEAN myths and legends, a manyarmed weaver-god of the ancient days. It is thought that Tessia may be a corruption of ancient worship of the DEMIURGE SYBARIS, who may once have been worshipped as an aspect of creation. Though no-longer worshipped, knowledge of Tessia is widespread amongst many northern Sammaean societies, and she is considered a patron of weavers and potters. See Vol IV: Gods and Pantheons.

TEST OF INVESTITURE, the: Sup. Soc. Ritual that trainee FIRMAMENTISTS undertake in the east, where SPHERES OF DISCIPLINE are placed in front of the shaper, who is then encouraged to manipulate them through SHAPING. The spheres that the shaper is able to move with the least expenditure of energy or effort are regarded as being spheres that the shaper has an affinity to, which will likely influence the SPHERE that the shaper will eventually choose as their discipline.

TESTERA: also 'City of Canopies'. Set. Major caravan city in MHAROKK, serving the land trains and caravans that travel through it along THE RED ROUTE. Once a humble caravanserai, the place is now filled with caravan yards, land train repair workshops and other businesses and warehouses that cater to the trade business. The city's name comes from the many red canopies that stretch from street to street in the main thoroughfares, shielding traders and merchants from the sun below. (Pop. c. 18,000).

TESZAN ORDER: His. Pol. Org. A historical minor ORDER OF THE SANCTIFIED INQUISITION in the KORACHANI EMPIRE whose original tenets were based in education of the masses, though this slowly became corrupted over time into suppression of information and the dissemination of propagandist teachings to better keep the populace under control.

It was founded in MAKHARA, KORACHAN in 2002 RM, though was eventually absorbed by the CONCORDANTIST ORDER in 3523 RM when its priorities shifted and the far larger major Order was better able to continue its propagandist role.

TET: Lak. Lake in the west of BANT, in the east of SAMMAEA, forming part of the course of the river MELATUT.

TETANY: 1. Med. Disease causing uncontrollable muscle spasms and later stiffening, especially in the jaw, due to unknown reasons. Very common in the larger cities across the Inner Sea, particularly the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI}}$ EMPIRE.

2. north. 'tetenear'. Sup. Rnk. Secretive SPHERE of ATRAMENTISM that manipulated bodies to cure or inflict diseases.

TETHIRTA: Ind. Set. Major city in the c north east of KHULL. It emerged following the collapse of the THERASHIAN EMPIRE and become one of the major cities of INGHULL, where it was known for its toll tower that taxed passage across the river UPINIS. Though the old toll tower remains intact today – one of the oldest structures in the city – it is no longer used for this purpose and is in private hands. The city is a major industrial centre and is one of the larger pigment producers in the nation (Pop. c. 88,600).

TETHRA: Dem. 'Tethran'. Pol. Set. Capital city in PARTHIS. It is a metropolis, and the centre of most Parthisan CLONING industries and home to its TECHNARCANE knowledge. The heart of Tethra is a gigantic municipal structure known as the PARTHIA APEX, which has five sides and has many tiers and a hollow centre; in which all governmental and many industrial departments are located. It is built atop a far older city, once known as TETAN, which in turn is built atop the ruins of an ancient megalithic city.

It is a major cultural and economic centre, and forms the termination of the PARTHISAN ROAD, and is also a part of the larger RED ROUTE, and as such sees traffic from all across the INNER SEA REGION. It is divided into 22 administrative districts, known as ARROUNDINGS, and is also home to the headquarters of the OFFICES OF THE OCCULTARIUM – the primary law enforcement over SHAPERS in Parthis (Pop. c. 2,800,000).

TETHRAN CODEX, the: His. Vol. Parchment notebooks written by the polymath AGIUS between 2018 – 2023 RM, concerning a wide variety of subjects, including optics, history, mathematics, ATRAMENTISM, astronomy, and biology, amongst others. It has been in private hands since 2077 RM and has changed hands various times over the years, and its current name comes from its last known location – the city of TETHRA – where it was bought by a private collector in 3964 RM. It is believed to remain under lock and key to this day.

TETHRAN MUSEUM OF ZOOLOGY: Edu. Str. Famed institution located in TETHRA, the capital city of PARTHIS. Famed across the INNER SEA for its impressive mounted displays of extinct and exotic beasts from across ELYDEN, as well as its many formaldehyde displays of dissected bodies, many of which are tainted or otherwise mutated.

TETHRAN PROJECTION: Car. Cartographic PROJECTION originating in the city of TETHRA in PARTHIS, used to depict the globe in a continuous ovoid shape.

TETHYS: Rui. The original city in TETHYSIA, settled in 1572 RM by the PROPHET KATHISIS. The city has since been abandoned and is now a ruin, with the capital later moved to LYSITEAS.

TETHYSIA: Dem. 'Tethysi'. Ntn. Native name for the lands in the far east of LLACHATUL (known as ISURAS in the KORACHANI EMPIRE). It is a nation of immigrants and is today one of the largest states in EASTERN LLACHATUL. Tethysia covers 2,500-miles from northern subarctic climes to the semi-arid deserts of the south; and 2,800-miles west, from the ARGENT Mountains to the coast with the MYMEREAN OCEAN. All-told, the nation covers some 7,500,000 square-miles, including large expanses of desert and otherwise uninhabited regions.

It was originally settled in 1572 RM by the PROPHET KATHISIS, a RHEAN spiritual leader whose vision of a single god during a time of great turmoil in his homeland attracted thousands of supporters who followed him out of Rhea in 1552 RM in a pilgrimage to a new promised land, founding the city of TETHYS twenty years later.

At the time of Kathisis' arrival, Tethysia was a discordant land, populated by nomads and dozens scattered micro states and city-states that had emerged in the wake of the collapse of an early FIFTH AGE empire (known as PHOL EGEDDA) that is thought to have collapsed following a devastating PLAGUE in c. 900 RM. These states were in a constant state of war with each other, and made the settlement of the region difficult, but as the founding city of Tethys grew more powerful, it was able to make alliances with some of the existing states, with which it was able to subjugate other, and by c. 1650 RM most of these states had either been absorbed by Tethys, or had been destroyed.

Ironically, despite Kathisis's dreams of a monotheism, Tethysia adopted a thriving polytheism (the pantheon of KATHIA, which evolved from the AURADIAN^(2.) religion) by 2000 RM, at the centre of which Kathisis himself, who by then had become deified as the chief god of the pantheon. By c. 3500 worship of Kathisis had far outstripped that of the Kathia (its deities now little more than saints or tutelaries), to the point of almost becoming the god of the monotheism that he so-desired. The religion has spread to much of Eastern Llachatul since then, and is now practiced the PANTHEON ISLES, THETIS, and other neighbouring lands.

Today, the state is populated by a mix of ethnicities – the native descendants of Phol Egadda, who are of lighter skin and largely nomads living on the fringes of civilised areas; descendants of the Rhean immigrants, who are of darker skin, tend to fill out the middle-classes and higher positions in society (though this is far from absolute); and a mix of the two filling out most other classes. Such racial segregation has become blurred over the years and is less prevalent now than it once was, with perhaps as many as half of Tethysian people being of mixed blood.

Tethysia is ruled by the GOD-KING – a mortal who acts as a proxy to for Kathisis himself, whose spirit is said to possess the vessel of a new God-king upon his appointment, with a new vessel chosen once every generation. Tethysia is currently ruled by the 57th God-king, and the children of God-kings are known by the epithet DEMIGOD and live lives luxury and often decadence, though most dedicate their lives to the Kathisis, becoming missionaries, generals and diplomats of renown. Their lives tragic, for they are slain with their divine father the God-king upon the appointment of a new God-king.

Between 2632 and 2819 RM the kingdom became more militaristic, expanding its borders, and in 2655 RM found itself at war with SURUTUR and the PANTHEON ISLES. It also became embroiled in a long military conflict with CUTH and Rhea in c. 2680 RM. By 2820 RM a change in regime found Tethysia become more diplomatic in its relations, withdrawing from conflict. In 2831 RM a new alliance was made with the Pantheon Isles, which lasts to this day.

The MYMEREAN ACCORDS were signed in 2996 RM, which saw many coastal nations of Eastern Llachatul form an alliance against the increased threat of piracy, though Tethysia left in 3523 RM following years of internal pressures as its north eastern-most cities began demanding religious and political freedoms.

This schism culminated in c. 3570 RM with war embroiling the city of THELIS and surrounding regions. Its people were persecuted by the Tethysian armies, fleeing farther north across the wetlands of HARITH⁽¹⁾ where they consolidated their forces and sought the aid of HALEDONIA. The war culminated with a Tethysian religious crusade that saw both sides suffer great losses, that forced Tethysia into signing a peace treaty, known as the COVENANT OF PEACE, in 3592 RM, which saw the dissidents break off into their own nation – Harith⁽¹⁾ – which remains to this day.

Culturally, its people are seen as backwards by those of the Inner Sea. This is largely due to the slow trickle of innovations and trade from the west since the silting of the STRAIT OF NARTHEL around 250-years ago. Though there is a more intrinsic distrust of technological advancement, which in many cases is considered as innovation simply for the sake of it. As a result, many technological innovations that are considered ubiquitous elsewhere – such as technarcana and firearms are used with great caution in Tethysia. It is by no means a primitive state, and manufactories and modern technology are found there, but they are not employed with the carelessness of other states. It clings to a more classical ideal of shaping, for instance, and though cannons and other military technological innovations can be found in its armies, its people are, in general, distrustful of firearms and favour melee combat.

Much of the Tethysian workforce is made up of INDENTURED WORKERS and SLAVES, though slaves are treated much better than around the Inner Sea – they are paid and, while not citizens, they are generally treated with respect. This likely follows slave revolts in c. 3580 RM which left the region devastated. Such slaves are considered property, and are usually forced to live in compounds on their owners' property, though they enjoy certain freedoms and rights that other slaves do not have, including freedom of movement. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

TETHYSIAN: Lan. Language spoken in TETHYSIA, which is a meld of ANCIENT RHEAN, and the ancient tongue spoken by NATIVES of the region. See Vol II: Languages.

TETHYSIAN LLACHATUL: see EASTERN LLACHATUL.

TETRACYTYS: Set. Coastal city in the west of THE VORANDINE, overlooking the STRAIT OF ABYR. The city is ruled by RACTYON, an ATRAMENTIST that survives in a vegetative state through a technarcane engine leased from PARTHIS. Like most coastal settlements in the Vorandine, its main industry is the harvesting and drying of EVOLAM kelp (Pop. c. 28,000).

TETRARCHY: Pol. Government in JURRAS[^{2,}], since its independence following the overthrowing of the INTERREGES in 3167 RM. Following its vassalage to PARTHIS in 3703 RM, the nation was allowed to self-govern.

It is divided into four regions – SUDHA in the west, EPHUTAS in the north, CACHARIA in the east, and ABJURA in the south – each ruled by a monarch, which together form the Tetrarchy, with the JURRASI SYNHOD serving is advisors in the capital of KETHRA, which exists apart from the four regions, as a neutral city.

TETRAN: Pol. 1. Ruling power in TARATI (1.) in c. 1100 RM, composed of four KORACHANI PATRICIAN HOUSES (KYDOR, LYCTUS, MELIA, HIMERAN) that rose to power through manipulation and marriage with local nobility and merchant-lords. Though power rested with the Tetran, the Tetran itself was answerable to the Imperial HIGH CONSULITE who served as a figurehead by proxy of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR. Following a long period of regional unrest, the High Consulite bestowed autonomy upon the Tetran in 1308 RM, who fought relentlessly for the next centuries against HALFBLOODED dissidents called THE AVATARS. In 2913 RM, descendants of the Avatars renewed their efforts against the Tetran, beginning a long period of war that ended almost a century later with the demolishing of their palace in 3009 RM and the EXECUTION of its leaders and their direct families, ending the line fully in 3013 RM.

2. Following the EXECUTION of the Tetran^(1.) in 3013 RM, THE AVATARS took over the government of $\overline{\text{TARATI}}^{(1.)}$, with four amongst their numbers placed in positions of power by their ruler, the $\underline{\text{AVATAR ENCARR}}$. Following the Avatar Encarr's death in 3721 RM the Tetran became the sole power in Tarati^(1.).

TETRISH: Mil. Str. Coastal fortress in the south of the emirate of LIMOTH⁽²⁾ in the c of Limoth⁽¹⁾. It guards the entrance into the BAY OF LIMOTHEA, which itself is the only sea access to the capital, Limothea⁽²⁾.

TEUMAN: Eth. The people of TEMUJA and SAUA, descended from GOETHAN^(2.) and NAHORIAN people from the FOURTH AGE. See Vol II: Peoples and Races of Elyden.

TEUTAR: Mar. Rnk. Knight who is a member of the ORDER OF TEUTAR.

TEUTARS: Also 'Order of Teutar'. Org. A knightly order in that originated in territories south of the INNER SEA in pre-SUNDERING KORACHAN. Descended from PRE-IMPERIAL feudal military structures, the order emerged from an older system in c. 950 RM after decades of Korachani control in LIDEA.

Originally mercenaries, the Teutars would evolve into a knightly order of the Church of the Undying Machine by c. 1400 RM. By c. 2,800 RM they had in turn evolved into a policing force across Lidea, Mharokk and Vaalk, remaining so until the SUNDERING OF THE KORACHANI EMPIRE in 3705 RM. They were used to good effect in Vaalk (then Vaaltha) to quell unrest between cultists of the ORDER OF THE BLOODY HAND and Church troops. While no-longer a religious order, the Teutars remained devout members of the Church of The Undying Machine, forsaking the Reformed Church of Sarastro.

Most of them willingly returned to the HIGH-EMPIRE, within a few years of the Sundering, with the others being exiled by c. 3720 RM. Those who returned to Korachan were rewarded for their loyalty and put to work in various institutions, which effectively ended the order. Those who were expelled from SARASTRO would fragment into small bands of mercenaries, most of which would dissolve by the present age. A notable exception to this is the PRAETORIANS OF TEUTAR, a private security organisation that provides guards and escorts to wealthy PATRICIAN HOUSES across SAMMAEA.

Today, descendants of the Teutars remain in contact with oneanother, and maintain various lodges in coastal cities across the Inner Sea, where they frequently meet.

TEVEA: Set. Coastal settlement in the south west of $\underline{\text{ULLMECH}}^{(1.)}$ (Pop. c. 10,000).

TEVINOR: Rvt. River in the north of LOEGRESS⁽¹⁾, flowing south for 320-miles from sources in the VOULLOR and TREBAURA Mountains before meeting the coast at the SEA OF AKRY.

TEVISHPHET: 1. Leg. Ancient dragon of SAMMAEAN myth. The name is often identified with the demon of KORACHANI legend, known as TATHASHETH.

2. Geo. Strange rock formations in the east of ELEKHID that resemble the ribcage and bones of a gigantic petrified creature. It is unknown whether the myth predated the discovery of the region or if the latter influences local legend.

TEVON: Set. Fortified city in the north of ESHIR⁽²⁾. It forms a major stop along the national overland trade route, and also serves as a link to the densely-populated area to the north of the Bay of Eshir⁽¹⁾, where it sells natural resources from the north to merchants along the trade-route, and supplies the north with much-needed goods brought by merchants from elsewhere. Due to the heat, most trading is done in the city's many night markets, which are busy throughout the night (Pop. c. 46,200).

THAARHA: Ind. Set. Major coastal city in the c south west of THETIS, in the PETEHAROTHIS region, to the south east of the KOTHA TYRAL Mountains. Like most large settlements in Thetis, it opens its doors to the NEMIS nomads in winter. The population explodes in winter, seeing an influx of tens of thousands of nomads from across Thetis, bringing their skilled workers, raw materials gathered in the summer months and produce with them. The city is renowned for its VIZIER school, where chosen tribal members are sent to study to be viziers (proxy rulers) to the LACARCHS (Pop. c. 50,000, or c. 200,000 in winter).

THAATA: Sea. Gulf filled with picturesque islands in the far south of TZALLRACH, to the east of the SEA OF NÛN. Its waters are shallow, and will likely disappear entirely within decades, as the seas of ELYDEN continue to withdraw.

THABAT: Dem. 'Thabatian'. Geo. 1. Large peninsula, around 750-miles long, making up the nation of EZASUH^(2.), separating the SEA OF LIAKARRA from the SEA OF MARDEN.

2. Mountain-range dominating the above peninsula, stretching for 660 ft. from the $\underline{ZARABAT}$ Mountains to the south eastern coast, overlooking the island of \underline{TARUH} .

 $\underline{\text{THADDEA}}\text{: }\mathit{Set.}$ Major city in the $\underline{\text{BAKHRAN STATES}},$ built on $\underline{\text{LAETIAN}}$ ruins (Pop. c. 62,000).

THAE: Pol. Set. Capital city of KASPIA, located along the course of the river TARAGEA. The city is a cultural one, seeing little foreign trade or military action, though has become a hub to its nobility, and is famed for its epic operas and concerts, and has a long history, going back to the days of Eldrian rule (Pop. c. 280,000).

THAELIN: Rui. Ancient gigantic double-pylon temple in the far north of WESTERN THANO, over 750-miles north of the northern POLAR CIRCLE, about 500-miles north west of the SEA OF AKRY. In its shadow stands a more recent fortress, dating back to the latter days of the FOURTH AGE, the people who built it long gone, only a multitude of gibbets and frozen corpses remaining in their wake.

THAENILLA: also 'the Cave of Crystals'. Geo. Expansive cavern system beneath the HENDECARCHIES of ATALLUA and STHAMAN, in MALAN, most noted for the gigantic crystals that can be found in its deep chambers. Many of the crystal monuments scattered around Malan originated in these caves.

THAERSHA: Geo. Hilly region in the c of KASPIA.

THAGGUA, THE BEAST: x. Myr. His. In the mythologies and ancient myths of the PANDAEMONIA, a SCION of the DEMIURGE VORROPOHAIAH said to be slumbering beneath the prone body of the Demiurge. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

THAGOT: Rui. Abandoned lighthouse in the west of ANDILUTH. Once guarding the passage into the harbours of LHARKA, the lighthouse is now abandoned, around 110-miles from the present coastline.

THAGRINN: For. Forest in the north east of CYHLAGHARR. The forest is ancient and is largely virginal, or at least it is untouched in the FIFTH AGE, save its peripheries that have been cut down. The OGHURS of Cyhlagharr, like the people of KORACHAN, are largely superstitious of forests and tend to give them a wide berth, which has allowed the Thagrinn to survive largely untouched.

THAIKIN: Set. Small city in the c north of the tribe of HAVATH in the far south east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 12,000).

THAIOT: Lake in the south west of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER, serving as a border between the tribes of TATRAS and OURANASSA.

THAJAII: Set. Settlement in the north east of ELEKHID. Its main industry is the mining of lapis for the use in paint and dye manufacture (Pop. c. 4.800).

THAL: Sea. Bay and estuary in the larger NÛN bay.

THALAL: Lake in the north west of the HENDECARCHY of ATALLUA, in the south east of MALAN. It forms a part of the course of the river NENA, itself a tributary of the larger river SIELL NA.

THALAN: Set. Settlement in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of PALUS, known for its horse ranches (Pop. c. 6,800).

THALARA: Rel. Arc. Religious monument in the north east of TAHALL.

THALASA: Pol. Soc. PATRICIAN HOUSE based in PELASGOS. The family gained its wealth following the rise of the KORACHANI EMPIRE as a mercantile house, trading across the SEA OF LISASSA, later rising to power in the 2nd millennium RM, after it established manufactories in the west of Pelasgos, which brought it much influence and power. Today its head is Archpatrician ORATON PERTHENIUS, who is also governor of Pelasgos, under appointment of THE SEVEN. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

THALASSA: Set. Settlement in TETHYSIA to the south east of the PANTHALASSA desert. It is known for its deep wells that draw water from natural reservoirs (Pop. c. 8,000).

THALAT: Ind. Set. Mining settlement in the north west of the tribe of ESSENIA, in the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. The city is a major source of iron in the region, making it a valuable city (Pop. c. 6,000).

THALEN ORIUS: m. Per. (B. 3948 RM) High-ranking member of the ARÂTHUAHI ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION, where he serves as a preserver of purity, overseeing the protection of historical sites and their preservation from ATRAMENTAL CORRUPTION. Thalen is renowned for his fierce work in preventing the Atramenta from claiming places of cultural and historical value.

THALI: also 'the City Undying'. Leg. Set. Mythic metropolis and capital of the CITIZERY OF THALI. The city forms part of KORACHANI myth and is mentioned in various forms in the SCRIPTURE OF SHADOW as the oldest and most magnificent city in the world, and is thought by theologians and historians to date back to the earliest days of mortal dominance in ELYDEN, and is attributable to the DEMIURGE NEITH (1.) and her children, though their influence there dwindled millennia past to be replaced by human dominance long before the rise of the Citizenry.

Little is known of the city, though it remains a thriving metropolis that commands one of the largest empires in extant Elyden (Pop. unknown).

THALL: Geo. Region in the north west of the JURRASI (2.) coast, north of the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region of ZOPISSA, characterised by the exposed metallic deposits, pitted and worn by the salty TARAMAR on whose shore they rest. By contrast, some miles off the coast are the untarnished metallic cap-stones of submerged pyramids, their sources unknown, though believed to date back to the THIRD AGE, possibly earlier.

Prior to the retreat of Elyden's seas the region was an island 8-miles off the coast of Jurras.

THALLEI: 1. Geo. Long shallow mountains in the north of SAMMAEA spreading across the border from the east of KHULL into the west of the TEMPLAR STATES. The region is known for its unstable ground and scree, which is indicative of an ancient age.

2. Geo. Mountain pass along the midspan of the above mountains $^{(L)}$ in the west of the TEMPLAR STATES.

THALN: Set. Small coastal city in the north of KARGAMA, overlooking the BAY OF JERIDA (Pop. c. 12,300).

THALOS PASS: Geo. Wide pass along the c of the SKAR Mountains in the east of SKAROS.

THALWAIN: Set. City in the east of Kommea (Pop. c. 38,000).

THAM: 1. Rvr. Delta of the river SEBBADDI, in the far west of KREM, in the south east of LLACHATUL.

2. Set. City in the c south of RAHENG (Pop. c. 63,800).

THAMAAZ: 1. Geo. Expansive plains dominating the south of THE SURRACH, in the north west of SAMMAEA, ranging from savannah in the north to desert in the south. It is known for its relatively dry climate, and the many small independent cities that pepper its lands, under the aegis of the city of Thamaaz⁽³⁾. In antiquity this entire area was a part of LHAUS domains, and some lhaus can still be found here, and some of their ancient ruins have even served as the foundations of settlements. The region is united by common worship of a mummified idol referred to as HIQARAST, roughly translated as 'Bearer of the Keys', and is thought to have been a missionary from the north. The IVORY MOON also features in the regions' culture and myths.

2. Pol. Political region in the south of THE SURRACH. Its controlling city is Thamaaz $^{(3)}$.

3. Sec. Dominant city in the eponymous region. It is one of the largest cities in THE SURRACH and controls trade in the immediate surroundings. Its existence is made possible in the arid region through the use of regulated wells (Pop. c. 141,000).

THAMAR: His. Pol. Tyranny that predates the present-day nation of TAMAR. Ruled for centuries by a ruthless caste of FIRMAMENTISTS called CAZHANS who rose to power in 843 RM after discovering ancient FIRMAMENTAL texts in around 750 RM. They ruled until 1319 RM, when the last of the Cazhans was killed after decades of strife. The decades following their overthrowing saw the noble house ELYRIA, their ancient ties to the KORACHANI EMPIRE long-forgotten, grow in prominence, becoming its rulers in 1354 RM, with the region taking on the name of THAMARAHA, PIT OF: Int. Myt. Geo. Pit in c north west of CUTH known for a hideous sound that emanates from it. Largely unexplored, it is thought to date back to the early days of mortal life, as featured in the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN, when the DEMIURGE NERGAAL was said to have imprisoned a CHTHONITHON in such a pit, in the territories of his tribe. Though unfounded, it is thought that Thamaraha is that pit.

THAMIN: Set. Major city in the c north of MHAROKK. It forms a vital link in the RED ROUTE and is known for its caravanserais and great markets (Pop. c. 7,000).

THAMO: Set. City in the south east of AEONAS. Its main industry is the smelting of iron that is mined in the CRITHON region. Ruins in the vicinity of the city attest to a late FOURTH AGE founding and middle FIFTH AGE writings claim that a GODSTONE^(1.) was once found here. If this is true, it has disappeared without a trace (Pop. c. 35,000).

THAMONO: Set. Coastal settlement in the south east of OPHIUSSA (Pop. c. 33,000).

THAMOS: Pol. Soc. Org. PATRICIAN HOUSE based in the city of KHADON, in KORACHAN. It has a political history, and its members are schooled in the intricacies of politics and diplomacy, with most going on the have healthy careers as diplomats, ambassadors, or in the LEAGUE OF PATRICIANS. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

 $\overline{\text{THAN}}$: 1. Geo. Large mesa in the c north east of $\overline{\text{THETIS}}$, on which stands an ancient pylon-fort⁽²⁾.

2. Mil. Str. Ancient pylon-fort located at the top of the eponymous mesa⁽¹⁾ in the ⁽²⁾. Its ruined halls were once home to a garrison until c. 1030 RM, when it was abandoned following an earthquake that toppled a large portion of the mesa, the rubble of which now rests at its base.

THANA: Cui. Cured fatty meat jerky that is rubbery and chewed for long periods of time. It is common in the BLOOD STATES in northern SAMMAEA, as well as JURRAS^(2.) and TARTAK amongst farmhands, cowboys, shepherds and workers, who chew on them, with one piece typically lasting them a working day.

THANAK: Set. Fortified coastal city in the north of LIDEA. It is built atop the ruin of a KORACHANI fortress, erected there when settlers first arrived there in 911 RM. It is now a centre of manufacturing, and is known for its drydocks (Pop. c. 42,000).

THANATOLOGICAL GARDENS: Int. Flo. Geo. Str. Private park within the noble's district of the city of Khadon, in Korachan. It is a cemetery and garden that is open daily to those (typically wealthy FREEMEN, PATRICIANS, and others with the means to afford it) with direct family buried within it. It is a means of bypassing the legal requirement within the Korachani empire of the body of any corpse to be donated to the manufacture of dross, and families pay the Mortuary Cult handsomely for the privilege of burying their dead here, and continue to do so for 100-year after the burial. The gardens are well-maintained by the Mortuary Cult through the interment payments and families are responsible for the upkeep of private crypts and mausoleums, many of which house many generations of dead.

THANATOS: also 'the Black Wastes'. Geo. Stony region in the south west of EREBETH that receives very little rain. It is a known repository of SOULSTONES, most of which are shattered or too old to be of interest.

THANAUR: Rvr. River in the north east of ARKOS⁽¹⁾, flowing north west for 280-miles from largely seasonal sources in the EHBOT and STYLITH Mountains.

THANDAPH: Set. Small city in the c south of the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT (Pop. c. 17,500).

THANE: 1. Pol. Ruling title of in FARIS.

2. Rnk. Mil. High-ranking military rank in SABIA, not to be confused with the ruling title of FARIS.

THANICA'S GUIDE TO HORRORS: also 'Thanica-I' Ephiaxin'. Vol.

Ancient treatise on the nature of HORRORS and ONEIRIC CREATURES that can be found within DREAMSCAPES across ELYDEN, written by the historian Thanica The work was compiled across decades of work and travel around the INNER SEA REGION and published in 999 RM to much scholarly acclaim, though the work was eventually banned by the MORÉHAN SANCTIFIED ORDER OF THE INQUISITION, with most copies seized and burnt by the BUREAU OF CENSORS.

Few copies survive publicly today, though it is believed that a handful may still be in private possession.

THANIT: Set. Fortified coastal city in the far west of the BARRIER LANDS, overlooking the GULF OF ESHIRON. Its port is a major exporter of rubies, most of which are sold to the west (Pop. c. 45,000).

THANJAR: Set. Settlement in the c north of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES (Pop. c. 8,000).

THANO: Dem. 'Thano'. Ntn. Nation in the north west of the continent of MENISCEA, east of the GULF OF VALUS, much of which is above the northern POLAR CIRCLE. The nation is divided into two distinct geographical portions that are divided by the SEA OF INGALAT, and are colloquially known as WESTERN and EASTERN THANO.

Its culture is noted for favouring the wearing of masks amongst all classes, with the nobility in particular wearing lavish headdresses and masks. Identity is a very private matter and to have ones mask removed in public is tantamount to someone in KORACHAN being stripped naked in public. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

THANO, EASTERN: Pol. The nation of THANO is separated into two by the SEA OF INGALAT, with the portion located to the west of the sea being commonly known as Eastern Thano.

THANO, WESTERN: Pol. The nation of THANO is separated into two by the SEA OF INGALAT, with the portion located to the west of the sea being commonly known as Western Thano.

THANOSANT: Rel. Rnl. Priests of the religion of LAX PORAR, that is worshipped in ANANTHUL.

THANT BALAUR: also 'the Hidden Forest'. For. Geo. Large expanse of caverns and sinkholes in c north of the OLD FOREST, known to those who have seen it as the Hidden Forest, after the heavy vegetation that grows where light strikes its many shafts and cavities. Some of its hollows are said to lead to the depths of the PRISON CARCERI.

THAO: Pol. Set. Capital city of BANT since 1305 RM (Pop. c. 186,750).

THAPAN: Int. Rui. Mummified sarcophagi on the northern face of the HETHA massif in the c of TARTAK. The sarcophagi are carved into niche high along the cliffs of the region and are thought to date back to the FOURTH AGE.

THAR: also 'the Tharran Road. Com. Geo. A relatively safe stretch of the SALT ROAD that runs for about 140-miles and links together the trade city of THRAYA in SUMA'YA with the city of DUN SZASS in ARKOS (1.). That takes the form of a long gully-like formation, passing through the rockier regions of northern ARAAHT, though it has been known to attract bandits, it is the safest passage between Suma'ya and the Arkosian cities, due to its distance from the aanth that dominate western Araaht and the ATRAMENTAL influences that profligate in other areas of the plains, leaving the pass of Thar relatively safe.

THARA: Set. Settlement in the south west of AZAZEM, in the plains of KARAFFAR. The settlement is one of many producers of ALOARE in the region (Pop. c. 2,800).

THARACASSA: Sea. Sea in the east of LLACHATUL, to the south of LIMOTH^(I.) and the PANTHEON ISLES. Its waters are known for their many atolls and shallows that make navigation very difficult. Indeed, the sea is a graveyard of sea vessels from various ages, their brave explorers claimed by the rough seas.

THARACHAN: Geo. Region of large menhir-like boulders flanking the river TARKA some miles north of the city of TARKUSH. The region is believed by some scholars to be the remnants of an ancient culture that once thrived in the coastal region of south western AZAZEM.

THARANT: Set. Settlement in the c west of VAALK, in the hills of APHAALK, known for its expansive brick yards (Pop. c. 7,200).

THARAPHOTA: Set. Major city in the west of AKANTHRA situated along the route of the NACRE ROAD. It is one of the main strongholds of the NACRE LEAGUE, and is known for its vast warehouses and storage yards, where landships restock before continuing their journeys (Pop. c. 350,000).

THARASHE: Set. Small city in the c south of KARGAMA. Its main industry is the training of falcons, which are used across Kargama to keep its city squares free of vermin (Pop. c. 11,900).

THARDAIA: Pol. District in the CITY OF ALMAGEST. It is home to the REPUBLIC COLLEGE OF ASTRONOMY.

THARIA: Ind. Set. Mining region in the south of the SKAR Mountains, in the east of SKAROS, known for its iron and copper reserves (Pop. c. 2,600).

THARN: Dem. 'Tharnian'. His. Ntn. Ancient culture that occupied what is now the far east of VAALK and the north west of MHAROKK, of said to have crumbled in –1250 RM, in the early FIFTH AGE.

THARNITT: Set. City-manufactory in the south east of PHYRR, in the southern face of the MOROSIGHI Mountains. The city is a labyrinth of dark, soot-covered structures that cling precariously to the mountainside, connected by a network of winding paths and rickety walkways. Its economy is centred around the extraction and processing of iron, which is used in the IMPERIARCH'S war machines.

The city is caked in a thick smog, which has led to a unique culture where the absence of natural light serves as both a symbol of oppression and a source of pride, though whispers of rebellion occasionally echo through the tunnels, but the presence of the Imperiarch's enforcers ensures that such sentiments are swiftly crushed (Pop. c. 18,000).

THARORAT: Geo. Expansive mountain-range dominating the central expanse of the MALANI HENDECARCHY of NHORA, stretching across the border east into the far west of TISARA. It is known for its fantastical rock formations, particularly in its north eastern face.

The tell-tale signs of ancient stone carvings and pictograms can be seen, but these are weathered and decayed by the passing of time, indicating their extreme age.

THARRAN ROAD, THE: see THAR.

- THASTARO: Set. Shanty settlement in the far south of VENTHIR, close to the border with SARAGOS (Pop. c. 8,800).
- THAT: Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTAL feature in the north of MHAROKK, 20-miles from the southern hills of the SICHAAL Mountain. The feature is around 2,500 square-miles and is known for electrical storms and for twisted glass formations that emerge from blackened ground.

The region is categorised as a MODERATE THREAT by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

- 'THAT WHICH CAN BE TOPPLED BY THE TRUTH SHOULD
 BE: Soc. Lan. Common saying in KHULL, often attributed to its INQUISITORS, but which is commonly spoken across its territories by all its people.
- THATALAN: Rui. Colossi in the north west of AZAZEM, in the southern foothills of the CHACTHORNYS Mountains. They are relics of the short-lived nation of HRIDAN and were carved from grey granite, shaped to elicit memories of the DEMIURGES. They are now ignored, their faces destroyed by IMPERIAL ICONOCLAST centuries ago.
- THATHAREA: Set. City in the c south of KASPIA. It is a mercantile centre, and trades south with the TEMUJAN enclave of KEILA (Pop. c. 45,000).
- THATHURSHOLL: 1. also 'the Shattered Citadel'. Rui. Bastion in the south west of the TARAHID ANNEXES, built in 455 RM. The bastion was built to guard against the unknown wastes to the south west, though its use was unwarranted and it was abandoned to rot in c. 1500 RM.
 - 2. Set. City in the south west of the TARAHID ANNEXES, that arose around the ruin of the so-called Shattered Citadel⁽¹⁾. Many of its structures are built from the recycled materials from the bastion (Pop. c. 60,300).
- THAUMAS: Geo. One of two ridges, the other being RHAECAS, forming a crater around lake ATHOS in the west of PELASGOS. The ridge is 210-miles wide and forms the southern-most part of the CALDERAN Mountains with the ISSOS valley between the two.
- THAUMATURGE-KINGS: Pol. Rulers of the TETHYSIAN island-colony of SAUL (1.) and its namesake city-state (2.). They rose to power c. 2100 RM, where they eventually led Saul to independence, which lasted until 3532 RM, after which they joined with the mainland once more, becoming regents of the island-colony of Saul.

They are powerful FIRMAMENTISTS, working closely with SPIRITS and the OTHERWORLD. In Saul, they and their guards are the only ones allowed to ride horses, depictions of which are also used in their iconography.

THAUMATURGY: Sup. Rnk. A particular SPHERE of FIRMAMENTAL SHAPING with ill-defined properties similar to those of generic OCCULTISM or SHAMANISM. It is commonly practiced in tribal societies or cultures in which priests who are able to accomplish feats of thaumaturgy hold positions of power. It is not considered a sphere within the KORACHANI EMPIRE, and there is no corresponding MINASTERIA (2.).

The Firmamental phenomenon known as the LIGHT UNDYING is most commonly manifested by thaumaturges. See Vol IV: Spheres of Shaping.

- THAUN: Set. Coastal city in the north west of ALLASAN, overlooking the SEA OF AZAM (Pop. c. 31,000).
- THAUR: 1. Rvr. Wide river in ARKOS^(L) and the north of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER that flows north west for over 750-miles from hundreds of sources in Arkos, Mulciber and the HAAGEN Mountains before emptying into the SEA OF ERIA.
 - 2. also 'the Riverlands'. Geo. A region in the c of ARKOS⁽¹⁾, dominated by the river Thaur^(1,1) and fertile steep valleys. Between c. 490 and 534 RM it was home to occupying AUERENI forces and their allies, most of the settlements and structures in the region either destroyed or taken by the invaders. By c. 1400 RM the region had become heavily settled, with many small towns appearing there, feeding the larger CITADEL MOUNTS.
- THAURIR: Geo. Mountain-chain dominating the north west of ALMAGEST, south of the MARMARA Massif, its sheer granite peaks partially responsible for lack of contact with KOLCHIS.
- THAUTH: Int. Str. Ancient idol in the region of HAVATH in the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER.

- THAVANA: 1. Geo. Region in the c north west of the TEMPLAR STATES famed for its clothing and textiles industries.
 - 2. Set. Small city in the c north west of the TEMPLAR STATES, in the region of the same name^(1.) along the course of the river GALLIMORA (Pop. c. 12,800).
- THAVAR: Sct. City in the south east of GYZHA, along the course of the river DITHAN (Pop. c. 42,000).
- THAZAKHA: Geo. Plains in c north west of LAASKHA, dominated by subterranean DUSTSTONE formations, which have resulted in many sinkholes leading to caverns beneath. The region was once the most populous in Laaskha, and LLACHATULI KORACHAN overall, though many of the settlements have collapsed into the shallow tunnels after collapsing.
- THAZAR: Set. Small city in the c south west of VALBAR^(2.). Its people are skilled hunters and trappers (Pop. c. 18,000).
- THEAFASS: Sec. Small city in the west of OPHIUSSA. It was once coastal, though fortuitously, with the retreat of ELYDEN'S seas, it found itself along the course of the river NUSISI (Pop. c. 17,600).
- THEAN: Soc. Arc. Amphitheatres in LYRIDIA where the SIBYL and her AUGURS 'perform', receiving drug-induced visions while ASTRALLY PROJECTING.
- THEBAER: ancient historian and author of Retreat of the Ice, which documents an ancient time (possibly encompassing the end of the SECOND AGE, the subsequent FADING, and the dawn of the THIRD AGE.
- THEDDEN: Rui. Abandoned settlement in contested lands to the c west of the tribe of AUEREN, in the far north of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER.
- THEIA: Set. Small city in the c west of TETHYSIA. It was once a major source of iron, with iron mining dating back to at least -1000 RM. However, the onset of the IRON CATASTROPHIES in c. 1030 RM saw its sources of iron corrupted beyond use, and the settlement waned as a result (Pop. c. 13,400).
- THEIBE: Geo. Once-coastal cliffs and pillars in the east of TETHYSIA that are now landlocked, surrounded by coastal savannah where the bleached remnants of coral reefs lead to sea.
- THEL: Rui. City in the north west of PNESSA, close to the border with MULCIBER. It was abandoned in c. 3800 RM after an increase in ATRAMENTAL ACTIVITY in the region of PURULEA.
- THELEMA: Edu. Str. Largest college of GNOTH, located just outside BISMUTH.
- THELER: Com. Set. Trade city in the c of BASSORAH^(2.). It forms part of the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 34,800).
- THELIS: Pol. Set. Capital city of HARITH, located in the c south of the nation (Pop. c. 120,700).
- THELLS: Set. Settlement in the south of the HENDECARCHY of Haton in the c of \underline{MALAN} . (Pop. c. 9,000).
- THELODIL: 1. Sea. Lagoon off the northern coast of the island-nation of OD MEGINNAS. It is around 100-miles wide, and is bordered by various islands, the largest of which is also known as THELODIL⁽²⁾.
- 2. Geo. Island off the northern coast of OD MEGINNAS (1.).
- 3. Mil. Str. Large coastal fortress in the far north of $\underline{OD\ MEGINNAS}^{(L)}$, on the island of the same name. It guards various coastal settlements in the region.
- THEMANA: also 'the Queencity'. Set. Major city in the south west of IMEAL.

 The name 'Queencity' is an ancient moniker, from a time before the rise of the IMPERATORS, when it was an independent city ruled by a hereditary queen (Pop. c. 250,000).
- THEMAS: mining settlement in J'THANA (Pop. c. 6,200).
- THEMISTARCHUS GATTAR: (B. 2783 D. 2839 RM) famed KORACHANI archaeologist from the city of HERESI. He travelled far, and became famous for the ancient tombs and temples that he explored across the KORACHANI PENINSULA, as well PLAGI ruins in the UMBRA SOKHAR and the north of KHARKHARADONTIS. He died rich and beloved by the people of Korachan for his daring exploits, which were fictionalised in small serials that were popular across the middle and upper classes in the empire.

THEODOLITE OF ILONA: His. Obj. An ancient theodolite (a surveying instrument used to measure vertical and horizontal angles) that was assembled in the city of ILONA (2-), PELASGOS.

It is now believed to be the oldest known surviving theodolite in the Korachani empire, and is now kept on display in the MUSEUM OF CURIOSITIES in DEOCHAN, KORACHAN.

THEODOMUS ARALLOCH: Pol. His. Famed historical ARCHNEGUS of AETHIOS, after which most subsequent rulers were measured.

THEOLOGIAN: Rnk. Scholars of the UNDYING MACHINE and myths and history surrounding him. During the early days of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE (c. 1 – 200 RM) they fulfilled more of a philosopherrole, probing into the nature of the Undying Machine and the DEMIURGES, but as knowledge of the Demiurges was buried, they became more scholarly, absorbed into the Church to act on behalf of its propaganda, acting as loremasters and historians.

THEOMACHY: Myt. His. In the ancient history and mythology of ELYDEN, a phrase used to signify a conflict between the DEMIURGES within the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN. This is not a specific time or period but used in general whenever two or more Demiurges were in conflict with each other, such as the chaos that surrounded the construction and eventual destruction of the BRIDGE OF ETERNITIES. See Vol IV: the Mythologia Elyden.

THEOPA: Set. Settlement in the region of HAPANTHA in the c east of THE SURRACH (Pop. c. 5,700).

THEPHARAPH: Set. Small coastal city on the island of HAR FARRASH in the north of SEPAHAUNAT (Pop. c. 11,400).

THEPISRA: Set. Settlement in the east of KHAMID, close to the coast and south of lake AKHOUS. Its ancient history is now remembered for the great acts of philanthropy its people did following the CATACLYSM OF KHAMID. Its main industry is BLOODSTONE mining and it is surrounded by the giant pillars of ancient aqueducts which have been converted to watch towers (Pop. c. 10,000).

THERASH: 1. See THERASHIAN EMPIRE.

2. His. Set. Ancient city in the north west of SAMMAEA, in the far east of extant SATHAII, and capital of the THERASHIAN EMPIRE. It was abandoned in 902 RM following devastating volcanic eruptions in the south of the empire and is remains ruined and buried to this day.

THERASHIAN EMPIRE: Dem. 'Therashian'. His. Ntn. Ancient FIFTH AGE empire that existed in the north west of SAMMAEA between c. 120 – 900 RM. It originated in the city of THERASH in present-day SATHAII beginning in c. 120 RM and spread rapidly east over the next decades into what are today the north east of the CITIZENRY OF THALI, the north west of the VESPERTINE LEAGUE, the south of SEPAHAUNAT, and reaching as far east as present-day KHULL (then the nation of LIN GOOL). In 338 RM many of its vassal states and territories were officially dissolved in a major political restructuring of the empire that saw it divided into dozens of separate jurisdictions. This saw many native cultures eventually go extinct as they were overtaken by Therashian customs.

It enjoyed its peak in c. 750 RM, though collapsed to its own excesses and a series of volcanic eruptions that devasted its central cities. Various members of ruling council were killed in 902 RM during massed riots in the capital, which eventually led to the fragmentation of the government amid various military coups that left the remnants of the empire divided amongst five warlords and tyrants, whose territories would eventually become known as KETHAR, SATÍ, AELOR, INGHULL, and VESPER.

Throughout all this time, the religion of Therash, known as AELORANISM, remains strong, continuing to be worshipped by the disparate people that emerged from the collapse of the Therashian empire, particularly those in Aelor (After which it is named), and Inghull.

It was founded by the tyrant SONI-VAPHRA, whose mounted shock troops swept east across the Coast of north western Sammaea, subjugating various peoples during four decades of carnage, until the death of Soni in extant Khull. His death led to the foundation of the VAPHRAN DYNASTY, which ruled unopposed until 901 RM, when the death of his heirless descendent left the empire in chaos. See Vol III: Extinct States.

THEREON: 1. m. Myt. His. Per. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, a SCION of the DEMIURGE ARIMASPI, commonly said to be a sadistic hunter and cannibal of other scions and influential mortals in the ancient world. In most accounts he is said to have been killed and eaten by Arimaspi himself as punishment for his savage hunting and consuming of other scions.

He is worshipped in Cisneria in corrupted form^(2,) See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

2. Rel. Dei. Deity in the present-day region of CISNERIA, worshipped as a twisted version of the above SCION⁽¹⁾. The people of Cisneria claim to be descended from Thereon and worship him in a corrupted form, in which he is portrayed in seven different aspects, each represented by an animal that is common in the region. These animals are: BERMION the sabretoothed deer, DISLMA the white owl, GYSTAR the bear, HOMMAL the polar fox, KRAKYR the white wolf, KRISLOR the hog, and SKULFUR the giant elk, with each embodying different characteristics. Each of them major CLANS of Cisneria has as its emblem one of these different aspects, influencing its deeds and beliefs.

The worshippers of Thereon are known for their practice of sacramental cannibalism in his name, where people, often from troubled backgrounds, volunteer to be sacrificed and to have their flesh consumed raw during mass on days of religious importance. Their skeletons are then preserved and prepared, clad in ornate jewelled armour that is interred in lavish family shrines, where proud family members can remain in contact with their prestigious martyr, who becomes a saint of the church. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

THERIANTHROPE: Sup. Mor. KORACHANI name for grotesque ATRAMENTALLY-WARPED beings that dwell within the KHARKHARADONTID wastes and other regions of Atramental corruption, which are a meld of mortal and animal, with anthropomorphic features. Typically barbaric, they live in loose tribal structures if that, and roaming the land, seeking prey.

THERIFI: Set. Settlement in the south of SKAROS. It is a source of raw UMBRA in the region (Pop. c. 6,000).

THERIOCEPHON: see THERIANTHROPE.

THERNAX: Flo. Poi. ATRAMENTAL flora possibly a corrupted form of giant cactus. Only one example of this tree has been found, some 600-miles south of the border between KARAKHAS and PARAIYA border in the UMBRA SOKHAR wastes.

The tree takes the form of a gigantic fleshy tendril, well over 100-ft. long, and 20-ft. wide at the base. The thing's fleshy trunk is covered in large pearl-like growths and gigantic poison-dripping downward-facing thorns. It tapers into a whip-like tendril that writhes as though of its own volition. The land around it is strewn with the bones of all manner of creatures and protruding roots, and it has been the focus of some etheri manhood odysseys, where daredevils seek out the skulls of exotic and malformed creatures as prizes.

The pearl-like tumours along its surface resemble historical and mythological accounts of SOUL-PEARLS, though are somewhat smaller.

THEROPS: Plr. 'theropsin'. Fau. In the system of CLASSIFICATION OF TAXONOMY devised by the polymath SUZIV in 3254 RM, Therops are the land creatures of ELYDEN. The largest category of creatures, which encompasses all land creatures, from mice to INDRIKS, horses to AUROCHS, OGSUASU and CAMELOPARDS and many others. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

THERYAPOS: Set. Small city on the island of KATHARA off the western-coast of the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS (Pop. c. 12,800).

THESA: Set. Settlement in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of NICAEA. It is a noted producer of tobacco (Pop. c. 2,200).

THESMOTH: Sup. Geo. Mild ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region in the north of SAMMAEA, along the border between THE SURRACH, OPHAR and TRAKIA.

The region is categorised as a $\underline{\text{MODERATE THREAT}}$ by the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI}}$ $\underline{\text{INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES}}.$

THESSAIIA: Set. Coastal city in the north east of EREBETH known for its harbour and mercenaries (Pop. c. 35,800).

THET: Set. Settlement in the west of KHAR NADUL. Its main industry is the mining of lapis lazuli (Pop. c. 7,300).

THETET: Rui. Abandoned settlement in the c north east of THETIS. It was one of the first areas settled by the followers of KATHISIS in c. 1575 RM.

THETIS: Dem. 'Thetishi'. Ntn. Arid nation populated by a mix of descendants of the early FIFTH AGE empires of PHOL EGEDDA and RTHEI^(2.), and RHEAN immigrants. Located to the east of EASTERN LLACHATUL, it is positioned to the south of TETHYSIA, and is dominated by the desert of RTHEI^(1.), though the coastal climate is more temperate and home to many large and prosperous cities.

At the time of the PROPHET KATHISIS' great exodus from Rhea in c. 1552 RM into the north east, Thetis was largely vacant, a rapidly desertifying savannah that was populated by diverse groups of nomads. These nomads travelled the land in large family groups of up to 200 individuals, famed for their large yurts that housed entire families and, which could be disassembled and moved at short notice. These nomads would later become known as the NEMIS.

Kathisis sojourned there for a short while, in the area surrounding the ruined monoliths of $\underline{KHYTER}^{(1.)}$ in 1573 RM, though some of his followers chose to stay behind, settling the area permanently. Due to this, the two subsequent nations of Tethysia and Thetis share much in common, though they have since diverged since their founding. Both cultures would oppose native populations and later mix with their remnants, assimilating parts of their culture over the subsequent years of their dominance.

Between 1592 - c. 1700 RM the people who settled this land expanded north and west to encompass the Rthei savannah, though their efforts at populating it were repelled by the rapid desertification of the land. Though a few cities survive in the region to this day, there are many more ruins of aborted attempts at colonising the region by the Thetishi people, or earlier ruins of the ancient Rthei people. The most successful of these cities was Khyter⁽²⁾, which survives to this day.

Though Khyter became the site of a new city where the Rhean immigrants settled down, they did not gain a foothold as rapidly as their brethren in Tethysia did. Over the next 2 centuries they made attempts to colonise the region, even proclaiming a ruler – known as the DEIARCH – in 1598 RM, but the attempts failed. The worsening climate and rapidly encroaching Rthei desert thwarted their plans. By then they had become allies of the nemis nomads and many of the Rhean descendants became accepted into their culture. A few scattered cities emerged around the coast, though they did not coalesce into a unified state until c. 2450 RM, at which point the region first became known as MINTHA, united by the Deiarch.

Over the next centuries the Rthei desert continued to expand, leading to an increasing schism between the sedentary Minthan and the nomadic nemis, the latter of which adapted more readily to the changing climate. By c. 2860 RM Mintha fractured under the strains of the changing landscape even as the nemis resettled abandoned cities close to the desert. They would settle them in winter as protection against increasingly inimical sandstorms, where they would trade with each other and form long-lasting relations. In summer they would emerge and travel up and down the sedentary cities of the coastline, bringing their culture, news and trade with them. Over time their culture became the prevalent one, with the custom of settling in the cities for 4 months of the year becoming common, with most inner cities built specifically for this purpose, with vast empty spaces (allowing space for nomads to occupy) situated behind high walls that guard against sandstorms.

The name Thetis was first used in 3133 RM following the construction of the city ITHITOTH, which remains capital to this day. Though many outsiders consider the nemis nomads to be little more than nomadic tinkerers, the truth could not be more different, and they now form the backbone of Thetishi culture, despite them only spending a third of each year, on average, behind city walls. They are at the heart of the regions' culture, bringing trade, news and crafts with them as they travel, though this goes unnoticed to foreigners who usually stop at the coastal cities and regard them as uncultured itinerants.

The nation comprises around sixty self-governing oligarchic states – 22 major, and forty minor. Each state is ruled a LACARCH tribal leader, often by proxy through VIZIERS $^{(2)}$ who are trained since childhood for the role. The smallest states may contain only a handful of cities, whereas the largest comprise large tracts of land all they contain; and together they convene in the capital of Ithitoth, where they rule on major legislatures, often via their trusted Viziers.

The nation reveres the pantheon of KATHISIS, though like Tethysia, worship of the PROPHET KATHISIS deified has since surpassed that of the rest of the pantheon, though the desert deity HRUNDU retains a following. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

THEUMA, THE OCCULTIST-QUEEN: Pol. Ruler of the city of ERUK in MHAROKK.

THEURGE: 1. Rel. Sup. Rnk. A priest who is also a SHAPER within the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. They use their abilities to perform 'acts of faith' to inspire the laity, who often misinterpret them as miracles. These abilities are promoted by the church and interpreted by most HELOTS as the will of the UNDYING MACHINE channelled through the actions of the priest, though those of schooling and who are well-versed in shaping know that the Undying Machine has nothing to do with the actions of theurges, who remain influential and charismatic members of the Three Churches and whose deeds are important in keeping the people enthralled by the church.

2. Phil. In the Kremi philosophy of the Way of Megillar, Theurges are spiritual leaders. They emerged by c. 2200 RM, after the Way of Megillar spread throughout Krem after the writing of the Megillar Scrolls in c. 2080 RM. They are guides to those undertaking the Way of Megillar, offering spiritual aid to those faltering along the Way. Their goal is to help the people of Krem reach enlightenment, so that they are at peace with themselves when their spirits pass on, facilitating their rebirth as OTHERWORLDERS.

THEUSAMAT: Pol. Set. Major city in the far south of IMEAL, along the northern shore of the BAY OF INDIRILL (Pop. c. 2,250,000).

THIA: 1. Lak. Lake in the south of J'THANA, largely surrounded by the century plant forest of MALU.

2. Rui. Ruin of an ancient ACTANORSI city, in the far south of I'THANA. The city was abandoned in c. 1200 RM following an outbreak of ATRAMENTAL PLAGUE, and the southern advance of AANTHI territories.

THIADA: Geo. Island in the far west of the CORAL BARONIES off the south western coast of SAMMAEA.

THIAMIT: Mil. Str. Mud-fortress in the far north east of RHINOCOLOURA, close to the river APENA, bordering the plateau of KHUNRATH to the south and the plains of AROMUR.

THIANUR: Int. Geo. Caverns in the far north west of Vârr. They were discovered by prospectors in c. 940 RM, and later explorations revealed ancient cave paintings depicting what are thought to be LHAMACTHOI.

THIAS: Set. Small coastal city in the south of the emirate of LIMOTH^(1.) in Limoth^(2.) (Pop. c. 12,500).

THIDEA: Rui. Once a great city in the west of LAASKHA, along the shore of the BAY OF ASHARUTH. The retreat of the STRAIT OF SKAROS, left the bay a salty lake and the city, once a prosperous port city, landlocked and greatly diminished. It remains now as a ruin, its crumbling edifices half-buried by the dust that has come to dominate the region, the shells of old ships littering the surroundings like old fossils.

THIFAN: For. Scrub forest in the north of VÂRR, to the south west of the VARRACHON Mountain. The woodlands there are shunned, due to local legends regarding the cursed mountain.

THIG: 1. Geo. Salt basin in the c west of the DESOLATION OF ASTUDAN. The salt basin is all that remains of an ancient lake that has been dry since any mention of the region.

2. Rui. The ruin of a once-great city that grew rich from its pure salt fields. Little now remains of its crumbling domes.

THILLEA: Rel. Set. Temple-city in the c north east of the HENDECARCHY of DERAEIA, in the north east of MALAN (Pop. c. 50,000).

THION HUDOR: Set. Major city in the south of GNOTH, bordering the southern shore of lake IMAGA (Pop. c. 100,000).

THIOPHOSS: Geo. Vast savannah in the far south east of ADHERA to the south east of the SHAKHURAN Mountains. It is famous for a large historical battle that took place in 2532 RM, in which queen YASSMINA I of RAMIS marched at the head of a large army to meet her many foes from the south east. Though she was victorious, Ramis would collapse within a century, and Yassmina I was considered the last truly great monarchy of the kingdom.

THIPHILANIA OF ANI: (B. 3979 RM) Pol. Present queen of MECHABET, acting as steward in the name of PARTHIS.

THIR: Oas. Oasis in the ANTENAS plains in the north of METHUMN that is commonly used by merchants travelling between the settlements of NUAANAN in the north and AHEMMAGHRA in the south.

THIRD AGE OF MOTAL LIFE, the: also 'the Third Age'. His. In the mythology and ancient history of ELYDEN, the Fourth of Five ages spanning the mythic history of ELYDEN, as described in the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN. It is characterised by the spread and diversification of the MORTAL PEOPLES following the thwarting of the construction of the BRIDGE OF ETERNITIES in the SECOND AGE, and the DEMIURGES coming to the realisation that they are no longer divine beings, and that they will perish without the belief of mortals.

Many Demiurges indeed 'die' during this age, their bodies falling inert and fossilising without the worship of mortals. Some eventually return to a semblance of life as mortals come to worship them once more, but most never recover from their torpor. See Vol IV: the Mythologia Elyden.

THIRD WAR OF FAITH see WAR OF FAITH, THIRD.

THIRTEEN TRAILS OF THE LEGEND MAGHORA, the: Leg. Myt. His. In the history of TEMUJA, the trials that is ancestral FOUNDER and uniter went through, celebrated by its people. The trials are represented in a large mural in the council chamber beneath the CRYSTAL PALACE in DUARIAHAHN.

The trials are: the Birth; the Hunt of the Great Boar Golan; the Afterfeast; the Dream of the Three Trails; the Sojourn; the Lady; the Vision; the Gatherings of the Chieftains; the Meeting by the Crater; the Giving of the Gifts; the Great Quest; the Slaying of the Gorgon; the Death.

THISATHON: Geo. Mountain range in the c south west of THE SURRACH. It is most well-known for its devastating volcanic eruptions in 2759 RM, that devastated the empire of SELAHIM, causing it to fragment 2-years later.

THISICA: Sea. Small sea in the south west of the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS.

THISICON: 1. Geo. Island of the Free-Isles OF PELASGOS, and the south western-most inhabited island of the Free-Isles.

2. Set. City in the eponymous island in the $\underline{\text{FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS}}$ (Pop. c. 16,500).

THITAR: Mus. Obj. String instrument that is played by SHIE. It is very long and narrow and have 11 strings in 3 sets — one long set of 5 that run the length of the instrument and two sets of 3, one on either end. The 5 main strings are controlled by the secondary limbs, and each of the sets of three is played by the primary left and right arms.

Non-shie can play the instrument but their range of motion is severely limited, and it is effectively a different instrument in their hands. It originated in the FOURTH AGE empire of THYM and remains common in nations that inherited its lands, though has since spread to most lands in which shie are now found.

THITHIR: Int. Rui. Charnel crypt in the c of EZASUH^(2.) where ancient practitioners of the PENTATAELI religion stored the remains of those eaten in religious rites. The crypt is hewn from the rock of the region and contains thousands of niches, each containing metal canopic jars with embalmed remains.

THIVO: Set. Settlement in the c north west of the TEMPLAR STATES. It is a major producer of cotton (Pop. c. 4,800).

THIY ZOTLATT: Int. Arc. Ancient geometric monument in the c of NOAVATUR, created from a single block of untarnished metal that glimmers as though illuminated from within then the sun strikes it.

THIYASAR: Set. Small city in the east of NOAVATUR (Pop. c. 12,000).

THLOLOT: Pol. Soc. Tribe in the north west of MULCIBER, in the GROWING MOUNTAINS, in the north east of SAMMAEA. It is a major producer of rock salt and granite.

THOAGHUSH: Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region in the c west of the UMBRA SOKHAR.

The region is categorised as a Moderate threat by the Korachani Institute of Atramental Studies.

THOCA: See. Small coastal city in the east of EZASUH⁽²⁾. It is a major fishing centre (Pop. c. 16,000).

THOCZHEIL: (B. 3373 – D. 3449 RM) Rel. Guru and founder of the CULT

OF THE DREAMING GOD in OKKHAM, following the appearance of the DREAMSCAPE of EKON OSSYL in c. 3395 RM. His teachings spread across Okkham between 3418 – 3425 RM, after which it became recognised as a state religion.

THOKASI: For. Forested area in the east of PARTHIS, though it was originally in the north of the TARAHID ANNEXES where it was logged almost into extinction. Logging works in the area slowed to a near-halt in c. 2200 RM.

THOKKAR: Geo. Mountains in the c north of VALBAR^(2.).

THONAMIG: Geo. Canyon in the west of ALLASAN stretching nearly 100-miles from a fork in the river CTHONA. The canyon was once part of the river though its course brought it in contact with softer rock that slowly moved it north, cutting the stretch of the Thonamig off, leaving it dry, even as a new course was formed for the river to the north west.

The canyon ranges in width from 1,000-ft to just over 1.5-miles and winds south west to the coast where it flattens. Its sides are steep and as high as 200-ft, with few known crossing points, the largest of which is LAACHOM near the western coast of Allasan.

THONAS: Set. Settlement in the north east of JURRAS⁽²⁾, where the famous red granite of Jurras is quarried (Pop. c. 4,500).

THONUS: His. Arc. Ancient runic standing stones in the hills of the north eastern MARINVYAAL forest in KOLCHIS. The stones predate the present Kolchisi culture and are thought to date to the FADING following the FOURTH AGE.

THORODOT: Rvr. River in the east of VALBAR⁽²⁾. It flows south east for 425-miles from sources in the southern OLTHARUN Mountains and the THOKKAR hills before meeting the coast at the BAY OF AMASIS.

THORTIS: Geo. Island off the northern coast of VALBAR⁽²⁾. It is relatively flat and featureless and covered in permafrost and ice fields.

THOT SODGA: Set. City in the south east of CHEIRA (Pop. c. 40,000).

THOTA: Geo. Cliffs in the far east of KASPIA, overlooking the SEA OF IALCUS.

THOLAKKOS: Set. Settlement in the west of the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS mainland (Pop. c. 17,200).

THOLOT: Pol. Soc. Tribe in the north east of MULCIBER, in the GROWING MOUNTAINS, in the north east of SAMMAEA.

THOLOTH, the: Rui. Tower in AVARANOM, central SAMMAEA, known for a hewn hemispherical chamber on which are carved the NORTHERN HEMISPHERE'S stars and constellations.

 $\underline{THOLUBIED}$. Rel. Rnk. Priests who tend to the dome-shrines of the \underline{HIGH} and $\underline{LOW\text{-}EMPIRES}$.

THOLUS: PIr. 'Tholusin'. Rel. Soc. Str. Dome-shrine common in the gigantic bureaucratic edifies of the HIGH- and LOW-EMPIRES, fulfilling a role similar to that of roadside shrines in more rural communities. These dome-shrines are found along intersections in large, often miles-long, corridors. A tholus is usually hollow, allowing faithful to worship alongside the THOLUBIED (dome priest) allotted to maintain it.

THON: Mil. Str. Fortress in the western foothills of the SACHAR highlands in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of EDICULE^(1.). The fortress' foundations are carved from the rocks of the region and its high tower can look west across the river ROHOTHA, into TAMAR.

THORANT: Set. Major city in the c of AHRISHEN, along the course of the river ARESH(²⁾, where it joins with the east of lake NAIDA. It grew from a small river port where flat-hulled boats designed for navigating rivers that could not enter the larger waters of the Naida could be stored, and cargo and travellers could be switched to larger vessels capable of traversing the near 300-mile length of the lake.

THOUSAND-EYE FOREST: see OFANIMAH.

THOVA: Ser. City in the west of the HENDECARCHY of MYEIN in the west of MALAN. It maintains close relations with SAUA, and has a large embassy as well as a large district that is inhabited by Sauan expats (Pop. c. 35,000).

THRACE: His. Nm. Ancient FOURTH AGE nation that existed in the north of SAMMAEA in what are the present-day north of TARTAK, the far south of JURRAS⁽²⁾, and extending east into KHURAUR and the west of KARAKHAS.

Its people were known as expert horsemen and archers, though little trace remains of their culture today. A few ruins remain today along the course of the river KHARAD, though there are largely crumbled beyond recognition today, their remains plundered for use in nearby constructions, such as bridges and towers, themselves now millennia old. See Vol III: Extinct States.

THRACIAN OGHUR: see OGHUR, THRACIAN.

THRAYA: Set. Fortified city in the south east of SUMA'YA. The town appeared in c. -300 RM in what was at the time the south of DHAMATEA, and it served as a small caravanserai, linking what little trade then existed between Dhamatea and the CITADEL MOUNTS, in particular forming close bonds with the city-state of COLYIS early in its life. Though it never grew much in this time, it was prosperous and its shallow-sided citadel protected the STERHBEL pass to the south west – the only navigable landroute south into the Citadel Mounts. The city is one of few to have survived the Atramental taint that, starting in c. -190 RM, left Dhamatea depopulated and corrupted before its unification with DHEA in -29 RM as the nation of BA'AKH.

Following the unification of Ba'akh, Thraya enjoyed a short period of growth, with refugees and survivors of the ATRAMENTAL outbreak that had devastated Dhamatea flocking to it; though it never really prospered under Ba'akhi rule. The town only really began to grow following the appearance of the KORACHANI EMPIRE and its appropriating of nations around THE INNER SEA left Ba'akh with less trade relations (Korachan unwilling to trade with many nations outside its borders) in the north, forcing it to trade south and east with the Citadel Mounts and even more distant places, such as Aethios and RHINOCOLOURA. The city grew around its large shallow-sided citadel, its vaulted caravanserais increasing in number and size to accommodate the increased trade, though this too died down following Korachan's invasion of the Citadel Mounts in 352 RM, though trade was re-established following Korachan's abandonment of the Citadel Mounts in 573 RM (after which they became known as EHBOT). This time would not last long, as Korachan turned its attentions from Ehbot to Ba'akh, leading to the nations' subjugation in 634 RM, an act what ended trade with outside nations. Following this time, Korachan largely ignored Thraya, for it was of no strategic or resourceful value to the occupying nation, though trade with DUN SZASS resumed in c. 650 RM.

In c. 1250 RM the land around Thraya experienced a darkening, believed to be tied to the Atramenta. By c. 1375 RM this had left large swathes of Thrayan terrain brittle and grey; likened by many at the time to DUSTSTONE. Indeed, the now largely-abandoned trade-route with Ehbot had begun to collapse, with large sinkholes appearing as the duststone disintegrated. The erection of SIPHON ENGINES in the city alleviated the corruption, but the damage had been caused by then, with an increased number of birth-defects and aepathy reported there.

Ba'akh was left in chaos following the empire's full abandonment of the region in 3097 RM (after close to 3-centuries under DOMNITOR rule), and the city of Suma'ya emerged as the most powerful city after more than 200-years of strife. Thraya was one of the first settlements to fall under the Suma'yan tyrants' yoke, with much of its populace taken as slaves to Suma'ya in 3271 RM, though it was resettled in 3502 RM, and trade south was re-established. Today it forms part of the SALT ROAD, which has become a vital part of the regions' economy (Pop. c. 22,000).

THREE BEHEMOTHS, the: Int. Tec. Veh. Ind. His. Three gigantic open caste mining crawlers built by between 2960 – 3160 RM by PATRICIAN HOUSE BARATHIN. A cross between a building, crane, and tractor, they were made to brutally tear away at topsoil and earth to expose coal and ores. Named after ancient mythological beasts, they were truly monolithic and built to withstand the rigours of near-permanent operation, harsh elements, as well as attack.

They revolutionised mining in the 4th millennium RM in CENTRAL LLACHATUL, and characterised a move away from slave-based mining to more technological-based wider-scale operations. Many smaller and less robust imitations were made over the years, though none reached the level of notoriety as the Three Behemoths.

The first, CHANRAT⁽²⁾, was sent to ALMAGEST, remaining there after the WAR OF THE ARTIFEXES and the region gained its independence. The second, HAYYAL⁽²⁾, was used in LAASKHA. The third, GUGGOTHA⁽²⁾, was built and operated in VÂRR. Only Hayyal remains operational in its original form today.

THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, the: Rel. Lan.

Common name for the three major religions around the INNER SEA REGION: the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, the REFORMED CHURCH OF SARASTRO, and the ALMAGESTI TEMPLE. The latter two splintered from the former following civil conflict in the KORACHANI EMPIRE and became separate faiths, each with their own idiosyncrasies, though still maintaining many base tenets and scriptures.

The UNDYING MACHINE remains their deity, with the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR an important figure (though diminished within the two splinter religions, when compared with the primary religion, especially in the case of the Reformed Church of Sarastro, which has elevated SATHEP THE RISEN to a more prominent role for reasons of propaganda.

Also important to all three Churches is the suppression of the ancient mythic history of ELYDEN, including the origins of the MORTAL peoples and the DEMIURGE'S role in the shaping of the early Elyden. Indeed, most of the contents of the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN is forbidden, and entire government agencies and annexes of the respective churches are dedicated to expunging all such records. It is thought that this is to keep SLAVES and HELOTS ignorant to the true history behind the Undying Machine and their role in his sustenance. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

THREE DEATHS, the: Law. Soc. Proscribed method of EXECUTION^(12.) of WITCHES throughout the KORACHANI EMPIRE, involving stabbing, impaling and drowning.

THREE GORGES, BATTLE OF: His. War. Massive pitched battle between KORACHANI armies and the people of THE OLD FOREST, most notably the AMDUKIANS and ATTORANS, in the region of TAMSRAH in 2793 RM. Korachani influence in area was already waning, their desires elsewhere, and the battle was not well planned or funded, and the natives won the battle thanks to their knowledge of the area, superior numbers and evasive tactics, slaying some 12,000 imperial troops, suffering no less than 6,000 casualties in turn. Historians believe this was one of the final blows leading to the Empire rethinking its strategies in the Old Forest, leaving the area behind, its DOMNITORS returning to the HEARTLAND.

THREE MAGGOT HOUSES: Soc. Homeless shelters in the INNER SEA REGION, including the KORACHANI and SARASTROAN empires as well as ALMAGEST, so-named for the cost to stay there overnight. They are typically seen as a last resort by many, who would rather risk being press ganged on the streets than staying in the Houses, which have a reputation for abuse and people going missing, though this is thought to be little more than urban myths and propaganda spread by those who stay there regularly.

THREE MILES: Com. Pol. Market district in ALMAGEST.

THREE REALMS, the: Myr. Term used in the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN for the FIRMAMENT ABOVE AND ATRAMENTA BELOW and the MATERIAL PLANE. See Vol IV: the Encyclopaedia Elyden.

THREE SANCTA, the: Int. Rui. Three half-sunken idols off the south eastern coast of THETIS. They are constructed from a soapy stone of greenish colour that exude a sickly smell and were fully submerged until c. 3600 RM, after which they slowly began to be revealed by the wane of the SEA OF HALDUA. Little is known of their heritage, though they are thought to date back to an early age MERILL culture.

THREE WASTES: Geo. Region just south of KARAKHAS, in the far north west of the UMBRA SOKHAR wastes, in which the KORACHANI outpost of TAGAGNACH is located. The region was named in c. 1800 following imperial explorers in the region first encountered it, noting three distinct different wastelands that have since merged into one.

Though not ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED, the region is nevertheless inhospitable to most mortal life.

THREE-YEAR WAR: Mil. His. Ancient war in LYRIDIA between 216 – 219 RM fought between TROGLODYTES resisting the policing force of DIVINE SIBYL. The Three-year War left west and southern Lyridia in ruins, most of the areas' resources wasted.

THREFOLD CHURCH, the: also 'Church of St. Agynes' Rel. Str. Church dedicated to St. Agynes of the KORACHANI FAITH, located in the settlement of SAPROCHAN in AZAZEM. Its unofficial (but more popular) name comes from its interesting construction, which has the larger Church (dating to c. 2880 RM) constructed around a smaller chapel, (dating to c. 2210 RM), which itself is built around a shrine built on the site in c. 800 RM in honour of St. Agynes' canonisation a few years earlier.

Since then, it was found that her body was incorruptible and the larger chapel was built around the shrine, where a series of miracles were said to have taken place between 1834 – 1905 RM. As the settlement grew the need for a larger church arose, but due to the earlier miracles and the holy body of the saint being buried there, the chapel could not be demolished. As a result, the still larger church was constructed round the chapel, which became the reliquary of the saint's body and site to seasonal masses in her honour.

THRENODY: Soc. Art. In GNOTH, an evening song of lamentation performed by CALLERS; counterparts to the DAWNBRINGERS.

THREPHO: see PREPOTENCY OF THREPHO.

THRICE-BORN PROPHET, TEMPLE OF THE: Rel. Str. Shrine of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE in the city of VERIS in eastern Korachan. It celebrates the three births of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR – his mortal birth in KORACHAN in -41 RM, his resurrection by deep magicks in the KHARKHARADONTID desert in 133 RM, and his final rebirth as an OTHERWORLDER in 231 RM in KULIGALA – and has three separate chapels, each dedicated to one of those three aspects. Each of the chapels contains a large steel statue of Malichar in his different guises – the mortal holding aloft his sword TARTARUCH, the magickal revenant standing stoic, and the otherworlder resting on his blade.

Many pilgrims undergoing the SHADOW MARCH travel to the shrine, with many flagellating themselves before the great idols to Malichar before heading south to the SEPULCHRAL PALACE with other pilgrims.

THRIZA: Set. Settlement in the north west of LIDEA, along the cliffs of KANDAKE. It is known for its daredevil birdmen, who brave the cliffs for exotic bird eggs that they sell to larger cities (Pop. c. 5,200).

THRONE, THE PEWTER: see LEADEN THRONE, THE.

THRONE OF ASHTERATH, the: Int. Rui. Arc. A gigantic shale throne in the desert of JAKA, in the south east of the UMBRA SOKHAR in SAMMAEA. Built by HERENSUEGE, the crazed draconic SCION of the DEMIURGE ASHTERATH millennia ago, it is now unknown if the throne was once part of a larger structure, though if that is the case, no trace of such a structure remains today.

The scion Herensuege sits on the throne to this day, its body mummified and half-decayed. Unblinking eyes looking upon its wasteland-realm even as its body rots, though the scion is far from dead. Crazed followers —SERAPIS, DEGENERATES and worse — bring tribute to the scion in the form of fresh corpses, which they lay at the throne's feet. The bones of millennia of such offerings litter the immediate area around the Throne.

THRONE OF THE GODS: Rel. Rul. Holy site in the ancient VENATHI

EMPIRE, the remnants of which can be found in present-day c east of VENTHIR. Constructed by EMPRESS LEAHRIT in c. -100 RM, the site was once dominated by dozens of sandstone colossi that bore her image. Most of the colossi were weathered beyond recognition by the time of the KORACHANI EMPIRE'S arrival there in 361 RM, and the remnants were toppled by exocrines in the following years.

THRONE OF THE LAST GREATSHELL: Obj. Pol. His. Throne and seat of power in the city of GOTTARUSH in the north of HOGGOTHA ISZ. The greatshell was slain early in the FIFTH AGE by a SERAPI warlord and continues to be used to this day, where it is located in a circular open air columned structure, visible to all. The shell is around 20-ft. long and is the largest recorded GREATSHELL shell.

THRONE OF LIES, the: Pol. His. Name given to a historical period between c. 2800 – 3000 RM in the south east of THE SURRACH in north western SAMMAEA, around what is today known as the INOTAHL basin. The period is characterised by the rapid rise to power of a large and powerful city state, known as NEROLI⁽²⁾, over its surroundings and the savage politicking and numerous assassinations of its rulers. This instability is what ultimately led to its collapse and eventual absorption by the newly-emerged Surrach.

THRONE WARDENS, ORDER OF THE: Rel. Org. Religious militant order originating in 203 RM towards the end of THE THRONE WARS, in the KORACHANI EMPIRE. Founded by three DESPOSYNI (triplet children of a union with a HALFBLOOD PELASGOSI princess) to oversee the safe being of the Korachani throne, the Throne Wardens kept the throne empty from usurpers for the duration of the REIGN OF THE EMPTY THRONE, until the return of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR deified in 339 RM.

Though no longer necessary, the Wardens remained close to the ARCHPOTENTATE in the years following his return, and became his most trusted of guards, equipped and augmented to the best of Imperial means.

THRONE WARS, the: Pol. His. Period during the REIGN OF THE EMPTY THRONE between c. 133-205 RM where a great many challengers tried to claim the throne. Those who did not were wasting resources fighting each other and were abducted by the UNDYING MACHINES' DESPOSYNI. It was a turbulent time within the KORACHANI EMPIRE, when faith in the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR and the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE teetered.

THRONES, FIVE: Pol. His. The five districts of the early FIFTH AGE nation of SAEDISH, which were: ADAIA, DERIKO, IOMA, OKASI, and YAMORRA. They emerged in c. 1320, leading to the end of SA'WEH and the birth of Saedish, and lasted until the unification of Saedish under the banner of General Hu in 3108 RM, which led to the creation of SAUA.

They were warlike regions, as prone to squabbling amongst themselves as they were to attacking neighbouring nations.

THRYION DYNASTIES: Pol. His. Historical dynasty in CHTHYRID that emerged in c. 3450 RM following centuries of prosperous trade with surrounding nations following the discovery of deep bountiful reserves of ore and minerals that made the nation rich and decadent. The dynasty is now remembered for its tyrants and voluptuary ways, and their names have been excised from Chthyridi records.

By c. 3600 RM the dynasty had embraced slavery and was orchestrating anonymous SLAVE raids into surrounding nations, in particular the OLD FOREST and VÂRR, which by then was under the control of the INTERREGES.

The collapse of the KORACHANI EMPIRE following the WAR OF SUNDERING lured Chthyrid into acts of aggression against its southern neighbour that escalated into various periods of strife between c. 3710 – 3750 RM, in which slave raids were turned almost exclusively towards Korachan.

The period ended with the people of Chthyrid deposing of the Thryion Dynasty in 3766 RM, after which a peace treaty was signed with Korachan the next year. This not only ended hostilities between the two nations but also led to the abolition of slavery in Chthyrid.

THUAA: Sup. Rnk. Form of SHAPING practiced by the SIHIR of the WOLD.

Though unrelated to ATRAMENTISM or FIRMAMENTISM, it also calls upon the MATERIA OMNA. Little is known about Thuaa, though it is thought to have been introduced by a SCION or DEMIURGE millennia past.

THUBOTAT: Set. Small city in the c-south east of BANT, in the c of the CARCHEMISHI PENINSULA^(1.), in the east of SAMMAEA. It is situated in the far north of the shore of the TIDDIN lagoon, at the mouth of the river BOTOL OTT (Pop. c. 13,000).

THUD DAI: Geo. For. Petrified forest in the c north west of SYNCHTHONITHA.

THUDANIANA: Set. Fishing settlement in the east of NOAVATUR (Pop. c. 5,000).

THUELOR: Set. Major city in the c west of BELEGOR, along the course of the river MALMOR. A large section of the city spans the river, effectively serving as an expansive bridge. This section of the city has stairwells and entrances to the undercity, with is a labyrinth of channels and subterranean canals, many of which has forgotten rooms and sealed off pumping stations, many of which are used for illicit activities to this day (Pop. c. 65,300).

THUDRII: Set. City in the c east of PNESSA. It is a major link between the interior of Pnessa and the more densely populated west (Pop. c. 40,000).

THUL SAFI: Rui. Geo. Ancient mountain-top rock-cut dwellings in the c of NOAVATUR, thought to belong to an ancient FOURTH AGE culture. They command uninterrupted views of the jungles below, and were the inspiration for the lavish palaces of the Plutocrats.

THULA: Ind. Set. Mining settlement in the far west of NOAVATUR. It is a source of an ATRAMENTALLY-sensitive ore that is not corrupted by contact with the Atramenta, making it very valuable (Pop. c. 4,000).

THULAEA: Pol. Set. Capital of EZHIRAYA (Pop. c. 1,170,000).

THULGAR: Set. Fortified settlement in the east of PHYRR, in the east of the DISHKAR MAZE region (Pop. c. 8,000).

THULOGUA: Set. Coastal settlement in the north of the PARTHISAN colony of EZHIRAYA^(2.), in the east of MENISCEA (Pop. c. 7,500).

THUMAL: Dem. 'Thumali'. Ntn. This small state exists as two semi exclaves in the far south east of WESTERN LLACHATUL, nestled between the MULL CITY-STATES and the KORACHANI colony of AMONDOR, with dozens of surrounding islands marking the extent of its territories. Its climate is cool temperate, and it has wet winters and short warm summers.

It has its roots in conflict between the native DAIMALAN people and invading Korachani colonists starting in around 3740 RM. The Korachani pushed north from the coast of SUMANDA, as far as present-day BERIA, but the colony was a desperate attempt of an ailing nation still reeling from the loss of half its territories mere decades earlier. The native people were unruly and they fought hard to regain their land from the invaders. Despite their protests the colony stood strong – the empire depended on the copper reserves found there and defended its newly-acquired lands vehemently, but over the centuries, as copper reserves waned and the imperial grip on the colony loosened and the natives continued to disrupt operations until in 3820 RM a large swathe of Amondori lands to the north and the southwest of the colony were abandoned so that the administrators could concentrate on the remaining lands.

The Daimalan people repopulated the abandoned regions, mingling with the descendants of earlier Korachani colonists, building forts and restoring quarries that had been abandoned by Amondor years earlier. They made alliances with island communities, which until then had been isolated and self-sufficient, and by 3890 a league of dozens of islands and even more settlements had formed, out of which would emerge a republic council. Border tensions with Amondor led to the declaration of war in 3917 RM, and an emperor was appointed by the council to act on behalf of the league. Following the resolution of the conflict, the emperor refused to hand over control, and the Sovereignty of Thamul was born.

Its people are all trained into a cohesive militia, and should the state enter war, they can be conscripted at a moment's notice to effectively defend their homeland. Its main industries are fishing and copper mining and the Sovereignty enjoys a close alliance with PARTHIS, the MULL CITY-STATES and HOLOLACH^(1.), which are vital in aiding in the defence against Korachani predation. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

THUNA: Pol. Set. Capital city of ANANTHUL. It is a major industrialised area, with many manufactories (Pop. c. 1,210,500).

THUNDER BEAST: Fau. Great beast with leathery skin, powerful body and long craning neck. It is described through apocryphal evidence and is thought to be native to the unexplored interior of SAMMAEA. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

THUNDERER: Mil. Rnk. Originally a berserker warrior caste in VAALK.

Their battlefield role evolved with the advance in military technology, and under Korachani influence, they became ATRAMENTALLY-enhanced warriors, incredibly strong and inured to pain. They remain shock troops in Vaalk to this day, proud of their heritage, and often leading suicidal charges.

THUNE: Dem. 'Thunt'. Ntn. Small island-nation in the far south east of MENISCEA. It lies some 6^O south of the equator and is around 100-miles south of the southern coast of LANTUA, and is of a tropical climate, with yearly rain and high temperatures that vary little throughout the year.

Its main industry is the mining of DREAMSTONES – supranatural ores that are reactive to DREAMS and sought after by ONEIROMANCERS. The substance is mined from the fossilised expanded body of what is thought to be a dead SCION or DEMIURGE. Its entire culture revolves around their mining and export of this substance, and oneiromancers form a powerful upper caste. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

THUR: Mil. Str. Major coastal fortress in the far south east of EZASUH⁽²⁾.
THURIBULE: Rel. Obj. Large censers used in religious ceremonies amongst the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. Bearers of thuribules are known as THURIFERS.

THURIFER: 1. Rel. Rnk. Bearer of thuribules. They are often VOTARIES.
2. Rel. Pol. Org. A religious order or warrior-hospitaliers within the KORACHANI EMPIRE, who helps against the attentions of the ATRAMENTA. They often follow armies, tending to the wounded and are most commonly found in cities tending to ailments of the shadows, or lands close to ATRAMENTAL CORRUPTION.

THURION, AISLE OF: Rui. Ancient religious temple-complex in the south of the DOMAINS OF SHAUATAS. It is over half a mile long, and takes the form of a paved road flanked by hundreds of gigantic alabaster colossi, each believed to be the simulacrum of an ancient monarch.

THUS: (B. c. -60 – D. unknown) Pol. His. ADUMBRAESK warlord and, following AKH'S unification of DHEA and DHAMATEA into BA'AKH, the ruler of the city of ORESS (once known as ORA^(3,1)). Under his leadership the city enjoyed a spurt in growth, exacerbated by his introduction of SIPHON ENGINES to the city as a means of warding potential ATRAMENTAL activity in the region. The city's declaration of independence from Ba'akh in 65 RM was the culmination of his plan to move the city closer to KORACHAN. His obsession with the Atramenta had, over the years, led to the abandonment of the Adumbraeski tradition, replaced instead by PENUMBRISM, of which he was an advocate.

By the year 291 RM, following his refusal of signing the unification ratification forwarded by BAALBETH, Thus was a changed man, barely recognisable behind the panoply of archaic TECHNARCANE accoutrements; his voice a shadowy wisp, his skin translucent and sickly. A puppet of the growing Korachani influence in the city, he had forsaken his roots for the Atramenta and allowed Korachan to move its armies into Oress, from where they moved south against Ba'akh in 315 RM. The Korachani armies were defeated by 318 RM, and the city of Oress surrounded by Ba'akhi troops, where Thus was forced to sign the unification ratification, which ended Korachani presence in Oress and reunited Ba'akh as a true nation. It was the last time Thus was ever seen publicly; the last recorded mention of the man being in c. 450 RM. Following that it is now believe that he fled north west into Korachan, where he was allowed to indulge in his Atramental obsessions.

THUSIS: Pol. Sec. Small fortified coastal city in the west of the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS (Pop. c. 12,800).

THUTIA: Rvr. River in the north of Khamid, flowing north west for 210-miles from sources in the AHSUDET and NEFERATH Mountains before reaching the coast at the BAY OF KHIT.

THYATIRA, TEMPLE OF: Rel. Str. One of the SEVEN TEMPLES OF THE MACHINE in the region of the ATUL ARKAEL in ALMAGEST. The temple was lost c. 1200 RM to the encroaching slag/dust.

THYKH ETESH: Int. Rui. Sunken necropolis located in the c north of KHAMID. The ruin is ancient and is thought to predate the Khamidian culture (making it early FOURTH AGE). The necropolis takes the form of dozens of steep-sided 10-foot-tall pyramids, each fronted by a small chapel. Any bodies or treasures they once contained have long since vanished, possibly plundered.

THYSIATERA: Rel. Set. Religious city in the PRISON CARCERI, along the course of the river LETHEON (Pop unknown).

THYTHIA: 1. His. Ntn. Extinct kingdom in the far north of LLACHATUL, to the north of ALMAGEST and ASTUDAN, in what are now VALBAR⁽²⁾ and DURCHAA, that between c. 900 – 1491 RM was subjected to prolonged attacks from the KORACHANI EMPIRE, ending ultimately in is destruction.

The kingdom was founded in 326 RM by a rogue monarch, though little else is known about its early history today. It was dissolved in 1491 RM with the EXECUTION of its royal family, and its south western territories taken by Almagest as an annex, with the rest resettled by Korachani colonists, and its surviving populace was enslaved and set to work in new METEORE mines and other industries. The Korachani portion eventually became a nation in its own right – becoming known as Durchaa.

The kingdom of Thythia relied on rudimentary geothermal energy, which powered many of its industries and cities, and it was renowned for its great granite monuments, most of which were toppled in the decades following its downfall, to be replaced by Imperial structures.

The WAR OF THE ARTIFEXES saw Almagest emerge as a newlyindependent nation, which the region became independent and is now known as Durchaa^(1.).Though little remains of its culture today, some fragments can yet be found amongst the people of Valbar, whose ancestors were the survivors of the Thythian genocide

See Vol III: Extinct States.

- 2. Lak. Lake in the c. of $\underline{\textit{DURCHAA}}^{(1.)}$, named after the kingdom that once occupied the region.
- 3. Geo. Plains dominating the south of the nation of DURCHAA^(1.). The plains are dotted with the ruins of the extinct kingdom of Thythia and the detritus of the war with KORACHAN there.

THYM: also 'the Sovereignty of Thym'. His. Ntn. Ancient nation that was at its peak in the late FOURTH AGE, controlling most of the NORTHERN SAMMAEA, stretching across present-day PARAIYA, north eastern KARAKHAS, southern LIDEA, much of MHAROKK, and northern N'RAKH), before the WAR OF SCOURGING consumed the mortal nations in total war, though it survived, in diminished form, into the first centuries of the FIFTH AGE. The nations' borders are thought to have, at their height, stretched from the present-day SEA OF AZAM in the west to the south western coast of the DAARKEN GULF, bordering the SOLON HIGHLANDS and the ORIAN and SHIBOTHA Mountains in the north, and the KATHAN, URATH and AGRABU Mountains in the south.

Though it is believed that Thym fragmented following the War of Scourging, various smaller states emerged from the conflict, none of which were particularly strong. Most dissolved into smaller warring and struggling city-states as the war escalated, with those of the eastern-most region of ITHOIA fragmenting, its people scattering around their lands and to the north and west, into what were once the hinterlands of ASIADEA in c. -1600 RM. A broken people, shaken by the war, haunted by the glory that their ancestors had fallen from, the Ithoians were a weak-people, choosing to abandon their legacy, turning instead to lives of itinerancy in the badlands of BAAL DAGON and the RUATHAN plains south of the SHIBOTHA and north of the STERHBEL mountains.

Though one of the largest known Fourth Age civilizations, little is known of its culture, other than that at its demise its rulers had become decadent epicureans who erected huge monuments to their own honour. The ruins of these monuments, as well as bathhouses, gymnasia and sensoria, can all be found in nations as diverse as PARAIYA, the north east of KARAKHAS, south of LIDEA, MHAROKK, and the north of <a href="MYRAKH. See Vol III: Extinct States.

THYMI: Lan. Ancient language and script belonging to the SOVEREIGNTY
OF THYM, the script of which is now used as the basis for many languages across the north of SAMMAEA, including SARASTROAN. See Vol II: Languages.

THYSHIA: 1. Geo. Volcanically-active area in the south east of SOUTHERN SAMMAEA, in the south east of YSACYITHAIA, and the westernmost XETEAN STATES. It is dominated by a large caldera and surrounding wastelands that are characterised by fumaroles, sulphur lakes, hot springs and geysers.

The region is largely dormant today though individual geysers and fumaroles remain active, though the entire region was extremely active over a century ago for many decades, ultimately leading to the eventual collapse of the nation of Thyshia⁽²⁾, after which its territories were claimed by surrounding nations.

2. His. Ntn. Small nation in the south east of SOUTHERN SAMMAEA, in territories that are now occupied by the south east of YSACYITHAIA, the westernmost XETEAN STATES, and the north west of GRAMMATER.

Thyshian culture effectively died in c. 3880 RM following decades of increased volcanic activity in the $\underline{\text{IMENAZZI}}$ caldera and surrounding lands, which culminated in a widespread eruption in 3876 RM that displaced millions of people to surrounding lands as refugees and migrants. Those who remained were forced into a survival situation that precluded them from taking part in the economy, culture and politics of Southern Sammaea. Over time they were subsumed by surrounding nations, though a few independent cities – $\underline{\text{BELERBYRIA}}$ and $\underline{\text{ZURYA}}$ – have stubbornly persisted.

Surrounding nations expanded their territories over the ensuing century to claim the lands lost by the fall of Thyshia, though their respective borders remain contested to this day, with Ysacyithaian, Xetean, and Grammatan border patrols remaining a common sight in the region.

The nation was known for its idyllic wildernesses, lush coniferous and boreal forests, and its wildlife. Its people were skilled outdoorsmen, fishermen, and cattlemen.

THYSIASTERY OF THALSIMUS: Rel. Rui. Ancient sacrificial altar in the TULAAN SHAADOR hills in the c east of THE SURRACH. The altar was once part of a large temple-complex, which is now in ruins, scattered across the region.

TI ELINDA: Set. Settlement in the c of SAGITTARIA, known for its collieries. The mines are vertical and go deep beneath the settlement, and require constant pumping to keep them dry (Pop. c. 9,000).

TIAGAME: 1. Sea. Bay in the far south of TATAR, at the mouth of the eponymous river⁽²⁾.

2. Rvr. River in the south west of TATAR flowing south west for 250-miles from sources that flow into lake OLBIA, including river DIELEGAME. Lake PITIA lies along its course. Its course has been altered by mortal hands across thousands of years and it is well-travelled, with river boats and barges travelling along its length.

TIAII: Set. Settlement on the island of KHEMET in KHAMID (Pop. c. 6,800).

TIAL ESH: Set. AHHAS city in the south west of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER, in the tribal territories of OURANASSA. It is the only settlement of note that the ahhas minority calls their own. All ahhas families visit the city during their circumnavigation of the Growing Mountains, averaging a visit every two years. There they pray tribute to their god-king Nephthalont, at the shrine of ABRAS⁽³⁾, where relics of his rule are kept (Pop. c. 30,000).

TIAMA: Sea. Narrow sea in the north west of SARASTRO, fed by the BLACK RIVER.

TIAMAT: His. Set. An expansive city-state that once dominated the lands of the southern AROMUR plains and KHUNRATHI shelf between c. -2000 and -1600 RM, in what is now the border between the south east of AETHIOS and the north east of RHINOCOLOURA. At its height in c. - 1900 RM, the city's influence extended as much as 250-miles in all directions, though its discovery of the IDOL OF BAPHOMET in c. -1750 would eventually lead to its downfall. The people's worship of the idol would elicit a DREAM-murmur from the dormant DEMIURGE, which corrupted them fully. The plains to the north west of the city-state housed a great cathedral-monument, in which the Idol was kept, though a FIRMAMENTAL explosion of enormous magnitude towards the end of the WAR OF SCOURGING destroyed the structure, severely damaging the city itself, leaving the immediate surroundings scarred. The Idol was somehow recovered, and later appeared in Rhinocolouran history as a national heirloom. The city-state of Tiamat lingered for some years following the conclusion of the War of Scourging, though by then it was a tomb, its buildings abandoned, its people withered from the devastations of the war. The present-day mud-fortress of THIAMIT is named after it.

TIAMMAT: Geo. Plains in the west of SARASTRO. The region is mildly ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED and is known to cause physical degeneration in those who sojourn in its lands.

The region is categorised as a $\underline{\text{LEAST CONCERN}}$ by the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI}}$ Institute of Atramental Studies.

TIAMOLDOR: His. Ntn. Now-extinct FIFTH AGE kingdom in the south east of BROR^(1,), which, alongside the APLI culture, diminished in c. 3100 RM following a devastating ATRAMENTAL calamity. It emerged from the BARBARIAN STATES of the TIAN MALDARAAN people in c. 1900 as the COALITION OF SURISSIA was waning. See Vol III: Extinct States.

TIAMOLDORAN CITY STATES: Pol. Ntn. Loosely connected city states in the south east of Brore (1) that inherited the region following the demise of APLI and TIAMOLDOR in c. 3100 RM. In 2802 RM an Atramental eruption on the island of ARCHAEDON (1) left the southern city states devastated, their SHAPERS dead or insane.

Its people are descended from the so-called BARBARIAN STATES and are now famed for their dysmorphic bodies – with the average person standing at full foot taller than anyone from the 'FAR WORLD', as well as their varied skin colours, indicating a distant union between human and giganri settlers in the region. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

TIAMUTH: Int. Rui. Shipwreck in the GRRGAN reef off the western-coast of CYHLAGHARR, in the SEA OF MERRIL.

TIDDIN: Sea. Lagoon in the c south of BANT, in the CARCHEMISHI

PENINSULA⁽¹⁾, in the east of SAMMAEA. It was once a shallow sea though the waning of ELYDEN'S seas has seen it shrink, and today it is separated from the STRAIT OF HADDURATH⁽²⁾ by a narrow channel around half-amile wide at its narrowest point, at the settlement of SEBESHAT. It is expected to be cut off from the coast entirely within a few decades.

TIBER: Set. Settlement in the south west of CHEIRA (Pop. c. 4,000).

TIBER NIALL: m. Sup. Per. (B. 3819 RM) High-ranking member of the GRIGORIAN ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION. An accomplished animist, he spends increasing amount of time FOCUSED^(1,1), ASTRALLY PROJECTING to unveiled hidden truths. His discovery of the STAR OF ASCENDANCE — a particularly lucid SPIRIT^(1,1) dwelling in the OTHERWORLD, has revealed various secrets that have been of particular use to the Order.

TIBERIUS MARO: m. Per. (B. 3935 RM) High-ranking member of the CONCORDANTIST ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION. Officially bearing the rank of INQUIRER, he is a master of espionage, having spent many years as a spy in PARTHIS, collecting information on the KORACHANI EMPIRE'S rival state.

He was involved in a widely-publicised fracas outside the Korachani embassy in TETHRA in 3968 RM, during which he was severely injured, putting to an end his life as a field agent. Since then, he has taken over the Orders' Office of Domestic Investigations, where he oversees domestic surveillance.

TIBERRA: Set. Major coastal city in the south west of ALLASAN, at the delta of the river LISSA. Its harbour is the main source of sea trade in and out of Allasan, and its docks are busy with trade-vessels and the sound of wine bottles being loaded onto ships for export. It forms part of the SHADOW MARCH and has many hostels that cater to PETITIONERS OF THE MACHINE (Pop. c. 83,000).

TIDES: Sea. Ocean and sea tides are affected by various things, most prominent amongst them the two moons SIELLA and ARAKHAMÉ. Their phases and positions in the heavens have a significant effect on tides, and in many places the range of low tide and high tide can be measures in tens of yards, having a great impact on culture and the evolution of coastal life. THE INNER SEA, in particular, is plagued by extreme tides, causing coastal settlements to adapt to the situation. The CITY OF ALMAGEST is a prime example, its harbour existing on three levels, the two lower ones being submerged during times of high tide, windows and doors sealed with bulkheads. See Vol II: Month and Lunar Cycle in Elyden.

TIDESHAPER: Sup. Rnk. Caste of SHAPER common in OKKHAM, in the east of SAMMAEA, whose purpose is to help regulate and control the sometimes-extreme tides, that risk destroying many of the nation's industries. They train in the lighthouse of RALCZHET before travelling across Okkham to settle in a coastal settlement where they can put their skills to use.

TIERIR: Set. Small city in the c south of TATAR (Pop. c. 13,800).

TIGAR: His. Set. Ancient capital of one of three prefectures of ERINAKH LAUR (present day RHINOCOLOURA). The city was attacked by KORACHANI forces in 817 RM and razed, never to be resettled. The capital was later moved to the city of SARAD RYX.

TIKBALA: 1. Geo. Mountain pass in the south east of LYRIDIA, passing through the HARBIDA Mountains linking the nation with its south western-most city, JOCENT.

2. Mor. Theriocephalid with vague equine features, judged by some scholars to be too numerous and localised to be descendants of OTHERWORLDERS. Skittish and nomadic by nature, they are distrusting of other travellers and relatively pacific, though prone to frenzy when cornered or deprecated. Though they keep little written records, they are aware of their history, which is retold by elders and tale spinners. They were the victims of genocide in ancient times, which has left them without number and strength.

They are found around NAARETH, NÁRTHEL, VENTHIR, and to a lesser extent, the BROKEN LANDS, TZALLRACH, and LYRIDIA. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

3. Mar. Mor. In LYRIDIA, they^(2.) are more martially-inclined than their foreign kin and practice a form of Firmamentism called EGGLIL.

TILAP THE DOG: His. Soc. Loyal dog who in 3775 RM accompanied her owner, the PARTHISAN explorer Iohannai Fal Ajjia as part of an expedition to ATRAMENTALLY-CORRUPTED lands in the north west of KHARKHARADONTIS. Iohannai became separated from the rest of her group and became lost in a region infested with corrupted vermin. As her supplies ran out, she became trapped in a ravine and only managed to survive through the ardent actions of her companion, who kept the scavengers at bay long enough for a resume part to reach her.

Tilap unfortunately died of her wounds before she could be healed, but Iohannai had her cloned, with the new Tilap continuing the legacy of her clone-mother. As the story of Tilap's bravery spread across Parthis, many nobles and PATRICIANS approached her, wanting to adopt more clones. Eventually Iohannai relented and made clones of Tilap available to those who wanted to, accepting donations from them through which she was able to set up a foundation that sought to round up and home stray dogs from across Tethra and other Parthisan cities.

Today the Tilap dog is amongst one of the most popular forms of FAMILIARS⁽²⁾ in Parthis and its colonies and dependencies, with many thousands of clones alive across the INNER SEA REGION at any one time.

TILARAM: See Small city in the c-south east of ESHIR⁽²⁾ in the rocky south of ATENARA. It is famed for its ancient subterranean settlements, some of which are still in use today in part of the more modern city (Pop. c. 14,300).

TILEUL: Rui. Ancient plagi monument in the north east of ARKOS^(1.), dating back to c. -10,000 RM in the FOURTH AGE, possibly earlier. The monument takes the form of a tapering obelisk, around 150-feet high made in an intricate latticework of a strange greenish metal that stands untarnished and unscarred to this day, where it is shunned by flora and fauna alike; the land around it a lifeless desert for a mile in all directions.

TILLA PISTOME: (D. 3403 RM) Edu. Scholar of the Atramenta who alongside her colleague OLOM GARROS formulated the hypothesis now known as the GARROS-PISTOME HORIZON, which postulates that given the right conditions mortals can cross over to the otherworld without supranatural aid.

TILLAYAN: Geo. Expansive cave-system in the c west of CUTH, discovered in 2123 RM. Explorations of the caves continued for over a century, until the final cave was revealed, in which was a mummified HAND placed on an altar hewn from the living rock of the cave. The hand was taken back to the city of KARKAUTH and examined by shapers and historians over the course of many years, where in 2252 RM it was divined as the hand of the DEMIURGE NERGAAL.

TILLON SEAH: Myr. In BA'AKHI mythology, the font from which all life emerged. According to Ba'akhi MAGGI, the well has constantly flowed with water throughout history; sign of its divine roots.

TILLUR YELTO VII: (B. 3933 RM) Pol. Present Chancellor of ESHIR⁽²⁾ and 17th Chancellor from his dynasty.

TIMAII: Set. Small coastal city in the east of ELEKHID, overlooking the innermost reaches of the BAY OF ENEPH (Pop. c. 12,750).

TIME OF AVATARS, the: His. In the ancient history and mythology of ELYDEN, another name for the FOURTH AGE OF MORTAL LIFE.

- TIME OF DECLINE, the: His. In the ancient history and mythology of ELYDEN, one of the two subdivisions of the THIRD AGE OF MORTAL LIFE.
- TIME OF DEFIANCE, the: His. In the ancient history and mythology of ELYDEN, one of the two subdivisions of the SECOND AGE OF MORTAL LIFE.
- TIME OF LIVING GODS, the: His. In the ancient history and mythology of ELYDEN, another name for the SECOND AGE OF MORTAL LIFE.
- TIME OF MORTALS, the: His. In the ancient history and mythology of ELYDEN, another name or the FIRST AGE OF MORTAL LIFE.
- TIME OF THE ONÉSIMUS AN THE SET, the: His. In the ancient history and mythology of ELYDEN, one of the two subdivisions of the SECOND AGE OF MORTAL LIFE.
- TIME OF REBALANCE, the: His. In the ancient history and mythology of ELYDEN, another name for the FIFTH AGE OF MORTAL LIFE.
- TIME OF TWO KINGS, the: His. Tumultuous period in PARTHISAN history between 2542 2546 RM where the republic was held hostage by twin consuls, who were overthrown in 2546 RM by ARSACYN, a beloved republican who was able to hold executive powers, becoming the first emperor, starting a new age for Parthis which continues to this day.
- TIME OF WONDERS: His. A common name given to the ancient history and mythological age of ELYDEN. It is representative of an ancient time when the DEMIURGES still SHAPED Elyden and their TRIBES lived at the dawn of their history.
- TIMGAR: Rui. Ancient expansive ruined city in the south of the TARAHID ANNEXES, south of the HOGHSOTHAMON wastes, with 'forests' of standing and toppled granite columns and half-buried basements and crypts. The region is known for its many tombs, most of which were looted long ago.
- TIMUR: Set. Settlement in NÁRTHEL, 40-miles south of the STRAIT OF NÁRTHEL, historically renowned for its iron deposits. One of the largest iron mines of the KORACHANI EMPIRE was located here, its source spent in c. 2150 RM after which it was abandoned. Its lower reaches flooded in 2409 RM, following a collapse of a hollow that led to the Strait of Nárthel; and its upper chambers (where offices and stores were housed) were pillaged long-ago. The city above is now a ghost-settlement, most of its structures empty, its population a fraction of what it once was, subsisting on what miniscule yields the mines now provide.
 - His. it was part of the state of SHANATH, though following is dissolution in -174 RM, was assimilated by Nárthel in c. -150 RM (Pop. c. 1,000).
- TIN: Set. Settlement in the region of DAAR in the north east of VENTHIR. Its main industry is iron mining (Pop. c. 4,800).
- TINANIA: Pol. Soc. Bus. PATRICIAN HOUSE in the KORACHANI EMPIRE known for being a member of the ATROPI HOUSES. Its ancestral home is the city of ARAZEL, and it maintains a large fortress there to this day.

Its main role within the cooperative lies with taking care of the finances and the mundane business of running an empire-spanning business, and it is famed for its clerks and bookkeepers. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

TINLAA SIGNAL WALL: Int. Tec. Mil. Pol. Str. A massive concrete wall in the south west of the ARCANTHEA Mountains, commanding impressive views of the c south east of LAASKHA. It is around 400-ft. high and is of stark design, supported by mighty buttresses, above which the wall itself sports 49 hollows – arranged in 7-rows and 7-columns, each of which sports gigantic hyper-radial lenses that emit brilliant focussed light (akin to those on lighthouses but far more powerful). These lights are used in concert to send messages over vast distances. Across the south east of the nation are high watchtowers with soldiers constantly trained on the signal wall, awaiting any messages for deciphering.

The wall was erected in c. 3580 RM and was well-used by the time telegraphy grew in popularity around the INNER SEA REGION in c. 3730 RM, after which it became less important but continued to be used as an alternative to modern telegraphy, which relies on electricity, and though the Wall itself requires electricity to broadcast its messages, anyone within line of sight can view them regardless of whether they had electricity.

 $\overline{\text{TINTH}}$: Set. Settlement in the east of $\underline{\text{SEDISIA}}$, within the $\underline{\text{VETHRANDAN}}$ RIVER SYSTEM (Pop. c. 6,000).

- TINAVA: Soc. Dance common in THE VORANDINE, that is thought to date back to the FOURTH AGE, where it was danced in the arena of TINAVORAS, which is thought to have lent its name to the dance. The Tinava is a fast-paced communal dance that is common to celebrations and weddings.
- TIPHARA: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the east of GNOTH.
- TIPHARET: Set. City in the c-south east of GNOTH along the course of the river MALKUTH, and base of the ORDER OF TEREBINTH (Pop. c. 80.000).
- $\overline{\text{TIR}}$: 1. Sea. Bay in the west of the SEA OF ORRIDA, in the north east of KHULL.
 - 2. Set. Settlement in the north east of GNOTH. It was built around a shrine that contains the preserved body of a winged OTHERWORLDER, which remains a prominent figure in its religion (Pop. c. 6,000).
- TIRAGA: Ind. Set. Settlement in the c of PARAIYA, to the north of the URATH Mountains. Its main industry is the mining of iron (Pop. c. 7,000).
- TIRAL: Set. Coastal settlement in the region of CHATOYANT in the west of THE SURRACH (Pop. c. 7,200).
- TIRED UG: Ser. Coastal city in the south west of CHEIRA. It is a known manufacturer of the drug LETHE (Pop. c. 40,750).
- TIRESIA: Sec. Coastal settlement in the south east of THETIS overlooking the SEA OF HALDUA (Pop. c. 5,000).
- TIRGATOA: 1. Sca. Bay in the far north east of MENISCEA, in the colony of IBANNEM^(1.).
- 2. Geo. Island off the south eastern coast of the colony of IBANNEM^(1.) in the north east of MENISCEA. A fortress occupies the island, guarding entry into the bay beyond^(1.).
- TIRIGIZ: Set. Fortified settlement in the east of PNESSA (Pop. c. 3,800).
- TIRIL: Sea. Bay in the south west of AMMESH, forming a north western extension of the SEA OF AMMASH (1.).
- TIRIOD: Set. City in the c south of SEDISIA, 15 miles north west of the capital in HAII (Pop. c. 43,000).
- TIRIX: Set. Major city in KARAKHAS along the course of the river NEGHIRREN, named after the many gigantic millstones that lie strewn around its periphery, relics from a past incarnation The city is a major producer of food for the capital in DEKANA, and is surrounded by miles upon miles of farmland (Pop. c. 48,000).
- TIRO: Ind. Set. Solitary city and the only settlement of any note within the frigid region of YASH UYUN in the east of RAONGEN⁽²⁾. It is home to the SANCTUARY OF TEMPERANCE and emerged in c. 2230 RM to take advantage of peat deposits. As the climate in the region grew colder, the peat industry died out, being replaced by deep UMBRA drilling, which continues to this day (Pop. c. 33,000).
- TIRODAESH: Soc. Mor. Dem. 'Tirodaeshi'. Nomadic pariahs common in EASTERN LLACHATUL. They are thought to be descendants of ancient unions between humans and ILLIDRAEN, and are the only known examples of such a union there have been no other documented human/illidraen hybrids in recorded history.

This has caused scholars to question their true origins, though the Tirodaeshi people are know little of their own heritage and do not speak of such things to outsiders. They are aloof, and are known to be OCCULTISTS, offering certain services to those in the settlements they pass through, which include THETIS, LIMOTH, and THETIS.

- TIRTHANKAR: Set. Major city in VENTHIR, known for its large court and politicking. It is a city of two halves, its citadel and fortified upper-city built in the foothills of KAUIN highlands, the rest of its population made up disparate satellite towns and villages in the surrounding region (Pop. c. 228,000).
- TIRZA: 1. Sea. Bay in the SEA OF MHARKA in the north of LIDEA. Flanked by the peninsula of Tirza^(2.) to the west and the river GOLET to the east.
- 2. Geo. Peninsula in the north of $\underline{\text{LIDEA}}$ protruding into the $\underline{\text{SEA OF}}$ $\underline{\text{MHARKA}}$.
- 3. Set. City and natural harbour in the above bay $^{(1)}$ along the coast of the north of LIDEA. It is a stop along the SALT ROAD (Pop. 16,400).
- 4. Str. Lighthouse on rocky island north east of the peninsula of Tirza^(2.).

TISARA: Dem. 'Tisaran'. Nm. Nation in the region of TISHANNA^(1.) in the far north east of the continent of LLACHATUL, overlooking the BAY OF GEAUA, with its eastern land border touching the nation of ABATTUR, which lies in far west of the continent of MENISCEA. Its northern coastal regions are of a cool temperate climate, whereas its inland south is dryer and warmer with a more stable climate due to nearby mountains to the west and south. These take the form of the eastern-most arm of the ARGENT Mountains and the VOULLOR Mountains, respectively.

Likewise, the majority of its western territories are composed of highland massifs. These areas are all prone to earthquakes, which are relatively common, leading to most cities and settled areas being in the north, closer to the coast. In 3201 RM a major earthquake, now remembered as the SEISM OF ASMARATH, after a large city that was devastated by the event.

The region was originally known as TISHANNA⁽²⁾ and was settled in the early FIFTH AGE by three distinct people — TISTANNI natives after whom the region was named; UTTRANI HALFBLOODS who had lived in the region since the FOURTH AGE; and more recent immigrants from Amillaere⁽³⁾ who moved into western Tishanna⁽¹⁾ in c. 1200 RM. These people mingled to different degrees and their cities prospered as independent city-states, many of them along the EGETAKHAN ROAD, which brought wealth and trade to the region. In c. 1910 RM, its merchant houses united, secured ties with the Malani HENDECARCHY of DERAEIA, forming a new monarchy through marriage in 1922 RM. The Uttrani Schism eventually led to the collapse of the monarchy and the establishment of the Republic State of Tisara. The kingdom of Malan was established relatively soon after in c. 2075 RM, bringing further stability and trade to the region.

It was renamed Tishara and formally founded in 2513 RM, following an unfortunate war with neighbouring Abattur that stemmed from the UTTRANI SCHISM that started in c. 2470 RM. Tishara defeated Abattur in 2511 RM and established a militarised border between the two states that it patrolled over the next century. The Republic States of Tisara replaced the previous feudal monarchy following the actions of queen SHIRAT, who stepped down, becoming a figurehead of the new republic until her unfortunate assassination two years later by a misguided monarchist. Childless, her nephew HACHEM assumed the mantle following her death, beginning a tradition that endures to this day.

The people of Abattur petitioned Tisara to forego its hold over their shared border, returning territories that had been appropriated in 2511 RM, but they were repeatedly rebuked. In 2614 RM Tisara eventually acquiesced to repeated request to dismantle the military presence along the border, but refused to return the territories. The Abatturi people grew bitter and insular after this, almost severing ties with Tisara, keeping only the most basic of trade routes open. This led to Tisara being excised from the EGETAKHAN ROAD trade-route, losing influence in the region, further worsening relations between the two people.

By 2724 RM king SESSEMAGART was able to twist most members of the republic council to his cause, founding a short-lived empire with him as its head. He whipped the populace, his lieutenants and the remaining lawmakers into a nationalist frenzy that led to a short war with Abattur in 2729 RM, ending in the state's annexation in 2730 RM.

Sessemagart advocated education of all his subjects' cultures and religions, established temples of disparate faiths in both lands, and encouraged travel and trade between the disparate lands of his new empire, with western cities welcomes uttrani migrants.

But Tisaran rule of Abatturi lands was wrought with difficulty, and following Sessemagart's death conditions in the eastern territories steadily worsened. Clashes between workers and overseers became common, and cases of uttrani immigrants and their children clashing over differing ideologies were increasing by c. 2850 RM. Cultural and political differences led to rising tensions, with some cities experiencing growing gang cultures that led to entire districts coming under control of particular groups, unsettling the economy and causing unrest across Tisara.

This eventually resulted in Abattur regaining its independence in 2913 RM, with the city of LAILLA becoming its new capital. Many halfbloods (including some non-uttrani) were repatriated to Abattur, though some choose to stay, forsaking their roots, becoming outcasts within their ancestral homeland.

The empire established by Sessemagart collapsed in 2936 RM, leading to 8-decades of unease in which cities established their own states. These were eventually brought together by well-meaning parties who reestablished the Republic States of Tisara in 3021 RM, which remains strong to this day.

No longer a part of the Egetakhan Road, Tisara came to focus more on trade with the west and south, with which it established closer ties over the subsequent millennium.

In 3201 RM the Seism of Asmarath devastated the south west of the nation, destroying the city of ASMARATH and many other settlements, killing unnumbered thousands. The quarry and mining-based economies of the region were left devastated as survivors fled to the north, repatriating in safer cities in a move that proved prescient – an even larger earthquake struck in 3823 RM, though relatively few people were killed.

Today, the region is known for its religious syncretism, with various faiths being accepter and tolerated, many of them brough by immigrant peoples. It is famed for its textile and dyeing industries, and it maintains sizeable mines in its south eastern reaches to this day, which excavate SUNSTONE and other ores. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

TISARAN LUGH: see LUGH, TISARAN.

TISHANNA: 1. Geo. Region along the border between the north east of LLACHATUL and the north west of MENISCEA, in lands presently occupied by ABATTUR, the far east of TISARA, and the far south of SATARIEL. The region was once known for its scattered old growth forests, of which the extant woods of UTTUMA are a remnant, but most of it was cut down for farmlands in the FOURTH AGE, with the deforestation continuing into the FOURTH AGE.

The region of Tishanna is not exactly analogous with the territories of the Fifth Age nation of the same name(2.), and is located farther north east than the former.

2. Dem. 'Tishannan'. His. Ntn. Historical nation in the far north east of the subcontinent of EASTERN LLACHATUL. In the early FIFTH AGE it was inhabited by no less than three distinct ethnic groups.

The eldest and most deeply-rooted was an ancient HALFBLOODED bloodline known as the UTTRANI, whose people had lived in disparate family groups in the land since the FOURTH AGE.

The previous were the TISTANNI, descendants of the Fourth Age empire of NAHORIA who scattered north east during the FADING and settled the region, becoming known as the TISTANNI people by c. -1000 RM

The most recent people to make the region their home were immigrants from AMILLAERE^(3,) (present-day northern MALAN) who fled cultural instability in c. 1200 RM, moving east into western Tishanna. The mythohistoric figure of ANDRASTE likely dates to this period, prior to her becoming deity in the region around a millennium later.

Over time the people mingled, and its cities developed well-supported trade-routes, and by c. 1700 RM it became a part of the EGETAKHAN ROAD, which brought further wealth to the region. Its merchant houses secured trade deals with the Malani HENDECARCHY of DERAEIA in 1853 RM, uniting into a singular house by c. 1910 RM. In 1922 RM the house married into the Deraeian monarchy, establishing a new TISHANNAN MONARCHY with close ties to Malan. This new dynasty celebrated the historical figure of Andraste and deified her as a means of legitimising the rule of the new monarchy.

Civil war broke out in neighbouring Abattur in 2502 RM as differences between rival sects of the cult of ISRAPHAEL escalated. In 2509 prince UTRIN of USEAS was mistakenly killed, pulling Tishanna into the war, which it won in 2511 RM. Queen SHIRAT proved to be a beacon of rationality, preventing her armies from taking all of Abattur, though they instead appropriated a large strip of Abattur's westernmost territories, turning it into a militarised zone, forbidding contact between the two nations as the eastern state recovers from the war.

At the behest of the people, queen SHIRAT, whose benevolence had restrained the Tishannan armies, stopping them from taking all of Abattur brought an end to the feudal states of Tishanna, establishing a new constitution in 2513 RM and founding the Republic States of Tisara, over which she would reside as figurehead until her untimely assassination two years later, leading to the abolishment of the royal household. See Vol III: Extinct Nations.

TISHANNAN: Lan. Language spoken in the nation of TISARA, with roots in the ancient FIFTH AGE nation of TISHANNA. The language of ABATTI emerged from it in c. 3200 – 3300 RM. See Vol II: Languages.

TISHANNAN MONARCHY: also 'Tisaran Monarchy'. Pol. His. Ruling dynasty of the historical region of TISHANNA in what is now TISARA. The monarchy emerged in 1922 RM when the merchant lords of Tishanna married into the DERAEIAN monarchy of MALAN, cementing their rule over the region. For many years prior to this they nurtured local legends celebrating a cultural hero Andraste until she became a deity, supplanting the ancient animist beliefs that had dominated until that time.

By the time the time the young merchant prince TOUTAT married Princess NABIRIA of Deraeia worship of ANDRASTE had already been cemented as the main faith of the region, only growing in popularity since then.

The autocratic monarchy ended with the reign of queen SHIRAT, who established a new constitution in 2513 RM following years of war and unrest, and oversaw the founding of the Republic States of Tisara. Though the monarchy remained as an institution, no longer would the monarch exercise political powers, remaining instead in a ceremonial role and as a figurehead of the republic and the leader of the CULT OF ANDRASTE.

The Tishannan Monarchy remains one of the oldest monarchies in Elyden, having endured for over two millennia. The current monarch is queen CORUAE.

TISHANNAN STATES, the: common vernacular collective name for the north eastern LLACHATULI states of TISARA and ABATTUR. The name is not used officially by either of those states but is sometimes used by outsiders when referring to the region as a whole.

TISQ PHOD: Set. City in the south west of CHEIRA (Pop. c. 40,000).

TISRAHAN: Org. Rnk. Collective name for the three rulers of the NACRE LEAGUE, who together took control in 3966 RM, usurping the 17 councillors of the GRAND HOUSES during a tumultuous time following the declaration of war against MAENMIST. They are ANGALISH MORAD, DHACHAH TRAZI, and ZIHIMMAR DOS and all emerged from smaller League Houses that had been sidelined by the council.

TISTANNI: His. Eth. Early FIFTH AGE people common to the historical region of TISHANNA who emerged from unions between HUMANS and SEITHIN following the Fading of the FOURTH AGE. Many believe that they were themselves descendants of the Fourth Age empire of NAHORIA. By c. -1000 RM they had spread to most of the lands south east of the SEA OF IALCUS, which became known as Tishanna after them.

They lived in familial groups, working the land, where they cultivated various fungi that provided them with food and fibres for clothing and other items, and raised livestock.

In the ensuing millennia most of the Tistanni have mingled with MALANI immigrants from the west and UTTRANI HALFBLOODS from ABATTUR, leading to a homogenisation of people. Despite this, they remain common in various lands in TISARA to this day.

TISTAR: Geo. Rugged hills in the north west of TAMAR, forming the southern-most part of the KYTHI Mountains and part of the border with south eastern LYRIDIA. The hills are source of the river MESISA and SUNNANA.

TISZIA: Set. Small fortified city in the east of DACIA. It is known for its military forces, which patrol its eastern territories and push east against NÁRTHEL (Pop. c. 20,000).

TITALAK: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the north east of THETIS, guarding around 1,200-miles of border with TETHYSIA. Its troops are expert rangers, who are adept at living off the land, and many spend months away from the fortress as they patrol the border.

TITAN: 1. Myr. Leg. In PARTHISAN mythology, a race of beings so enlightened that the other MORTAL PEOPLES considered them deities.
 2. Tec. In PARTHIS, TECHNARCANE constructs who borrow their names from local legend⁽¹⁾. They are complex examples of SICTHAINEN TECHNA; expensive to manufacture, strong and symbolic. Their use in battle is as much a tool for morale and rallying as it is a bludgeon against enemy fortifications.

TTTHE-BARONS, the: Pol. Rulers of SKAROS, in 3792 RM in a coup that deposed the ruling PATRICIAN HOUSES.

TITHENA: Pol. Set. Capital of the nation of BROR (2.) (Pop. c. 197,000).

TITHOIA: Set. City in the east of JURRAS^(2.), along the salty wetlands of AHRAK overlooking the SEA OF FOR. The city farms crabs and shellfish, which are a delicacy in the capital in SAMARIS (Pop. c. 18,200).

TITHON: For. Vast yet sparse inland forest in the c north of EASTERN
LLACHATUL, serving as a border between TETHYSIA in the south and TISARA in the north.

TITHORATH: Rvr. River in the south of THE OLD FOREST, flowing north for 550-miles from sources in the UMBRALA and RHAECHA Mountains before joining with its parent, the river IAGANNATH, through lake VANEFATH.

TITIA: 1. Rel. Geo. Holy site amongst the followers of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, in the west of KARAKHAS. The site takes the form of a large sinkhole, circular in cross-section, 100-feet wide and 30-feet deep. Along its inner edge are forty-nine hand-hewn niches, within each is interred the mummified remains of a PLAGI priest. The site is unmeasurably old, believed to date back to the dawn of the mortal tribes and the rise of their individual culture. The place is important to the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE for it is believed that the plagi were priests and servants of the DEMIURGE RACHANAEL during his first centuries of dominance over the tribe.

The place is heavily guarded and forms a part of the SHADOW MARCH, though few save the highest-ranking members of the church hierarchy are allowed to descend into the panopticon at the base of the sinkhole, though the faithful are allowed to look into the pit and pin their CATHADESMIN to the edge.

2. $\it Mil. Str. Fortress guarding the above holy site {\rm ^{(1.)}}.$

TITIAM: Pol. Set. Capital city of AURUM⁽²⁾ and base of power of the UMMALLARID MERCHANTS. It forms a part of the VAEVECTAN TRAIL and is a major trade centre, with the largest continuous marketplace in the nation (Pop. c. 632,000).

 $\underline{\mathbf{TITIRA}}$: Set. Fortified settlement in the c east of $\underline{\mathbf{TZALLRACH}}$ (Pop. c. 8,000).

TITTERUG: Set. City in the south west of KASPIA (Pop. c. 43,000).

TIUNNA: Set. Fortified settlement in the west of KASPIA, in the eastern foothills of the ERESHKIGAL Mountains (Pop. c. 8,000).

TIVAI: Set. Major city in the c south east of the CITIZENRY OF THALI (Pop. c. 330,600).

TIVARRA: Sea. Small sea off the western coast of SAMMAEA, to the south of the DRAGON ISLES and the west of CHHMAR. It was considered one of the FIVE SEAS of the pirate lore of the FIVE SAILS.

TLACHA: Set. City in the c of LOEGRESS^(1.). Its main industry is logging (Pop. c. 28,600).

TLAROTH: Geo. Peninsula in the far north west of CUTH, serving as a marker between the SEA OF IAPETAN in the north and the SEA OF BALIMAN in the south. It is known for its large stone Lighthouse.

TLATABAMARA: Set. Major city in the c south of NOAVATUR, in the wastelands of HA ATH, along the course of the river HARIID. It is one of few major industrial centres remaining in the region and controls all industrial operations in the region (Pop. c. 100,000).

TLATHAT: Set. Once one of three major cities to rise in the c north of the UMBRA SOKHAR following the decline of the HORDE-KING'S barbarism in the region, Tlathat was adversely-affected by drying conditions and the expanding ATRAMENTAL WASTES and was largely abandoned following a PLAGUE in c. 2800 RM. It recovered since then, though today it is but a shadow of the former metropolis it once was, and much of it lies in ruins populated by a growing DEGENERATE threat (Pop. c. 18,000).

TLISEA: Rvr. River in the south east of LIDEA, flowing for 180-miles from the ENRATON and ORPHAH Mountains before meeting with its parent, the river SICERAN.

TMESIA: Arc. Large steel bridge over the eastern-most expanses of the NDEPHARAN canyon in the east of the UMBRA SOKHAR wastes. Though in ill-repair, the bridge is used to this day and links the otherwise isolated city of ONEIRACHAN with the settlement of ESCULEA, in the north west. The bridge is maintained by a coalition of troops from both settlement, who tax those crossing it.

TOAD, PLANAR: Sup. Fau. Large toad native to marshes in the south east of WESTERN MENISCEA, most notably VECTIS and CHAUTULA. It has the unprecedented ability to exist in the MATERIAL PLANE and the DREAMWORLD at the same time, fully capable of traversing one or the other as easily as other creatures can walk. Scholars of the NEAR HEMISPHERE have has little chance to study the creature, though local examinations have found a series of organs that are not found in mortals that may explain the phenomenon. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

TOARACIA OF EPHUTAS: (B. 3948 RM) Pol. One of four ruling TETRARCHS of JURRAS^(2.), based in the city of EPHUTAS.

TOAHN: Dem. 'Toahnan'. Ntn. Nation in the western coast of c BROR (1.), in the karst forests of DOHILLA. It was first studied by the KORACHANI explorer SABOMOR (1.) in 1728 RM and he later named it after himself, though the name Sabomor (2.) is only recognised by Korachan and has become antiquated, disappearing from most contemporary maps over the last centuries.

Explorations of Toahn later found expansive cave-systems formed by water-erosion of the soft sedimentary limestone rocks. The cave-systems were populated by an advanced civilisation that moved there to avoid the harsh Firmamental effects that once dominated the surface. The largest such cave around 3-miles long, with a triple-domed roof around 1,200 ft. high and is home to the capital of EHNOR.

It is famed as the birthplace of the ancient FIFTH AGE empire of DALLIAMORAA. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

TOARIAS: Set. Fortified coastal city in the east of JURRAS⁽²⁾. The city has been built to withstand raids from DERKAZI pirates (Pop. c. 17,200).

TOBAHN: Set. Small city in the south east of TEMUIA, along the course of the GREAT ROAD. It is home to many hostels and inns serving caravans and merchants passing through (Pop. c. 14,000).

TOBOSK: Set. Major walled city in the north east of the HENDECARCHY of STHAMAN, in MALAN, along the periphery of the FESTERWOOD. It straddles the banks of the river SIELL NA, which serves as a major mode of transport, with various canals and waterways linking districts of the city with each other. It is known for its many wide bridges, with entire streets built over parts of the river and its tributaries, which are hidden from view beneath great vaulted roofs (Pop. c. 172,000).

TOBRARACHAN: Set. Fortified city in the east of the KORACHANI colony of TAVVADRA, in the north west of SAMMAEA. It is home to a renowned university where the MATERIA OMNA and the ATRAMENTA and FIRMAMENT are studied (Pop. c. 24,000).

TODAAYN: Mil. Str. Fort in the c of LAASKHA. Its troops patrol the length of the pipeline, from NATHHAL to BAAYN.

TODAR: Set. Settlement in the region of SHAAT LOTHA in the c of THE SURRACH (Pop. c. 5,600).

TOGARMAH: Geo. Level basin dominating the north of TEMUJA, noted for its well-bred horses. Most warbred steeds come from this region. The same word was used by generals and military figures of the KORACHANI EMPIRE in relation to Temujan horsemen (called KESHIKS in the Temujan tongue).

TODRRA: Set. City in the far east of LIMOTH^(1.), in EASTERN LLACHATUL. It was once the seat of power of the GHAZHARID AUTOCRACY, which dominated the entire archipelago of the PANTHEON ISLES between c. 1320 – 1580 RM, but following a costly and ill-fated war with Rhea between 1511 – c. 1550 RM, the Autocracy lost power and faded into obscurity as its lands and people fragmented. The Autocracy and its followers retreated to its stronghold in Todrra, where it squandered its riches on hedonistic pursuits until its last ally died in c. 1630 RM, leaving the region in chaos.

Today Todrra has diminished greatly from its peak in around 1485 RM and the inhabited portion is surrounded by the decaying and toppled ruins of the ancient city, now overgrown and mostly reclaimed by nature (Pop. c. 32,000).

TOGHAL: Sec. Small coastal city in the west of METHUMN located in the northern arm of the HENAKARAIAN peninsula. Its main industry is fishing (Pop. c. 14,000).

TOHAL: Set. Settlement in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of SYRTIS^(1.), overlooking the bay of NOAS. Though it was once coastal it is now some miles from the coast (Pop. c. 4,600).

TOHAT: Set. Settlement in the south of AETHIOS. It is a major source of granite in the region (Pop. c. 7,500).

TOHRIS: Set. Settlement in the prefecture of HOLOLACH^(2.), in the c west of Hololach^(1.). The settlement is home to many different sects of ATRAMENTISTS who experiment on refined umbra pumped there from NAHRLLA in the north east. Medicines, restoratives and modified flora and fauna are created here (Pop. c. 1,000).

TOIMEKH: Set. City in the south east of ANANTHUL, situated along the TROPIC OF MAOCARHL. Originally an oasis, it appeared in c. 2800 RM as a caravanserai, though grew rapidly over the ensuing years (Pop. c. 238,000).

TOKAN: Rel. Str. LAX PORARI monastery in the c of ANANTHUL in the south western foothills of the ORAMON Mountains.

TOKORORI: Set. Coastal city in the north of KULIGALA, overlooking the Sea of Lethea. It is home to a deep harbour, and has recently been a base for expeditions to the island of SKOGALA, specifically the LABYRINTH OF MAARTABABRA (Pop. c. 42,000).

TOKRAT: Ind. Set. Fortified mining city in the west of EREBETH. The city and the entire region are known for their rubies (Pop. c. 11,200).

TOL OST: Mil. Str. Fortress in SABIA, overlooking the BAY OF OTROST.

TOL SAHHAR: Rvr. Waterfall in the prefecture of HOLOLACH⁽²⁾, in the c east of Hololach⁽¹⁾, along the course of the river HEMAVAR. The waterfall has a singular plunge of 610-ft from the plateau of VALLAR.

 $\overline{\text{TOLAAN}}$: See. Coastal city in the south east of $\underline{\text{HARAPPA}}^{(3.)}$ (Pop. c. 46,000). *

TOLAR: Sea. Bay in the south west of HOLOLACH^(I.) in the south east of the SEA OF MARDEN and mouth of the river RUAVAR.

TOLCHIS: Set. Fishing settlement in the prefecture of SONTADRIS in the south west of HOLOLACH^(1.), in the BAY OF TOLAR (Pop. c. 2,600).

TOLIASOR: Geo. Large mountain-chain, around 750-miles long, to the south of the BLACK MOUNTAINS. The chain serves as a border between the nations of HOLOLACH^(1.) and the MULL CITY-STATES to the west and ATARAXIA and AHKA to the east.

TOLIRANEA: Set. Large coastal city in the south west of HOLOLACH^(1.), and centre of the prefecture of HOMREA. The city is located along a bend in the river RUAVAR and is home to the largest harbour and shipyards in Hololach (Pop. c. 807,800).

TOLOS: Set. Settlement in the south east of ARKOS^(1,), north of the city of SALPINIX (Pop. c. 7,800).

TOLUNATH: Set. Settlement in the west of ANDILUTH (Pop. c. 3,800).

TOMAD: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the east of RHEA, overlooking the river ENNIA and the border with SURUTUR. It is patrolled by foot troops as well as mastodon cavalry. The fortress guards a major trade-route lining Rhea and Surutur.

TOMALOT: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the prefecture of SONTADRIS in the south of HOLOLACH^(1.), overlooking the entrance into the fjord of SONDA.

TOMAR EMMER: m. Pol. Rnk. (B. 3959 RM) Present ARCH-PRAEFECT of TAAN AN, elected in 4001 RM.

TOMB OF AELOR: see AELOR, TOMB OF.

TOMB OF ARHARNAZHA I: see ARHARNAZHA I, TOMB OF

TOMB OF AZGAT: Rui. Ancient rock-cut tomb in the c east of AZAZEM, to the north of the DORUK wastes. The origin of its name is unknown and it is unlikely that whoever was buried there (their body has long since been taken) was the source of the present name.

TOMB OF THE AUTOCRAT: Str. Mausoleum of the AUTOCRAT OF

SAGITTARIA'S true body, buried on the island of SOGASSA off the south eastern coast of $\underline{\sf SAGITTARIA}.$ The island is now part of the mainland and a small independent nation.

TOMB OF THE CENTAUR: Int. For. The gigantic shell of a dead tree in THE OLD FOREST. Its ash-coloured bark is covered in druidic runes. The titular centaur is unknown, lost to time and ignorance, though it is thought to be buried beneath the tree, itself said to be a relic of another age. The remains of the tree are a powerful FIRMAMENTAL LEY marker.

TOMB OF THE GODS: 1. Lan. Geo. Common name for the region of STOLAS used throughout LLACHATUL.

2. Geo. Specifically, the large valley region in the east of STOLAS, between the hills of the southern REGHAN Mountains and the hills of northern ANATOLA Mountains respectively. It is characterised by grey, eerily-shaped rocks, and little plant-life. The place is devoid of true culture, save the corrupted creatures known as AL AKHI who call Stolas home.

TOMB OF GOROLAVARTUR, the: Mil. Arc. Ancient cenotaph in the far south of the tribe of LINARIS, in the south of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER, in the rainforest of PNESSA. The cenotaph takes the form of a monolithic granite geometric arch onto which is carved the life of the SCION GOROLAVARTUR.

It is considered by many to be worthy of inclusion amongst the WONDERS OF THE ANCIENT WORLD, though uncertainty as to the manner of its construction has prevented its inclusion amongst the true Nine wonders.

TOMB OF THE HERODOTHS: Rui. Ancient stone-hewn sarcophagus in the far west of TAHALL, attributed to the HERODOTHS of legend. Despite the attribution there is no proof that the name is correct.

TOMB OF THE LADY: Arc. Final resting place of the mortal VESSEL LADY AEGIS in MALAN, before her rebirth as an OTHERWORLDER. The Lady sometimes travels there to meditate and commune with herself. Few mortals know of its exact location.

TOMB OF MAGHORA: See CHAMBER OF THE PLAINSLEAGUE.

TOMB OF THE PALL MIND: Rui. Ancient grave and fossilised remains of a council of the PALL MIND in the north west of KHARKHARADONTIS, in the c of SAMMAEA, in the south of the realm of the MARKED PALL.

TOMB OF THE PRINCE: also 'Tantehet'. Rel. Str. Singular pylon-shaped tomb located on a peak in the west of TETHYSIA, in the east hills of the ARGENT Mountains. The tomb was built in 3153 RM as a lookout tower. The Crown-prince Tantehet was posted there for some years and expressed a wish to be buried there if ever were he to fall in battle. His wish was granted in 3172 RM where he was killed whilst defending a town from attack. A granite tomb was built in the tower and its sides opened up so that it could bathe in the light of AARU. The tomb is guarded by a grey-clad knight at all times, who stands on duty for a whole year (his provisions brought up to him by serfs).

TOMB OF SABAR BAWALI, the: Rui. Ancient tomb in the south east of the tribe of SALARNA in the c of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. The tomb predates all known Fifth Age cultures in the region, and the name is apocryphal, with no basis in historical fact. The name Sabar Bawali likely refers to a culture hero of the region that is unknown to outsiders.

TOMB OF THE UNKNOWN KING: His. Arc. Unmarked marble tomb and open mausoleum on a steep coastal hilltop in the west of ELAT^(2.), overlooking the SEA OF SUDUNIR. Little is known of its history or the person entombed within, though it predates the old Republic of Elat^(1.) by some centuries.

TOMBALTOU: Com. Set. Trade town and caravanserai in the south east of PARAIYA. Intermittent trade-routes lead south from here to settlements in the UMBRA SOKHAR, such as MIHARAST. (Pop. c. 7,500).

TOMBS OF THE LAETIAN KINGS: Rui. Ancient tombs of ancestral FOURTH AGE LAETIAN kings, buried in the western-face of the SARRASTER Mountains in the c east of THE SURRACH. The tombs are spread across a mile of steep incline, and many of them are buried, though a few remain visible, facing the WATT! plains.

TOMBS OF THE LOST ONES: Geo. Area in the north west of SCORIA^(2.), ANUBIA. The area is replete with tombs from the dead culture of the LOST ONES, most of them looted by ANUBIAN NOMADS, their treasures sold centuries ago.

TOMBS OF TETHROD: Int. Rui. Arc. Ancient necropolis in the c north of ALMAGEST, in the VHALOID plains just south of the northern POLAR CIRCLE. There are as many as six tombs in all, spread across an area of around 20-square miles, with each tomb being hewn from the bedrock in the form of a stone temple with expansive crypts and burial chambers.

When rediscovered by Almagesti trappers in 3322 RM the tombs were buried in a thick layer of sporadic permafrost, and when unearthed they were found to be in bad condition, with the stone having frozen and thawed many times over the millennia.

The tombs are thought to be some 5,000-years old, dating to the late FOURTH AGE, and are thought to have been constructed by a splinter DVERG culture that did not survive the FADING of the Fourth Age.

TOMBS OF THASAUZ: Rui. Ancient necropolis in the south east of ZHARIAH where hundreds of HALFBLOODS from the MEGHRANIZ BHOOKH are buried. The tombs are hewn from the steep northern sides of the NIARNA Mountains. Most of the tombs have been ransacked and survive as little more than empty holes, but many more are believed to remain undiscovered, their riches intact.

TOME OF SIGHTS: Mys. Vol. Book compiling all known visions and prophecies, with commentaries on whether they came to be or not. The first volume was penned by the FARSEER Sandabbah, in CUTH in c. 3120 RM, though has been copied and updated numerous times since then. The most recent addition was penned by the scribe Elianor of NASUCHAN, in LAASKHA, in 3950 RM. See Vol II: Books of Elyden.

TOMISHI: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the south east of SAUA, overlooking the river TAKRE into eastern MALAN.

TOMMA: 1. Geo. Island in the MAUSAMMAR Archipelago, in the far west of METHMUN.

2. Mil. Str. In the above island $^{(L)}$ in the far west of METHMUN. It is home to a small Methumni fleet that patrols the SEA OF MERCUVIA.

TOMMAS OF SAGARIN: m. His. Rel. Per. (D. c.860 RM) the founder of the AUREATE FELLOWSHIP, which became the state religion of the MEDHAMANNI EMPIRE by c. 1000 RM. He preached egalitarianism and self-enlightenment, and the temples he founded became renowned as places of learning as much they were places of worship.

TOMOR: Set. Large coastal city close to the eastern coast of NAARETH, where the bulk of its imported iron ore is smelted and processed. The city, a hub of industry, is noted as one of the few regions where men are allowed to prosper. Though most serve as little more than slaves in the many foundries and manufactories that dominate the southern banks of the city, though some are able to become overseers and magnates of industry. The city has is considered one of the most metropolitan in Naareth (Pop. c. 200,000).

TOMYRESS VILKA: f. Mys. Suo. Mil. Per. (D. 3802 RM) Accomplished LAASKHAN ARCHSHAPER who fought in the WAR OF SUNDERING under the KORACHANI alliance. She wielded the famed IRON MANTLE AUSPICES OF SHADOW, and fought in the SIEGE OF ARGEA, where she gathered important intelligence and sabotaged enemy resources.

TOPHARA: Set. Settlement in the south east of HABOT, along the northern edge of the SARALAL wetlands. Its main industries are the digging of peat and cultivation of reeds (Pop. c. 5,800).

 $\underline{\text{TOROGNUR}}$: Set. Coastal city in the $\underline{\text{BHALASSIAN PENINSULA}}^{(1.)}$ in the east of the $\underline{\text{PANTHEON ISLES}}$ (Pop. c. 40,000).

TOROTOIA: Rvr. River in the c north east of RHEA, flowing south for 540miles from sources in the ARHAN HIGHLANDS, before meeting its parent, the river ENNOIA.

TON DYUN: Set. Small city in the c south west of CUTH, in the western-face of the HAMMINGHENG Mountains. Its main industry is logging and rubber production (Pop. c. 8,500).

TONADRAS: 1. Rvr. Marshlands in the c of GNOTH, dominating the east of lake ALOGIA.

2. Set. Settlement in the c of GNOTH, along the western bank of lake ALOGIA. It is known for its rice production, and provides food to merchants travelling north along the GNOTHI ROAD trade-route (Pop. c. 3,000).

TONNAK: Set. Small coastal city in the north eastern mainland of the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT (Pop. c. 14,200).

TOPHADA: Set. City in the c north west of HABOT. Its main industry is the production of jewellery, using SERPENTINE that is mined in the surrounding region (Pop. c. 24,750).

TOPHAMAEL: see SEVEN-EYED GOAT, THE.

TOPHEL: Geo. An immense hill in KHARKHARADONTIS to which the DEMIURGE RACHANAEL was taken by the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR after being freed from the pit of DAEKYN. The LEADEN THRONE was constructed within the hollows of the large hill, above which the SEPULCHRAL PALACE was erected. The hill is infamous for the numbers of gibbets that stand on its surface, in which witches, heretics, and heathen rulers have been slain over millennia. The sound of drums is common there, and is said to drown the screams of the dying – be they heretics of suffering pilgrims.

TOPHIA: 1. Geo. Pass across the NUNAKI Mountains linking eastern GNOTH with northern AQUARIIA.

2. Com. Set. Fortified trading city in the east of $\underline{\text{GNOTH}}$, known for its trade with $\underline{\text{AQUARIIA}}$ (Pop. c. 6,500).

TOPHIN: Pol. Geo. Contested region in the east of SAMMAEA, forming a border between the east of NOAVATUR and the south west of PNESSA. It is comprised primarily of mangroves and wetlands and was revealed through continued lowering of the sea levels in c. 3400 RM after which is grew in size, effectively separating the SEA OF SUPPA from the SEA OF STYGAS, turning the former body of water into the snaking GULF OF SAURIAR.

TOPORAN DOR: Geo. Enclosed region of permafrost in the far north of SABIA, between the NATTRANEN and METUN KOR Mountains.

TOR AVIS: Geo. Most temperate region in SABIA, cosseted from the cold by the SANEM and ERESHKIGAL Mountain. The region is known for the many VISUNDS that live there.

 \underline{TORA} : Set. Settlement in the c of $\underline{V\^{A}RR}$ (Pop. c. 3,800).

TORAHAL: Set. City in the c of NARTHEL along its main trade-route, linking west and east (Pop. c. 20,000).

TORAKAZ: Rui. Ancient now-abandoned KORACHANI mine in the ROVAST region of north eastern TARTAK.

TORAKODRA: Rvr. River in the west of Serrok, flowing south for 540-miles from various sources in the ASARODON and the ZERODON Mountains, before meeting the coast at the SEA OF KHURSA.

 Set. Settlement on the eponymous island in the prefecture of SONTADRIS in the south east of HOLOLACH^(1.).

TORAS: Set. City in the prefecture of HOLICHRIS^(1.) in the east of HOLOLACH^(1.). The settlement is less than 15-miles from the border with the MULL CITY-STATES, and is a centre of trade between the prefectures and city-states (Pop. c. 17,300).

TORANNA: Set. Settlement in KARAKHAS, along the southern shore of the GULF OF SUKH. The settlement and outlying villages are known for their cultivation of glasswort, or samphire, which is used in local dishes and in glassmaking (Pop. c. 10,000).

TORASZMA: see St. TORASZMA.

TORATAP HALKHIR: Soc. A time-honoured tradition and important part of reaching ADULTHOOD in KARAKHAS, KHURAUR, and HITTA, that dates back to pre-imperial times, and possibly ancient KERATIN practices. It is an important cultural touchstone, where a female aurochs is sacrificed by a temple HAEMAGOGUE. Its blood is drunk by boys who have turned 16, and its milk is drunk by girls who have turned 15, before the vessels are exchanged and the milk is drunk by the boys and the blood is drunk by the girls. The aurochs is then cooked over an open fire and consumed in a lavish feast by the families of those who have taken part in the ritual. The children then kneel and consume a part of the cooked heart, after they stand as adults.

The ritual is not as popular today as it once was – many communities find it difficult to acquire the aurochs, and other do not adhere to the old ways after millennia under KORACHANI rule. The tradition is most popular in larger cities, particularly in DEKANA, where the children of PATRICIANS undertake the ritual amid much pomp and ceremony. It risks being lost entirely in Khuraur as PARTHISAN governors push against it.

TORATAS: Set. Settlement in the prefecture of TERECHANT^(1.) in the south east of HOLOLACH^(1.). It is known for its trade with the MULL CITY-STATES via THE WAY trade-route (Pop. c. 3,800).

TORAUG: 1. Geo. Large island off the eastern coast of KASPIA.

2. Set. Small coastal city in the south west of the above island $^{(1)}$ in the far east of KASPIA (Pop. c. 12,500).

TOREDANDARA: Rvr. River in the c of PERGOST, flowing west for 550-miles from sources in the east of the DANTIS Mountains before meeting its parent, the river HAMASADANDARA.

TORGOT: Ind. Set. Important industrial city in the c north east of SYNCHTHONITHA, constructed within a PILLAR. It has a long history, with records dating back to the mid FOURTH AGE, when it was a strategic DVERG stronghold. It had grown considerably since then, and was once a coastal city, existing along the western shores of the SEA OF ONAST, though was left landlocked as the sea dried up, where it is now a guardian of a salty basin that people harvest to this day.

Most of its workers and industries are located outside the pillar, which is now home to nobles and magnates, with its uppermost levels reserved for the governors' chambers and temples (Pop. c. 72,200).

TORION: Set. Settlement in the north west of IO, overlooking DAARKEN GULF (Pop. c. 8,000).

TORJI: Set. Coastal settlement in the far south west of RAONGEN^(2.) overlooking the BAY OF ORAT. Its main industry is the mining of AMBER (Pop. c. 7,800).

TORMEA: Sct. City in the PRISON CARCERI, believed to lie somewhere beneath the city of CARIA (6.) in the Haréshk, though the two are not linked. Tormea is built around a cylindrical shaped pit, of largely natural origin, its structures built around the edges of the cavern, their inner rooms hewn from the cavern wall. A great panopticon dominates the centre of the pit, a cross-shaped skyway leading to a central amphitheatre from which its depraved government – made up of seven priests of the DEMIURGE VORROPOHAIAH – holds sway (Pop. unknown).

TORNACH: Set. City in the north of LOEGRESS^(1.), along the course of the river TEVINOR (Pop. c. 42,000).

TORNO: Ind. Set. Fortified mining settlement in the far east of PARAIYA. Its main industry is the mining of ADAMANTINE, and it is one of few regions left in Paraiya where the industry is still active (Pop. c. 8,000).

TOROGHAA: Set. Settlement in the south of the nation of DURCHAA^(1.), relatively close to the tainted region of ESCUNUR. Like many settlements in the south east of Durchaa, it is known for its trapping and fur industry (Pop. c. Pop. c. 7,800).

TOROLLHA: Geo. Large cavern-system in the east of KASPIA, dominating the western-most reaches of the KULOMIRAL plains in the UNCLAIMED LANDS. There are as many as fifty caverns, most of which have near vertical shafts that lead down for hundreds of feet to large flooded caverns.

TOROS: Set. Coastal settlement in the prefecture of SONTADRIS in the south west of HOLOLACH^(1.), known for its lobster fishing (Pop. c. 3,500).

TOROTA: Set. Small city in the east of SARAGOS (Pop. c. 18,000).

TOROTH: Lak. Lake in the south east the OLD FOREST, serving as a partial border with the far north east of RHAMIA.

TORPOR: 1. His. Ntn. Early FIFTH AGE state in what is now the south east of PARAIYA, and the north west of N'RAKH. It grew wealthy from the mining of ADAMANTINE, reaching its peak in around -1000 RM. It clashed with the SOVEREIGNTY OF THYM, and by c. -900 RM its territories in the south east had been whittled away until it was pushed back to the original city-state of Torpor, with its old mines either destroyed or taken by Thym.

This led to a slow change in culture in Torpor and the surrounding regions, with the government, until then centralised within the city itself, became fragmented, distributed amongst the rich who maintained fortified chateaus up to a distance of no more than 100-miles from Torpor. Its armies and resources became distributed, with different regions controlling different resources.

The city diminished and by c. 110 RM it had become part of a confederacy of states founded by the exiled prince ABIR PARA a few decades earlier, in 73 RM.

2. Rui. Ruined city and mine to the south west of the KHARANA woodlands in the south of PARAIYA. The city was the centre of a small early FIFTH AGE state⁽¹⁾ that grew wealthy from mining ADAMANTINE mining industry, though it eventually collapsed after a lengthy war with the SOVEREIGNTY OF THYM and by c. 110 RM it had become part of a confederacy of states founded by the exiled prince ABIR PARA a few decades earlier, in 73 RM.

The mines were exhausted in c. 400 RM, though it struggled for a few hundred years, eventually being abandoned in c. 700 RM.

TORRAN: Set. Settlement in the north west of TAMAR, along the course of the river KORNA (Pop. c. 2,950).

TORRENT, the: Myt. His. Common epithet by which the DEMIURGE SHIBBOLETH was once known.8i

TORRENT OF KARROCK: also 'THE SHIBBOLETH^(2,)' Sea. Strait between VENTHIR and TZALLRACH some 100-mile wide through which the waters of the SEA OF MYMEREA empty in a cataract that is 5-miles wide at its narrowest.

TORRVAN: m. His. Pol. Mil. Per. (B. 2549 – D. 2657 RM) warlord from the area of CAELMOR in the historic state of GLYNNED⁽²⁾ who in 2588 RM successfully united the warring territories of ENAELLON⁽²⁾, Glynned, and MOTTANIA⁽²⁾ (descendant territories of PRAETTANIA, which had collapsed in c. 2450 RM) after almost two decades of conflict, politicking, and war. He took the Glynnedean maiden ELOEVREN as his wife in 2572 RM, securing its territories before marching south towards Enaellon and Mottania, which he conquered following various conflicts, including the BATTLE OF BRYNFAEL and the SIEGE OF CAER SIDI in 2588 RM.

Once in Caer Sidi he took queen ARDFAEN of Mottania as his bride, further cementing his claim on the region, and locked up Eloevren until her death in 2612 RM.

He christened the land $\underline{\text{LOEGRESS}}^{(1.)}$ after the mythical home of the Praettanian gods. After the conquest, Torrvan declared himself King in 2612 RM and established a new capital built atop the ancient fortress of $\underline{\text{CAER SIDI}}$. His reign set the foundations for a powerful but insular kingdom.

He was a visionary leader whose father had fed stories of chivalrous myth and ancient Praettanian splendour, which informed his beliefs as he came of age amid warring territories stained by the collapse of the oncegreat kingdom.

He ruled for almost 70-years (45 of them as king), and was blessed by unnaturally-long life, with some whispering he was a HALFBLOOD or SCIONIC CREATURE, though he never made such allusions himself. He fought to keep his land united throughout his rule, and had multiple safeguards and contingencies in place to ensure that the kingdom he struggled so hard to unite would remain so after his death.

The shrine of TAELL DAN was built around his tomb, becoming a place of pilgrimage and cultural importance until the end of the rise of THE TAELLANNIR 500-years later, though it is largely forgotten today.

TORTOISE, SAMMAEAN GREAT LONG-NECKED: Fau. Gigantic land tortoise native to the south east of SAMMAEA, around the SEA OF ETAGIRIA. They can grow up18-ft. long, around 6-ft. of which are made up by their eponymous necks.

Once ranging from the west of ZAKRON to the east of QARALAM, they are now rare, due to hunting and encroaching of cities and urban areas. They are now most common in the south east of Qaralam, south of the NACRE ROAD, where they are respected and given the space they need in which to live. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

TORUT: Set. Settlement in the south east of THETIS (Pop. c. 6,000).

TOSEFA: 1. Lak. Seasonal endorheic lake in the c of the DESOLATION OF ASTUDAN, along the path of the northern POLAR CIRCLE. It is fed by seasonal rivers created through both snowmelt and winter storms. The lake has been known to disappear for years and may only appear for as little as a few days. It is thought that the settlement of Tosefa⁽²⁾ once relied on a more permanent lake that disappeared years ago.

2. Rui. Stone ruins in the north of ASTUDAN. Crafted from heavy blue stones, what remains of this city's structures are wind-polished and carved into smooth undulating shapes filled with hollows and sharp edges.

TOSEH: 1. Set. City in the c of SARASTRO, overlooking the SEA OF TIAMA (Pop. c. 40,000).

2. Set. Settlement in the c of KORACHAN. It is a stop along the RED ROUTE and provides fuel and food to those travelling the route (Pop. c. 9,800).

TOSLETH: Tec. Str. Gigantic siphon engine and surrounding city in the south of KARAKHAS, in the region of TESCORA. It is a major producer of raw UMBRA in the region, which is pumped north via the TOSLETHI UMBRA PIPELINE (Pop. c. 13,800).

TOSLETHI UMBRA PIPELINE: Sup. Ind. Str. UMBRA pipeline in the east of KARAKHAS, running for over 740-miles from SIPHON ENGINES in the city of TOSLETH in the south of Karakhas to the harbours of LOZATHA. The pipeline passes through largely uninhabited lands that fall prey to ERITEI marauders and is heavily guarded by patrols stationed in the forts IADARA and SATIRA, in the south and north, respectively.

An ambitious new pipeline is being constructed leading east directly into SARASTRO across the UMBRA SOKHAR. It reached 120-miles before works were halted in 4007 RM at the city of ZHAKACHAN as the threat of war in the north appeared, and unrest with the ETHERI of the Umbra Sokhar increased. It lies uncompleted for the time-being.

 $\underline{\text{TOSSU}}$: Set. Settlement in the north west of $\underline{\text{SAUA}}$, along the shores of lake $\underline{\text{PAVO}}$. Its main industry is crab fishing (Pop. c. 6,000).

TOTAARA: Ind. Set. Coal mining settlement in the south west of VAALK, in the ATRAMENTAL sinkhole of GLEED (Pop. c. 1,000).

TOTER: Pol. Geo. One of the nine kingdoms of ELALLIA, located in the west of the nation.

TOTH: Pol. Set. Capital city of HARAPPA(³⁾, in the north of Sammaea, along the course of the river SEKA. Originally, a MHAROKKIN city, it became independent in 3754 RM, following instability caused by the SUNDERING OF THE KORACHANI EMPIRE, with many other settlements following over the next centuries.

It is a prosperous conurbation that is made up of no less than seven separate cities spread over a close area. Traditionally ruled by a council, with members elected from district areas of the component settlements, its reabsorption by Sarastro in c. 3804 RM saw it ruled by a governor appointed by SATHEP THE RISEN instead, though the council still remains to oversee matters within the city.

It is an industrial hub and the many open-cast mines that pepper the peninsula are its main source of wealth. The place is renowned for its elaborate architecture, red stucco onion-domes and horseshoe arches and simple yet elegant white plastered walls. It is a stop along the RED ROUTE, which brings much trade to the city (Pop. c. 491,000).

TOTHA: Rvr. River in the north of HARAPPA(^{3.)}, flowing north from the HARAPPAN(^{1.)} Mountains into the SEA OF LISASSA. The river is known for its bifurcation along the flat plains of TENERRA 7-miles west of the city of TOTH, with the Totha continuing east and the river TENE continuing north.

TOTHOR: Set. Settlement in the north of the emirate of LIMOTH⁽²⁾ in the c of Limoth⁽¹⁾. Its main industry is agriculture. (Pop. c. 7,100).

TOTHRIS: Set. Major city in the c of the prefecture of HOLOLACH^(2.) in Hololach^(1.). It is a centre of ALCHEMICAL research and also forms a part of THE WAY trade-route, with various alchemical tinctures being sold to merchants travelling through the city (Pop. c. 84,000).

TOTIS: Geo. Expansive fumarole in the volcanically-active region of CHANAOSATI, in the ACCA HOAL depression in the north of TAAN AN. The centre of the fumarole is made up of a stone-like mound made up of the slow deposit of elements from the fumarole itself, which is surrounded by prismatic pools.

TOUAEON: Sup. Geo. Region of ATRAMENTAL TAINT in the north west of PARAIYA, east of the small city of TURSAU. The region is riddled with DUSTSTONE and is dangerous to travellers and is of little use.

The region is categorised as a $\underline{\text{MODERATE THREAT}}$ by the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI}}$ Institute of Atramental Studies.

TOUL: Set. Settlement in the Atramental region of THAT in the c north east of MHAROKK, known for its SIPHON ENGINES that extract the ATRAMENTA and pipe it north east to SAFFA.

TOUL VHABO ESCHA: (B. 3961 RM) Pol. Current king of the ruling ESCHA DYNASTY of the PANTHEON ISLES.

TOUTAT: m. His. Pol. Per. (B. 1906 – D. 2002 RM) merchant prince of TISHANNA who in 1922 RM was wed to the DERAEIAN princess NABIRIA in an arranged marriage that established the TISHANNAN MONARCHY, of which he was the first king. His rule legitimised the greed of the Tishannan merchant houses, which were granted lands in the form of duchies, becoming the first nobles of Tishanna (later renamed TISARA).

'TOWER, the': Mys. Lan. Soc. Common expression amongst those who practice the FIRMAMENTAL arts, referring to the act of training and study. To 'Climb the Tower' means to gain experience in the art. The saying is most common in MENISCEA but translations of it can be found across ELYDEN, wherever established Firmamental traditions are also found.

TOWER OF THE BLOOD MOON: Rui. Ancient pitted towers on the isle of YLANDA in the waters between northern LERAMUGH and southern MIROVEA. Rising some 150-ft. high, the structure is constructed of what appears to be a seamless piece of metal, tarnished by age, with no windows or doors of any kind. The three towers, which emerge from the same singular structure, are named for the bass carving that crowns it, depicting the BLOOD MOON of ARAKHAMÉ.

TOWER OF ERETH: Int. Rui. Ancient ADAMANTINE tower erected in the FOURTH AGE by PLAGI and DVERGAI engineers during the WAR OF SCOURGING. The tower is now deserted, half-buried by the corrosive soils of the MOREG in the south of ANUBIA.

TOWER OF THE EYE: For. Forest in the c of TEMUJA, south of the TOGARMAH, situated along a peak of the MORAN Mountains, overlooking the surrounding plains. Though it is manned to this day, it is little more than a relic of an ancient time where warring tribes ruled the area.

TOWER OF LAONICUS: Rui. Ancient tower in the southern face of the AIFÉ Mountains in the south west of LOEGRESS⁽¹⁾, dating back to the early FIFTH AGE. It is named after a warlord that dominated the region during this time, and its remnants crown the top of a wide tower. Ruined foundations of an ancient town dot the landscape around it, now barely recognisable from the natural realm around them.

TOWER OF LHUKH: see LHUKH, TOWER OF.

TOWER OF THE ROSE: Ind. Str. Fortified manor in the south of AZAZEM famed for the ancient barrak rose tree that grows in its courtyard, and is said to be over 2000 years old. The manor was taken by the fledgling HOUSE EREN in 3821 RM, which now operates a small but lucrative business there, tending to and selling the rare roses, which are near extinct around the INNER SEA REGION.

TOWER OF SATHA, the: Rui. Classical imperial tower outside of SATHA, in SKAROS.

TOWER OF STUDIES, the: see ANGOR.

TOWER OF SYBARIS: Rui. Ancient ruined tower on a solitary island in the DRAGON ISLES, its roots lying in the dawn of the SHIE race. Little is known about it though nearby legends indicate that the place was a place of unbridled hedonism and sin.

TOWER OF JUPITER BELUS: see JUPITER BELUS^(2.).

TOWERS, the: Geo. Rui. Series of buttes in the south east of the DESOLATION OF ASTUDAN, with the remnants of ancient black towers on them. There were once dozens of such structures, scattered over a region a few hundred miles in area, though they are all ruined today, most of them weathered into oblivion and crumbled into ruin. Nothing is known of the culture responsible for the towers, and they are known to few today. They feature in some TEMUJAN creation myths though remain mysterious structures there also.

TOWERS OF INVESTITURE, the: also 'Tower of Investiture'. Edu. Sup. Str. FIRMAMENTAL college located on an island in the BROKEN LANDS. It is thought that there is one tower for each SPHERE of FIRMAMENTISM and there are dozens of towers in all, each of differing size and importance.

Some are empty, being governing structures in nought but name, while others are heavily staffed, and destination to many pilgrimages.

The philosophies and rules of the spheres are written and recorded in the Towers, which play the role of guild house, prison, library, and governing structure to their respective spheres. The towers are thought to be a part of the governing body that is centred in the MINARET OF LIGHT in MENISCEA.

TOZ, THE GODDESS: Pol. Dei. Ruler and self-professed deity of the city-state of NYCTERIS, in the c of SAMMAEA. She is an OTHERWORLDER of LAMIAN heritage, many now believe that she was born from the spirit of a mortal ALCHEMIST who lived over 5,000 years ago in the same region, whose actions were responsible for the death of a metropolis that existed in roughly the same region as Nycteris.

She is obsessed with returning to the OTHERWORLD and, as such, has become a skilled ANIMIST, spending most of her time in the otherworld, while her mortal body lies catatonic, guarded by her halfblooded sons. Through the toil of her subjects, she has constructed a powerful TECHNARCANE engine that enhances her shaping, allowing her to sojourn into the otherworld for days on end.

Since her founding of the city of the city of Nycteris c. 3821 RM she has cultivated a particular image of herself of a death deity to be feared and respected.

TRAAGRIA: Sup. Geo. Highly FIRMAMENTALLY TAINTED region in the south east of the PARTHISAN colony of EZHIRAYA⁽²⁾. It is noted for the many SUNSTONES that are found there.

TRAAIA: Set. Settlement in the north of MECHABET, along the banks of the river ACHET. Its main industry is river fishing and it also forms a part of the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 7,800).

TRAAK: Ind. Sup. Set. UMBRA mine in the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region of LARSHEN in the c north of VAALK. The mines pump and refine raw umbra, which is pumped to the capital in ANAKARRA (Pop. c. 1,000).

TRAAL: Geo. Small mountainous region in the c north of VAALK, forming the north western-most part of the ARIS Mountain and source of the river STORAGH.

TRAATUN: Set. Settlement in the northern foothills of the DUMACHA
Mountain, in the south west of MECHABET. It is home to a CHAPTER (2) of the WHITE LEAGUE, where it serves as a recruiting centre (Pop. c. 7,200).

TRABAGH: Set. Small city in the of the MULL CITY-STATES known for its granite mines (Pop. c. 15,800).

TRACHIA: also 'City of Idols'. Set. Old city in the south west of LIMOTH^(1.), overlooking the THARACASSAN waters. The city is renowned for the BLOODSTONE idols that stand at its periphery looking south over coastal cliffs. The idols are thought to be extremely old, belonging to an unknown culture that existed in the area early in the FOURTH AGE. Their feet are littered with eons-worth of corpses, attributable to various different creatures, most of them left in tribute or self-sacrifice.

The culture of self-sacrifice died out centuries ago, and the current city shuns the idols, living instead a secular existence, farming mosses and lichens (Pop. c. 68,000).

TRACT: Set. Settlement in the c north west of the TEMPLAR STATES. It is a major producer of cotton (Pop. c. 4,800).

TRADAYN: Set. City in the c west of LAASKHA, in the far west of the region of THAZAKHA. It is a major manufacturer of rifles and bullets (Pop. c. 45,000).

TRADETONGUE: also 'Eastern Pidgin'. Lan. Unofficial language commonly spoken amongst merchants and diplomats in BAATAN, KASPIA, SAUA, TEMUJA, and VIRAHAN, as well as the north of AHRISHEN and the west of MALAN.

Though their languages are today unique, these nations all share a common language root (possibly from ancient NAHORIA). This root is used as a basis for both spoken and written tradetongue, which dates back to the early FIFTH AGE and never evolved beyond its basic purpose. See Vol II: Languages.

TRADINE: Lak. Lake in the c south of ANANTHUL, along the course of river ENARADINE.

TRADRU: 1. Rvr. River in the c east of TAHALL, and tributary of the larger river GATHAMED.

2. Lak. Lake, forming part of the course of the above river.

TRAGIC KINGDOM, the: Int. His. Nm. Extinct nation, its original name now forgotten, off the western-coast of THE SURRACH, in what is today known as the GHOUL ISLES. The nation emerged in c. -200 RM and grew throughout the first centuries of the KORACHANI dominance around THE INNER SEA, and reached its peak in c. 480 RM, where it was known to trade with PARTHIS (then PARTHIA) and the Korachani empire to the east and other lands to the west. Its capital, ZADUH, was a great harbour with gilded domes and needle-like spires.

Contact with the greater world decreased suddenly in the years leading to 500 RM, ending completely by c. 505 RM. Accounts of the Surrachi people say that a terrible Atramental Plague struck the island in 579 RM and that contact was severed with the island to keep the Surrachi mainland safe. The waters of the Strait of Khadras were heavily patrolled, and anyone caught leaving the island was shot at without questions asked, though little contact was made with natives of the island. See Vol III: Extinct States.

TRAHAN: Set. Farm region in the north of VAALK, south of the VORRUN hills located in a fertile region with soil nourished by silt carried north east from the river STORAGH (Pop. c. 2,800).

TRAIOCH: Set. Settlement in KORACHANI territories in the north of SAMMAEA, 30-miles south of NUTHACHAN. It forms a part of the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 10,600).

TRAITOR KING, the: Pol. His. A historical HENDECARCH of the MALANI HENDECARCHY of ATALLUA who betrayed his home c. 2620 RM, resulting in a short but bloody war led by the LADY AEGIS. This war led to the shaping of the general borders of Malan as we know them today.

TRAGA: Set. Small fortified city in the far north east of LYRIDIA. Originally a caravanserai that goes back to c. 3000 RM, the city emerged in c. 3790 RM and has steadily grown since then into a hub of foreign trade with AHRISHEN via the GREAT ROAD, eschewing the regions' troglodyte traditions in favour of more cosmopolitan outlook (Pop. c. 16,000)

TRAGIDEJH: For. Dense rainforest in the west of ELEKHID, forming a northern extension of the WAELMIGHI rainforest.

TRAIAN SQUARE: Arc. Large public square in the city ALMAGEST.

TRAISIA: Set. Small city in the far north of SKAROS, in the region of GNASSIA, north of the SEA OF APHOTIS. It is known for its production of the popular port known as HEIRLOOM that is widely consumed in the KORACHANI EMPIRE and, to a lesser extent, across the INNER SEA REGION (Pop. c. 12,200).

TRAKIA: Dem. 'Trakian'. Ntn. Small nation to the south of the TARAHID ANNEXES, west of the SEA OF BYSSOS, in the north of SARASTRO. It encompasses a region of rocky terrain with harsh canyons in the north and badlands in the c. Its climate is dry, and there is only one notable river flowing through its territories – the SISARA, which flows east into the Byssos from KHALHAT.

Appearing in 3155 RM, Trakia emerged from the collapse of the TARAHID STATES following the abandonment of the KORACHANI occupation to the INTERREGES in 2974 RM and the subsequent withdrawal of the Interreges themselves in 3047 RM. This left the region in chaos, and it eventually fractured into multiple parts. Though the north would eventually reform into the Tarahid Annexes, the southernmost cities united earlier, expanding farther south into newly-exposed lands following the rapid retreat of the Sea of Byssos over the past centuries, eventually becoming known as Trakia.

Its people were descended from merchants and traders who, less than two centuries earlier had ruled the mercantile city of $\underline{ROAH}^{(1)}$, which was rich from trade with surrounding nations, including \underline{LHAUS} territories in the south. Roah collapsed in 2940 RM after foreign disease made their way into its streets, slowly killing its people. That, and a change in traderoutes left it devastated, its people fleeing, re-establishing themselves in rural communities that would later join with the refugees of the collapse of the Tarahid States to found Trakia.

The city of $\underline{\text{HOLOTHAN}}$ became capital in 3213 RM, and it has a storied past, going back to at least 1000 RM, when it was a major trade city, and it later became a centre of oghur slavery, where $\underline{\text{THRACIAN OGHURS}}$ were bred and broken for sale across the west of the INNER SEA. Thorough the slave trade has since waned, OGHUR SLAVES remain a ubiquitous sight across Trakia.

Its southern border is contested with the lhaus domains of KHALHAT, which lay ancestral claims to much of southern Trakia, leading to a 600-miles long stretch that has been contested for some years. Both sides of the border are well-guarded, though conflict is uncommon. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

TRALL: Rvr. River in the MULL CITY-STATES, flowing south for 200-miles from sources in the EBUT SAT Mountains before emptying into the BAY OF BOKKA.

TRALLOMRU: Set. Small city in the north east of TAHALL. It forms a part of THE WAY trade-route and its merchants are amongst the few who are allowed into GNOTH to trade freely (Pop. c. 18,000).

TRALOU: Set. Settlement in the far east of PARAIYA, along the border with LIDEA and the course of the river SHIBBOLETH^(3.). Its main industry is the cultivation of cotton (Pop. c. 8,300).

TRANIAR: Set. Expansive conurbation city in the north west of ABATTUR, along the course of the river SEBRENNA. The conurbation is centred around a single large with hundreds of large fortified homesteads and hamlets around it, which control vast tracts of farmlands.

TRANSIENT ENGINE: Sup. Med. Tec. Extremely advanced form of TECHNARCANE being that is autonomous and self-ambulatory. Often looking similar to HARDSUITS, though without a MORTAL inside them, they are completely artificial in origin, and were developed over the past centuries following advancements in technarcana and cloning techniques. Though theoretically their creation was possible up to a millennium in the past, the advanced manufacturing techniques required in their creation meant that they were not viable on a large scale until relatively recently.

PARTHIS is their main producer in the INNER SEA REGION, though they are also manufactured in PELASGOS in smaller numbers and of more limited function.

TRANSMORTAL: see TRANSMORTALITY.

TRANSMORTALITY: also 'Transhumanism'. Sup. Tec. Med. Soc. A MORTAL whose body and/or mind have been enhanced through the use of TECHNARCANA, SHAPING, BIOMECHANICS, FLESHWRIGHTING or any combination of the above, or through various other means. Some scholars argue that VAT-BORN beings, such as CLONES are also examples of postmortals, though others prefer to use the term specifically to WOMB-BORN individuals that were altered following their birth. The term is not one that is commonly used, and was coined by philosophers and scholars to label the growing trend in some social circles of individuals increasingly seeking to modify their bodies beyond their natural physical capabilities. Though there are some organisations where like-minded transmortals gather and discuss their beliefs and goals, there is little in the form of a unified philosophy or belief of transmortality, and most individuals who would be considered to be transmortals give little thought to the label.

The most common and readily-accepted form that postmortality takes is the search for longer life. This is something that mortals have sought since their creation and they first learnt of the disparate gulf that exists between their own lifespans and those of, say, the DEMIURGES and SCIONS of old, or even OTHERWORLDERS and <a href="HALFBLOODS. Those with the means to are able to extend their lives to well beyond their natural span, whether through the use of ATRAMENTAL drugs, technarcana or fleshwrighting (where body parts or ailing organs are replaced by technarcana or grafted replacements, respectively). Royalty, religious leaders, and those from the upper echelons of society have sought longevity to varying degrees of success throughout most of mortal existence, and today it is not uncommon or unexpected for rulers or the wealthy to live two centuries or more.

Another common form of postmortality is the grafting of technarcane ORTHOSES or the manipulation of the body by fleshwrights to create new organs or limbs, or through drug use to change the way the body functions. These processes can not only replace lost limbs or heal injuries but can add entirely new organs or abilities. Extra limbs or digits are somewhat common, as is surgery that replaces eyes with technarcane or vat-grown versions that have a greater spectral range, or ability to view in low-light conditions than the recipients' native eyes.

Less common is the ability of parents to alter the bodies of their unborn children. This is a far more difficult task, that delves into the deepest secrets of fleshwrighting, and it can allow parents to choose certain features that they want their children to have, such as hair, skin, or eye colour. On a more pragmatic note, this is used by some societies to create soldiers or workers, whose bodies are engineered to be stronger or tougher. Many scholars have raised concerns about the ethical merits of such BESPOKE BIRTHS, as they are often known, but the tyrants and magnates in control of such things care little for such implications.

The prevalence or acceptance of postmortality varies from region to region and even from city to city within the same nation, though in general most nations will have a general outlook towards the practice that might vary in certain cities or regions. For instance, most transmortals PARTHIS tend to prefer altering their bodies through organic surgery or the use of fleshwrighting, whereas KORACHAN and its dependencies tend to prefer technarcane orthoses, though that is not to mean that individuals would not gravitate to the other.

Typically, those who are more likely to be seduced by transmortality are the rich and powerful – rulers, members of the most powerful PATRICIAN HOUSES, mighty technologists or magnates, or those amongst the highest echelons of the clergy – who have both the means and the inclination to do so. Only the most obsessed or dedicated freemen or patricians of lesser-regarded Houses would have the means to seek transmortality. To those born in lower social classes and castes the dream of transmortality will rarely become anything more than just that – a dream. As a result, those low-born who have transmittal aspirations tend to look upon those with the means to do so – whether they want to or not – with bitterness if not outright hatred. Though this is a very small demographic as most HELOTS and SLAVES are too concerned with merely surviving to care about the excesses of the rich.

TRASHA: Set. Small city in the east of FARIS. Its main industry is hunting and trapping, and the selling of pelts to the south (Pop. c. 15,100).

TRASI: 1. Geo. Island off the eastern coast of THUMAL.

2. Set. Fishing settlement in the east of THUMAL (Pop. c. 5,100).

TRATHRO: Bev. Nectar liquor drunk across equatorial areas of EASTERN SAMMAEA, including CHEIRA, SERROK, and PNESSA. It is quite popular and is even exported to foreign lands, where it is an exotic drink to those who can afford it. See Vol II: Beverages.

TRATI: Set. City in the east of KORACHAN, along the banks of the river ICHORIA. It is known for its inventors and technological tradition, and forms a part of the SULPHUR ROAD, linking Korachan with VÂRR. It is home to a large manufactory belonging to MARUHABAL, a producer of fine firearms (Pop. c. 43,000).

TRATON: Set. Thriving port in the far north west of SAGITTARIA known for its expansive fishing fleet that plies the SEA OF SERPENTS (Pop. c. 20,000).

TRAMIS: Set. Major coastal fort in the south east of RHAMIA, overlooking the entrance into the northern-most part of the SEA OF PYREA.

TRANSIENCE: north. 'Transient'. Sup. Rnk. Branch of ATRAMENTISM concerned with electricity in all its forms. It is common in PARTHIS, as well as the HIGH- and LOW-EMPIRES.

TRAPPA: Set. Settlement in the north of HOAMMI territories in the north of SAMMAEA (Pop. c. 20,000).

TRATIUM: Rui. Abandoned region in VEPAR, LYRIDIA DHAI comprised of 5 settlements which emerge in c. 2800 following the discovery of gold in the area. The area prospered for hundreds of years, though, by 3180 RM yields had trickled to a minimum. Within a decade the entire area was abandoned and remains now in ruins.

TRAVAR: See. Settlement in the c of VÂRR, in the north eastern hills of the ADALLA Mountains the settlement quarries stone and quartz that is used around Vârr (Pop. c. 2,800).

TRAZAL: Ind. Set. Settlement in the c north of AZAZEM. Its main industry is lead mining (Pop. c. 5,200).

TREASURES OF SESHARRIB: see SESHARRIB, TREASURES OF.

TREATY OF BAAYN: see BAAYN, TREATY OF.

TREATY OF THE STRAIT: Pol. His. Treaty enacted in –328 RM between the nations around the NÁRTHELISTRAIT, standardising trade and prices in the region, leading to stabilisation and growth of cities. The treaty was abandoned in -58 RM.

TREBAURA: Geo. Small mountain in the north of LOEGRESS^(1.), forming an eastern extension of the far larger VOULLOR Mountains. Like its parent mountain, the Trebaura is ancient and well-worn, home to sparse woodlands and varied wildlife.

TREE-DWELLERS, the: His. Ntn. Ancient FIFTH AGE culture that lived in the c north of LLACHATUL, in what are now the north of ATARAXIA, CISNERIA and ALAM BETHYL. They inherited these lands in the early Fifth Age following the WAR OF SCOURGING that decimated mortal populations at the end of the FOURTH AGE left the area largely uninhabited.

Allies of the Demiurge Rachanael held this region during the War of Scourging and cut down the vast virgin forests that had existed here since the Time of Shaping to fuel their great industries. This included monolithic trees the scale of which can only be imagined to this day.

As mortals re-emerged in the FIFTH AGE they encountered the vast swathes of open land where once these great forests grew. Instead of beauteous woodlands they found plains peppered with the stumps of dead trees. Eventually they would carve out the innards of these stumps, making dwellings within them and their deep roots.

This culture of so-called Tree-dwellers is thought to have reached its peak in around 100 RM, though it would wane over the coming centuries, dying out by 400 RM.

The culture left no written records all we have to rely on is pottery, carved wooden items, and their hewn homes, which lie forgotten today, covered in lichen and mosses, their tunnels and abodes covered in soil and thick humus from millennia of neglect.

They are most notable in the plains of AUROREN, along the border between Cisneria and the far western colonies of ALMAGEST, where dozens of examples remain today, forgotten in the wildernesses. Some were repopulated by troglodytes over recent history, but few such examples survived predation and banditry.

TREE OF AMARNA: Flo. See AMARANA, TREE OF.

TREE OF ARCYRIA: Flo. See ARCYRIA, TREE OF.

TREE OF AGEN: Flo. See AGEN, TREE OF.

TREE OF AGES: Flo. See AGES, TREE OF.

TREE OF AVÉNETH: Flo. See AVÉNETH, TREE OF.

TREE OF BEPHESH: Flo. See BEPHESH, TREE OF.

TREE OF OFFERINGS: see OFFERINGS, TREE OF.

TREE OF DHOSTAR: Flo. See DHOSTAR, TREE OF.

TREE OF IAVALA: Flo. See IAVALA, TREE OF.

TREE OF KERAS: Flo. See KERAS, TREE OF.

TREE OF LACYSILWA: Flo. See LACYSILWA, TREE OF.

TREE OF SALLEM: Int. Flo. Sup. See SALLEM, TREE OF.

TREE OF SAROM: Flo. See SAROM, TREE OF.

TREE OF SHARHAM: see SHARAM, TREE OF.

TREE, TEMPLE OF THE: Rel. Str. Monolithic temple in FATH that was constructed in c. 2120 RM to protect the sacred TREE OF SAROM. The tree died in c, 2300 RM, leading to the decline of the surrounding religion, though the temple remains occupied and serves as a final bastion to those who still revere the tree.

TREE TEMPLE OF GEXE: Rui. Ancient gigantic tree stump, situated in the c of ALAM BETHYL. The stump has a circumference of some 250-ft. and once formed part of an ancient forest that is thought to have been cut down by ancient industries in the FOURTH AGE.

Early in the FIFTH AGE the stump was hollowed out and carved into a temple, with chambers that go deep into the roots of the tree, becoming part of an expansive culture that had died out by around 400 RM. The culture left no written records so little is known of it but is thought to have ranged from the north of present-day ATARAXIA into ALAM BETHYL and is known amongst KORACHANI historians only as the TREE-DWELLERS. The stump is largely ignored today, though it has, at various times in recent history, been used by druidic groups and other fringe cults.

TREE OF UALRI: see UALRI, TREE OF.

TREESINGING: Sup. Mus. Rnk. A form of FIRMAMENTISM practiced in MALAN. Its practitioners are adept at SHAPING trees, using an ancient form of singing to carry out their shaping. It is similar to BRANCHBRAIDING, though is distinct in that it is very much a form of shaping and was, during its heyday, a more proactive tradition, often used in combat whereas branchbraiding is much slower See Vol IV: Shaping.

TRENED: Set. Settlement in the c of IZABAL^(1.). It is a major course of iron to the nation (Pop. c. 4,800).

TRETA: Set. City in the south west of NÁRTHEL, that trades south west with MYT DAR in SALOROC (Pop. c. 32,000).

TRETHIGH: Geo. Mountains in the south west of SAMMAEA in the AMMASHI^(1.) peninsula, in the far east of AMMESH.

TRIA: Set. Settlement in the region of KATURUSH, in the west of THE SURRACH. It is known for its pomegranate groves (Pop. c. 7,200).

TRIARCHY: Pol. The ruling body of HARA from 438 to 807 RM. It emerged following the last king, SAEMDAR, died in battle against KORACHANI forces without an heir, forcing his advisors to elect 3 temporary rulers in his place – the Triarchy, with a member form their own ranks, a lord and merchant-prince filling the posts. It later became a Tetrarchy, with the appointment of the Goethan warlord MANKH in 441 PM.

The Tetrarchy ended in 807 RM with the appearance of the new nation of HARÉ SHKA.

TRICIA VISANN: f. His. Soc. Per. (D. c. 2680 RM) matriarch of PATRICIAN HOUSE VISANN who in c. 2600 RM founded the famous VIVARIUM VISANN, which remains in operation today.

TRIDAES: Set. Settlement in the far west of TISARA, in the north eastern foothills of the ARGENT Mountains (Pop. c. 5,000).

TRIDUAN: m. Pol. His. Per. (B. 3087 – D. 3170 RM) Once-king of LOEGRESS^(1.) acceded from his father in 3111 RM. He was the last king of Loegress, and it was during his reign that the OTHERWORLDER TAELLANNIR was reborn in front of his very eyes in a miraculous transmutation from the still-living body of his advisor and the court ARCHSHAPER.

The following months were tumultuous at best and utterly unprecedented, for how could a kingdom prepare for such an event? The people of Loegress almost immediately began worshipping the glass-skinned alien-faced being as a living deity, turning against the monarchy – by then established for over 500-year – which suffered under the rapid shift in culture. The city of CAER SIDI^(1,) swelled with an influx of people eager to look upon their brilliant new deity, and within a year most were already referring to the Taellannir as the new ruler of Loegress. Out of the public eye, Triduan feared for his life and that of his family. His own advisors were panicking, with some urging him to capitalise on the situation, other telling him to flee the city, and others still whispering to him to eliminate the otherworlder. He discounted the third option almost immediately, as it would make a martyr of an already important figure.

Eventually he opted to openly endorse her, becoming her envoy. He spent time with her, trying to unravel her non-sequiturs and riddle-like admonishments. Words that his remaining advisors would dedicate more and more time to deciphering, leading to them becoming the first https://doi.org/10.1007/j.com/html/mir/.

As the religion grew, Triduan became vilified by the populace as a gaoler and gatekeeper of her powers. He stopped his forces from apprehending protestors and rabblerousers, fearing what would happen if he used force against them. Feeling the climate goring ever worse, he made the decision to abdicate his position and, with the backing of most of his advisors and dukes, signed a treaty prevented his bloodline from making any future claims to the throne, under condition that the nobility be allowed to retain its lands, which were to be handed over to the new church.

The process was completed in in 3142 RM, after which he fled east into KOMMEA with his family and closest followers, into unstable lands still reeling from the overthrowing of the CUNOMAGLIAN tyrants over a century earlier. There he settled down in in the north of the nation and founded a new city – HOLLAMEA – there in c. 3150 RM atop the ruins of a great palace, which was home to an ancient line of rulers known as the DONAGERS. From there he established a new rule and made alliances with the disparate people of the region, building his son ELDHUIN up into a champion of the people who married a favoured maiden descended from the Donagers themselves and whose own daughter, ARLEIE, would go on to found the nation of Kommea and become its first queen.

TRIDUAN'S COLUMN: Str. Monument in the c north west of KOMMEA, overlooking lake ATHUIN. It is named after TRIDUAN, the exiled king of LOEGRESS^(1.), who settled in Kommea in 3142 RM, whose granddaughter ARLEIE became the first queen of Kommea. The monument is made of white marble and takes the form of a wide column on top of which is a bronze statue of Triduan, mounted on a horse. The great column is surrounded by four bronze rampant CALCATRICES.

TRIDUUM: Mil. Str. Fortress in the north of KORACHAN, 45-miles north west of TANTAL. The fortress guards mountain passes north into CHTHYRID.

TRIEMON: Soc. Pol. PATRICIAN HOUSE with major holdings in DURCHAA, SABIA and ALMAGEST. It was once a part of the ATRAAGOH SYNDICATE, which operated extensive mines in the region of ERIHAAS, and it still controls the lands on which the mines were located to this day. The mines fell silent in c. 3945 RM after copper in the area reserves dwindled. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

TRIFECTATE, the: Pol. Three sibling SHAMEN in the south east of PERGOST, who in 3843 RM were possessed by the spirit of what many believe to be the SPIRIT of the LAST ORREX. Together they are extremely powerful SHAPERS, though the people of Pergost, fragmented as they are, do not recognise their rule. Nevertheless, they have garnered a sizeable following in the south east of Pergost, within the region of ETHOROST. which has grown increasingly independent over the last decades, leading many to think it will renounce the Federation completely soon to form its own state.

TRIGGAS: Rvr. River in the west of PNESSA, flowing south for 840-miles from sources in the LOWER DANOSOTH and FASUN Mountains before reaching the coast at the GULF OF SAURIAR.

TRII: See Coastal settlement in the south west of PNESSA. Its main industry is fishing (Pop. c. 3,500).

TRIKHOLL: Rvr. River in the north west of PELASGOS, flowing south from the BATHAKOL Mountains.

TRILLOR: Geo. Chain of islands off the eastern coast of HALEDONIA in the north east of EASTERN LLACHATUL. They are largely uninhabited though are noted for the eerie basaltic ruins found on many of them, whose origins are unknown.

TRINITANIA: 1. Dem. 'Trinitanian'. Ntn. Small free demesne in the far north of KHARKHARADONTIS, surrounding the southern-most reaches of the SEA OF UGOLOTH. It is humid and verdant, and it has hot summers and winters that are dominated by light yet constant rains that form when moist air from the Ugoloth meet warm airs descending from the northern face of the EGERIAN Ridge. It is devoid of the thick rainforests that dominate other regions at the same latitude due to the being surrounded by so much land.

It emerged from the lost Korachani colony of Ostrachan (now Ostrohan) in c. 2400 RM, growing wealthy from supporting the Salt Road west to Andiluth and east across the rest of Northern Sammaea.

More contact with the east brought SIRIPHAGAN merchant-lords to the region, who married into its own nobility, establishing a new plutocratic regime. This new regime founded the city of TRINITANIA $^{(2)}$ as their capital, gaining control of the entire region and securing all trade in the surrounding area, which by c. 2500 RM had become known as the Free Land of Trinitania $^{(1)}$.

In 2994 RM PARTHIS attempted to diplomatically annex the region by marrying into the plutocratic families but in 3014 RM, following the WAR

OF THE ARTIFEXES, it became fearful of foreign attentions and cut diplomatic ties with the region, and disallowing marriage between its ruling households and any foreign entity. It remains culturally insular to this day, despite the traffic that passes through it as part of the Salt Road, remaining proud of its own culture and customs.

The people of Trinitania are proud of their heritage and what they have accomplished, and do not suffer the lies and generalisations of the north, particularly despising those who would deem all those from Kharkharadontis as tainted wretches and barbarians, and they are quick to prove any such people wrong.

2. Pol. Set. Capital city if the eponymous region^(1,) in the far north of KHARKHARADONTIS, just south of the SEA OF UGOLOTH. It was founded in 2472 RM to be a capital to the newly-emerged plutocratic government of the region(Pop. c. 182,600).

TRIOCH: Set. Settlement located in the rugged hills of southern VRAKKA, in the south west of VAALK, known for its goat herds (Pop. c. 2,300).

TRIPARTITE MONARCHY: Pol. Ruling government in the REPUBLIC OF ELAT^(1.) between c. 3250 – 3762 RM. It collapsed in 3762 RM following years of war and strife, giving rise to the nations of GYZHA and AYAD, and a reformed Elatian government.

TRIPTYCH: 1. Art. Obj. Traditionally, a work of art that is split into three (often folding) panels. Triptychs are common in church and other religious artworks, where they are commonly displayed above altars and other prominent positions. They are most popular within the REFORMED CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE.

2. Oth. A type of halfblood characterised by a third ancestry outside of its MORTAL and OTHERWORLDLY roots. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

TRIPTYCH, the: 1. Pol. In the KORACHANI EMPIRE, a phrase used to represent the empire, the UNDYING MACHINE and the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR. The former is typically represented in anthropomorphised form as a woman, particularly in works of art such as paintings and statues.

2. Soc. in the KORACHANI EMPIRE, a form of parting greeting used amongst the freemen and patrician classes, commonly expressed as 'for the Triptych'.

TRIPTYCH, the: Arc. Large fountain in KHADON, close to the BASTION OF STEEL, designed by the architect JEROLAMÉ GRIMACH.

TRIPTYCH OF ANTIUM, the: Rel. Obj. Relic, its first recorded occurrence being in 3653 RM in the hands of a newly-reborn OTHERWORLDER (its identity, though oft guessed at, is unknown) who claimed to have been reborn with the thing in its hands; a rare occurrence. The otherworlder disappeared from IMPERIAL records in c. 3700 RM, leaving the Triptych in the hands of the monks of ANTIUM, in the north of AZAZEM, where it remains to this day under lock-and-key, its images said to be too sincere and haunting for the eyes of mere mortals to view. Those few who have seen the windows of the triptych (amongst them various grand-masters of the SANCTIFIED ORDERS OF THE INQUISITION) claim that its design is eerily realistic, the figures depicted on its surface almost leaping off the frames. Its theme and subjects are a closely guarded secret.

TRIPTYCH, SIGN OF THE: Soc. Common gesture made within the KORACHANI EMPIRE by holding up the right hand with the three middle fingers upright, and the little finger and thumb down on top of each other. It is a symbol of THE TRIPTYCH, and is commonly made by civil servants and members of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE.

The gesture fell out of practice in lands that fractured from the Korachani empire following the SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE, such as the REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO.

TRISA: Mil. Str. Fortress and military centre in the south east of LYRIDIA, overlooking the PARTHISAN colony of SOTHRA.

TRISATRA: Set. Fortified city in the south west of KOLCHIS, in the foothills of the BAND^(2.) Mountains. (Pop. c. 40,000).

TRISKETHIA: Geo. Coastline, around 750-miles long, in the north west of SAMMAEA, overlooking the SEA OF ORRIDA. The region straddles the border between the TEMPLAR STATES in the north west and KARGAMA in the south east. The region is divided into two rough parts: Lower Triskethia, which until around a thousand years past was beneath the coastal waters of the Sea of Orrida, and Upper Triskethia, which is renowned for its SOULSTONE deposits and its many petrified cities, aeons old, that lay crumbling across its dusty surface. Unstable, most are now piles of unrecognisable rubble, the blackened bones of the dead strewn for miles around.

Outsiders know little about this region, though many mile-wide courtyards have been found within its lands, with the near-fossilised remains of millions of mortals, SOUL PEARLS still attached to their mummified forms, as though in sacrifice or prostration. It is thought this was a mass sacrifice. A single imperial expedition reached these lands in c. 1720 RM, with the intent of exploiting the soul pearls, though no public records remain of the outcome. Centuries later attempts at colonisation ultimately failed following a stoic defence by the locals, who were then organised under the TRISKETHIAN DOMAINS.

TRISKETHIAN DOMAINS: His Ntn. Long-lived FIFTH AGE state that existed in what is now the north east of the TEMPLAR STATES and the north west of KARGAMA, before its absorption by the Templar States in 3746 RM.

The Domains were officially recognised as such in c. 640 RM, though they had been a cultural influence in the region of TRISKETHIA since c. 80 RM, when SOULSTONES were first discovered in the coastal cliffs of the region. Ruled by a caste of SHAPERS known as ADEPTS, the Triskethian Domains were secretive from the onset, incredibly protective of their territories and the abundant soulstones that were contained therein. Soulstones were (and remain) incredibly rare elsewhere and the Adepts monopolised the trade in the objects even as they studied their secrets, becoming authorities on the subject.

The Adepts ruled from the city of ELIZIA, and began to expand east in c. 1000 RM, where they clashed intermittently with Kargama, leading to war around 100 years later. This ended in the signing of a treaty that saw Kargama reclaim most of its territories, and a clear delineation drawn on maps that were closely observed by both regions. Following this the two states became loose allies.

The Triskethian Domains excluded themselves from most world events, concentrating instead on their own TECHNARCANE industries and the closely controlled export of soulstones. The Adepts grew incredibly wealthy, much of which was put into the defence of their lands, which they were paranoid of losing to more belligerent powers. It was around the same time, in c. 2000 RM, when the FIRST TRISKETHIAN REVOLUTION took place, cementing the Domains as the preeminent authority on soulstone-based technarcana, which saw the SOULSEER caste rise to prominence, replacing the Adepts (by then politicians and industrialists) as experts in soulstones and the OTHERWORLD.

The Second Triskethian Revolution began in 2377 RM, during which the Adepts began using young shapers to power technarcane engines against their will, earning the ire of the Soulseers, who feared for their castes' future. In 2381 RM they defected from the Domains en masses, securing the city of MINIUM with their personal forces, creating an independent enclave within the Triskethian Domains.

The loss of the Soulseers led to the demise of the once-great Triskethian Domains. This, coupled with the diminishing seas that surrounded it, saw its industries falter and many cities faced starvation. A Third Triskethian Revolution took place in 2478 RM, in which the workers and slaves of Triskethia rebelled, leading to the storming of the Adepts' palace in 2479 RM, during which the Adepts were slain and overthrown by the Soulseers, beginning a new regime.

The Domains recovered under the aegis of the Soulseers, though they were never able to restore the region to its technarcane glory. The region waned in influence even as the Templar States grew more powerful, their religion, more pervasive. The Domains remained the centre of soulstone production and research in ELYDEN, and continued to export fine technarcane engines across the world, but the scale of their industries waned, and their people became wary of outsiders following multiple crusades and wars against the EHRENISIAN COAST.

In the decades following the KORACHANI abandonment of the Ehrenisian colonisation efforts the Triskethian Domains began to falter once more. The Soulseers lost themselves in their research and emptied their coffers into decades of work at ended with the creation of a LHAUAPARAN in 2852 RM. This monumental feat took its toll on the economy of the Domains, leaving it in a state worse than when under the rule of the Adepts. The lhauaparan was to be the crown of Minium, the focus of the Soulseers' rule over Triskethia, yet the creature they gave birth to was not what they had imagined. Its existence was agony, its every moment torture, and it lashed out at Soulseers and their guards, killing dozens. The Soulseers fought back, only enraging it further. Surrounded, it roared in pain, unleashing a psychic blast that obliterated every mortal in Minium. The act left the lhauaparan lifeless and the Triskethian Domains without leadership.

The years following this were a time of chaos. With no form of government, most cities within the Domains broke away, leading to around a dozen city-states that struggled against each other for control of the soulstone industry. The few Soulseers that remained struggled fruitlessly to reunite the Domains, and the region eventually stabilised, with the disparate states forming an uneasy alliance, allowing each to form a vital part of the soulstone industry, keeping the economy of the region going with controlled mining, refining, and exportation.

The Church of the Shadow Triumphant spread east into Triskethia, taking root amongst many of the city-states, giving hope to the people, who would take on more aspects of Templar State culture over the years. Following a period of drought between 3690 – 3745 RM the region was eventually annexed by the Templar States, ending the legacy of the Adepts and the Soulseers. See Vol III: Extinct States.

TRISKETHIAN TECHNARCANE REVOLUTIONS: His. Era of history in the TRISKETHIAN DOMAINS in what is now the east of the TEMPLAR STATES, between c. 2000 – 2479 RM, defined by three distinct periods known as the First, Second and Third Technarcane Revolutions.

The First Technarcane Revolution was a period of growth that lasted until c. 2200 RM, during which industrialization was adopted across the Triskethian Domains, specifically $\underline{\text{TECHNARCANA}}$. The ruling $\underline{\text{ADEPT}}$ caste, as well as the $\underline{\text{SOULSEER}}$ and Industrialist castes thrived, becoming exceedingly wealthy at the expense of the common folk.

The Second Technarcane Revolution lasted from 2377 to 2381 RM and saw the use of SOULSTONE-based technarcana reach new heights, with developments made into marrying living SHAPERS within technarcane engines, similar to the HEART ENGINES that appeared in the INNER SEA REGION years later. Shapers who under previous regimes might have gone on to become Soulseers were instead treated as little more than resources, being interred within technarcane engines with little thought to their health and sanity. This led to a schism between the Adepts and Soulseers, who feared for the future of their caste. The schism escalated into a political conflict that culminated in 2381 RM, with the Soulseers defecting from the Triskethian Domains, securing the city of MINIUM with their personal forces, creating an independent enclave within the Triskethian Domains. This devastated the region's economy, which crumbled in following years, despite forceful attempts at reclaiming Minium. Without the Soulseers expertise, manufactories were forced to shut down. Even the Industrialists, which had thus far lived in comfortable debauchery suffered as more and more coastal cities found themselves landlocked, the climate slowly becoming warmer and drier. Chaos spread throughout its cities, and through it all the Adepts do little to nullify the effects, seemingly content with lives of corrupt oblivion.

The Third Technarcane Revolution lasted for 2-years between 2478 - 2479 RM and saw its lands wasted by wanton industrial abuse, and its resources reduced to near-depletion. Its manufactories mere shadows of what they once were, the Adepts were forced to export most soulstones extracted in Upper Triskethia to keep their coffers full. Across the domains, various cities had been reduced to ghost towns, with the workforces of those that remained inhabited starving. A workers' uprising that began in the city of SLACT rapidly spread across the Domains. Seeing their opportunity, the Soulseers struck against the capital of OBYRYTH with all their forces. The Adepts' Palaces were severely damaged amid the destruction, allowing the Soulseers troops can gain access, slaying the Adepts, taking over in their stead, beginning a new political age in the Triskethian Domains that lasted until their annexation by the Templar States in 3746 RM.

TRIUMPH OF PHOL EGEDDA, the: Arc. Ancient triumphal arch in the west of present-day LIMOTH^(1.), thought to have been constructed in c. 300 RM by the ancient FIFTH AGE empire of PHOL EGEDDA, following its victory over a regional foe, in what is now THETIS.

The arch is gigantic and is a credit to the expertise of the craftsmen of the ancient empire, though it stands ruined today, a shadow of its former glory. Its pillars and arches house hidden chambers, most of which remain unexplored to this day. Today it lies along the main trade-route linking the east of Thetis with the west of Limoth and is seen by travellers moving between the nations.

TRIUMVIR: Pol. Mil. Rnk. Title given to the three rulers of the TRIUMVIRATE of the GRIGORIAN ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION. The present Triumvirs are KOLROKH HANNO, KALEN PENSETTAR IV, and NUALLA INEN ARGHAAV, who have each ruled since 3992, 3979, and 4001 RM, respectively.

TRIUMVIRATE: Pol. Mil. Org. The ruling council of the GRIGORIAN

ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION, made up of three TRIUMVIRS who are elected from the most trusted and revered OVERSEERS and HIGH-QUAESTORS within the Order.

The dark events of the SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE saw the empire sundered in two. Various other Orders crumbled amid the resultant chaos, which forced the Grigorian Order to relocate from its old base in KYDONIA (which had since come under the control of the LOW-EMPIRE) to KHADON. The then Grandmaster made the decision to divide the Order into three distinct portions, creating the LANGUES (1), each of which would fall under the command of a Triumvir, which replaced the Grandmaster. This served as safeguard to better protect the Order in any future conflicts that might arise, and would also make the Order better-equipped to carry out its duties across the empire.

The three Langues are found in Khadon, SINITAS, and the colony of TAVVADRA^(2.), and are ruled by the Triumvirs KOLROKH HANNO, KALEN PENSETTAR IV, and NUALLA INEN ARGHAAV, respectively.

TRIX: Set. Settlement in the c south of ALMAGEST (Pop. c. 4,800).

TROAK: Set. Small city in the c of TARTAK (Pop. c. 20,000).

 $\overline{\text{TROANT}}$: Set. Settlement in the north east of $\underline{\text{RHINOCOLOURA}}$ (Pop. c. 8,000).

TRODIS: Set. City and surrounding rural region in the east of PARTHIS, known for its perfume production and expansive flower fields (Pop. c. 25,000)

TROGEIN: Sup. Pol. FIRMAMENTAL SHAMANISTIC leaders of the LYRIDIAN TROGLODYTES, usually female in mirror of their AUGUR^(2.) overlords. They lead highly-ritualistic lives, their every deed and prayer symbolic of the harsh nature-deities they revere. They don horned headpieces and wear the pelts of dangerous animals to personify their such deities.

TROGLODYTE: 1. Soc. In a general sense, any cave-dwelling group of people. Details on specific troglodyte populations can be found below:

2. Eth. Soc. Specifically, cave-dwellers of LYRIDIA who make up most of its rural population, descended from SVATHI people that dominated the region at the end of the FOURTH AGE. In the following decades, descendants of the native Svathi became persecuted as KORACHANI immigrants arrived into NÁRTHEL, with uncounted thousands killed, and even more fleeing north into LYRADEA and TAMAR, where they settled the caverns around the HELIOPARNASSUS and KYTHI Mountains, east of the DHERKAZ; and the western foothills of the CARTIGA and HARBIDA Mountains in what is now known as the MATERAN TERRITORIES. They went on to become staunch supporters of the AUGURS (2.), who saw the value of their blind faith. Centuries of inbreeding and segregation by the Augurs saw them become a simple people, often plagued by birth defects, who by c. 300 RM had become known as troglodytes.

Though Lyridia is one land, the troglodytes live in large groups, rarely venturing far from their cliff-hewn homes, each of which house as many as a dozen family groups, up to 2,000 people at most. Their leaders are the TROGEIN, primitive shamen, who are subservient to the Augur caste that rules the larger cities. The Augurs of Lyridia have little direct contact with the troglodytes, choosing to live ascetic lives away from large populations, though they maintain order through proxies and messengers.

3. Sarastro has a small region of troglodyte settlements, in the foothills of the JAELA Mountains, to the east of the SHAMAS SHUGAL savannah. These troglodytes form an insignificant part of the Sarastroan population and contribute little to its economy, though their culture is distinct and reminiscent of ancient FIFTH AGE cultures of the region. The largest of these troglodyte settlements is BARSHEEN.

- TROIA: Rvr. Wetlands in EZASUH(2.), surrounding the capital city.
- TROJA: 1. His. Sea. Inland sea that dominated the land of SAGITTARIA in the early centuries of the FOURTH AGE. It quickly dwindled as the sea levels around ELYDEN waned, disappearing entirely by around 1800 RM, leaving behind salt-flat⁽²⁾ and the ruin of once-prosperous mercantile ports.
 - 2. Geo. Endorheic salt-flats dominating the c and north of SAGITTARIA. The entirety of the Trojan salt-flats was once a shallow inland sea famed for its natural harbours and beautiful lagoons. By 1000 RM the sea had dwindled to half its size, many of its inlets turned into sterile saltwater lakes, and by 1800 RM it had disappeared entirely, replaced by seasonal rivers and saltwater marshes.
- TROKHAR DATHENKO: m. (D. 2849 RM) Tec. Per. PARTHISAN mathematician and engineer who in 2826 RM devised the ANALYTICAL ENGINE, which would later revolutionise how the people of the INNER SEA REGION dealt with complex calculations.

TROKHAR ENGINE: see ANALYTICAL ENGINE.

- TROKHA: Rui. Flooded TROGLODYTE settlement in the south east of LYRIDIA, dating back to the early years of the FIFTH AGE. It is thought to have flooded in c. 800 RM, and were it not for the flooding, the hewn caverns would be able to house no less than 100,000 individuals and would be the largest such settlement in Lyridia.
- TROLL: 1. Soc. Lan. Name given to SLAVE oghurs employed by the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, used as labourers to construct its structures and monuments. Millennia of inbreeding have turned trolls into sluggish brutes with little will or intellect.
- 2. Pol. District in the c of the CITY OF ALMAGEST. Originating as a bridge linking the then-separate towns of Almagest and EPHEMERIS across the lowland region of EPHAR. Over time, as the towns grew and the city was regarded, the bridge was built over, the valley being completely hidden beneath layers of new buildings. Troll lies above the heart of the ALMAGESTI UNDERCITY.
- TROLLKARI: Sup. Rnk. SHAPERS and SHAMEN from the north of LLACHATUL, most common amongst the CALLOW HORDES, as well as rural parts of VALBAR⁽²⁾. Due to the proximity of the NULLAMBIT to this region, which makes shaping more difficult, most trollkarls are highly skilled individuals and are often surprised to find their powers significantly amplified the farther away from the Nullambit they move.
- TROPHONIUS: (B. 3946 RM) Rel. Founder of the CHURCH OF THE CHILD in ADOCT, ALMAGEST. He was a member of the EPISTOLARIES, and was excommunicated from the order following his actions.
- TROPAEA: Wea. Localised winds in the - TROPOS: Set. City in the c north east of KARAKHAS. Much of its culture centres around blood sports, in which convicts fight each other and wild beasts in the hopes of winning their freedom, Though such sports are relatively common across Karakhas, Tropos is the heart of the so-called sport. It forms a part of Both the RED ROUTE and the SALT ROAD, and its arenas prove very popular with visitors (Pop. c. 28,000).
- TROPIC OF MAOCARHL: also 'the Southern Tropic'. Car. The circle of latitude that marks the southern-most point at which the sun may appear directly overhead at its zenith; or 22° 52' south.
- TROPIC OF RAH: also 'the Northern Tropic'. Car. The circle of latitude that marks the northern-most point at which the sun may appear directly overhead at its zenith; or 22° 52' north.
- TROPIS: Set. Old capital of HOLOLACH^(1.) and main city of the prefecture of BROTRIS (relocated to the new city of Hololach^(3.) in c. 3500 RM due to the diminishing of lake LO SAVAN in the centuries prior to its abandonment). It remains now as a powerful, if diminished, city and ancestral home to the greatest noble families of the region. It's a pilgrimage city, with people coming from all around Hololach to see the TEMPLE OF THE VOLATA, including the EVORADI nomads (Pop. c. 23,200).
- TROQ HOND: Set. Small fortified city in the east of PNESSA, close to the border with CHEIRA (Pop. c. 14,000).
- TRORANT: Rui. Abandoned city in the prefecture of BROTRIS in the c-south east of HOLOLACH⁽¹⁾. The settlement was abandoned in c. 3560

- RM as the retreat of the SEA OF MARDEN became too costly to maintain. At its height in c. 3280 RM the settlement boasted a population of no less than 10,000 and a busy harbour that now lies as a crumbling land-locked ruin.
- TROU: Set. Settlement in the west of PARAIYA, in the KAURCANI basin, to the west of the WAIRIMU rocky desert (Pop. c. 7,000).
- TROUGH OF CAGHARTIATH: Geo. Depression in the north eastern plains of SARASTRO thought to be the resting place of CAGHARTIATH, SCION of the DEMIURGE NYARLOTH. The remnants of archaic machinery lie fossilised in the bedrock, though there are no remnants of a body. The place is patrolled by the Sarastroan army to deter trespassing.
- TROYON: Set. Small city in the south west of PARAIYA (Pop. c. 15,000).
- TRUE MENISCUS, the: Sup. Mys. Geo. Wellspring and PRIME LACUNA of the FIRMAMENT, in the continent of MENISCEA, estimated at: 8°57'33"N 152°03'40"E It is both counterpart and antipode to the BLACK FOUNTAIN of the ATRAMENTA.
 - Though a natural lacuna through which the Firmament penetrated into the MATERIAL PLANE, it was altered by DURUTHILHOTEP to be less inimical than its Atramental counterpart, but was toppled by agents of RACHANAEL in the WAR OF SCOURGING. HAVELRA (SCION of DURUTHILHOTEP) rebuilt it as stronghold for FIRMAMENTISTS in the latter FOURTH AGE, and is a place where they could better draw their powers. Palatines are its guardians.
- TRUH: Set. Small city in the east of BASSORAH⁽²⁾. It has a history of mining, as evidenced by the now-overgrown gigantic terraced pits outside its peripheries, though the industry was abandoned centuries ago (Pop. c. 18,000).
- TRUHA: Set. Fortified settlement in the south east of JURRAS^(2.), along the northern face of the GIBBORRAH Mountains. The settlement was founded by people from the surrounding region who over past decades were displaced by severe landslides (Pop. c. 6,000).
- TRUIN: Set. Settlement in the c east of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES, in a wide valley in the HASHATH Mountains. The surrounding area is known for its large variety of wildlife (Pop. c. 7,300).
- TRUSTALL: Set. Small city in the south of TAHALL. It was historically known for its smiths and the tradition has been carried over to the modem age, with its metallurgists and forges being famed across Tahall (Pop. c. 18,500).
- TRYPTARCH, the: Pol. Enigmatic individual who oversaw the rise of the HMMEN REGIME in PNESSA and orchestrated the revolution of 3959 RM which led to the overthrowing of the CAIAN monarchy in Pnessa, after which the Hmmen regime was put in control, with the Tryptarch in control
- TRUCHAN: Set. Fortified city in the south west of MADOUR. (Pop. c. 10,800).
- TRUE MAGNETIC NORTH: Car. Postulated for centuries, and first travelled to in a 3765 RM DURCHAANI^(1.) exploration, true magnetic north lies at 98°39'08" west, 88°52'30" north, in the WHITE SHEET of KHOLAMOR, in the far north of SAMMAEA.
- TRUE SIGHT: Sup. Once a SHAPER has reached FOCUS, they are said to have achieved true sight they are able see the INTEGUMENT clearly. More experienced shapers can see this more clearly, while other (very rare) individuals can see the Integument all the time, or without the need for shaping. See Vol IV: Shaping.
- TRUS: Set. Small coastal city in the far east of KHITAI (Pop. c. 20,000).
- TSAGAN: Set. Farming settlement in the c south of TEMUJA, along the course of the river ARILLIEN (Pop. c. 3,400).
- TSAMETITH: Rvr. Major river dominating the east of THETIS, flowing south east for around 700-miles from various sources in the KOTHA ICHOLLIGHA Mountains. The river empties in the KATENNA inlet and is a source of water to many settlements and industries in the region.

TSANKHAD: Set. Settlement in the south east of TEMUIA, known for its glass quarries in the PLAINS OF LAES. It was the major supplier of crystal for the construction of the CRYSTAL PALACE of Duariahahn (Pop. c. 5,000).

TSARAACHAN: Rui. Current name for deserted, half-sunken city in the northern reaches of the ARTUL AKAEL in ALMAGEST.

TSATAOKA: Set. Settlement in the east of NOAVATUR. It originated as a KORACHANI strip-mine known as TSATOCHAN, though was abandoned in c. 1170 RM, though was later resettled in c. 1900 RM (Pop. c. 10,000).

TSATHOQQUAN SIMULACRA: His. Obj. Ancient carved idols situated along the western coast of CARNYNGA, overlooking the VOORMIN SEA. They are crude, of anthropomorphic design with wide toad-like faces and squat bodies. It is thought that they were originally submerged beneath the VOORMIN SEA, suggesting that they may have been crafted by ancient MERILLS. They are shunned by the people of Carnynga and have been allowed to rot. They appear not to have been created to withstand the elements and the constant sun has caused them to harden, and they are now cracked and crumbling, with few extant examples that are undamaged.

TSATOCHAN: His. Ind. Set. Ancient Korachani strip-mine, known today as TSATAOKA.

TSATTHOG: Myr. His. Toad-featured SCION of indeterminate heritage mentioned in ancient THRACIAN legends, said to dwell in the PNAKOTIAN maze. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

TSILEEN: also 'Chilin'. Int. Sup. Fau. Rare SUPRANATURAL creatures that many scholars believe to be the bestial equivalent of OTHERWORLDERS, though of a more ethereal quality. Much like otherworlders, they take many forms, though share some similarities – they are almost always hooved and four-legged, though individuals are otherwise physiologically unique, with some having wings, scales, fins, feather, fur, and faces that echo various fauna both living and dead. Most distinctive is their ghost-like appearance, with their body shifting from solid to insubstantial in irregular cycles. This is no illusion, and they are truly intangible to MORTAL touch or any corporeal aspect of the MATERIAL PLANE.

They are much rarer than otherworlders, insomuch as most people, regardless of their social status are unlikely to have ever heard of the term. Even scholars that have dedicated themselves to researching these strange beings may only have seen a handful throughout their lives.

Some scholars believe that they may be akin to otherworlders in that they may be a reborn aspect of deceased fauna. Though it is commonly understood that fauna do not possess SPIRITS^(1,) in the same way that mortals do, they may yet possess a primitive or more subtle form of a spirit. Some have postulated that tsileen are the collective 'spirits' or consciousnesses of multiple creatures, perhaps as many as thousands or millions, coalesced into a single form.

Disparate independent records agree on many aspects of tsileen – they are curious, and when sighted by mortals will often move closer. However, they are also skittish and prone to flight when startled. Many cultures have bestowed upon them the role of guardian or guide, though there is little evidence to support this. Others believe they are nature spirits(3.) manifested by Elyden herself. However, they are so rare that few cultures have well-established lore or myths surrounding the creatures.

Though accounts of creatures similar to tsileen have been found across elyden (with each culture giving them different names and appellations based on their language and culture), they tend to be most 'common' in Western Sammaea and Eastern Llachatul, relatively close to the path of the Nullambit, though any link between the two is unknown.

The term tsileen is a SA'WESH loanword that was used by the KORACHANI scholar RUFEAL TRAZAR in a treatise published in 3377 RM.

TSIMISS: Set. Fortified settlement in north western TAHALL that forms a major link along the course of THE WAY trade route, trading west with OPHIUSSA (Pop. c. 7,000).

TSIYA: Mil. Str. Coastal fort in 10.

TSAMMA: Flo. Cui. Starchy fleshy fruit common in the temperate-warm regions along the northern coast of WESTERN SAMMAEA, particularly the EHRENISIAN COAST. It was domesticated in the FOURTH AGE and was later re-discovered in the FIFTH AGE by the SAN nomads, from where its cultivation spread amongst civilised lands, including, KHULL, the TEMPLAR STATES, KARGAMA, and the north of the VESPERTINE LEAGUE and the CITIZENRY OF THALI, where it is used in savoury cooking.

The San use all parts of the tsamma: The flesh is dried and cooked into stews, while the seeds are considered very nutritious and can be roasted and eaten by themselves or ground into flour. Tsamma seed oil is used for cooking and as a body oil. Even the leaves of the gourds can be cooked like spinach. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

TTARTALL: Set. Major city in the far east of THE SURRACH. Its main industry is the breeding and rearing of MONITORS^(2.) (Pop. c. 48,000).

TU'LAN: f. Myt His. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, a SCION of the DEMIURGES ALLAISHADA and KHARANI. She is mentioned in the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN as having been driven east with her followers for defying the rule of the Demiurges. She is believed to be analogous with the fire deity TURRAN of ancient eastern MENISCEA. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

TU SURAH: (B. c. 600 – D. 664 RM) Car. Famous cartographer, born in LAASKHA.

TUAL: Rel. Str. Temple in the west of KORACHAN, 20-miles north east of the city of KORACHAN. It is the final burial place of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR'S mortal body, won from the KHARKHARADONTID desert by a CRUSADE that spent years searching for it.

TUALAR: Ser. Major city in the ZOHELETHI BASIN in the c south of PARTHIS. It is the largest city in Parthis and is characterised by sprawling formless streets that emerged organically over millennia of history, with few, if any, districts that were made to a predetermined plan. It is dominated by small scattered manufactories that are interspersed with large forums and curated gardens that are open to the public. Its most famous building is perhaps the so-called TEMPLE OF NIMEH – a gigantic forum and food hall that serves free food.

The sport of ENGINE RACING originated in a small village just outside the main city in c. 3830 RM, with machinists constructing crude twin engines and attaching them to a cockpit with harnesses.

The sport rapidly spread to other cities in the Zohelethi Basin, eventually rising in popularity to become one of the most widespread sports of the Parthisan empire. Today its arena is second only to the Grand Arena of Thetis, and is able to seat over 50,000 spectators (Pop. c. 3,851,000).

TUARTAR MAZE, the: Geo. Arid limestone formation in the c s of the UMBRA SOKHAR wastes in SAMMAEA, carved by ancient floodwaters carried north east from the MOLOTH KHAMMOTHUL Mountain into a labyrinthine maze of gullies and chasms that once lead to the now-dry river UARURNDAT. The area is home to various tribes of DEGENERATES and WEIRDLINGS.

TUARVEN: Rvr. River in the c of LOEGRESS^(1.) flowing north for 280-miles from lake BUILL to its parent, the river MORRINACH. It is fast-moving, known for its rapids and is cosseted by the cliffs of the LOGAR canyon for around 30-miles of its course. A bridge once spanned that part of the river, though it collapsed long ago.

TUATABAD: Set. Settlement in the south west of SERROK (Pop. c. 5,000).
TUATARA: Set. Fortified city in the north of BARATHEA(1.) and a main

TUATARA: Set. Fortified city in the north of BARATHEA^(1.) and a main source of the region's military. It is also a stop along the SALT ROAD, merging back into the main route from N'RAKH (Pop. c. 38,000).

TUATHA HADRI: Mil. Rnk. Org. Elite foot troops of TISARA, famed for their rifle skills.

TUBARRI: Set. Coastal settlement on the east of the island of EPEHET in the west of the MAIDEN ISLES (Pop. c. 6,000).

TUBRUH: Set. Settlement in the south east of AQUARIIA, known for its cotton and textile production (Pop. c. 4,500).

TUDLORD: Pol. Rnk. Noble title, akin to lord, in KOLCHIS. It is beneath the title of CONSTELLAR.

TUDRAS: Rvr. River in the south west of MAENMIST, flowing south west for 240-miles before meeting its parent, the river CRAS⁽¹⁾. It has since, c. 3980 RM been at the centre of the NACRE WAR, with an alliance of PHYRRAN and SIMBARAN troops and mercenaries under the banner of

- the NACRE LEAGUE fight against Maenmist to reopen the NACRE ROAD trade-route that was closed in c. 3960 RM.
- TUDRN: Set. Fortified settlement in the west of CYHLAGHARR, overlooking the SEA OF IMERRIL (Pop. c. 5,000).
- TUFINAWAYA: Set. Settlement in the c south of NOAVATUR (Pop. c. 6.000).
- TUFIRI OBRA: Set. City in the c north west of NOAVATUR. It is a major producer of wood and rubber (Pop. c. 42,000).
- TUFRAN: Set. City in the c north west of MHAROKK. Its main industry is cotton production (Pop. c. 18,500).
- TUGO: Pol. Set. Capital of the PREPOTENCY OF THREPHO, on the chief island of UGOLO (Pop. unknown).
- TUGRANA: Set. Settlement in the REALM OF THE MARKED PALL in the north west of KHARKHARADONTIS. The settlement is rumoured to be located atop a gigantic ATRAMENTAL BUBOE, which it mines, though little else is known of this (Pop. unknown).
- TUGRIK: Cur. Currency of TEMUIA. While the country still largely operates on barter and shared systems, when this is impossible, the use of hollow bronze disks known as the Tugrik are used. This currency is increasingly common in GREATTOWNS as trade becomes more centralised and contact with other nations increases. See Vol II: Currency and Coinage in Elyden.
- TUHAFAI: 1. Rvr. River in the c north of KHURAUR, flowing seasonally from sources in the OBELA plains, before collecting in lake AHOKAI.
- 2. Set. City in the north west of Khuraur. It is home to the only Atramental college in the nation and is where Atramentsits of house Wyrdan study the art. It is also a stop along the Red Route, and its Shapers can often be found serving as guards and navigators on caravans travelling the trade-route (Pop. c. 19,000).
- TUHEN: Rui. Once a MULL trade-station in c north of ATARAXIA, the region was abandoned after severe floods in c. 3850 RM and remains deserted to this day.
- TUHULASS: Set. Settlement in the south of PARAIYA. Its main industry is herding and animal husbandry (Pop. c. 3,900).
- TUKHAAR: Sec. Fortified city in the c north west of MECHABET. The city is built on the ruins of an ancient fort. The city is now famed for its horse-rearers (Pop. c. 20,000).
- TUJASOON: Ind. Set. Mining settlement in the east of KREM. Like most settlements in the region, it is a major source of AIMANT (Pop. c. 4,200).
- TUKHRAGHON: Sup. Geo. Highly ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region in TRAKIA, causing a rapid degeneration and disintegration of organic matter.
 - The region is categorised as $\underline{\text{DANGEROUS}}$ by the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI}}$ $\underline{\text{INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES}}$.
- TUL KARGEMMA: also 'Western Kargemma'. Pol. His. For a short period between 1929 and 1959 RM the kingdom of KARGEMMA was divided in two when twins ANOQUARIS and ANOQUARON acceded the throne following their father's death in 1926 RM.
 - After a few years of ruling together, they decided to divide the kingdom in two and drew lots to decide which of them would rule which kingdom. As a result, Anoquaris moved west to begin her rule over what became known as Tul Kargemma, while her brothers' domains became known as MILL KARGEMMA. Anoquaron's death in 959 RM saw the kingdom reunited once more.
- TUL I'GHMIH: lit. 'land of dust'. Geo. Area in the west of KORACHAN that, due to gross soil mismanagement throughout the rule of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, was reduced from woodland, to fields, then pasture, and eventually largely abandoned, where it remains today as a dusty wasteland that has become overtaken by ATRAMENTAL TAINT.
 - The region is categorised as a $\underline{\text{LEAST CONCERN}}$ by the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI}}$ $\underline{\text{INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES}}.$
- TUL I' SICH-AHUR: lit. 'land of ice-fire'. Geo. Basin in the c north east of the nation of DURCHAA(1.). Today called TULSICHAR, it is volcanically active and shunned.
- TULA: 1. Rvr. River in the north of VIRAHAN flowing for 200-miles before joining its tributary, the river SARA.

- Mil. His. Geo. Site of ancient pitched battle in the east of the HENDECARCHY of ATALLUA, in the south east MALAN, where in c. 2620 RM the LADY AEGIS 'forces attacked the TRAITOR KING.
- TULAN: 1. Sea. Arctic sea in the far north east of MENISCEA, just south of the KORACHANI colony of CRASSULA.
 - 2. Mil. Str. Fortress in the south of the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI}}$ colony of $\underline{\text{CRASSULA}}$, in the far north east of $\underline{\text{MENISCEA}}$. The fort is named after the nearby sea.
- TULAAN SHAADOR: Geo. Rocky hills, covered in scattered sparse shrub forests in the c east of THE SURRACH, south of the ROSHHOT, GAMIGAHUA, and BIRANTI Mountains.
- TULADHAP: Set. City in the c of CHEIRA (Pop. unknown).
- TULAII: Set. Settlement in the west of ELEKHID, in the region of TRAGIDEJH (Pop. unknown).
- TULAR: Rvr. River in the c of NAARETH, flowing south for 325-miles from sources in the IROTHA Mountains before meetings its parent, the river ABASHERA.
- TULDOR: Set. Conurbation made up of five SOULSTONE quarries surrounding a fortified settlement in the east of the TEMPLAR STATES, in the south of the region of TRISKETHIA, perched on the side of a steep cliff, facing east. It is amongst the most productive soulstone mines in the region and is famed for the quality of its specimens, most of which find their way on sale in exclusive auction houses across ELYDEN (Pop. c. 8.200).
- TULEN: Set. City in the c of Virahan, along the course of the river TULA (Pop. c. 20,000).
- TULINTH: Pol. Set. Capital city of GRARNEÂST. It is coastal and overlooks the northernmost reaches of the BAY OF ASDU (Pop. c. 174,000).
- TULKHIN: 1. Geo. Area of scrubland and sparse woodland dominating the c highlands of HARITH^(2.) in the north east of EASTERN LLACHATUL.
- 2. Set. City after which the above region in HARITH^(2.) is named, in the north east of EASTERN LLACHATUL (Pop. c. 108,000).
- TULLAI: Rvr. River in the c east of LYRIDIA DHAI flowing north west for 275-miles from its source in the ETTHI Mountains in LYRIDIA, before meeting its parent, the river BINI.
- TULLANT: Set. Major city in the north east of THE SURRACH, in the north eastern foothills of the MGHALLEAL Mountains. It is known, alongside its neighbouring states TARACEH and KURDA, for its albinism, which affects 1 in 1,000 individuals born there. The albinism is such a part of its culture, that its rulers are selected from albinos who are of age when the present ruler's term is up (Pop. c. 50,000).
- TULLITH: Mil. Str. One of two major fortresses in south west of THE OLD FOREST, overlooking the KHUSSAN PASS into IPANAH^(2.). It forms part of the RITHAHAN fortifications that protect the whole region.
- TULPA: Mys. Drc. A SHAPER who can grant manifest thoughts and DREAMS, giving them matter. Very little is known about this form of SHAPING, which it thought by some to be a distinct form of supranatural ability commonly confused with ONEIROMANCY. It is most common in CENTRAL and EASTERN LLACHATUL, particularly in MALAN, SAUA. And TEMUJA. See Vol IV: Other Forms of Mysticism.
- TULRATUR: Geo. Badlands region in the north west of TETHYSIA, dominating the northern part of the TURCAR desert.
- TULSICHAR: Geo. Rocky basin in the c north east of the nation of DURCHAA(1.), south of the UTAGHAN Mountains, north east of lake THYTHIA, and north of the DUSAGHAA hills. It is the most inhospitable region of Durchaa, and is characterised by blacked earth that is volcanically active. The heat in this area means that the region surrounding it is never frozen. At the worst of its activity the earth cracks and rivers of molten stone can be seen below.
- The name is a corruption of the Korachani name for the region, TULI' SICH-AHUR, which meant 'Land of ice-fire'.
- TULUIN AND MARCUS: Vol. Scholars and agriculturalists who originated the yearbook and imperial directory, later known as TULUIN'S ALMANACK, in 2894 RM.
- TULUIN'S ALMANACK: Vol. Popular almanack published yearly in the KORACHANI EMPIRE since 2894 RM. First published by the scholars TULUIN AND MARCHUS, it was taken over by a specific branch of the $\underline{\text{MINASTERIA OF TITHES}}$, which is responsible of the quadrennial imperial census.

It consists of articles, lists and tables that are of use to a wide range of vocations, including agriculturists, craftsmen, scholars and so-on. It is a yearbook that contains detailed calendars, including times for sunrise and sunset, tidal and meteorological information. It also contains a directory of the Korachani empire, with population demographics, economical information, and details on ARCHPATRICIANS and governors based on region and city.

It is the most widespread volume in the Korachani empire, outside of religious publications and the ENCYCLOPAEDIA ELYDEN.

TULURKRYPH: lit. 'old unknown'. 1. Geo. KORACHANI name for the wasteland surrounding the TRUE MENISCUS; derived from old PELASGOSI. The region is an uninhabitable desert extending to the west and east of the SEA OF IPERIA, and the landscape has been broken by the presence of the Meniscus with gigantic LODELITHS floating in the sky and gravity-defying water features.

The region is often divided in two by geographers – $\underline{\text{WESTERN}}$ $\underline{\text{TULURKRYPH}}$ and $\underline{\text{EASTERN}}$ $\underline{\text{TULURKRYPH}}$, with the sea of Iperia as the dividing line.

2. also 'Khegudkorr. Ntn. Loose collection of states, settlements, and tribes in the south of WESTERN MENISCEA that is unclaimed by surrounding regions. Though considered a nation by outsiders, there is little to unify its people other than the inimical landscape, who spend most of their days simply trying to survive their home.

TUMIUR: Geo. Island in the KRYMEAN SEA, off the southern coast of THETIS, discovered and named by the explorer BOHMIUS in 1524 RM.

TUN'OKE: Rel. Str. Temple dedicated to the UNDYING MACHINE located on the island of SAKKRA in lake ALANCARAC, in the far east of KARAKHAS.

TUNACHT: For. Tract of dense forest in the north eastern reaches of THE OLD FOREST.

TUNAI: Set. Coastal settlement on the east of the island of VOIRIN in the west of the MAIDEN ISLES (Pop. c. 4,750).

TÛND: Geo. Peninsula in the far north of LLACHATUL, it's southern-most tip forming a narrow strait dividing the SEA OF POLARIS from the DONDOUR.

TUNKING: Mil. Str. Fortress in the c south west of CUTH, overlooking the entrance into the BAY OF HAMMON. It is home to part of the Cuthi navy, which patrols the waters.

TUNNADA: Set. Coastal settlement in the south east of HABOT, overlooking the north of the SEA OF AMMASH^(2.) (Pop. c. 9,000).

TUNUR LOTHOTH: Geo. Expansive region in the far south east of the HOGGOTHA ISZ that is highly volcanic, and known for its sulphurous vents, geysers and springs, noxious fumes, Atramental vents and SHADOWISPS floating in the air. What rivers exist here are toxic and painted in bright colours from the chemical runoff from surrounding lands.

This wretchedness of terrain is largely why the region remained unclaimed by civilised MORTAL cultures throughout the FIFTH AGE, allowing the barbarous tribes of the Hoggotha Isz to fill them instead.

TUNUS: Set. Small city in the north of the region of BETAHAL in the north of THE SURRACH. It is known for its horse-rearing and stables (Pop. c. 15,500).

TUOL, SHRINE OF THE: Rel. Str. Ancient shrine located 20-miles south west of the CARTIGA Mountain in LYRIDIA. The shrine is named after a legend that is common amongst the native TROGLODYTES and is disseminated by their TROGEIN spiritual leaders. The shrine is an ancient hand-hewn rock temple amid a rocky outcrop in the ESTIAN plains in the east of LYRIDIA, and is largely ignored by locals (constrained by strict local laws limiting their movements outside the settled areas). The legend pertains to the once greatness of the troglodytic ancestors (believed by most scholars to be a past civilisation to which most ancient Lyridian ruins and relics are attributed, and unrelated to the subsequent troglodytes).

TUQGEC: Com. Set. Caravanserai in the c north of ARERAQTH, located in an ancient glacier-carved valley. The region surrounding the caravanserai is known for its gloomy weather and the shallow valley bears signs of an ancient pitched battle, with farmers often digging up rusted weapons and armour. These artefacts are of passing interest to historians, though are otherwise of little value (Pop. c. 8,000).

TURA: 1. Set. Coastal settlement in south eastern LYRIDIA DHAI. The settlements main industry is fishing (Pop. c. 6,500).

2. His. Eth. FOURTH AGE people in what are now the west of \underline{SAUA} , and the east of $\underline{AHRISHEN}$.

TURAAN: Eth. Tribal people and ethnicity native to the REHEMAZI peninsula, and common in PERGOST and the east of SABIA. They choose to live semi-nomadic lives in the style of their ancestors, where they build temporary rubble huts during their travels of the land. They live off large fauna, including MAMMOTHS, woolly rhinos, and in coastal areas, seals and even whales.

TURABAN: Geo. Small mountain in the c north east of BASSORAH (2.).

 $\underline{TURAH}\!:$ Set. Coastal settlement in the south of $\underline{KOLCHIS}$ (Pop. c. 6,000).

TURAL: Pol. Set. Capital city of KASHAAL, in the north east of the island-continent of Bror^(1.) (Pop. c. 103,800).

TURANO: Ser. Coastal settlement on the c north of the island of EPEHET in the west of the MAIDEN ISLES (Pop. c. 6,000).

 $\underline{\text{TURAPIS}}$: 1. Sea. Small bay in the prefecture of $\underline{\text{EROSENEA}}^{(1.)}$ in the north west of $\underline{\text{HOLOLACH}}^{(1.)}$, named after the settlement of the same name.

2. Set. Settlement in the prefecture of EROSENEA^(1.) in the north west of HOLOLACH^(1.), known for its small fishing fleet (Pop. c. 4,700).

TURCAR: Geo. Expansive desert region in the east of LLACHATUL, to the east of the ARGENT Mountains forming the northern-most expanse of RTHEI, and the east of TETHYSIA.

TURGA VARQ: Set. City in the c south of CHEIRA (Pop. c. 47,500).

TURGLI: 1. Rvr. River in the west of KORACHAN, flowing for 250-miles west from the FATUACH Mountains into the SEA OF OCHISS. It passes through the city of KORACHAN and is polluted west of the city.

2. Lak. Lake in the west of KORACHAN, west of the FATUACH Mountains.

TURHAN: Myt. Leg. Revenants common the myths and legends of the GOLDEN CRESCENT area of SOUTHERN SAMMAEA, believed by some scholars to be inspired by the LOGOMAMUS.

TURHATA: Set. City in the c east of LYRIDIA DHAI, at the periphery of the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region of AHOPESH. It is protected by SIPHON ENGINES, which are also used in the rearing of modified cattle that are raised there and sold across THE INNER SEA to breeders (Pop. c. 10.000).

TURIAN: Ser. Small city in the far south of CISNERIA, along the course of the river ATYSESH, in the marshes of ATYS. It was originally a small fishing and pastoral village, with houses built on wooden stilts, though over time it grew into a bustling hub of trade, with stone structures built on vaulted foundations driven deep into the silt of the marshes replacing older wooden abodes. Today, its origins are forgotten by most residents who forget that they are walking atop what is effectively a great manmade cistern that allows the river and wildlife to pass unobstructed by the advance of civilisations.

Though once a centre of trade, it has since dwindled as most commerce moved north with the foundation of the Kingdom of Cisneria (Pop. c. 14,000).

TURIS: Set. Fortified city in the south west of the tribe of OSRIS, in the east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 28,000).

TURIVA: Set. Small city in the far east of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES (Pop. c. 20,000).

TUROR: Rvr. River in the south west of BROR^(1.), flowing from the LAHAED Mountains.

TURRAH: Ind. Set. Granite quarries in the c north of BASSORAH⁽²⁾ in the far south of the GORRAN Mountains (Pop. c. 1,200).

TURRAN: f. Myt. His. Ancient FIFTH AGE fire deity whose worship originated in the kingdom of VOLTUMN in eastern MENISCEA and which eventually spread west into central Meniscea, in what are now southern IMEAL, western XYRPHAAT, and LAOD. She is believed to have been a living creature of flame-like wings and indifferent attitude and her cult was responsible for the rise of the Voltumni monarchy and the rule of the so-called FIRE PRINCE. She was killed in battle in c. 700 RM, which led to the collapse of the religion and the eventual fracturing of the kingdom itself.

Many now believe that is analogous with the scion Tu'LAN. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

TURRO: Geo. Cave-system in the south of the SKAR Mountains in the east of SKAROS.

TURSAU: Set. Small fortified city in the far north west of PARAIYA. It is its northern-most city and is well-equipped to defend against any attack from MHAROKK (Pop. c. 16,000).

TURTA: Sca. Bay in the east of SAMMAEA, between the nations of ANANTHUL and SABAISA, forming the north eastern-most part of the waters of the BIMARIA.

TURUD: Lak. Small lake in the c north west of VENTHIR, along the course of the river MAPHANI.

 $\underline{\text{TURUH}}$: 1. Set. Settlement in the c of $\underline{\text{EZASUH}}^{(2.)}$ (Pop. c. 2,800).

2. Set. Coastal settlement in the south west of GYZHA (Pop. c. 8,000).

TUSAS: Rui. Ancient idol carved out of the high cliffs in the north east of BRONEA. The majority of the idol is now ruined and all that remains is the base, carved from the cliffs. Blocks of granite lie strewn across the area – remnants of what is thought to have been a gigantic Piscean-featured humanoid statue overlooking the sea.

TUSENTAL: Pol. Ser. Census-city in THE SURRACH. The city's sole purpose is to catalogue and codify the other settlements and city-states in the region. It is a bureaucrat' heaven, with the city existing solely to support the many census offices, embassies and consulates that dominate its quarters. The variety of races and cultures amongst its populace is unravelled across ELYDEN and its market is a gigantic tiered amphitheatre that offers exotic foods, clothing and other goods from across the Surrach and beyond.

It is said that over a thousand city-states and demesnes are represented within the city (Pop. c. 69,000).

TUSI: Mil. Str. An extensive collection of fortifications and other military structures in the south of RAONGEN^(2,), close to the border with SEDISIA.

 $\underline{\text{TUSSo}}$: Set. Coastal settlement on the island of $\underline{\text{BEREMARA}}$ in the north of the $\underline{\text{MAIDEN ISLES}}$.

TUTELA: Set. Fortified settlement in the north west of CALBIA^(1.). Its adult populace all receive training as militia at the fortress of VIROTUTH, and are well-equipped, always at ready for an incursion from the north (Pop. c. 7,000).

TUTELARY SPIRIT: also 'tutelary'. Mys. Rel. Highest, most distant, form of spirit in TEMUIAN culture and religion. Depicted as animals (a throwback to the long-dead culture of animal worship that existed in what is now the north west of Temuja). Each spirit embodies the qualities and traits of particular creatures. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

TUTHA: Rvr. River in the south of LIMOTH^(1.), flowing south for 95-miles from sources in the DHEBI Mountains, before reaching the coast at the BAY OF LIMOTHEA^(1.), in the far north west of THE CONSTELLATIONS.

TUUNA: 1. Lak. Lake in the west of KORACHAN, fed by the river BREDA.

2. Set. Settlement in the west of KORACHAN (Pop. c. 4,200).

TUYNOIA: Set. Coastal city in the south of ANANTHUL, in the east of the delta of the river ENARADINE. It is known for its thriving harbours and merchant-houses that trade south across the SEA OF BIMARIA with ABACARDAT (Pop. c. 50,000).

TUZALA: Sec. Small settlement in the south east of TAHALL, in the saltlands of HALITHEA. It was once a coastal city, its fishing fleets plying the waters around the then-island-chain of LEZALL 16-miles from the coast (now ridges along the present coastline). The settlement now subsists by collecting salt from the expansive saltpans that surround it (Pop. c. 5,800).

TWELVTH OF THE ELVEN: Pol. Rnk. Common epithet used in reference to the LADY AEGIS who rules above the eleven HENDECARCHS at the head of the HALL OF THE HENDECARCHS in AMILLAERE^(2.).

TWENTY-TWO SHARDS OF ELYDEN, THE: Int. Soc. Conspiracy hypothesis increasing in popularity across the INNER SEA. Originating amongst an outlawed group of dissidents in the north of PARTHIS in 3991

RM. Though there is no organised group behind the hypothesis, it is thought that there are a few figures who fostered the belief before it grew outside their control, spreading across the lands surrounding the sea though trade and travel.

The hypothesis is superficially simple but belies an underlying gravity that few fully understand. There is not one reality, but rather 22. The DEMIURGES each shaped the MATERIA OMNA, creating solar systems and PLANETS, amongst them ELYDEN. Common belief is that each Demiurge played a part in the shaping of reality, resulting in the creation of the MATERIAL PLANE, which has aspects of each in varying measures in different areas, though which balance out across all of Elyden.

The hypothesis of the Twenty-two Shards of Elyden claims that the Demiurges, in their hubris, shattered the perfection they had wrought by continuing to shape Elyden, breaking it into 22 different shards, each reflecting the persona and beliefs of a particular Demiurge. The world we know and live in is the Elyden that exists within the reflection of one particular Demiurge, quite possibly RACHANAEL.

While there is little empirical data to support this there is enough anecdotal evidence to convince those who are willing to believe. The main proof cited by supporters of this belief is the city of DOLMES, in Sammaea, which is constructed around a large portal that leads to a distant, otherwise unidentified place, known as FAR DOLMES. The constellations and climate are entirely different in Far Dolmes to dolmes, and are unlike any combination of the two elsewhere in Elyden, making scholars think that Far Dolmes is on another planet. Or, as those who believe in the shard hypothesis claim, another shard in which another Demiurge hold sway.

Many who believe in the shard hypothesis hold positions of authority and power, and use their influence to further their goals, trying to unearth further evidence. Though this has largely been unsuccessful so far, many of the adherents of the shard hypothesis are vocal, and some fear they may be able to destabilise religions and governments, as their peers begin to question their beliefs.

TWILIGHT, the: Soc. Lan. Name used in reference to ELYDEN that grew in popularity towards the end of the FIFTH AGE.

TWILIGHT OF GODS, the: 1. Myt. Leg. Legend telling of a time when powerful beings, gods and spirits will be no more. The end of their kind, ushering a time of pure mortal. Is thought to be a corruption of the history relating the fall of the DEMIURGES. Many believe that the failing of ELYDEN, coupled with the demise and torpor of the DEMIURGES are responsible for this. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

2. Myt. His. Supposed resting places of the Two-and-Twenty DEMIURGES. Some are relatively well-known, such as THE GREY TOMBS (though the true nature of such places may be unknown to most, as is the case of the Grey Tombs); others may be unknown to the modern world.

TWILIGHT STATES, the: Nm. Decadent empire on the western-coast of LLACHATUL, north of the VORANDINE and west of RAONGEN⁽²⁾, along the northern POLAR CIRCLE. It is a depraved realm, ruled by the corrupt and debased descendants of SCIONS and OTHERWORLDERS. Though known for its vast riches, its resources are all but spent, its lands outside its cities wasted. Its people are proud and do not seek aid from other nations outside of what their wealth can buy. Its cities are slowly waning as its people dwindle, losing themselves in vices and carnal pursuits. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

TWILIGHT YEARS, the: His. The final centuries (c. -1700 – -1500 RM), following the end of the WAR OF SCOURGING in the FOURTH AGE, where the remnants of the victorious MORTAL PEOPLES struggled to continue their legacy. The war was one of great attrition, and though the ATRAMENTA was defeated, the cost was far too great for the Mortal peoples to recover, ultimately leading to the Fading of the Fourth Age.

TWIN CHURCHES OF CUTH: Rel. Common term within CUTH for the two churches that emerged in 3259 RM, following the death of its emperor KENG in 3171 RM. His death caused a schism within the church, after which two sects were declared – the CULT OF NERGAAL, and the ADHERENTS OF KENG.

TWIN CITIES, the: Set. Collective name for the two cities of CALETOS and Lero, in the c north west of Kommea. They flank the river LUGHBRAEN and have their own governments, but are linked by five bridges, each of which charges a toll, to grant entrance into the adjacent city.

TWIN CROWN: Lan. Common name for the unifying government of LARISH⁽²⁾, which is divided into two — WEST and EAST — each half of which is ruled by its own monarchy, with each monarchy having a hand in the leadership of the empire as a whole. The courts of Western and Eastern Larish each have representatives in the council of the Twin Crown, each acting in the interests of its respective sovereign, and minor clashes between the two are not uncommon.

TWIN EMPIRES, the: Lan. Colloquial term for the HIGH-EMPIRE OF KORACHAN and the REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO following their formation after the SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE.

TWIN FALLS OF VATULIA: Rvr. Twin waterfalls in the far south east of the HENDECARCHY of DERAEIA along the border between MALAN and TETHYSIA. The falls are around 1,550 ft. high and form a part of the NYALLA⁽¹⁾ river system, with its two major rivers – the Nyalla⁽²⁾ and ENDULLI prior to its long journey east down the SHIMMERING CLIFFS before moving across the PANTHALASSA desert in the north of Tethysia.

TWIN SABAISID BANNERS, the: Pol. Following the UPHEAVAL OF LETHEA many cultures around the sea were left devastated, with thousands dead and many more bereft of their memories due to the horrific traits of the sea's waters. One nation so-affected was the small nation of SATTAR ISHA, which occupied what is now the western-most peninsula of SABAISA. At the same time in the east the people of MENKAR were in the throes of a renaissance of sorts, under the aegis of the SCION TELEANYARA APEXEIDE. She was educating them and guiding them into expanding, taking advantage of resources left behind by the dwindling territories of Sattar Isha. the two peoples became allies and in 1324 RM they formed a bond becoming known as the Twin Sabaisid Banners.

Though Teleanyara had left to aid against political instability in PHARTH, she left behind her acolytes who guided the two nations. They prospered, and fortified their homes, rebuilt their cities, and learnt the secrets of TECHNARCANA and NYARALA, growing closer with each other. Ultimately, they were officially joined as one in 1598 RM, becoming known as Sabaisa.

TWIN TIDE: Cal. Ast. Common name for a tide that occurs when both moons are close to each other in their orbits and are either both full or new, resulting in the highest possible tides. Many regions experience extreme tides during such periods, and have adapted to this, by either avoiding the coast completely, or by elevating coastal structures to accommodate this change. See Vol II: Month and Lunar Cycle in Elyden.

TWISTED CROWN, the: Pol. Obj. Ancient crown dating back to the height of the kingdom of VAEVECTA⁽¹⁾, which was worn by its HALFBLOODED ruler ISTAR until their death in 1612 RM. The crown was lost for some time following this, though it eventually resurfaced, becoming a prize to warring rulers who squabbled over the ruin of Vaevecta.

The crown's original name is lost, and is only known by its much later moniker, a nickname given to it by an unremembered king in c. 1800 RM after it was damaged. The region eventually stabilised into a confederacy of states, and the crown was worn by their collective ruler, though the crown was sundered into three following the collapse of the confederacy into the states of CHAUTULA, VECTIS and AHOPAH in 2140 RM. A legend later rose surrounding the crown, amid growing conflict between the three sundered states, claiming that only when the three are united and the crown is one again can stability and prosperity return to the region.

TWO-AND-TWENTY, the: see DEMIURGE.

TWO-AND-TWENTY, TEMPLE OF THE: Int. Myt. His. Rel. Str. Ancient amphitheatre-temple in the south of LPAAZASASHAT, north of the WORLD'S THRONE Mountain the temple is said to date back to the FIRST AGE, where it was a mortal-constructed temple dedicated to the TWO-AND-TWENTY DEMIURGES.

It is comprised of 22 caryatid marble columns that support a hollowtopped temple, most of which is now destroyed. Each column was erected in the image of a Demiurge, though many are also toppled or disfigured. An ancient KHARKHARADONTID myth states that whatever happens to one of the caryatids is reflected on the represented Demiurge.

None know if the caryatids were damaged before or after the fall of the respective Demiurges, though the similarities are otherwise eerie.

TWO-AND-TWENTY TRIBES, the: Myt. His. In the MYTHOLOGIA

ELYDEN, each of the DEMIURGES had a tribe of seven MORTALS under their control – these became known as the Two-and-Twenty Tribes. The original context for the tribes is largely lost on contemporary commentators, most of whom do not have access to the Mythologia elyden in any reliable form. See Vol IV: the Mythologia Elyden.

TWO WORLDS, BATTLE OF: His. War. Large battle and culmination of the ANTHROPEIDOS CRUSADES in 151 RM, where xenophobic members of the early CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE committed their full strength following the death of their GENERAL, GRABRES two years earlier, against persecuted HALFBLOODS in the north west of NÁRTHEL (now the south of LYRIDIA DHAI). OTHERWORLDERS fought on both sides. The battle ended with the almost complete destruction of imperial troops and the martyrdom of the halfblood leader CAMBION, who later became revered as a deity by many halfbloods. With the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR missing and belief in the CHURCH low, the EMPIRE had no choice but to abandon its hunt of halfbloods, which were subsequently allowed to live (and, in the case of many places, thrived) within imperial borders.

TWO YEAR WAR, the: Mil. His. War that took place mostly in the REPUBLIC OF ELAT (1-), between 3760 – 3762 RM between Elat and various other nations, including KORACHAN. Originating in the actions of the ORDER OF ELAT, a militant order that appeared in Elat in response to the growing role of espionage in its economy, the war was decided by the detonation of an ATRAMENTAL BOMB over the city of URRED, destroying important military and political objectives. This led to the signing of a PEACE TREATY, with assurances that Elat will step down its espionage across ELYDEN. This also led to the collapse of the Republic of Elat later that same year, giving rise to the nations of AYAD and GYZHA.

TWOWORLDS: Oth. Lan. Word commonly used in the east of LLACHATUL in reference to HALFBLOODS, as in: a being of the twoworlds.

TYAE: Rui. Ancient silver mine in the north west of the HENDECARCHY of ATALLUA, some 20 -miles west of the city of SOLEMNIA in south eastern MALAN. The mines date back to the FOURTH AGE and were spent millennia past, though many of the pits and quarries remain to this day.

TYAHA: Lake in the c north east of LIDEA. The capital city of CATHAGO is located along its banks.

TYAMATRA: Rel. Set. Settlement in the north west of the LUGENT forest in the foothills of the SMYURMA Mountains in the north of THE VORANDINE. It is renowned for its sanctuary where monks devoted to the GOD WHO SPEAKS spend their days transcribing visions and DREAMS that are brought to them by people from across the Vorandine. The sanctuary is perched atop a steep peak and is only accessible by a narrow stone bridge. The town itself has a small industry based around the mining of fine jade, which is exported across WESTERN LLACHATUL as well as north western SAMMAEA (Pop. c. 7,000).

TYANA: 1. Geo. Island off the south eastern coast of SAGITTARIA, in the SEA OF DANAEAL. It is heavily fortified against the threat of CYHLAGHARRI attacks.

2. Set. Major fort in the south east of SAGITTARIA, which controls much of Sagittaria's southern fleet.

TYDRACH: Set. City in the south east of EREBETH (Pop. c. 48,000).

TYRA: 1. Geo. Cliff in the north east of the SOLLANDITH hills, close to the eponymous TROGLODYTE settlement. The cliff is around 55-miles long and highest in the west, where it is some 80-ft high.

2. Set. TROGLODYTE settlement in the east of the above region, hewn from the cliff-face in a series of family abodes. In recent decades more modern structures have appeared at the base of the traditional settlement, with many of the older dwellings lying abandoned or used as family tombs (Pop. c. 4,800).

TYRACAS: 1. Rui. Ancient FOURTH AGE iron fortress in the south west of SAMMAEA, to the south of the ESTHTARES desert. Ancient records attest to the once-spectacular nature of the structure – the metal-chiselled gargoyles peering from its battlements, and the expertly carved angles of its walls, that suggest an intimate understanding of military engineering and architecture that is now lost.

It has since been repurposed and is now home to the ruling body of MAENMIST.

2. also 'the Iron City'. Pol. Set. Capital of MAENMIST, in the c south west of SAMMAEA. Named after the ancient FOURTH AGE iron fortress^(1,), many of its present structures are made from iron, much like old fortress (Pop. c. 128,000).

TYRAN KASTRO: m. Ast. Per. (B. 1302 – D. 1378 RM) ALMAGESTI Astronomer who is today remembered alongside his colleague ROKON BANMISS for confirming the KASTRO-BANMISS CYCLE with modern mathematical precision.

TYRANON: Pol. Oth. Ruling HALFBLOODS of the city of HAZOR in RHINOCOLOURA from 2965 to 3470 RM. Descended from the otherworlder ruler NEANDER, only halfbloods of the 1st and 2nd generation made up its ranks, and were each given control of various territories across the empire. Following the death of Neander and the deposing of his family from the leadership of NEANDARA in 3470 RM, the Tyranon and Agornon castes were executed, with the remnants exiled south, ending their influence on Rhinocoloura.

TYRANT OF BALAAM: see BALAAM, TYRANT OF.

TYRANT OF ERASHA, the: see BAKORI LAUR.

TYRANT OF SUMA'YA: (D. c. 3900 RM) Pol. Ruler of SUMA'YA, who became the centre of a cult of personality known as the CULT OF SACRIFICE. He preached insularity and xenophobia, and after his death and deification as the PROPHET OF THE RAVENOUS HEART, the nation continued to withdraw from the international platform, avoiding the attentions of its larger neighbours where possible.

TYRMIA: Set. Settlement in the c-south east of SAGITTARIA (Pop. c. 3,200).

TYRIASIS: Med. Congenital disease, believed to be rooted in the ATRAMENTA, that causes tumorous growths on the body, particularly the extremities. Though rarely deadly, those afflicted by the ailment find their mobility severely limited, with many unable to work or even fend for themselves. Few who are not patricians survive long due to the stigma and pressures on work life, and of the PATRICIANS most are secreted away, removed from the daily life of the HOUSE, considered at best an embarrassment to the House. See Vol II: Diseases and Illnesses.

TYRON: Leg. Soc. Culture hero of the ancient kingdom of TYRANOSH, and originator of the name. He is buried in a granite tomb in the c of present-day MECHABET.

TYRANOSH: His. Ntn. FIFTH AGE kingdom that emerged in c. 160 RM alongside PENGAR from the power vacuum left by the fall of THE PARRIA in the north of the PARTHISAN PENINSULA.

It was absorbed by MECHABET following its rise to power in 1907 RM. See Vol III: Extinct States.

TYRANOSHI: Lan. Native language of TYRANOSH, though it was largely supplanted by the TONGUE of its MECHABETI conquerors by c. 200 RM. See Vol II: Languages.

 $\overline{\text{TYRARNON}}$: Oth. Leading $\underline{\text{HALFBLOOD}}$ caste in $\underline{\text{HAZOR}}$ that practices HAZORISTRANISM.

TYRATH: Rui. Ancient spent granite quarry in the south of LYRIDIA, used in the construction of the LYTRASADRA idol 200-miles east of there.

TYREN: Lak. Lake in the c-south east of THE VORANDINE, east of the BOTH RATHO, and forming a part of the course of the river YINALADA.

TYRIDESH II: m. Per. (B. 3038 – D. 3066 RM) Pol. Known as 'the Profligate' after his short reign ended, Tyridesh II became emperor of PARTHIS in 3057 RM at the age of 19 following his father's death.

Raised by sycophants and already fickle and vicious, his accession to the throne only exacerbated his worst traits. He was assassinated just 9years into his reign, by which time he'd already amassed a reputation as a spendthrift with capricious tastes.

His lasting legacy are the so-called GOBLIN TAPESTRIES which were commissioned before he even became emperor, which depict him as an outlandish godlike figure on the field of battle defeating hordes of mishappen enemies that some have likened to goblins, earning the tapestries their nickname.

TYROPOEA: Set. City built over the conquered city of IDAN in c. -600 RM. Idan was, until its destruction at the hands of SALOROCAN armies in -693 RM, the largest known HAAGENI settlement. By c. -550 RM Tyropoea became an important colony of Saloroc, linking the nations' trade-routes with the SAOSTANAN city of HAGRADEA in the east, the city of IRAM in the south, and the city state of AASHA in the west across the DAARKEN GULF. As Saloroc changed into Io under the leadership of the IONIC HIERARCHS, Tyropoea continued in its trade with the south and west, becoming a major caravanserai and port, though the APOSTATE WARS left it weak following predation by the 'SUNDERED STATES' that had emerge from the south of SARASTRO in -132 RM. Following the arrival of KORACHAN to Io in 212 RM

The city was abandoned in 3022 RM, following the poisoning of its water supply and the retreat of the DAARKEN GULF'S coastline, both attributed to the slow death of ELYDEN and the pollution of her lands. Following the handing over of Io to Sarastro in 3103 RM, the ruins of the city became a refuge to those persecuted by SATHEP THE RISEN; mostly the descendants of EXARCHS slain after he took control of the region, and remains so to this day, though it is often attacked by Sarastroan slavers (Pop. c. 2,200).

TYROVENEA, IDOL OF: Rel. Str. Stone idol in the prefecture of TERECHANT^(1.) in the c south of HOLOLACH^(1.). This antediluvian idol is of soap-like texture and takes the size and vague form of an infant, though with unsettling features. The idol forms the centre of a corrupted cult of human worship in the south of Hololach, with a large number of its EVORADI nomads under its sway. The region surrounding the idol was tentatively explored by the explorer NAVAH BERDEN, who concluded that the people are fully under its sway, and postulated that it might be a form of corrupted OTHERWORLDER, though FARSEERS that have viewed the area have sensed an ancient ATRAMENTAL depression surrounding the idol, indicating something far more ancient.

The region is categorised as a $\underline{\text{MODERATE THREAT}}$ by the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI}}$ $\underline{\text{INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES}}.$

TYRS BERGEN, the: Mil. Str. Twin towers flanking the SZENYA PASS in the western face of ERESHKIGAL Mountain.

TYRSIS: Sea. Sea between LAASKHA and AZAZEM.

TYTAHEA: Set. Settlement in the c north east of the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS, west of the. It controls the GALLIAN PASS between the south of the TEREKION Mountains and of the HELICAR Mountains, and links the RED ROUTE east into PELASGOS (Pop. c. 4,200).

TZALLRACH: Dem. 'Tzallrachi'. Ntn. KORACHANI name for CHÂR MATHI. Situated in the south east of CENTRAL LLACHATUL Tzallrach is a warm temperate region, lying west of the ARGENT Mountains, and overlooking the LAPETAN SEA in the south and the BOILING SEA in the west. Its southern-most territories are stony deserts, though as one moves north, the terrain changes to savannahs and eventually scrub forests, with multiple fertile rivers winding their way west and south.

It was populated in the FIFTH AGE by a group of people known as the AMADIANS — descendants of FOURTH AGE cultures that had been obliterated by the WAR OF SCOURGING. They would go on to form the CHARAMA culture, whose people became expert fishermen, and whose settlements spread from present-day KHAMID to the HEBAT Mountains.

To the south, across the DARK SEA, the kingdom of NATH was emerging as a major power in what is today the ARID TRIPTYCH and by around -600 RM had established colonies along the Charaman coast, with conflicts ensuing between Amadian natives and colonists, though Nath would falter during the LION HERESIES that saw major SLAVE revolts in its Charaman territories. This led to its collapse in around -190 RM, by which time most of its Charaman colonies had been abandoned, allowing the Charaman people to expand.

By around 50 RM the ASANATE DYNASTIES has grown to fill in the void left by Nath, forming the VENATHI EMPIRE, and by 132 RM it was in control of present-day SARASTRO, NÁRTHEL, TARATI⁽¹⁾ and NAARETH, and when the so-called LION KING LABAISINGH came into power he had in his sights the lands of Charama, which he wanted to reclaim, to restore the ancient Nathi kingdom's territories. He spent his reign in war against Charama, squandering the riches of $\underline{\text{VENATH}}$ in a war of attrition that cost him his life in 151 RM. His death at the hands of the 'Barbarian' king $\underline{\text{FICHIM}}$ propagated the collapse of Venath, allowing the people of Charama to evolve.

As Queen Hetepheres built the kingdom of Venthir from the ruin of Venath, a new power rose in the north, and a line of Botum Kings⁽²⁾ emerged in Charama in around 320 RM, which by then had become known as the Charath Crown. The Crown was an expansionist power and expanded north and south rapidly, assimilating most Amadian cultures, including the cultural motif of the lion, which remains a powerful Tzallrachi symbol to this day.

The line of Botum rulers ended in 779 RM, and the region went into decline after that. By around 1100 RM it had stabilised into four states — MOETIA⁽¹⁾ in the west, NADAIRA⁽²⁾ in the east, KHUN⁽²⁾ in the north, and LURIUM⁽²⁾ in the south. These four states existed in an uneasy alliance for close to 1000 years, until the arrival of HIKARE, a NOMARCH from the city of LUCCITARIA, who in 2073 RM began a political campaign to unite the four states, arranging marriages between the families of the ruling ONARCHS. In 2093 RM he was successful in uniting the four Onarch families through marriage and political relations — with him as husband to the Moetian princess. Using his power, he secured the support of the other Onarchs and in 2101 RM he was declared king of a united Charath — renamed Châr Mathi, of which he was the first ANARCH.

The united states flourished under his leadership and he set a solid foundation on which Châr Mathi would later flourish. His descendants built a powerful military and navy to contend with the belligerent powers that surrounded it, and the Anarchs instilled a sense of worth in the people of Châr Mathi that ensured their independence and self-sufficiency. To this day Châr Mathi remains relatively neutral in the political machinations of ELYDEN, erring on the side of the free peoples of the east due to its history with FIRMAMENTISM.

In around 3740 RM the IAPETAN ALLIANCE was formed by Châr Mathi and other nations to police the waters of the Iapetan against piracy, making sea passage much safer.

The people of Châr Mathi are religious, worshiping the polytheistic pantheon of ANATHA BAETYL, whose eponymous deity is a goddess of sun and strength. The religion emerged during the emergence of the Charama culture, and though it diminished during the time of Nathi dominance, it re-emerged later and remains strong today. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

TZATALAIKON: Set. Settlement in the south west of NOAVATUR, overlooking the bay of KZANADEM⁽²⁾. Its main industry is fishing (Pop. c. 8,000).

TZEDEK: Set. Independent city-state in the far east of THE SURRACH, close to the border with TRAKIA. It is known for its grotesque demonic idol, that dates back to an idolatrous time. It is populated by marauders who regularly penetrate east into Trakia, raiding villages (Pop. c. 15,500).

TZURIS: Geo. Extensive cavern system in the c-south east of PELASGOS, 12-miles north west of the settlement of JURGEA. It is known for its GRUAIMIN population, which occasionally requires culling to stop them becoming too much of problem.

IJ

- $\underline{\text{UABBA HAQ}}$: Set. City in the south east of $\underline{\text{CHEIRA}}$, at the base of the $\underline{\text{XENIA}}$ peninsula (Pop. unknown).
- UAKA THOTHAMUR: Set. Small city in the west of OKKHAM (Pop. c. 13,000).
- UAKHA: Sct. Coastal settlement in the east of THETIS. Its main industry is fishing (Pop. c. 4,700).
- UALLA: Set. City in the south of GYZHA located on a very flat coastal plain that leaves it as an island at high-tide. The city is connected to the mainland by 2-mile-long vaulted thoroughfare. It is known for its 6 OTHERWORLDLY rulers, which are worshipped as rival gods by different groups throughout the city, leading to strong partisanship (Pop. c. 149.000).
- UALLA MIGHA: His. Ntn. Eth. Extinct empire that arose in the east of SAMMAEA from the ELLAN KINGDOMS in c. 1100 following two centuries of conglomeration of their cities, and lasted until c. 1730 RM. It expanded rapidly south and formed a capital in the city of EROLUSIA, around the SEA OF MOSASA, and its culture spread rapidly west until, at its peak in c. 1600 RM, it controlled what are now present-day CHEIRA, PNESSA, and SERROK. It faltered through a mix of over-extension and border wars with NOAVATUR, and fell following a military coup claimed the throne, bringing about the REFORMED EMPIRE OF UALLA MIGHA in 1663 RM. See Vol III: Extinct States.
- UALLA MIGHA, REFORMED EMPIRE OF: His. Ntn. Extinct empire in the east of SAMMAEA, along the equator, that appeared in 1663 RM following a military coup of the struggling UALLA MIGHAN empire. The death of its emperor in 1724 RM led to dissent and civil strife as his generals and viziers warred amongst themselves for the throne. This, coupled with sedition and unrest amongst the lower-classes, led to a war that saw its power structure eroded. The entire region crumbled into the so-called DIVIDED EMPIRE by c. 1730 RM, in which as many as nine warring states competed amongst each other over the next 1,000 years until the rise of WAELMIGH^(2.) in c. 2670 RM. See Vol III: Extinct States.
- UALRI, TREE OF: Flo. Large twisted tree in the c of AMMESH, situated on a high overhang overlooking lake RALIA. The tree is famed for having a small niche in which is a wooden statue, both carved from the living wood of the tree.
- UAMEKI: 1. Geo. Region and one of the FIVE-AND-SIXTY FEUDAL STATES of SAUA that has slowly, since c. 3200 RM, become corrupted by the ATRAMENTA. Its ruler, the patriarch LIN-LII CYRIC, bears the scars of that corruption proudly and has founded a cadre of shapers who fight against the source of this corruption, in the foothills of the BLUE Mountains.
 - 2. Set. Major city in the c south of SAUA, and capital of the above region^(1.). It forms a part of the GREAT ROAD trade-route, and sees many merchant caravans passing through its markets (Pop. c. 83,000).
- UAMMARA: 1. Sea. Bay to the north west of METHUMN, in the far east of the SEA OF LRITHA.

- 2. Set. Small coastal settlement in the far north west of METHUMN. Its main industry is fishing and agriculture (Pop. c. 8.200).
- 3. Set. Coastal settlement in the west of the AMMASHI FREE-ISLES, on the c west of the island of SAMMALIM (Pop. c. 7,000).
- UAMMASH: Set. Settlement in the c-south east of GIBEAH (Pop. unknown).
- UANII: Set. City in the c of RAONGEN^(2.), some 280-miles east of lake TAHONG. It forms a part of the main land trade-route of the empire (Pop. c. 42,000).
- UANNA: Lak. 20-mile-long lake in the south of AETHIOS, forming a part of the course of the river SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾. It is known for the jelly-like waters that form its eastern-most shores, which are home to DEGENERATE MERILL ascetics who cultivate the jelly for use in communion with their god, Shibboleth.
- UAPETH: Rvr. River in the south of Thetis, flowing south for 400-miles from sources in the KOTHA TYRAL Mountains before meeting the coast at the BAY OF KHEMAK^(1.).
- UARURNDAT: Rvr. Ancient now-dry river that once flowed north from the northern face of the MOLOTH KHAMMOTHUL Mountains in the south of the UMBRA SOKHAR. The river was a tributary of the larger river SPICIA, flowing north into lake NUMINIA. The river was responsible for carving the so-called TUARTAR MAZE, and flash floods were once a common sight in the area now occupied by the Maze.
- UAS: Set. Small fortified city in the far east of AETHIOS, built atop an ancient AIKLAH aerie in the western reaches the GROWING MOUNTAINS, beyond the borders of MULCIBER. It was once part of the SALT ROAD, though the trade-route has since moved east, leaving the city cut-off. It was once much larger, its trade halls bustling with activity, though they now lie empty, filled with beggars and the destitute (Pop. c. 13,000).
- UASHADITH: Geo. Mountain-range in the west of NOAVATUR, forming part of the border with KHARKHARADONTIS.
- UATAT: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the far south of NÁRTHEL that guards PETITIONERS OF THE MACHINE travelling along the SHADOW MARCH into Sarastro.
 - It was constructed by VENTHIRI engineers as part of the expansive NÁRTHELI LINES, in the years leading up to the WAR OF SUNDERING, and it formed the backbone of the southern defences for Nárthel.
- UATHA: 1. Geo. Pass crossing the gap between the SHANA Mountains^(1.) in the west and the SHANA Highlands^(2.) in the east, in the c of VENTHIR.
 2. Set. Settlement in the c of VENTHIR, controlling the above pass (Pop. c. 2,000).
- UBAITH: Set. Small fortified city in the c of THETIS. It plays a vital role in distributing trade across the nation, moving trade from the far west and the east of TETHYSIA to the south of THETIS (Pop. c. 17,600).
- UBAKKAR: Set. City in the north east of the CITIZENRY OF THALI, forming one half of twin cities overlooking the DISSENTION (the other being the city of DAKATTA). The city appeared in c. 2220 RM following the discovery of a vein of precious metals in the area by prospectors. The city grew rapidly from that initial settlement and within 200-years had become a red-stone metropolis, half of which stretched grew down the cliffs of the Dissention, hewn from the very rock face. The city is constantly in peril, with the threat of eruptions of poisonous air from the deep caverns within the schism an everyday danger, though the prospect of striking new ores is enough to keep the city alive.

The opposing city of DAKATTA started as a colony in c. 2905 RM though later became a politically separate entity (Pop. c. 27,200).

UBAMEPHUN: Rui. Ancient stone city in the c north of OKKHAM, dating back to the early FOURTH AGE. It is thought to have once been the centre of a resurgent civilisation following the FADING of the Third Age, though little is otherwise known of it.

It is expansive and during its peak would have been home to tens of thousands of people, and likely existed for some length of time, as evidenced by the large subterranean necropolis that exists beneath a hill to the north.

Today it exists in the rainforests of Okkham and is overgrown and barely recognisable beneath the dense foliage and mosses that have reclaimed it.

UBAR: Set. Small city in the north east of LIDEA. It has roots in the FOURTH AGE, and is built atop an ancient catacomb-city. Today it is home to a major conveyor and ambulant manufactory (Pop. c. 18,000).

UBARASHI: Geo. 1. Deep natural sinkhole in the far west of TISARA, in the easternmost reaches of the THARORAT Mountains close to the border with eastern MALAN. The sinkhole is ancient and weathered, its uppermost lip rounded by millennia of exposure to the elements. It is around 7,000-ft. deep, and its bottommost reaches are filled with seasonal water, with its sides covered in mosses, ferns and other creeping flora.

There are no signs of any mortal influence in the region throughout history.

2. Cave in the upper reaches of the eponymous $^{(1)}$ pit that reaches deep beneath the easternmost reaches of the $\underline{THARORAT}$ Mountains.

UBAVVAN: Rvr. River in the east of SARASTRO flowing west for 180-miles from sources in the KHO INNOR Mountains before meeting its parent, the river SOLONA.

UBAYN: Set. Settlement in the c east of LAASKHA, built in the fertile soils of LAABOU KENNATH. Its main industry is agriculture, and it provides food to those travelling along the SHADOW MARCH as well as the RED ROUTE, both of which pass through it (Pop. c. 3,000).

UBBASHA: Set. Settlement in the c of DURCHAA^(1.), around 50-miles south east from the capital (Pop. c. 4,000).

UBBAT HAMMAR: Sup. Geo. Blighted part of the NDEPHARRA canyon system in the c of the UMBRA SOKHAR. A black sphere, perhaps two-ft. wide is at the centre of an expanse that is around 5-miles in radius. Within this radius the stone of the area is white and lattice-like, losing strength closer to the sphere, close to which the land is just an expanse of white dust unable to support any weight but for that of the sphere, which is thought by some explorers to be an ancient SOULSTONE.

UBEK: Cur. Native resin-based currency of N'RAKH, which has little value outside its own borders. See Vol II: Currency and Coinage in Elyden.

UBENO: Set. Coastal settlement on the island of VURIRIN in the north east of the MAIDEN ISLES. Its main industry is fishing (Pop. c. 3,800).

UBÉR KOPH: (B. 1849 – D. 1920 RM) Pol. His. Minor lord from house KOPH who in 1877 RM married princess EREPHYANA III, forevermore linking his house with the INGHULLAN MONARCHY in what is present-day KHULL.

UBERRET: Sup. Geo. The smaller of two major regions of Atramental taint in TAAN AN, in the south west of SAMMAEA (the other being the larger ZENEGE RES). It is home to the UMBRA mines of NUAANU, which dominate its westernmost reaches. The umbra is piped north via the ZENEGE RES PIPELINE, to the cities of AMATIA, RYCRAAT, and CUR APON, where the umbra is processed into umbriska, before being piped north to URAMMALET, where it is exported.

The region is categorised as a $\underline{\text{LEAST CONCERN}}$ by the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI}}$ $\underline{\text{INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES}}.$

UBHUTTAL: Rui. Abandoned open-cast iron mines in the c of PERGOST. In 3677 RM the mine was the site of a tragic landslide that caused the deaths of hundreds of workers. This incident would ultimately lead to the revolts and civil war that would claim the ELDRIAN empire in 3682 RM. It is expansive, over a mile wide and almost half a mile deep, and was once a great source of iron. It continued to be worked after the fall of Eldria, though was abandoned in c. 3890 RM, though it has since been intermittently operated by opportunists and prospectors since then, though few have lasted long, ultimately driven away by the harsh weather and working conditions.

UBIQUA: Rvr. Extensive delta of the river HATHURAN, encompassing some 12,000-square-miles.

UBOTE: Set. Settlement in the region of HELLIA in the c of KHARKHARADONTIS, south east of the SEPULCHRAL PALACE. It is home to the HELLIONS, who seek to be as close to the ATRAMENTA and the UNDYING MACHINE as they can by experiencing the worst of its effects. In the distant past the ancestors of Ubote found the near-dead body of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR, following his wanderings there after his disappearance in 84 RM, and they helped to restore him to health.

UBRATIA: Geo. Mountain range in the west of Kharkharadontis, forming a north eastern part of the ACHARKHARAN Mountains, extending into the REALM OF THE MARKED PALL. Landslides and avalanches are common due to collapses in expansive DUSTSTONE formations that pervade the region.

UBRO: Set Settlement in the c west of GIBEAH. Its main industry is nickel mining (Pop. c. 6,500).

UBYAN: Geo. Island off the south western coast of THE VORANDINE, to the north west of the BAY OF NURCYA. It is home to fortresses that guard the sea from ANAGARI incursions from the south.

UBYR: Pol. Rnk. The witches and ruling-caste of LYRIDIA. While it is true that all the ubyrs are AUGURS, the opposite is not true. Most ubyrs are merely acolytes of the NINE ABULIA or regional overseers of the augurs, ensuring that the troglodytic lands remain in working order. The WHITE-ROBES of the cities and TROGEIN of the TROGLODYTIC settlements fall under their command.

UCCAHAR: Mys. Rel. Phil. One of the SEVENTY-SEVEN NAMES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE.

UCHOS: also 'the flaming Marshes'. Geo. Region in the east of KORACHAN, north of the SEA OF LEMAS. Once known for its gaseous marshes, it is now a blackened wasteland of dried tar (actually asphalt). Some entrepreneuring individuals harvest the dried tar, which is used, amongst other things, as an insulator in construction.

UCHRON: 1. Pol. Duchy in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOMS.

2. also 'the Free-city of Uchron'. Set. $\underline{HAR\acute{E}SHKI}$ city and capital of the duchy of the same name (1.) (Pop. c. 10,000).

UCHRONIA: Leg. Vol. Ntn. Fictional kingdom that features within intricate stories that are common in THE HARÉSHK, and which appear in stories across CENTRAL LLACHATUL.

The first tales featuring the kingdom of Uchronia date back to the early FIFTH AGE state of MELAYA, in the north east of the extant City Kingdoms, in territories now occupied by SYRTIS^(1.) and UCHRON^(1.). This predates the rise of the Haréshk, and it is believed that the names of the City Kingdom and city of Uchron came from these tales. As Korachani traders and explorers made contact with the region they heard the stories, believing them to be tales of a real place, perhaps an ancient precursor state to the Haréshk, though it was later discovered to be little more than a myth or legend, though the people of the Haréshk itself were (and still are) well aware of its fictional status.

The kingdom and characters that are said to have dwelt within it can be found in many pulp novels, campsite stories and nursery rhymes across the DARK SEA and INNER SEA regions See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

UCINDIR: Sup. Geo. An Atramentally Tainted region in the north west of the UMBRA SOKHAR, to the west of the route of the SHADOW MARCH. It was created in 3720 RM, when the Atramental Bomb nicknamed the DEMON BOMB was detonated by mistake, creating a region of DANGEROUS Atramental taint that has slowly grown over the - years. The region is now riddled with $\underline{\hbox{\tt DUSTSTONE}}$ sinkholes and caverns, and is dangerous to traverse.

- UCRAS: Geo. Isthmus in the north east of MENISCEA that separates the headland of ABARHAL^(2.) from the mainland.
- UCTINADD: Set. Settlement in the west of ELEKHID, along the western shore of lake CIHURR (Pop. unknown).
- UCUET: Set. City in the c of KOMMEA, along the northern shore of lake ATHUIN. It is a major industrial centre, and one of the largest dedicated industrial cities in the nation.
 - In 3892 RM one of the city's largest manufactories was ravaged by a terrible fire that left many workers, including dozens of children, dead, with many more maimed. This gave rise to the legend of the EMBER CHILDREN, which remains prevalent to this day (Pop. c. 50,000).
- UDA: Set. Coastal city in the c east of SABAISA, overlooking the sound of SOLMORRA (Pop. c. 40,000).
- UDANILLA: Sea. Narrow sea in the north east of EASTERN LLACHATUL, that serves as a natural division between the nations of HARITH and HALEDONIA.
- UDANT: Set. Settlement in the far north of the region of KURDA in the east of THE SURRACH (Pop. c. 9,000).
- UDERAQ: Set. Settlement in the region of FURAKISH in the south east of KHARKHARADONTIS (Pop. c. 4,300).
- UDERATEL: For. Forested coastal region dominating the south west of TAHALL, stretching into the far east of OPHIUSSA.
- UDIIV: Set. Fortified city in the north west of ELEKHID close to the border with the MULCIBIAN tribe of Linaris. It trades south with the city of AIUCTAII across the river MAHEZEAL (Pop. c. 32,000).
- UDON: 1. Geo. Small island off the western-coast of TZALLRACH. It is known as a prison to political dissidents and those who betrayed the nation.
 - 2. Law. Set. Settlement and major prison on the above island in the west of TZALLRACH. Most prisoners are sent here for life-sentences, and they spend their lives in dungeon-cells that see little light. Most die of malnourishment within 10-years of their imprisonment.
- UDRAN SHUR: (D. 3701 RM) Pol. King of ELEKHID from 3694 RM to his assassination in 3701 RM. He is the only known king of the SHURAN DYNASTY, which has otherwise been matriarchal since its formation. His few years in power were not popular and his assassination restored the matriarchy, with the crowning of his cousin ORACCA SHUR in his place.
- UDREAH: Set. Major city in the south east of GIBEAH. It is considered the largest conurbation in Gibeah and is its largest and most densely-populated city (Pop. c. 1,080,500).
- UEFIR: Geo. Mountain dominating central NÁRTHEL, around 1,000-miles long. It is the source of the river UEFIRAT.
- UEFIRAT: Rvr. River in the north of NÁRTHEL, flowing over 400-miles from the UEFIR highlands before emptying into lake DRACONA, which until c. 3700 RM was part of the STRAIT OF NÁRTHEL, which linked THE INNER SEA with the DARK SEA. Since then, the strait has dried up, leaving behind a series of salty endorheic lakes that fluctuate with seasonal river that flow into the strait.
- UELAH: Geo. Island off the south western coast of WESTERN SAMMAEA, in the COTRIAN ISLES, forming a part of the ISLAND STATES OF IRY.
- UELLO'S PANTHER: Fau. Medium size FELID^(1.) native to the subcontinent of WESTERN LLACHATUL, most abundant in the wildernesses of c and southern RAONGEN^(2.). They are sensitive to the OTHERWORLD and SPIRITS^(1.) of the unliving. They can be trained to warn mortals of the presence of ghosts, spirits, otherworlders as well as areas where the otherworld is particularly close to the MATERIAL PLANE. They are used by explorers and those whose work requires knowledge of the otherworld.
 - They grow to around 7 8-ft. long, including a tail that can be up to 3-ft. long, and they are typically white with brown stripes and very long pointed ears, akin to those of lynxes. Their eyes are icy blue. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.
- UERGGETIN: Mar. Martial art practiced by the order of acolytes known as the BRIDESMAIDENS^(2.) in the PREPOTENCY OF THREPHO. It embraces

- stealth and fluidity of motion, which, despite its dance-like motions, does not sacrifice power. The techniques learnt in uerggetin are used by the Bridesmaidens in their capacity as assassins.
- UEVIRRUR: Set. Settlement on the island of VHOPRA, in the BHALASSIAN ARCHIPELAGO in the east of the PANTHEON ISLES. Its main industry is the quarrying of silver and sulphur (Pop. c. 4,200).
- UFFAGOR: Set. Small fortified city in the south of the tribe of NINIR in the south east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 14.000).
- UFASH: Set. Settlement in the east of PARAIYA. Its main industry is the growing of date palms, which are sold to merchants travelling along the SALT ROAD, which passes through it. It also has many caravanserais where caravans can stop to replenish their provisions (Pop. c. 6,800).
- UFILAS: Set. Small city the in c of AZAZEM. Its main industry is the bottling of mineral water, which is sold across the empire to patricians and those with the means to pay for it via the RED ROUTE, which passes through the city. (Pop. c. 17,000).
- UGHIRAN: Geo. Reef in the east of the territorial waters of FALLAROUR in the western waters of the MANNAL ITRUSH off the south western coast of SAMMAEA.
- UGKHAA: Set. Small city in the c of the nation of DURCHAA^(1.), just 5-miles west of the capital. It is a major source of food for the capital, producing mosses, lichens and offal for use in the dross industry (Pop. 8,000).
- UGOLO: Geo. Chief island in the PREPOTENCY OF THREPHO. It is home to the capital city of TUGO.
- UGOLOTH: also 'the Tears of Elend. Sup. Sea. Large tainted inlet of the BYSSOS that acts as a natural border between the west of TARTAK and the KHARKHARADONTID wastelands. Its waters are fouled by the presence of the CAMMOREAN mountain to the south, and they are utterly still, without life or nourishing value and are an abysm that surpasses even the depths of Byssos.
- Ruins of ancient cultures sit at its shores, with the most intact amongst them to be found on an island known as ELEND. Though they post-date the retreat of ELYDEN'S seas they remain ancient.
- UGOMOS: Geo. Stony plateau in the north western-face of the PAMEROAS Mountains. It is known for the lithographs carved into its flat surface. From the air, these take the form of gigantic concentric circles, the largest of which is some 300-ft. wide and of perfect curvature. It is thought that a powerful ATRAMENTAL LEY may have once occupied this region, though if that's the case, it was either spent (either by natural decay or a large ritual that drained it) long ago or drifted elsewhere through natural phenomena.
- UGONEM: Rvr. River in the west of AZAZEM flowing north from the AAORA Mountains for 120-miles before joining with its parent, the river EPHANOSH at lake EXANEM.
- UGOSTAUTH: Geo. Large arid plateau region in the east of RHINOCOLOURA, adjoining the western-most reaches of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. It is rocky and barren, characterised by flattopped mesas, and by most accounts is considered a desert, though some amount of rainfall tends to occur in the western-most reaches, resulting in a short-lived seasonal river that flows north, joining up its parent, the river SOMALAN. The plateau is renowned for its many TERATORNS, which are a common sight in the region, seen circling above travellers.
- UGOT: 1. Geo. Region in the north east of IO and the west of SARASTRO, noted for its large though sparse oak, acacia and sophora trees, forming the north west of the HADASSALON forest. Though seemingly arid, the place is fertile and smaller plants survive in the hillocks between the larger trees, thanks largely to the waters of the river SHAMAR and its tributary, the DRAMAR.
- 2. Set. IONIC city in above region, flanking the river DRAMAR. It is famed across the REFORMED EMPIRE for its woodworking skills, and wooden statues are its main export. The city is also the resting place of ST. BAEL, the exorcist, and forms part of THE SHADOW MARCH (Pop. c. 17,000).
- UGRATH: also 'the Frozen City'. Set. Coastal city in the north of the Hendecarchy of NHORA, in the far north of MALAN. Due to fluctuations in the ARCANE TEMPERS affecting the climate in the environs surrounding the city, Ugrath is known for its cold, often freezing, temperatures, contributing to its nickname. It is known for its large harbour (Pop. c. 64,000).

UGRICIA: Set. Settlement in the c north of SKAROS. Its main industry is the mining of the rare ore PARADROSS (Pop. c. 6,800).

 \underline{UGROSI} : Set. Coastal settlement on the island of $\underline{DIRIHET}$ in the north of the $\underline{MAIDEN\ ISLES}$. *

UGROTHAA: Ind. Set. Coal quarries in the south west of DURCHAA^(1.) (Pop. c. 14,000). *

UGURA: Set. Coastal settlement in the far east of ELEKHID, along the delta of the river NUBBIOR. It is a major source of food (Pop. c. 8,000).

UGURIIT: 1. Dem. 'Ugurit'. Int. Ntn. Federation of island-states in the SEA OF MYMEREA in the EGETAKH archipelago^(1.). In c. 370 RM the remnants of the OCCAETIAN monarchy were exiled there. Historically, the islands were famed for their massive pirate fleets and coastal cities that were ruled by a federation of notorious pirate kings and queens, who together were responsible for terrorising the north, west and eastern coasts of the SEA OF MYMEREA from around 2250 RM, Reaching the height of their infamy in c. 2900 RM, their actions caused the formation of the MYMEREAN ACCORDS, who together brought control to the eastern coast of EASTERN LLACHATUL, bringing the golden age of UGURIITI piracy to an end.

The Federation formed in 3421 RM by a coalition of 19 free cities that had escaped the shackles of the waning pirate culture in the archipelago. Since then, the Federation has grown to encompass 27 territories, including a part of mainland Meniscea, between ALBASSITA and MIRALUL. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

2. Pol. Set. Capital of the above federation (1.) (Pop. c. 326,000).

UHBATAQ: 1. Large headland in the south east of SAMMAEA, protruding east, serving as a barrier between the SEA OF ERENEA in the north and the LERAMUGH in the south. It is home to the nations of ABACARDAT, the JAHADAT STATES, QARALAM, SHEZALIAH, and ZHARIAH⁽²⁾.

2. Geo. More specifically, the interior of the eponymous headland^(1.), known for its depth – it is one of few sizeable regions that are known to be below the mean sea-level, in this case, by as much as 400-ft., encompassing the BITTER SEA and its environs.

The region covers as much as 350,000 square-miles and dominated the c north east of the nation of QARALAM. It is volcanically-active, with many small salty lakes, tinted red and yellow from deep chemicals and the sulphur desert known to KORACHANI explorers as DAKISUH, which lies to the east of the basin. Though inhospitable, nomads and tribal peoples do survive here, gravitating towards the few oases and fertile regions, largely to the south and east.

- 3. Sea. Once a sea in the south west of the SEA OF LETHEA. Diminishing sea levels found the sea cut off from the parent sea and it diminished in size more rapidly than the surrounding seas. Today it is known as the $\underline{\text{BITTER SEA}}$, and is known for its high salt content and the pinkish-red colour of its waters, due to chemically from the many volcanically-active regions surrounding it.
- Geo. Expansive mountain-range dominating the c and southern regions of the eponymous headland^(1,).

UHETTRA: Set. Settlement in the west of SARASTRO, along the course of the river SHAMAR. It is known for its river boats and reed cultivation (Pop. c. 4,800).

UHLSAAT: 1. Geo. Large headland in the c of ARKOS^(L) emerging to the north east of the SEA OF ERIA. Up until c. 2500 RM much of it was submerged by the then-higher sea levels of the SEA OF ERIA. The region is now dominated by flat coastal saltpans and rocky mesas that stretch West as far as the EHBOT Mountains. Many rivers flow east from the Ehbot Mountains into the Sea of Eria. The region was settled early in the FIFTH AGE and took its name from the culture that arose there. Once a fertile region, the changes in climate caused by the lowering of the Sea of Eria have left the region dry, its once verdant hills and fields now scrubland.

2. His. Ntn. Ancient civilisation that appeared in c. -1600 RM, during the FADING following the WAR OF SCOURGING, settling the plains west of the EHBOT^(L) Mountain, which also carry their name. The civilisation was made up mostly of escaped LOMATHAAN slaves, though conflict with AUERENI barbarians led to the fall of the small nation in c. -1100 RM, paving the way for the CITADEL MOUNTS which followed. See Vol III: Extinct States.

UHLSAATI: His. Lan. Now-extinct language spoken by the UHLSAATI people, and the basis of the EHBOTIAN language, which followed it. See Vol II: Languages.

UHRAHTA: Set. City in the south east of GYZHA, known for the vast quantities of pitch that it produces (Pop. c. 40,000).

UIATWAIA: Geo. Flat highlands in the south of THE OLD FOREST, forming an expansive shelf to the north east of the UMBRALA Mountains. The shelf is known as a place of contemplation to the peoples of the OLD FOREST, and is a place of pilgrimage to many of its tribes.

UIDASH: Rvr. Wetlands in the north of OPHAR, along the course of the river SUECTUNA, occupying some 350-square miles.

UIFRE: Set. Small city in the east of the tribe of OURANASSA, in the far south west of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. It is known for its small DVERG population, that predated human arrival in the area in the early FOURTH AGE (Pop. c. 15,000).

UKAGHAN: Set. Small city in the c south west of METHUMN, along the course of the river SAPPARANTI. It is an industrial centre, and has many manufactories and refineries (Pop. c. 20,000).

UKAMA: Set. Small city in the c of METHUMN. It is nestled between steep hills that channel seasonal rains into the valley, creating the river SAPPARANTI, which fills great cisterns and reservoirs that provide enough water for the entire year (Pop. c. 12,000).

UKEK: Set. Small city in the north of TARTAK. The city is renowned for the early FIFTH AGE ruined fort that stands on a hill outside its borders (Pop. c. 11,100).

UKEORS: Ast. First of two satellites of the PLANET GNIHLAS. See Vol II: Planets and Satellites.

UKHARTH: 1. Rui. Ancient expansive fortification in the north of SAMMAEA, around which the eponymously-named independent city-state has appeared. The fortifications are thought to date back to the FOURTH AGE and are largely overgrown, their dry moats and ravelins nevertheless providing a great defence to the capital⁽³⁾.

2. Dem. 'Ukharthi'. Ntn. Small landlocked state that exists in the north of SAMMAEA, nestled between the east of KARAKHAS and the west of PARAIYA. It is of dry temperate climate, with little rain and mild winters, and is known for its rocky difficult terrain and jagged eastern highlands, all of which have contributed to its lasting independence.

It is centred on the eponymous city⁽³⁾, is built atop the ruin of an ancient FOURTH AGE fortress whose base is massive and a paragon of now-lost engineering skills. The city itself only occupies a small part of the fortress, most of which lies overgrown and reclaimed by the wilderness, but whose dry moats and ravelins remain functional and well-defended.

Ukharth emerged as an independent state in 3815 RM, following the Paraiyan Civil War, when nobles exiled from SOPORA settled the region, which at the time was little more than a collection of fortified homesteads. They united them together under their banner, and rebuilt the central citadel of the ruined fortifications, establishing a capital there. They restored the ancient fortifications and established settlements with the most defensible areas.

A Karakhasid attack was mounted against the city in 3922 RM, besieging the capital for nigh on a year, but its food reserves and defences were far above anything the attackers could have envisaged and the siege faltered, proving the strength of Ukharth to the world.

Today, Ukharth remains independent, its people stubborn and hard-working. Its lands are known for their terraced fields and stone apiaries, and its honey is prized across the INNER SEA REGION. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

3. Set. Independent city-state in SAMMAEA along the border between the east of KARAKHAS and the west of PARAIYA. The city emerged following the Paraiyan Civil War in c. 3815 RM as refugees of the war swelled the small settlement that already existed there, which is now in control of 8,000 square-miles of surrounding land. The recent illness of its current PRESIDER PEGARIUS ZONRA has led to a political instability in the region (Pop. c. 48,000).

- UKHORR: Geo. Low mountain range in the base of the AMMASHI^(1.) peninsula, that stretches from eastern METHUMN into the highlands of central PHYRR.
- UKOBACHAN: 1. Pol. KORACHANI colony in the east of SAMMAEA, off the eastern coast of ZHARIAH⁽²⁾, south west of the SEA OF ERENEA. It is a major ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region and is known for its many UMBRA refineries, and its massive harbour where UMBRISKA tankers make harbour before the long voyage back to KORACHAN, via the west of Sammaea. It is also known for its prison colonies on the island of FAEASAAR and DONACHAR, and many of the prisoners go on to work on the umbral rigs on the island of Ukobachan and JORANA.
 - 2. Geo. Main island in the KORACHANI colony of the same name, in the SEA OF ERENEA. It's western-most reaches are dominated by the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region of BOS LEGYNURA, and it is home to many of the umbra extractors for which Ukobachan is famed.
 - 3. Set. Main city in the above colony, belonging to the KORACHANI EMPIRE. Founded in c. 1840 RM, it straddles the two islands of BESESAAR and Ukobachan, in the west and east, respectively. The city is major port, with deep harbours to accommodate the large tankers that ship processed umbriska to KORACHAN (Pop. c. 18,000).
- UKOHINA: Rui. Ruined city in the west of DURCHAA^(1.). It was once a large deep-bore UMBRA SIPHON, though the engines fell silent in c. 3130 RM after decreased contact with the empire after the WAR OF THE ARTIFEXES led to a lack of maintenance. Today the region is an ATRAMENTAL WASTELAND, at the centre of which is the ruin of the old city, which once housed 20,000 bodies during its peak in c. 2970 RM.
- UKOLIST: Pol. Geo. One of five emirates of the SECULAR EMIRATES OF LIMOTH, located to the north east of the nation, characterised by rocky and highland terrain, including part of the KOTHA ICHOLLIGHA and the PEREIDAS Mountains. Its capital is the city of NAMITH.
 - The other states are $\underline{DEITHO}^{(L)},\ \underline{LIMOTH}^{(2.)},\ \underline{NIMALO}^{(L)},$ and $\underline{OTHOTEL}^{(1.)}.$
- UKON: Set. Small fortified settlement in the KORACHANI colony of TEMERACHAN, in the north of LLACHATUL (Pop. c. 3,000).
- UKORO: Set. Coastal city in the west of SERROK. It is relatively recent, having appeared in c. 3650 RM after the waning of the BAY OF RADABAD (Pop. c. 23,000).
- UKOT: Set. Capital city of IMELKOT, in the c north of the nation. It is a major mercantile centre and forms a part of the VAEVECTAN TRAIL, and brings much trade from northern states, including VALA, CHAUTULA, and VECTIS into Imelkot (Pop. c. 284,000).
- UKRA: Ind. Set. Iron mines in the south west of LYRIDIA in the south of the ETTHI Mountains. (Pop. c. 5,000).
- UKTHOLLIST: His. Arc. Two ancient stone colossi in the far north of ALAM BETHYL, in the far north west of the AZAKKALIN Massif. The statues take the form of two warriors of different style and features, facing each other with the ALBUR PASS crossing the massif between them. The statues are likely symbolic of two disparate people, but if that is the case, the names of these cultures have been lost to time.
- $\underline{UKTRARA} : \textit{Geo.} \ Island in the south west of the $\underline{CORAL\ BARONIES}$ off the south western coast of $\underline{SAMMAEA}$.}$
- UKUR: Geo. Cavern in the far north of the KHARKHARADONTID WASTES, just south of the border with the UMBRA SOKHAR, in the region of HATHAMOTH. The cavern leads to the so-called CHAMBER OF STARS in the PRISON CARCERI.
- UKYALAH: Set. Small coastal city in the c north west of the mainland PANTHEON ISLES. Its fishermen are known for their skill with small single sailed boats that are common along the coastline (Pop. c. 13,750).
- UKYANDUR: 1. Sea. Deep inlet in the PANTHEON ISLES, reaching as far West as the settlement of Ukyandur^(2.) after which it is named.
- 2. Set. Coastal settlement in the north west of the mainland PANTHEON ISLES. It is twinned with the settlement of TADAREH, and the two maintain a ferry service across the narrow strait that divides them (Pop. c. 9,200).
- ULAAM: Rvr. River in the c of VENTHIR, flowing north for c 340-miles from sources in the KAUIN Mountains into its parent, the river TEIRIS.

- ULAARA: Rvr. River in SKAROS flowing for 550-miles from sources in the SKAR and GORRAN Mountains. The midspan of the river is dominated by the artificially created lake ULAROS, which processes the lakes waters and purifies them for consumption.
- ULANT: Set. Major city in the south of VALBAR⁽²⁾. It is the capital of the state of ABLATIA⁽¹⁾ and is home to a large ALMAGESTI embassy and garrison (Pop. c. 62,000).
- ULAROS: 1. Lak. Lake in the c east of SKAROS, fed by waters from the river ROTHA, whose source, lake ONNAS, is tainted by oxidised iron. The lake is artificial and is a reservoir created by a nearby dam that was designed by the city of Ularos to aid in the cleansing of its waters. The dam provides power to the city and processes the water into a drinkable state.
- 2. Set. City in the c east of SKAROS that appeared along the southern bank of lake Ularos following its creation with the damming of the river ULAARA (Pop. c. 46,000).
- ULASAHN: Set. Greattown in the c of the Togarmah in Temuja. It links all settlements in the region and is known for its horse markets (Pop. c. 35,000).
- ULATAN: Set. City in the c-south east of the tribe of EATAN, in the c of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. It is known for its horse-rearing (Pop. c. 29,000).
- ULATROPHIA: Med. Disease unique to the region of the FLAESCUS, in the PLAIN OF FLESH in KHARKHARADONTIS, causing the flesh to putrefy and fester, revealing teeth and bones. Areas afflicted by ulatrophia are known to stink to the point that mortals cannot stand atop them without artificial breathing aids.
- ULCASCLA: (10,200-ft.) Geo. ATRAMENTAL Volcano in c SAMMAEA, in the eastern face of the UBRATIA Mountains, forming a part of the greater ACHARKHARAN region. The area surrounding the volcano is ATRAMENTALLY-ACTIVE, and the air is filled with SHADOWISPS, making it uninhabitable.
- ULDARTH: Rui. Spent open cast copper mine in the c of OD MEGINNAS. It was once the largest copper mine on the island, and was in operation from c. 3720 RM to 3940 RM, when it was abandoned for other mines with better yields.
- ULERITT: Set. Settlement in the c south west of PHYRR. Its main industry is iron mining. Iron mined here is moved north and south to larger refineries and city-manufactories, such as PEMMAL and MARRIG, respectively (Pop. c. 10,000).
- ULUNNAH: Rvr. Wetlands in the west of AZAZEM that are renowned for their many interconnected freshwater pools.
- ULAROR: See City in the c north of AZAZEM, connecting the capital city AGLAIA⁽²⁾ with FOSSARI and the trade-route north with IPANAH⁽²⁾ (Pop. c. 13,200).
- ULEB THAHAT: Geo. Region of permafrost in the far north east of MENISCEA, south of the KORACHANI colony of CRASSULA.
- ULEL: Set. Small fishing village in the east of PELASGOS, with most of its produce going to TEREKON (Pop. c. 3,100).
- ULENYAT: also 'the Gravelfields'. Geo. Valley in the west of NÁRTHEL known for its gravelly rocks and unstable footing that render travel near-impossible.
- ULESSMAL: Sup. Geo. Atramentally-tainted wastes in the tribal territories of Chril, in the c of the Growing Mountains of Mulciber. The region is noted for its thick, heady air, and for the effect it has on bodies after they death. Though rot and decay have left their limbs without the strength to support their bodies, they do possess strength enough to bite and claw at passers-by, making travel in the Mountains dangerous.
 - The region is categorised as $\underline{\text{DANGEROUS}}$ by the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI}}$ $\underline{\text{INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES}}.$
- ULIAMORA: His. Ntn. Ancient empire that is believed to have once dominated the island-continent of BROR^(1.) in ancient times, possibly the late THIRD AGE. Impressive ruins still remain in parts of TIAMOLDORAN CITY STATES and SHAUATAS, and scattered in other parts of the continent to this day.

- ULIGAISA: Set. Small city in the c north east of SABAISA. It is located at the mouth of the river MAYED, along waterlogged ground (Pop. c. 17.000).
- ULIZAA II: f. Pol. Per. (B. 3952 RM) Present ARCHBARONESS of the CORAL BARONIES, elected to her first term in 3998 RM and again in 4003. She hails from AXEUR and is viewed as holding a relatively unbiassed viewpoint.
- ULLAGAIA: Mil. Set. Small military city in the south of the contested region of UTIMAN, in the c of PORPHYR (Pop. c. 18,000).
- ULLATAR: Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED forest in the north east of AZAZEM, known for its twisted branches, withered leaves and BLOODTHORNS. It is largely shunned though some small logging communities exist around its periphery.
- ULLATOTH: Geo. Rocky area in the c of ANUBIA, just south of the MORS highlands. It is noted for its spectacular rock pillars and stone-stacks, some towering for a hundred feet or more, arching, intersecting, or standing alone like forests of gigantic stone trees. The shade afforded by the features makes the region a common stopping point for those braving the MOLACHARI DESERT and they are likewise used as navigational tools as they can be seen for miles across the dunes.
- ULLHU: Geo. Pass in the south of CHTHYRID, linking it to the north west of KORACHAN. Though heavily guarded and well-maintained, it is illused due to tensions between the nations.
- ULLIOGOR: Rvr. River in the c east of VALBAR⁽²⁾, flowing south from sources in the OSVALT Hills and the south of the THOKKAR Mountains, before meeting its parent, the river ENGOROT, at the SVETTAN Wetlands.
- ULLISANDRA ONNERI, TENTH OF THE ELEVEN: f. Pol. Per. (B. 3798 RM) Tenth of the HENDECARCHS of MALAN and ruler of the HENDECARCHY of DERAEIA.
- ULLMECH: 1. Geo. Island off the south eastern coast of SOUTHERN SAMMAEA, east of ZHARIAH^(2.).
- 2. Dem. 'Ullmecht'. Ntn. Island-nation in the south east of SAMMAEA, just east of the SEA OF MAELER, comprising the island of Ullmech^(1.). It emerged from the much earlier ZHARIAN^(1.) sultanate to become an independent state many centuries ago. The islands' entire economy revolves around the cultivation and exportation of the famed KIFFAL fruit, which is worth more than its weight in gold. The countryside of Ullmech is covered in well-guarded orchards where the fruit is grown with great dedication and care. See Vol III Extant Realms and Nations.
- 3. Set. City-state and major city in the eponymous island-state^(1.). The capital is renowned for its steep incline, overlooking the SEA OF MIROVEA. Ironically, the declining sea-levels that have spelt the end of many coastal cities has only seen the city grow in size as new structures are built to accommodate the newly-revealed land. Its harbour is often known as 'the Stilted Quay', for its uncharacteristically high scaffold-like berths.
- The city is the hub of the island-nations' KIFFAL industry, and it is where most of the fruit is exported to other lands (Pop. c. 90,000).
- ULLNAUDL: Set. City in the region of ASADAUL, in the south east of MAENMIST, in the south of SAMMAEA. Its people are united by their common polytheistic religion of the region (Pop. c. 26,000).
- ULLORIM: Geo. Island in the SHIELD ISLES archipelago in the south of FALLAROUR, off the south western coast of SAMMAEA.
- $\underline{\text{ULLUN}}$: 1. Sea. Shallow lagoon in the north of the island of $\underline{\text{RAH}}^{(L)}$ in the south east of the $\underline{\text{MAIDEN ISLES}}$. The north of the lagoon is bordered by a wedge-shaped island that guards the lagoon from bad weather.
 - 2. Set. Coastal settlement on the island of $\underline{RAH}^{(1.)}$ in the south east of the $\underline{MAIDEN\ ISLES}$. It is the only known settlement of note on the island (Pop. c. 5,000).
- ULONI: Set. Settlement in the south east of the tribe of AUEREN, in the far north of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 10,500).
- ULLOLAKH: For. Sparse woodland in the c north east of TARTAK. It is one of few woodlands remaining in Tartak that were untouched by colonial industries and is well-regarded by locals to this day.
- ULLUASH: Dem. 'Ulluashi'. His. Ntn. Early FIFTH AGE culture in the VAALKAN peninsula that emerged in c. -400 RM following the fall of the - earlier empire of \underline{KAADA} . Its people were warriors and used ritual combat to decide inter-tribal quarrels, and pit fights were used to put condemned men to death, where they either fought each other or against animals. They were adept at defending their lands from aati incursions, which waned as the Ulluashi people expanded and developed better weapons and tools.

- In c. -300 RM $\underline{LASCAR}^{(2.)}$ seafarers made contact with the coastal areas of the north of $\underline{OSOTHOT}$, bringing goods which they traded with the Ulluashi, beginning a healthy relationship. The Lascar merchants named the region \underline{VALKA} , and the name would gain popularity amongst neighbouring states, and would eventually supplant usage of Ulluash.
- ULLUÍANNA: Sup. Geo. Table-lands and old DUSTSTONE badlands and canyons dominating the north of TRAKIA. The region is an endorheic basin that collects waters during the short wet season and can form small seasonal lakes.
- ULNAUDL: Sec. City in the region of ASADAUL, in the south east of MAENMIST, in the south of SAMMAEA (Pop. c. 15,200).
- ULOSITH: Geo. Large hill in the c of THE SURRACH. It is rocky and scabrous, and of dark hue and is shunned by most.
- ULSAARA: Set. City in the c east of the tribe of SURR'KA, in the north east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 30,750).
- ULTIMATE COMMUNION: Soc. Rel. The final sacrifice made by the most devout of PETITIONERS OF THE MACHINE undertaking the SHADOW MARCH upon reaching their destination in SEPULCHRAL PALACE. Their bodies are taken by the DEMIURNES and given to Rachanael as offerings, helping to sustain the god as the ultimate form of devotion.
- ULUDIR: Geo. Region in the state of OTHOTEL^(1,) in the west of LIMOTH^(1,) known for the many ancient copper mines that pepper its terrain. The region is known for its decaying ghost towns and the many small earthquakes and sinkholes that occur there as old pits and tunnels cave in or subside. The entire region is shunned and legends enforcing its forsaken status abound, particularly in neighbouring cities, such as RASION.
- ULUHET: Geo. Island in the north west of the MAIDEN ISLES, off the south eastern coast of MENISCEA.
- ULUKDAM: Rel. Dei. Deity worshipped by the EPHATTAN people. The deity is embodied by a tremendous ancient idol that stands outside the city of ESEVVIDA, which is surrounded by an expansive temple with a gigantic canopied courtyard where tens of thousands come to pray.
- The idol is 250-ft. high and takes the form of a 4-armed anthropomorphic water buffalo. Little is known of the religion surrounding this deity as the Ephattan people are religiously insular, refusing to speak of their faith with outsiders. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.
- ULUTH: Set. Coastal settlement in the far south east of GNOTH, overlooking the SEA OF LIAKARRA.
- ULUTUL: Rel. Str. Temple in the far south east of TERION, overlooking the BAY OF BHAAD. The mummified remains of the ORACLE OF ULUTUL are interred within, and they are revered as sacred by the people of Terion. The temple is guarded at all times and in times of need, shapers under the command of Teria, are sent to commune with the spirit of the oracle.
- UMA: Leg. Obj. A 22-sided trapezohedron mentioned in LEMURIAN legend. The object is a stone of unknown origin or substance with a soapy texture that floats in the air in the middle of a shallow wasteland-crater in the HATHAMOTH canyons along the MOLOTH KHAMMOTHUL Mountains. The stone was reputedly worshipped by consecutive cultures, all of which fell to horrific corruption after some time.
- UMAA: Set. Settlement in the north east of AMMESH (Pop. c. 8,100).
- UMAHA: Set. City in the east of VIRAHAN. It is a major military centre for the nation, with many troops trained and stationed there who guard the GREAT ROAD trade-route, which passes through its borders (Pop. c. 50,000).
- UMAHACHAN: Set. City in the c south west of LAASKHA. It is home to the IMPERIAL COLLEGE OF MEDICINE(Pop. c. 50,000).

UMAHADDUR: Set. Settlement on the island IUDDRA in the east of the PANTHEON ISLES, along the BHALASSIAN ARCHIPELAGO⁽²⁾. Its main industry is sulphur and silver mining (Pop. c. 8,000).

UMAS: Mil. Str. Fortress in the c north of ALMAGEST, close to the border with VALMAS. The fortress is a staging point for most forays north into Valmas.

UMATRA: Set. City in the c south of AHRISHEN. It was the seat of power of the royal HOUSE OF UMATRA between 1975 and 2371 RM, when many stately homes and palaces were constructed. The death in battle of king GISHEN IV ended the House of Umatra and the monarchy, and Ahrishen entered into its second inter-monarchic period, which lasted until 2473 RM, with the emergence of the FLUN-SANDRA SOVEREIGNTY which made Umatra its home until it moved the capital to MAHSERTH in 2770 RM

It dwindled in size and influence following this, though retained control of the PANOIDAN canal⁽²⁾. It is known today for being a city of canals, with most vehicles taking the form of barges and boats (Pop. c. 43,000).

UMBAR: Set. Small city in the south of NÁRTHEL, fortified in c. 210 RM before a KORACHANI attack into SARASTRO. The ruins of the fort remain in some regions, and in others their stones were used in construction of more recent structure. It is home to the CATHEDRAL OF THE BURNING SHADOW, which is a stopping-point along THE SHADOW MARCH (Pop. c. 19.000).

UMBÁVGHAR: Sup. Myt. His. True name of the AVATAR^(2.) of the ATRAMENTA, now known as the DEMIURGE RACHANAEL, the UNDYING MACHINE.

He was created in the THIRD AGE, when Rachanael stole a spark of divinity from THE SHAPER, becoming the first Avatar of the ATRAMENTA, counterpart to the AVATAR OF LIGHT, SILLAMÉ.

UMBILICAL: Tec. Flexible leather and metal piping that allows SHAPERS (particularly TECHNARCANIIN) to interface with technarcane engines through OCCLUSIONS embedded within their skin and flesh. This allows them to more intricately manipulate and control these engines, as well as the LARVAE that may be interred within them.

Umbilicals are also used by \underline{RIG} JOCKEYS to interface with their \underline{RIGS} , as well as \underline{STEEL} $\underline{LEGIONNAIRES}$ and other soldiers to interface with advanced $\underline{HARDSUITS}$, which would otherwise be unnavigable.

UMBRA: 1. Also 'shadowstuff. Sup. The raw physical form of the ATRAMENTA, which, through various means, can be refined into UMBRIKSA: itself a common base for a myriad of different manufactured substances.

In its natural state it is a sticky coal-like substance, though it is often found buried deep, where pressure has hardened it into a flaky, oily stone-like substance that can be mined or otherwise extracted, becoming more tar-like in texture following prolonged contact with the air. It ranges from black, to brown in colour and is often streaked in yellow or red, from sulphur and nickel impurities.

Being the physical representation of the Atramenta, it can be altered through ALCHEMICAL and TECHNARCANE application or be refined by purposefully-constructed machinery, to a myriad different forms and functions, most common of which is umbriska.

It is fundamental to the operation of various TECHNARCANE machinery and engines, and is also the base of the many CLONING traditions amongst various industrialised nations, particularly around the INNER SEA, amongst others. It is also used in the creation of VAT-BORN UMBRANS and is invaluable in the grafting of mechanical ORTHOSES and the transplantation of organs and limbs, largely due to its ability to negate hyperacute rejection in transplants.

2. Dru. Drug that is common to most industrialised societies with TECHNARCANE capabilities across ELYDEN. It is highly addictive, and is famed for its myriad effects, which differ based on the method in which it is prepared, which can make it act like a narcotic, hallucinogen, or even euphoric.

Many cities around the Inner Sea are famed for their umbra dens, where addicts can go to consume umbra in relative peace and safety, though the laws and attitudes to its use and addiction vary widely from state to state. See Vol II: Drugs and Addictions.

UMBRA SOKHAR: lit. 'shadow over Sokhara'. Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region to the north of KHARKHARADONTIS, in the c north of SAMMAEA, situated to the south of the nations of KARAKHAS and PARAIYA; and west of the nations of N'RAKH, AETHIOS, RHINOCOLOURA and ETHISTONITH. It takes the form of an endorheic basin, though it is largely dry, with a continental climate exacerbated by it being in the rain shadow of various mountain-ranges. It was once of a more hospitable climate, and some 2 millennia past was known for its many rivers which emptied into the endorheic lake NUMINIA, which dried centuries past.

From c. -550 RM onwards, the region started receiving increasing numbers of refugees from Kharkharadontis, fleeing the Atramental phenomenon known as the SHADOW IN THE DESERT, which rendered the desert of Kharkharadontis (already a dry continental region that was inimical to civilised life) an Atramental wasteland. These immigrants mingled with the native cultures, and soon city-states appeared from which the SOKHARAN EMPIRE would later appear.

The Sokharan empire quickly encompassed the Sokharan basin, and a decadent nobility emerged, ruling over a downtrodden salve caste. The empire eventually fell to its own corruption, which, coupled with war with KARAKHAS in the north and increasing DEGENERATE attacks from the south, led to its downfall in 348 RM.

The century following this was dominated by warring degenerate tribes sweeping across the basin, pillaging all settlements. This was under the leadership of the warlord known was the HORDE-KING, whose death led to the scattering of the horde, allowing new city-states to emerge.

These city-states occupied the more fertile north west of the basin, which itself is not as badly-affected by the Shadow in the Desert, which continued to expand, eventually affecting the Umbra Sokhar in the same way it had Kharkharadontis millennia before. Today the major cities in the Umbra Sokhar are CATAFLAQUE, KADOTA and MIHARAST. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

UMBRA SOKHAR BASIN, the: Geo. Endorheic drainage basin formed by various continental divides in the continent of SAMMAEA, including parts of the KHARKHARADONTID DIVIDE. The basin is located in a part of CENTRAL SAMMAEA, and what rivers are located within it lead to inland lakes or sinks – either endorheic lakes or simply disappearing.

Nations and territories that are at least partially within the Umbra Sokhar Basin include: KARAKHAS, KERRAS PELLN, KHURAUR, and the Umbra Sokhar.

UMBRA UNIVERSALIS: Soc. Sup. ATRAMENTAL technologies have existed for tens of millennia, and have permeated most aspects of life across that time, with TECHNARCANA and manufactory processes reliant on Atramental means becoming ubiquitous at various points throughout history well into the present. As a result, every living being and most terrains can be said to contain trace amounts of UMBRA. In most cases these are practically negligible, though not to be ignored, but if found in large enough amounts they can contribute to congenital defects. Areas that are particularly-stricken can lead to shortened lifespans, congenital ailments and decreased quality of life.

Some scholars blame Umbra Universalis, amongst other things, for the generally-perceived decrease in mortal lifespans over the millennia, though this is still debated.

Of particular concern is the ability of accomplished Penumbrists to manipulate the bodies of those with above-average trace amounts of umbra, allowing them to cause debilitating pain, organ failure or even death in some cases. See Vol IV: the Materia Omna.

UMBRA VEIL, the: see ZENEGE RES.

UMBRACH: Plr. 'umbrachin'. Sup. Mor. Rare and perfidious creatures, which are the ATRAMENTA given corporeal form and limited consciousness. They appear as disembodied shadows, that become faint under bright sunlight, or become thicker and larger in the darkness.

It is not fully understood how such creatures are created, but Atramentists that have studied them (A difficult and dangerous task at bet, given their inimical nature) have come to the conclusion that they are born through a marriage of the OTHERWORLD and the Atramenta, and is thought that OTHERWORLDERS (or the SPIRITS of the dead and unborn, before their apotheosis into true otherworlders) are responsible for their limited emotions and intellect, though this is only a hypothesis.

They are vile creatures and only seek to cause pain and suffering to living creatures they encounter. Some shapers (typically Atramentists, or more specifically, Penumbrists) may exert a degree of control or influence over them, but they are otherwise unbound. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

UMBRACOLYTE: lit. 'shadow-slave'. Sup. Med. Tec. A form of HAEMONCULUS whose chief constituent is UMBRA. Generally smaller in stature than a human, they were commonly employed as servants by ATRAMENTISTS (most commonly PENUMBRISTS) during the classical era of SHAPING. They are less common today, though still remain in use, particularly amongst TECHNARCANISTS due the ease with which they can be controlled.

UMBRAEUM: Sup. Obj. A form of refined UMBRA, commonly used as fuel for engines, such as AMBULANTS or manufactories.

UMBRAKHALA: Leg. Set. Apocryphal city of UMBRAPHAGES (its true name unknown) that exists in imperial legend, though maintained by some scholars to be true or based on truth. The city is said to exist in the south west of the UMBRA SOKHAR and is dominated by strange solidified ATRAMENTAL growths. The formations warp life and light, twisting the spectrum in iridescent ways that are maddening to most mortals.

The populace subsists on Atramentally-laced mosses and vegetation cultivated outside the city, granting them dark skin and eyes. Over generations their bodies have developed an affinity for the Atramenta, even as it withers their bodies.

The city is ruled by a basalt-skinned ATRAMENTIST with mystical links to the city's first ancestors, who are thought to have been heretics exiled from the SOKHARAN EMPIRE early in the FIFTH AGE.

UMBRAL RIG: Sup. Ind. Platform, either offshore or built on bedrock used to drill for raw UMBRA. In some cases, the umbra is piped directly to the mainland, where it is processed, or it may be loaded onto umbra tankers, where it is transported to distant areas or processing.

UMBRAL WORM: Fau. Minute parasitic worm that dwells in ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED mud and infects the eyes and ears of larger fauna, including MORTALS careless enough to traverse infected lands. The worms will burrow into the soft skin around mucus membranes, spreading Atramental corruption to the host, who sickens and eventually dies. They lay their eggs in the putrefying flesh of the host, starting the cycle anew. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

UMBRALA: Geo. Ancient mountain in the southern-most region of THE OLD FOREST, covering some 40,000 square-miles north west of the border between KORACHAN and VÂRR. The mountain is weathered, its faces relatively smooth and dark, and is a source of the river TITHORATH and IAGANNATH, which flow to the north west and north east, respectively.

Its tributary of the Tithorath is known for its chemically brilliant waters and, along some stretches, the taint of umbra that mars parts of its banks and the lands around them.

UMBRAN: also 'Shadowborn', also 'VAT-BORN'. Sup. Med. Tec. Generic term in the KORACHANI tongue for any creature born through artificial means, usually through a STEEL WOMB. The term is often mistakenly used instead of CLONE, though is more accurately used for non-intelligent creatures born in this say, such as HAGHOUERIN.

Many regions have rumours and urban legends of secretive or hidden manufactories, ateliers, and laboratories where shadowborn creatures are bred, with often disastrous results.

UMBRAPHAY: Sup. Soc. The consumption of umbra, often used in relation to UMBRA^(2.) addiction, which is not strictly the same thing.

It is common in the KORACHANI EMPIRE, particularly amongst the upper-classes, who can afford the often-exorbitant prices of the processed umbra. See Vol II: Drugs and Addictions.

UMBRAPHILIA: north. 'umbraphile'. Sup. Soc. Activity and cult that arose in the MHAROKKIN town of TAMARAN in c. 3824 RM. It has its roots in UMBRAPHAGY though is a more modern interpretation, using technarcane engineers to refine and improve the umbra even as it's being consumed. In its most commonly accepted form, a group of umbraphiles sit in a circle of up to a dozen individuals (and though far larger groups have been observed, they are far from the norm) with a technarcane engine at their centre, often supported from the ceiling in the form reminiscent of a chandelier. Individuals are hooked up to the engine via

UMBILICALS attached to OCCLUSIONS at the base of the neck that, more often than not, are grafted specifically for this use.

This precludes lower classes from the pursuit, which allowed it to spread over the next few decades amongst patrician circles across Mharokk, LIDEA and VAALK, as well as other lands north of THE INNER SEA.

UMBRAPTER: lit. 'shadow glider'. Fau. Flying SYNAPSID, known to live in damp dark wooded areas in Llachatul. They are commonly seen circling the spires or chimneys of some larger cities or manufactories. Many different varieties exist but they are known amongst the common populace by that name. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

UMBRATOPHHEN: (6,380-ft.) lit. 'burning shadow'. Sup. Geo. An ATRAMENTAL volcano (linked through underground channels to the BLEEDING PLAINS to its north) in the west of AETHIOS that has poisoned much of the land surrounding it, rendering the area inimical to life, with raw UMBRA erupting intermittently from its jagged peaks, releasing large quantities of SHADOWISPS north west on prevailing winds, bringing with it poison rain.

The volcano erupted to devastating effect in 3810 RM, leaving much of the west of Aethios blanketed in a thick layer of ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED ash that has gone on to corrupt the flora and fauna that has made contact with it, leaving a large part of the nation uninhabited.

The region is categorised as Dangerous by the Korachani Institute of Atramental Studies.

UMBREA: Set. Settlement in the west of the emirate of LIMOTH^(2.) in Limoth^(1.) along the course of the river HORASTAS. Its main industry is agriculture (Pop. c. 5,300).

UMBREKHA: Plr. 'Umbrakhin', also 'Shadowisp'. Sup. Obj. Gossamer-like strands of UMBRA that form naturally in the air around dust, pollen and other motes in ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED lands, clumping together like airborne cobwebs; or sometimes ejected by Atramental volcanos and vents or LACUNAE. The clumps are extremely light and are often carried on winds, sometimes for miles. Though a single strand of umbrekha is of little concern, they tend to stick together, with large concentrations rapidly corrupting flora and fauna alike, also draining strength from rocks (slowly turning them into DUSTSTONE).

UMBRIS: Ast. Con. Star in the constellation SET. See Vol II: Constellations.

UMBRISKA: Sup. Obj. Refined UMBRA. Where raw umbra ranges in consistency from tar-like to bituminous, the processed form, known as umbriska, is waterier, with a thickness of slick oil. It is dark in colour, though when reflecting light gives off a pearlescent sheen.

It is rarely found in this form and most commonly needs to be manually refined from raw umbra – either through the use of shaping or a complex TECHNARCANE industrial process, as in that found in SIPHON ENGINES.

Once umbra is refined into umbriska it can then be further altered, either by subtle mixing with other compounds or further altering its state, into various substances that are of industrial and commercial use, such as UMBRISKA GAS (also a fuel) and UMBRISKA GAS (also a fuel) and <a href="https://www.umbriska.com/umbriska umbraeum.com/umbriska.com/umbriska umbraeum.com/umbriska.com/umbri

UMBRISKA GAS: Sup. Obj. A form of refined UMBRA, commonly used as fuel in cooking equipment and, less commonly, machinery.

UMBRISKA NAPHTHA: Sup. Obj. An intermediate liquid derived from the refining of crude UMBRA, and often a by-product of the processing of UMBRISKA. When further refined, umbriska naphtha has a myriad of uses, including as solvents and cleaning fluids, amongst many others.

Like most ATRAMENTAL substances, prolonged exposure to it can be harmful and may lead to various debilitating illnesses.

UMBRISKA, UNRAVELLING OF: Sup. His. Event that took place in PELASGOS in c. 930 RM where UMBRA was first refined into a far more commercially and industrially useful form, now known as umbriska. The discovery was made independently in other regions, including PARTHIS.

UMBRISS: Set. Major coastal city in the west of PARTHIS, in the region of ERUTO⁽²⁾ (Pop. c. 78,000).

UMEA: Rui. Ruined MANUFACTORY in the south western mainland of the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS.

UMEAPH: Set. Small city in the LEGED region of the PRINCIPALITY OF
SEPAHAUNAT in the north west of SAMMAEA. It is one of many producers of OPIATES in the region (Pop. c. 12,000).

UMEGOR: Set. Small fortified city in the far south east of KOLCHIS. It is the southern-most city east of the SEKHEM and its people are well-trained in the defence of their land from the ever-present threat of ALMAGESTI invasion (Pop. c. 18,200).

UMEL: Set. Small city in the south of PELASGOS, just north of the border with the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS, east of the TEREKION Mountain (Pop. c. 12.000).

UMELARA: Rui. Ancient obsidian wall that once stretched for over 160-miles in the c north of AQUARIIA, located in the ATRAMENTAL WASTES of LAHUSHUR. Most of the wall is ruined and crumbled, though intact parts remain, notable in that they are partially covered in a red flesh-like substance that holds it together.

The far reaches of the wall end in once-great fortresses – the tower of SON UMELARA in the north and NUL UMELARA in the south.

UMENYAN: Sct. Small fortified city in the east of KREM. Like most settlements in the region, it is a major source of AIMANT ( Pop. c. 5,000).

UMET YAH: Set. Small coastal city in the east of ATARAXIA, overlooking the STRAIT OF SKAROS (Pop. c. 20,000).

UMHABBHI: Sea. Expansive reef in the c of the MAIDEN ISLES, stretching south west to north east for some 175-miles and is home to various fauna.

UMIDARATTI: Lan. Primary language of ABACARDAT, as well as the JAHADAT STATES, and part of HADDURATH. It was adopted by the people of Abacardat who inherited lands left behind by the fall of UMMIDIA after the devastation caused by the UPHEAVAL OF LETHEA, though has since taken on various aspects of the one-secretive tongue of the JAHINN^(2.) caste, which has slowly permeated through the tongue. See Vol II: Languages.

UMLAL TA': See. Fortified settlement in the far south west of KHULL. Its main industry is the mining of low-grade iron, which is primarily used for making ochre pigment (Pop. c. 4,500).

UMMAJI: Set. Settlement in the c west of RAONGEN^(2.) in the southern face of the ERIVOINE Mountains. Its min industry is UMBRA extraction, which is reached by drilling deep beneath the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region of ALVELM, some 60-miles west (Pop. c. 5,000).

UMMALIN: m. Pol. His. Per. (B. 871 – D. 966 RM) Emperor of the MEDHAMANNI EMPIRE from c. 895 RM to his death in 966 RM. He was responsible for accepting the nascent religion of the AUREATE FELLOWSHIP in his empire, whose followers had been persecuted until then. He died under mysterious circumstances, and many believed he was assassinated by reformist groups.

UMMALLARID MERCHANTS: also 'the Ummallarids'. Com. Soc. Caste of noble merchants in the south east of MENISCEA, most commonly found in the regions of LANTUA, AURUM⁽²⁾, IMELKOT, and AHOPAH. They command a large merchant navy, whose blue-hulled (traditionally blue-sailed) ships are a common sight in Meniscean harbours, and they maintain large warehouses and merchant trading posts across coastal cities in the region.

They originated in Aurum between c. 2720-3100 RM, and during their first centuries they spread far and wide, reaching the westernmost islands of SAMMAEA and are now a powerful political and commercial presence in the south east of Meniscea, and wield supreme power there in the capital city, TITIAM.

UMMAN: Cur. Currency of ABACARDAT and the JAHADAT STATES. See Vol II: Currency and Coinage in Elyden.

UMMAN, ZHARIAHAN: Cur. Currency of ZHARIAH⁽²⁾ and SHEZALIAH. See Vol II: Currency and Coinage in Elyden.

UMMAPAR: Mil. Str. Fortress-manufactory in the north of PHYRR that serves as the base and chief armoury of the KALKAN COLOSSI, where their weapons and HARDSUITS are manufactured. Since the outbreak of the NACRE WAR, the fortress-manufactory has increased its output to equip other forces taking part in the war in the south.

UMMAR: Set. Small settlement in the south east of OKKHAM, along the isthmus that connects the peninsula of Okkham to the headland of KHURTAE. It is part of the SASACZHOT canal and controls one of the lochs along its course (Pop. c. 1,000).

UMMARA: also 'the Waning City'. Sct. Geothermally-powered city in the north of ALMAGEST that controls all granite quarries in the greater MARMARAN MASSIF area, and also handles the processing and distribution of the raw material. By c. 3850 RM, it had become a powerhouse in Almagest and, under the leadership of various PATRICIAN HOUSES, it sought to oppose the CITY OF ALMAGEST through aggressive trade and political undermining. Over a century of tense struggle, civil betrayal and assassinations followed, until, in 3973 RM an Almagesti army marched against Ummara, destroying its armies and deposing its rulers, bringing it firmly under Republic control once again. Operation of the mines are now overseen by the republic itself. The city was the birthplace of the current ARCH CHANCELLOR of Almagest, AALISSA O ALMAGOTA (Pop. c. 93,000).

UMMARISK: Set. Large coastal city in the east of EIKARTHYEA. It is a major shipyard and shipbreakers and the flat tidal beach to the south of the city is littered with the rusted skeletons of ancient hulks (Pop. c. 45,000).

UMMATRA: Set. City in the c north of THE VORANDINE, along the southern shore of lake VARAGASLA. It is one of the oldest settlements in the Vorandine, and is thought to date back to c. 1800 RM – over 300 years before king VORAND united the land in c. 2130, when it was in command on a dozen vassals and a reach of some 4,000 square-miles.

Today it is the only source of Omnatite in THE VORANDINE, and its metallurgists are experts at transmuting it into various substances, as needed, though much of what is extracted is exported (Pop. c. 38,200).

UMMER MIRA: Sup. Geo. Umbra fields off the southern coast of AHKA. They are contested by both sides in the conflict between KORACHAN and Ahka and its PARTHISAN allies, and are blockaded by Korachani ships. Many have been damaged by the conflict and they have changed hands various times. The waters of the Ummer Mira are ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED and have polluted surrounding waters, though the currents of the GULF OF SKAROS play a vital role in dispersing the taint.

The region is categorised as $\underline{\text{DANGEROUS}}$ by the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI}}$ $\underline{\text{INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES}}$.

UMMERACHAN: also 'the Beggars city'. Set. Settlement in the c east of KORACHAN, just west of the walls of NESSUL. The settlement is an offshoot of the aforementioned city, and is colloquially known as the Beggars City, on account of its destitute nature of the denizens that call it home, most of which have been displaced from the larger city when many slums were demolished to make way for larger manufactory-apartments (Pop. c. 10,000).

UMMERSA: Set. Settlement in the c of DURCHAA^(1.), just over 100-miles west of the capital. It is known for its sheep and their thick wool, which is used to make clothing adapted to the climate (Pop. c. 4,000).

UMMIAH: Sea. Small sea in the south east of SAMMAEA situated between the LEAGUE OF XETEAN STATES and GRAMMATER.

UMMIDIA: also 'Ummidian Empire'. His. Nm. FOURTH AGE empire that emerged in c. 550 RM and was destroyed by the UPHEAVAL OF LETHEA in 1303 RM that left most, if not all, of its cities toppled, with millions of people dead. From its ruins emerged the SULTANATE OF ABACARDAT, under the leadership of the hero ATTRAH.

UMMIDIAN: His. Lan. Now-extinct language spoken by the people of UMMIDIA. Following the destruction of the Ummidian empire, the language lingered amongst its survivors, who would go on to found the nation of ABACARDAT, by which time it had become known as UMIDARATTI. See Vol II: Languages.

UMMING: Set. Settlement in the west of RAONGEN^(2.). Along the HENSHIN Ridge. Its main industry is granite quarrying (Pop. c. 8,000).

UMMUHANA: Set. Small settlement in the west of PERGOST (Pop. c. 3 000)

UMMUSH: Lan. Language spoken in the OLD FOREST of VANEFAN. It is an ancient tongue, thought to stem from the language spoken by the original DERUWEIDS.

So secretive is Ummush that it is rarely, if ever spoken in front of outsiders, and it is never taught outside of Vanefan. Due to this the people of the Old forest use another language, known as VANEFANI, when communicating with outsiders. See Vol II: Languages.

UMOT SUR: Set. Settlement in the c south of the MULL CITY-STATES, known for its granite mines. It forms a part of THE WAY trade-route (Pop. c. 9.000).

UMRAE: Set. Small city in the c of KASPIA (Pop. c. 12,500).

UMSTRALOASI: Rel. Str. Religious site in the west of OKKHAM, 15-miles south east of the city and religious centre of RAMIFERA. The site is located in the wooded hills leading north west to a valley through which flows river ENETSIC and is famed for the thousands of round clay statues that are important to the CULT OF THE DREAMING GOD. Each statue is around 1-ft. high and is an anthropomorphic representation of the myriad spirits of the Cult.

The statues are added to by visiting pilgrims and have come to cover the entire hillside, though older statues have crumbled or are now displaced by the rampant root growth in the area. The statues are all covered in a thick layer of moss and are said to guard the hills, where the guru Thoczheil taught his first disciples the teachings of the Cult of the Dreaming God. in 3418 RM, after which it would spread across Okkham, becoming a state religion in 3425 RM.

UNA: Set. Small city in the c-south east of the tribe of USAR, in the north west of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. It is a major producer of rock salt and is a recruiting ground for Usari military (Pop. c. 14,500).

UNALAN: Set. Small city in the north east of the emirate of DEITHO⁽¹⁾, in LIMOTH⁽¹⁾. It forms a part of the main internal trade-route of the nation (Pop. c. 16,100).

UNAMMAR: Mil. Str. Coastal fortress off the western coast of METHUMN, on the island of EMMIM in the MAUSAMMAR archipelago

UNARALOTT: Geo. Peninsula in the north of the KAZZARAN peninsula^(L), to the north of IGUZZEN lagoon, separating the BAY OF SHIAAN from the GULF OF ESHIRON.

UNASSAILABLE CITY, the: see OBYRYTH.

UNASSAILABLE TOWER, the: Int. Rui. Ancient three-tiered, seven-sided tower in the c east of GNOTH, said to be made of ALCHEMICAL silver and covered in a singular layer of porcelain enamel that is covered in archaic gnostic writings. Its three tiers correspond to the golden ratio and it is regarded as a paragon of gnostic architecture. Its name is derived from a late Fourth Age custom, where young giganri were challenged to climb the tower, largely unsuccessfully.

UNASTESEES, LIGHTHOUSE OF: Rui. Ancient lighthouse in the c west of present-day GREST^(1.). It once overlooked the south of the inland SEA OF RATASHAH, though was left landlocked following the waning of Elyden's seas. The crumbling ruin of the lighthouse remain to this day, and ironically, it continues to be used as an aid in navigation.

UNAWAHAIN: Set. Small city in the south east of NOAVATUR (Pop. c. 16,000).

UNAXDAZS: Geo. Island off the south eastern-coast of NOAVATUR.

UNBORN, the: Soc. Lan. Colloquial term within the KORACHANI EMPIRE used to denote the offspring of the DESPOSYNI. An EDICT passed in 339 RM ensured that the only descendants of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR allowed to live would be his favoured children – those determined by a tribunal to have lived worthy lives in the service of their primogenitor's empire, with those deemed to have wasted their lives being persecuted and executed at the behest of Malichar himself.

Following the Archpotentate's increased withdrawal from public life in the centuries following the edict, the CARNIFEXES responsible for this culling became less active, until the latter part of the fourth millennium RM, where the unborn were allowed to life, if not thrive. The most blatant disregard for the law of the Culling were the three sons of the PRIMID MELESH, who ruled the city of KORACHAN towards the end of the fourth millennium RM.

UNCHANGING GOD, the: Rel. Dei. Deity at the centre of the CHURCH
OF THE UNCHANGING GOD, in NOAVATUR. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

UNCHANGING GOD, CHURCH OF the: Rel. Dominant religion practiced in NOAVATUR. The religion emerged naturally from the remnants of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE in Noavatur over three centuries, following the deposing of the Plutocracy in 1876 RM.

In c. 2083 RM the tenets of the church there had naturally changed from the harsh laws of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, to a slightly more forgiving outlook. This is in no doubt shaped by the oppression of the Noavaturi people by the corrupt Plutocracy, whose assassination had led to a great civil war, in which millions were killed.

Though the religions' roots lie in bloodshed, it condones violence as the result of a lack of understanding and teaches empathy and sympathy in its worshippers. Though the UNDYING MACHINE remains its central deity, its representation is wildly different to that of other sects that emerged from the Church of the Undying Machine. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

UNCLAIMED LANDS, the: 1. Geo. TEMUIAN term for the BONEFIELDS in the west of ASTUDAN.

2. Geo. General term used to describe the largely uninhabited area that dominated the eastern coast of KASPIA that is otherwise known as the KULOMIRAL. The region was populated in ages past, and is littered with ruins of monolithic towers whose gigantic blocks are strewn across the countryside. Large standing stones predating even those ancient towers can be found, bearing strange pictograms that have as yet failed to be deciphered. The western-most reaches of the Unclaimed Lands are also home to near-vertical fissures that are thought to lead to flooded caverns below the sea level.

UNDAN: Set. Small fortified city in the south west of AHKA. It is a major source of iron, much of which is traded to merchants travelling along the RED ROUTE that passes through the city (Pop. c. 17,600).

UNDARRA: Geo. Hill in the c south of TZALLRACH, reaching 275-miles east from the coast. The region is dominated by weathered granite buttes, many of which are topped with verdure. The TEMPLE OF UNDARRA, is situated on such a butte.

UNDARRA, TEMPLE OF: Rel. Str. Temple in the c south of TZALLRACHI, situated atop a large granite butte.

UNDERDWELLERS: Lan. Soc. Colloquialism in ALMAGEST (almost specifically contained to the city of ALMAGEST) referring to those who dwell beneath the surface, in the oft-regraded sewers and crypts beneath the city proper. These underdwellers include the poor, destitute, fugitives, DEGENERATES, and AL GHULS, amongst others.

UNDERHALLS, the: Pol. Lan. Collective name for the many subsurface fortresses of CHTHYRID. Built over many centuries, the Underhalls are largely subterranean, with no doors or winders above ground, and only fortified cupolas visible above ground with embrasures through which their artillery could shoot.

Below ground, the Underhalls are near-impregnable hubs that connect a vast nation-wide network of robust tunnels that in turn link semi-subterranean cities (known as https://hypogea) with each other. The tunnels lead to smaller passages that exit to the surface in hidden locations across the nation. These hidden exits were pivotal in ensuring Chthyridi victory during the NINETY-NINE YEAR WAR, and allowed slavers to attack neighbouring nations during the reign of the THRYION DYNASTIES.

UNDERWORLD: Lan. Geo. Colloquial term across various nations used to describe areas with an expansive network of caverns, and possible links to deeper regions, such as the PRISON CARCERI. It can also apply to natural tunnels and catacombs beneath large cities, many of which are extensions of above settlements, manufactories or structures built within. In some cases, these underworlds are entities separate from cities above.

In Carceri this can refer to the immense caverns and tunnels that dominate the area, as far afield as hundreds of miles in some areas.

AZAZEM has a sprawling underworld, mostly natural caverns, though many of them have been further excavated to accommodate its many food manufactories.

In ALMAGEST this takes the form of the old city, which is buried under as much as dozens of yards of tunnels, old thoroughfares and sewers, which are the result of many years of regrading.

UNDIANT: Lak. Lake in the c south of ANANTHUL, along the course of river ENARADINE. UNDINE: Set. Settlement in the c south of AHRISHEN, on a headland in lake AMATIDA (Pop. c. 6,000).

UNDYING MACHINE, the: Rel. Dei. Myt. Common name for the central deity of various religious, which collectively are known as the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. Though few amongst the laity know this, the Undying Machine has a corporeal presence in the MATERIAL PLANE and is in fact the DEMIURGE RACHANAEL, whose body is sustained within the LEADEN THRONE in the SEPULCHRAL PALACE in DAEKYN, KHARKHARADONTIS, and is the culmination of the epic pilgrimage that is known as the Shadow March. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons

UNDYING MACHINE, CHURCH OF THE: Rel. Major organised religion within the KORACHANI EMPIRE that worships the UNDYING MACHINE. Though it is no secret that the Undying Machine is the DEMIURGE RACHANAEL, little mention is made of it in its holy books and sermons, so most work-slaves are unaware of the fact, and even if they did learn this, they would be ignorant to the implications, given how the imperial BUREAU OF CENSORS do their utmost to hide knowledge of the Demiurges from the public.

The Church of the Undying Machine rose soon after the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR'S toppling of the TEMPLE OF LIFE AND DEATH in KORACHAN in –2 RM, and by c. 10 – 20 RM the church leaders – individuals ordained by Malichar to be the prophets of Rachanael – had spread the word of Rachanael to all nations conquered by the empire, and beyond through the actions of missionaries, where the Undying Machine became known as the IRON DEITY. It was originally known as the CHURCH OF THE IRON DEITY, though by c. 30 RM it had become known as the Church of the Undying Machine after early reforms.

During Malichar's ITINERARY, a time of unrest known as the REIGN OF THE EMPTY THRONE, the Church of the Undying Machine became one of the chief contenders for the leadership of the Throne, though faith in the Undying Machine would slowly wane in the absence of its founder, until the Archpotentate's return in 339 RM. It was during this Reign of the Empty Throne that the Church of the Undying Machine launched many CRUSADES and scourges against so-called heretics and enemies of the empire in a bid to gain more power and wealth; a gambit that paid off upon Malichar's return.

The church suffered a schism in early 3704 RM during the WAR OF SUNDERING, with the Church of the Undying Machine remaining the state religion of the HIGH EMPIRE OF KORACHAN, and the newly-created REFORMED CHURCH OF SARASTRO becoming the official religion of the REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO.

The headquarters of the church are located in a walled district of Khadon that is officially known as the HOLY PRECINCT. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

UNDYING MACHINE, CHURCH OF THE (SARAGOSI): Rel. Not to be confused with the CHURCH OF UNDYING MACHINE: the main religion in the HIGH-EMPIRE OF KORACHAN, or the REFORMED CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE: the main religion of the REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO.

The main religion of the TECHNOCRATIC REPUBLIC OF SARAGOS, first recognised in c. 2400 RM as a corrupted form of the Korachani church on which it was based. The founders of Saragos, though of VENTHIRI blood, were heavily influenced by the CULT OF THE SPHINX that had dominated the area since the first appearance of the sphinx HETEPHERES there in -3 RM. Her handing over of Venthir to the Korachani empire in 361 RM opened the floodgates to immigration from the greater empire, and the Church of the Undying Machine was amongst the first institutions to be introduced there.

Hetepheres' later paranoia and persecution of TECHNOLOGISTS and their ilk from Venthir, starting in 1921 RM, caused their descendants, who would later become the founders of Saragos, to look upon both religions of Venthir with disdain, though in FALIA, the Church of the Undying Machine remained a MYSTERY CULT of sorts. As the Technocracy of Saragos admonished religion, advocating a secular life similar to that taught by the extinct philosophy of MIDISM, Falia continued to worship the Undying Machine, though its dogma became corrupted by the centuries of isolation and cultural tendencies. By c. 2400 it had become something wholly apart from its imperial ancestor; serving as a symbolic mask to its people, the tenets of the machine serving as a metaphor for what can be achieved by the moral use of TECHNARCANA.

The church spread throughout Saragos over the next decades, its temples becoming a common-enough sight in its cities, though as an institution it never became the overbearing monolith that its imperial counterpart had been. During this time Korachan had failed to let the memory of Saragos fade and the perhaps foolish actions of Queen Hetepheres in executing and exiling the bulk of Venthiri technarcanists, many of whom were conducting revolutionary research. Saragos had become a difficult country to infiltrate, and many attempts at subterfuge were been unsuccessful, leading to the assembling of a great diplomatic delegation that arrived in Saragos in 3213 RM.

The Korachani diplomats showered the capital with gifts and remained there for close to a decade, though the Technocracy could not be bargained with, and the delegation left in 3211 RM, empty-handed. Another delegation was sent to Saragos in 3301 RM, this time with members of the Church which, when offered a tour of the nations' main cities found the ear of the Falian government, which established a small Korachani consulate there in 3303 RM.

Links were forged with the Church of the Undying Machine, which would become an influential entity in the region (purchasing properties and businesses and using its power to sway the Church of the Undying Machine in Falia. By c. 3350 RM the imperial consulate was secretly manipulating the city's government, sending technarcane secrets to Korachan. In 3392 RM it had grown so confident in its local power that it opposed the rule of Saragos and attempted to wrest Falia from the nation. The coup was however negated and the imperial offices destroyed, the Church of the Undying Machine eradicated, after which it became a secular nation though individuals were still allowed to practice their faiths in private, so long as it was not of detriment to society as a whole. The church's structures were kept, and became secular buildings: places of contemplation and introspection that are valued to this day. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

UNDYING MACHINE, CHURCH OF THE (SUORI): Rel. Sect of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE that emerged in the region of SUOR following the arrival there of the explorer NAVAH BERDEN in 598 RM. The religion rapidly spread in the region of Suor, though was quickly corrupted by ancient ABERANNI elementalism that had survived the ancient empire's collapse in the FOURTH AGE. Berden himself had become recognised as a holy figure by c. 1200 RM, and he is venerated as a prophet of the Suori church to this day, with effigies built facing south (he was last seen leaving Suor in c. 605 RM, where he is recorded as having successfully navigated the ROILING SEA en-route to GIBEAH in 609 RM).

The UNDYING MACHINE worshipped by this Suori sect is seen as a distant god, unreachable and unknowable. The constant pilgrimage to the SEPULCHRAL PALACE in KHARKHARADONTIS is ignored by worshipers of the Suori sect of the Church, who deem the 'accessibility' of the KORACHANI god as belittling his greatness. Images and idols to the Suori god are not allowed, and physical worship has instead been transferred to Berden and the ship that brought him to Suor, and every house has a small effigy of the imperial explorer, and every settlement has a central statue dedicated to him, always facing south – the direction from which he came and eventually disappeared after teaching them of the Undving Machine.

Though contact with the outside world since that time has revealed that Navah Berden was but a IONIC mortal with no particular divine traits, the Suori nevertheless continue to worship him as the one who brought them knowledge and understanding of the outside world. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

UNEGEN SANDBEATER: (B. c 3880 RM) Oth. Renowned HALFBLOODED
SHAPER from BAATAN.

UNERKILISS: 1. For. Boreal forest in the c east of ALAM BETHYL, stretching north from the border with MASSALAR, all the way to lake GRETHEL. It is known for its alder, willow, poplar and birch trees, and its terminus at the 70th parallel marks the beginning of scattered permafrost in Alam Bethyl.

2. Geo. Pol. One of the eight political territories of $\underline{ALAM BETHYL}$, named after the eponymous forest^(1,).

UNGARO: Set. Small city in the c of the tribe of ILLPHAGOS in the west of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. It is a thriving city with a growing metalworking industry (Pop. c. 16,000).

UNGORORO: For. Dense jungle in the c north of SERROK, known for its dreaded life-stealing fungus that has led many beings – mortals included – to their grisly deaths. The fungus has not been widely studied by the scholars of the empire, and little is known of it outside of Serrok, and few there are willing to speak of it. The fungus somehow takes root in the minds of unfortunate victims, and controls them, guiding them to particularly damp areas, where they lie down and starve to death as the fungus overtakes their bodies. In some cases, the fungus begins to spread across the body before it has settled, which has led to some terrifying encounters in history.

Though the fungus is largely restricted to the Ungororo, it has been known to spread south, as far as the PHOTHATAL forest if the climate is favourable for long-enough.

UNICORN: see MONOCEROUS.

UNIFICATION WARS, the: Pol. Mil. His. Abstract period documented by the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR in his only literary work, EMPIRE. The period directly follows the rise to power of the Archpotentate Malichar, from the union of the SEVEN CITY-STATES, of the KORACHANI PENINSULA in 1 RM to 212 RM, when IO, last of the proverbial SEVEN TRIBES, was captured (though this range of years is open to much debate and interpretation).

UNION OF THE FIERY HAND: Mar. Phil. Rel. Mil. Org. Ascetics with a long-storied history that has gone hand-in-hand in shaping the history of ALAM BETHYL. They originated in c. 2200 RM, predating the current regime by over 1,000-years.

They possess supranatural abilities that are the gifts of decades of studying, meditation, exercise and training, allowing them to perform physical feats that other mortals are incapable of, such as: melting snow or freezing water by changing their body temperature, levitating, seeing in the dark, miraculous feats of strength, astrally projecting, and others. These changes are brought about by the power of mediation and though they are not considered to be SHAPERS by those few who have studied them, they tap into the MATERIA OMNA through their meditation, which allows them to FOCUS and reach ATTUNEMENT without having an academic understanding of the intricacies of their actions.

They study in mountaintop monasteries, choosing isolated areas that experience extremes in temperature that dissuade common folk from disturbing them, though they are highly regarded and venerated as living saints across Alam Bethyl, and have attained notoriety in surrounding nations, including CISNERIA, ALMAGEST, KOLCHIS, and DURCHAA⁽¹⁾.

Monks of the Fiery Hand are recruited from nearby settlements at a very young age and spend close to twenty years training in isolation. Upon completing their training, they are assigned a settlement (not necessarily their birth home, to which any emotional connection is severed during their training), where they will spend their lives serving as advisors to the governors and spiritual leaders and judges to the people. In times of war or conflict they can call upon trainees from nearby monasteries as needed.

With the slow yet inevitable industrialisation of their homeland it is unknown what will become of the monks of the Fiery Hand, but they remain an important and intrinsic part of the culture of Alam Bethyl.

UNITED ASSEMBLY: Pol. Org. The government of KARGAMA, which gathers in the city of KARGHEMIR^(2.). It is made up of WITNESSES, lawmakers, elders and plutocrats from the various states of Kargama, who convene there to discuss matters of political, economic and religious importance to the nation as a whole. A chairperson known as the JURISPRUDENT is elected from the United Assembly every five years and acts as a ruler.

The United Assembly was introduced in 2703 RM amid the backdrop of the EHRENISIAN CRUSADES to serve as a war council, but over time developed into a government to aid the monarchy during wartime. Many of the more militaristic monarchs delegated the day-to-day running of the kingdom to the Assembly, and by the time that a peace treaty was signed in 2809 RM it had become largely autonomous. The monarchy had been placed under increasing pressure by the populace and finally ended with the assassination of king BRAS days before the signing of the treaty, and was replaced by the United Assembly.

The governance of individual states and cities within Kargama is largely autonomous, with each state having its own rules and governments that act independently of the Assembly. However, the assembly does have the power to vote on laws that must be observed across all states.

UNITED VORANDI COUNCIL: Pol. Org. Dre. The present ruling government in THE VORANDINE. The Council appeared in c. 3840 RM as one of many small monastic orders obsessed with the interpretation of the DREAMS and visions that had, over time become attributed to the GOD WHO SPEAKS. Unlike most other orders, the Vorandi Council was intent on enforcing the GODS' LAWS – a set of laws based on the interpretations of the dreams and visions attributed to the GOD WHO SPEAKS.

The council took control of the Vorandine in 3996 RM following the forceful dissolution of the previous coalition council and the annexation of twelve of its fifteen states. It is opposed by most Vorandi people though its policing force manages to maintain control of the populace as it erases much off the regions' recent history.

UNIVERSITY, the: Pol. Governing body of KAZZAR since 3562 RM, when the GODSLAYERS, who had been in Kazzar since 3148 RM, assumed control of the republic through their increased influence.

Today, the University is ruled by seven elected JUDGES, who form a council of leadership, while each rules individually over a specific territory of Kazzar. Beneath the Judges are various JURATS, who serve as municipal officers who are granted land and titles upon their election. Collectively, the members of the University are elected by members of the Godslayers and citizens of Kazzar, in elections that take place every seven years.

UNMOVING HAND, ORDER OF THE: Org. KARKADANNI monastery in the far south of AETHIOS, in the northern foothills of the SHOAR roughlands, where they train in the titled martial art that minimises movement and whose practitioners claim it can be fought blindfolded.

UNNYARHIAL: see CITY-ENGINE OF UNNYARHIAL.

UNOT AGHAR: Set. City in the c south of the MULL CITY-STATES, along the course of the river SKALL. It forms part of THE WAY trade-route and offers lodging to the merchants that pass through it (Pop. c. 20,000).

UNSAT: Geo. Major city in the c of ZOHAK (Pop. c. 92,000).

UNSEEN DRUMS, the: Soc. In the constant twilight of the PRISON

CARCERI, there exists no measure of time, save the birth and death of generations and the beating of unseen drums that beat every 21 hours, reverberating distantly across the entirety of Carceri. None know the source of the beating, but most think it is one of VORROPOHAIAH'S great feats of engineering, which are thought to emanate from a dee manufactory-cavern in ELYDEN'S core.

UNLET: Sec. Coastal city in the south of KEPHUAAN, overlooking the BAY OF COMMARA^(L) (Pop. c. 43,000).

UNSEEING BLADE, the: Rel. Org. A pariah cult that began its slow rise to prominence in in NÁRTHEL in c. 3400 RM. Its founding members were drawn from disillusioned citizens expatriated from the north eastern DIOCESES of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE in Nárthel during the REFORMATION DECREE of the same period. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

UNSUNG AND UNMOURNED. His. Vol. A notorious social novel written by an unknown person and distributed across KORACHANI cities in 3977 RM that goes into detail about the hardships of the daily life of HELOTS and SLAVES. The book was read by many FREEMEN and PATRICIANS and it caused an uproar in their social circles, with many of them having previously been willingly oblivious or indifferent to the plight of the lower classes. Thousands of copies of the book were seized and burnt by the ARÂTHUAHI ORDER OF THE SANCTIFIED INQUISITION over the next years, and printers that were suspected of having published it were likewise destroyed. Despite any ripples its story may have initially caused, the social movement its publishing wanted never materialised.

It is thought that the empire suppressed the book out of fear of widespread knowledge of the life that helots lead being publicised.

UNTAMED LANDS, the: Geo. Common name given to the heartland of MALAN by outsiders, particularly around the INNER SEA REGION. The name conforms to stereotypes surrounding the culture and geography of Malan, with most people incorrectly believing that Malan is a land of untamed wildernesses and little civilization.

UNTANA: Geo. Plateau in the west of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES, to the west of the MUHUPUR Mountain. It is home to varied flora and fauna, and is a relatively populous region, with the city of KALPI being its largest city.

UNTOUCHABLES: 1. Rel. Org. A caste of CENOBITES within the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE who are able to withstand the worst physical effects of ATRAMENTAL CORRUPTION, similar to the INCORRUPTIBLES. They are not born into the caste and only become part of it after evidence is found of their resilience to the ATRAMENTA, usually following a pilgrimage along the SHADOW MARCH.

2. Org. Rnk. A caste of priests in $\underline{\text{CUTH}}$ devoted to the teachings of $\underline{\text{NERGAAL}}$. They have been spared his diseases, and by virtue of that are the strongest of his children, granted the right to speak as $\underline{\text{WORD}}$ $\underline{\text{BEARERS}}$ onto others as disciples of the sun.

UNTRA: Set. Settlement in the south east of JURRAS⁽²⁾, just north of the eastern-most part of the INNORADOS Mountains (Pop. c. 7,000).

UNTRIEL: Set. Settlement in the c of JURRAS⁽²⁾. It originally appeared in c. 3320 RM after an ATRAMENTALLY-ACTIVE region once located there diminished, opening up the region to habitation. In its early days the region outside the city was mined for Atramental rocks by opportunistic individuals though the industry slowly waned as the Atramental region disappeared completely by c. 3640 RM (Pop. c. 9,000).

UNTRO: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the south east of the KORACHANI colony of TAVVADRA, and home to most of the region's ground troops.

UNTUAL: 1. Geo. Island 40-miles off the southern coast of THUMAL.

2. Set. Fishing settlement on the eponymous island in THUMAL (Pop. c. 12,500).

UORO: Sup. Fau. Undead SPIRIT that hunts in ATRAMENTAL lands. Upon death, the spirits of MORTALS who die in such lands appear to become tethered to the land, likely through an Atramental link between the spirit and land. The link is often literal, with tendrils of SHADOWSTUFF emerging from the land binding the incorporeal body of the spirit.

EXORCISMS and certain PENUMBRAL acts of shaping can exorcise the spirit from the area.

UOTA: Set. Settlement in the east of the tribe of DRAKAINA, in the east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 4,000).

UPHEAVAL OF LETHEA, the: His. Great tsunami recorded in the SEA OF LETHEA in 1303 RM that devastated many coastal areas, particularly in its north and east. Originating from a tremendous earthquake that levelled the north of UHBATAQ, it travelled north across the Sea of Lethea, growing faster and higher as it went, drawing coastal waters towards it, giving the impression of a rapid lowering of the tides. It struck against BANT, KULIGALA, NOAVATUR, PNESSA, CHEIRA, PORPHYR, ANANTHUL, SABAISA, and, most notably, the FLAMING SEA, where the natural bottleneck caused the waves to grow to immense size, utterly destroying coastal settlements in Bant, and reaching inland as much as 20 – 30 miles

Aside from the physical damage, the Upheaval also resulted in many water sources such as wells becoming tainted by the amnesiac-inducing properties of the Lethea, which resulted in much confusion and prolonged problems in affected nations.

The Upheaval is notable for ending a large naval battle off the coast of Noavatur, ultimately helping in decide the region's independence from the KORACHANI EMPIRE the next year.

UPINIS: Rvr. River in the east of KHULL flowing north from the IMRARKHAL plateau for over 740-miles, before emptying at the MAZARINE SEA.

UPOCZH: Scr. Small settlement in the south east of OKKHAM, along the isthmus that connects the peninsula of Okkham to the headland of KHURTAE. It is part of the SASACZHOT canal and controls one of the lochs along its course (Pop. c. 1,000).

UPPER ALMAGEST: see ALMAGEST, UPPER.

UQIR: Set. Small coastal city in the c south west of VENTHIR, overlooking the south of the BAY OF SHAIB. It is an industrial centre (Pop. c. 5,400).

UR SITH: 1. Set. City in the south of IO, situated close to the river SIA (ancient records suggest that the city may once have been located on its banks, with the rivers' course having changed over the past 4-millenia).

The city is built atop the ruins of a far older settlement, believed to be a THIRD AGE mortuary complex that is linked somehow to the imposing half-buried monolithic ruin that new exists in the city's heart. The first modern record of the city is in the history of pre-KORACHANI Io, when in -111 RM the EXARCHS OF MIRADOR raised a number of Ionic GOLEMS^(2.) in a hollow-temple of THE VOID. Their actions earned them great prestige and they rapidly grew to control the settlement, which attracted people from all around the region, even as far West as BA'AKH. As their influence increased, so too did that of the city, which after a series of short wars had wrested control of the SALOROCAN PENINSULA from BAESHA, uniting the region under its rule by c. -30 RM.

The appearance of a large imperial delegation in EXARCHS's subsequent betrayal of Io to Korachan led to much conflict in the region, with dissent growing in many cities. Ur Sith had remained loyal to the Exarchs over the centuries and was one of the most stable cities during this time, though the warrior ASIMEL gained a large following of those who opposed the imperial presence there and in 212 RM marched against Ethra. The demagogue was killed during the failed siege of the city, with Ur Sith distancing itself from his actions.

The arrival of Korachan in Io brought with it renewed trade and industry. The appearance of iron mines in the GHOLA Mountain benefitted Ur Sith greatly, and by c. 400 RM it had grown into a large conurbation of around 5 separate settlements which were slowly growing, their peripheries becoming imperceptible by c. 1000 RM, the ancient structure at their heart becoming a focal point. The city continued to grow throughout the history of Io until by c. 2900 RM it had become its largest city, boasting a population of over 200,000 bodies. Though the death of the region and the empire's waning industries in the area led to a rapid decline, with much of the city becoming deserted by c. 3000 RM.

Following Korachan's handing over of Io to SARASTRO'S ruler SATHEP THE RISEN in 3103 RM, the region became neglected and was largely allowed to rot. Ur Sith was no exception, though it retained a degree of independence and even managed to stabilise over the ensuing centuries (Pop. c. 50,000).

2. Int. Rui. Strange ancient structure located in the centre of the present-day city-conurbation of Ur Sith. The structure takes the form of a circular column, its top destroyed, half-buried in the earth of the region. It is believed to date back to at least the THIRD AGE and is possibly older, its construction attributed to one of the Two-and-Twenty MORTAL RACES, possibly SERAPIS or LACER.

UR TION: Set. Small city in the c of IO, known to be a major producer of wine, which is exported across the SARASTROAN EMPIRE, finding its way on tables in the capital (Pop. c. 20,000).

UR-TONGUE, the: Myt. His. Lan. The original innate language with which the MORTAL PEOPLES races were created. It is mentioned in the 'MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN' and is now thought to be the common root from which all later languages emerged. It was simple and of little nuance, but gave early mortals the tools needed to communicate with each other without the aid of the DEMIURGES.

Desperate to reconnect with THE SHAPER after being banished to the MORTAL PLANE, the DEMIURGES' devised a plan to construct a device, known as the BRIDGE OF ETERNITIES, through which they hoped to regain their powers and re-establish their connection with their father.

The Shaper punished them for their continued hubris, and their children, the Mortal peoples, it stripped of their understanding of each other's words in an act known as the SUNDERING OF TONGUES that saw the Ur-tongue splintered into 22 different languages, one for each race, so that the mortals could never again understand each other. See Vol IV: the Mythologia Elyden.

URACHIS: Geo. The south eastern reaches of the SHANA Mountains^(1,1) in VENTHIR, renowned in the region for the gigantic fossilised spine that lays like crenelated walls on its highest peaks.

- URADA: Sea. Sea in the KORACHANI colony of AMONDOR, south of the TOLIASOR Mountains. Its waters are relatively deep and are bordered to the west and east by cliffs.
- URAGAN: Set. Small city in the east of CUTH (Pop. c. 14,000).
- URAH: Set. Coastal settlement in the north east of VENTHIR. Its main industry is fishing (Pop. c. 4,000).
- URAHASH: Geo. Expansive massif in the south west of RAONGEN⁽²⁾, serving as a border between the nation and the north of AYAD and OTINTH, in the far west of WESTERN LLACHATUL. It is around 280,000 square-miles in area, and is very rugged and sparsely populated.
- URAKABARAMEEL: m. Myt. His. Per. In the mythology and ancient history of ELYDEN, eighth of the Two-and-Twenty DEMIURGES, whose children were the GIGANRI.
 - His known \underline{SCIONS} are: $\underline{SAMAEL}^{(2)}$ and $\underline{AGNAES}.$ See Vol IV: the Two-and-Twenty Demiurges.
- URAKABARAMEEL'S TOMB: Rel. Str. Beauteous open-air temple in GNOTH where the preserved body of the GIGANRI'S tribal patriarch, the DEMIURGE URAKABARAMEEL is kept in state through powerful FIR. The place is a temple, library and observatory, but above all a monument to the Gnothi way of life and its philosophies. It is a destination to many pilgrims, travelling from the city of PLEROMA.
 - It is perhaps due to the Demiurge's asceticism that the region surrounding his tomb is relatively free of oneiric pollution. Some scholars have used this to dispute the claim that he is indeed buried there.
- URARAKA: Set. City in the north east of HABOT along the course of the river VAIAUANTI, in the VAIAMMESHI Valley (Pop. c. 42,000).
- URAKESH: Set. Small city in the region of USSAMAR in the north of THE SURRACH. Its main industry is logging hardwoods (Pop. c. 13,400).
- $\underline{\text{URAL}}$: Rel. Dei. Major deity in the continent of $\underline{\text{BROR}}^{(1)}$. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.
- URAMMAGH: Set. Major city in the c west of METHUMN, within the fertile Sapparanti river basin. It is a major agricultural centre (Pop. c. 65,000).
- URAMMALET: Set. Major coastal settlement in the north west of TAAN
 AN. It is the nations' main port and sees much trade and traffic pass through its harbours, and it is the terminus of the great AQUEDUCT OF
 CREPHITHISS
 - It is the terminus of the ZENEGE RES UMBRA PIPELINE, and refined umbra is shipped to other nations on specialised transport ships that berth in its great shipping harbour (Pop. c. 470,000).
- URAN: Sea. Sea, forming the northern part of the DARK SEA, bordered by the nation of TAMAR, the HARÉSHK, SAUA, MALAN, and KHAMID. It is one of the purest bodies of water close to THE INNER SEA and is renowned for its bountiful harvests and crystal waters and inlets.
- URANATEK: Set. Large city in the c of PORPHYR. It is a major industrial centre, and a producer of technarcane machinery (Pop. c. 120,000).
- URARA: Set. Fortified settlement in the far north of AMMESH, close to the river TAMANTI. The settlement maintains links with the independent city of RAMINA (Pop. c. 5,800).
- URARAGA: Set. City in the south east of AMMESH, along the course of the river KUKHOR (Pop. c. 38,000).
- URARAGHI: Geo. Mountain range in the c of the nation of AMMESH, in the AMMASHI^(1,1) peninsula. It forms the spine of Ammesh and runs across over half the nation, limiting access across it to the south west of Ammesh. There is one major pass across the Uraraghi Mountains, roughly along their mid-span, which is controlled by the city of SATAMMA.
- URARAK: Mil. Str. Fort in the south east of TAAN AN, guarding a natural pass between the SETHIGH Mountains in the west and the OMRBAS plateau in the east. it guards a pipeline that exports umbra south east into HABOT and is guarded by SHABRAZIG.
- URAS: Ind. Set. Iron mining settlement in c VENTHIR, south of the division between the SHANA Mountains^(1.) and highlands (Pop. c. 8,000).
- URAT: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the south west of the SARASTROAN colony of IPSISSIMA⁽¹⁾.

- URATAR: Geo. Island off the western-coast of TARTAK. Until c. 1800 RM the island was submerged beneath the SEA OF UGOLOTH.
- URAXAK: Set. Settlement in the west of TARTAK. Its main industry is the cultivation of cotton (Pop. c. 4,800).
- URAYA: 1. Geo. Mountain-range in the c west of PARAIYA.
 - 2. Set. Settlement in the c of PARAIYA giving its name to the above mountain-range (Pop. c. 10,000).
- URBEM: Set. HUMAN city in the middle of the UTANAR Wastes in the c-south east of HOGGOTHA ISZ in the south of SAMMAEA. The city is large and mostly subterranean, like a tuber, carved out of a great natural granite monolith that lies within the softer sandstone of the region though mines and tributaries of the main city extend beyond the harder granite into the sandstone. Less than a quarter of the city is located above ground, and the majority of that is heavily guarded and protected by thick concrete walls against SERAPI incursion (Pop. c. 180,000).
- URCAR: 1. Set. City in the URGRORD region of c north western SABIA. It was originally a KORACHANI colony, and one of the larger imperial colonies in the area, established in 2803 RM.
- When Korachan left the area in 3237 RM, the city lay in ruins for almost 300 years until Sabians, their drive for meteoric iron increasing, repopulated the area and returned to its open-cast mines (Pop. c. 26,400).

 2. Ind. Open-cast meteore iron mine near the eponymous city^(1.) in SABIA.
- URCHAN: Set. Settlement in the west of KORACHAN, along the course of the river TURGLI and 12-miles north of the manufactory-city of LUGDCHAN. The settlement appeared in c. 2920 RM when scavs settled down on the banks of the river Turgli after discovering a wealth of recyclable materials. Today its people sift through the polluted waters of the river sifting for rubbish and chemicals that can be recycled. As a result, they are quite sickly and shunned by others, and have little contact with the rest of the nation (Pop. c. 4,000).
- URDAH: Sct. Major city in the north of the JAHADAT STATES, in the east of SAMMAEA, and capital of one of the twelve States (Pop. c. 78,750).
- $\underline{\text{URDON}}$: Set. Settlement on the west of the island of $\underline{\text{BOHMIUS}}^{(1.)}$ in the c of the $\underline{\text{MAIDEN ISLES}}$ (Pop. c. 7,200).
- URDU: 1. Geo. Pass across the ASOGHAQUA Mountains, linking the east of OPHAR with the far south west of the TARAHID ANNEXES.
- 2. Set. Small fortified city in the east of OPHAR, situated in the foothills of the ASOGHAQUA Mountains. It guards the eponymous mountain pass⁽¹⁾ (Pop. c. 12,000).
- UREMMESH: Set. Major city in the south east of HABOT. It lies along the route of the NACRE ROAD, and is known for its many storage yards and markets (Pop. c. 6,800).
- URGALA: 1. Geo. Extensive cave-system in the c-south east of AQUARIIA, known for its vast subterranean river.
 - 2. Geo. Ancient cavern-temple in the c-south east of AQUARIIA, in the eponymous cave-system. The temple is largely ruined, its hewn statues and walls covered in moss.
- URGORI: Set. Major city in the north west of CHEIRA, and capital city of the third prefecture of Cheira (120,000).
- URGRORD: Geo. Valley in the c north west of SABIA, between the NATTRANEM and ECHANEM Mountains, forming a pass between the two. It is also the southern-most area of THE WASTELAND region, where iron deposits are the densest and most easily reached. Part of the region was under KORACHANI control until 3237 RM.
- URHAGNATT: also 'the Empty City'. Rui. Ancient ruins in the c of THE SURRACH, in the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED land of KOBIAN in the south west of the SURRACHI PLAINS. The ruin dates back to the FOURTH AGE and was once a major city, boasting a population of millions during its peak. Little is known of its fate, though it is thought to have fallen during the WAR OF SCOURGING, but other accounts imply that the ATRAMENTAL WASTES of Kobian appeared as a result of the meddling of SHAPERS who delved too deeply into forbidden knowledge. The fortress of VACATUR, just 75-miles from the ruin of Urhagnatt and 25-miles from the border of Kobian, exists purely to penetrate the Atramental wastes in an attempt to open up the ruin to exploration.

URIACHIS: Geo. Mountain in the c west of VENTHIR, forming part of a chain with the SHANA Mountains⁽¹⁾. It acts as a border with TARATI⁽¹⁾.

URIAH: also 'the Flame of Rachanael'. Sup. Soc. Supranatural gift that is bestowed by the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR to champions and heroes of the KORACHANI EMPIRE. The gift takes the form of the ability to manifest ATRAMENTAL flames, in a way that makes the bearer of the gift appear like a SHAPER (though their eyes do not turn black when manifesting the flames). The flames are cold to the touch and can cause severe damage the flesh of those touched (though the bearer is unaffected by them), with Firmamentists touched being more severely-affected.

The Uriah was first bestowed upon Malichar by the UNDYING MACHINE himself in KHARKHARADONTIS during Malichar's ITINERARY there, and bearers of the Flame of Rachanael are also thought to have the innate ability to bestow the gift onto others, though there are so few documented instances of this, that it is not thought to be a universal trait of those who have been bestowed with the gift.

Throughout the history of the empire, there have been a few dozen documented recipients of the Uriah, and all considered champions of the empire – individuals whose actions have furthered the cause of Korachan, and/or the Church of the Undying Machine.

URIANA: Set. city in the c south west of KARGAMA. It is famed for its KARGAMAN IDOL, which is amongst the largest and most well-preserved in all of Kargama (Pop. c. 67,000).

URIANT: Pol. Set. Major coastal city and capital of the kingdom of KRISOBAL in the north west of ELALLIA (Pop. c. 287,200).

URINIT: Set. City in the north of the region of IBLIS, in the c west of LYRIDIA. In antiquity the city was a collection of cliffside dwellings, and though they remain, they are no longer used, and now serve as tombs of the dead (Pop. c. 20,000).

URKASH: Set. Small coastal city in the north east of VENTHIR (Pop. c. 12,000).

UROHOT: Org. Str. Headquarters and fortress belonging to the KNIGHTS OF THE MARCH, along the MARTYRS' ROAD in KHARKHARADONTIS. The fortress is surrounded by SIPHON ENGINES and also maintains a famed hospital where ailments of the ATRAMENTA are treated.

UROSA: Sea. Bay in the east of the HENDECARCHY of HATON, in the north of MALAN, forming an extension of the GULF OF ELRI.

UROTHA: Set. Coastal city in the north of DURCHAA⁽¹⁾. Its primary role is the collection and refining of UMBRA SIPHONED offshore, in the region of OGGUTEI 130-miles to the north, before distribution across the major cities and manufactories across Durchaa. It is also known for its major harbours, from which vat-grown beasts are shipped off to foreign nations (Pop. c. 50,000).

UROTHOM: Mil. Str. Fortress on the island of URATAR off the western-coast of TARTAK.

URRA: Rui. Ruined city in the east of JURRAS⁽²⁾, in the region of HURA. The settlement is thought to date back to c. -1000 RM.

URRABANA: Rvr. Major river in PHYRR, flowing west and south for 520-miles from sources in the MAR SAHIGH Mountains and the ESHTARES badlands, before meeting the coast at the BAY OF PELLARIG^(1.). The river is known to flood following heavy rainfall close to the city of EKALLA, and the only safe crossing lies along the AKKAR bridge which was constructed specifically to be immune to flooding.

The river is highly polluted from the many manufactories and heavy industries that lie along its banks in the SLIMA region, though people still drink from and wash their clothes in its waters.

URRACH: 1. Plr. 'urrachin', also 'tomb-dome'. Rel. Str. Ecclesiastic edifices erected within the monolithic administrative structures of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, similar to the THOLUSIN. Their purpose was to mark the life of dead administrators or high-ranking AMANUENSIS, and are also the tombs of such figures.

2. Set. Settlement in the far north west of SEDISIA. It was the northernmost settlement of the KORACHANI colony of OHDURTAR and was resettled by Sedisia following the empire's retreat from the region in 2671 RM (Pop. c. 4,700).

URRAMIS: Set. Small city in the east of the PARTHISAN colony of IBANNEM^(1.). Its main industry is the mining of LODESTONE (Pop. c. 6,300).

URRAPON: Set. Settlement in the c west of AMMESH. It is an agricultural centre and is known for its cultivation of beans and legumes, most of which are sold across lake RALIA to the harbour markets of ORATARA (Pop. c. 6,400).

URRAS: Rui. Abandoned city in the north of SKAROS, to the north east of the SKAROSIAN PLAINS. It was besieged by Korachani forces during the WAR OF THE ARTIFEXES and obliterated in early 3014 RM, and was never resettled due its proximity to expansive minefields in the far north of the Skarosian Plains.

URRCHAN: Ind. Set. Mining area in the north east of ALMAGEST, just south of the MARMARA massif. The area is comprised of various small mining settlements that operate together under a single government, producing granite and quartz (Pop. c. 3,800).

URRED: Mil. Str. Fortress in the far north of ROMOREA^(2.), in the southern face of the STRAMINEA Mountains, guarding one of two sources of the BARAQ AQUEDUCT, which provides water to the capital, IONOL, over 54-miles away.

URRIJAIT: Set. Fortified city in the east of METHUMN, in the south of UKHORR Mountains. Despite its isolation, it maintains strong trade ties with UKAMA to the west, exchanging stonework goods and rare desert produce for food (Pop. c. 30,000).

URSHAT: 1. Geo. Pass crossing the western reaches of the HELIOPARNASSUS Mountains in the south of LYRIDIA, connecting the city of EDANATH and the gold-mines of NERIK.

2. Set. Settlement in the south west of LYRIDIA, controlling the above pass, and forming a part of the RED ROUTE, where it offers lodging to merchants travelling the road (Pop. c. 6,200).

URSIRIEL: Mys. Rel. Phil. One of the SEVENTY-SEVEN NAMES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE.

URSUL: Sup. Tec. Str. SIPHON ENGINES in VAALK, in a region called HAVAK known for its planar LACUNAE. The facility was built in c. 2150 RM after years of great effort and cost, its goal to siphon UMBRA and ATRAMENTAL TAINT from the lacuna and collect it for use in industry. The facility takes the form of many great cylindrical reservoirs, beneath and around which are the complex technarcane engines responsible for the collection and filtration of the umbra.

The complex was operational until 3340 RM when it was abandoned following decreased yields, though within two decades, increased Atramental activity in the area proved how important the siphon engines were, and the facility was reopened in 3362 RM.

URSUN: Pol. King and ruler of the nation of KRYSA. He was a benevolent leader and uniter of three peoples, bringing about the stronger nation of Krysa, which under his leadership and prolonged life prospered. He was obsessed with death and methods to cheat it, resulting in the city forging ties with TECHNARCANELY-advanced nations in his search for ways to cheat death.

He finally died after over 3-centuries of life, in 3002 RM. His body was interred in a great engine he had constructed while alive, in the FIRMAMENTAL WASTES of BELLEN, outside Krysa. Designed to stave off the effects of entropy, the engine allowed his body to remain in state as his followers dedicated themselves to finding a way to restore his spirit to the MATERIAL PLANE. In truth the act of stasis also worked on his spirit, which is now torn between two worlds, trying desperately to reach the OTHERWORLD while still tethered to his vessel and engine in the material. It has been over a millennium since his death, and were it not for the engine his people believe that he would have returned to ELYDEN as an OTHERWORLDER by now.

URTAN: Pol. Set. Capital city of the URTAN LEAGUE in the north of SAMMAEA, just south west of IZABAL (1.) (Pop. c. 454,000).

URTAN LEAGUE, the: Dem. 'Urtani'. Ntn. Small state to the south west of IZABAL(1.) in the north of SAMMAEA, to the north of THE SURRACH. It is comprised of seven city-states, known as prefectures, which are allied together in the eponymous league, which is ruled from the city of URTAN

- by ambassadors from each Prefecture who vote to pass legislatures. See Vol III: the Nations of Elyden.
- URU: (6,207-ft.) Geo. Carved peak in the south east of AZAZEM, east of the SEA OF BATHOS^(1.) depicting a stylised humanoid face. It is thought to be a relic of the FOURTH AGE, its features now weathered.
- URUAH: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the c north of BASSORAH⁽²⁾, home to many of the region's armies.
- URUEN: Seet. Small city in the c of the TARAHID ANNEXES (Pop. c. 12,000).
- URULA: Set. Small city in the c south west of AZAZEM (Pop. c. 12,500).
- URUM: Rui. City in the north east of ANUBIA. It was once a major producer of raw UMBRA, using SIPHON ENGINES to extract umbra from the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region of BULLATA. The city was destroyed in 2821 RM following a technical malfunction in one of its siphon engines that left the region in shambles. The death of its industry allowed Bullata to continue growing in size, where it has come to dominate the north east of Anubia.
- URUMI: Wea. Sword with a flexible, whip-like blade, known to be extremely difficult to master. It was used in EASTERN LLACHATUL, particularly in TETHYSIA, where it remains an important cultural weapon that is still used in ritual combat and exhibition matches. The city of IZOTHIA is a famed manufacturer of urumis.
- URUATI: Set. Major city in the c south west of HANNAH. It is renowned for its panned design, which takes the form of a semi-circle, with dozens of concentric wide bow-shaped roads, and 144 roads, shaped like spokes, leading to the middle, where a gigantic amphitheatre is found, hewn into the bedrock. It is a major place or veneration in the local religion (Pop. c. 280,000).
- URUSUR: Set. Small city in the c north east of TAHALL. Its main industry is logging (Pop. c. 20,000).
- URYATRA: Set. Small city in the south of THE VORANDINE. Its main industry is the mining and drying of ALVELITE, which is transported west to the city of NYCARAT for further refining (Pop. c. 7,000).
- URYDIA: Set. Coastal city in the south of YSACYITHAIA. It has a large quay and a busy port (Pop. c. 78,400).
- US'HUT: Geo. Mountains in the c east of SABAISA, dividing the nation in half
- USA: Set. Coastal settlement in the region of CHYPRE in the west of THE SURRACH. It is known for its orange groves and water-side palaces that are owned by nobility from across the Surrach (Pop. c. 8,000).
- USAAN: Set. Settlement in the east of the tribe of INDAAR, in the east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 8,000).
- USAAR: Geo. Island in the KORACHANI colony of MELHUMBRA, off the coast of north western SAMMAEA.
- USACHAN: Set. Major city on the island of USASAAR, in the KORACHANI colony of TAVVADRA, off the north western coast of SAMMAEA. Its main industries are the mining of phosphates and zircon and it has a large slave population, mostly taken from the WESTERN SAMMAEAN coast (Pop. c. 80,000).
- USAFAR: Set. Settlement in the far south west of ABATTUR (Pop. c. 7.000).
- USAPRA: Set. City in the c east of CHEIRA. Its main industry is silver mining (Pop. unknown).
- USAR: 1. Pol. Soc. Tribe in the north west of MULCIBER, in the GROWING MOUNTAINS, in the north east of SAMMAEA. It is a major producer of rock salt and aluminium and forms a part of the SALT ROAD.
 - 2. Pol. Set. Ruling city in the tribe of $\underline{\text{USAR}}^{(1)}$, in the west of $\underline{\text{MULCIBER}}$, in the western-face of the $\underline{\text{GROWING MOUNTAINS}}$. The city is a trade hub, and is one of the more metropolitan Mulcibian tribes, commonly trading west with $\underline{\text{AETHIOS}}$. It is one of few native Mulcibian cities to manufacture its own weapons (Pop. c. 60,000).
- USASAAR: lit. 'green island. Geo. Island 60-miles off the western-coast of the KORACHANI colony of TAVVADRA. The island was once verdant though has been stripped bare by the industries of the empire, and is now a rocky dusty place covered in open cast zircon and phosphate mines.

- USEAS: Pol. Set. City and capital of the nation of TISARA, situated at the mouth of the river TAIHA, south of the GULF OF USEA at the base of the ETHIAN peninsula (Pop. c. 204,000).
- USEAN GULF: Sca. Narrow gulf, some 125-miles long dividing the TISARAN mainland from the ETHIAN peninsula.
- USEBERCHAA: Set. City in the east of DURCHAA⁽¹⁾, known for its trapping and hunting industries. It is a major supplier of pelts and furs, which are sold south as luxury items (Pop. c. 28,000).
- USH: Rui. Ruined city, its buildings half-buried in the sands of the deserts of ARUTESH, in the c of the nation of BROR^(2.).
- USHAKHA: Set. Small city in the east of AHKA, along the course of the river UTEAND. It is 6-miles from the coast with the STRAIT OF SKAROS, and situated atop a cliff 180-ft. above sea-level less than 2-miles from the coast (Pop. c. 17,000).
- USHAKUN BATTERY: Mil. Str. cannon battery on the island of NERITA, in the GATE OF EREBETH, guarding entrance to the harbours of SUCHARIIT. The battery is hewn into the rock of coastal cliffs, with tunnels linking them to fortresses above.
- USHALTH: Pol. Set. Capital of SYNCHTHONITHA (Pop. c. 2,430,000).
- USHANAR MEGHRANIZ: Lan. Language that emerged in the south east of SAMMAEA in c. 1000 RM in the latter days of the FIFTH AGE culture of MEGHRANIZ BHOOKH, prior to its unification into the nation of ZHARIAH^(1.). It is the basis of the modern ZHARIAN tongue. See Vol II: Languages.
- USHAPH: Set. Settlement on the island of HAR QALAM, in the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT, 130-miles north east off the mainland (Pop. c. 6,000).
- USHAR: Pol. Soc. Ind. Bus. Possibly the most powerful and influential PATRICIAN HOUSES in the KORACHANI EMPIRE and the INNER SEA REGION, controlling industry, business and owning much land across the INNER SEA and beyond. So influential is House Ushar that it usually has multiple members withing the LEAGUE OF PATRICIANS and it holds the record for most members to have sat amongst THE SEVEN throughout the history of the Korachani empire. The house was claimed ownership of the CODEX ARCANUM, before it was lost in c. 3697 RM See Vol II: Patrician Houses.
- USHBRARA: Geo. Island in the north west of the SHIBBOTHA ISLES off the south western coast of SAMMAEA. It is part of territories contested between FALLARAUR and the CORAL BARONIES.
- USHEN I: (B. 981 D. 1033 RM) Pol. His. The first king of the AMNICIAN DYNASTY in AHRISHEN, who was able to bring order to the kingdom and lead Ahrishen out of its first inter-monarchic period.
- His death in 1033 RM saw his daughter, ANUSHEN I accede, beginning a matrilineal tradition that lased throughout the near six-century dominance of the Dynasty.
- USHIRIN: Geo. Island in the north west of the MAIDEN ISLES, off the south eastern coast of MENISCEA.
- USHURMÁ: Rvr. River in the south of MALAN, flowing south and west for 525-miles from sources in the USIARA, USSIKA, and DAURAENT Mountains through the HENDECARCHIES of CHLORIS and ATALLUA before meeting its parent, the river BAELLI.
- USIARA: Geo. Small mountain in the far south of MALAN, crossing the border between the HENDECARCHIES of CHLORIS and ATALLUA, and serving as a border between northern TZALLRACH and western TETHYSIA. The mountains are old and have worn features, and browngrey rocks, including fine granite that is quarried in the settlement of HEROPHO.
- The mountains are very old and are strewn with dark jagged boulders and shards that lie half buried in the compact soil. The region surrounding the mountains is largely barren, though some ruins from NAHORIA survive there, including the so-called PANTHEON OF NAHORIA, an ancient temple of the old empire.
- USIAS: (270-ft.) Geo. Particular region in ANDILUTH, known for the gigantic stone spine that stands erect from the ground there, reaching a height of 150-ft.
- USIC: Set. Small coastal city in the south west of OKKHAM, overlooking the RASURE COAST. Its main industry is the cultivation and purification of the drug LETH from the SEA OF LETHEA. It maintains well-equipped patrols that scour the coast for 20-miles north and south, attacking anyone hoping to illegally replicate their industry (Pop. c. 13,500).

USIONABBRY: Set. City in the c of RHEA. It is known for its inns, used by people travelling between AURADIA and DHERBA (Pop. c. 40,000).

USISAR: Geo. Scrubland and plains in the north east of AZAZEM.

USOLAHON: 1. Rel. An angel in the religion of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, often thought to be an unborn OTHERWORLDER, who chose to remain in the otherworld as a psychopomp to spirits, instead of being reborn on the material plane. It is seen as a guardian of the dead and the living, alike.

2. Mil. Veh. One of three battleships (the others being the ATHILIEL and the PALARAEL) that was constructed in NOAVATUR in 1303 RM, in preparation of war with KORACHAN following its declaration of independence.

USOLESA: Sea. Sea in the far north of LLACHATUL, bordered to the south west by the IALCUS, and to the east by the GULF OF VALUS. To the north, lies the headland of REHEMAZ, and the FEDERATION OF PERGOST.

USRA: Rvr. River in the south west of VIRAHAN, flowing west for 240-miles from sources in the ORCAMMOR Mountains before meeting the river OASIMRA.

USRUT: Set. Small city in the c of SABAISA. In c. 2246 RM shapers there claiming to be descendants of the ATTESTORS would take up their mantle, exposing themselves as seers. They would eventually become advisors to the ruing monarchy (Pop. c. 16,200).

USSADDUR: His. Pol. Org. A historical ORDER OF THE SANCTIFIED INQUISITION in the KORACHANI EMPIRE founded in AGLAIA⁽²⁾ in 1518 RM. It emerged in response to a widespread increase in neglect of ancient agricultural processes that were leading to the slow death of farmlands across the empire.

Its mission was to punish those wilfully destroying the natural world when other less intrusive methods might suffice, and re-educating farmers and manufactories to better make use of their natural resources. While its efforts were moderately successful at first, time eventually brought complacency and an over reliance on ritual and traditions whose roots had been forgotten or corrupted. The Ussaddur became corrupt and apathetic as the natural lands of the empire slowly died. Following years of debate the COUNCIL OF SEVEN finally put the Order out of its misery in 2893 RM, folding its operations within those of the MINASTERIA OF AGRICULTURE.

USSAMA: Rvr. River in the south of TZALLRACH, flowing west for 920-miles, from sources in the ARGENT Mountains, before meeting with its parent, the river ARELLI. For a 250-mile stretch, the river passes through the canyon of ACHOR.

USSAMAR: Geo. Barren hills south of the NGHALLEAL Mountain. in the north of THE SURRACH.

USSAR: also 'the Holy City of Ussar'. Rel. Set. Major fortified city in the east of Western ABACARDAT. It is home to a large temple of the JAHINNID FAITH and is home to the remains of KAJAHWAA'S mother, which are venerated (Pop. c. 80,000).

 $\underline{\text{USSEAL}}$: Sea. Reef off the northern coast of $\underline{\text{GIBEAH}}$, to the north east of the city of $\underline{\text{DOAST}}$.

USSEIRA: Set. Small city in the west of THE VORANDINE, forming part of its main overland trade-route. Its main industry is the production of an alloy of iron and ALVELITE that is unique to its own metallurgists, and which has been produced for hundreds of years (Pop. c. 16,000).

USSER: Geo. Grasslands and sparse forest in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of PALUS.

USSIKA: Geo. Mountains in CENTRAL LLACHATUL, forming a major part of the south east of MALAN, crossing the territories of the HENDECARCHIES of CHLORIS, STHAMAN, and ATALLUA, forming part of the border between the three.

USSIL: Geo. Massif in the c north of CISNERIA, forming an eastern extension of the BLACK MOUNTAINS. its highest point is Mt. Ussil, which is 12,900-ft. high

USSOPON: Set. Small city in the south of SERROK (Pop. c. 14,000).

USSOMRU: Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region in the south east of TAHALL, in the badlands of ZHKAA.

USTAR: Geo. Cliffs in the far west of TETHYSIA, just east of the border with the south east of MALAN, forming a part of the ARGENT Mountains. It is known for its many caverns, some of which supported mortal life in the early FIFTH AGE, though very few of them have been explored.

USTHAD: Geo. Dunes in TETHYSIA with metallic spines, red from iron oxide.

USSTIR: Int. Art. Geo. Gigantic stone face, possibly part of an immense colossus or statue, lying now ruined, the rest of the body lost, in the mudplains of KORDA in central SAMMAEA. The face is partially buried, though its features are remarkably perfect, despite the obvious amount of time it has spent in state. Local tribes, which are small and scattered across the plains, worship the head, defending it fiercely. The face itself is a perfect match for a shie, hinting at its roots, though the lack of nearby ruins (the nearest documented shie remains being some 120-miles distant) add further mystery to the head's origins.

USTOKHAA: Rui. Ruined city in the west of DURCHAA⁽¹⁾. It was once a large deep-bore UMBRA SIPHON, though the engines fell silent in c. 3150 RM after decreased contact with the empire after the WAR OF THE ARTIFEXES led to a lack of maintenance. Today the region is an ATRAMENTAL WASTELAND, at the centre of which is the ruin of the old city, which once housed 50,000 bodies during its peak in c. 3010 RM.

USTUS: 1. Geo. Island in the south of the MIROVEAN Ocean, just off the western coast of the island continent of BROR⁽¹⁾. It is part of the CITY-ISLES OF ISHULAOL.

2. Set. Major city on the eponymous island off the western-coast of the island continent of $\underline{BROR}^{(1)}$. It was discovered by the explorer \underline{VREGL} in 1308 RM it was then little more than a small fishing settlement. Since then, the settlement grew rapidly, becoming a port and harbour, where goods from $\underline{SAMMAEA}$ and $\underline{LLACHATUL}$ were imported. The waning of the $\underline{ELYDEN'S}$ seas saw it become landlocked by c 3000 RM, after which it stopped growing and eventually dwindled (Pop. unknown).

USUBDA: Ser. Settlement in the c south of SERROK. It is situated in the region of BAULAUROCH and is noted for its diamond mines. The mines are government-owned and strict regulations and rules are in place safe-guarding the welfare of workers, yet working conditions remain difficult for relatively little-pay (Pop. c. 2,300).

USUHUTA: Set. Major city in the c north of SAUA, in the north of the FARAVARI Forest, along the course of river TARROKO (Pop. c. 89,000).

USUKUN: Mil. Rnk. Name of elite shock troops in HOLOLACH^(1.). Historically, they were slave children from foreign lands raised in military academies, where they graduated as leaders and sharp-shooters. Today recruits are not slaves but children orphaned to war or whose fathers were killed in service. They are famed for their aims and it is not uncommon for them to sell their services to other nation in times of peace.

USUTH: Set. AHHAS city in the tribal territories of HAVATH in the south east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 35,000).

USUTHAE: Set. Small settlement in the south east of OKKHAM, along the isthmus that connects the peninsula of Okkham to the headland of KHURTAE. It is part of the SASACZHOT canal and controls one of the lochs along its course (Pop. c. 1,000).

UTAGHAN: Geo. Expansive coastal mountain-chain in the north of DURCHAA^(1.), running west-to-east for over 700-miles.

UTAN: Set. Major industrial city in the east of PHUT. It is also a stopping point along the BROKERS' ROAD trade route, specialising in repairing and storing caravans and other vehicles (Pop. c. 280,000).

UTANAR: Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTAL DESERT in the south east of SAMMAEA, along the TROPIC OF MAOCARHL. The desert is a wasteland of fused glass pillars and arches amid natural duststone monuments and crumbling caverns.

The region is categorised as a $\underline{\text{MODERATE THREAT}}$ by the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI}}$ Institute of Atramental Studies.

UTAND: Set. Settlement in the c south of TZALLRACH, at the fork between the river KARAR and its parent, the river USSAMA. It is acts as a hub for the refining of lodestone mined south, to the east of the KARARTA Mountains before being shipped downstream, to ARACHAI and SIMHAPARRAN, where it is traded away. The city is famed throughout TZALLRACH for its engineering of the banks of the river Karar near its peripheries (Pop. c. 50,000).

UTARUK: Myt. Leg. Legend prevalent in regions bordering the OLD

FOREST, including the east of ALMAGEST, north of KORACHAN, and the west of VÂRR. The legend speaks of a SPIRIT⁽³⁾ of the Old Forest, which manifests as a deer (or possibly possesses the deer), which protects a defined area, walking upright like a mortal. Its eyes glow green in the darkness and it harbours a thirst for the blood of those who trespass on sacred ground. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

UTASTES: Set. Coastal city in the far north east of the VESPERTINE LEAGUE (Pop. c. 72,400).

UTATROS: Rel. Str. Religious temple on the island of ATAROS in the SEA OF ERIA in c ARKOS^(1,).

UTEAND: Rvr. River in the east of AHKA, flowing east from sources in the ETRON Mountains before meeting its mouth in the STRAIT OF SKAROS.

UTELLN: Set. Settlement in the west of KERRAS PELLN (Pop. c. 6,500).

UTETROM: Geo. Island off the northern coast of KETESH, north east of the SEA OF BASSANDER, and part of the IKUAI DARBOW chain of island.

UTHA: Geo. Large plateau in the c of CUTH, in the west of the CAUAT badlands. It is surrounded by mesas, all of which are the remains of an ancient plain that was eroded by a now-dead river-system and harsh winds from the east.

Within Utha is a smaller region that is dominated by a gigantic $\underline{SOULSTONE}$ that protrudes from a cliff-face, surrounded by symmetrical mesas that may not be entirely natural in origin. Little is known of this region or its past, though it is suggested by local scholars and $\underline{LITHISTS}$ that its weathered faces bear the remnants of ancient etchings, possibly attributed to the $\underline{IRKALLA}^{(2)}$.

UTHAANI: Geo. Mountain range separating the west and east of the island of IRUGNA^(1.), largely serving as a border between the PARTHISAN colony of ABDAKROS^(1.) in the west, the native nation of Irugna^(2.) in the east and the MALEFACTOR HORDES in the south west.

UTHACAIA: 1. Set. City in the east of DANU, overlooking the SEA OF IPERIA. The city is built on a large promontory overhang that is affected by the western-most influence of the CHORHYST PHENOMENON. It is a centre of FIRMAMENTAL research and is home to a LITHIST college. It is thought that the region was settled by KORACHANI missionaries travelling east from LAGASH in c. 1530 RM (Pop. c. 52,000).

2. Set. City in KORACHAN, about 50-miles south east of NEKODA (Pop. c. 26,000).

UTHAGOT: Ind. Set. Crystal mines in the tribe of ORIM in the far west of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 6,000).

UTHESH: Mil. Str. Coastal fort in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of CARIA⁽⁴⁾, overlooking the SEA OF URAN.

UTHRA: Set. Settlement in the far west of GNOTH, along the western-most reaches of the SALPSAN forest (Pop. c. 6,000).

UTIMAN: Geo. Region in the c north of PORPHYR known for its many gold quarries. In 3841 RM the region severed contact with the capital, fortifying the quarries ahead of its intent to declare independence. Later in the same year Porphyri forces attacked the region, but its armies faltered in the difficult terrain.

The region is now heavily fortified and the capital of a growing contested region of over 90,000 square-miles, centred around the POROPHOSSYR Mountains (Pop. c. 845,000).

UTISAS THE ELDER: Leg. Traveller who described the settlement of AKHAR as '...a ruin that echoes a far brighter memory than its remnants can now attest to, the settlement is a tomb, its few residents little more than ghosts going about their routines seemingly oblivious to the fate of the structures around them.'

UTLATH: Lak. Artificial lake in the region of KOLRAUTELIOCH in the c of THE OLD FOREST. An ancient granite quarry, the region was abandoned millennia past and remains now as an artificial lake around 35 squaremiles.

UTO: Pol. One of the FIVE-AND-SIXTY FEUDAL STATES of SAUA, located around the ISINU Mountain. The state is home to the KITARA family, the head of which is the IRON KING, Isarnon.

UTON: Set. Small city in the c north west of GNOTH, in the AEARN Wetlands. Its main industry is rice cultivation, and it is a part of the GNOTHI ROAD trade-route (Pop. c. 6,000).

UTOR, BATTLE OF: His. War. Battle that took place in the east of KARAKHAS in 2374 RM, between forces of the KORACHANI EMPIRE and two CHAPTERS^(2.) of the WHITE LEAGUE. The battle ended in the defeat of the League's forces, which were left crippled for some centuries after.

UTRASAAR: 1. Geo. Island in the far north east of MENISCEA, just south west of the KORACHANI colony of CRASSULA.

2. Rui. Abandoned fort on the above island. It was constructed by KORACHANI colonists in c. 2900 RM but was abandoned just over 100-years later, and remains ruined to this day.

UTRERIA: Set. City in north east of the TARAHID ANNEXES. It was the capital between 1932 and 2002 RM, where it was prosperous dominating land trade in and out of TARAHA and into PARTHIS. A large earthquake that devastated most of the east of the Tarahid Annexes in 2000 RM reduced much of its administrative district to rubble and the capital was moved to TANTALUM, which was more central and had a well-establish power-base. Since then, it has grown considerably, partially due to the increased trade brought by its location along the PARTHISAN ROAD trade-route (Pop. c. 140,000).

UTRIN OF USEAS: m. Pol. His. Per. (B. 2486 – D. 2509 RM) Prince of TISHANNA⁽²⁾ and heir to the throne upon his death in 2509 RM. He was handsome and well regarded by the common people, whom he loved back, often literally.

He was killed when an unmarked royal caravan he was travelling with was attacked by ABATTURI insurgents, an act that ultimately drew Tishanna into the war, which it won in 2511 RM leading to it redrawing the borders between the two states, which it policed over the next centuries.

UTTARANDUR: Set. Small coastal settlement in the north west of the PANTHEON ISLES. Its main industry is fishing (Pop. c. 7,500).

UTTERU: Rel. Obj. Golden idol in the TAMAR ILLIDU pass in the north east of N'RAKH, shaped in the image of its birthing-goddess, MAALKAT. It is a cyclopean object, over 200-feet tall, its surface tarnished and covered in the dirt of millennia, mosses and vines. The idol was created in c. 800 RM after the dominance of the AANTH was established in the area.

UTTHRAN: Geo. Reef in the west of the CORAL BARONIES, in the south west of SAMMAEA, in the western waters of the IHEDROUR ITRUSH.

UTTRAI: Sec. Small city in the west of SABIA, in the region of URGRORD. It lies along the northern POLAR CIRCLE and its main industry is the mining of Iron. It is close to the supranatural feature of PETRUDARA, otherwise known as the Wall of Spirits (Pop. c. 17,200).

UTTRAN: Dem. 'uttrant'. Oth. HALFBLOODED bloodline (HOUSE) native to the north east of EASTERN LLACHATUL and who predominantly live in the nation of ABATTUR, with expatriated individuals found in various cities in MEHITIEL, and SATARIEL, with most found in TISARA.

Little is known of the bloodline's earliest millennia of history, though their PRIMOGENITOR ISRAPHAEL – the OTHERWORLDER who gave rise to them – sired three distinct matrilineal lines that mingled in the latter days of FOURTH AGE, leading to the homogenised people that inherited lands in the north east of the region of TISHANNA^(1.) in the early FIFTH AGE, which became known as ABATTUR. From here, individuals and small family groups – many of them pariahs or exiles – slowly spread into human cities and nations that surrounded them, particularly the nation of Tishanna^(2.).

The uttrani inherited the skeletal frames, pallid skin, and elongated faces of their primogenitor, and have proportionately small jet-black eyes and subtle noses with vertical slitted nostrils, though the more fantastical aspects of Israphael's physiognomy were lost. Accounts from the early fifth Age mention one of the three matrilineal lines possessing bifurcated limbs with vestigial secondary forearms and hands, but these were lost amid millennia of homogenisation across the three matrilineal lines in which their unique were lost.

By the rise of the Fifth Age and the appearance of the MORTAL descendants of the NAHORIAN empire into the region, the uttrani had become a singular people, with their own culture, which revolved around the worship of Israphael, who remains an important cultural and religious figure to this day, cementing their racial identity.

Millennia of inbreeding has made the uttrani physically weak, with eyes particularly sensitive to bright light, and some individuals sometimes displaying physical characteristics more in line with their primogenitor (perhaps as rare 1 in 100,000 individuals over recent history), though they remain a long-lived people with most surviving around 180-220 years on average. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

UTTRANI SCHISM: Soc. War. His. A cultural and political revolution that took place in ABATTUR starting in c. 2470 RM. It followed the deification of the PRIMOGENITOR ISRAPHAEL in c. 2300 RM by the UTTRANI people, which led to the appearance of distinct rival sects over the next decades. These became increasingly antagonistic, with each believing its particular doctrine was the correct one. This led to a cultural revolution in Abattur by c. 2470 RM that saw conflict escalating. This schism eventually leeched into adjacent lands, including TISHANNA⁽²⁾, where many expatriated uttrani people had been living. Many cities in Tishanna expelled their halfblooded populations as a result, leading to more strife and, eventually, outright civil war in Abattur by 2502 RM.

Originally contained to Abattur, the war drew in Tishanna following the accidental slaying of prince UTRIN of USEAS in 2509 RM. Tishanna, being a far greater military power, was able to penetrate deep into Abattur, ending the war in 2511 RM. Tishanna appropriated a large strip of Abattur's western territories, drawing up new borders, which it policed. The uttrani people, their internal conflicts curtailed for the time-being, consolidated in what remained of their territories. The different sects of the cult of Israphael were made to make amends, though their differences could never be reconciled and remained, festering over the years.

UTTUMA: For. Old growth forest in the north east of ABATTUR, in the region of TISHANNA. Most of the Tishanna was once a forest, but this was cut down to make way for farmlands over thousands of years throughout the FOURTH and FIFTH AGES, and Uttuma is one of few remaining examples of note.

It is very dense, with an uneven floor marked by the rotten husks of centuries-old trees and other flora, which are largely undisturbed by mortals.

UTUA: Set. Settlement in the c of VENTHIR, along the course of the river MAPHANI^(2.). its main industry is cotton cultivation, and much of its produce is sold to merchants travelling the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 9,500).

UTULLTAR: Geo. Large mountain-chain in the c of MENISCEA, serving as a border between the south east of CEHOPHELA, the north east of SHAZGIN, and the south west of IMEAL.

UTUARA: also 'the Sand Ghosts' or 'the Lightning Desert'. Geo. Highland desert, around 200-square miles, in the c north of EPHATTA, in the south of WESTERN SAMMAEA, that is dominated by fused sand structures akin to wretched trees, thought to be the result of ancient lightning storms in the area. Whatever sand existed when the formations were created it long gone, and these glass-like structures create an eerily sterile forest-like formation.

UTULAR: Set. Small fortified coastal settlement in the south of the SARASTROAN colony of IPSISSIMA^(1.). Its main industry is fishing (Pop. c. 2,000).

UVILLA: Ser. City in the far south east of SKAROS. It is a major link in the RED ROUTE and has a large hospital and many hostels that cater to the many caravans and travellers that pass through it. It is also home to the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES, whose scholars have been studying the effects of Atramental corruption since the institutes' founding in 581 RM (Pop. c. 47,000).

UVVADA: Set. City in the c south of HABOT, in the far west of the ELLSALEN^(3,) basin. It was once a prosperous coastal city, though the slow waning of ELYDEN'S seas, exacerbated in the region due to the shallow ELLSALEN^(1,) sea, had left it landlocked by c. 3450 RM, though it remained close to the river DARAYANDI, the course of which was altered over the years to bring it closer to the city.

The city diminished following this, though it remained in a central position linking the far east of Habot with the rest of the nation (Pop. c. 42,000)

UWAER: Mil. Str. Coastal fortress in the north east of SAGITTARIA, overlooking the far west of the INNER SEA, and guarding the northernmost trade-route east into ALTHA⁽²⁾.

UXAKODRA: Rvr. River in the c of SERROK, flowing south east for 287-miles from various sources, including the HAMAIADON Mountains, before meeting its parent, the river KETH ARAKODRA.

UY: Set. Coastal settlement in the west of THE VORANDINE, overlooking the BAY OF LASHA. Its main industry is the harvesting of EVOLAM kelp that is vital to various modern ATRAMENTAL industries, including CLONING and FLESHWRIGHTING (Pop. c. 5,500).

UYAMIN: Mil. Str. Fortress in the far north east of KREM, guarding the trade-route east into RHEA.

UYRUD: Sea. Bay in the south west of OSSIEL, leading to the harbour beyond which the capital city ILLATHURIA lies.

UZABE: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the far north of TZALLRACH, 35-miles south east of the city of AMUANNA. It guards those travelling the GREAT ROAD trade-route.

UZACYIA: Sec. Coastal settlement on the north of the island of KILAWADA in FALLAROUR, in the south west of SAMMAEA. It is an agricultural centre on the island, and produces legumes and rice for the capital in OIZYSH (Pop. c. 8,000).

UZAGANDAR: Pol. Set. Capital city CAMAU in the south west of EASTERN MENISCEA. It is home to a major arena-temple of the DANCING DEITY (Pop. c. 77,000).

UZANIA: Set. Coastal settlement in the north west of TZALLRACH (Pop. c. 6,000).

UZATLLA: Set. City in the south of the ABUAYA region of north western TZALLRACH. It is a mercantile city, falling along the course of the GREAT ROAD, and is home to the offices of many merchant houses from across CENTRAL LLACHATUL (Pop. c. 25,800).

UZEKOWAN: Sec. City in the c of KREM. It is a major producer of leathers, hides and velum (Pop. c. 32,000).

UZRANA: Mys. One of three houses of BLOOD MAGICK, most closely associated with the strengthening of the body and healing.

UZZIA: Rui. Ruined city in the MALAKANI PENINSULA, in the south east of BROR^(1.). The city was once a chorsair stronghold though was abandoned in c. 3892 RM following SHAUATASI efforts succeeded in neutralising the threat. It remains now as a ruin overlooking the SEA OF MALAKA, a reminder to those who would continue its tradition.

VA'ALOMON: Rui. Ancient ruined citadel in the c south west of LAOD.
Dating back to the FOURTH AGE, it is believed to have been the abode of a powerful SHAPER and was surrounded by concentric lines of bastions, which are now ruined. The citadel is perched on striking flysch stone formations that are set at an angle.

VAAL: Set. Small city in the region of SODALOR in the c north of THE SURRACH. It has a large population of SAVI natives from the south (Pop. c. 16.400).

VAALK: Dem. 'Vaalkan'. Ntn. Situated in the north of SAMMAEA, along a large peninsula protruding into the INNER SEA, Vaalk is of a warm dry cool climate, and is noted for its rocky terrain, particularly in the north and west. Its coastline is renowned for its many natural harbours and inlets, around which many cities, some of them thousands of years old, have appeared.

Vaalk, as it is known today, is a relatively young nation, having become a part of the LOW-EMPIRE of SARASTRO in 3737 RM following decades of cultural and political pressure from the east and, previously, millennia of KORACHANI rule (it was originally subjugated by the KORACHANI EMPIRE in the eve of 20 RM). The WAR OF SUNDERING saw Vaalk (then known as VAALTHA) remain loyal to the northern empire, though it suffered greatly against LIDEAN and Sarastroan blockades and various land battles. Despite ending the war as a Korachani vassal, Vaaltha eventually fell to Sarastro following years of isolation from its parent state, trade embargoes and blockades, and political coercion from Sarastro, leading to its capitulation in 3737 RM following a short war. Korachani citizens choosing to do so were peacefully repatriated to the HEARTLAND, as was the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. Over the coming years many imperial structures were felled to make way for new temples in the style adopted by the REFORMED CHURCH OF SARASTRO.

Vaaltha had a history of religious unrest, following centuries of institutionalised organised crime and deep-rooted corruption within the highest echelons of the Church of the Undying Machine, as well as its main ruling political body, known as the HEPTARCHY. Both of these institutions had their heads severed in 2309 RM, as the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR himself descended upon the nation at the head of an army that targeted the strongholds of the crime lords, eliminating them in one fell swoop. Over many months hundreds of thousands of people were slain, many of them innocents caught in the crossfire.

This left a mark on the people of Vaaltha, and many turned away from religion to a more secular form of self-enlightenment that borrowed from the martial traditions of its past. This became known as the martial philosophy of TAARAN VALA, and by the time of the Sarastroan subjugation of Vaaltha it had grown more popular than the Church of the Undying Machine. Hesitant of stirring the hornet's nest, Sarastro wisely chose to allow the belief to flourish, and it was decided early to not introduce a state religion to Vaalk, and it remains the only nation in the Sarastroan empire to not have an enforced religion to this day.

The people of Vaalk respect martial traditions, and put little faith in material wealth. They consider the mortal VESSEL to be sacred, to the point that they do not condone the use of mortal bodies in the manufacturing of DROSS – the only extant nation to refuse to eat dross produced elsewhere. Another tradition that is unique to Vaalk is the fashion of growing one's hair as dreadlocks, which are seen as a sign of strength and virility. Though originally there were strict customs dictating what length dreadlocks could be grown to and by what social classes, these rules have become more relaxed over time. Most common amongst HELOTS and FREEMEN, the custom has lost traction amongst the patrician classes, where many individuals try to adhere to foreign social mores. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

VAALKAN: His. Lan. Now-extinct language spoken in ancient VAALK, prior to its subjugation by the KORACHANI EMPIRE. The language was eventually supplanted by KORACHANI, until its eventual disappearance in c. 2000 RM. See Vol II: Languages.

VAALKAN CRUSADE: see CRUSADE, VAALKAN.

VAALKAN DUST WRESTLING: Gam. Soc. Sport common in VAALK, with roots dating back to the early FIFTH AGE, when the land was still independent. It remains wildly popular in Vaalk to this day, with influential competitors becoming rich and famous from their exploits, hailed as celebrities as they move from arena to arena.

Indeed, the popularity of dust wrestling in Vaalk is so ingrained in its culture that it is one of the few SARASTROAN territories in which KU'KU NAL WRESTLING never gained a foothold, and there exists a rivalry between the two sports to this day. See Vol II: Games and Pastimes.

VAALKAN KISS: Soc. Common name around the INNER SEA REGION for a head butt. Ancient VAALKAN mercenaries were notorious for giving debilitating head butts.

VAALKAN LEGION, the: Mil. Org. Militant order based in the fortress of NAL SARA in VAALK. Recruitment is open to any non-slave of any race or nationality, provided they are not slaves and are legally in Vaalk, so manumission papers or passports are required to join. Those serving for 5-years are granted Vaalkan citizenship (those injured in battle may apply for citizenship after 2-years instead).

The legion is a part of the Vaalkan (and, by extension, the SARASTROAN) army and is known for its foreign operations and the tight bond its often-disparate members develop over the course of their training. The legion is relatively well-equipped and is considered an elite force by the standards of most military forces around THE INNER SEA, and though it is independent of the Vaalkan military, it often works with it, under the behest of the Vaalkan government.

VAALKAN WALL: Geo. Sheer granite cliff in the c of VAALK, west of the SEA OF BASSANDER. The cliff is around 100-miles long and at its highest is 80-ft. high. It is riddled with tall narrow labyrinthine caves, some of which connect, which have been home to varying groups and fauna in different periods in history.

VAALTHA: His. Nm. Following the KORACHANI attack and subjugation of VALKA in 19 RM, the region was renamed Vaaltha (the KORACHANI name for the region since around -100 RM, and what would later be known as VAALK). Exerting its influence over dozens of rival states in quick succession, the Korachani forces consolidated their position over the next few years before eventually moving east of the ARIS Mountains, into what they believed to be further Valkan territories. In truth the imperial armies were marching into the AMANNI territories of the YARAOMIC PEOPLE, razing villages, appropriating caravans, and taking people as slaves, all the while with them offering the barest of resistance. Korachani forces slowly expanded the borders east over the next centuries.

The capital was moved from the ancient city of GILAM ASH to ANAKARRA in 223 RM, which remained capital until the nations' defection to the LOW-EMPIRE of SARASTRO in 3736 RM.

Between 759 R and 2309 RM Vaaltha was ruled by the HEPTARCHY, whose neglect of far parts of their state allowed organised crime to there to fester. By c. 2300 RM both the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE and the government had become highly corrupt. In 2309 RM the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR led imperial forces in an attack of criminal strongholds across Vaaltha, which obliterated their operations in the nation. Despite the effectiveness of the attacks, the offensive led to unwarranted levels of collateral damage and tens of thousands of innocents killed. Malichar abolished the Heptarchy, replacing them with a government chosen by himself. In the years following this the Church of the Undying machine lost influence in Vaaltha.

By the time of the WAR OF SUNDERING, the church had become weak, with the martial philosophy of TAARAN VALA becoming more popular, connecting the people of Vaaltha with their ancient martial roots. During the War Vaaltha remained a loyal Korachani territory but the capital city, Anakarra, defected to Sarastro on the $9^{\rm th}$ of SATAVALEN 3704 RM, leading to a civil war that lasted until the signing of the Sarastroan Treaty on the $23^{\rm rd}$ of Satavalen the next year.

Though Vaaltha was one of the few imperial nations south of the INNER
SEA to remain loyal to the high-empire following the SUNDERING OF THE
KORACHANI EMPIRE, it was not to last.

KYDONIA and other regions in the south east of Vaaltha were vocal in their desire to remain part of the High-empire, with protests and armed conflict dominating the decades following the Sundering. Its isolation from the HEARTLAND was to be its undoing though, and it was unable to defend against the near-constant Sarastroan pushback, which culminated in an organised blockade of Kydonia (which was the centre of the discordant factions) in 3735 RM, leading to starvation and an eventual end to the riots, leading to the full capitulation of Vaaltha to Sarastro in 3737 RM.

This led to further scattered rioting in the capital Anakarra as those last loyalists to the heartland attacked those who sought capitulation. The governor's palace in Anakarra was sacked just after the public announcement was made to Sarastroan force, which promptly began entering Anakarra and other cities. Some cities received them without mishap, while others denied them entry, leading to open battles. In Anakarra, the Sarastroan delegation made landfall and rapidly took control of the governor's palace.

Between 3736 and 3740 RM, Sarastro began peaceful repatriation efforts in Vaaltha, with transport arranged for Korachani citizens to make their way north back to Korachani territories. The Church of the Undying Machine was also evicted from Vaaltha, though its members were given the choice to convert to the Reformed Church of Sarastro. Few accepted the offer, and over the coming decades, church structures were either converted to the Sarastroan faith, or demolished to make way for new structures.

The REFORMED CHURCH OF SARASTRO rapidly established itself in Vaaltha, which was officially renamed VAALK (the Sarastroan name for the region), and followers of the Taaran Vala and the ORDER OF THE BLOODY HAND were allowed to openly practice their faiths, likely due to the regions' past history of violence in relation to religious change and Sarastro not wanting a repeat of events in Karakhas. This made Vaalk the only Sarastroan vassal to have no state religion. See Vol III: Extinct States.

VAAREDEN: Geo. Scrub plains in the c west of KAZZAR⁽²⁾, in the north of SAMMAEA. It is relatively level, sloping at a gentle incline from the BAY OF RIPAA, and is characterised by sparse scrub woodland and grasslands.

VAARON: Geo. Island off the northern coast of KETESH, north east of the SEA OF BASSANDER, and part of the IKUAI DARBOW chain of island.

VAATRA: Set. City in the c of BAATRA (Pop. c. 38,000).

VABAH: Pol. Ser. Capital city of ZAKRON. It is home to the most elaborate and expansive CANOPIC ENGINES of all of the nation, and is home to the most revered of the GOD-ANCESTORS, who is the ruler of the nation. The city itself is home to many technologists and technarcanists who oversee the great engines that keep its ruler conscious (Pop. c. 108,500).

VABBARAI: 1. Geo. Island just 2-miles off the south western coast of the PANTHEON ISLES, overlooking the LIMOTHAN CHANNEL.

2. Set. Coastal city in the south west of the PANTHEON ISLES, on the eponymously-named island. It is home to a large naval base, where ships that patrol the LIMOTHAN CHANNEL are based (Pop. c. 45,000).

VABBOITRUR: Set. Small coastal city on the island of AATHRICE, in the far south of the PANTHEON ISLES. It is one of few settlements in the PANTHEON ISLES with permission to breed MONOCEROUSES. Today it pays its tithe to the crown in the form of monocerouses, many of which are ultimately exported at great profit (Pop. c. 14,000).

VABES: Set. Coastal city in the south west of SERROK, along the fertile delta of the river BEREKODRA. It is a major producer of rice and legumes (Pop. c. 30,000).

VABET: Set. Settlement in the south west of SERROK, just south of the capital in ACYOTTAGOD. It is a major producer of rice and legumes (Pop. c. 5,000).

VACATUR: Mil. Str. Fortress in the c of THE SURRACH, overlooking the ATRAMENTAL WASTES of KOBIAN. The fort is populated by a group of ATRAMENTISTS who work to keep the encroaching wastes of Kobian at bay in the hopes of one day removing it, opening the ruins of URHAGNATT to exploration.

VACHECHOS: Set. Fortified city in the north east of THE OLD FOREST, close to the border with SHOTHA, with which it has been known to trade (Pop. c. 40,000).

VACIVA: Geo. Stony desert dominating the c and north west of ROMOREA^(2.), in the far north east of the rift valley of Romorea^(1.). It lies in the rain shadow of the STRAMINEA Mountains and is thought to be growing in size as the rift valley to its south slowly expands.

The desert contains various ruins and traces of ancient habitation, including the TOWER OF LHUKH, the pits of ZITERKARR, and HOU LATANI.

VACIYAN: Set. Settlement in the c south of RAONGEN^(2.), to the south of the SHANII Mountain (Pop. c. 7,200).

VACUUM AIRSHIP: Int. Sup. Veh. A form of dirigible ship that uses spheres of treated aluminium that are evacuated of all air to form a vacuum, allowing the attached vehicle to float. Though such vehicles can technically operate anywhere in ELYDEN, the constraints on their dimensions outside of the sphere of influence of the TRUE MENISCUS, largely precludes their use in the NEAR HEMISPHERE.

However, they are relatively common in the FAR HEMISPHERE, particularly within 60° of the True Meniscus, where GRAVITIC WAVES help to increase their proportionate load bearing capabilities, allowing them to exist in sizes that are commercially viable, far exceeding the sizes allowed by SKYSKIFFS. Larger vacuum airships will have dozens of arrays of vacuum spheres, with each array having up to 4 large reinforced aluminium spheres. The aluminium used in their construction is a FIRMAMENTAL alloy and is specially treated to withstand the strain of the vacuum within them. Other materials are too heavy and would negate the benefits of the vacuum spheres.

They are forced to follow Set routes established along known gravitic wave currents, and cannot stray from those routes – should they do so, they will gradually slow down and lose altitude until they run aground.

VADIA: Set. Small fortified city in the north east of ATARAXIA, relatively close to the border with SKAROS. It forms part of the RED ROUTE, and its soldiers patrol the route and border against Skarosian attentions (Pop. c. 14,000).

VADJAAK: Plr. 'Vadjaakin'. Mor. Corrupted DVERGAI known for their gangly bodies, emaciated appearance and paper-thin skin. Like their dverg forebears, they are hairless, with large dark eyes and ashen skin. The vadjaakin were dvergai who forsook the embrace of the sun, seeking instead the refuge of cold earth and darkness. They are most common in the south west of SAMMAEA, including BELEGOR, SYNCHTHONITHA and GRARNEÂST and can be found in the IRON MAZE OF DHARGUSHAN, where they subsist on mosses and plaid vermin far from direct sunlight.

Little is known of their culture, but it is believed that they were exiled from the FOURTH AGE dverg empire of IUJACHTHÉ following the enactment of the so-called IRON TREATY, for some transgression that is now unremembered. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

VADREN: Set. Settlement in the south of AHRISHEN, in the LEVANTINE region. The settlement is partially located on the edge of a sinkhole and caverns and is known for its indrik breeders (Pop. c. 9,500).

VAEL SUMI: Rvr. River in the west of THE SURRACH, flowing west for 500-miles from sources in the far west of the NGHALLEAL Mountains before meeting with lake KAL ADHI. The river was dammed in 3945 RM, leading to the dwindling of lake Kal adhi, which in turn resulted in the abandonment of various small settlements along the old shore of the lake which is now littered with the rusted hulks of grounded ships.

VAELDRAN: Geo. Mountains in the far north east of KOMMEA, forming a part of the greater HOLLOW COASTLINE chain.

VAERN: Geo. North western promontory of the VARRACHON Mountain, in THE OLD FOREST.

VAETULK: Set. Major coastal city in the south east of VAEVECTA, overlooking the entrance into the BAY OF ERCHIAR (Pop. c. 115,000).

VAEVECTA: Dem. 'Vaevectan'. 1. His. Ntn. Now-extinct early FIFTH AGE kingdom in the south east of MENISCEA. It emerged in c. 940 RM following decades of war through the actions of the first generation HALFBLOOD ISTAR, who were able to unite the disparate cultures of the region (which included scattered descendants of failed KORACHANI colonies) through their use of the CRUCIBLE OF THE ACCORD – above which conquered rulers would cut their palms, allowing their blood to mingle with that of their peers in a symbolic gesture of alliance.

The kingdom prospered for many years under the leadership of the timeless Istar, though like many others it declined to corruption, particularly following Istar's eventual death in 1612 RM after over six centuries of rule. Its territories were divided amongst the dozens of tribal rulers who maintained a semblance of unity through a confederacy of petty kingdoms, and in so doing their crown, now remembered only as the TWISTED CROWN, was lost for decades.

The confederacy eventually fragmented in c. 2140 RM following years of strife and continued corruption and mismanagement of resources. Over the ensuing years its ruin would give rise to the nations of <a href="https://doi.org/10.2016/nn.2

The people of Vaevecta were renowned for a genetic mutation that caused them to have violet irises, which is as close to a marker as any in determining if someone has Vaevectan ancestry.

Vaevecta survives today in the form of a descendant state^(2,) that occupies the far east of its former territories, overlooking the entrance into the SEA OF SIPARIA. See Vol III: Extinct States.

2. Ntn. Small independent nation in the south east of MENISCEA. It emerged from the earlier nation of Vaevecta⁽¹⁾ in c. 2200 RM and its early rulers wore the crown that is known today as the TWISTED CROWN. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

VAEVECTAN TRAIL: Com. Geo. Major trade route in the east of MENISCEA in the former territories of VAEVECTA^(1.), including extant VAEVECTA^(2.), VECTIS, AHOPAH, and CHAUTULA, and it also extends west into VALA, and south into IMELKOT. See Vol II: Major Trade Routes.

VAGAUTH: Set. Small industrial city in the north east of AZAZEM, known for its metalworking (Pop. c. 2,000).

VAGGOTHA: see FESTERWOOD.

VAGNOSTAN: 1. Geo. Expansive mountain-range in LLACHATUL, serving as a border between the north of GNOTH and RAONGEN⁽²⁾.

2. Mys. In GNOTHI MYSTICISM, Vagnostan was the father of AGABERA.

VAGANT COHORT: Soc. Tec. Rnk. Itinerant TECHNOLOGISTS common across the PORPHYRI PENINSULA. Their origins lie in the Fourth Age, and they were acolytes of the scion TELEANYARA APEXEIDE and missionaries of the cult of NYARALA. They scavenged the THIRD AGE ruins of the KATHAR BYAAT kingdoms and the later EHLBEZUNI empire for technarcana that they shared with the survivors of the WAR OF SCOURGING.

Today they are respected individuals, travelling across $\underline{PORPHYR}$, $\underline{SABAISA}$, and $\underline{ANANTHUL}$, where they offer their services as tinkerers and menders. They are known for their many orthoses, and technarcana, many of which are relics of the $\underline{THIRD\ AGE}$, of which they have constructed from scratch.

Some of their number settled the early FIFTH AGE nation of SARASHAN, where they would go on to become influential, with their descendants eventually becoming its rulers.

VAGANT DYNASTY: Pol. Ruling dynasty of the early FIFTH AGE nation of SARASHAN, in what is now the west of PORPHYR. The dynasty took control of Sarashan in 213 RM and ruled until its demise in 823 RM.

VAGASH: 1. Pol. Soc. One of dozens of tribal peoples that populated the HAMSHEN plains c. -1500 – -1100 RM, before the rise of the NATHI KINGDOMS around the city of Nath in c. -1100 RM.

2. Soc. His Name used by the NATHI people to describe their so-called golden age, between -600 and -250 RM, after which corruption and the LION HERESIES effectively destroyed Nath.

VAHALTHO: Geo. Island off the eastern coast of CHEIRA.

VAHANA: Set. Major city in the far east of CHAUTULA that forms a part of the VAEVECTAN TRAIL. (Pop. c. 228,000).

VAHANAR CANDAN: m. Pol. Per. (B. 3937 RM) The ruler of the city of ALMAGEST since 3979 RM. He is seen by most as a harsh ruler, but is largely considered to be fair, thinking of the good of the city over all else, and he has even antagonised patricians with his actions. He has been at odds with the SOCIALIST REPUBLIC OF ALMAGEST for some time due to the enforced military conscription that has plagued the city for the past few years, causing its economy to falter.

VAIAKHAR: Also, 'the First City'. Set. Small city in the CITIZENRY OF THALI. It features heavily in many legends of the region, where it is described as the first mortal city. Though it has a long and storied history dating to at least the FOURTH AGE, it is unknown how true this claim in fact is. It was once the site of an ancient battle between SERAPIS and other MORTALS, in which hundreds of thousands are believed to have died indeed mortal remains are still sometimes found by farmers and shepherds outside the city to this day (Pop. c. 19,000).

VAIALLRA: Set. Coastal settlement in the far north of SABAISA. Its main industry is fishing (Pop. c. 7,000).

VAIAMMESHI: Geo. Wide valley dominating the north of the north east of HABOT, between the MAR SAHIGH Mountains in the north, and the MOROSIGHI Mountains on the south.

VAIARUNDRRA: Set. Coastal settlement in the c east of the PANTHEON ISLES, along the narrow 4-miles-wide isthmus between the mainland and the BHALASSIAN PENINSULA⁽¹⁾. It is famed for its canal that crosses the isthmus, linking the waters of the MYMEREA with the narrow waterways of the Pantheon Isles, allowing sea travel to bypass the tainted waters of the ESTRALLON, via the north (Pop. c. 8,000).

VAIAUANTI: Rvr. Major river dominating the south east of HABOT, flowing south and east for over 1,060-miles from sources in the MAR SAHIGH, EMMIGHI, and MOROSIGHI Mountains before meeting the coast at the north of the SEA OF AMMASH^(2.).

The river was once much shorter in length, emptying into the now-extinct SEA OF ELLSALEN⁽¹⁾. Its eventual drying between the 32nd and 35th centuries saw the river more than double in length, reaching its present course, which meanders lazily through the Ellsalen⁽³⁾ basin, forming an expansive wetland region around 60-miles from the coast known as SARALAL. The river's delta has expanded greatly over the years and continues to expand east, threatening to cut off the Bay of Ellsalen⁽²⁾.

VAIAURA: also 'the Coral Forest'. Geo. Coastal area, encompassing some 400-miles of coast and 85,000-square-miles of land in the south east of HABOT in the south west of SAMMAEA, overlooking the SEA OF

AMMASH⁽²⁾. The area was revealed by withdrawing sea-levels between c. 2890 and 3400 RM, and grew steadily over the next centuries as the waters continued to retreat beyond the region's shallow coastal shelf.

Originally a series of islands to the south of a long narrow lagoon, the lagoon eventually disappeared as corals and the sea floor were slowly revealed with waning sea levels. The area is renowned for its salt formations and coral forests – sun-bleached coral formations that remain as echoes of the once beautiful coloured formations that thrived just beneath the lagoons and waters of Vaiaura – and the remains of unnumbered sea-creatures that were left dead as the seas retreated. The ruins of settlements that once graced the shores of this once-beauteous sea remain, some of them clinging to life, making a living shaping the coral that is 'farmed' in the region.

VAIK RETH: Set. Small city in the c south west of ALAM BETHYL in the territory of GELAH^(1.) in the northern foothills of the NARAHASAPHAEL Mountains. It is made up of hundreds of sheep farming communities, and collectively its people are known as expert shearers makers of wool products (Pop. c. 12,500).

VAILLA: Pol. Org. Inner circle of the PLAINSLEAGUE in TEMUJA.

VAIR: Geo. Pass along the northern-most reaches of the POROPHOSSYR
Mountains, serving as one of few safe ways across. In 3841 the pass was claimed by the city of UTIMAN, which had declared independence from PORPHYR. This ultimately led to a schism between the west and east of the nation, bringing Porphyr increasingly close to fracture.

 \underline{VAIRID} : Set. Small city in the c south west of THE VORANDINE (Pop. c. 7,200).

VAITRA: Set. Small city in the south of THE VORANDINE. Its main industry is the mining and drying of ALVELITE, which is transported west to the city of NYCARAT for further refining (Pop. c. 7,000).

VAKAR: Rvr. Expansive wetlands area dominating the c east of the DOMAINS OF SHAUATAS.

VAKKELAR: Soc. Org. One of the 17 Grand Houses of the Nacre League. House Vakkelar is a leader in the maritime trade and shipbuilding industries. With strongholds in both the Ammashi Peninsula, and UhbataQ^(1.) headland in the east, the House controls various harbours and coastal warehouses along the length of the Nacre Road trade-route, and it also oversees the construction and maintenance of merchant ships, particularly in the Sea of Etagira. It also plays a crucial role in the naval defence of the Nacre Road, particularly against Maenmisti privateers.

VAKKIL: Pol. Com. Rnk. political and economic advisors common in the south of SAMMAEA in nations that host the NACRE ROAD. Their members are drawn from the noble LEAGUE HOUSES that control the NACRE LEAGUE and are most common in SIMBARA and AKANTHRA, where they are incredibly influential individuals.

It is no secret that they often work in the interests of the League or their own Houses and that corruption is rampant. The persistent rumours that the Vakkils form a secretive intelligence network that benefits the Nacre League remain unproven, though many politicians from across the Nacre Road territories have levelled accusations against them over the years, none of which have ever proven true.

VALA 1. Dem. 'Valan'. Nm. Nation in the east of MENISCEA. It is member of the a FEDERATION OF FREE NATIONS OF MENISCEA. It emerged from the older far-ranging empire of VALARIM, that collapsed early in the FIFTH AGE. Its people follow the philosophy known as the ALEMBIC PATH. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

2. Set. Large city in the east of the $\underline{\text{HENDECARCHY}}$ of $\underline{\text{HATON}}$, in the north of $\underline{\text{MALAN}}$. It is a coastal city, located some 120-miles within the creek of $\underline{\text{LKOR}}$, where the traditional fishing fleets of its past have been replaced by drydocks and shipyards (Pop. c. 170,000).

VALAHA: Set. Major fortified city in the far north east of Virahan, close to the border with Baatan. It is a major mercantile city and trades in goods from the north (Pop. c. 105,300).

 $\underline{\text{VALAIS}}$: Geo. Grasslands in the east of $\underline{\text{TETHYSIA}}$, to the south of $\underline{\text{LYSITEAS}}$.

VALAMER, THE HALF-FACE: (B. 3893) Med. VÂRRAN surgeon who spent many years as a field-surgeon attached to IMPERIAL armies in RHAMIA, fighting AHRISHEN. He was wounded by shrapnel in 3996 RM, his face horrifically disfigured. After this, he spent years studying how to mask his wounds, and helped pioneer the field of plastic surgery in the KORACHANI EMPIRE.

VALAMIR: 1. Pol. His. Ancient bridge in the south of HOAMM (originally the south of KORACHAN), just 10-miles north east of the city of PALUN, constructed between 101 – 117 RM by the proxy ruler RUGGORATH.

It was no secret that few in court approved of his appointment, despite him being personally chosen as a relatively unknown SHAPER by the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR himself. After a particularly trying meeting between him, THE SEVEN and the CONSULITE, he was called out for being a pretender, that he was not fit to rule, and that the people would only follow him if he could walk across the BAY OF GRESS, implying that it would never happen.

Taking the insult as a challenge, he ordered the construction of a massive bridge spanning the steep sides of the bay. It was a monumental task that took decades to accomplish. Ironically, Ruggorath disappeared under suspicious circumstances in 105 RM, before the bridge was completed. By that point so much money and resources had been pumped into his vanity project that construction continued, albeit at a slower pace, and it was completed 12-years later, upon which point it became a major route connecting the disparate sides of the south of Korachan.

Receding sea levels have today left the bridge 4-miles from the coast, stranded, and largely useless. It remains now, ruined, disconnected from the ancient roads that it once served, a memory to the hubris of the empire.

2. Set. A settlement now exists at the base of the above bridge, with many structures constructed from stone and rubble recovered from the old bridge. Some dwellings have also appeared on the sides of its walls, which have been hollowed out in the search for new materials. The settlement guards the mouth of the river GRESS and is the only known entrance into inner HOAMM and lake Gress, where the metropolis of DORMIVEGLIA lies (Pop. c. 8,000).

VALANARA: Geo. Island in the c of the MAIDEN ISLES, off the south eastern coast of MENISCEA.

VALANT: Rel. Str. Monastery of the ORDER OF THE HEART, MIND AND BLADE, in the rugged hills in the south east of the ADALLA Mountains.

VALAR PRINCIPALITIES, the: Geo. Region in TEMUJA between the EROCH MAER and VALGHAR, east of the TAHNOL MAER, known for its nomads and pastoral people.

VALARCH: Geo. HOLOLACHI^(1.) island colony over 180-miles south east of its mainland territories, south of the BLACK MOUNTAINS, and west of ELBIA. It was originally a PARTHISAN colony, though was abandoned by c. 3720 RM following the silting of its harbour, and was repopulated by the Hololachi people in c. 3890 RM, with a new harbour built and fishing fleets supplying the mainland with food. Its vassal settlements also produce salt (Pop. c. 27,400).

VALARI: 1. Geo. Island off the south western coast of SEDISIA, in the SEA OF SERPENTS.

2. Set. Coastal city on the eponymous island off the south western coast of SEDISIA, known for its nearby leper colony (Pop. c. 12,500).

VALARI ROAD: Com. Geo. Trade route in the c south of WESTERN MENISCEA. It was a major continent-spanning trade route under the aegis of the VALARI empire, but the empire's collapse saw parts of the route fall into disuse. Today the central-most span of the route remains in use in the south of SHAZGIN, linking the EGETAKHAN ROAD in the west to the VAEVECTAN TRAIL in the east, bringing much wealth and commerce into Shazgin as a result.

VALARIM: 1. Dem. 'Valar!. His. Ntn. Early-to-mid FIFTH AGE empire that dominated the central south of the WESTERN MENISCEAN subcontinent, west of the SEA OF LARISH^(1.). It collapsed in c. 1150 RM and the present-day nations of FATH, ETUL, VALA, and the south of SHAZGIN all lie on its old territories. Its people founded the philosophy known as the ALEMBIC PATH, which continues to be followed in many of its descendant states. See Vol III: Extinct States.

2. Pol. Set. Capital city of SHAZGIN, named after the predecessor empire (1.). It remains in control of the old Valari trade route known as the VALARI ROAD, linking the EGETAKHAN ROAD in the west to the VAEVECTAN TRAIL in the east (Pop. c. 320,000).

VALARKHA: Ser. Colonial port built by KORACHAN during the height of its CRUSADES against the west in c. 3225 RM, on an island south of the BLACK MOUNTAIN, south west of HOLOLACH^(1.). Built on the ruins of a far earlier PARTHISAN colony known as FHALAR, it became incredibly wealthy and successful, though cultural changes, including diminishing enthusiasm for the crusades and the slow silting-up of its harbours left the place deserted by c. 3720 RM following the fragmentation of the Korachani empire.

The area was repopulated by Hololachi people in c. 3890 RM and is now a thriving colony, supplying fish and salt to the mainland, though is now known as VALARCH (Pop. C. 25,000).

VALASHNA: Ast. Comet that appears low in the NORTHERN HEMISPHERE approximately every 33 years. The yearly HAAGENTI METEOR SHOWER is associated with the comet Valashna, which was named by the ancient FIFTH AGE ALMAGESTI astronomer ERGEN in 52 RM.

VALASSIA: Geo. Rocky plains in western JURRAS^(2,), covered in sparse shrubland.

VALATAN: Rui. Ruined city once belonging to HRIDAN. It was abandoned in c. 2000 RM following the collapse of the small nation and its assimilation by AZAZEM.

VALATOON: Set. Settlement in the north west of CUTH (Pop. c. 8,000).

VALBAR: Dem. 'Valbaran'. 1. His. Pol. Historical annex of ALMAGEST that emerged in the centuries following the destruction of the Kingdom of THYTHIA by an alliance of KORACHANI and Almagesti armies in 1491 RM. The annex was instrumental in nearly exterminating the KEVERAN people who had inherited Thythia in what is now known as the FIRST SCOURING OF KEVER.

The annex was formally absorbed by Almagest in 2321 RM, leaving the northern $\underline{VALBARAN}$ PENINSULA unoccupied, allowing the Keveran people to survive unmolested over the next millennium.

Almagest grew confident in the wake of its newfound independence following its victory of the WAR OF THE ARTIFEXES and moved north to occupy all the peninsula, leading to the SECOND SCOURING OF KEVER, eventually establishing a government known as the PLUTOCRATIC CABINET to rule over this new territory. Within a few centuries these resources were wasted and industries began to leave and by c. 3460 RM only about 5% of its previous population remained, with most cities lying abandoned and crime and chaos rampant elsewhere.

The Plutocratic Cabinet founded an order of caretakers known as the SAHARLI to oversee the remaining settlements, which to all intents and purposes were fending for themselves. The Plutocratic Cabinet was disbanded in 3468 RM as Almagest withdrew its support, though the name continued to be used by the remaining people, whose claim to independence was formally recognised by Almagest in 3483 RM, and the nation was renamed VALBAR DHAI, which means New Valbar. See Vol III: Extinct States.

2. Nm. A coalition of five states in the far north of CENTRAL LLACHATUL, known for its frigid climate that ranges from subpolar (boreal) in the south, to polar in the north. It is home sparse boreal forests in the south that give way to permafrost, glaciers, and icefields in the north. Its centremost expanse is known as ESZALA, and is dominated by geothermally-active terrain, which is characterised by many hot springs, prismatic springs, geysers, fumaroles, and small volcanoes.

It is populated by a culture of people that emerged from the eponymous^(1.) ALMAGESTI annex that was abandoned in 3468 RM, which in turn had been appropriated many centuries earlier from the land of their distant ancestors, the KEVERAN people. The annex served as a vital centre of whaling, mining, logging, and other industries, but was abandoned as these resources began to wane and the cost of maintaining it grew increasingly prohibitive, A handful of cities, chief amongst them ABLATIA^(2.), chose to remain behind, eventually founding the nation of VALBAR DHAI, whose government collapsed in 3936 RM after a period of increased geothermal activity that disrupted its infrastructure. A new coalition of five states emerged in 3943 RM, which remains in power today in the form of the government known as THE CABINET, which has plutocratic elections every 7-years for 5 seats (one for each state), with a $6^{\rm th}$ seat occupied by an Almagesti representative. A defence pact was signed with Almagest in 3974 RM, forging further links between the two nations, allowing the greater power to establish military bases in the northern state.

Since gaining its independence, the coalition has been divided into two rough demographics – sparse cities in the south that are linked by a well-maintained infrastructure; and the hardy rural people of the north, who are largely self-sufficient and survive by fishing and hunting.

Valbar is peppered with the ruins of ancient industries – open cast mines long-since reclaimed by nature, disused pipelines, and abandoned logging outposts – all remnants from its days as an Almagesti annex. Some new industries have appeared since then, though not at the scale to rival its past incarnations.

Today it is known for its manufacture of fine FIREARMS, and its exportation of pure silver, which is highly valued across ELYDEN and which originates in the DREAMSCAPE of PIL AUSH that appeared in 3941 RM. It lies along the passage of the NULLAMBIT and the ARCANE TEMPERS there are weak, so the region never developed much of a shaping tradition.

The Valbaran people are followers of the ALMAGESTI TEMPLE, further cementing the ties with Almagest, and they are known for. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

VALBAR DHAI: also 'Confederacy of Valbar Dhai'. Dem. 'Valbaran'. His. Ntn. A short-lived nation predating extant VALBAR⁽²⁾ that originated as an annex and later colony of ALMAGEST, which was abandoned in 3468 RM. A few cities remained behind, eventually forming a confederacy that named itself Valbar Dhai. This confederacy was officially recognised by Almagest as an independent state in 3483 RM.

Ruled by the so-called PLUTOCRATIC CABINET, the state survived for four centuries before increased volcanic activity in the Eszala geothermal region beginning in c. 3920 RM began to wreak havoc on the interior of Valbar Dhai. Major thoroughfares linking distant cities together were cut off from one another, leading to strain on the capital in ABLATIA⁽²⁾. The Plutocratic Cabinet struggled over the next years, as eruptions increased, and it eventually collapsed in 3936 RM as an increasingly desperate public called for action.

After seven years of chaos a new coalition government emerged in 3943 RM, calling itself THE CABINET. It divided the old territories of Valbar Dhai into five states, that became known as Valbar⁽²⁾. See Vol III: Extinct States.

VALBARAN: Lan. Language spoken in VALBAR⁽²⁾ That emerged in the earlier VALBAR DHAI. It is a relatively recent language that emerged in the wake of the regions' independence from ALMAGEST in 3483 RM. The people of Valbar had been under Almagesti rule for over five centuries at that point and spoke little, though the departure of Almagest allowed what remained of its Keveran culture (the culture of long-persecuted and enslaved native people) to re-emerge else for many generations See Vol II: Languages.

VALBARAN DEFENCE PACT: Pol. Defence treaty signed between VALBAR^(2.) and ALMAGEST in 3974 RM. The treaty allowed Almagesti military forces freedom of movement across Valbaran territories, in return for their aid should another nation declare war on Valbar, which itself was unable to declare war on any nation without the agreement of Almagest. This cemented the presence of the sixth chair on THE CABINET, which was permanently occupied by an Almagesti ambassador.

Almagest was the true beneficiary of this deal, allowing it to set up forts and garrisons in Valbar without needing to worry about governing a largely wasted land. The garrisons Almagest has erected across Valbar now serve to defend the land from the CALLOW HORDES in the west and DURCHAA in the east. The establishment of fort CHESTUS in the far north of the VALBARAN PENINSULA also allows Almagest to keep a watchful eye over the SEA OF POLARIS.

VALBARAN PENINSULA: Geo. Geographical region in the north of CENTRAL LLACHATUL, dominating the north of the nation of VALBAR⁽²⁾. The peninsula is known for its boreal climate making life there difficult for MORTALS.

VALCHAS: Set. Settlement in the c north of KORACHAN, along the path of the SHADOW MARCH (Pop. c. 5,800).

VALCYADA: Set. Small coastal city on the far south of the island of CAMARA in the south of the CORAL BARONIES, off the south western coast of SAMMAEA (Pop. c. 16,200).

VALD: Sea. Gulf in the north of the SEA OF URAN, dividing the AKKODUAN peninsula^(1.) from the headland of AKELLA in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of Caria^(4.).

VALDIA: Mil. Str. Coastal fortress in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of CARIA⁽⁴⁾, overlooking the gulf of VALD.

VALE OF DISCORD: Geo. Low scrubland region in north eastern KHARKHARADONTIS between two high-ridged mountains, characterised by a tangible link between the MATERIAL PLANE and the ATRAMENTA. The air is thick with UMBRA, and no form of life – be it flora or fauna can survive unaltered for long. SHADOWISPS commonly emerge in the area, often carried along prevailing winds thousands of miles west into other lands

It is categorised as a Moderate threat by the Korachani Institute of Atramental Studies.

VALE OF MASTABAS: Geo. Valley in the south east of VENTHIR, 120-miles north west of ELIGIA, where the bodies of ancient VENATHI kings are interred in cliff-side monuments. Most such tombs have since been looted though records bearing a list of unremembered ancient kings indicate that many lie undisturbed, the eroded mastabas protecting the tombs from looters.

VALEFAR: 1. Also 'the Corpschill. Set. Major city, north of VÂRR, east of the city-state of NOACHIS, south of THE OLD FOREST; known for its many hangings. KORACHANI vernacular also names it as the Corpschill (Ruthusicthaî), on account of the many dead buried in the area, making three distinct hills, easily visible from the Valefar (Pop. c. 48,000).

 Fau. Lion steed of the ARIOCH OF MOETIA, said to have the heart of a man. The last of the DIARCHS' quests, the great lion-king was tamed in 3989 RM and remains his companion to this day.

VALENS OF KORACHAN: see ST. VALENS.

VALENS LASCAR: (B. 3932 RM) Ast. Car. Astronomer, cartographer and professor of the OBSERVATORY OF DEOCHAN. He became editor of the ATLAS ELYDEN in 3979 RM, taking over from a long period of enforced propaganda which was later editions ridiculed by foreign states for their blatant fallacies. Under his guidance the Atlas was returned to the scientific roots of the first edition, and the latest 18th edition was the best-selling so-far, reaching libraries far from the empire.

VALANTE: Soc. Org. One of the 17 GRAND HOUSES of the NACRE LEAGUE. The House is based in NORTHERN SIMBARA and is known for its dominance in the trade of luxury goods, including jewellery, fine art, and rare artifacts, and it controls major auction houses in the larger cities found along the NACRE ROAD. It caters to the elite of SAMMAEAN society and has strong ties to various aristocratic and noble circles, with a wideranging web of contacts and confidantes. Its influence extends into cultural and social spheres, where it sponsors cultural events and patronises popular artists in.

VALGHAR: town along the foothills of ENEÁRHI Mountains (Pop. c. 1.000).

VALGRAD: Geo. Flat saltplain in KHALHAT that until c. 750 – 1250 RM was a shallow sea forming the south western part of the SEA OF BYSSOS. The saltplain developed following the sea's slow diminishing throughout the first and second millennium RM. The Khalhish city of LHARKA once stood along the shores of the Valgrad, though remains now as a pale shadow of its former heights.

VALK: Cur. Currency in the north west of SAMMAEA, specifically THE SURRACH. See Vol II: Currency and Coinage in Elyden.

VALKA: 1. His. Ntn. Early FIFTH AGE culture that emerged from the earlier ULLUASHI people. The name Valka was used by LASCAR^(2.) seafarers starting from c. -300 RM, and their usage of the name rapidly spread to surrounding lands, and as their merchants settled Ulluash, many of their customs and traditions took root, and by c. -200 RM Ulluash had been replaced by Valka, a new culture.

By c. -100 RM the tribes of Valka had grown into as many as thirty small states, in what is now the west of the Vaalkan peninsula. They shared many common cultural elements, and were each ruled by MAORATE rulers, who were known to be tyrannical warlords, preying on the gentle YARAOMIC PEOPLES to their east. Conflict between tribes was not uncommon and usually resolved through ritual combat between warlords or champions appointed by them. Trade between tribes flourished and even moved east when its armies were not attacking the Yaraomic Peoples.

In -43 RM the warlord of the tribe of GILAM ASH subjugated nearby tribes, eschewing the tradition of ritual combat in favour of bloody conflict. He crafted the IVORY THRONE, and drenched it in the blood of his vanquished foes. The throne, and Gilam Ash, became notorious in Valka.

The rise of a weak leader in 10 RM led to a period of conflict with CONTH, which left it weakened, ready to fracture. The warlord was challenged and killed in combat in 14 RM, though Valka never recovered. It was in this weakened state that KORACHAN found the region when it attacked it in 17 RM. Faced with a singular foe, the Valkan people did their best to defend their home from invasion, though after a bloody war, Valka was taken on the last day of 19 RM. The ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR personally fought in the conflict, using TARTARUCH and AEGIS, rapidly being hailed as a worthy leader to Valka. He would go on to become a culture hero in the region, fulfilling part of the prophecy in the SCRIPTURE OF SHADOW.

Korachani subjugation of the region brought a new name – $\underline{VAALTHA}$ – which was used throughout Korachani rule over the region, being later changed to \underline{VAALK} following its much later fall to $\underline{SARASTRO}$, following the $\underline{SUNDERING}$ THE OF THE EMPIRE. See Vol III: Extinct States.

2. Eth. Nomadic people of THE OLD FOREST, seen as pragmatists and survivalists by the rest of the Old Forest and barbarians and hermits by outsiders. They are thought to have their roots in early LASCAR⁽²⁾ people who moved inland into CENTRAL LLACHATUL in the early FIFTH AGE. See Vol II: Peoples and Races of Elyden.

VALLACH: Set. Powerful city-fortress in the HENDECARCHY of CYRENIA, in the north west of MALAN. It serves as a link with KASPIA in the north, with foreign traders and travellers forced to stop in a hostelry suburb outside the city walls (Pop. unknown).

VALLACK: see ABYSMAL STAIRCASE.

VALLAR: Geo. Granite plateau in the prefecture of HOLOLACH^(2.) in the ceast of Hololach^(1.), encompassing a valley in the south west of the ESHAMIL Mountains. The plateau is relatively flat and rises very shallowly towards the mountains though the terrain is rugged and covered in labyrinthine undulating formations that are thought to have been Atramentally-formed. Indeed, ATRAMENTAL-CORRUPTION becomes evident in the north west of the region, where the Atramental distillery of NAHRLLA is located.

VALKASSAR: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the far north west of PORPHYR, overlooking the delta of the river SOCCATOROS onto the territories of SERROK.

VALLIDOM: 1. Geo. Island in the south of the SEA OF ESCHATA, to the north of the BARRIER LANDS.

2. Set. Independent island city-state on the eponymous island. It is incredibly rich due to its expansive gold mines (Pop. c. 280,000).

VALMAS: Geo. Region in the north of LLACHATUL, north of ALMAGEST.

VALOMM: Sec. Fortified city in the south of ELEKHID, along the western shore of lake MHAGANI (Pop. c. 35,000).

VALORA: Set. Small city in the west of ALAM BETHYL, in the west of the territory of GELAH^(1.). It is made up of hundreds of sheep farming communities, and collectively its people are known as expert shearers makers of wool products (Pop. c. 11,900).

VALT: Set. Curious city built within a deep sinkhole in the east of ADHERA. The city is vertical, reaching over 500-ft. below the surface of the ground, with most structure linked together by an intricate network of hewn passages and tunnels, which lead to the surface in four fortified gateways. The upper classes face the inside of the sinkhole, which provides them with a degree of natural light for most of the year, though most people live in lightless slums whose only individual link to the surface are their ventilation shafts.

The city draws its water from a deep aquifer, which also waters the expansive fields and farmlands that surround the city itself (Pop. c. 68,000).

VALTARA: Set. Major coastal city in the west of AKANTHRA. It is relatively young, having grown rapidly since many older ports in Akanthra were left landlocked by c. 3500 RM. It is known for its deep natural harbours and its buildings that are constructed on the edge of seafacing cliffs, as well as its array of expansive SIPHON ENGINES that keep it safe from pervasive ATRAMENTAL TAINT. Its people are famed for their meat-based cuisine, which has been influential in surrounding areas (Pop. c. 283,500).

VALTARAN OLIGARCHY: Pol. Org. The ruling house of OD

MEGINNAS^(1.) since 3643 RM. It emerged from the PARTHISAN

PATRICIAN HOUSE of VALTARIS, which, alongside other Houses, colonised the island in c. 3480 RM. The present Ruling Oligarch is SUMMANDER VALTARIS.

VALTARIS: Dem. 'Valtaran'. Soc. Pol. PARTHISAN PATRICIAN HOUSE that in c. 3480 RM colonised the island of JIRIDUN (now OD MEGINNAS^(1,1)) alongside Houses CAELMONT, SELVARSHI, TAELIS, and TENDARI. Together, those Houses formed trade arrangements with the local government of Jiridun, marrying into each other and with local nobles to secure power. This allowed the Houses to settle the land, taking over overlooked industries that were of importance to Parthis.

In 3597 RM House Valtaris orchestrated a ruthless culling of its household, where many ancillary parts of the House were either sent to Parthis or other far-flung corners of Elyden, effectively castrating them of power and denying the House the privilege of inheriting any of the holdings of the family. This was a damning act that earned the PATERFAMILIA of House Valtaris the enmity of the other Houses, and it is thought that he was responsible for many mysterious deaths and disappearances, but it ultimately paid off and by 3630 RM the family tree had been sheared down to size, consolidating the power amongst a handful of individuals, and ultimately serving a death knell to the other Houses with which it had once been allied.

The influence and wealth that House Valtaris commanded allowed it to infiltrate the political system of Jiridun, which by then had become reliant on the industry and trade that Valtaris brought it, and much of the government was deeply in the Houses' pockets. In 3643 RM the government ratified a new law that moved for House Valtaris to become the de facto ruler of the island-nation, with the old politicians either retiring rich or becoming their governors and advisors. This new oligarchic state was christened Od Meginnas and remains in control of the island today, with House Valtaris effectively becoming a DYNASTIC OLIGARCHY that still rules today, over 350-years after assuming control.

The dynasty is characterised by the same shrewd business acumen that saw its original ascent to power, and it is wholly in control of all aspects from the military, to industry, culture and politics, and it maintains a large force of secret police whose memes are secreted in all manner of institutions as spies and informants. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

VALTHAS: Pir. 'valthas'. Mor. One of the original Two-and-Twenty MORTAL PEOPLES, and the children of the DEMIURGE TALANTEHUT. Their ancestral lands were known as LIBRAMIA. They were once very similar to humans, and worshipped Talantehut with a devotion and fervour unmatched by most other mortals. Ultimately, they were victims of circumstance and suffered through no fault of their own from their mother's duties.

Talantehut was chosen against her will to become a force of balance amongst her siblings. This led her to abandon her previous desires and duties, amongst them the care of her children, who she loved deeply. The valthas suffered terribly without her aegis and dwindled. It would have been terrible for any of the mortal peoples to suffer that fate, but the valthas were stricken by such grief that their civilisations crumbled.

Through their mother's long slow neglect, they became corrupted into something baser; wretched things without passion or hope or love. They became achromatic; creatures alive but without life, much like their mother eventually did. Today they dwell in dark forgotten places of the world that are shunned by other mortals, where they live in a fugue state, undying yet without the spark of life. Talantehut was so distraught by what had become of her children that she recruited some to become her agents, who travelled Elyden as her proxies. Devoid of wants and personalities and functioning, they served as a policing force, spying on the other mortals and reporting back to Talantehut with their discoveries. Over time this made the other mortals of Elyden to look upon them with disdain and distrust, an attitude that continues to this day, though its origins are likely long forgotten to most who encounter them.

Many physical laws that affect other mortals do not apply to the valthas, which seem to be caught between worlds. They live for many centuries, though are largely unchanging in this time, studying the passage of the sun and stars and the slow change in their courses that are imperceptible to other mortals. Their SPIRITS⁽¹⁾ do not migrate from their bodies to the OTHERWORLD upon death, and today they are the only MORTAL people whose individuals all leave behind SOULSTONES without fail.

Though they have no nations, they can be found in various nations in central MENISCEA, around the SEA OF LARISH⁽¹⁾, where they follow a philosophy known as the ALEMBIC PATH. They are also found in smaller numbers scattered across central SAMMAEA, where they are believed to wander into ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED lands and DREAMSCAPES without suffering negative effects, giving them some succour from the curious eyes of other mortals. A notable region that was once populated by valthas is the UMBRA SOKHAR, where they created the GODHEADS. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life: Sicthain.

VALTICA: Rui. City in the south east of AHKA obliterated by KORACHANI cannons during the ongoing AHKAN WAR.

VALTICAN DEARTH, the: Geo. His. Mil. An expansive region of abandoned trenches and fortifications in the south east of AHKA, constructed by KORACHANI engineers between 3988 – 3992 RM. It became the site of a catastrophic pyrrhic battle against the Ahkan defence and PARTHISAN allies in which hundreds of thousands of lives were lost, the result of which was a few hundred feet of advancement for the Korachani forces.

VALUS: Sea. Gulf that, with the IALCUS, divides the northern part of the continent of LLACHATUL at the northern POLAR CIRCLE.

VALUS SALMON: Fau. Migratory fish native to the northern waters of the NEAR HEMISPHERE, including the SEA OF DAGGERS, the SEA OF IALCUS, and the SEA OF VALUS, the latter of which it is named for. The Valus Salmon migrates west to the north of the Valus into the south of the SEA OF POLARIS and the BAEFIR, where they swarm into the VARAGOD river, travelling upstream for hundreds of miles, where they spawn and then die. The damming of the river along the city of DAALKATH has prevented many from finding their spawning grounds, leading to the introduction of fish ladders that allow them to bypass the VALUSIA: Geo. Region in the c north east of the HOGGOTHA ISZ in the west of NORTHERN SAMMAEA, said to be home to many SERAPIS and other corrupted children of ASHTERATH. It is known for its many reptile-headed colossi and monoliths, most of which are ruined and badly weathered, lying half buried in sterile dust.

VALYANT: Mil. Rnk. Champions of ALAM BETHYL, equated to military leaders or standard bearers of other regions. They are skilled in armed combat, are expert pathfinders and are skilled marksmen.

VAM ATAR: m. Myt. His. Per. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, a SCION and son of the DEMIURGE NERGAAL and the scion LYSSA (scion of VORROPOHAIAH), and was the twin brother of VAMMATAR. In the THIRD AGE he performed a powerful ATRAMENTAL ritual to attain long life. In the FOURTH AGE, following the fall from grace of the Two-and-Twenty, Nergaal, severely weakened by an earlier defeat at the hands of a massive combined force of other Demiurges, agreed to let Vam Atar perform a ritual that would see them united, stronger than the two could ever be individually. Consigning his body to the rot and disease he had allowed himself to be purveyor of, Nergaal died, his consciousness flowing into Vam Atar, who became a vessel to both beings.

Though Nergaal lives on through Vam Atar, the latter has his own agenda. Has lived in the hinterlands of Cuth, appearing in history books from time-to-time under different guises, but always heralding disease and subsequent fevered worship, said to grant him more power (as the Demiurges drew strength from their worshippers, so too does he).

In the Fifth age, the rediscovery of the Hand of Nergaal led to a rebirth of worship of the Demiurge, that only served to increase the power of Vam Atar.

There is debate that VAMMATAR (another purported scion of Nergaal) is another incarnation (or a corruption of the name) of Vam Atar, though there is reason to believe both are now disparate entities. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

VAMODOR: Set. City in the region of FURUD in the c west of THE SURRACH, along the IVORY ROAD. It is known for its metalworking industries (Pop. c. 33,200).

VÁMAN CROSS: Obj. A cross made up of three arrow-shaped arms radiating from a central vertex. It is named after the emblem of the VÁMAN ORDER if the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION.

VÁMAN ORDER: Pol. Org. In the KORACHANI EMPIRE, one of the major SANCTIFIED ORDERS OF THE INQUISITION, concerned with the safety of the UNDYING MACHINE and the ATRAMENTA, and, by extension, ATRAMENTISTS and other KORACHANI SHAPERS. The Order works diligently to secure the empire from regions of ATRAMENTAL CORRUPTION and it also polices usage of the Atramenta and Atramental devices and artefacts, and fights against its abuse, working closely with the various MINASTERIA⁽²⁾ of SHAPING.

The order emerged from a sect of the PALADINS OF THE SHADOW, who were the first centralised force in the empire tasked with policing shaping. Following a centuries-long quest to retrieve the near-mythical artifact known as the SHATTERED MIRROR, the sect naturally evolved into the precursor that in 1196 RM would become the Váman Order. Many legends and myths now surround this transition, with many believing that the Order used the Mirror to manipulate fate to achieve its desired position within imperial institutions, and others claiming that pacts were made ancient Atramentist sects that had once been their targets in exchange for power within the empire – an act known within imperial urban legends and oral histories as the SHADOWED PACT. Neither are believed by serious historians.

Formally christened in 1196 RM in the city of $\overline{\text{TEREKON}}$ in $\overline{\text{PELASGOS}}$, the Order's presence in imperial cities would eventually lead to the founding of the $\overline{\text{MINASTERIA}}^{(2)}$ of Shaping and the $\overline{\text{GREAT CULLING}}$ that took place between 1312-1345 RM, during which shapers who had escaped the earlier reforms were hunted down and rounded up and either sent to the Minasteria for education or neutralised through various means.

Since its founding, the Order has established various clandestine strongholds, referred to within the Order as SANCTUARIES OF SHADOW. These sanctuaries serve as bases for agents who observe Atramental activity, and are often located in distant or TAINTED lands or even behind enemy lines. The Order works closely with the various MINASTERIA (2) of the empire, as well as the ORDER OF PROSELYTISERS, and the more amenable shapers captured by its agents are sometimes taken by the for training. Those who show no remorse for their actions are kept by the Order and imprisoned in special gaols designed to contain most types of shapers, the most famous of which is Fort ARTHAGNIA, located on an island off the western coast of Pelasgos. In 2780 RM the KORACHANIINSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES was folded into the Váman Order, where it was granted more resources to continue its work.

The Order has a strict hierarchy, with new agents referred to as Shadows, and other ranks known as WARDENS^(1,1), KEEPERS OF THE KEYS, PRECEPTORS^(3,1), WARDENS OF THE VEIL, PALADINS OF THE SEPULCHRAL PALACE, High Wardens, and ultimately, the GRANDMASTER.

The order's sigil is the icon of the Church of the Undying Machine with a pair of crossed keys superimposed on it. The icon of the church represents the ancient roots of the order, and the keys are representative of the order's safeguarding of Atramental laws in the empire. Every year on the anniversary of the Order's founding, agents take part in a ritual known as the $\underline{DARK\ VIGIL}$ where they renew their vows to the Order.

The Order's present grandmaster is HIMMILCAR FERDOUS.

VAMMARA: Set. in the of PHYRR (Pop. c.). *

VAMMATAR: f. Myr. His. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, a SCION and daughter of the DEMIURGE NERGAAL and the scion LYSSA (scion of VORROPOHAIAH), and twin sister of VAM ATAR. She was known in various lands of south eastern LLACHATUL, around the coast of the SEA OF KRYMERA, as a goddess of sickness and cults dedicated to her can still be found in certain regions, venerating her in times of plague.

There is debate that VAM ATAR (another purported scion of Nergaal) is another incarnation (or a corruption of the name) of Vammatar, though there is reason to believe both are now disparate entities. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

VAMRAH: Set. City in the north east of AHOPAH, close to the NETHERLANDS (Pop. c. 90,000).

VAMUL: Set. Settlement in the south of PNESSA (Pop. c. 8,000).

VANABBRY: Set. Settlement in the east of RHEA, known for its production of a hallucinatory honey. The honey's properties are derived from rhododendron flowers, and was once used in religious rituals. Though this is no-longer the case, the honey remains a delicacy and is sold across ELYDEN to connoisseurs and gourmands (Pop. 6,000).

VANADHA: Geo. Island 42-miles off the eastern coast of VAALK.

VANARET: Set. City in the c of OPHAR, at a fork where the river RATUNA meets its parent, the QUARES. It is a major centre of ceramic manufacture (Pop. c. 42,000).

VANAYA: Geo. Mountain-range around 175-miles-long in the c-south east of MENISCEA, acting as natural border between the north east of WESTERN LARISH and the south of LAOD.

VANCA: Set. City in the north west of PALUS (Pop. c. 21,000).

VANDAHAR: Rvr. River flowing through central KOLCHIS from various sources in the BLACK MOUNTAINS, into the northern-most part of the SEA OF SEKHEM. It is one of the few clean rivers depositing water into the sea.

VANGAN: Set. Settlement in the south east of CUTH, on the eastern face of the peninsula of HAMMINGHENG. It is one of many producers of EMBALMING resins in the region (Pop. c. 6,400).

VANGEL: Set. Large fortress-city flanking the river UDANILLA in the c-south east of HALEDONIA, guarding its inland regions from an attack over the river. Since its construction, the fortress has become surrounded by a large city (Pop. c. 58,000).

VANEFAN: Lan. Ntn. Native name for THE OLD FOREST.

VANEFANI: Lan. Language spoken in the OLD FOREST of VANEFAN. It is secondary to UMMUSH and is mostly used when dealing with outsiders. It is largely spoken in markets and by merchants and travellers, so as to maintain the secrecy Ummush. See Vol II: Languages.

VANEFATH: Lak. Lake in THE OLD FOREST, along the course of the river IAGANNATH.

VANKER: Lak. Semi-permanent lake in the north of AZAZEM, to the south east of the CHACTHORNYS Mountains. It forms following either heavy rains in late summer or snowmelt in the mountains in the north in early summer, though changes in climate have seen its formation becoming increasingly sporadic. The basin in which the lake forms is a deterrent to floods to the south west, and it has been deepened over time, with a small dam constructed in its western most reaches.

VANKER'S DAM: Arc. Small dam constructed in the north of AZAZEM, designed to control the flow of water following heavy rainfalls in the region that result in the formation of the semi-permanent lake VANKER.

VANKER'S CAVE: Geo. Deep pit cavern in the north of AZAZEM that is famed for its beauty, moss creeper-covered walls, rain-like waterfalls, and the ancient moss-covered temple that predates KORACHANI influence in the region. The main entrance of the cave has a 250-ft. drop and then splits into various tunnels and chambers, which become narrows farther down. It ends in a triangular chamber that tapers to a deep pool. There are various tunnels that lead to the surface, though these are only used as exits.

VANGH: Rui. Ancient DVERG ancestral monument and accompanying tombs unearthed in the western reaches of the RHAECHAN Mountain. The site has been known to the people of KORACHAN since before the formation of the $\underline{\text{EMPIRE}}$, though is largely shunned. Some dverg $\underline{\text{CLADES}}$ from $\underline{\text{CHTHYRID}}$ are known to travel to the area, though little is known of its history or their purpose in returning there.

VANGULI PROJECTION: Car. Cartographic PROJECTION originating in ALMAGEST in c. 900 RM. The projection was developed as a means of accurately portraying all of ELYDEN as a flattened object. Distortion at the poles is quite severe, though rapidly declines to modest levels south of the poles.

This projection had surpassed the ASTRETAS PROJECTION in popularity by c. 1000 RM and remained a major projection used across the INNER SEA throughout the FIFTH AGE.

VANKA: Set. Main city in the region of QATTISYSH, and main producer and distributor of saffron in the west of THE SURRACH. It was once an independent city though an alliance with Qattisysh, saw it become the latter's dependency in c. 3980 RM (Pop. c. 39,500).

VANNAKORDOR: 1. Geo. Ancient Mountain range in the c north west of NORTHERN SAMMAEA, serving as a border between the BARRIER LANDS and the far north west of HOGGOTHA ISZ. The region is noted for its instability and is thought to be incredibly old, amongst the first crafted by the DEMIURGES, its peaks worn smooth by the passing of eons millennia past. Its eastern face is covered in black ruins: temples and pylons of cyclopean design, attributable to the ancient powers of the Demiurges, before the coming of the mortal races.

2. Plateau in the north west of NORTHERN SAMMAEA, to the south of the Vannakordor Mountains^(1,). The region is dominated by rocky terrain and ancient scattered duststone formations.

VANNASAR: Mil. Str. Major gated fortress in the west of VÂRR, guarding what was known as the SULPHUR ROAD linking eastern KORACHAN and western Vârr. Though the sulphur trade has died, the fortress remains, protecting those moving between nation.

VANORI: Set. Fortified settlement in the c of GNOTH, forming part of the GNOTHI ROAD (Pop. c. 4,000).

VANTH: 1. Pol. Duchy of the HARÉSHKI city-state of EDICULE⁽¹⁾. The duchy is named after the ruin of an ancient HARÉSHKAN fortress⁽²⁾ that is found there.

2. Rui. Ruin in the eponymous duchy in the north west of the City-kingdom of EDICULE⁽¹⁾, in the HARÉSHK. It was originally constructed in c. 830 RM in the west of HARÉSHKA, by its first king and ruler, HAREKH.

VANUS: Rui. Ancient benthic ruin in the far south of THE SURRACH, in the rock deserts of CARNETABAEL.

VANUT: Set. Coastal settlement in the south west of PNESSA, in the east of the GULF OF SAURIAR. Its main industry is scrapping metal (Pop. c. 4,000).

VAPAH: Set. City in the south of AHOPAH. It is known for its FIRMAMENTAL scholars who study the effects of the Firmament on ELYDEN'S seas (Pop. c. 32,700).

VAPHRAN DYNASTY: Pol. His. Ruling dynasty in the THERASHIAN

EMPIRE that dominated the north west of SAMMAEA in the early FIFTH

AGE between 142 RM and its downfall in 901 RM.

VAPULA: Plr. 'vapulim'. Mor. One of the original Two-and-Twenty MORTAL PEOPLES and children of the DEMIURGE ARIMASPI. Though Arimaspi is known to have created the most sentient creatures amongst all the Demiurges, his true children, meaning those that originated from the seven seeds SOWN by THE SHAPER, are the vapulim.

They stand around 7-feet tall and are bulky, yet of graceful movement, with humanoid features that have echoes of feline and avian. Their necks, backs and arms are covered in a thick mane of feathers, with colours differing wildly based on region and ancestry.

Never a populous race, they were nevertheless common in the savannahs of the ancient world, though their culture lessened in scope and influence as Arimaspi prioritised the creation of new life over leading his children, to which he felt no strong affinity. He came to favour the AIKLAHS and EELYOUHNS in particular, learning too late that his weakening body and mind were due to the waning devotion of the vapulim, by which time the damage had been caused and they had already dwindled to near-extinction. He attempted to atone for his neglect, by searching for the vapulim, but they forsook him entirely.

They were believed extinct for most of the FIFTH AGE, thought a relatively large number were found to remain in the nation of DATEPHA on the island of ISEA in the FAR HEMISPHERE. They are naturally adept and do not suffer the actions of fools, and any semblance of sentimentality was bred out of them over millennia of struggling to survive without the aegis of their father. Despite this, they are loyal to a fault and maintain close-knit groups of friends and family. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life: Sicthain.

VAR: 1. Sea. Small sea in the north west of VAALK, between the settlements of KANESH to the north east and TOTAARA in the west.
2. Geo. Peninsula to the north east of the above sea, measuring 55-miles long.

VAR ANSUL: lit. 'light of hidden source'. Int. Sup. Str. Twin beacon of HELIXLIGHT emanating in two distinct pillars from a gorge in LAASKHA. Their true source is unknown for there are no FIRMAMENTAL LEYS or LACUNAE in the vicinity. The KORACHANI EMPIRE tried to destroy the landmark once in 17 RM and again in 79 RM. Both attempts to topple the canyon were unsuccessful.

Today, propaganda by CENSORS and ICONOCLASTS^(2.) quell knowledge of the beacons' existence, though those who travel the hinterlands of Laaskha do stumble upon it occasionally.

 $\underline{VAR\ OH'DUR}$: Mil. Str. Fortress in the north west of \underline{VAALK} , at the tip of the peninsula of \underline{VAR} .

VARAGASLA: Lak. Lake in the north of THE VORANDINE, forming part of the course of the river MANADARAS.

VARAGHANA: Set. Coastal city in the west of PERGOST, overlooking the SEA OF DESZMEN (Pop. c. 40,000).

VARAGOD: Rvr. Major river in the nation of DURCHAA^(1.), in the far north of LLACHATUL, flowing north west for 1,550-miles from sources in the NATTRANEN and ECHANEM Mountains before emptying into the SEA OF POLARIS.

VARAH: Set. Fortified settlement in the south west of VAALK, 15-miles from the border with MHAROKK. The settlement is home to large branch of the WHITE BANK, where those undertaking THE SHADOW MARCH can withdraw funds before continuing south. The settlement is also home to a fortress of the WHITE LEAGUE (Pop. c. 8,500).

VARAHON: Rui. Ruin of a major imperial city in the colony of MARCHOSIA in what is now the north east of RHINOCOLOURA.

VARAKOLAK: see LOGOMAMUS.

VARANA: Set. Conurbation in the c of KORACHAN, 38-miles north west of the city of KHADON, covering a 5-mile stretch of the banks of the river KHAD. It is one of many areas whose sole purpose is to keep the metropolis capital of the HIGH-EMPIRE fed and is a vast rural sprawl. It also forms a part of the RED ROUTE.

The city is known for its impressive BELL tower, which contains seven different bells, which were once famed for their varied peals. It is no longer used but is well-maintained, and the people of Varana are proud of their heritage (Pop. c. 25,800).

VARANTHA: Set. City in the c north of the emirate of UKOLIST in the north of LIMOTH^(1.). The city is a centre of crafts and is renowned for its jewellery production, which originated from the silver production in the far south of the PEREIDAS Mountains (Pop. c. 42,300).

VARASATIR: Set. Major coastal city in the c of KAZZAR^(2.), overlooking the BAY OF GUEN. It was a major SETTARAN city that emerged in c. 1100 and though the wane of the greater IGUZZEN lagoon region saw it become landlocked by c. 2800 RM, but engineering works deepened the bay so that it remains at the waters' edge today. It is a major mercantile centre in Kazzar and links the more rural north with the more urban cities of the south (Pop. c. 160,000).

VARASI: Geo. Wind-swept region in the c west of NARTHEL characterised by low steep-sided plateaus, the tops of which are fertile, covered in mosses and other hardy fau. forming part of a thriving ecosystem.

VARASS, THE BOILING CAVES: Geo. Large coastal cavern-system in the west of TZALLRACH, south of the GULF OF LUSA, and forms part of the SUNDERED EARTH. Its waters are constantly bubbling and steaming from geological activities below. VARASSAI: Rvr. River in the west of HOLOLACH^(1.), flowing for 115-miles west from the western-face of the KATEKUIL Mountains before emptying in the Bay of AMATRRA.

VARAYA: Rvr. Major river in the north east of MENISCEA, dominating much of XYRPHAAT⁽³⁾. The course of the river has grown drastically in length with the waning of the SEA OF ERTHYDEA, which has revealed the previously submerged coastal shelf, which is now known as the Wastes of Xyrphaat⁽²⁾. This has altered the course of the entire waterway, changing the previous delta into the expansive wetlands of BAIYAAR some 300 miles from the present coast, and creating a new delta that takes the form of a great stepped water fall now known as the FALLS OF RUOTT, negating navigation between the sea and the river, disrupting trade and travel in eastern Xyrphaat.

VARDYLIAN DYNASTY: see KOMMEAN DYNASTIES.

VAREN'S BACK: Geo. Spine of dark volcanic rock, 60-miles long, marking the centre of the PLALEPH Mountains in LYRIDIA DHAI.

VARESVAT: also 'dreamfish'. Mys. Dre. Fau. A form of sea bream found in the SHADOW SEA and the SEA OF ETHA. It was first encountered by KORACHANI mariners early in the 2nd century RM, when fishermen from the north of IO told them not to eat it because it made people DREAM. Intrigued, the mariners ate it, learning that the fish gave them potent hallucinations for many hours afterwards.

Later research showed that the fish had oneiric properties that made those who consume them more sensitive to the DREAMWORLD and the dreams of those around them. Those who sleep after consuming varesvat have LUCID DREAMS and find themselves easily able to manipulate their dreams.

The fish have dwindled in number over the years and most that find their way in markets around coastal areas of the FADED STATES and the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS are grown in fisheries, and most of these are used to make drugs that aid in oneiromancy, such as SALARAN. They are a favoured food on oneiromancers and occultists though can fetch high prices.

VARETIEL: Rvr. River in the south of GNOTH, flowing north for 350-miles from sources in the HAKKA Mountains before meeting its parent, the river IAMTI.

VARHAI: Pol. Rnk. Ruling title in ARIMOTHA. The current Varhai is known as the DEATHLESS LADY. Traditionally, anyone who defeats the current Varhai inherits all his or her belongings, including family, in the form of slaves.

VARI: See. Small city in the south west of ELAT, known for is saltpans (Pop. c. 12.000).

VARIAN: Geo. Island off the western coast of TAAN AN, in the south west of SAMMAEA.

VARIAN VYR: m. Per. (B. 3893 RM) High-ranking member of the KYONI

ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION, where he serves as a Higharchivist in the Order's LANGUE in DEOCHAN. He is an expert on

IMPERIAL history and has an eidetic memory, having memorised not only the archive index but most of the documents contained therein. His dedication to the preserving history is matched only by his willingness to obfuscate events believed to be of danger to the safety of the empire.

He was part of an expedition to the WOLD when only 19-years of age, where he recovered a series of stone tablets known as the GARAGAR SLATES from an ancient temple, and he spent most of his professional life studying them.

VARIKA: Set. Settlement in the c east of PNESSA (Pop. c. 4,000).

VARILREA: For. Expansive forest of ATAR trees in the south east of DHAT, on the isle of ISEA. The region is a tangle of protruding roots and hangers and the air within its borders is rife with the stench of rotting beast (a by-product of the tree's method of gaining nutrients) and the saccharine smell exuded by its sap.

Settlements around the forest specialise in the cultivation of the trees and the collection of their sap, which is distilled into a fine liquor, not to mention soporifies and narcotics. Most notable of these is the city of ATARAL.

VARIX: Set. Small city in the far north of OKKHAM. It is a major trade presence in the area, and has a permanent trade-route north into the west of CHEIRA. It is situated along both sides of a steep river, which are linked by large bridge on which are situated its administrative structures. Buildings hug the cliffs, to the sea level, where river boats ply their trade (Pop. c. 40,000).

VARJA: 1. Soc. Obj. Amulet common to PERGOST and SABIA. Each tribe or family has its own symbol which is unique or a variation of an ancestral symbol. Amulets are worn bearing this symbol, and they are also used in signet rings, where they are used as signatures.

In a wider context, the term varja is used in a mystical sense, where it is considered a ward from evil and harm. It appears in an elaborate form on the Pergosti flag. It is used on public structures, appearing on lintels and monuments. Where it is believed to ward them from harm.

2. Sec. City in the c west of $\underline{PERGOST}$. It is a centre of the $\underline{DREAMING}$ \underline{NIGHT} religion (Pop. c. 47,500).

VARKA: Set. Fortified coastal city in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of UCHRON^(1.). It is a major stop along the GREAT ROAD and its trade yards and ports are busy with goods (Pop. c. 5,000).

VARL: Dem. 'Varli'. His. Soc. Ancient early FIFTH AGE barbarians whose settling of the region of HARA, alongside ERKI and HÁRR, would later lead to the birth of the CITY-KINGDOMS OF THE HARÉSHKI. The Varli are believed to be descended from the SVATHI people, though moved north east, settling the river valley between the KYTHI^(1,) mountains and the SACHAR highlands. Remnants of the original Varli settlers remained as savages around the Sachar highlands in present-day EDICULE^(1,).

They are descended from the far older HATOUMIAN people who would go on to populate the land known today as SAUA.

VAROT: Ind. Set. Mining settlement in the south of DRAKAINA, in the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. The settlement is located close to the volcanically-active region of HAMMAI, and its main industry is sulphur mining (Pop. c. 6,000).

VAROTU ATOLL: Geo. Expansive atoll off the eastern coast of the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT in the north west of SAMMAEA. It is the largest of many such atolls that are located in the so-called NAKOSSAN WATERS.

VARPULIS: Pol. Soc. Ruling title in HOLOLACH^(1.), also equated to a deity. The Varpulis' rule is considered divine right by their subjects and they are the highest judicial, religious and political authority in Hololach and all its territories, chosen by the reigning VOLATA from members of the royal bloodline. The current ruler is VARPULIS ALASTOR.

VARPULIS ALASTOR OF HOLOLACH: see ALASTOR, VARPULIS OF HOLOLACH.

VARPULIS, CULT OF: Rel. Main religion observed in the HOLOLACH^(1.). Its head is the VOLATA, who alone is judged to be worthy to appoint a new VARPULIS upon the death of the incumbent ruler.

The cult observes the divinity of the Varpulis and most of the rituals are intended to display the divine right of its rule over the state of Hololach. Its priests wear white robes and baroque headdresses made of pearls and flowers. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

VARPULIS, TEMPLE OF THE: Rel. Str. Large five-domed temple just outside the borders of TROPIS. The temple is dedicated to the CULT OF VARPULIS^(2.) is very large and boasts over-wrought baroque architecture and one of the largest unsupported domes in Llachatul. The city of Tropis exists now to cater to pilgrims from all around HOLOLACH^(1.), who come to visit the temple.

VARPULIS, WHISPERS OF: Phen. Phenomenon experienced in the east of HOLOLACH^(1.), in the large valley between the BRATUIL and KATEKUIL Mountains in which sound acts strangely. In some instances, sounds from miles away can be heard incredibly eerily, while in others sounds from much closer might not be heard at all. This has been recognised by locals for centuries, who have come up with various legends and stories to explain them away.

VÂRR: Dem. 'Vârran'. Ntn. Located in the c of LLACHATUL, west of the SEA OF PROPONTIS, Vârr considered to be a cursed place, Vârr is a product of superstition and industry gone awry. Its natural land has been replaced with quarries and strip-mines, and what forests it once possessed were stripped centuries past, its soil washed away, replaced now with dust fields, deadland, and chemically-tainted lakes.

It was shunned following the $\overline{\text{FADING}}$ of the $\overline{\text{FOURTH AGE}}$ – its strange idols and foreboding mountain known as the $\overline{\text{VARRACHON}}$ unsettling mortals. Indeed, even as people abandoned their nomadic lifestyles for more sedentary cultures, the areas immediately surrounding the Varrachon remained shunned and distrusted.

KORACHANI EXOCRINES were first sent east into Vârr between 100 and 200 RM, and by around 700 RM many of its western settlements were worshiping the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, allowing imperial agents to more easily sway the populace to imperial politics in the hopes of a bloodless coup, which was successful in 792 RM in the capital of NOUVAR, effectively making the ruling ANAX caste puppets of Korachan.

Korachani industries flooded into Vârr over the next centuries, using the territory as a resource. Little value was given to its cities other than as waypoints in the transportation of raw materials west into Korachan, including SLAVES and WITCHES captured in the east. Of note was the discovery of the ancient caverns of CARCERI by the Korachani occupiers, which only increased the distrust and paranoia surrounding Vârr, and it gained a sinister reputation amongst Korachani workers and patricians assigned to work there.

In 3412 RM it was finally abandoned to the INTERREGES after centuries of waning resources and increased pollution and mismanagement. By then most of its PATRICIAN HOUSES had already fled, sensing that its death was not far behind. Even the slave trade dwindles under the reign of the INTERREGNUM, and in 3791 RM they too abandoned it to its own devices.

Since then, the political landscape has been plagued by uncertainty, as warlords and tyrants appeared across its landscape to claim control, though eventually Vârr came under control of the REGENT-KINGS, who rule from SATAAR. Though the city of NOUVATAI, ruled by a caste known as the PROLOCUTORS, is thought by many to be an independent city-state, it remains under the rule of the Regent-kings.

Today a people released from the shackles of three millennia struggle to live in a land that is devoid of major resources or security. Indeed, it remains perhaps one of the most dangerous lands so close to the KORACHANI PENINSULA due to the many caverns scattered around its mountains and hills, many of which lead to the Prison Carceri. Centuries of disappearances and odd happenings at nights have left its people unwilling to travel at night, and even during daylight hours few choose to travel alone, and only the most heavily guarded landships and caravans make any journey that takes longer than a day. Coaching inns and caravanserais are akin to small fortresses, and though they may be weary with new arrivals at first, they will defend lodgers who are proven to be unaltered HUMANS from any ROPOHAII or DEGENERATE attack from without.

Most people have returned to a pastoral subsistence, though cities have reappeared in the two centuries since Korachani abandonment to take advantage of what little resources remain.

Its people remain distrustful of witches and the Firmament following millennia of imperial indoctrination, and similarly they remain faithful to the UNDYING MACHINE, though worship of the ancient god SOLUM has seen a resurgence. Appropriated by the exocrines and ICONOCLASTS of early imperial occupiers as a saint of the Undying Machine, Solum has been elevated to a god once more and is slowly overtaking the strength of the Church of the Undying Machine in Vârr.

Its main industries are scrapping and recycling, and it accepts scrap metal and unused engines and machinery from across the Inner Sea, which it repurposes and resells. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

VÂRRAN DISAPPEARANCES: Int. Soc. Phen. Law. VÂRR is noted for its many disappearances, which scholars have correlated to the locations of caverns, most of which lead into the PRISON CARCERI. The number of disappearances is also disproportionately higher than the norm in surrounding areas, including RHAMIA, northern PELASGOS, and north eastern KORACHAN. It is believed that many of these people either fall into hollows leading into Carceri, from which they are unable to escape, or are abducted by the ROPOHAII that dwell in caverns of the near surface.

VÂRRAN PLAINS: Geo. Sloped plains in the south of VÂRR covering some 2,500-square-miles of land, south of LAMEDUA and north of the ADALLA Mountains. The plains are relatively untouched by the industries of the KORACHANI EMPIRE (not through want of exploitation, however) and show what Lamedua once looked like. The plains are characterised by sparse tree cover and scrub and not inconsiderable wildlife.

Early in the 14th century RM the plains were plagued by massed spontaneous appearances of inimical DREAMSCAPES that led to the abandonment or destruction of various settlements, most notable of which was the abandonment of IBEDIA. This period become known as the ONEIRIC SCOURGE, and it persisted for close to a century before the SOMNIARECHI ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION was able to quell in VARRACHON: Geo. Flat-topped mountain-chain dominating the northern border of VÂRR, created from the overburden and tailings waste of hollowing out the PRISON CARCERI beneath the continents of LLACHATUL and SAMMAEA. Vârrans regard the place unfavourably, seeing it as a mound of rotting flesh stolen from Elyden and allowed to rot in open air. It is the main source for the SOSPIRA; a great cistern and aqueduct which flows east, emptying into the SEA OF SPIRES and the SCION KHENEM-MMATH is believed to be buried beneath the mound.

The mountain is shunned by those who see it, including the KORACHANI EMPIRE, which ignored the region during its time of governance there, not that it was thought to have anything of value.

VARRADA: Lak. Lake in the c-south east of THE OLD FOREST, forming part of the route of the river ALLIA.

VARSAR: Mil. Str. Large coastal fortress off the south eastern coast of VÂRR, between the SEA OF SPIRES and the PROPONTIS. Following the INTERREGES' withdrawal from Vârr in 3791 RM, KORACHANI forces maintained their vigil over the island, which controls a narrow strait.

VARSTA: Geo. Area, around 175-miles long, in the east of the DESOLATION OF ASTUDAN, bordering the west of SABIA. The land here is cracked and rests in shelfs and platforms, which though stable, causes many unaccustomed travellers to avoid the place.

VARTA: 1. Pol. Geo. Major PARTHISAN exclave colony in the north east of THE SURRACH, founded in c. 3950 RM to capitalise on the myriad trade opportunities with the region, through which it has grown very wealthy. It is a pene-exclave, meaning that is completely cut off from Parthis, and contact between the two is only possible through OPHAR⁽²⁾ (under the aegis of a trade agreement established decades ago) and the TARAHID ANNEXES, before reaching Parthis. This route is commonly known as the PARTHISAN ROAD.

Its merchant houses employ their own private armies and also make use of mercenary forces, such as the WHITE LEAGUE, who guard their caravans as they trek across the Parthisan Road.

2. Set. Capital and largest cultural centre of the above (1.) Founded in c. 3950 RM to facilitate trade between the two regions, it has grown steadily since then, buying large tracts of land from THE SURRACH in which new settlements have been founded. By c. 4000 RM is had become a cosmopolitan metropolis, one of the largest cities in the region, and the hub of a unique culture that has adopted many Surrachi traditions, melding them with its native Parthisan customs and culture. It is incredibly wealthy and has great armies that dominate the region, making it one of the safest areas of the Surrach (Pop. c. 250,000).

VARTAN CONSORTIUM: Com. Pol. Org. PARTHISAN trade house that controls the colony of VARTA. It forms part of the PARTHISAN ALLIANCE.

VARU ZURVA: Set. Large coastal city in the south west of GNOTH, overlooking the SEA OF SERPENTS, known for its caste of ascetes who keep track of time.

The centre of their monastery is composed of a large mechanical CLOCK that is said to record the passage of PLANETS and other celestial bodies in the night sky as well as hundreds of different calendars, alive and dead (Pop. c. 92,000).

VARYANDUR: Set. Coastal city in the c of the PANTHEON ISLES, in the east of the mainland region of KARAXHANES (Pop. c. 38,000).

- VASHUL: Set. City in the far north of LLACHATUL, overlooking the SEA OF SUDUNIR. The city forms part of a loosely allied people who populate the region around the arctic circle north of THE VORANDINE (Pop. c. 20,000).
- VARU: Dem. 'Varu!'. Ntn. Nation in the south west of MENISCEA, north east of the sea of IDALIA. Its people worship GEMINATE. MENISCEAN INDRIKS are commonly used as mounts by people in power. It is a member of the FEDERATION OF FREE NATIONS OF MENISCEA. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.
- VASA: 1. Myt. In the mythologies of the HARÉSHK and SAUA, demons bound to the mortal plane by an ancient curse.
 - 2. Set. City in the far north east of SAUA, along the river TARROKO (Pop. c. 40.000).
- VASILIAN PAURAS: (B. 3954 RM) Pol. Present Archminister of NÁRTHEL and an accomplished shaper.
- VASITH: Set. Settlement and agricultural region in the c west of NÁRTHEL, along the course of the river LOBKIR. It is known for its reeds (Pop. c. 8,800).
- VASSAGO: also 'Dead Lake'. Lak. Natural lake in the north of CAMAU, MENISCEA, noted for its high soda and salt content, which makes its surface highly reflective, causing small birds and other animals to dive into the lake, where they die. Their bodies are rapidly calcified by the water's content, where they naturally mummify.
 - Ancient cultures once worshipped the eerie stone-like animal corpses, and it is believed that the animalistic pantheon common to the region's religions may have originated here.
- VASSAL: 1. Pol. In politics, a nation or territory that is under the thrall of a larger, or more powerful political entity. The HIGH- and LOW-EMPIRES are both known for their many vassal states, though many other vassal states exist across ELYDEN.
 - 2. Soc. Rnk. Slave caste within the KORACHANI EMPIRE who are lobotomised, allowing them to work in sensitive areas without risk of knowledge or information leaking.
- VASSARAK: Sct. Coastal settlement in the west of TARTAK. Its primary industry is fishing (Pop. c. 8,200).
- VASTA: Geo. Massif in HOGGOTHA ISZ, in the c of SAMMAEA, west of the KARKARMIS Mountains.
- VASTAS: Flo. DRAGON-BLOOD forest dominating the western coast of the island-continent of BROR^(1.), ranging from the north of GREST^(1.) to the west of ISESETH. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.
- VASTATIA: Rel. Str. Pulpit-tower along the SHADOW MARCH in KHARKHARADONTIS. PETITIONERS OF THE MACHINE pass beneath the tower through a large arch, from which they can hear the sermons and litanies of a choir of priests, blessing the pilgrims on their passage south to the SEPULCHRAL PALACE.
- VAT-BORN: Sup. Med. Tec. Artificially-created being that is gestated in an artificial construct, such as a TECHNARCANE vat or engine. Creatures born in such ways are commonly referred to as UMBRAN and SOHBAL FERROLLI.
- VATAMMARA: Set. Small city in the c south west of METHUMN, along the course of the river SAPPARANTI, where its tributary, the river GARAGIRA, meets it. It is an important hub for trade, with goods flowing down both rivers and passing through the city's bustling marketplaces before continuing downstream, though it does not link with the main land route of Methumn, due to the width of the river in this area (Pop. c. 17.000).
- VATARUN: Set. Small city in the far south of CISNERIA, in the foothills of the BLACK MOUNTAINS (Pop. c. 12,000).
- VATASA: Rui. Remains of an ancient tribal burial site in the VAELDRAN Mountains in the north west of KOMMEA. Most of the tombs have been destroyed by earthquakes and the crumbling of the mountain, but the hewn chambers that remain are cyclopean places; halls to the dead whose mummified bodies have not stood the march of time. All that remains of them are worthless remains, their treasures plundered ages past.
- VATHI: Set. Major coastal city in the west of the CITIZENRY OF THALI overlooking the SEA OF SAVAEN. It is known for its three-tiered harbours

- and expansive shipyards, which cater to vessels from across the Seas of NARANOR and LYNNAE (Pop. c. 1,079,500).
- VATICINATOR: Rel. Rnl. Holy seer-caste in KARAKHAS. Historically, they were spiritual leaders, and were common in the early centuries of the FOURTH AGE, until c. 100, when KORACHANI invaders executed most of their numbers.
 - They survived in small numbers amongst the MYSTERY CULTS of KHAR'ILLAE, which survived despite the empire's best efforts to eradicate them. Following the SUNDERING OF THE KORACHANI EMPIRE, Karakhas eventually became a vassal to SARASTRO, and its people were allowed to openly practice their own faiths, and the Vaticinators became common once more. Their practices differ by region, and range from organised religious leaders in urban areas, to barbaric blood worshippers amongst the hinterland tribes, where they are also community leaders.
- VATRICIA: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the c south west of AHRISHEN, close to the border with LYRIDIA. It is rare in that most of the troops stationed there are trained in riding, and mounted patrols along the border are not uncommon, and they can also be found along the stretch of the GREAT ROAD between the border with Lyridia in the south and the city of QAVUZHEN in the north around 120-miles in all.
- \underline{VAUCIA} : Set. Coastal city on the island of \underline{RAUD} , off the southern coast of \underline{PHUT} (Pop. c. 62,000).
- VAUIA: Geo. Major island in the federation of UGURIIT.
- VAULIAR: Set. Settlement in the c west of AZAZEM, noted for its animal husbandry and farms (Pop. c. 16,000).
- VAULLA: 1. Sea. Bay to the far west of the SEA OF AKRY in the far north east of EASTERN LLACHATUL, along the coast of LOEGRESS^(1,).
- 2. Set. City in the c of LOEGRESS^(1.) in the above bay^(1.). It was coastal until as recently as 3600 RM, though now finds itself landlocked, a few miles from the extant coastline. It has seen its population dwindle in the centuries since the loss of its coastline, and many of its buildings lie ruined, overgrown (Pop. c. 24,000).
- VAULT OF ANDOSHANKHA: Rui. Ancient hewn complex in the south west of ELEKHID, in the WAELMIGH rainforest, thought to date back to the early FIFTH AGE, attributed to an otherwise unknown culture, possibly non-human mortal. It is largely ruined, and overgrown with flora, though some believe that its deepest reaches are undisturbed, waiting to be discovered. Local legend says that treasure awaits, undisturbed.
- VAULT OF RECKONING: Mys. Law. In the south west of GNOTH, a place of punishment and contemplation for those followers of GNOTHI MYSTICISM who defy the code set down by ENKIRA when undertaking the FOUR JOURNEYS. The waters of the river RAMIEL pass through the Vault, bathing those banished (and chained) to this place in its waters. Most drown, but others find gnosis, dying as creatures of enlightenment, at one with the dragon.
- VAULT OF ZHERVOXAR: Int. Rui. Str. Ancient labyrinthine vault complex in the c west of ALTHA⁽²⁾, in the rocky valley where the BELLEPHARA Mountains meet the ANTENA Mountains. It is thought to be a necropolis that dates back to the early THIRD AGE, possibly attributed to early independent KERATIN.
- VAULTED MARKET, the: Com. Str. A great indoor market covered by an intricate vaulted ceiling in the southern provinces of the GREATTOWN of DUARIAHAHN in TEMUJA.
- VAULTED MARSHES: Str. Geo. Naturally flaming oil-pits on the eastern coast of the KORACHANI PENINSULA. The gases are collected and used in the manufactories of the region. Covering some 150 square-miles of land, the marsh was vaulted in c. 1000 RM to allow the construction of the city of SERA directly above (now abandoned). It was the most ambitious architectural undertaking of its time and made use of a vast OGHUR labour force and the combined efforts of many nearby cities.
- VAUN: Dem. 'Vaun'. Ntn. Nation in the south west of SAMMAEA, overlooking the SEA OF AMMASH(2.). It is situated in the LHACCIDAN(1.) region of the ISHMMARRAN peninsula and is known for its nacre and purple dye.

Its culture is curious in that there is no marriage as it is commonly understood in most other regions. Instead, adults seek permanent spiritual and intellectual companionship with another individual, who can be of any sex, with which they seek to spend their lives. These unions are known as YRANNAI or 'Life Pairings' and they typically last until the death of one of the individuals, after which the surviving companion spends the rest of their life in mourning.

The nation is known for its vineyards, which occupy the north, and its forges, which are the main industry in the south. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

VAUNAURN: Car. NÁRTHELI cartographer who devised the so-called VAUNAURN PROJECTION in c. 1900 RM.

VAUNAURN PROJECTION: Car. Cartographic PROJECTION originating in NÁRTHEL c. 1900 RM that distorts the poles at the latitudes, effectively stretching out the map so that the curved surface can occupy a flat plane.

Though far from popular (the most contributing factor to its lack of popularity was the fact that accurate scale measurements and calculations were impossible with this projection), the projection became common amongst artisan-cartographers whose search for methods of depicting ELYDEN (a sphere) effectively along a flat plane (a map) was satisfied by the developments of the cartographer VAUNAURN in NARTHEL. Despite the distortion presented at the poles, the projection continues to dominate many artistic depictions of Elyden, despite the more accurate ASTRETAS and VANGULI Projections.

VAURNIR: also 'Archive of the Sixth Wind. Str. Edu. His. Fortified library in the west of THE VORANDINE, close to the coast of the BAY OF LASHA. The archive was home to historical documents dating back to the time of the unification of the Vorandine region by king VORAND, though most were destroyed in recent years by the GODSMEN following the rise to power of the UNITED VORANDI COUNCIL.

VAURNOS: also 'Vault of Vaurnos'. Int. Tec. Sup. Mil. Str. Hidden fortressrepository belonging to the AIWAHAN ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION, where TECHNARCANA and other items of ancient artifice discovered through the Order's activities that have not been destroyed are stored. Knowledge of the fortress is limited and even those who know of it are not privy to its location, and many common servants working in it are ignorant as to its true function.

It is rumoured amongst some of the MPIRE'S INTELLIGENTSIA that the Vault has become home to wondrous and abominable objects that were best left buried and forgotten, with most likely dating to the FOURTH AGE or even earlier, and some of which might be the artifice of SCIONS or the DEMIURGES themselves.

VAUROTH: Ind. Set. Settlement in the c north of the emirate of UKOLIST in the north of LIMOTH⁽¹⁾. It is a major source of silver, and played a role in the development of silversmithing and jewellery, which are now traditional vocations in neighbouring regions, particularly the city of VARANTHA (Pop. c. 8,200).

VAURTU: Rui. Ancient fortress carved into the cliff-like face of the southern-most reaches of the AGGOSHETH, in present-day north western SARAGOS. The fortress dates back to the FOURTH AGE, and is thought to have safeguarded passage through the pass between the south of Aggosheth and the northern reaches of the LEONTA Mountain Little is known of the regions' history, though NATHI records pertaining to the region do hint at a metropolis to the west of Vaurtu populated by one of the TWO-AND-TWENTY MORTAL TRIBES. Any such ruins are now buried beneath the sands of the MOLACHARI DESERT, deep in ANUBIA.

VE MMAGH: Set. Coastal settlement in the south of PHYRR, overlooking the SEA OF AMMASH⁽²⁾. Its fishing industry has waned over recent years due to increasingly polluted waters from runoff from the URRABANA river (Pop. c. 4,000).

VE NARITT: Set. Major coastal city in the south of PHYRR, at the mouth of the river URRABANA. It is one of the most polluted cities in the SLIMA region, with tainted waters from industrial runoff emptying into the BAY OF PELLARIO^(1.) right next to the city, where it controls a large harbour. It is itself responsible for contributing to this pollution from its manufactories, which manufacture TECHNARCANE equipment (Pop. c. 100.000).

VE SGAR: Set. Small coastal city in the south of PHYRR, overlooking the BAY OF PELLARIG^(1.). It was once an agricultural centre though the high pollution in the area led to the death of its fields and it is now a manufacturer of ammunition (Pop. c. 13,600).

VE SPARN: Set. Coastal settlement in the far south of PHYRR, overlooking the BAY OF PELLARIO⁽¹⁾. It was once known for its fishing industry, though industrial-scale fishing ended over a century ago, with only a handful of independent fishermen still plying their trade today, with their nets yielding fewer fish in ever more mishappen forms (Pop. c. 6,000).

VEADRA: Geo. Island 300-miles off the eastern coast of ELEKHID, in the ROILING SEA. Though inhabited, there are few settlements of note on the island.

VEANELE ROISDAN: x. Pol. His. Per. (B. 3381 – 3490 RM) SENESCHAL (1.) to the ALMAGESTI emperor HELVIARN NOCTAMDE who were responsible for his abdication in 3475 RM following a disastrous defeat of Almagesti armies in VALBAR due to an ill-conceived command that had been opposed by the other seneschals. Heirless, his abdication threw Almagest into chaos and the seneschals together formed a hexarchy in 3476 RM, returning Almagest to a republic. Roisdan was elected to archseneschal of the hexarchy in a move that many believed was premeditated and accused them of forcing emperor Helviarn into abdicating to secure more power for the seneschals and ultimately themselves.

VECTIS: Dem. 'Vectisi'. Ntn. Nation in the south east of MENISCEA. Its climate ranges from tropical inland to the south to subtropical savannah in the north, and is divided into two general regions – the level plains of the north and the rocky inland wooded region in the south.

Its people are adept TECHNARCANISTS and are innovators of technology in the FAR HEMISPHERE. Its people are thought to be the most literate in the continent and often travel abroad, there they work as technologists and advisors. It emerged in c. 2190 RM following decades of strife following the disintegration of its precursor state, VAEVECTA^(1.), in c. 2140 RM.

Its founding features in a common legend in the region and it is so engrained in local culture that outsiders are unable to ascertain whether the tale is myth or history. The tale goes thusly: a terrible earthquake long ago left the major cities of the ancestor state of Vaevecta devastated. There were few survivors, and most of them fled into surrounding lands. Amongst them was a young prince who was adopted by the warrior tribes of the west and who over many years became an adept warrior and general, who, without knowing his roots, attacked his old people in the east, slaughtering thousands, and claiming the city of LEHIOK as his own and becoming the first king of Vectis. He learnt the truth of his actions in attacking and conquering his own people on his deathbed, and became known as the CURSED KING. Though the monarchy has since been abolished, he is remembered as the founder of Vectis. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

VEDARUH: See. Small coastal city in the south west of ELAT (Pop. c. 18,000). *

VEDDERA: Soc. A traditional COMING-OF-AGE RITUAL in SARASTRO in which those who turn 17 wear traditional clothing, including mantles, and attend a family gathering in which they make and cook seven small flatbreads from scratch. They then sit at the head of the table of a large meal, signifying their growing maturity. After the meal they take the flatbreads and give each of them to a person of importance to them. This is usually a family member present at the table, though can also include dead relatives or historical figures (in which case the bread is left as an offering to their burial place).

VEDOTER: Pol. Geo. North westernmost of the five political states of VALBAR⁽²⁾. It is one of the more inhospitable states, and is largely covered in permafrost and glaciers. Its people are expert whalers and fishers.

VEERHA: Mil. Str. Fortress in the north of BASSORAH⁽²⁾, overlooking the passes along the SKAROSIAN WASTES.

VEGA OF OSSIPHRAGA: (B. ?) Oth. HALFBLOOD tyrant of OSSIPHRAGA. A powerful set, his mind and body tainted by years of wandering the deserts of the UMBRA SOKHAR. Has subjugated the AL AKHI of the region, which are used as slaves.

VEGATETH: lit. 'the Windy Waters'. Sea. Gulf of water between NAARETH and KHITAI in the north east of SAMMAEA. Once a strait between headland of Naareth and the island of Khitai, the dwindling waters of ELYDEN'S seas saw the island become part of the mainland once more, closing off the strait. Deep, with steep shores, its waters are stagnant and partially poisoned by the rust runoff of the plains of KHELAH in Naareth as well as the HOTHAGHOL in Khitai.

VEGATI: Set. Coastal settlement in the south of NAARETH, overlooking the SEA OF ORMA, in south eastern Naareth, renowned for its fishing fleets and fish meal production (Pop. c. 13,400).

VEGHAKHIR: Geo. Rocky hills in the north west of PHYRR.

VEGNIR: m. (B. 3678 – D. 3762 RM) Per. Car. Cartographer who introduced various means of representing Elyden on a flat plane, the most popular of which is VEGNIR IX.

VEGNIR IX: Car. Cartographic PROJECTION proposed by the cartographer VEGNIR in 3621 RM that is still used to this day. It is a pseudoazimuthal equal-area projection with equally-spaced parallels.

VEHEMER: Pol. Rnk. Rank within the SANCTIFIED ORDERS OF THE INQUISITION and other organisations. They are expert trackers and are employed to hunt down individuals and organisations that have eluded detection.

VEHENTA: Geo. Region of low hills in the north west of KORACHAN, south of the river PHAIA. The region is dotted with the remnants of ancient ruins thought to have fallen to some form of ATRAMENTAL CORRUPTION – as indicated by the large quantities of DUSTSTONE sinkholes in the area.

VEILFLY: Fau. Midges that thrive in marshy terrain. They are named after the veil they create when they swarm out en-masse. They thrive in mildly ATRAMENTAL terrain and seem immune to its taint, though can pass on infections through their bites. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

VEILIA: Com. Set. Fortified settlement in the far south west of CISNERIA, to the west of the BLACK MOUNTAINS. It is a vital trade link between ATARAXIA in the south and AQUARIIA in the west (Pop. c. 5,800).

VEJATI: see VEGATI.

VEKEKRTH: Set. DVERG CLADE in the north east of KASPIA. A large snaking fortress covers the ridged watershed in the harsh region, though the heart of the structure is underground, made up of hewn vaulted chambers

The dverg from Vekekrth regularly trade with the people of Kaspia and they are considered allies, though outsiders know little of them (Pop. unknown).

VEKHMORRH: Set. City in the west of MEHITIEL that is thought to be the home of the founding of the BROTHERHOOD OF THE VIRTUOUS WARD (Pop. c. 41,000).

VEKKER: Geo. Reef off the south western coast of the SHIBBOTHA ISLES, in the south west of SAMMAEA, in the south eastern waters of the SEA OF MERCUVIA.

VEKKIL: Mar. Rel. Rnk. Operatives within the EXECRATOR HOSTS of the REFORMED CHURCH OF SARASTRO, who are lawmakers and judges granted the power to condemn and sentence those hunted by the Hosts in the name of the Reformed Church of Sarastro.

VELAS: Set. Settlement in the c north of Skaros, in the south of the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region known as the STRAIT OF ANEON. Its main industry is the cultivation of the SOLDRED OYSTERS that live in the region, whose pearls are highly prized (Pop. c. 8,000).

VELDAR: 1. Sea. Bay in the far north of LOEGRESS^(1.).
2. Geo. Island in the far north of LOEGRESS^(1.).

VELESH: Set. Conurbation and coal-producer in the north of CHTHYRID. Much of its populace lives below the surface (Pop. c. 29,000).

VELETRA: Set. Coastal settlement on the north of the island of CYNCER^(1.) in the south of the CORAL BARONIES, off the south western coast of SAMMAEA. Its people's main diet consists of soft-shelled shrimp that lives in the waters around the SHIBBOTHA and SHIELD ISLES. These are boiled and eaten whole, usually in stews or with legumes, and as a result locals are known for the slight orange-pink tint to their skin (Pop. c. 7,500).

VELEX: Rui. Abandoned city in the south west of AZAZEM, close to the river HRIDANEM. It was once a major producer of food, though was abandoned in c. 3200 RM following centuries of mismanagement and the wane of soil quality. It is the ancestral home of the HOUSE SENET, which is now one of the ATROPI HOUSES, based in the city of AGLAIA⁽²⁾.

VELIA CARCUNIA: (B. 3921 RM) Pol. Present high-leader of GYZHA, who rose to power following her father's death in 3966 RM.

VELIT: Pol. Soc. PATRICIAN HOUSE that survives in a single estate in the east of AZAZEM. It once owned various iron mines across the KORACHANI EMPIRE, though as these were spent it was unable to branch out into other industries and holdings, relying on its ancestral wealth, slowly selling off its lands until only its ancestral estate in TERZIA remained. Few members of the House remain today and they are reclusive, rarely appearing in public. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

VELLICHOR: Set. Small city in the tribal territory of KORIND, in the north west of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. The city is known for its book-binding tradition (Pop. c. 12,500).

VELIKIA: Rui. Ancient stone monument situated close to the coast of south eastern VENTHIR, facing the TORRENT OF KARROCK. The monument takes the form of a gigantic leonine sphinx, though erosion has marred its features, only hinting to an original beauty that is still celebrated in some Venthiri folk tales.

The monument is thought to date back to the $\underline{VENATHI\ EMPIRE}$, when much of present-day southern $\underline{TZALLRACH}$ was under $\underline{VENATHI}$ rule.

VELLORIN: See. Small coastal city on the island of ELDARA in the MAIDEN ISLES (Pop. c. 11,200).

VELMORA: Sec. Small fortified city in the far south west of KOMMEA. It is the primary recruiting grounds for the bastion of AIRMED, whose forces patrol the nation's south western border (Pop. c. 16,000).

VELOCIPEDE: Veh. Obj. Simple MORTAL-powered vehicles that commonly have two, three or four wheels and are powered by pedalling with the feet and, less commonly, the hands. They typically seat a single person, but versions that seat tow are more people can be found.

They are most common in urban areas around the INNER SEA REGION, with people riding them across cities, though they can also be seen moving people between close settlements.

VELQOOM: Rui. MERILL culture and civilisation that existed during the THIRD AGE off the eastern coast of LAASKHA. Many ruins were slowly revealed throughout the course of the FIFTH AGE as the sea levels retreated, with the largest being some miles south west of the city of BAAYN. These ruins are famed for their greenish soapstone structures and expansive reach, and are popular amongst explorers and tourists, including those undertaking the GRAND TOUR.

VELTHUR: Set. Small city in the east of AYAD. Its main industry is the cultivation of fruits, most of which are exported east as exotic foods (Pop. c. 12.000).

VELTURIA: Rui. Tec. Str. Abandoned SIPHON ENGINES in the far north of CISNERIA, in the DIVUMMA Mountains. The settlement was abandoned in c. 3865 RM after dwindling umbra reserves made the upkeep untenable.

VELUTINA: Set. Small city in the region of CATAFLAQUE in the north of the UMBRA SOKHAR (Pop. c. 15,000).

VELVERDA: 1. Geo. Valley in the c of CISNERIA, formed by the flow of the river SAKHAOST.

2. Pol. Set. Capital city of CISNERIA. It is home to much politicking amongst the seven major CLANS, which are constantly at odds with one another in the hopes of gaining the influence of CHILD-MONARCH. (Pop. c. 370,000).

VELVET SNAKE: Sup. Fau. Grotesque RACHAR (abomination) that lives in the untamed wastes of deep SHAZGIN. They appear as flattened snakes, about 20-ft. long and 1 – 2-ft. wide. They have featureless bulbous eyes though have no other features, including orifices or sensory organs, though their underbellies are covered in penny-sized sucker-like feelers that they feed through.

They strangle and constrict their prey, which can include anything roughly the size of MORTALS or even larger if they are desperate. Once subdued, they exert a foul-smelling slime from the feelers that dissolves the flesh of their prey, allowing them to feed on them whilst they are still alive, writing in agony. The snakes will wrap themselves around their prey and remain motionless, sometimes for days at a time, as they slowly absorb the liquefied flesh, leaving behind perfectly preserved bones, which serve as tell-tale signs that yelvet snakes are near.

They are feared and shunned by travellers and rarely feed on mortals as a result. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

VEMDI: Int. Soc. Individuals in SUMA'YA and BA'AKH who forsake their families and homes, volunteering to become members of a caste who devote themselves to protecting their homeland from ATRAMENTAL TAINT, putting themselves at great risk for the greater good of their communities.

It is common, but not expected, for anyone reaching the age of 50 (a venerable age in such lands) to abandon their lives in this way. Few of them survive this ordeal, with a 2-5 years of service deemed fruitful. Most contract AEPATHY and other ATRAMENTAL AILMENTS during their work, dying in great agony away from their families.

They are regarded as heroes and are awarded with state funerals and are buried in special necropolises, known as DARAMEUTIN, with their names proudly displayed for all to see.

VENA: Geo. Basin in the east of the TEMPLAR STATES, forming the easternmost reaches of the SIDIRION Mountains⁽¹⁾.

VENANT: Pol. Set. Coastal city and capital of DHAT, in the south east of the nation. It was settled by freed slaves in c. 3300 RM (Pop. unknown).

VENATOR: Law. Rnk. EXECUTIONERS and assassins in VAALK who follow in the footsteps of an elite class of warrior from ancient cultures that predated Vaalk, such as VALKA and ULLUASH. They wear stylised armour in the image of demons from ancient legends and perform elaborate ritual death dances. They are amongst the few castes of executioners in the Inner Sea region who are not treated as pariahs, though few think highly of them, and their use has since spread to the KORACHANI EMPIRE.

Ironically, since the subjugation of Vaalk by SARASTRO in 3736 RM, the use of venators has waned, having been superseded by the religious rank of PURSUANT.

VENATH: His. Set. City funded in c. – 300 RM in the kingdom of NATH, along the (then) coast of the DARK SEA, north east of the plains of HAMSHEN. Following the 'LION HERESIES' and the fragmentation of NATH in c. -190 RM into several warring city-states, Venath rose in c. -50 RM as the most powerful city in the region. By c. 100 RM its ASANATE rulers had united the old Nathi states and created the empire of VENATH which rapidly expanded.

Though it was not to last. The CATACLYSM OF KHAMID in 101 RM left many coastal areas destroyed and the death of LABAISINGH in 151 RM left the ruling Asanate struggling amongst itself even as the effects of a coastline that had been in slow retreat for centuries were truly felt. The reappearance of the SPHINX HETEPHERES in 194 RM brought further chaos to the region and the city continued to dwindle, with many leaving it for HETEPHEROPOLIS, which became the new capital in 201 RM. Following this, Venath was allowed to die, its buildings and land-locked harbours falling into ruin even as the coastline continued to craw north.

Today the city is a sun-bleached ruin, 10-miles from the coast, the hulks of ancient ships lying rusting, rotten, half buried in the dust of almost 4-millennia. The place is shunned by the people of Venthir who have forsaken it since the rise of Hetepheres.

VENATHI: Lan. Language of the VENATHI EMPIRE and, later, its VENTHIRI successor. It is spoken to this day in Venthir, though is very different from its ancestral version, and has been corrupted by the presence of the KORACHANI EMPIRE there, amongst other influences. A purer form of the language is spoken in SARAGOS, possibly due its sundering from Venthir over 2 millennia past. See Vol II: Languages.

VENATHI EMPIRE: His. Ntn. Extinct nation that appeared in the wake of the fragmented NATHI KINGDOMS, which until c. -190 had dominated the region. It was supplanted in 201 RM by the kingdom of VENTHIR. See Vol III: Extinct States.

 $\underline{\textbf{VENAUT}} : \textit{Set.} \ Settlement in the east of the tribe of \underline{\textbf{DRAKAINA}}, in the east of the \underline{\textbf{GROWING MOUNTAINS}} \ of \underline{\textbf{MULCIBER}} \ (Pop. \ c. \ 6,000).$

VENEFICIF: Rnk. Voc. Med. Name given to poisoners in the KORACHANI EMPIRE. Typically, veneficii create their own poisons, using ingredients from flora, fauna, minerals, and other sources, building upon expertise collected over millennia of practice. In some cases, the veneficii will administer poisons themselves, though for the most part their role extends to the preparation and sale of poisons via black-market to others.

Historically, the veneficii would see a rise in popularity during periods when the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR excised himself from the political arena during periods of ennui. In these times political intrigue and backstabbing would explode, leading to a rise in assassinations, for which the veneficii would be blamed. Though individuals might have been apprehended to make examples of, the profession as a whole would survive unscathed, as for every assassination there would be dozens of new plots.

Despite many unfounded rumours, there is no underlying organisation or link between individual veneficii, save what relations individuals might foster amongst themselves. They tend to work alone, using messengers and $3^{\rm rd}$ parties as go-betweens, to keep their business safe from retribution.

In some places the term is used for rat catchers and others involved in pest control, harking back to an ancient usage of the word, which has gone out of fashion elsewhere.

VENEHIR: Set. Settlement in the east of ELAT. Its main industry is the mining of tin (Pop. c. 5,000).

VENER: Set. City in the c west of KARGAMA, in the c of the LAMAGHINE Plains. It was founded in c. -1250 RM and later became famed for its horse breeding, remaining so to this day. Its people would eventually become expert riders, providing recruits to the first mounted corps of the ELITAGRI FEDERATION, remaining an important part of military recruitment to this day (Pop. c. 37,400).

VENESH: Sec. Major fortified coastal city in the south east of ELAT, at the mouth of the river SOSSOR. It is a military centre and thought to be a hub of Elatian espionage in the east (Pop. c. 175,500).

VENETIA: Set. Small city in the west of KORACHAN, dating to c. 2230 RM (Pop. c. 12,000).

VENHUNDUR: Rel. Rnl. Priest-hunters in PERGOST and the north west of SABIA. They fulfil the role of spiritual leaders and, in smaller communities and amongst the TURAAN, are chief hunters, especially during the festivals of the FLIDAIS-hunt.

VENIA ZIX: Leg. Set. Dre. Legendary city common in many MENISCEAN folktales, thought to have originated in ancient VAEVECTAN^(L) mythologies. It is said to lie between the MATERIAL PLANE and the OTHERWORLD, where MORTALS, SPIRITS^(L) and OTHERWORLDERS live together in harmony. Some believe that it is a real city, perhaps located in a DREAMSCAPE or a LACUNA that allows it to coexist between the Material and the otherworld, though there is little evidence supporting this (Pop. unknown).

VENNA: Set. Settlement in the far south west of ALAM BETHYL, in the territory of BOTHUAR^(1.). Its main industry is iron mining (Pop. c. 5,300).

VENNON: Rvr. River in the south west of ZHARIAH^(2.), flowing south east for 615-miles from sources in the SHAROOK Highlands before meeting the BAY OF MAELER.

VENTHA: 1. Sca. Sea separating VENTHIR from TZALLRACH. The sea was once far smaller than it is today, as much of what is today the BOILING SEA, was created through the unexplained calamity known as the CATACLYSM OF KHAMID in 101 RM, before which it was all land.

Once, two main passes lead into the sea: the STRAIT OF SAOR in the north (still used to this day, though contested by LALAUN and BAOST); and the TORRENT OF KARROCK in the south.

2. Cur. Currency in VENTHIR, established in 3789 RM, after its independence from the KORACHANI EMPIRE 8 years earlier. See Vol II: Currency and Coinage in Elyden.

VENTHIR: Dem. 'Venthiri'. Ntn. Dominating the north eastern coast of the ARID TRIPTYCH in SAMMAEA, Venthir is a large kingdom that exists in the rain shadow of a long mountain-chain that separates it from the deserts of ANUBIA. Despite this, it is a fertile land of many rivers and large plains that are home to great cities and a proud people whose roots go back to the early FIFTH AGE VENATHI empire. For much of its existence Venthir was a vassal of the KORACHANI empire, enjoying a degree of autonomy that was largely due to the force of will of its sphinx regent – HETEPHERES, better known as the Strangler, or, informally, the Bitch-queen.

Under her control since 201 RM, Venthir was a centre of industry, trade and the ALCHEMICAL arts. A paranoid ruler, she had her lands heavily policed from internal threats and guarded against external threats, but was otherwise uninvolved in the goings-on of her kingdom, with her ASANATES ruling on her behalf. In her absence the Asanate aided its neighbour SARASTRO in its defence against Korachani attack.

Alerted by a Korachani spy, Hetepheres pulled her armies out of Sarastro. The action led to Sarastro's defeat in 339 RM. For decades Venthir waited for war, preparing its borders. Then in 359 RM the unexpected happened.

The ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR entered Hetepheropolis as a guest, where he was shown the might of Hetepheres' armies. He departed after the two spoke alone, then, 2-years later, Hetepheres simply handed Venthir over to Korachan. She remained regent and was granted a level of autonomy that other conquered states envied. Imperial PATRICIANS and workers flowed into TEIRA, which by 376 RM had become the heart of the Korachani administration as Hetepheropolis remained the queen's playground. The RELIGIOUS CULT that had gown around her was allowed to remain though it was designated a sub-cult of the Church of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE.

Her paranoia led to the political influence of a TECHNOLOGIST caste, who were responsible for creating TECHNARCANE ORTHOSES to shield her from the thoughts of other sphinxes. They would go on to become her rulers in Teira, overseeing a healthy economy that helped Venthir flourish as Hetepheres disappeared in her chambers.

She emerged in 1905 RM after centuries of absence. Fearful of the power the technologists had accrued, she abolished the technocracy the next year and went on a savage campaign that saw manufactories and industrial centres destroyed, beginning a dark age for Venthir. Many of the technologists fled their persecution, settling lands to the south, eventually founding the technocracy of SARAGOS in 1939 RM.

Venthir waned after this, becoming insular, its economy faltering. It became a leech to Korachani coffers. Hetepheres became more reclusive, consorting with personal technologists, searching for new orthoses and implants to further distance her from the auguries of her KIN. Many Korachani institutions withdrew from Venthir. And the destruction of its industrial centres had the adverse effect of allowing Atramental lands to increase in size, claiming many settlements by 3010 RM.

In 3061 RM Venthir was granted control of much of the east of NÁRTHEL in return for the regions' restoration. His helped restore industry and commerce to the region and it grew in influence once more.

Starting in c. 3640 RM Venthir began a process of militarising, increasing military industrial output – a move that most observers knew meant that Hetepheres was mobilising for war. On the $11^{\rm th}$ of CYKRANALEN of 3703 RM, Korachan, pressured by the growing strength of Venthir's forces, attempted to tighten its leash on the vassal state, though this backfired and almost immediately led to the latter state declaring war with Sarastro to save face. This began a cascade of events that led to the WAR OF SUNDERING and the eventual SUNDERING OF THE KORACHANI EMPIRE in 3705 RM.

The Sundering of the empire saw most of its southern territories lost to Sarastro, and though Venthir remained loyal to the high-empire, it became more confident and conflict with Sarastro increased along their borders. Following decades of strained contact exacerbated by the silting of the STRAIT OF NÁRTHEL, Venthir finally broke away from Korachan in 3781 RM, being an independent region since then. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

VENTHIRI CROSS: also 'crutch cross'. Obj. An equilateral cross with crossbars at the four ends. It was a common heraldic device amongst FARASIDS in classical times.

VENTHIRI CROWN DEPENDENCIES: Pol. Geo. Two island territories that are self-governing island-nations of the VENTHIRI crown, comprising LATHLOS CHA, and SIMENIA. Both are located close to Venthir, within the home to Venthiri forts and garrisons, which protect the territories from attack or invasion.

VENTHIRI ROYAL ZOOLOGICAL GARDENS: Edu. Flo. Fau. Str. Expansive gardens forming a large part of the western outskirts of the city of HETEPHEROPOLIS in the c of VENTHIR. The gardens are known for their exotic collection of flora and fauna, many examples of which come from distant parts of ELYDEN. Despite the surrounding arid climate, the gardens' climate is controlled through the action of shapers and technarcane engines, allowing the specimens to thrive in their natural conditions

VENTHIRI/SARASTROAN WAR: Mil. His. Conflict *

VENTIA: Set. Settlement in the north west of SARAGOS. It is home to the renowned SARAGOSI UNIVERSITY OF TECHNARCANA. The university dominates life in the town (Pop. c.8,000).

VENTII: Set. City in the c of RAONGEN⁽²⁾ in the south eastern-most shore of lake TAHONG. Its main industry is fishing, though it also controls various shipping houses, that carry goods across the lake (Pop. c. 50,000).

VENTRADEII: Geo. Rock fields in the south of J'THANA.

VENTUDIA: Set. Small city in VALA. It is known for its breeders of Firmamental creatures (Pop. c. 12,200).

VENU: Set. Settlement in the north of AYAD (Pop. c. 3,800).

VENZA: Set. Small coastal city in the east of western SKAROS, overlooking the western coast of the STRAIT OF SKAROS (Pop. c. 18,000).

VEPAR: 1. Pol. One of three prefectures that make up LYRIDIA DHAI, which was became a free nation following the disappearance of it tyrannical ruler disappeared in 3742 RM, following years of subjugation before which it had been a KORACHANI INTERREGNUM since 1704 RM. 2. Pol. Set. Fortified city in LYRIDIA DHAI, and capital of its northern-most prefecture (1.). It is an ancient city with tumultuous history. It was capital of the ancient LYRADEAN government in -234 RM and was populated by a mix of SVATHI people who had immigrated there in c. -1300 RM, and AMNATHI settlers who moved north following the dissolution of the Amnathi nation in -589 RM, though bloodlines mingled following the rise of the Lyradean nation. During the KORACHANI blockade of Lyradea and NARTHEL in 81 RM, the militocratic caste known as the Vepari gained prominence and began militarising the nation despite the wishes of the AUGURS. The Vepari declared war on Korachan in 85 RM, which would lead to the Korachani occupation of south western Lyradea, later to become known as Lyridia Dhai. Korachani influence caused LYRIDIA to abandon Vepar, moving the capital temporarily to SOLEAS in 91 RM. Vepar would become imperialised over the coming decades, with immigrant patrician families marrying into Vepari nobility.

Under the Korachani government, Vepar became one of the most imperialised cities, with vast numbers of Korachani immigrants arriving there in c. 150 – 220 RM. Indeed, when Korachan abandoned Lyridia Dhai to the INTERREGES in 1704 RM, it maintained control of Vepar until 2185 RM. Under the Interreges, Vepar became the centre of a small tyranny, where by 2838 a single Interreges umbraphage remained, known as 'the Lord', who would subjugate the surrounding lands to his will until his disappearance in 3742 RM.

Lyridia Dhai was divided into three realms over the following years, with Vepar becoming the centre of the northern-most realm. Its imperial roots are clearly evident, though have been corrupted by time and an emergent culture into something unique. Despite this it retains the imperial religion and the SHADOW MARCH passes through it to this day (Pop. c. 547,200).

VERAAD: Sup. Kaspian witch captured by the Korachani empire in 4006 RM, who under duress betrayed the Firmamental secrets to the Avénethi Sanctified Order of the Inquisition.

VERACHAN: Set. Settlement and remnant of a far larger mining town that appeared in c. 600 RM following large-scale open-caste mining appeared in the region. the mines were spent by c. 1900 RM, though the town survived, largely due to its relative vicinity to the conurbation of KORACHAN (10-miles), where it served as a satellite, serving as a manufacturer of food and other necessities for the city.

The site now occupied by Verachan was once a neolithic temple, though the ancient structure has long-since been built over, replaced by a temple of life and death and, later, following the rise of the CHURCH OF

THE UNDYING MACHINE, a temple dedicated to RACHANAEL RISEN (Pop. c. 3,200).

VERAGGASZ: 1. Int. Sup. Geo. Noisome sinkhole in the east of VÂRR, in the south east of the SARRAHAL plains. The sinkhole is close to a mile wide, and is uneven, with rocky terraces and shelves leading to its deepest point – a gaping pitch-black maw some 50-ft. wide from which exudes dank air. The hollow is said to lead to the PRISON CARCERI, though any attempts to reach the bottom have thus-far failed. The sides of the sinkhole are riddles with shallow caves and cliffs and have been used at various times throughout history by outlaws, bandits, heretics and degenerates.

2. Mil. Str. fortress in the east of \underline{VARR} guarding the above sinkhole (1.) from intrusion

VERAH: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the far south east of ALAM BETHYL, guarding the border south with ALMAGEST.

VERBIEA: Rvr. River in the east of ABATTUR, flowing west and north for 660-miles from sources in the hills between the CABIENAN Highlands and the north east of the VOULLOR Mountains, before meeting its parent, the river SEBRENNA.

VERDANT EMPIRE, the: Lan. Ntn. Name traditionally used for FOREST KINGDOMS of MALAN amongst the people of EASTERN LLACHATUL, particularly TETHYSIA, whose vast deserts make for a stark contract with the green lands of its western neighbour.

VERDARA: Set. Major city in the south of AMMESH. It was once coastal though the retreat of ELYDEN'S seas have left it landlocked, some miles from the coast, along the course of the river COLDOR, which drains lake col into the BAY OF TIRIL (Pop. c. 372,000).

VERDAS: Ser. Agricultural town in the east of IPANAH^(2.) (Pop. c. 4,200).
VEREDI: Pol. Soc. PATRICIAN HOUSE based within VENTHIR, with roots in KORACHAN. Its main business interests are mining of silicates and sand for use in the glass industry, and it controls various territories and traderoutes in the south of Venthir. See Vol II: Renowned Patrician Houses.

VEREDI ESTATE: Str. Soc. Ancestral home of the VEREDI PATRICIAN HOUSE, located in the south of VENTHIR, just east of the GO BISAMMAM desert. It is famed for its wine, which is made from grapes grown on the estate, and is home to a reclusive writer, amongst others, all members or close associates of the House Veredi.

VEREH THE PANSOPHIC: (D. c. 1230 RM) deranged alchemist who in c. 1200 RM penned the ALCHEMIE GROTESQUE, detailing the methods and philosophies of the School of ALCHEMIE, developed in MIDAL, VENTHIR. His travels across the BLACK MOUNTAINS. were instrumental in the works' creation, and it has been consulted by alchemists ever since.

VEREIN: Geo. Island in the west of the MAIDEN ISLES.

VEREN ITRUSH: Sea. Shallow lagoon off the northern coast of KEPHUAAN, in the south west of SAMMAEA. It forms an extension of the SEA OF MERCUVIA.

VEREND: Pol. Soc. Ind. PATRICIAN HOUSE based in the city of DORMIVEGLIA. The House is responsible for the mining of DREAMSTONES, which are worked and sold as jewellery to the nobility of the INNER SEA and beyond. Unworked stones are sold to ONEIROMANCERS, who value the DREAMS the stones are said to contain. The House values oneiromancers and family members who display an affinity for that sphere of shaping are given the best education the House can afford, and such individuals often rise to positions of power within the House. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

VERENTHIA: Rui. Abandoned city in the far north of CISNERIA, in the DIVUMMA Mountains. It was once a major source of UMBRA, but reserves had dwindled by 3810 RM, and the city diminished in the subsequent years, until its final abandonment before 3900 RM. Today its ruin is crumbling to the elements.

VERESAMIID: Rvr. River in the c south west of NOAVATUR, flowing south for 625-miles from sources in the OMMOQHUZH and QOSHHANAITH Mountains before meeting north west of the SEA OF RTHAS.

VERICHA: Set. Small city in the c south of PNESSA. It is a crossroads of trade and is known for its caravanserais and trade yards (Pop. c. 12,000). VERIGADA: Set. Settlement in the c south east of ETUA. Its people are fervent believers in the GIBBERING WORM and they practice grisly rites of sacrifice that are shunned in even other regions of Etua (Pop. c. 8,000).

VERIS: Set. Small city in the north west of KORACHAN, along the passage of the SHADOW MARCH. It is home to the TEMPLE OF THE THRICE-BORN PROPHET and is a site of pilgrimage to PETITIONERS OF THE MACHINE (Pop. c. 12,000).

VERITANDIA: Set. Small coastal city in the far western mainland of the PANTHEON ISLES. It is home to a large naval base, where ships that patrol the LIMOTHAN CHANNEL are based (Pop. c. 20,000).

VERIX: Sct. Coastal settlement in the c of the mainland PANTHEON ISLES (Pop. c. 3,000).

VERKES: also 'sandweaver'. Fau. Large termite-like insects, reaching sizes of around 1" – 1.5". They live in deserts and construct small intricate spiralling structures from sand that collect dew overnight. The sandweavers collect the water and take individual drops to their subterranean hives. These spirals can number in their tens of thousands and cover dunes, though they are ephemeral, rarely lasting more than a handful of days at most, particularly in windy regions, where the motion of dunes can cause them to collapse. Due to this, the sandweavers work ceaselessly, creating new spirals. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

VERMEIL ABYSM, the: Geo. Fissure in the c north of CYHLAGHARR. The fissures began to appear in the north of the GRCAUTHAIRM Mountains in c. 2977 RM and have grown steadily since then. The present name comes from the deepest fissure, which has revealed dark red rocks and a steady plume of steam.

VERMES: also 'the Wastes of Vermes'. Int. Geo. Rust desert dominating the southern-most expanse of SHAZGIN, bordered by the EGETAKH and SABARAAN Mountains to the west and east, respectively. It was once home to a monolithic metropolis-nation; though the place is now a wasteland of chemical lakes and gigantic rusted girders. The desert itself is the product of rust and dust from the long-gone edifices of that ancient nation, and strange gigantic manta-like worms glide through the dunes, on whose backs cling psychic lamprey-things.

VERMIS: Set. Coastal cliffside city in the far west of the VESPERTINE
LEAGUE. The city is noted for its tiered layout, along the natural cliff terraces along the coast (Pop. c. 62,000).

VERMICULA: Int. Set. The only known CESTOID city, in the western ridge of the ATRAMENTAL RICTUS. Discovered by a KORACHANI expedition in 3331 RM, the city, if such it can be called, is made up of marrow-like structures of a strangle lattice-like quality in which many cestoids were gathered (Pop. unknown).

VEROAL: Set. City in the north east of SEDALLIA. It forms a part of the VESHONAN PASSAGE trade route (Pop. c. 58,000).

VERSIPELLIAN: Plr. 'Versipellianin'. Int. Rnk. Sup. Pol. Rare ATRAMENTALLY-created POSTMORTAL form employed at great cost by the KORACHANI EMPIRE and, following its sundering in 3705 RM, the REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO, though other states (such as PARTHIS or ALMAGEST) may make use of similar individuals.

Verispellians are known for their shapeshifting properties and the lengthy arduous process an unfortunate individual must go through to attain such abilities. Candidates are drafted from prospective SHAPERS who show an affinity for such metamorphic abilities (such as the ANALOGONIN of Korachan) and are subsequently subjected to years of experimentation, augmentation, and enhancement, with orthoses and stimulant injectors grafted into them to better serve their purpose of subterfuge and disguise.

Their creation and upkeep are incredibly expensive and their use has lessened over the past centuries as resources and funds wane, though they are still believed to be employed in sensitive political missions.

VERTAEIA: Geo. Peninsula in the north west of the island-continent of BROR^(1.), around 600-miles long, dominating the north of KASIHAAL, ending in the southern tower of MELMOTH. The feature is peaked by dark young rock that forms a mountainous spine along the centre of the peninsula. The region, particularly the northern face, which overlooks the FIRMAMENTAL WASTES of PHAEIN, is arid, with little life.

Island-chains stretching north west from Vertaeia to the island of Kraja, 650-miles distant has led geologists to postulate that the spine continues underwater, ending at the north western-most point of Kraja.

VERTANDI: Rvr. River in the c west of AMMESH, in the AMMASHI⁽¹⁾ peninsula, in the south west of SAMMAEA. It flows north west for 185-miles before meeting its parent, the river TAMANTI. It is the main outlet of lake RALIA, which is fed by dozens of different rivers.

VERTEX: Sup. Geo. (35,000-ft.) Highest point in ELYDEN, located in the south of the CHORHYST PHENOMENON, in the south west of MENISCEA. It is thought to be around 35,000-ft. high and is produced by the extreme FIRMAMENTAL influence in the region that has peeled part of Elyden's crust upwards in mockery of gravity. The region is inhospitable, not only due to the FIRMAMENTAL TAINT, but also due to the thin air and howling winds that batter the formation.

VERTUM: Ind. Set. Settlement in the south west of CISNERIA, to the west of the BLACK MOUNTAINS. Its main industry is the mining of BLOODSTONES (Pop. c. 5,800).

VERUNDI: Set. Coastal settlement in the south east of KEPHUAAN, overlooking the BAY OF COMMARA^(1.) (Pop. c. 6, 750).

VESHAK ULADHR: x. Ind. Pol. Per. (B. 3911 RM) Ruler of the city-manufactory of WENCHARI in the north west of PHYRR, and one of the most powerful TECHNARCHS. They are a master TECHNARCANIST and currently stand in the good graces of the IMPERIARCH, under whose auspices they serve as a close advisor. Uladhr oversees many of the nation's industrial operations, particularly those involving the manufacture of technarcana and possession engines. They are known for their ruthlessness and ambition, constantly seeking new ways to enhance their power through increasingly dangerous grafts and ORTHOSES.

VESHON: Set. Major mercantile city in the c of CEHOPHELA, to the east of the CEHOPHELAN Plateau. It is ruled by three merchant houses and is the centre of the intermediary trade route known as the VESHONAN PASSAGE, which links the EGETAKHAN ROAD with the SOVEREIGNS' ROAD (Pop. c. 180,000).

VESHONAN PASSAGE: Com. Geo. Trade route in the north west of Meniscea, linking the EGETAKHAN ROAD in the west with the SOVEREIGNS' ROAD in the east. Operated by the three ruling merchant houses of the city of VESHON, it is lucrative and brings much wealth to the city.

VESICANT WASTES: Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region in the c south of KHARKHARADONTIS, known for its blistered terrain.

The region is categorised as $\underline{\text{DANGEROUS}}$ by the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI}}$ $\underline{\text{INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES}}$.

VESPAR: Set. City-state in the north east of PHYRR, along the course of the river DHALILA, in the shadow of the SASTAKAUR Massif. It is home to ATRAMENTALLY-trained assassins of great renown who operate across Phyrr and the NACRE ROAD, selling their services to the highest bidder – often members of the NACRE LEAGUE (Pop. c. 80,000).

VESPEN BIT: See BIT, VESPEN.

VESPER: 1. Geo. Expansive plains that once dominated the VESPERTINE LEAGUE.

2. Dem. 'Vesperi'. His. Pol. Geo. One of five distinct political and cultural regions that emerged from the collapse of the THERASHIAN EMPIRE in 902 RM. It was the northern-most of the five states, located in what is now approximately the north of the VESPERTINE LEAGUE, between ENITH and KHULL. It is believed to have struggled the most out of those descendant states, and by the time the others had formed singular governments in c. 1050 RM, it was still struggling to find its feet. Fishing settlements around the BAY OF BATHIN became targets of piracy and coastal raids, forcing many communities to abandon their old homes and move farther inland, where they reverted to a more pastoral rural life centred around closeknit families. They traded with each other and explored the wildernesses of their new home, finding various plants and herbs that they began to harvest. Amongst them was the psychoactive herb MULLEN, which they learnt acted as both a painkiller as well as an aggressant. Some people began smoking this herb, becoming outcasts who were ejected from their groups. Eventually, by c 1200 RM many of these outcasts had gravitated to each other, settling the area of Sashell (1.1), forming a loose coalition of people, who over the years emerged into a small independent state within Vesper, known as Sashell⁽²⁾.

In 1434 RM the KNIGHTS OF ST. MALICHAR launched a crusade against the EHRENISIAN COAST, reaching as far West as Vesper. For years they ravaged the regions, terrorising coastal settlements and sending missionaries inland to spread the word of the UNDYING MACHINE. There they encountered the BERSERKER-MAGES of Sashell, who proved instrumental in defeating them, though they were effectively wiped out in the process, ending their tradition in the same stroke that saved their land. Ironically, the term vesper⁽³⁾ has now become synonymous for unruly behaviour across the north of Sammaea.

The war left Vesper crippled, and it divided into two separate states in a bid to cope with the situation – Vesper to the west of the bay, and UGHTEN to the east.

By c. 1900 RM the Bay of Bathin began to diminish in size, and within a few centuries it had become a lake. Vesper and Ughten worked together to create a network of canals and lochs that linked the lake to the sea, allowing its coastal cities to remain connected to the sea of ANIPTERRA, but the engineering project grew too costly and it was abandoned on a large scale in 2251 RM. Within a century the lake itself has disappeared, leading to environmental collapse across the two nations, who begin to struggle, leading to worsening relations that ultimately leads to a war that ends in 2355 RM with the signing of a peace treaty.

Vesper eventually fragmented following the signing of the treaty, leading to a time of great uncertainty. Ughten took advantage of this and over the next centuries moved against the vesperi city-states, slowly assimilating them until the remaining settlements formed a defensive alliance in 2377 RM that became known as the Vespertine League. This managed to not only stop the Ughteni armies, but began a period of retaliatory action that ended in 2523 RM with the sacking of Ughten and the assimilation of its territories.

Following this, the Vespertine League would continue to advance in the south, expanding greatly to beyond the equator and as far east as the GULF OF ESHIRON. See Vol III: Extinct States.

3. Lan. Common term synonymous with unruly behaviour and vandalism, that is derived from the BERSERKER-MAGES of SASHELL⁽²⁾, though misattributed to the Vesperi⁽²⁾ culture from which they had emerged. It is common across the north of SAMMAEA, and most people use it without knowing the origins of the term.

VESPERTINE: Lan. Language spoken in the VESPERTINE LEAGUE that has existed since around 1000 RM. See Vol II: Languages.

VESPERTINE ALLIANCE: Pol. His. Historical alliance of city-states (known as ASONAS) in the c west of the present-day Vespertine League^(2.) that formed in 2377 RM in response to attacks made by UGHTEN against them. The alliance was the predecessor of the VESPERTINE LEAGUE^(1.) of today, which became a formal political alliance in 2679 RM.

VESPERTINE CONFLICTS, the: His. War. Period of conflict in the present-day VESPERTINE LEAGUE^(2.) caused by the diminishing of the BAY OF BATHIN in 2251 RM and tensions that arose following this calamity. The conflict began in 2372 RM with the state of UGHTEN moving against the Vespertine City-states to its west. Many of the cities were sacked, causing the cities to form an alliance that became known as the VESPERTINE ALLIANCE. The war became one of attrition, with neither side gaining a full advantage, though many regions of UGHTEN^(1.) and other independent surrounding areas eventually joined forces with the Vespertine Alliance, giving them a distinct advantage by c. 2521 RM.

This enabled the allied armies to march against Ughten, sacking cities as they went. The war eventually ended in 2523 RM with the sacking of Ughten⁽²⁾ and the Alliance would evolve into the Vespertine League⁽²⁾.

VESPERTINE LEAGUE: 1. Ntn. League of allied city-states (known as ASONAS) and nations that dominates the c north west of SAMMAEA, between the CITIZENRY OF THALI in the west and the northern-most reaches of the KARKARMIS Mountains in the east. much of its north eastern territories are dominated by the BITAMMAN Desert.

The League formed in 2679 RM, though its roots go back far earlier to the mid-FIFTH AGE nation of VESPER^(2.), which disintegrated into various city-states in 2359 RM following a short war with its neighbour Ughten.

Ughten later marched against the independent cities of Vesper, which were forced into an alliance to defend their lands in 2377 RM. The alliance remained in place after the war ended, and would eventually grow into the expansive league of Vespertine cities that exists today.

There are as many as fifty states that are part of the League, and these range from single city-states to larger states with up to a dozen settlements under their control. The league takes its name from the dry savannah and plains that dominates its northern-most expanse, though some claim that is directly inspired by the predecessor state known as Vesper^(2.), which fractures into a series of loosely-allies states and cities in c. 2359 RM.

Though it is not a true nation, its many cities and states follow a code of laws known as the CONCLAVE OF CITIES, which resulted from the formal declaration of the League as a political entity following a lengthy meeting between representatives from hundreds of the cities that took place in 2679 RM. The Conclave (as both the event and the code of laws are more commonly known) saw to the formation of an expansive policing force known as the KEEPERS OF THE CITIES, which serves as tax collectors, police, lawkeepers, and soldiers, though their primary role remains as that of political watchdogs, ensuring that all cities observe the Conclave.

The region became the centre of an artistic revolution between c. 3100 - 3250 RM, after the Leage and its rulers grew suddenly wealthy following the discovery of vast coal reserves within its territories. During this time wealthy Leage rulers commissioned great works of art – palaces, statues, paintings, poems, and others – with which to show their refinement and flaunt their wealth to their neighbours. Scientific discoveries were also made during this period, bringing the region closer in technological advancement with the Inner Sea Region. The regions' fondness for firearms began during this time and the Vespertine League is now famed for its exquisitely-made firearms that are as much works of art as the paintings and statues that adorn its cities.

Its people are known for their facial tattoos, which once existed to mark one's caste, but which remain now as a cultural label, worn by those who want a tangible link with their history and ancestors. The tattoos are linear in form and are commonly worn on the chin, brow and cheeks, with lines symbolising a genealogical link – the more lines, the more generations the individual can trace their heritage back to.

It is one of few regions in ELYDEN that has access to OMNATITE and PARADROSS reserves, and mining and distribution is heavily controlled by the League⁽²⁾ itself and is rife with corruption. The region is also rich in coal, and it is the largest exporter of the valued substance in all Elyden, with its mining forming the backbone of most of its states' economies — the black crown on the League's flag symbolises the black lung that afflicts most of its miners.

The north eastern states of the Vespertine League are famed for their DAEMON-IDOLS – regional gods that are embodied in large idols, where to all intents and purposes the idol is the deity. This is similar to the practice of KARGAMAN IDOLATRY in the neighbouring state of KARGAMA, and the idols they worship are believed to have the same (unknown) origins in the THIRD AGE. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

2. Pol. Org. The governing body of the eponymously-named⁽¹⁾ union of states in the north west of SAMMAEA that has existed since 1157 RM. The governing body emerged to control access to and distribution of the much-coveted ore OMNATITE, which is the backbone of the Leagues' economy. The League is currently located in the ASONA of MATHIS until 4011 RM, at which point it will move to another location.

VESSEL: Mys. Oth. The physical mortal body – one of two halves, with the other being the SPIRIT. The word used differs from culture to culture, but carries a similar meaning.

VESTIBULE, the: Int. Geo. One of the main openings into the PRISON CARCERI, accessible from the NUMEN forest in the c south of VÂRR. Despite the relative ease of its accessibility, the place is rank with dark emotions, and few are those who have willingly enter this maw. Those who have entered and returned are changed men, brooding, of few words, and of haunted DREAMS. None speak of their experiences in the Vestibule, and most die alone, unable to form bonds with other mortals.

VESTIBULE OF IAUKTHATHALAR, the: Int. His. Arc. Ancient stone doorway in the north west of the PARTHISAN colony of EZHIRAYA⁽²⁾. It is monolithic in size, and leads to a massive single-chambered cavern. The hewn vestibule is thought to have been created in the $\underline{\text{THIRD AGE}}$, and is possibly the work of a $\underline{\text{DEMIURGE}}$.

Natives of the region shun the structure and the cave beyond it, which features in underworld legends from the region.

VESTIBULE OF STANDARDS: Arc. Soc. Large hallway beyond the main gateway of the BASTION OF STEEL, in KHADON, in which are hung banners, standards, flags, and icons from the history of the empire. Some are thousands of years old, and are from failed colonies, lost territories, or once belonged to prestigious military regiments or archpatricians.

VESTICIA: 1. Geo. Forest in the west of the HENDECARCHY of CYRENIA in the region of VIPOR in MALAN. It was settled in c. 3270 RM by SHAMEN exiled from TEMUJA and is known today for its thick briars and undisturbed ancient woodlands (update viper entry to include plants and add to map too).

2. Set. Settlement in the above region^(1.) surrounded by dense briar and woodland growth that conical it from the wider world. It was founded in c. 3300 RM by a coven of witches exiled from Temula, whose descendants now call it home. It is unknown whether they retain their ancestors' beliefs but they live rural lives untouched by industry or technarcana (Pop. unknown).

VESTIGE, the: Rui. Ancient ruins, thought to date back to at least the FOURTH AGE, buried in the region of ANOMOFERROH in BASSORAH⁽²⁾. ALMAGESTI archaeologists have excavated the area, finding remnants of archaic engines, believed to belong to one of the original Two-and-Twenty TRIBES. Most such artefacts are rusted solid, though a few are in working condition; held in high esteem by the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, where they are regarded as religious relics. Some are displayed in the cathedra, while others are kept locked away, their powers unknown to those outside the church's demiurges.

VESTUS: Soc. Rnk. PATRICIAN caste in LAASKHA and Skaros with close ties to the DEMIURNES. They are landowners, mostly owning manufactories and lands that produce raw resources for use in the manufactories, and originated from martial nobility.

VESTIBULE OF REVERENCE: Arc. Hallway in the PALACE OF THOUGHT in BISMUTH, GNOTH, where the banners of revered philosophers hang in remembrance.

VESUFAR: See. Large conurbation in the c east of ABATTUR, along a 10-mile stretch of the river VERBIEA. It is the centre of a major agricultural centre that provides grains and vegetables for metropolis of ALEISAR (Pop. c. 80,000).

VETAGAME: Rvr. Major river in the west of KAZZAR⁽²⁾, flowing west for 585-miles from sources in OZZARUN, SITAMET, and SILMA Mountains, before meeting the coast at the BAY OF RIPAA.

VETANEA: Set. City in the prefecture of EROSENEA^(L), in the north of HOLOLACH^(L) (Pop. c. 41,000).

VETARRA: Sct. Coastal settlement in the far north east of VAALK, overlooking THE INNER SEA (Pop. c. 2,000).

VETAS: Set. Small fortified city in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of MEDES^(1.). The settlement is situated along the mouth of the river DALLEA and is part of the GREAT ROAD, with many caravanserais and hostels that cater to the merchants and travellers that pass through the city (Pop. c. 16,800).

VETHRANDA: 1. Geo. Expansive plains dominating the south of present-day SEDISIA. Originally woodlands, mortal influence in the region throughout the FIFTH AGE has seen most of the forests felled to make room for farmland and pasture, though scattered woods remain, slowly expanding in the wane of mortal action in areas that have been abandoned.

2. His. Ntn. Historical kingdom that appeared to the south west of GNOTH in the south west of LLACHATUL in 1134 RM after the unification of disparate small states in the area by the VETHRANDI bloodline, which would go on to rule the region from the city of EVHRAN for seven centuries as monarchs before its collapse following the appearance and spread of belief in the CHAINED GOD in the region, which would go on to rule Vethranda as a theocracy.

In 2735 RM, after years of religious turmoil in which the scion known as THE VHOCENT led his followers against the long-standing theocracy, he annihilated the capital city of Evhran in an ATRAMENTAL blast of his own creation, leading to the downfall of Vethranda, after which he christened the new nation of OTINTH, after the city in which is political power culminated. See Vol III: Extinct States.

VETHRAND, the: His. Pol. Historic ruling monarchy of VETHRANDA, rising to power in 1134 RM and ruling until c. 1600, when the appearance of the CHAINED GOD in the area led to the house's downfall and the eventual rise of a theocracy in 1662 RM.

VETHRANDAN: Lan. Primary language spoken in OTINTH and SEDISIA, though the years during which Otinth has been isolated from Sedisia has likely left its tongue changed. See Vol II: Languages.

VETHRANDAN RIVER SYSTEM: Rvr. Major endorheic, largely seasonal river system in the c east of SEDISIA. Rivers flow south from sources in the VARRUTH Mountains in the north west, and the SIRAZHAD Mountains on the north east, meeting in the endorheic basin in the east of Sedisia. Most of the water leads underground into aquifers, though following heavy rains or snowmelt in the aforementioned mountains, the rivers can lead to the formation of the seasonal lake MALAIA, around which the land is usually waterlogged, encouraging the growth of various flora and fauna.

VETI: Sct. Coastal settlement on the island of OMMARA in the c of the MAIDEN ISLES. Its main industry is fishing (Pop. c. 3,000).

VETILLIA: Set. City in the c of OPHIUSSA (Pop. c. 32,400).

VETIS ENAMAR, NOMARCH OF MNEWAR: (B. 3961 – D. 4008 RM) Pol. TEMUJAN NOMARCH.

VETSONG: Set. Coastal settlement in the west of CUTH, overlooking the SEA OF BALIMAN. Its main industry is crabbing, specifically moons crab (Pop. c. 4,000).

VETTER: Fau. Rarely-studied THEROPS native to the FAR HEMISPHERE, most notably the c and south of MENISCEA. Vetters are curious, in that they are only visible to those who are sensitive to the FIRMAMENT. Naturalists have attempted to study the creatures for years, in a bid to replicate their invisible properties, though their elusive nature have made most attempts unsuccessful. As a result of their unique traits, their physical body, if they have one, is yet to be described by naturalists, and they are only described as an incorporeal mass of tendrils by those who can see them.

VHAALEST: Set. Settlement in the c north of LAASKHA, in the woodlands of SUUTRA, forming a part of the RED ROUTE. It has a long history, where it originated in c. -120 RM as a stone age hilltop fort on whose ruin the settlement was later constructed (Pop. C. 5,540).

VHALOID: Geo. Grasslands in the north of ALMAGEST, running west to east just north of the northern POLAR CIRCLE, between the MARMARA Massif in the north and the AMODRA Mountains in the south. Its northern-most reaches are covered in discontinuous and sporadic permafrost, based on the weather in each year. In 4000, 4002, 4003, and 4005 over 50% of the plains were covered in permafrost, and trends show that this is becoming more-so over time. the plains have been mined and quarried sporadically over the millennia, with most operations being conducted by the gigantic mining vehicle CHANRAT^(2.).

VHARA: Lake in the HENDECARCHY of AONIA, in MALAN, forming a part of the course of the river INDROT.

VHAROCA: Set. Settlement in the c-south east of OTINTH. Like most Otinthian settlements, little is known about it due to the nations' insular nature. It is thought to be an important city in the cult of personality that surrounds THE VHOCENT (Pop. unknown).

VHOCENT, the: Myt. His. SCION and shaper that appeared in VETHRANDA in 2732 RM. He gained a large following in the city of OTINTH and his followers would subsequently go on to overthrow the theocracy of the CHAINED GOD. In 2735 RM the Vhocent obliterated the city of EVHRAN through shaping, and went on to establish the city of Otinth as the capital of an eponymous nation in 2735 RM.

Under his rule Otinth became incredibly insular, fortifying its borders and policing them heavily against any threat – whether real or simply perceived.

It is now thought that the Vhocent died sometime after 3300 RM, though his PARLIAMENT maintains an iron grip over the nation, having studied under him and learnt the secrets to many of his powers.

VHOPRA: 1. Geo. Island in the BHALASSIAN ARCHIPELAGO^(2.) in the east of the PANTHEON ISLES, in the east of LLACHATUL.

2. Set. Main settlement on the eponymous isle in the BHALASSIAN ARCHIPELAGO^(2.) in the east of the PANTHEON ISLES, known for its large harbour where ships laden with silver and sulphur make their way north and south west to sell their goods (Pop. c. 8,000).

VHOTHAL: Rvr. Major river that dominates the north east of ELEKHID. It flows south east for 690-miles from sources in the growing MOUNTAINS OF MULCIBER and the YANAVASH Mountain before meeting the coast at the ROILING SEA.

VHUZUNGI: Geo. Mountains dominating the north and c north of ALAM BETHYL.

VIABORA HID: Int. Arc. Ancient totemic monolith located on the island of GOROXTUR in the c east of the PANTHEON ISLES. It dates back to around the THIRD AGE, and is thought to have been built by an advanced civilisation of SERAPIS.

VIAL: Ast. Con. Star of the constellation TARRAGON⁽²⁾, forming its head. See Vol II: Constellation.

VIALETA: Pol. Set. Large city and capital of the kingdom of SOLGA in the east of ELALLIA. (Pop. c. 102,800).

VIAMA: Sea. Bay in the south of the Sea of SEA OF ORRIDA, off the northern coast of KARGAMA.

VIANTARAS: For. Forest dominating the south east of GNOTH. For the most part it is old-growth and regarded with some degree of respect by the Gnothi people. Despite its largely untouched nature, it is also known for its ancient vine-strangled ruins, which likely date back to the THIRD AGE.

VIARACHAN: Pol. KORACHANI colony established in the east of MENISCEA in 3776 RM in the land of TAHOM. The settlement was abandoned by c. 3800 RM and was later reclaimed by natives, with the remaining Korachani population becoming assimilated. The settlement remains now as a ruin, scant miles from the TAHOMITE city of HARHOM.

VIAROR: Set. Major coastal city in the far south west of Belegor, overlooking the northern-most bay of the SEA OF AXONIN (Pop. c. 320.000).

VIATHAN: Rui. Ruins in the south east of ZHARIAH^(2.) believed to date back to a THIRD AGE IROTHANI nation. Little remains of the ruins today though there are some petrified remnants of machinery that have intrigued historians since their rediscovery in the 3rd millennium RM, though for which there are few explanations.

VIATOR: Soc. Rnk. Travellers and wayfarers common in CHEIRA, PNESSA, SERROK, and OKKHAM. They serve as trusted messengers who are essential to the everyday running of the nations.

VICAN: Myr. His. Mummified SCION half-buried in the permafrost in the north of WESTERN THANO. It is gigantic, dwarfing even the largest of giganri. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

VICEM: Pol. Set. Ruling city in the tribe of LINARIS, in the south of MULCIBER, in the far southern foothills of the GROWING MOUNTAINS (Pop. c. 145,000).

VICTUALS OF SANSARNIS: Rel. Soc. Ritual within the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, in particular, the ALMAGESTI TEMPLE. The ritual is performed by a priest during mass, when a small loaf of bread is divided into fourteen pieces, in symbolism of the FOURTEEN APOSTLES that followed the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR. The divided pieces are fed to the congregation at the end of the mass. The ritual is named after the first of the Apostles, SANSARNIS, who performed a similar ritual during the first mass held following Malichar's disappearance in NARTHEL in 84 RM.

VIDERA: Set. Once a farming hamlet in the isthmus of land between the river ASSAYER and NUNCIUS in present-day ALMAGEST. When the principalities of ALMAGEST, AZZII and EPHEMERIS joined together as a confederacy, Videa's fields were abandoned and the land used for quarries.

By the time the principalities merged into one large city by 100 RM, Videa had become the name of a district occupying the area the old hamlet once did. Following the Empire's arrival there, it became known as the home of the IRON GUARDIANS. Notable landmarks include the barracks and main prison of ALMAGEST.

VIDONNUS: Set. Small city in the c north east of LOEGRESS^(1,) (Pop. c. 12.500).

VIDUIFICA: Set. City in the PRISON CARCERI, said to lie beneath the INNER SEA, beneath the island of MALETH.

VIELBESE ROHAN: f. Atr. Per. (B. 3931 RM) High-ranking member of the VÁMAN ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION. She has a history as an ATRAMENTAL duellist, though has long since retired from physical activity and serves as a mentor to young PALADINS OF THE SEPULCHRAL PALACE during their training before their first sojourn to the Palace.

VIERA: Mil. Str. Fortress in the north east of THE SURRACH, close to the border with CYHLAGHARR.

VIGILATOR: Pol. Rnk. Rank within the SANCTIFIED ORDERS OF THE INQUISITION. Vigilators are commonly found within cities under control of the Orders, where they act as overseers and wardens, making sure that their respective laws are upheld.

Outside of the Order's territories they are most commonly found in $\underline{\text{NQUISITORS}}$ ' retinues, where they provide security. They are most common within the $\underline{\text{MOR\acute{E}HAN}}$ and $\underline{\text{KYONI}}$ Orders.

VIGILIUS: Com. Soc. Pol. Org. Influential PATRICIAN HOUSE active in the INNER SEA REGION, known for its controlling influence in the IMPERIAL DOMAIN BANK, whose current chairman is the House PATERFAMILIA OPHEIASE DISI. The house originated in LAASKHA in c. 2300 RM and quickly grew into a prominent moneylending business, eventually buying shares in the Imperial Domian Bank in c. 3780 RM. See Vol II: Patrician Houses

VIGESIMAL COURT, the: Pol. Org. The government of ZATAUR, located in the capital city of IKUHZEHAUN. It is named after its 20 members who are elected from within its church, nobility, and industries every five years – though not all members are elected at the same time, ensuring a rotation of members to discourage stagnation.

VIKANAK: Set. Settlement in the c of TARTAK, along the course of the river LLIRAD (Pop. c. 6,800).

VIKUL: Geo. Island off the south western coast of THETIS. Geologically, it is an extension of the ARITEAN peninsula.

VILAL: Rui. Abandoned city in the east of VÂRR, that once thrived along the banks of the river NATRAI. The death of the river in c. 2840 RM was a death knell to the city, which rapidly waned over the next decades, and it is now a ruin.

VILARUS: Soc. Org. One of the 17 Grand Houses of the Nacre League. The House is based in Khar Nadul and has an established network of caravanserais and storage yards along the eastern length of the Nacre Road trade-route. It has risen to prominence within the League by capitalizing on the strategic locations of its caravanserais, making its wealth from levies charged at these locations.

The House took advantage of Khar Nadul's temperate climate and relatively stable political environment, particularly after the political revolution in 3927 RM that saw the MUAHHARI regime, which it supported, seize power. The house's network of caravanserais, inns, and storage facilities become indispensable for merchants needing safe storage for their goods or rest for their caravans, particularly in the nation's more rugged and isolated regions along its borders.

VILLIE: Mil. Str. Major coastal fortress in the far east of KASPIA, overlooking the SEA OF IALCUS.

VILOMARRA, SIEGE OF: Leg. His. Mil. War. Epic, probably apocryphal, siege from ancient times, thought to date back to the THIRD AGE of life. It is mentioned in the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN, and was fought between rival KERATIN factions, aided by the descendants of scion of KHARANI (1.). The siege is said to have lasted seven years, in which many named characters rose to status of hero or villain before fading back into obscurity or being killed. The siege ended with the mutual destruction of both sides as provisions waned and disease afflicted soldiers. Only a handful of characters are believed to have survived.

VILYLL: Set. Highland settlement in the south east of the HAMAIADON Mountains, forming a part of the MURET PASS. It is small and exists mostly to accommodate caravans and other travellers who cross the pass, which is closed for most of the year (Pop. c. 1,800).

VIMAN BATHS: Soc. Str. Hot baths in the city of BETHAR in the north of the HENDECARCHY of HATON in the north of MALAN. They are considered the largest public baths in all of Malan and use geothermally-heated water, and include exclusive baths and spas that make use of mineral water. The Viman baths have an annex for the personal use of the HENDECARCH and their guests, and is where most political decisions in the Hendecarchy are made.

VIMBRA: Geo. Canyon system in the south east of the TEMPLAR STATES.

Though now dry, it was shaped by ancient flash floods from the north east of the SIDIRION Mountains⁽¹⁾. There are traces of ancient settlements close to the canyons, though they are degraded beyond any recognition.

VIMIAN: Geo. Island off the south western coast of the AMMASHI^(1.) peninsula, forming a part of the AMMASHI FREE-ISLES.

VINKING: Set. Small city in the c north west of CUTH (Pop. c. 15,000).

VINNIGETH: Tec. His Geo. Wetlands in the c north of AHRISHEN, south of the ASOUTAN Mountains, noted for the ruined TECHNARCANE machinery that lies scattered around, half buried and decayed. Settlements surrounding the region have recycled parts from the Vinnigeth in their construction works for many centuries, and field boundaries are made with detritus from the region. Little is known of the history of this machinery, though it has long been assumed to be a relic from the FOURTH AGE, possibly the WAR OF SCOURGING.

VIOLANT: Pol. Set. Capital city of VAUN, in the south west of SAMMAEA. It is a city of SHAPERS, who are identified by the violet robes they are required to wear by law. There are dozens of different shades, each of which denotes a different SPHERE of SHAPING. It forms a part of the ISHMMARRAN TRAIL and caters to the many merchants and travellers that cross through it (Pop. unknown).

VIOLESCA: Set. Fortified city in the west of the INTERURBAN STATES. Its well-trained rangers patrol the NEGUAR Mountains that guard its south western most borders (Pop. c. 32,000).

VIORA: Set. Small city in the south west of ESHIR⁽²⁾. It is known for the ancient carved stone monument at its centre, that predates the present culture by some centuries, and is thought to date back to the early FIFTH AGE.

It was once coastal, overlooking the BAY OF SABRIYA^(1.), though found itself landlocked as the sea diminished in the 4th millennium. Originally located at the mouth of the river GHATA, it eventually found itself over 200-miles from the present-day coast, though it is still situated along the banks of the same river. Today it is a major producer of ADI BIEL (Pop. c. 12 000)

VIPOR: Geo. Region in the north west of the HENDECARCHY of CYRENIA, in the north west of MALAN. It is noted for its rolling hills and large natural monoliths and boulders. It gives way in the north and west to the forests of VESTICIA.

VIRACOCHAN TOWER, the: His. Rui. Ancient fortress in the c-south east of PELASGOS, to the south east of the BATHAKOL Mountains once controlled by an org. of loremasters now known as the RUSTMEN. It was a repository of lore during the first centuries of the KORACHANI EMPIRE'S influence in Pelasgos, famed for its metal tablets, on which were recorded the histories of the INNER SEA, including religions that were condemned by the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. The tower was destroyed by ICONOCLASTS⁽¹⁾ in 214 RM, its majority of its tablets melted as scrap. Some scattered tablets remain littering the vicinity of the tower, rusted beyond recognition. The order of loremasters that called the tower home was disbanded, its members scattered across the east of Pelasgos, where they remain to this day as a caste apart from others, living in ghettos, searching their homeland for any trace of the metal tablets their ancestors once guarded.

VIRAGO: Plr. 'viragi'. Soc. Rnk. Land-owners in THE HARÉSHK who in times of war are required to take up arms, leading those who work their lands. This applies to women also. The title is similar to that of knight.

VIRAHA: Pol. Set. Capital of VIRAHAN. It is situated along the main passage of the GREAT ROAD, and links AHRISHEN in the west with BAATAN and TEMUJA in the east. As a result, it is a major centre of trade, with seven great domed marketplaces dominating its many districts (Pop. c. 381,400).

VIRAHAN: Dem. 'Virahani'. Ntn. Land-locked nation in the middle of CENTRAL LLACHATUL, between TEMUJA in the north, SAUA in the east, and AHRISHEN in the south. It is relatively dry and cool, and bordered by mountains in the north, and its predominant geographical feature is grasslands and sparse hardy woodlands. Wild horses, aurochs, and other animals abound there.

Though politically it emerged from Ahrishen (what until 2612 RM were the UNITED KINGDOMS OF EBUSHEN), it owes far more culturally to Temuja than it does to its parent state in the south west. Indeed, its people speak a LANGUAGE that owes more to TEMUJIN than it does AHRISHENI, and they observe many cultural traditions that are alien in Ahrishen. This goes back to the early days of the FIFTH AGE, when the KHUDARI people emerged from the FADING of the FOURTH AGE and mingled with the ARESHI natives farther south.

In 2386 RM KORACHAN left LYRIDIA DHAI to the INTERREGES who began trading north with the ARESHI people, leading a time of prosperity in AHRISHEN during which it expanded north, claiming lands from early TEMUJAN people which would later become Virahan. Within a few centuries the Temujan culture hero MAGHORA had united the people of Temuja under one banner. Ahrishen continued its spread north, and many new Temujan settlements capitulated with little bloodshed. The unification of THE HARÉSHK in 2893 RM, forced Ahrishen to consolidate its territories.

Following this, its northern cities retained much of their unique heritage, including regional dialects and customs, and in 3067 RM a delegation was sent to the capital in MAHSERTH to request independence, though this and later requests were refused. It was only following the outbreak of plague in 3117 RM when Ahrishen allowed the north to break away, with Virahan finally becoming an independent state, with the far northern city of BAATAN^(2.) forming another splinter state — Baatan^(1.) — later the same year. Originally a republic, with each county and major city represented in the capital of VIRAHA (which gave its name to the nation), it became a constitutional monarchy in 3389 RM, remaining so to this day.

The Virahani people have been mining sulphur in their lands for centuries, and they celebrate their festivals with large pyrotechnic displays. They follow the same form of animism that is widespread in Temuja, with worship of TUTELARY SPIRITS as well as ancestral worship being prevalent. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

VIRAHANI: Lan. Language spoken in VIRAHAN, which emerged from AHRISHENI, though which, following its independence in 3117 RM, adapted steadily more from its ancient KHUDARAN culture and language, and today it is more similar to extant TEMUJIN than its Ahrisheni roots.

It developed concurrently with BAATANISH, though has not diverged from Ahrisheni quite as much. See Vol II: Languages.

VIRANUL: Set. City in the north west of KORACHAN. It was originally part of AZAZEM, breaking away under control of HOUSE ARTIFEX prior to the WAR OF THE ARTIFEXES, but was later retaken by KORACHANI troops in 3001 RM during the war, after which it remained part of Korachan to the present-day. Its citadel became a headquarters of the imperial armies throughout the conflict, which lasted officially until 3014 RM, though hostilities continued for some decades after in the surrounding region.

Following the signing of the peace treaty, the city was slowly repopulated as trade west into Azazem resumed and it would later become a major link along the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 69,500).

VIRANUL, SIEGE OF: His. Mil. War. The first major conflict of the WAR OF THE ARTIFEXES, where the KORACHANI EMPIRE besieged the city of VIRANUL in the north east of AZAZEM in 3001 RM. The siege lasted 3-months, and ended with the razing of the city. Its central citadel later became head of the imperial armies throughout the conflict.

VIRARNUL: His. Lan. Ntn. Classical name for VIRANUL.

VIRENIYAN: Set. Small fortified coastal city in the west of RAONGEN^(2.), overlooking the BAY OF NURCYA. It is a major producer of EVOLAM KELP (Pop. c. 15,000).

VIRGIN-ROOT FOREST: For. Thick forest in the east of the tropical rainforest of WAELMIGH, in the east of the nation of CHEIRA. It is known for its gigantic tangle of heavy roots, bromeliads, vines, epiphytes and fungi. The apex predator in this inhospitable terrain is the SERPOPARD.

VIRGIN STONE: Ele. Rare ore thought to be unchanged from the creation of ELYDEN at the hands of the DEMIURGES. The stone is traditionally pale, often with veins of other colours, and is incredibly smooth to the touch as though it has been worked. Though adequate for use in construction, it is most valued for its use in sculpture and art.

VIRIDIA: Set. Small city in the c of LOEGRESS⁽¹⁾. It's a major agricultural centre, providing food to the metropolis of BELATUCADRA in the north (Pop. c.).

VIRKANDA: Set. City in the c west of GIBEAH. It is purported to be an important city in the tyrannical regime that rules over Gibeah (Pop. unknown).

VIROT: Pol. Set. Capital city of FATH (Pop. c. 200,000).

VIROTUTH: Mil. Str. Major fortification in the north of CALBIA^(1.), looking north across the border to KOMMEA. It is armed with various artillery and is home to various military forces that vigilantly patrol its borders against possible incursion from the north.

VIRRIATO ARROLIABE: (B. 1254 – D. 1321 RM) Mil. KORACHANI admiral who fought in the doomed blockade of NOAVATUR. He was captured by the Noavaturi after his ship, the Indomitable Might was sunk, and was later nursed back to health, though he suffered from bouts of amnesia after swallowing water from the SEA OF LETHEA. He was traded with Korachan as part of a ceasefire arrangement which led to the independence of Noavatur. Haunted by fleeting memories of his defeat, he left the Navy and lived in isolation in KHADON for the rest of his days, before being killed by thugs in his home during a failed break-in.

VIRTIVON: Geo. Mountain range in the north of WESTERN SAMMAEA, serving as a border between the south west of KARGAMA and the north east of the VESPERTINE LEAGUE. The rain shadow of this range is partially responsible for the expansive BITAMMAN Desert to the south.

VIRUON: Set. Settlement in the c south west of ETUA (Pop. c. 7,000).

VISANN: Soc. PATRICIAN HOUSE in PARAIYA with KORACHANI roots. It holds little political power and survives through the vast land it controls and by investing its money abroad in diverse conservative portfolios. It is perhaps most well-known as the founder and current custodial entity of the VIVARIUM VISANN in NOCTOU.

In c. 2600 RM (when the region was under Korachani control and known as THE PARIA) the House matriarch TRICIA founded the vivarium as a result of her fascination with the study of life in ELYDEN. Over the years she expanded the vivarium and founded expeditions across Elyden to collect plant and animal species for inclusion in the structure. The vivarium fell under the custodianship of her family following her death in c. 2680 RM, and it remains so to this day, a sprawling artificial construct of unimaginable size in which live a plethora of flora and fauna from across Elyden, many of which are extinct in the wild. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

VISAR'S SEA BLANKET: Fau. Exotic aquatic creature that lives in the abyssal depths of BATHASHAL OCEAN, which is sometimes in shallow waters off the eastern coast of Bror^(1.) and south western SAMMAEA. The creatures defy extant methods of classification and for want of a better term look like a huge white blanket.

VISARET: Set. Agricultural conurbation in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of ALAMUT (Pop. c. 3,200).

VISEAS: Set. Fortified city in the west of TISARA, along the course of the river CARPUNDIA. It is a centre of commerce, with merchants trading west with the MALANI HENDECARCHY of DERAEIA, specifically the city of ARAMAL, where it maintains a reputable trade house (Pop. c. 44,000).

VISEDOR: Set. Small city in the east of the tribe of SUUR'KA in the north east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. The city is known for its production of an analgesic crafted from the pulp of the OPOENA fruit (Pop. c. 12,000).

VISHRA: Set. City in the c west of the HENDECARCHY of CHLORIS, in the south of MALAN. Its main industry is logging and tree husbandry (Pop. c. 18,000).

VISI: Set. Coastal settlement in the north west of SKAROS, and one of few of its remaining fishing areas (Pop. c. 6,200).

VISID SARCOPHAGE: see SARCOPHAGE, VISID.

VISOGH: (D. 3654 RM) RHAMIAN geologist and historian who described and named the volcano ANTILLIA and predicted a major eruption, preventing the deaths of thousands of people before his death.

VISSIL: also 'the Cloudy Peak'. 14,950-ft.) Geo. Set. Peak in the KYTHI Mountain-range in LYRIDIA, on which the Nine ABULIA are kept in stasis in an archaic technarcane engine and the SIBYL works, alongside her augurs. The peak is situated 20-miles east of the capital in MYRA and is riddled with caves, one of which is commonly visited by the Sibyl and is said to lead into the underworld of troglodyte myth (more realistically, the cave is presumed to lead to a funnel that forms part of the PRISON CARCERI). The upper caves are replete with small fanatical troglodyte communities who dedicate their lives to worship of the Abulia (Pop. c. 1.000).

VISTATIA: Set. City in the c north of KARGAMA, to the north of the ONCETHMUS Hills. It has a long history that predates the rise of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, and rose as a city-state in ancient ELITAGRA, coming to rival the established powers of DROM, KIVAR and PLYSIANE⁽¹⁾ by c. 20 RM. It became a major producer of BRIMSTONE, which shaped its history over the next centuries.

The brimstone reserves dwindled by c. 1300 RM, though the city remained highly influential, with its ancient plutocratic families owning most land and businesses there to this day. It a militocratic city, and contributes many troops to the defence of the northern territories of Kargama, and its mounted rangers are a common sight in the south of the TRISKETHIAN Plains (Pop. c. 37,400).

VISTAUR: 1. Geo. Large canyon network in the c west of VENTHIR, winding for over 300-miles from the Vistaur valleys between the URIACHIS and SHANA^(1.) Mountains east to lake EOPIRA. The canyons are dry for most of the year though seasonal rains cause them to flood, feeding water to lake Eopira.

2. Geo. Pass in the west of $\underline{\textit{VENTHIR}}$, between the $\underline{\textit{URIACHIS}}$ and $\underline{\textit{SHANA}}$ Mountains.

VISUND: Fau. Intelligent creatures (HAGHOR) with the bodies of AUROCHS and upper torsos, arms and heads of bestial-featured HUMANS. They are nomadic creatures that live in the north of LLACHATUL in SABIA, KASPIA and PERGOST in loose family groups. Their culture is SHAMANISTIC and they keep little contact with the other mortals of the area. Some think they are the children of the DEMIURGE ARIMASPI, though there is little evidence to maintain this. They are physically very similar to HAAGENTI. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

VISYON: Soc. Rnk. Title common in the north of SAMMAEA, given to prophetic figures and emissaries of great change. They are commonly at the heart of personality cults.

VITA: Set. Major coastal city in the far south east of OBLEVIS (Pop. c. 95,000).

VITAL: Mil. Soc. Pol. Rnk. Title in SAUA. Leader of the WUHIA, one of the FIVE-AND-SIXTY LANDLORDS of Saua. The current Vital is Chanda.

VITALOUS ATTALIA: (B. 3287 – D. 3367 RM) Arc. Engineer and great-great-great-great-grandson of the polymath VITALOUS PALANODUTA, who was responsible for the creation of the DAM OF ST.

SIMEOL (1.) in ALMAGEST in 3522 RM. The completion of the dams' construction in 3758 RM was overseen by Vitalous the younger after generations of family members working on the project through the WAR OF THE ARTIFEXES and the difficult years following independence for Almagest.

VITALOUS PALANODUTA: (B. 3081 – D. 3189 RM) Arc. ALMAGESTI architect, sculptor, artist, engineer and inventor native to the CITY OF ALMAGEST, famed for his design and execution of the DAM OF ST.

SIMEOL^(1.), which allowed the waters of the SEA OF SEKHEM to remain stable, ensuring the property of all coastal cities in the area. He died before the dam was ever completed, before even Almagest gained its independence from KORACHAN, but construction of the dam continued despite the WAR OF THE ARTIFEXES, being completed in 3758 RM by his great-great-great-great-great-great-great-great-grandson, VITALOUS ATTALIA.

 $\underline{\text{VITAN}}$: Set. Coastal settlement in the south of the emirate of $\underline{\text{LIMOTH}}^{(2)}$, in $\underline{\text{Limoth}}^{(1)}$.

VITELL: m. Edu. Per. (D. 2961 RM) PARTHISAN polymath, who in c. 2940 RM proposed the HYPOTHESIS that was eventually named after him that offers an explanation for why mortals often experience unease or revulsion when in the company of certain beings such as HALFBLOODS or OTHERWORLDERS, particularly those that are capable of changing their appearance.

VITELLAN HYPOTHESIS, the: Int. Hypothesis proposed by the polymath VITELL in c. 2940 RM that offered an explanation for why mortals often experience unease or revulsion when in the company of certain beings such as HALFBLOODS or OTHERWORLDERS, particularly those that are capable of changing their appearance.

The hypothesis posits that mortals have had to live for millennia in the company of beings with supranatural abilities, many of which could disguise themselves as mortals. This has forced them to develop a form of psychological defence that manifests as a state of fear, unease or revulsion towards such beings, which in turn serves to warn mortals that someone they are interacting with may not be mortal. Over the years these feelings of unease have served mortals well, keeping them safe from danger.

Though there is no solid evidence confirming this it is a hypothesis that has gained wide recognition and is now accepted by many as fact, who have learnt to trust their instincts in such matters.

VITELLAN NOISES, the: Phen. Strange underground noises and vibrations felt in a specific region in the north of the ZOHELETHI BASIN in the east of PARTHIS, particularly in caves and mines of the region. They were first described in 2957 RM by the polymath VITTEL, though have been known since the dawn of the FIFTH AGE, possibly even earlier.

VITELLAN'S UMBRAL SUCCULENT: Flo. Strange ATRAMENTALLYsensitive succulent that is common to dry regions of inner Sammaea, including KHARKHARADONTIS, the HOGGOTHA ISZ, and the Inner Wastes of SPHYRNIDONTIS. The plants are small and grow in tight rosettes characterised by translucent egg-shaped leaves inside which can be seen an inky yolk-like blob. The succulent survives in ATRAMENTALLY-TAINTED regions by collecting ambient taint and umbra that it absorbed through its roots and storing them in these egg-shaped leaves. Over time, the presence of this collected umbra leads to the death of the leaf, though importantly this does not affect the rest of the plant, which survives intact and healthy. Over time the dead leaves drop off and is replaced by a new once, starting the cycle once more, allowing the succulent to live for many decades. These dead leaves eventually decay, leaving small jelly-like spheres of umbra which slowly harden over time. These spheres are used by nomads of the wastes for a variety of purposes, including as poisons, inks and dyes. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

VITELLARY MONKS: Rel. Sup. Org. Monastic order whose mustardrobed members are commonly seen walking through the streets of KORACHANI cities, their faces obscured behind black long nosed masks.
They have a sinister reputation, for few amongst the laity know their full role or purpose within the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. They keep to themselves in urban monasteries deep within Korachani cities across the empire's many territories, and they travel mostly at night. They are rumoured to be SHAPERS, with links to the ARÂTHUAHI ORDER OF THE SANCTIFIED INQUISITION.

VITHIMRIS HUNARCH: (B. 1947 – D. 2013 RM) Arc. KORACHANI architect most famous for designing the CATHEDRAL OF ST. AALISSA OF THE MARTYRED in his home city of KORACHAN.

VITIAN TORTURERS: Voc. Infamous torturers based in the city of VITIO in the south east of the VESPERTINE LEAGUE.

VITIO: Set. City in the south east of the VESPERTINE LEAGUE, known for its torturers who sell their services to tyrants and warlords across SAMMAEA and beyond (Pop. c. 38,000).

VITRA: 1. Geo. Island off the south western coast of GNOTH The island is often passed by those approaching Gnoth from the SEA OF SERPENTS.

2. Mil. Str. Fortress on the above island off the south western coast of GNOTH.

VITRIA: Set. Small coastal city in the south east of LYRIDIA, forming part of the RED ROUTE. It appeared in c. 3820 RM, following the drying of the STRAIT OF NÁRTHEL and has since become a vital part of the trade-route, providing salt for food to be preserved (Pop. c. 12,000).

VITTATA: Geo. Rugged hills in the south west of RAONGEN⁽²⁾, serving as the western foothills of the CHIAVALLE Mountains.

VITTIVAS: 1. Geo. Major cave-system in the north west of AZAZEM, accessible through 2 known vertical shafts, the largest of which is over 350-ft. deep.

It is famed throughout the KORACHANI EMPIRE for its illustrious LIBRARY OF METAL BOOKS, which was discovered by explorers in c. 960 RM and taken to the IMPERIAL LIBRARY in AGLAIA⁽²⁾, where the specimens remain to this day.

The caves are also renowned for their varied ecosystems, including the nocturnal cimmerian bird, which never leaves the caves.

2. Set. Fortified city in the north west of AZAZEM that lies along the path of the RED ROUTE. It originated as a shrine dedicated to those lost during the WAR OF THE ARTIFEXES and grew slowly from there (Pop. c. 39,000).

VITUTHUS: Set. Settlement in the plains of SARGOTH in the c of KARAKHAS. It is a major producer of OPIATES that are consumed in the region (Pop. c. 8,000).

VITYAZ: also 'the Greyguard. Pol. Soc. Mar. Rnk. Mountain guards and templars of the SABIAN pantheon. They are drawn from the high nobility, and the ruler if Sabia is the VITYAZ-THANE; most respected of the bloodline. A caste apart from others, they are born into their station and serve for the duration of their lives.

VITYAZ-THANE: Pol. Title of the ruler of SABIA.

VIUTH: Set. Settlement in the north of THE SURRACH (Pop. c. 6,000).

VIVARIUM: Plr. 'vivaria'. Ind. Cui. Manufactories dedicated to the growth and harvesting of fungi, mosses, and inert cloned flesh-beings known as LARVAE used in the manufacturing of food, particularly DROSS. They are most common in AZAZEM, though can be found across the INNER SEA REGION.

VIVARIUM VISANN: Int. Flo. Fau. Str. Expansive vivarium in the great city of NOCTOU in the west of PARAIYA, overlooking lake ALANCARAC. In it are found countless habitats and climates, and the respective flora and fauna that call them home. It was founded as a passion project by the KORACHANI PATRICIAN TRICIA of HOUSE VISANN, whose descendants took it upon themselves to carry on her legacy. By the time that Korachan had withdrawn from the area, the vivarium had become such a part of the region's cultural heritage that the patrician house was granted permission to remain. House Visann remains there to this day, its members acting as custodians to the site, which now dominates the outskirts of Noctou and has continued to grow, encompassing dozens of square miles today, with forests, canyons, savannahs, tundra, rain forests and jungles amongst its many areas, in which live a plethora of flora and fauna from across Elyden.

Today the Vivarium survives through donations of wealthy benefactors and its members mount expeditions across ELYDEN in search of exotic flora and fauna to add to the collection. It also employs fleshwrights who work tirelessly to bring back extinct animals, which are cared for in the vivarium before being released in the wild if the option is viable.

VIVIANNA'S BLIGHT: Flo. Fungus native to damp wooded regions of LLACHATUL. It is incredibly dangerous to creatures that eat it, with spores clogging up the pulmonary system, making breathing and movement difficult, making it more likely for predators to catch them, allowing the spores to move on. Once ingested by prey, the fungus spreads, possibly killing it, where it grows, encompassing its entire body, feeding on it as it rots, starting the cycle afresh.

Though the spores are unlikely to kill fit mortals, they can cause coughing and diarrhoea, and are largely ignored.

The fungus is named after the Skarosian naturalist who first discovered and catalogued them in c. 2904 RM. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

VIIDARIA: Rui. Abandoned city in the north west of Korachan, in the eastern foothills of the ADA Mountains. It was once a major dross manufactory under the control of PATRICIAN HOUSE ITHANI and was renowned for its rows of vast glasshouses in which grew mosses, algae and vegetation used in the dross industry.

A series of droughts in c. 3590 RM led to the eventual abandonment of the glasshouses, and soon after the surrounding city itself, with an exodus of people over the next decades to surrounding cities. Today these sprawling glasshouses lie abandoned, their crops long-since reclaimed by nature.

VIVIDUSZHIREN, CRUCIBLE OF: Geo. Large basin-like formation in the north of the URAHASH Massif in the south west of RAONGEN⁽²⁾. The basin is around a mile wide and its inner sides are smooth, making the shape of a shallow crater at the centre of which is a basalt altar and the remnants of an ancient temple. Some scholars have postulated that the basin was once as smooth as glass and that it was only weathered by millennia of exposure to the elements. Little is known of its origins, though it is thought to have been created in the FOURTH AGE.

VIZIER: 1. Pol. Rnk. Generally, political advisors or ministers in various cultures within NORTHERN SAMMAEA.

2. Pol. Rnk. Specifically, proxy rulers in THETIS. They are usually related to their LACARCH, and are trained since childhood to rule on their behalf, often studying in the city of THAARHA.

VLARA: 1. Rvr. Major river in the north east of MALAN, flowing east and north through the HENDECARCHIES of ATALLUA and DERAEIA for 800-miles, before reaching the GULF OF ELRI.

2. Lak. Lake in the north of the HENDECARCHY of DERAEIA in MALAN, along the course of the eponymous river^(1,).

VOBOTT: Set. Coastal city in the north east of the PANTHEON ISLES, on the island of COTOVAD (Pop. c. 40,750).

VODARCHS: 1. His. Voc. A historical order of shaper-hydrologists that was founded in the city of TAMANNAN in METHUMN in c. 3050 RM in response to consecutive years of drought that were threatening to topple the nation. Most members were shapers and, together with trained hydrologists who had access to the nations' coffers and resources, they were able to combat the impending collapse of Methumn.

Within a decade they had managed the nation's irrigation issues and its agriculture boomed, not only alleviating previous woes, but bringing surplus food to the nation for the first time in decades. The vodarchs' influence grew and with it did their ambitions. By c. 3085 RM they were openly challenging the nations' leadership. Years of pressure led to the collapse of the ruling council of Methumn in 3091 RM, after which they took control of the nation⁽²⁾.

2. Pol. Rnk. A caste of influential shaper hydrologists who took control of METHUMN in 3091 RM following decades of strife during which their predecessors⁽¹⁾ gained great influence following their successes in combating growing desertification and droughts in the nation in the wake of their founding in c. 3050 RM. They were able to control the densely-settled western regions of the nation, around the mouth of the river SAPPARANTI and the HENAKARAIAN peninsula, but struggled to reign in disorder in more distant territories, leading to decades of conflict and the near-fracturing of the nation in c. 3130 RM that was narrowly avoided by the mountebank BANNI, who later rose through the ranks of the Vodarchs.

They were eventually ousted in 3452 RM by a coalition of powerful merchant guilds and trade magnates known as the GILDED UNION, who rule Methumn to this day.

VODITH PHYLACTERY: Int. Myt. Obj. A GODSTONE made from hundreds of compressed solidified SPIRITS^(1.), retaining the memories, knowledge and character of each one. The stone takes the form of a circlet or bracelet and has a pearlescent lustre, not unlike a soulstone. It is mentioned in the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN in various stories, though its creator is never named, though some scholars believe it may be the DEMIURGE ARIMASPI.

The spirits contained within the phylactery are said to whisper to the wearer, and most who have worn it have gone mad, their own spirits siphoned by the godstone and added to its already burgeoning menagerie of spirits. Only those of particularly strong will were capable of wielding the object for any considerable amount of time, with animists believed to be the best-equipped. Of note was the MERILL champion ITHATURT, who wore it for close to a century during his travels around the coastline of the BATHASHAL Ocean.

Other notable personalities to have wielded it include the NAHORIAN champion Galimorchall, and the Meniscean mendicant Ysutari, both of whom are mentioned in the Mythologia Elyden.

Its fate is unknown and its last known wielder was Ithaturt, who disappeared in the early $\underline{FOURTH\ AGE}$ in the southern seas of the \underline{FAR} HEMISPHERE.

The godstone is named after the region where it was originally found in the Fourth Age.

VODOR: Set. Settlement in the region of ZAFFRE in the c east of THE SURRACH. Its main industry is logging (Pop. c. 6,000).

VODOT: Set. Settlement in the north west of the tribe of ASSAGOS, in the east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 4,000).

VOESH: Sct. Agricultural settlement in the west of IO near the mouth of the river TANOSH (Pop. c. 7,100).

VOHRIAH: Set. Fortified coastal settlement in the far north of ZHARIAH⁽²⁾, overlooking the SEA OF LETHEA. It is known for its miles of flat saltpans that surround it (Pop. c. 9,000).

VOHUR: 1. Geo. Major region in the east of NOAVATUR, east of the MAHAJSHITH to the SEA OF STYGAS. It is made up of sparse jungles, though in many areas they have been cut down to make way for fields and grazing lands.

2. Set. Major coastal city in the east of NOAVATUR, in the above region^(1,). It was founded in c. 1150 RM, becoming a major power in the KORACHANI timber trade, exporting its produce to imperial cities oversea. It rapidly grew rich off its exports, attracting imperial PATRICIANS.

It broke away from Noavatur in c. 1720 RM, following its independence from Korachan, though was later absorbed by the reformed Noavatur in c. 2100 following centuries of close alliance. The diminishing of resources in the region saw the city slowly wane in power, though it remains a thriving metropolis with one of the largest harbours in the SEA OF LETHEA (Pop. c. 2,080,000).

VOID: also 'the First Otherworlder'. Myt. Oth. In many myths of ELYDEN, Void is considered to be the first OTHERWORLDER and survives to this day, wandering the world, observing present-day life with an alien detachment that few others can understand.

VOID, the: His. Rel. Native religion in IO. THE VOID is a nihilistic entity, though not strictly a deity, that is embodied by its tenets of the (metaphorical) hollow earth, chthonic darkness and a culture of scepticism. The religion's roots lie in ancient times, with ancient FOURTH AGE texts discovered by shepherds in c. -730 RM in a cave in the KHO HAGAR mountain that were translated in -648 RM and were revealed to be called the IONIC TALPA (after which the nation's name is derived).

These texts were found to be FIRMAMENTAL texts and philosophical treatises, at the centre of which was the nihilistic beliefs that were adopted by the scholars that translated it who, by -587 RM seized power in the city of SALOROC and became known as IONIC HIERARCHS, funding the state of Io in c. -550 RM. A schism in the cult led to the APOSTATE WARS in -192 RM, in which various sects of the Void warred against one-another, leaving Io sundered into as many as a dozen different city-states, which by c. -120 RM had once more united under the banner of the city-state of BAESHA, with most sects diminished in favour of agnosticism, though soon after a group of mystics known as the EXARCHS OF MIRADOR would construct the TEMPLE OF RENOUNCEMENT, which was dedicated to a particularly nihilistic arm of the cult which would grow into the religion that is most-recognised today.

Following the EXARCH'S betrayal of Io and the arrival of the KORACHANI EMPIRE there 212 RM, worshippers of the Void were hunted down by the ICONOCLASTS⁽¹⁾; a costly, bloody practice that by c. 340 RM had become such a drain on resources that it was eventually corrupted into a sect of the imperial church, known as the SECT OF THE VOID, becoming officially recognised in 367 RM, with the building of a great cathedral on the site of the Temple of Renouncement. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

VOID APOSTATES: His. Pol. Rnk. In PRE-IMPERIAL IO, the leaders of the various sects of THE VOID which would clash in GARAP in -192, marking the start of the APOSTATE WARS that would consume the nation, leaving it sundered in as many as a dozen spate city-states. The Void Apostates rose in c. -250 RM and were a product of the growing disparity within the cult of the Void, the severe tenets of which seemed to be openly ignored by the wealthy and powerful even as the poor were constrained by its nihilistic views. The Void Apostates largely wiped themselves out by the end of the Apostate Wars and, as the city-state of BAESHA grew more powerful and reunited surrounding cities in c. -120 RM, they were to be later replaced by the EXARCHS that emerged following the war.

VOKNA: (B. 2405 – D. 2463 RM) Pol. His. Grandson of king GISHEN IV of the HOUSE OF UMATRA in AHRISHEN. She was born in HARÉ SHKA 34 years after his father DIERDFAN UMATRA was exiled from Ahrishen after her own father, Gishen IV, was killed, beginning the second intermonarchic period. A shrewd politician, she spent her days securing alliances and manipulating political events to strengthen his family's position. She shaped her own daughter VOKNA II into a political expert and spent her final years teaching her everything she knew, making sure that she was surrounded by the best advisors and aides.

Vokna died in 2463 RM, though had done all she could to make sure that all she had worked for would not be lost. In 2472 RM Vokna II was finally able to re-establish the monarchy in Ahrishen, beginning the FLUN-SANDRA SOVEREIGNTY in UMATRA.

VOKNA II: (B. 2438 – D. 2504 RM) Pol. His. Great granddaughter of king GISHEN IV of the HOUSE OF UMATRA in AHRISHEN. She was born in exile in HARÉ SHKA years after her family was deposed during the second inter-monarchic period in Ahrishen during a time of uncertainty in which the land was divided amongst dozens of barons who clashed against each other, unable to reunite the land.

She was groomed from a young age by her family's supporters to retake the throne, and in the spring of 2470 RM she travelled to Ahrishen at the head of a large army, rallying various baronies to her cause. Within two years she'd gained the support of 1/3 of the baronies and established the FLUN-SANDRA SOVEREIGNTY in UMATRA.

VOKTIR TA': Set. Small fortified city in the far north west of KHULL, close to the border with the north of the VESPERTINE LEAGUE (Pop. c. 13,500).

VOLAGASTRA: Set. Small city in the c east of THE VORANDINE, along the course of the river MANADARAS, where its tributary, the river YINALADA meets it (Pop. c. 8,000).

VOLATRATA: Mil. Str. Major fort in the east of THE SURRACH, close to the border with KHALHAT.

VOLAND: Fau. horse-sized aquatic creature with some humanoid features. Though aquatic, volandi possess great webbed fore fins that allow them to jump clear of the water's surface, and glide for some distance before falling back to the water. They are common in the east of the MIROVEAN OCEAN, off the western coast of BROR⁽¹⁾. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

VOLATA: His. Pol. An early spiritual and political leader in HOLOLACH^(1.), whose name is now taken on as a mantle and title by the head of the CULT OF VARPULIS, the main religion of the Hololach.

VOLATA, TEMPLE OF THE: Rel. Str. Temple in HOLOLACH^(L) dedicated to the CULT OF VARPULIS, and the VOLATA.

VOLOS: Fau. Wolf-headed HAGHORIM found in the south of the island continent of BROR^(1.). They stand close to 5-feet tall, with very long 4-fingered hands, each with 2 opposable thumbs. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

VOLPLANE WILDERNESSES, the: Sup. Geo. Beauteous region of LODELITHS in the north of KASIHAAL, dominating the sky to the north west of the SOLFERIN PLAINS. There are as many as 20 major lodeliths, which range in size from a dozen feet in diameter to hundreds, and which are tethered together and to the ground with a large number of chains, many of which are now overgrown with vines, creepers and epiphytes. A monastery once existed on one of the lodeliths, though it is now abandoned.

VOLTUMN: His. Ntn. Early FIFTH AGE iron age culture that dominated the east of MENISCEA in what is now the east of XYRPHAAT. It rose in c. -300 RM around what is now the city of SELVAAN, and many of its beliefs and customs slowly spread from there with merchants and mercenaries, leading to a cultural expansion that allowed it to annex various territories by c. 100 RM, leading to it becoming a major political player in the region. It propagated the worship of the fire deity TURRAN, and grew into a kingdom from its spread, with the first FIRE PRINCE anointed in 162 RM.

The kingdom eventually faltered with the death of Turran in battle in c. 7000 RM and the eventual collapse of its church. The XYRPHANIEMPIRE would later emerge from its ruin. See Vol III: Extinct Nations.

VOLUPIS: also 'the Obscene Lord. m. Myt. His. Per. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, a SCION of the DEMIURGE SYBARIS, whose father was the first of the seven MORTAL SEITHIN of the DEMIURGE NEITHI (1.). He was conceived through rape almost immediately after the birth of the MORTAL PEOPLES, making him possibly the eldest of the scions.

He bore many of his Demiurge mother's characteristics and was a decadent epicurean, tyrannical ruler, and ruthless bigot. He led many wars, the purpose of which was merely for his enjoyment, and he 'liberated' much land from other tribes, spreading his mother's bloodline far and wide, granting her more power. He was slain in the fields of <a href="https://pubm.ncbi.nlm.

He is worshipped as a deity in the city-state of CADERE in the west of SAMMAEA, leading to a resurgence of sorts. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

VOLUPIS, CULT OF: Rel. Org. Relatively recent cult appearing in the city-state of CADERE in c. 3970 RM advocating hedonism, with particular emphasis on sexual excess. This is seen by many as a response to the increasingly chaotic nature of ELYDEN. Many have been broken and driven to despair by her fragmenting state, causing many to turn to desperate measures in the search of solace. Many know little of the world preceding corruption and see only the filth and drudgery around them, leading to a resurgence in belief in the SCION VOLUPIS as a major deity around many regions, particularly in the west of SAMMAEA.

His bible, the BIBEA LASCIVEA, is filled with sadistic parables, pornographic vignettes and violent and debased allegories that are encouraged to be enacted by the faithful. The cult has drawn harsh criticism from many organizations, though it has rapidly grown strong and wealthy enough to exist openly and oppose them, even spreading to lands as far as the east of MENISCEA and the INNER SEA, as a mystery cult. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

VOLUTE, the: 1. Arc. Statue in the c of NAARETH, located in the south of KULLAETH, not 20-miles north west of the capital of KAURNAKAR. The statue takes the form of an angel, that is worshiped by the Naarethi as an idol of their faith. Is a relic of the SECOND AGE; making it over 30,000 years old. The Volute glows white from within and is said to heal the wounds of those who touch it. A wayfaring princess (EISHETH) and her entourage found the ruined statue in c. 1000 RM and, recognising its power, founded the first household in NAARTH (today NARTH) in 1002 RM, becoming its first MATRIARCH.

A church was built around the statue in the years following KORACHANI abandonment of the region in 2995 RM. Once a place of pilgrimage to those faithful to the TEMPLE OF THE VOLUTE, it has been supplanted in importance by the HEART OF THE VOLUTE – the first church of the religion built in the north of Naareth.

Today, worship of the statue has been largely supplanted by worship of Eisheth, who has become synonymous with the religion. The statue is now largely forgotten, its significance to the founding of the religion unknown to all but the most learned scholars and theologists.

2. Rel. Name given to EISHETH, founder of the TEMPLE OF THE VOLUTE, following the corruption of the tenets of the church by its worshippers, after which she came to be worshipped as a deity and the centre of the faith. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

VOLUTE, CHURCH OF THE: Rel. Main religion observed in the nation of NAARETH. It was founded in 1002 RM by an AETHIOSI exile, the princess EISHETH, who found an ancient untarnished statue in the jungles in the south of Naareth, becoming enthralled with it. She would soon come to worship the idol, which would later become known simply as $\underline{\text{THE}}$ $\underline{\text{VOLUTE}}^{(1.)}$. In the following years a dedicated religion would emerge around the worship of this idol.

Its worshipped was quelled following the region's subjugation by the Korachani empire in 2532 RM, but was slowly reintroduced, first as a MYSTERY CULT, then openly, following the empire's retreat in 2995 RM. After this, it became entwined in the ruling body of Naareth. The head of the church, the ARCH MATRIARCH, is also the head of state.

The tenets of the religion were corrupted following its return to prominence in the 4th millennium RM, and Eisheth herself became a figure of reverence, slowly becoming the deity itself rather than merely the religious founder, her body having grown corpulent beyond any mortal understanding, and worship of the idol dwindled as people came to worship her.

Its main ritual is the RITE OF THE VOLUTE, which is a COMING-OF-AGE CEREMONY undertaken by young female aspirants, who stand to become citizens and holy warriors. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

VONGMON: Set. Coastal settlement in the west of CUTH, overlooking the SEA OF BALIMAN. Its main industry is crabbing, specifically moons crab (Pop. c. 5,500).

VONIAN: Geo. Reef in the CORAL BARONIES, off the south western coast of SAMMAEA, in the eastern waters of the SPHYNIA ITRUSH.

VONIHSO: lit. 'the shell', also 'Place of the Dead'. Int. Arc. A monument in the west of the plains of ISHLASCAR in the south west of SKAROS. The monument dates back to a tradition observed by LOUDHAN nomads in PRE-IMPERIAL times. They would bring the skulls of their dead to this place, and in so-doing, they would become part of the great monument.

The monument survives to this day, appearing as a steep tufted hillock, which upon closer inspection is composed mostly of blackened skulls. Some loudha still observe the old traditions, though the place is otherwise ignored.

VOORMIN: Sea. Sea in the north west of CARNYNGA, forming a north western extension of the SEA OF ABRAXA^(1,).

VOR: lit. 'tomb'. Rel. Oth. The underworld of iron-age KORACHAN, where bodies were said to travel to after burial.

VOR SRIHHEN: lit. 'the howling tomb.' Int. Geo. Three-mile-wide open pit mine in the east of KORACHAN. The mine was renowned for its iron and quartz deposits, and was one of the first large-scale mining communities in early iron-age Korachan, c. -100. At this time, it was known as SOCHA. As the empire developed, so too did Socha.

By c. 450 RM the settlement had grown into a thriving city, one of Korachan's wealthiest, and the nearby sprawling wound in ELYDEN'S skin did nothing to detract immigration into the city. By 2000 RM it was the northern territories' largest supplier of iron, though resources were dwindling. In 2732 RM, during pit expansions, a large hollow was exposed, causing the mine and a large portion of the city to collapse into itself.

The city was left a ghost town, the howling winds emanating from the mine enough to drive away even the most ardent or desperate locals. Local legends tied the expansive hollow beneath the ruin to the underworld of stone-age Korachani myth, known as $\underline{\text{VOR}}$, after which the pit was named. Today, it is thought that the pit leads to the $\underline{\text{PRISON}}$ CARCERI.

VORA GHALL: Geo. Old region comprising of the north western coast of LAASKHA, centred around the regions of IMMERUTH and ASHARUTH, where many of its coastal settlements were once located. The retreat of the STRAIT OF SKAROS in the fourth millennium left most such settlements land-locked and deserted, remaining now as ghost towns reclaimed by the dust of the old sea shelf.

VORA SABRA: Set. Small city in the south west of TARTAK (Pop. c. 20,000).

VORACHAN: 1. Set. Settlement in the north of VAALK. In c. 1900 RM it was a lawless metropolis, symbolising the woes of the entire east of VAALTHA (as Vaalk was then known as). Over the subsequent decades it waned as crime spiralled out of control. Though this was curtailed in c. 2180 RM, it remains known for its criminal gangs and banditry that preys on caravans travelling along the RED ROUTE on their way to KETESH, which is a major link in the route, necessitating the movement of caravans near to Vorachan (Pop. c. 10,000).

2. Rui. ruin of a gladiatorial arena in the north of VAALK in which the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR fought in –7 RM, after his discovery of the SCRIPTURE OF SHADOW on the island MALETH.

VORAK: Set. Settlement in the c of LOEGRESS^(1.), in the northern foothills of the CANTICATONA Mountains. Its main industry is copper mining, with gold mining as a by-product (Pop. c. 5,100).

VORAKAN: also 'Mall Vorakan'. Geo. Low mountain in c northern VAALK, and source of the rivers RAANA and ZAANA. In 2917 RM the BLOODY STELAE were discovered there, leading to the formation of the pervasive cult known as the Order of the Bloody Hand in 2921 RM.

VORAN: 1. Geo. Sinkhole in the north east of SAUA.

2. Set. City built around the sinkhole of the same name^(1.), in the north east of SAUA. It is a major trade-centre, linking Saua to TEMUJA (Pop. c. 69.000).

VORAND: Pol. Uniter and, later, king of THE VORANDINE, in the west of LLACHATUL. He brought the disparate peoples of the region together in c. 2130 RM and ruled until his death in 2393 RM, following which the region fragmented into as many as a dozen regions, many ruled by his bastard progeny.

Though still known as the Vorandine, the region remains a loose network of city-states and small nations linked by their cultural heritage rather than anything else.

VORANDI BIT: see BIT, VORANDI.

VORANDINE, the: Dem. 'Vorandi'. Ntn. Enclaved nation in the far west of WESTERN LLACHATUL, to the north west of RAONGEN^(2.). It is of a cold temperate climate, and its inland regions, separated from the coast by various chains of massifs and mountains, is drier than the coast, though it is watered by many rivers that feed freshwater into the IGRASIAN BASIN.

Until recently the Vorandine was a formal coalition of fifteen states, with each state having permanent representatives (some elected, others hereditary) in the capital of LLACHATRA, where they formed a council that served as a government headed by an elective monarch from the city itself. These fifteen states emerged in the years following the death of its HALFBLOODED uniter, king VORAND, who in c. 2130 RM united the once-disparate states of the area under a singular banner for the first time in memory.

This unified state, which was named the Vorandine in his honour, lasted until his death in 2393 RM, whereupon the region fragmented. Sire to dozens of bastards and with no legitimate successors, the land was thrown into chaos with not only his descendants but once-loyal generals all vying against each other for control. By c. 2420 RM the land had stabilised into around a dozen states, more cohesive than the ancestral lands of the Vorandine, by still far removed from the unity that Vorand had brought.

The region remained in this state for some 16-centuries in a state of minor flux, though in 3996 RM the old representative council was dissolved following a militant coup in the capital, resulting in the annexation of most states and the instatement of a new regime known as the UNITED VORANDI COUNCIL, headed by the ARCHEXPONENT ZHANSHON BARAGON.

This new regime has taken great lengths to codify the many visions and <a href="https://dx.ncb/documents.com/documents-new-regime-ne

Little is known of what existed in the region prior to its unification at the hands of Vorand, and the ongoing destruction of historical documents make it increasingly unlikely that outsiders will ever learn of the distant history, predating the unification by Vorand in c. 2130 RM.

Today, the Vorandine controls much of the coast of the SEA OF BYRIS, where it operates an expansive industry based around the harvesting and refining of the EVOLAM kelp, which has become a vital part of many ATRAMENTAL industries, including CLONING and FLESHWRIGHTING, brining much wealth to the nation, little of which is seen by its people. Industrial operations have increased dramatically since the appearance of the United Vorandi Council, and many have noticed a sickening of the pivotal kelp forests, which thus far has been ignored by the council.

The north of the region has seen increasingly hostile activity from the TWILIGHT STATES, which has forced the Council to mobile large cadres of Godsmen in the north, possibly leaving the south ill-prepared for civil uprisings or external interference. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

VORIAN: Geo. Reef in the CORAL BARONIES, off the south western coast of SAMMAEA, in the southern waters of the BAY OF LEPHET.

VOROCH: Geo. Rocky hills forming the western border of STOLAS. The hills are treacherous and known for their sharp igneous formations.

VORPAL: Fau. A form of OTHERWORLDER whose existence is said to be in anathema of another living HALFBLOOD house. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

VORRAK: Rui. Sunken ruins in the c of LAASKHA, over what was once a bountiful salt-mine. Part of the mine and its equipment remains, though cave-ins are not uncommon.

VORRASHAN: Lan. Language spoken by the near-surface ROPOHAII of the PRISON CARCERI. It is not as harsh a language as the ancestral ropohaii languages which are spoken in the depths of Carceri, and likely borrows from ancient ANAVRAMI and other subsequent surface tongues of CENTRAL LLACHATUL. See Vol II: Languages.

VORROHAGHOR: Fau. Plr. 'vorrohaghori'. In his insanity, the DEMIURGE VORROPOHAIAH created many creatures to populate lands he crafted, particularly the PRISON CARCERI. Rarely similar and always maddened by the despair their creator poured into them, vorrohaghori are creatures cursed to roam ELYDEN, never content, doomed to a life of anguish and dejection, pain and despair. Most lurk in the cacophonic depths of Carceri, forgotten by those who dwell on the surface, though some may make their way to the surface, where they are occasionally found in lands such as VÂRR, RHAMIA, KORACHAN, LYRIDIA, or LYRIDIA DHAI.

VORROPOHAIAH: also 'the Broken One'. m. Myr. His. Per. In the mythology and ancient history of ELYDEN, twenty-first of the Two-and-Twenty DEMIURGES, whose children were the ROPOHAII.

He was an expert artificer, but the loss of his divinity affected him badly and he grew crazy, his creations becoming increasingly nonsensical. This culminated in the construction of the PRISON CARCERI, which is a system of expansive caverns that spans half of Elyden, with some hollows rivalling continents in size. The Prison Carceri is a place of grotesque wonder where the laws of the physical world above do not apply. As a result, corridors may connect chambers that are on opposite sides of Elyden, and time is thought to pass differently the deeper one travels.

His children are the ROPOHAII, which, apart from humans, are thought to be the most numerous extant MORTAL PEOPLE.

Much like his brother RACHANAEL, Vorropohaiah is said to be alive, with the city of PANDAEMONIA built around his corpulent being.

His known SCIONS are: EIBON, KHENEM-MMATH, KRODUS, LYSSA, and THAGGUA. See Vol IV: the Two-and-Twenty Demiurges.

VORROPOHAIAH, TEMPLE OF: Rel. Str. Temple in the subterranean city of PANDAEMONIA that is constructed around the corpulent stomach of the gigantic DEMIURGE VORROPOHAIAH, where faithful ROPOHAII enter in final supplication to their deity.

VORRO'S ALTAR: Geo. Geographical feature in the ISOKEHLLA area of the LAMEDUAN Badlands in northern VÂRR, attributed to the mad demiurge VORROPOHAIAH. The altar takes the form of a 5 square-mile expanse of pale granite carved out of the rock itself and is polished smooth, reflecting the sky above. It is renowned as a place of beauty and is sought by itinerants and ascetes from around LLACHATUL.

VORRUN: Geo. Rocky hills in the north of VAALK, in the south west of the OSHOTHOT peninsula. The steep southern-face of the hills overlook the BAY OF SALTRA. The narrow plains south of the cliffs are very fertile due to sediment carried there by the flow of the river STORAGH, resulting in lots of farmlands appearing there.

VOSEGA: Set. Fortified settlement in the west of KOMMEA, in the western foothills of the THUILOR Mountains. It is relatively isolated and plays little role in state matters (Pop. c. 4,000).

VOSTA: Set. City in the c north of VAALK, along the course of the river RIPARIS. The city is situated 5-miles from the HAVAK dam, which blocks water from ATRAMENTALLY-CORRUPTED tributaries from joining with the river Riparis (Pop. c. 27,800).

VOTARY: Plr. 'votaries'. Soc. Rel. Rnk. In the KORACHANI EMPIRE, a select social rank somewhat between that of a political citizen and religious proselyte. The rank of votary is voluntarily and can be applied for by any individual, so long as they meet the following criteria:

- have been born on imperial soil (determined as being Korachan, and any colonies or dependencies at the time of the application).
- not be of OTHERWORLDLY blood
- be a baptised member of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE
- be a FREEMAN, and
- going forward, payment of a yearly tithe (amount determined by assets and vocation).

Certain citizens, particularly PATRICIANS and merchant-lords, have hereditary votary status that are paid through by their annual taxes and church tithes.

Votaries re members of their respective CHURCH CONFRATERNITIES and have the same rights as freemen, as well as certain special benefits or concessions that others many not have. These include, but are not limited to:

- certain privileged roles within the church (such as LECTOR, THURIFER, or bearing church icons, statues, and/or relics during festivals and religious processions)
- the option, if desired, to take part in the governmental administrative activities as a volunteer
- in times of war, should the votary be conscripted, they would be exempt from active duty; a guaranteed day of rest; amongst others.

Votaries tend to fulfil various roles and duties that over time have come to rely on their volunteering to be accomplished. The benefits of being a votary are largely societal – votaries take great pride in their social rank, and though others (particularly HELOTS and SLAVES) may not care, their position as votary may serve them well if they are of an aspirational persuasion.

VOTCHRIS: Rui. Once-coastal settlement in the prefecture of BROTRIS in the c south west of HOLOLACH^(1.). The settlement was once coastal and remains now only as a diminished form, the ruins of the far larger city and port lying crumbling in the dusty plains of south western EDUMMAR.

VOTH: 1. Geo. Large valley dominating the c of LIMOTH⁽¹⁾, from its north east to the south west, with a climate ranging from dry in the north to humid and subtropical in the south. It is noted for its flooding in early Autumn following heavy rainfall that characterises the end of summer.

The river ATROTHA^(1.) flows through the valley, and though the yearly flooding has made it inhospitable to large cities, its floodplains are incredibly fertile, resulting in the seasonal growing of various crops within its expansive fields. Most of the workforce spends the flood season in seasonal cities in the south, such as CATHOSS, FATHAZ, and ONUATH.

2. Set. Settlement in the east of ALAM BETHYL, in the c of the territory of KIZA^(1.) (Pop. c. 4,300).

VOULLOR: also 'the Rotting Mountains'. Geo. Large incredibly old mountainrange in the north west of EASTERN LLACHATUL, stretching into the far north west of WESTERN MENISCEA. It is over 1,500-miles long and dominating the south of TISARA and ABATTUR, and forms a border between them and northern TETHYSIA and western LOEGRESS^(1.), respectively. Its face is crumbling and weather-beaten, its once proud peaks now worn by time and rain, shattered into unnatural shapes and boulders that lie scattered ancient disfigured idols of long-dead cultures. Regions of the mountain known to contain caves are renowned for the harsh stench that pervades them and rumours of stranger Atramentally-influenced regions abound.

No fossils can be found within them, for they were already old when Demiurges created the first life. Locals reverse them with respect for those who have lived in the shadow of Voullor for all their lives know how ancient they are and the unnumbered millennia that they have witnessed since their creation. The valleys of the Voullor are considered by many to be incredibly haunted places, drenched in the souls of the dead.

VOYAGE OF BERDEN, the: Car. His. Journey begun in 559 RM by the IONIC explorer NAVAH BERDEN. Heading west from Io, Berden crossed THE INNER SEA, reaching SAGITTARIA in 562 RM, crossing the GATE OF ERBETH in 565 RM before sailing south west through the SEA OF SERPENTS.

Illness and unfavourable weather forced Berden to turn back in 568 RM, where he sailed across the Inner Sea's northern coast to the STRAIT OF NÁRTHEL. A lengthy sojourn in VENTHIR followed between 570 – 582 RM, after which Berden continued south east, stopping in SUOR for some time in 598 RM, where an obsession with crossing THE ROILING SEA began to consume him.

After many failed attempts and serious injuries, he was successful and reached GIBEAH in 609 RM, sailing south past PORPHYR (then ZOLOK) and SABAISA and ANANTHUL (then PHARTH) in 612 RM and finally turning north into the SEA OF LETHEA in 615 RM, where he finally died in SARASHAN (now PORPHYR). His crew continued the circumnavigation of the Sea of Lethea in following expeditions, reaching the CLIFFS OF BERDEN (named after him years later) in later journeys in 793 RM, where NOAVATUR was first settled and the voyage was continued north west across the UMBRA SOKHAR where they arrived in KARAKHAS in 796 RM.

VOYDAJ: Set. Settlement in the c north of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES. Its main industry is granite quarrying (Pop. c. 10,000).

VOYLU: Set. Settlement in the c west of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES (Pop. c. 6.000).

VRAGATI: Geo. Diminished plains in the south of BA'AKH. Once a fertile region that was devoted to agriculture, it was worked to death, and its soil is no lifeless and what plants and trees lives here struggle is survive amid the abandoned ruins of ancient farmsteads and villages.

VRAKKA: Geo. Small mountain in the c west of VAALK, standing alone, with the valley of APHAALK dividing it from the larger ARIS Mountains.

VRALRATH: Myt. Creation myth in various regions in BROR⁽¹⁾.

VRASTHA: Rel. Str. Monastery in the north west of VENTHIR, in the eastern foothills of the JAELA Mountains. The monks of Vrastha busy themselves with producing illuminated manuscripts of significance to the CULT OF THE SPHINX.

VRATA: Ind. Set. Mining settlement in the west of MADOUR. It is a source of old reserves of SHADOW IRON, though the region is not ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED (Pop. c. 6,800).

VRATH: Set. Settlement in the east of UKOLIST in the east of LIMOTH^(1.) (Pop. c. 5,400).

VREGL: (B. 1247 – 1311) Car. KORACHANI explorer who in 1303 RM discovered the ASCENSION ISLES, and continued south east to BROR^(1.), before returning to KORACHAN south west via IRUGNA in 1304 RM.

VRENA: Ser. City in the ZOHELETHI BASIN in the c east of PARTHIS. It emerged in c. 3550 RM after the discovery of an OVERLAY between the MATERIAL PLANE and the OTHERWORLD, over which the SPATIAL GATEWAY was constructed. Today the city exists exclusively to cater to the extreme needs of the TECHNARCANISTS who run the Gateway. The city has a cultural and economic link with LIRAET, in TARTAK, which is currently the only other region that is linked to the city via the Spatial Gateway (Pop. c. 34,000).

VRESSELA: Geo. Region in the east of ABATTUR known for its SUNSTONE deposits. The region is somewhat dangerous to mortals as the FIRMAMENTAL aura that emanates from buried sunstone is incredibly powerful, making even rapid travel across the region dangerous. The few settlements that exist within the Vressela are dedicated to extracting sunstone, and its miners are forced to wear SOFTSUITS when mining to reduce the effects of exposure. The major mines in the area include CARADAR and LOSA.

VRETLOH: Rui. Abandoned stone city in the south of KHARKHARADONTIS, in the FORGOTTEN DOMAINS, though to date to the late FOURTH AGE, having survived its FADING well into the early FIFTH AGE. By the time explorers of the KORACHANI UNDERTAKING discovered it in 1265 RM, it was but a ruin. The expedition sojourned there for over a year, as they learnt of the ancient culture that called it home, but the cost of maintaining the region free of ATRAMENTAL TAINT became too much and the area had to be abandoned as the effects of the SHADOW IN THE DESERT increased, forcing them north, where they would eventually discover CHUROTH in 1268 RM.

VRETT: Geo. Reef in the south of the SHIBBOTHA ISLES, in the south west of SAMMAEA, in the far north of the waters of the IHEDROUR ITRUSH.

VRIHEN: Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region in the north of KORACHAN, just north of the mouths of the river ICHORIA.

VRIKAS: Set. Settlement in the south east of ELEKHID (Pop. c. 13,000).

VRIMAL: Set. Settlement in the south of PHYRR, along the NACRE ROAD trade-route. The settlement was a typical waypoint along the trade-route, offering lodging to travellers and warehouses and markets to merchants. when the MAENMIST closed its borders to outsiders in c. 3960 RM the Nacre Road was effectively sundered in two, with western portion petering out in the east of Phyrr. To counteract the loss of trade the NACRE LEAGUE shifted trade from land to sea, transforming the nearby city of PELLARIG^(2.) into a major mercantile centre. Following this Vrimal became a much more important link in the trade-route, transforming into a major stop for merchants before entering Pellarig (Pop. c. 8,000).

VRISIAS: Geo. Mountains in the south east of KHARKHARADONTIS, forming part of the border with it and the west of NOAVATUR.

VRITRA: also 'the Bringer of Drought'. f. Myt. His. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, a SCION and daughter of the DEMIURGE NERGAAL. She studied FIRMAMENTISM under the tutelage of DURUTHILHOTEP, but betrayed him and was imprisoned in the Wastes of VERMES, in the south of SHAZGIN, in MENISCEA, where her body slowly manuscrifed.

Her corpse is today revered by nomads who travel the wastes, regarding her as a protector. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

VRONDEI: 1. Pol. Geo. One of the nine kingdoms of ELALLIA, located in the c of the nation. It is known as one of the major industrial regions of Elallia and is home to many spent quarries that have since become reclaimed by nature.

2. Pol. Set. Large city and capital of the kingdom of $Vrondei^{(1.)}$ in the c of ELALLIA. It is a major industrial centre and is home to large metalworks and refineries, and most of its populace is involved in the industry in some form or other (Pop. c. 87,200).

VROROM: Set. Settlement in the contested lands of UTIMAN, in the north of PORPHYR (Pop. c. 5,800).

VROT: Set. Settlement in the contested region between the BAKHRAN STATES to the north and SAGGAR to the south, originally part of the former, but attacked by the latter in 4003 RM. It is now occupied by the armies of the Bakhran States (Pop. c. 4,000).

VROTHOT: Geo. Small island off the coast of NOAVATUR, just over 50-miles south west of the capital of Noavatur. It was exposed by retreating sea-levels in c. 3450 RM. A lighthouse was later built on it, replacing the old lighthouse of ENSAH.

VRUON: 1. Rui. Abandoned MANUFACTORY city on the banks of the river CHANI. The city was abandoned in c. 3500 RM following the corruption of the waters of the river SUR.

Lak. Lake along the course of the river CHANI, close to the eponymous ruin.

VRYODA: Set. Conurbation made up of three SOULSTONE quarries surrounding a fortified settlement in the east of the TEMPLAR STATES, in the c south of the region of TRISKETHIA, perched on the side of a steep cliff, facing east. It is famed for the size of its soulstones, many of which end up being used in the technarcana industry across $\underline{\text{ELYDEN}}$ (Pop. c. 5,400).

VRYODETESH: Leg Per. Ancient primogenitor king whose exploits are now immortalised in semi-fictitious parables that are told to children across DHA NAR and surrounding lands. It is unknown if Vryodetesh was indeed a historical figure or if he was an ancient legend that emerged in the stories told in a post-FADING FIFTH AGE MENISCEA.

VUAL: Pol. Set. Capital city of RASTAN, in the north east of the island-continent of BROR^(1.). It is known for its FIRMAMENTAL academies, where the language of ancient Firmamentists is taught (Pop. c. 108,500).

VUALSAURA: m. Myt. His. Per. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, a SCION of the DEMIURGE DURUTHILHOTEP commonly depicted as a cameliform in ancient art of SABAEA and TULURKRYPH^(2.), where his veneration was common in the late FOURTH AGE.

He was said to be a great disseminator of knowledge. His fate is unknown. (Prometheus analogy, punished by Talantehut? *) See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

VUBOSK: Set. Major city in the c west of the HENDECARCHY of NHORA in the north east of MALAN. Though not coastal, it lies only 12-miles from the coast, along the course of the river ZALEA (Pop. c. 100,000).

VUDA: Geo. Island off the south western coast of LAASKHA, to the south of the BAY OF NAASU. It is largely flat and most of its northern expanse was revealed through the lowering of sea levels over the 4th millennium RM. It is home to the shanty city of EDECHAN.

VUGNIA: Geo. Highland region in the north of MENISCEA, serving as a coastal border between the north east of CEHOPHELA and the south of EASTERN THANO.

VUGHRAN: Geo. Reef in the west of the CORAL BARONIES, in the south west of SAMMAEA, in the c west of the IHEDROUR ITRUSH.

VUHIDADUR: 1. Geo. Island in the south of the PANTHEON ISLES.
2. Set. Small coastal city in the south of the PANTHEON ISLES (Pop. c. 14,800).

VULA: Rvr. Lake in the c of KEPHUAAN, forming a part of the course of the river SHAYANDI.

VULDA: Set. Small fishing settlement in the north west of LYRIDIA, first recorded in c. 330 RM. By c. 800 RM it had largely become forgotten by the AUGURS^(2.), despite the fact that it had slowly increased in size, coming to control as many as half a dozen smaller settlements north of the PYREAN Mountain sustaining itself through trade with VÂRR, AHRISHEN and, sporadically, with LYRIDIA DHAI. In 1187 RM it aided AHRISHEN in the FIRST WAR OF FAITH, though it was destroyed by imperial forces in 1189 RM, its territories slowly taken by Lyridia Dhai and PYREA (later Ahrishen).

A new settlement was rebuilt from the ruin (and relocated to the coast, which by then had moved half-a-mile north) in c. 2800 RM, and remains as a small fishing settlement (Pop. c. 4,400).

VULFEGHUNDIS: Sup. Geo. The colossal body of an ancient CHTHONITHON dominating the north east of SATARIEL, taking the form of a sprawling highland region. Few are alive who truly understand the mythic history that lies buried in their home, but SHAPERS and ONEIROMANCERS can sense the weight of fossilised history and torment, experiencing blinding headaches and troubling visions and DREAMS in the vicinity of the landmark.

VULKA: Set. Major city in the south east of the TARAHID ANNEXES built atop the older city of AZOSAOTH⁽²⁾. The city has dominated commerce and fishing in the SEA OF BYSSOS since c. 2900 RM, though the dwindling of the sea over the past millennia and the KORACHANI EMPIRE'S overfishing have left the city a shadow of its former self, now 10-miles from the coast, along the mouth of the river DHOTA.

It originated as an island-city, and became an outpost of the WHITE LEAGUE in c. 2000 RM, who would go on to rule it as a major CHAPTER^(2.) port in 3014 RM, remaining in control there to this day. In the following centuries the city found itself connected to the mainland, close to the delta of the river DHOTA (Pop. c. 93,000).

VULKAR: Geo. Bog dominating the far south east of the XETEAN STATES. The regions surrounding the bogs largely subsist by harvesting peat and extracting deep UMBRA.

VULPECULA: 1. Fau. Rare carnivorous animal, resembling a giant fox with a crested head. They once ranged from EASTERN SAMMAEA, across EASTERN LLACHATUL, to western MENISCEA, though are now only found in the coastal region of western Meniscea, to the west of the EGETAKH Mountains. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

2. Set. City in the south of SIRIPHAGOS (Pop. c. 39,000).

VULTAMAAN: Geo. Mountain that dominates the eastern coast of the island of HAR JAKALL in the north of SEPAHAUNAT.

VUMARAQ: Set. Small city in the far south west of PNESSA, in the region of SIMEANAGH. Its main industry is logging (Pop. c. 15,000).

VUMMARA: Set. Small city in the west of METHUMN. It is an ancient settlement, dating bac to the late 1st millennium RM, and has been abandoned and repopulated various times in its history. It is famed for the nearby catacombs of GLADAGHRA, which have been the target of treasure seekers for centuries (Pop. c.).

VUNASH: Set. City in the south east of the tribe of ITTRA, in the c of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 32,000).

VURD, THE ROTWOOD: For. Withered forest in the c west the KORACHANI PENINSULA, to the south of the RUTHUNODA Mountains, in KORACHAN. Once a verdant forest it was cut-down in the years leading up to the Korachani golden age, its pines used in the construction of galleons that powered the empire's navy and exploratory vessels. Logging was largely abandoned by c. 3100 RM when the wood began to suffer from ATRAMENTAL ROT, by which point the forest had become barren, its soils washed away from deforestation. In the centuries since then the forest has recovered, spreading once more, though its trees are withered and stunted, of little economical value, and is ignored.

VURIRIN: Geo. Island in the north east of the MAIDEN ISLES, off the south eastern coast of MENISCEA.

VUY: Set. Settlement in the south east of Zhariah^(2.) in the southern foothills of the NIARNA Mountains. It is a major agricultural centre and is famed for its bread, which makes its way to markets in BHAL ATTON (Pop. c. 6,000).

 $\underline{VUZLA}\!\!:$ Set. Settlement in the east of $\underline{ANDILUTH}$ (Pop. c. 4,800).

VYANTAR: Geo. Hellish land in the south of ROMOREA⁽²⁾ that is known for its many gigantic MONITORS⁽²⁾, which are hunted by indigenous people of the region. The region is home to various Romorean fortresses that guard its lands from outside attack, and the retiles

VYGNAR: Set. Rock-UMBRA mine in the c south west of CYHLAGHARR in the region of KAYHIKH (Pop. c. 1,400).

VYLKORE: Fau. Odd amphibious creature that lives in coastal wetlands in the far east of MENISCEA, primarily along the eastern coast of DHA NAR and the south eastern lowlands of OBLEVIS. They are large quadrupeds, often growing to around 25-ft. in length, and are of sluggish disposition, with large wide mouths filled with baleen-like teeth that they use to filter marsh waters for miniscule lifeforms and surface algae that they live on. Their backs are covered in three short sails on which grow sea mosses and wracks, and they are famous for their greenish tint which allows them to draw strength from the sun itself.

They are known to sunbathe for hours on end and are very slow, often spending months without moving and drawing sustenance from the power of the sun, without eating or even stirring. It is during these months of dormancy that shallow sea plants begin to grow on their backs, like epiphytes, which are thought to aid in their latent heliophagy. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

VYNAR: Lak. Lake in the c east of KHULL, along the course of the river UPINIS. The city of VYNAR TA' lies along its northern shores.

VYNAR TA': Set. Large city in the c east of KHULL, along the course of the river UPINIS, at the northern shore of lake VYNAR. The city is one of the largest strongholds of the KOPHIC houses, and in 3613 RM a Kophic estate just outside the city, overlooking lake Vynar was attacked by the forces of the KHULLAN INQUISITION, which led to the current corruption within the Eternal Assembly.

The city is known for its large bridge, which is itself a sprawling structure that encompasses five different bridges, between which is an entire city district in the centre of which looms a great tower belonging to the Khullan Inquisition. The CLAVESIGNATI have a muted presence in Vynar Ta' and quarrels between them and the far more numerous dynastic forces of the Kophic houses are not uncommon (Pop. c. 117.600).

VYNTRA: Flo. Gigantic cacti endemic to the c of ETUA. They are sprawling and can grow to around 20-ft. tall with a reach twice as wide, and produce large pink bulbs on their arms that are cultivated by the Etuani and used in the manufacture of an ATRAMENTALLY-sensitive dye that imparts fabrics dyed in it a pearlescent colour that shifts with changes in ambient Atramenta.

When properly treated this ye has a far more useful application, where it is used as a warning against increases in Atramental levels. As such this makes it very valuable and it is exported far and wide across the SALT ROAD and then the RED ROUTE.

VYRAJIN: Mar. Rnk. Voc. The militant members of the ORDER OF THE PRAXIS, who are recruited from across the south east of MENISCEA, most notably VALA, VECTIS, ACHAA⁽²⁾, and AURUM⁽²⁾. They accompany SEEKERS OF THE PRAXIS across the south east of MENISCEA, though can also be found as solitary travellers fulfilling a role similar to that of knighterrant.

VYRAJIN COHORT: Mar. Org. Militant branch of the ORDER OF THE PRAXIS, whose members, known as VYRAJIN, fulfil a role similar to that of knight-errant, travelling across the south east of MENISCEA.

VYSIACH: see CHARNEL HILL.

VYSTA: Set. Small city in the c of KARGAMA, along the north eastern shore of lake BERA. It forms part of the main land trade route in inner Kargama and is known for its many money lenders and storage yards (Pop. c. 13,000).

W-11: Tec. Rifle produced by WARRELHOFF. It is considered by most to be the most ubiquitous rifle around the INNER SEA and beyond.

WAELMIGH: 1. For. Expansive tropical rainforest located in the east of SAMMAEA, along the equator and extending to around 8° north and south of the equator, encompassing almost the entirety of the nation of CHEIRA, as well as parts of PNESSA, SERROK, GIBEAH and NOAVATUR. It is dense and difficult to traverse, and much of it is shrouded in a thick mist. It is also known for its exotic flora and fauna, many of which are largely undocumented by the scholarly community to this day. Those who have explored its inner-most reaches attest to a place that appears alien, of strange design and labyrinthine growth.

2. His. Ntn. Extinct nation in the east of SAMMAEA, at the base of the PORPHYRI PENINSULA, in what is now occupied by CHEIRA. It emerged in c. 2690 RM from close to a millennium of strife under the DIVIDED EMPIRE that rose in the vacuum left by the collapse of the UALLA MIGHAN empire. Over the next century it grew in power and size, until in 2771 RM it gained control of all the lawless lands, calling itself an empire for the first time. The WAELMIGHI DYNASTIES emerged as a noble caste, which ruled the empire until its eventual collapse in 3337 RM, which would see the land sundered in four — SERROK to the south west, METAGRASH in the north, Cheira in the east and the remainder, which continued to be known as Waelmigh. See Vol III: Extinct States.

WAELMIGHI DYNASTIES: His. Pol. Ancient dynasty that once ruled the empire of WAELMIGH⁽²⁾. The Waelmighi Dynasties appeared following the fall of the DIVIDED EMPIRE in 2772 RM, and went on to rule for centuries until their eventual collapse in 3337 RM due to mismanagement of its resources and the sheer cost of maintaining its armies and infrastructure over 3,000,000-square-miles. From the ruin of the dynasties would emerge the nations of SERROK, CHEIRA, and METAGRASH, the latter of which was later absorbed by Cheira over ensuing years.

WAGHOTA REZA: (B. 3957 RM) Pol. Head speaker of the REPRESENTATIVE COUNCIL OF NOAVATUR since 3992 RM.

WAHADNA: Set. Small fortified city in the south west of ABACARDAT, at the southern edge of the BITTER SEA. It is known for its carob groves, from which syrup and pulp that are used in cooking are produced (Pop. c. 17.800).

WAHHAD: Set. Small city in the east of SEPAHAUNAT, just 10-miles from the coast. Along the course of the river HEBA.

WAILING FOREST, the: For. maidenhair forest in the STOLAS VALLEYS in the south of STOLAS. So-named for two reasons: the funnelling effect of nearby valleys on wind, which cause it to howl thorough the trees; and the very moist air which gives trees in area the appearance of crying. The area is home to many groups of AL AKHI.

WAIR: Sec. City in the west of STHAMAN, along the banks of the river LAUL (Pop. c. 85,000).

WAIRIMU: Geo. Dry wastelands in the north west of PARAIYA, to the south and east of the plains of KAURCAN.

WAKAZ: Lak. Small endorheic lake in the north west of ABACARDAT. It was once part of the SEA OF UHBATAQ^(3,) though found itself separated from the main body of water and landlocked long ago. Today it is shrinking and is extremely salinated, devoid of life.

WAKELESS SLEEP, the: Soc. Phil. Common AFTERLIFE^(1,) belief in the KORACHANI EMPIRE, propagated by the MORTUARY CULT, though which has since come to be accepted by the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE.

The Wakeless Sleep is the indeterminate period following the death of the MORTAL body that lasts until the RUINATION – the end of the MATERIAL PLANE and all within it, when the spirits of all followers of church will be consumed by their deity, the LORD RACHANAEL in a short moment of ecstasy before all ends.

Some texts add divisions to the Wakeless Sleep, with those who were selfish and ignored their masters' needs being consigned to the INFERNAL REST; while those were selfless and obliged their masters and the THRONE repose in the BLISSFUL REST. See Vol IV: The Afterlife and the Spirit.

WALADA, MAPHRAN OF KATLEGO: (B. 907 – 3147 RM) Pol. She became MAPHRAN in 1921 RM, the year the ITINERANT ONES were exiled by QUEEN HETEPHERES and had her palace at KATLEGO built in 1925 RM, where she studied the TECHNARCANE ruins, using herself as a test subject. Over many decades and through the use of ORTHOSES and other ATRAMENTAL aid, she gained the secrets of longevity, dying finally to an assassin's blade in 3147 RM, after many believe Hetepheres the Strangler discovered the illegal technarcane research that was going on at Katlego.

WALA HLAUP: Fau. Galloping reptile-like THEROPS commonly found in less verdant parrs of eastern SAUA, western TISARA, and MALAN, particularly its southern-most HENDECARCHIES, including LONAR, CHLORIS, STHAMAN, and ATALLUA.

They are difficult to train or domesticate, and live largely solitary lives, spending most of their days sunbathing in boulders or stalking prey, which they chase down with a tremendous yet short-lived burst of speed. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

WALK OF KORDYLILL, the: Geo. Geological fracture in the north west of ATARAXIA. Approximately 100-miles long, it creates a perfectly level walkway flanked to the right by a steep cliff that prevents access. Following winter storms parts of the Walk have been known to turn into waterfalls as floodwaters cascade down them into the plains of ARNEUS, eventually to meet the river ASTAHKH.

WALISOR, BREAKER OF TREES: (B. 1413 – D. 1892 RM) Pol. Soc.ARCHPATRICIAN and POTENTATE-Domnitor of VÂRR, who was partially responsible for the FOREST WARS.

WALL, the: Geo. Natural escarpment in RTHEI, over 500-miles long, branching and forking in many areas. The wall is low, no higher than 5-feet at its highest point, and twice as wide.

WALL OF DREAMS, the: Rui. A large granite wall in SARASTRO dating to the early FOURTH AGE. Each of its thousands of bricks contains indentations believed to be religious writings or possibly the mark of the ruler who decreed the raising of the wall. Many sages have tried to decipher the alien script, though none agree on their meaning. Some believe them to be the words of an OTHERWORLDER, while others believe they're the wisdom of a now-dead race.

The wall was fortified during the reign of the DYNAST SATHAHAN VI, between -554 and -513 RM due to increasing tensions with the NATHI KINGDOM, though is now largely ruined, with large sections crumbled beyond recognition to the west of the KOROR Mountains.

WALL OF CAESS: Rui. Ancient early FIFTH AGE wall in the south east of TAES in the south east of WESTERN MENISCEA. The wall stretched for some 100-miles, and was predominantly made of mid-bricks, though fell into disrepair millennia ago, and it is now barely recognisable against the verdant landscape.

WALL OF IRON: see LESORIT ALKA.
WALL OF SPIRITS: see PETRUDARA.
WALPURGHIA: see ALTURIGIA.

WALPURGHIA, KNIGHTS OF: Mar. Org. Knightly order originating in the now-extinct nation of HARÉSHKA in c. 1600 RM. They died out in c. 2200 when the state of warfare began to undergo a drastic change, moving away from the chivalrous culture of their inception to a more impersonal way of waging war.

The Knights of Walpurghia were concerned with keeping their lands clear of ATRAMENTAL TAINT, especially within HUMANS and other MORTAL PEOPLES, and they were commonly seen wandering the countryside with retainers and retinues, offering their help wherever it was needed. As time went on the order became more bureaucratical, standardising methods of payment, leaving the romanticised chivalry of their past behind. They became the main policing force in Haré Shka in c. 2120 RM, though by c. 2200 RM their numbers had dwindled and they had fallen from grace.

They were virtually extinct by the time the region became known as the HARÉSHK in 2893 RM, but a subsequent resurgence in romantic literature and storytelling in c. 3020 RM led to a new generation of princelings adventuring across the Haréshk looking for corruption to fight. But this new iteration of the knights is different to their past incarnation – with individuals wearing lead-lined SOFTSUITS and wielding rifles.

WAMARAIA: Set. Fortified settlement in the south of TZALLRACH, dedicated to the research of the FIRMAMENTAL phenomenon that has led to the formation of abundant lodestone deposits in the region (Pop. c. 16.800).

WANDERER OF MALETH: Leg. Legend common in most KORACHANI nations around THE INNER SEA. Origins unknown, but can be traced to at least c. 1200 RM, where he is mentioned in the EPIC OF EREMESH: '...he who wanders/feet never resting, face never showing/his womb in Maleth, but his tomb unknown...' believed to be an ATRAMENTIST or HALFBLOOD of great power, travelling alone, never approaching heavily settled areas, rarely talking, and then only to speak in riddles. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

WANDERING, the: Soc. A coming-of-age ritual that is observed by males in rural areas of the UMBRA SOKHAR. Upon reaching their 15th year, boys leave their communities for ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED hinterlands outside their homes, sometimes forced to live in the wilderness for months, seeking a revelatory vision showing them the way home. Many of them die during their wandering, and should their bodies be recovered, they will be honoured by a full burial, and they will be remembered as fearless, having given their lives for their culture.

Those who return home do so as heroes, considered as men by their communities. Some unscrupulous individuals may fake this, but if they are ever found to be lying, they will be branded and cast out of their homes, forced into a life of isolation and ridicule.

The ritual likely has its origins in ancient PLAGI traditions, and was passed on to the humans of the region by the ETHERI nomads. The cause for the visions is unknown, but it is believed to have something to do with the corruption of the region, or possibly an undocumented DREAMSCAPE.

WANDERING CITY, the: see KAMELLIA.

WANDERING PLAINS, the: Geo. Area within the DEARTH, in the c north east of SAMMAEA, where the instability of the land is well-documented and not as chaotic as in other lands, though maps of the region remain an impossibility. In this regard, certain features remain constant, albeit constantly moving around on earthbergs. In places where the lava is not as active, the plates have consolidated, solidifying into a single many-tiered piece that flakes off in extreme weather.

WANE OF THE HOUSE OF FLIES, the: Art. Vol. Gothic tale common in the KORACHANI EMPIRE about the wane of the HOUSE of NOSO. Despite the popularity of the tale, the Patrician House that it's based on is still around today, though it is decrepit and owns ancient lands with few remaining resources. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

WANE OF THE SHADOWA, the: Sup. His. Event starting in the winter of 1919 RM lasting two years, when the strength of the ATRAMENTA waned, leaving the peripheral settlements of the KORACHANI EMPIRE without access to ATRAMENTISM and TECHNARCANA. The reason for the Wane is as yet unknown, but has been studied at great lengths, in an effort to predict any future waning.

WANIA: Rui. Ruins of a coastal city in the region of SÛR GHATH in the west of THE SURRACH. The city was abandoned in c. 3000 RM when the BAY OF KNAGHTA was cut off from the ocean, leaving the city landlocked.

WANING CITY, the: Lan. Soc. Colloquial name used for various cities around ELYDEN, including UMMARA and GIBEL.

WANING SHADOW: see TELRAAS.

WAQAD: Set. City in the north of the SULTANATE OF ABACARDAT, along the southern shore of the BAY OF BAZID (Pop. c. 40,000).

WAQARAT: Rvr. Major river flowing east through eastern HANNAH, into western QARALAM, before meeting the coast at the SEA OF ENTARI.

WAR OF THE ARTIFEXES, the: also 'the Artifex War'. Pol. Mil. His. Civil war ending in 3014 RM, that brought an end to the Golden Age of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, and saw the nation of Almagest gain its independence. Its roots can be traced to c. 2940 – 2960 RM, where tensions in the administrative hierarchy of the empire began to show, following the attempted defection of Azazem under the leadership of the so-called PARIAH KING.

The EDICT OF NICAEA in 2746 RM left many PATRICIAN HOUSES weakened and dwindling raw resources in the empire began to manifest as diminished earnings across the empire (indeed, many regions had already been bled dry centuries before; for instance VÂRR), with prices of raw materials increasing. Originating with the charismatic LORD ANTITHEOS; HALFBLOODED PATERFAMILIA of HOUSE ARTIFEX in ALMAGEST, who led a large group of patricians and industrialists (particularly MANUFACTORY-owning Houses, as well as the SODALITY OF TECHNARCANE RESEARCH) who were beginning to feel the effects of the lessening resources in opposition of imperial trade-laws.

The civil war started as a series of trade disputes and taxation conflicts that began in Almagest, spreading later to SKAROS, DURCHAA(1.), ASIBAIA and parts of western Azazem (now eastern LAASKHA); merchants and traders started imposing large export taxes on raw materials, which were opposed by Korachan. Embargoes and disputes slowly increased and by the end of the third millennium RM clashes were common-place along the then Azazemi/Korachani border, with THE RED ROUTE becoming host to many armies and private forces that preyed on caravans (themselves fortified as they had never been). Throughout this time, the administration in the dissenting nations was facing its own struggles, with Korachani loyalists facing civil unrest in the cities. Battles were fought along the Red Route, between the patrician's armies and the STEEL LEGIONS and other mercenary forces (the DESOLATI, in particular, emerged from the conflict wealthy). This escalated into outright war with the SIEGE OF VIRANUL in Azazem in 3001 RM that ended with the razing of the city and the fortifying of its citadel which became head of the imperial armies throughout the conflict. Most battles were fought at sea in the STRAIT OF SKAROS, where PARTHIS became ally of the dissenting nations; or on land in Azazem and Asibaia, the latter of which was left a ruin; though conflict raged across LLACHATUL (with dissent in some SAMMAEAN states as Korachan concentrated on the north; particularly dissent in KARAKHAS, which would eventually lead to the conflict known as the BLOOD HETERODOXIES).

The war was decided in 3014 RM in a large battle outside Almagest, near the Asibaian border in SAMIHUAL, which left both armies all-but destroyed and ended only with the signing of the ALMAGESTI TREATY, which left Almagest a free nation with far more autonomy than it ever had while under Korachan's yoke. Northern Skaros and Durchaa were also lost to the treaty.

Though HOUSE ARTIFEX was left devastated, it rose in the next decades to a position of great power in Almagest and, by 3096 RM became the main governing body of a new republic, going on to annex northern Skaros by 3137 RM and much of Durchaa by 3304 RM. Almagest was prouder that it had ever been, venturing west and north into the BLACK MOUNTAINS in the search for new resources, knowing that the empire could never ignore it as a threat again.

The Korachani empire was left weakened, its trade and industry along the Strait of Skaros suddenly lost, its armies weak. The following centuries were a long struggle, with dissent in SAMMAEA, particularly KARAKHAS plaguing it. Such uprisings were stifled by censors though what little trickled out of the nations (through trade and commerce and refugees) fortified other lands and made running things in the empire harder

WAR FOR THE CRADLE: Mil. His. War that took place in the CARCHEMISHI PENINSULA (1.) over ownership of the region known as the CRADLE OF THE ARCHPOTENTATE, where the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR was reborn as an OTHERWORLDER, fulfilling part of the prophecy of the SCRIPTURE OF SHADOW, becoming a culturally-significant place to KORACHAN. As a result, Korachan claimed the peninsula as a colony in c. 950 RM, building a TEMPLE over the Cradle around 100-yers later.

Growing conflict with natives and cultists of the so-called LIVING NIGHTMARE led to Korachan abandoning the peninsula in 1153 RM. A small garrison was left to guard the temple, though the empire's desire to reclaim the Cradle of the Archpotentate remained a priority.

Cultists of the LIVING NIGHTMARE harassed the garrison for years, eventually overtaking it and toppling the temple in c. 1200 RM, later taking over the entire peninsula, leading to the birth of the short-lived state of Carchemish⁽³⁾.

Throughout this time Korachan was planning an invasion, which began to take form in 1213 RM, using the colony of NOAVATUR as a staging point. The first troops landed on the EGENNAAH coast in 1215 RM, establishing a beachhead from which reinforcements rapidly moved south towards the Cradle. Carchemish had not yet been founded at this time, but the city of ONOMA BANT was established, and its troops moved north to counter the threat. The two sides clashed for months though Korachan, with new reinforcements arriving, was able to secure the region, establishing the port of MARDON harbour, which became a haven to pilgrims who flocked to the region as a new larger temple was erected in place of the old one and a new settlement of FOLCHAN established.

This period lasted for just under a century though, as the loss of Noavatur to independence in 1304 left the new colony cut off from supplies. Weakened, with its steady stream of fanatical pilgrims stopped, the natives, which by then had formed the nation of KULIGALA, whittled down Folchan until it was destroyed in 1333 RM.

Korachan was never able to re-establish a base there and what pilgrims manage to make landfall there are mercilessly slaughtered for their troubles.

WAR OF ECHOES: His. War. A catastrophic century-long conflict in the south west of SAMMAEA, in which PHYRR attacked MAENMIST in c. 3700 RM. Triggered by Phyrran unease over the construction of the expansive BASTION OF SIN NASSIR in Maenmist, the conflict lasted over a century and devastated both nations, leading to millions of deaths, crippling their economies and traumatising generations. The war was only ended through the self-serving intervention of merchants from the NACRE

LEAGUE, and a fragile armistice was agreed to in 3815 RM, leading to an arbitrary redrawing of their borders and the establishment of a mile-wide neutral zone between the two nations, which remains a tense and heavily patrolled area to this day.

WAR OF FAITH: Mil. Pol. His. KORACHANI CRUSADE against foreign religions, instigated by the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE and led by ICONOCLASTS^(2.) and their followers.

There have been various Wars of Faith over the years, and in most cases they have defied efforts at categorising them, though they are commonly divided into three wars: the FIRST, SECOND and THIRD Wars of Faith, between c. 1120 – 2300 RM, though in truth there were dozens of periods of offensives, with some overlapping multiple wars.

WAR OF FAITH, FIRST: Rel. His. WAR OF FAITH fought by the KORACHANI EMPIRE and the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE against foreign churches between c. 1120 – 1460 RM. The main target of this war was AHRISHEN and its allies, specifically the CHURCH OF THE SKY-LORD, the FOUR WINDS and the cult of the CHILD-PRINCE.

The war was largely fought sporadically across the SEA OF PYREA and the DEMERAL, with Korachani forces suffering in the unfamiliar terrain. Many religious structures were destroyed, and thousands of AHRISHENI were slain in various conflicts over the years.

WAR OF FAITH, SECOND: Rel. His. WAR OF FAITH fought by the KORACHANI EMPIRE and the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE against foreign churches between c. 1380 – 1720 RM. he main targets were various nations and faiths across the DARK SEA REGION, including THE HARÉSHK, KHAMID, and TZALLRACH, amongst others.

The war was largely fought sporadically across the Dark Sea region, though troops did make landfall and besiege various cities and regions over the course of the war.

WAR OF FAITH, THIRD: Rel. His. WAR OF FAITH fought by the KORACHANI EMPIRE and the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE against foreign churches between c. 1810 – 2340 RM against various targets surrounding imperial territories, largely to the east, particularly the north east, including Durchaa^(1.), Gâtha, Sabia, and Temuja.

WAR OF SCOURGING, the: also 'the Shadow War'. Mil. Soc. His. A great war encompassing most of the MORTAL PEOPLES as well as the remaining DEMIURGES and SCIONS, spreading across most of ELYDEN in the end of the FOURTH AGE between c. –1900 – –1700 RM following the rise to power of the Demiurge RACHANAEL. The war ended with the imprisonment of Rachanael in the PIT OF DAEKYN by his sister ALLAISHADA, though the victory came at a great cost – most civilisations had been destroyed and the mortals were left decimated, with only humans remaining in any notable numbers. The war brought about the FADING of the Fourth Age.

WAR OF SECESSION: Mil. Soc. His. Civil war in PNESSA that took place between 3402 – 3409 RM, ending with the death of the upstart king MITH SHUR III by his exiled brother MORTHA. Despite his death, Pnessian leaders retained control of their lands, but a series of military blunders late in the war saw the armies of Pnessa falter against ENEPH, leading to a ceasefire and the signing of the independence of Eneph and the birth of the nation of ELEKHID.

WAR OF THE SHATTERED PROPHECY: Myt. His. War. Mythic war fought in the early THIRD AGE between various HUMAN tribes and the IFIRMIANS following the shattering of the prophecy of the MOTHER AND FATHER OF CREATION between the SCIONS AZER (2.) and HAVELRA.

The war began after Azer's dead body was found in ifirmian territories when he visited the DEMIURGE DURUTHILHOTEP to confess to the murder of his daughter Havelra and to ask for absolution. Azer killed himself after Duruthilhotep refused to absolve him, but the children of Avraham, under the leadership of the scion MELQART, believed that Duruthilhotep killed Azer, and attacked the ifirmians, leading to decades of war in which the ifirmians were whittled down before sanity prevailed, ending the war.

WAR OF SUNDERING: Mil. His. A consequential war that engulfed the KORACHANI EMPIRE following the declaration of war by VENTHIR on SARASTRO on the 11th of CYKRANALEN 3703 RM. In 3704 RM BA'AKH, then a vassal state of Sarastro, seized on the chaos of the escalating conflict and made a bid for freedom, managing to break free early in 3705

RM, months before Sarastro itself broke away from the empire in the SUNDERING OF THE KORACHANI EMPIRE, which saw the empire sundered – the HIGH-EMPIRE of Korachan in the north, and the REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO in the south.

SATHEP, ruler of Sarastro since the SARASTROAN SANCTION, challenged the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR in a duel during the ultimate battle, which saw the north lose its southern territories (apart from Venthir) to Sarastro.

The conflict continued, at a dwindling pace, until a peace treaty was formally signed on the 6th of AKORALEN 3722 RM, bringing a tense peace to the INNER SEA REGION once more. However, conflict came to MHAROKK once more in 3825 RM as Sarastroan politicians and forces invaded in a peaceful takeover that resulted in a bipartite government forming. Korachani forces invaded the nation in turn, though were unsuccessful in reclaiming Mharokk, and it was formally declared a vassal of Sarastro on the 5th of RACHALEN 3728 RM. This is now considered to be the end of the war.

WAR OF THE TRIPTYCH, the: Mil. Rel. His. Conflict that gripped the regions of the SHAMAL and NEYSHABUR along the northern border of SARASTRO and ANUBIA, between 161 – 283 RM and was fought between Sarastro and the VENATHIEMPIRE, as well as ANUBIAN NOMADS who had largely allied themselves with the former.

The conflict originated in c. 155 RM as encounters between Sarastroan pioneers and Venathi miners grew more common. The NATHI KINGDOM had established mining operations in the region in c. -230 RM, the crude umbra mined there of great value to the alchemists of MIDAL who found great value in the substance as a reagent in their experimentations. Though the fragmentation of NATH in c. -170 RM had left the mines there deserted, they were re-established in c. 140 RM, under the control of the succeeding Venathi empire. Sarastro, freed from the Venathi empire's yoke in 157 RM following bloody conflict in its cities, was keen on exploiting this substance settled the region of Neyshabur just south of the Shamal, funding the colony of ACATEA in 158 RM, where Sarastro's first crude dabblings in umbra extraction were attempted. Continued pressure from the larger Venathi facilities and their mercenary forces escalated, with skirmishes often engulfing mines as Sarastroan benefactors ordered their crew to attack their Venathi in what was hoped to be an easy source of spoils.

These localised conflicts soon engulfed the region and by 161 RM they had escalated into outright war, dubbed the WAR OF THE TRIPTYCH, a name earnt from the participation of Venath, Sarastro and Anubia – the main nations of the so-called ARID TRIPTYCH. The fall of the Venathi empire in c. 170 RM added pressure to its nobility to win the fight as soon as possible and in 178 RM they purchased the aid of Anubian nomads, who fought in return for small amounts of UMBRA and more mundane supplies. Many mines were destroyed in the ensuing battles and as events intensified following the Anubian nomads' involvement, a great battle was fought around the mine of ATAMAHIA in the north east of the Shamal in 179 RM. The battle ended in a victory for the Sarastroan armies, though the conflict continued for another 4-years in which the remaining Venathi occupiers were pushed north.

The conflict ended in 183 RM, a death-knell to the Venathi empire, thought the subsequent rise of $\underline{QUEEN\ HETEPHERES}$ in 194 RM led to the resurgence of Venathi culture in the form of Venthir and by c. 250 RM most mines in the Shamal had returned to Venthiri hands.

WAR OF POXES: Mil. Soc. His. War in later THIRD AGE, in which the forces of the DEMIURGE NERGAAL, by then amongst the most potent in ELYDEN, clashed against an allied force that included the troops of his brother ASHTERATH, who wounded and severely weakened Nergaal in the battle. Hundreds of thousands are thought to have died in the desert heat and to PLAGUE and disease that emerged in the region, rendering it uninhabitable for centuries. The city of HEMESH was later built over the site.

WARANAEN: Set. Settlement in the south east of SABAISA, overlooking the sound of SOLMORRA (Pop. c. 3,000).

WARBRED: Lan. Fau. TEMUJAN term for a war horse (or any beast used for warfare), as in a creature that is bred specifically for use in warfare. They are commonly bred in the TOGARMAH region.

WARDEN: 1. Mil. Rnk. Org. A rank within the VÁMAN ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION that is held by the majority of its agents. Wardens form the backbone of the Order and carry out the orders of the INOUISITORS.

2. Org. Rnk. Acolytes of the PANGAIA.

WARDEN OF NESSA, the: VALTHAS guardian of a deep pit of Carceri, beneath the c of AHRISHEN, who guards the pit of NESSA.

WARDEN OF THE VEIL: Mil. Atr. Pol. Rnk. An elite division within the VÁMAN ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION, tasked with monitoring the Veil, a colloquial term for the boundary between the MATERIAL PLANE and the ATRAMENTA.

These Wardens are vigilant for any breaches and activity that might threaten the stability of the KORACHANI EMPIRE or the well-being of the Atramenta and the UNDYING MACHINE. Each Warden of the Veil is in command of dozens of WARDENS⁽²⁾ – the most numerous position within the Order, whose agents travel across the empire in their signature black leather dusters hunting for rogue shapers.

WARDENS, the: Geo. Metallic rock formations in KORACHAN. All usable metal was mined from the stalagmite-like formations many centuries ago, leaving the remnants riddled with holes. Named after wardens of local mythology said to overlook the area.

WARDERS, the: Mar. Rnk. Caste of warriors who once served as guards the SORCERERS (2.) of ALAM BETHYL. Like the sorcerers, they wore stylised tribal clothing, characterised by heavy leather sarongs, wooden-panelled armour and wooden head-masks. Following the ousting of the sorcerers in 3482 RM, the Warders were disbanded, though they later reappeared in 3562 RM as a policing force to regulate the activity of remaining sorcerers.

WARINAR: Set. Fortified city in the south east of KAZZAR along the course of a tributary of the larger river FONESA (Pop. c. 42,000).

WARMARSHALL: Mil. Rnk. Highest ranking officer in the IMPERIAL

ARMY, based within the expansive fortress of AGOSTAN in the south of KORACHAN. The present Warmarshall of the Imperial Army is ABIGER
KORIC.

WARRANT OF USE: Ohj. Soc. Accreditation required by SHAPERS in PARTHIS to practise their art. The Warrant of Use must be paid for and is only issued by the OFFICES OF THE OCCULTARIUM after performing a successful practical and written examination and must be renewed every three years.

The black-market trade in false Warrants is unfortunately rampant despite periodical crackdowns by Occultarium agents and it is not uncommon for unaccredited shaper to be in possession of counterfeit Warrants.

WARRELHOFF: Bus. Ind. Famous gunsmithing family based in LAASKHA.

Originating from a simple weaponsmith over 800-years ago, the family is now amongst the most prestigious artificer-houses in the KORACHANI EMPIRE, and crafts many weapons for the Korachani military, including the ubiquitous W-11 rifle. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

WARREN-HALL: Soc. DVERGAI equivalents of town squares; subterranean chambers at the heart of dvergai communities.

WARRIOR-LODGE: Mar. Org. Martial sodalities common in LAASKHA.

WARRIOR SAGA: Soc. Mar. In PERGOST, a common quest amongst males (sometimes females) who have come of age, and often a method of challenging for the leadership of tribes. The quest commonly involved epic trials of endurance such as treks across frozen landscapes or duels with ferocious beasts. The sagas are largely outdated and few large cities undertake them anymore, though Turaan tribes do still follow the tradition.

WARS OF FAITH: see WAR OF FAITH.

WARSEER: Mil. Rnk. Advisory high-ranking title held by powerful SHAPERS within the military of the HIGH- and LOW-EMPIRES. Those bearing the rank are ATRAMENTISTS skilled in the SPHERE of CLAIRVOYANCE, as well as the ability to see nearby events in the future, making their abilities vital to the military.

WARSHAPER: Mil. Rnk. Common rank during THE GREAT WAR, used to denote SHAPERS who devoted themselves to the cause of the war, specifically in battle. Rarely referred to as warshapers before the war, they tend to be martially adept individuals in possession of abilities that are useful in some theatre of war or associated activity. Healers, empowerers, forecasters and other SPHERES (including elementally-associated ones, which bestow great offensive capabilities) are most commonly seen amongst Warshapers.

WARSUTIA: Set. Small city in the c south of the BARRIER LANDS (Pop. c. 14.500).

WASAT: Set. Settlement in the c west of J'THANA, along the course of the river J'DRA'AT. It forms a part of the SALT ROAD (Pop. c. 10,000).

WASTE-NOMAD: (rihar I' sulrach) Soc. Like the SCAVEN of ALMAGEST and the HIGH- and LOW-EMPIRES, waste-nomads are opportunists living outside of normal society, scraping a living off of the waste of industry and civilisation. They are more antagonistic than scaven and often harbour degenerates and other physically corrupt. Unlike scaven, the wastenomads rarely settle down in one place and comb the ash & dustwastes and wasteyards in a never-ending circuit.

WASTEHOUSE: Soc. In the urban vernacular of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, wastehouses are abandoned structures found (often) in the depths and undercity areas of heavily cunurbated areas, such as the GEMS and other large industrialised cities.

WASTELAND, the: 1. Geo. Ice plains covering most of the north of SABIA, covered in ancient craters and solid blue ice. SOUTHERN craters (where air is less inimical) are home to great mines where METEORE is excavated. The KORACHANI EMPIRE fought many wars against Sabia and her KASPIAN and PERGOSTI allies for control of this region, with DURCHAA (1.)-led offensives against the region culminating c. 2250 RM, during the THIRD WAR OF FAITH, where much of the western reaches of the wasteland were usurped, and open-cast mines established despite the many problems (not least of which was the climate and Sabian resistance), though the constant Sabian harassment throughout the 400-year period ended in 3237 RM when the last of the ailing imperial colonies were destroyed, the area left to be reclaimed by nature.

2. Soc. Lan. Name used in reference to ELYDEN that grew in popularity towards the end of the FIFTH AGE and continued to do so following the final fragmentation of the KORACHANI EMPIRE. Other terms that also gained popularity include: THE AUTUMN REALM, and THE TWILIGHT.

WASTES OF CHEEDARAN: See CHEEDARAN.

WASTEYARD: in the industrialised regions, large expanses of scrap metal, slag and other industrial waste. Most were controlled by the private entities, often degenerating into lawless areas filled with SCAVEN and prospectors.

WASTING VEIL, the: Sup. a form of blight known colloquially as the WASTING VEIL, which is similar to ATRAMENTAL and FIRMAMENTAL CORRUPTION but is distinct from both and localised to the area of PITTILAYA in the c north west of IMEAL that emerged from a curse placed on the region by the DEMIURGE TALANTEHUT in the THIRD AGE as punishment for the construction of the hubristic DENGEDDAR.

The blight has made the region incredibly inhospitable to MORTALKIND while being difficult to detect and quantify. Crops do not grow there, and no animals that are of use to mortals can thrive there. There are no resources of note and any effort made by mortals themselves to establish settlements or industries there are doomed to fail. That is not to mention the wasting disease that afflicts mortals that spend too long there – bodies grow weak, minds forgetful, eyes cloud over, and anything that once brought joy and drive is sapped of its lustre – all in a matter of weeks.

WATADET: Set. Major city in the far north of J'THANA. It is one of the main links with N'RAKH, and its merchants are known to travel into the land of the AANTHA, via BARATHEA^(1.). Much of what is known of N'rakh is from their accounts. It forms a part of the SALT ROAD (Pop. c. 72,000).

1. In the AVÉNETHI ORDER they form the backbone of most WITCH persecutions that take place within the borders of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, and are well-trained in identifying and combatting FIRMAMENTAL SHAPERS, though few amongst their numbers are shapers themselves (shapers within the order are usually reserved for more elite roles, such as SENTINELS). Their counterparts in hunting for witches without the borders of the empire are the SEEKERS.

2. In the Grigorian Order the title is more representative of their role, in which they patrol imperial cities and territories for signs of trouble and wrongdoing. They are amongst the more amenable of Inquisitorial agents, and work closely with local militias, law enforcement, and the IRON GUARD.

WATER: Mys. Ele. The third element in the alchemical philosophy of GNOTHI MYSTICISM.

WATER OF THE THRONE: Rel. Obj. Holy water that flows from a spring within the city of AGLAIA⁽²⁾ in AZAZEM. Originally a natural spring outside of the city proper, the uncontrolled growth of the city saw the spring become enveloped by structures, and it is now covered by a manufactory that extracts and bottles the water, which is said to possess a natural quality that helps to combat ATRAMENTAL AILMENTS such as AEPATHY and ATRAMMAT.

WATERLINE MARKER: Obj. concrete markers located in regions that were once coastal, originally used to mark the waterline and changes in tides. Today they serve as a grim reminder of how far coastlines have moved over the past millennia.

WATIQ: Set. Small city in the c north of the SULTANATE OF ABACARDAT, south of the city of FATARAH (Pop. c. 8,000).

WATT: plains in the west of THE SURRACH. They were part of the homeland LAETIAN homeland.

WAY, the: Com. Geo. Trade-route in the south of WESTERN LLACHATUL, linking the nations of OPHIUSSA, TAHALL, GNOTH, AQUARIIA, HOLOLACH and the MULL CITY-STATES.

The route serves to bring trade from the INNER SEA REGION to the north west and goods from Western Llachatul to the south east, bringing many items and goods to regions where they otherwise wouldn't be found. Though the route passes through Gnoth, its insular people (the GIGANRI) rarely allow people to pass into its borders and only the most trusted of merchants who have fostered honest and lasting relations with its people, are allowed through its lands. Most merchants are made to stop in the cities of SYNCRETIA in the east and OPUSCULA in the south west, where they can trade their wares and head back where they came or wait for Gnothi merchants to return to them with new goods. See Vol II: Major Trade Routes.

WAY OF AETHER, the: see PATH OF THOUGHT.

WAY OF QUICKSILVER: Mar. Martial art practiced in AETHIOS that favours the use of a dagger and pistol, and a blocking opportunistic style. It borrows techniques and styles from an ancient ACATASI martial manual, though has been adapted to modern styles. Its main academy is in the city of ROSENORS in the c of Aethios, though gymnasia can be found across the nation.

WAY OF THE DRAGON, the: Phil. GIGANRI philosophy involving much symbolism and dualism. Fundamentally, the Way of the Dragon teaches that for one to succeed in life and seek enlightenment or simply tranquillity, one must understand the way the world works. The teaching of the Way of the Dragon makes heavy use of symbolism and anthropomorphism to explain its views. There is a Great deal of overlap between the Way of the Dragon and giganri GNOSTICISM.

WAY OF MEGILLAR: Phil. Philosophy commonly adhered to in Krem and, in small numbers in the south of TZALLRACH, and parts of RTHEI. The philosophy espouses an altruistic and introspective way of life that is said to lead to a shorter gestation of ones' spirit after death before being reborn as an OTHERWORLDER.

The philosophy originated in the north of Krem, in the dry plains of the same name, in c. 2080 RM, after being written by the SHAPER INDERA AHAM SOLTA, through many sessions of automatic writing whilst ASTRALLY-PROJECTING in the otherworld, where their words were imparted to her by a choir of spirits.

There is dispute as to the truth of this, but the region is known for the many otherworlders that travel there from around ELYDEN. Few amongst them know of what draws them there, but the supporters of the Way of Megillar swear that the otherworlders are drawn to the region by the influence the philosophy's practitioners have on the area.

The Way of Megillar spread across Krem following the death of Indera, becoming popular in the plains region of AMAYOKOWAN in the c north of Krem, before spreading farther south. Within 100-years it had supplanted most other religions in the area, and had been adopted by most in Krem. A caste of spiritual leaders known as THEURGES emerged by c. 2200 RM, acting as guides to those undertaking the Way of Megillar.

The scrolls are stored in the holy city of $\underline{OKKOWAN}$, where the bodies of dead otherworlders are interred glass-fronted reliquaries in a great temple. The scrolls themselves are preserved in a crystal altar in the back of the temple.

WAYR MORR: Rel. Mil. Org. Small order of templars founded in 3203 RM in LOEGRESS^(1.) to guard the CAELL EN WAYR (Temple of the Throne) in the north east of the nation. The templars are as much scholars of the ORDER OF THE TAELLANNIR as they are warriors, and five of them stand guard over the temple at every moment, where they serve as guards and guides alike.

WAZARA: Soc. Rnk. In CUTH, KREM and RHEA, a servant employed by noble families and large businesses, fulfilling a role similar to that of butler in western societies.

WEAVING: Mys. One of the ways the FIRMAMENT can be manipulated, similar to SHAPING, but uses physical movement, notably of the hands (hence the term weaving), to achieve acts. See Vol IV: Other Forms of Mysticism.

WEDATABANGI: Set Small city in the south west of NOAVATUR (Pop. c. 12,000).

WEDROSE: Soc. Tradition in the south of AHRISHEN and most of the HARÉSHK, where newlyweds give a rose to each of their guests in return for well-wishes. In parts of the Haréshk and SAUA, the tradition takes a darker form where people leave a rose on their doorstep on nights of twin new moons (or, more commonly, nights where one moon is new and the other has set) to appease dark spirits.

WEEAKRA: Sec. Small city in the c of PNESSA, just to the west of the river IGRROD (Pop. c. 13,000).

WEEPING FOREST, the: also 'Arrakena'. For. Large forest in the c of VAALK. It is known for thick fogs which appear when hot air from the southern reaches cooler air in the hills of the MALL VORAKAN and VRAKKA Mountains.

WEEPING PLAINS, the: Sup. Geo. Mildly ATRAMENTALLY-ACTIVE region in the west of PELASGOS, covering 3,000-square-miles of gently sloping plains east of the SEA OF CYPRIA. The region emerged in c. 3200 RM east of the settlement of BASSORAH⁽⁴⁾ and has steadily grown since then, and is characterised by a moisture that clings to the terrain throughout the year.

Effects of exposure are relatively mild – small fauna are most-affected, with many growing disfigured or dying from over-exposure. Mortals travelling quickly through the region suffer little ill-effects other than headaches and a foul taste in their mouths, though those who spend more time there report aching joints, bleeding eyes and noses and migraines that persist for days after they leave the region. Food, particularly fruit, eaten there is said to taste sour, and food grown there is much worse.

Few, if any, settlements of note now exist within the Weeping Plains, and many have been abandoned since its appearance, and Bassorah, currently a few miles outside its range of influence, is thought by scholars to only have a few decades before it finds itself within the Weeping Plains. The region is categorised as a LEAST CONCERN by the KORACHANI

The region is categorised as a LEAST CONCERN by the KORACHAN INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

WEI: Rvr. River to the south of the BAND Mountains, flowing south east for 200-miles into the STRAIT OF ALMAGEST.

WEIRDLING: Sup. Mor. Diminutive degenerate common in the UMBRA SOKHAR region of SAMMAEA, as well as other areas of long-term stable ATRAMENTAL TAINT. The beings are small, standing little more than four feet tall (though their frames, if stretched out, would be closer to five-ft. tall), with spindly limbs and skull-like faces. Their skin is pale, with dark veins showing beneath and they are often covered in lesions and other signs of their ATRAMENTAL corruption.

They are thought to have once been DVERGAI that over time became corrupted by the Atramenta. There are scattered signs of an ancient dverg civilisation predating the SOKHARAN EMPIRE, possibly in the FOURTH AGE, or earlier, and extant weirdlings are thought to be descendants of these dverg.

WEITI: Set. Settlement in the far west of ALMAGEST, in its territories south of the BAND Mountains. It was once a coastal settlement, though now lies 2-miles from the mouth of the river WEI, and is now a major producer of machined parts (Pop. c. 6,000).

WELA: Set. Settlement in the region of TUSENTAL in the c of THE SURRACH. It is known for its large cattle herds (Pop. c. 4,000).

WELKAET: Set. Major fortified coastal city in the far south west of the HENDECARCHY of CHLORIS, in MALAN, overlooking the RED ISLES. Historically, it was a KHAMIDIAN Set. Outpost though following centuries of disuse, it was repopulated by Malani expatriates in c. 2000 RM. It is home to the largest of Chloris' harbours as well as a society of opportunistic treasure hunters that search the waters of ancient Khamid for relics. Regardless of their vocation, its sailors are the most adept at navigating the treacherous waters of the region (Pop. c. 142,000).

WELKIN RENT, the: Ast. His. Celestial object that is visible in daylight in the NORTHERN HEMISPHERE with a right ascension of 06h 45m 20s and a declination of +19° 24′ 30″, and a diameter of around 1.5°, making it the largest object visible with the naked eye in the sky, though it is faint. On a clear day one can see a visible corona and a large central 'mass' in various shades of blue.

Historical accounts mention the phenomenon, often calling it a celestial conflagration, as far back as the THIRD AGE, though it is unknown exactly when the celestial object first appeared, assuming it was not always present. Modern scholars believe the object to be the remnants of an exploded star, though there has been little formal research on to provide a conclusive determination. SHAPERS who have studied it have noted that it exudes a potent if extremely distant MAGICKAL aura, though what this means remains unknown.

WELKIN SKY, CHURCH OF THE: Rel. Dominant religion in AHRISHEN, which is also observed to a lesser degree in SAUA. Its chief deity is the SKY-LORD, who rules over a pantheon known as the FOUR WIVES. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

'WELL-NAMED': Soc. Common ice-breaking greeting used in various NORTHERN SAMMAEAN cultures, including BA'AKH, LIDEA, MHAROKK, SUMA'YA, VAALK, Mharokk, Lidea. The phrase is used in response to someone introducing themselves, after they provide their name. It is considered a polite response, though is never expected.

WELL ORCHARDS: Flo. Str. Agricultural structure common in MHAROKK and LIDEA, these circular enclosures are made from heavy stones and rubble and enclose a single citrus tree (usually lemon or orange), with a small door to allow gardeners entrance. The circular walls are meticulously constructed to allow morning mists into them, providing vital water to the plants, and also protect them against harsh winds. They are named after their appearance, which is said to resemble a large well.

WELL OF UBOTETH: Rui. Ancient stepped well in the south of ANDILUTH, thought to date back to an unknown FOURTH AGE KERATIN culture. Most of the well is buried today, though rumours abound amongst the Andiluthan nomads of tunnels and chambers radiating outwards from the deepest parts of the well.

WENCHARI: Ind. Set. Major city-manufactory in the north west of PHYRR, just outside the DISHKAR MAZE. It is a major industrial centre, and thanks to its many satellite mines it is one of the largest producers of iron in SAMMAEA. Its ruling TECHNARCH is VESHAK ULADHR, who was responsible for the construction of the landships beginning in c. 2980 RM that were used to great effect in defending the north of the nation from incursions from the HOGGOTHA ISZ. Today, landships made in Wenchari continue to successfully patrol the otherwise treacherous expanse of the SASTAKAUR Massif from outside attentions (Pop. c. 730,000).

WENCHATH: Set. Major city in the centre of Phyrr to the north east of the Anthar desert. It serves as a major link between north and west and is controlled by two TECHNARCHS whose iron grip over its people is only matched by their efficiency in maintaining order and productivity.

These Technarchs, known as the Iron Twins, have divided the city into two zones, each governed by their own stringent rules and heavily monitored by a network of automatons and spies. The city is a hub of trade and industry, with caravans constantly moving through its gates, bringing raw materials from the north and west to be processed in its vast manufactories. However, the citizens live in a state of constant surveillance and fear, knowing that any dissent or inefficiency is met with swift and merciless punishment. (Pop. c. 148,000).

WENDRAEN: Geo. Mountains in the far south east of KOMMEA, forming a part of the greater HOLLOW COASTLINE chain.

WENNAN: Rwr. River in the c west of RHINOCOLOURA, flowing west for 300-miles from sources in the SIRI RAH Mountains before meeting its parent, the river SHIBBOLETH^(3.).

WERON: Set. Settlement in the south east of TAHALL. If is famed in Tahall for an ancient rusted automaton that lies half-buried and overgrown outside its old walls. Nothing is known of the automaton's origins or its original purpose though it is often sought out by scholars and technologists who like to study it (Pop. c. 10,000).

WEST WIND DRIFT: Sea. Ocean current centred around the Southern Pole that flows east. The current is circumpolar due to the lack of any major landmass south of the SOUTHERN POLAR CIRCLE, which keeps warm ocean waters away from the Southern Pole.

WESTERN BRORI CURRENT: Sea. Warm surface ocean current in the south east of the MIROVEAN OCEAN that flows east as part of the MIROVEAN GYRE along the western coast of the continent of BROR^(1.), before heading north into the EASTERN MYMEREAN CURRENT.

WESTERN DESERT, the: see SEKHER.

WESTERN DOLDRUMMS: Sea. Intertropical convergence zone where the north eastern and south eastern Trade Winds converge, roughly along the equinoctial line, in the SEA OF NARANOR, between the south east of WESTERN MENISCEA and WESTERN SAMMAEA. Its specific position varies short-term by season and long-term by age, though is generally characterised by monotonous windless weather and thunderstorms.

In the age of sail, most vessels would travel west and then south, rather than directly south across the doldrums, taking advantage of the currents of the $\underline{\mathsf{BATHASHALI}}$ $\underline{\mathsf{GYRE}}$.

WESTERN HEMISPHERE: see NEAR HEMISPHERE.

WESTERN ERTHYDEAN CURRENT: Sea. Surface ocean current in the SEA OF ERTHYDEA that flows south east along the western coast of WESTERN LLACHATUL across the SEA OF SUDUNIR into the SEA OF ORRIDA, turning north east off the western coast of THE SURRACH before dividing in two – flowing back west to meet up with the LYNNAEAN CURRENT again, and east across the GATE OF EREBETH, becoming the primary source of the INNER SEA CURRENT.

WESTERN KALISANGELID CURRENT: Sea. A cool surface ocean current flowing north east from the WEST WIND DRIFT along the western-coast of the KALISANGELID ISLES before splitting up West as part of the BATHASHALI GYRE, and east into the SEA OF AMMASH⁽²⁾. It brings cool water north along the south western coast of SAMMAEA.

WESTERN LARISH: see LARISH, WESTERN.

WESTERN LERAMUGHI CURRENT: Sea. Warm surface ocean current in the west of the SEA OF LERAMUGH that flows south along the south eastern coast of SAMMAEA, before continuing south east, where it joins with the WEST WIND DRIFT.

WESTERN LLACHATUL: see LLACHATUL, WESTERN.

WESTERN MENISCEA: see MENISCEA, WESTERN.

WESTERN MIGRATION, the: 1. Soc. His. Exodus of people from the KORACHANI HEARTLAND beginning c. 80 RM, following the occupation of LAASKHA, VAALK and PELASGOS. Fronted by EXOCRINES, many indigenous peoples and cultures were encountered and fought during this time.

2. A second western Migration occurred in c. 350 with renewed confidence with the return of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR to power. Despite great enthusiasm, little was accomplished.

WESTERN POLARIS DRIFT: Sea. Ocean current centred around the NORTHERN POLE that flows east around the WHITE SHEET.

WESTERN SAMMAEA: see SAMMAEA, WESTERN.

WESTERN THANO: see THANO, WESTERN.

WESTERN TULURKRYPH: Geo. One of two common subdivisions of the FIRMAMENTAL WASTELAND of TULURKRYPH (1.), located to the west of the SEA OF IPERIA.

WESTERN WASTES, the: see DAENED SULRACH.

WETA: Set. City in the c north west of SERROK in the south-facing foothills of the HAMAIADON Mountains. Its main industry is quarrying stone (Pop. c. 25,000).

WHASONET: Geo. Mountains in the north east of MENISCEA, on the headland of ABARHAL^(2,) that separates the native lands of the nation of Abarhal^(3,) in the south from the PARTHISAN colony of IBANNEM^(1,) in the north. Its rocks are brown and they are snow-topped all year round.

WHERRY: Veh. Freight boats common in most of the canals and rivers of AHRISHEN. Their single large triangular sails are often black from tar used to make them waterproof. They typically have a crew of two – a captain (rarely called that, and typically called 'the man'), and an apprentice (typically called 'the boy'. They are a ubiquitous sight across the AHRISHENI WATERWAYS, and are the most common small freight vessel used across the nation, transporting goods up and down the Waterways.

WHISPER HEADS, the: Int. Geo. Concentration of GODHEADS in the TUARTAR MAZE in the c south of the UMBRA SOKHAR region. The godheads, numbering in their hundreds, in a region of some 100 squaremiles, are a mystery and little is known about them.

WHISPERING CATACOMBS, the: see GLADAGHRA.

WHISPERS OF NERGAAL: see NERGAAL, WHISPERS OF.

WHISPERS OF VARPULIS: see VARPULIS, WHISPERS OF.

WHITE ANGEL, the: See TAHIRA, THE WHITE ANGEL.

WHITE BANK, the: Com. Org. Bank and moneylenders, run by the WHITE LEAGUE. Its branches (called CHAPTERS^(3,), much in the same way as the White League's armies) can be found across the INNER SEA REGION as well as to the west, around the SEA OF ORRIDA. Its first and main chapter is situated in the city of ABIMOLOCH, where it has stood as a major institution since its founding by PATRICIAN HOUSE OTTUSARA in 1592 RM.

Today its headquarters are located in the city of $\underline{\text{TETHRA}}$, $\underline{\text{PARTHIS}}$, though it has close links with the $\underline{\text{WHITE FORTRESS}}$ of Tasalagor in $\underline{\text{TARTAK}}$.

WHITE BORDER, the: Geo. Lan. Heathen name for the WHITE SHEET that crowns the far north of LLACHATUL, otherwise known in the KORACHANI EMPIRE as KHOLAMOR.

WHITE CALENDAR, the: Cal. Calendar based on the IVORY MOON SIELLA observed by certain ethnicities in the HENDECARCHIES of STHAMAN, CHLORIS and ATALLUA, in MALAN, where it replaces the MALANI LONG-COUNT CALENDAR, causing some degree of confusion between communities. See Vol II: Month and Lunar Cycle in Elyden.

WHITE CITY, the: see KAND or TABERNA (2.).

WHITE FORTRESS, the: also 'Tasalagor'. Str. Marble-fronted citadel in the eastern face of the HETHA mountain in the c of TARTAK, close to the course of the river LLIRA. It is a major outpost of the WHITE LEAGUE, and since c. 3703 RM has been its headquarters (Pop. c. 2,200).

WHITE GARDEN, the: Geo. Natural white limestone labyrinth in the east of TARTAK, within the ULLOLAKH woodlands. It is known for its bleached plants and is thought to have been made by a scion-born descended from the DEMIURGE AVRAHAM.

WHITE LEAGUE, the: also 'THE ALABASTER HOST'. Com. Mar. Mercenaries, their roots lying in a knightly order founded in DHALONA, PARTHIS, in 1192 RM, sworn to defend those without the means to do so themselves. By c. 1300 RM they had CHAPTERS^(2.) in most nations around the INNER SEA, settling there in return for a yearly tithe and peonage of each member for a term no more than 4 years.

With the grip of the KORACHANI EMPIRE tightening, they came to charge payment for their deeds, both as a means of sustaining their tenure in imperial lands and to fill their already pillage-fed coffers. By c. 1600 they had become bankers and moneylenders, with chapters of the WHITE BANK in most cities around the Inner Sea, their forces working mostly as mercenaries for the Korachani empire though open to employment to any who could afford their services. In 2374 RM the Korachani empire descended on many chapters, destroying them, lessening the rapidly increasing influence of the Legion.

Crippled by the blow, the White League struggled throughout the next few centuries, splitting into smaller orders, with the original Legion remaining in PARTHIS. Successes in regional wars filled the Legion's coffers once more in early 2910 RM, and most chapters solidified one more under a singular banner. Major fortresses were established in Parthis, TARTAK, TARAHA and VAALK, where they remain to this day.

The empire's wars of the latter 3rd millennium RM – the WAR OF THE ARTIFEXES in LLACHATUL, and the BLOOD HETERODOXIES in KARAKHAS – led to the White League fighting against Korachan (through Parthisan alliances with Korachani foes). Further scuffles with the Korachani empire did little to dent their holdings, and by c. 3400 RM the empire realised it had more to gain from them as allies than enemies, and the two entered in agreements which stand until today. Despite these agreements the White League can still sell its services to other powers with the proviso that they cannot engage in open conflict with Korachan.

In 3406 RM, the White League deposed the Parthisan government, and replaced it with the ALABASTER COUNCIL, which ruled Parthis until 3701 RM, when the SECULAR REPUBLIC took back control.

The White League's power increased manifold during the WAR OF SUNDERING as its troops sold their services at first to both sides, being careful not to clash with each other, but by the end of the war their allegiance had fallen in line with SARASTRO, believing that the chaos that would accompany its emancipation from Korachan, should it win, would be beneficial to the League.

Nations in which the White league has a strong presence may have villages and towns under control of the league. These are technically enclaves of the League within the host state, and its people answer to the league, not the greater nations' government, though the exact status varies from place to place, with more rural areas being more likely to fall under control of the league and its customs. This is most common in the south east of Parthis, and Tartak.

Common mercenaries within the League are known as FREE COMPANIONS, and each chapter is headed by an AUBERGE, whose master is known as a PILIER. Each chapter has scholars and clerks known as DOYENS, some of which travel with the Free Companions, chronicling their deeds and anything they encounter of interest – these individuals are known as DOYEN-KNIGHTS.

WHITE PALACE: see MAMOT IKH.

WHITE POPLAR: see ABELE.

WHITE ROAD, the: Lan. Geo. Nomad name for the region of HALOLAN in the north of VENTHIR.

WHITE-ROBES: Lan. Colloquial term for the BARRIMA of LYRIDIA, found common usage in c. 1000 RM.

WHITE SEA: see BIELOST.

WHITE SHEET, the: also 'Kholamor'. Geo. Common name across various languages for the frozen mass that crowns the far north of ELYDEN and the northern-most part of the continent of LLACHATUL, known as SALRIDEA⁽¹⁾. With an average yearly area of over 3,300,000-miles, this mass encompasses both sea ice that stretches into the Seas of POLARIS and SUDUNIR, as well as the frozen water covering Llachatul. In winter months the sea ice increases in size to an area of around 5,000,000-miles, cutting off the above seas from each other, and rendering sea travel close to impossible without specifically constructed icebreaking ships. The nations of VALBAR and DURCHAA⁽¹⁾, for instance, see their coastlines become engulfed in ice which during harsh months can reach their shore, completely nullifying their fishing and whaling industries. Beyond this white sheet the earth is frozen solid as permafrost.

Known for its many glaciers and overall lack of life, the White Sheet has fascinated explorers for centuries, and various expeditions have been made to penetrate its depths, and despite a few successes, very little is known of the region.

The region is claimed by RAONGEN^(2.), though outside of a few specific areas, it puts little effort into guarding these northern lands, parts of which are also claimed by other nations. Other regions have contested this claim, and nations such as ALMAGEST, ARERAQTH, Durchaa, PERGOST, THANO have established outposts and reassert stations with little opposition from Raongen.

WHITE WALL, the: Geo. Large glacier in eastern SABIA, close to KASPIA.

WHITE WURM, the: Int. Myt. A monolithic petrified dead worm in the north west of the CHAMBER OF SORROWS in the PRISON CARCERI, beneath the c of the INNER SEA. A city is said to be built in the hollow of its chest, mining its marrow, which is used as money to barter with.

The Wurm is thought to be a MESOCHTHON (Pop. Unknown).

WHITEMANE'S TOMB: final resting place of the TZALLRACHI, champion ZULEICA WHITEMANE.

WICHSENRE: Flo. Geo. Endorheic depression in the north west of SIMBARA, to the north of the SEA OF AMASAL known for its expansive coral forest. Ancient sun-bleached corals, some reaching 15 – 20 ft. high stand in the basin. With fanning thin vines tops providing cover, they are now covered in vines, lichens and mosses, and are a unique habitat for a wide variety of wildlife.

WID: Set. Settlement in the c of TATAR. Its main industry is agriculture, particularly the cultivation of amaranth, and the countryside surrounding the city is filled with windmills, many of them centuries old, where grain is ground into flour (Pop. c. 7,600).

WIDTHON: 1. Flo. Tough shrub-like tree that grows to 6 – 10-ft. high, often described as similar in appearance to old woody thyme, with gnarled bark and branches that bend against the wind. Its leaves are small and fragrant, but are mildly poisonous to the touch.

2. For. Sparse scrub woodlands in the west of \underline{KAZZAR} , along the western coast of the Unaralott peninsula. It is largely made up of the eponymous trees⁽¹⁾ and is noted for its fragrant smell. The woodlands are largely devoid of wildlife due to the mildly poisonous leaves of the trees.

WIGHT: Oth. A term in the KORACHANI EMPIRE given to any halfblood that's many generations removed from its PRIMOGENITOR, though that may still display some abilities or other clues to its heritage. Typically, wights can pass undetected as HUMANS (or whatever MORTAL PEOPLES constitutes most of their bloodline. See Vol II: Anthropeidos..

WIGMAKING: Soc. Wigs of dark straight hair are common amongst the PATRICIAN caste of the KORACHANI EMPIRE – men wear them long and straight, in honour of a style the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR was once known for, and women wear them in various styles. Hair for wigs comes from the dead and slaves (whose owners profit from the sale), though helots and even freemen down on their luck are also known to sell their hair.

Journeymen wigmakers travel across the empire, offering their services, repairing wigs and making new ones. They also buy hair from people (usually women), with straight black hair fetching the highest prices due to demand amongst the patrician classes.

WIKKJAZ: lit. 'one who wakes the dead'. Sup. Rnk. A rare SPHERE of FIRMAMENTISM where a SHAPER returns a SPIRIT to a VESSEL – either its own or a foreign one (possibly a recently deceased body or a vessel of artificial construct). It is comparable to a lesser form of the KLADOS that is practiced by the LHAUS. It was prevalent in ancient TZALLRACH, where Firmamentists once called upon their ancestors to oversee the annual COUNCIL OF DIARCHS.

WILD HUNT, the: Myt. His. Myth common to the lands of HOLOLACH^(1.).

Great storms are common in this area of THE INNER SEA coast, and whenever a particularly bad one strikes, it is said that the spectres of the dead are going on a wild hunt. This is seen as a precursor of destruction, though common Cloudy Shore mentality has good things coming from bad, so the wild hunt is ultimately celebrated in small feasts incorporating totem mounds (barrow + totem) erected on the shores to draw the spectres' punishment (lightning) away from the tree settlements along the foothills.

The wild hunt 'myth' is known in the Empire, where it has been corrupted, changing spectres to the UNDYING MACHINES' temper. Some settlements in LAASKHA have their version of the barrow totem, generally an iron statue of the Deity (similar but stylistically taller than those in the larger cities), which naturally draws lighting strikes to it. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

WILL-O'-THE WISP: see CORPOSANT.

WINDOW OF RAON: see RAON, WINDOW OF.

WIND WARDENS, the: Str. Large stone structure in the c of the SURRACHI PLAINS in THE SURRACH, that serves as a border between the four regions of GANGUA, TUSENTAL, YTTRIA, and SIN.

The structure is hollow and on windy days it produces an eerie howling sound, that changes tune depending on the direction the wind is blowing. Its origins are unknown, and predate any present-day culture in the area. The Wind Wardens act as a crossroads to the surrounding regions.

WINDOW OF OMAH, the: His. Arc. Ancient FOURTH AGE hewn window in the southern foothills of the BLUE Mountains in SAUA.

WINDY COAST, the: see VEGATETH.

WINGED SERPENT: see KHARAN, RUNE OF.

WINGS OF TAHIRA: Soc. Obj. Cultural motif common in KASPIA, appearing as decoration on ornaments as well as detailing on armour and official costume. Derived from the parable of the ANGEL TAHIRA'S rise from the OTHERWORLD – in order to return as an OTHERWORLDER and guide the people of Kaspia, Tahira was said to have to sacrifice much of what made her an Otherworlder, including her cloak-like wings, which remain as artefacts deep in her mountain fortress.

WINJI: Sup. Rel. Spiritual beings that form an integral part of the SEPU religion, whose practitioners believe inhabit the natural world. There are uncounted different winjis, and most people believe that every rock, tree, stream, building, factory, and so on is home to at least one such spirit.

WIREGUFF TERN: Fau. Bird common to coastal areas of eastern

LLACHATUL and the west of MENISCEA. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

WIREWEAVE: Obj. Fabric woven from metallic weave, usually iron, silver, gold or rarely, platinum. It is a status symbol amongst the most elite of the EMPIRE'S ruling PATRICIANS, and a wireweave cloak can be worth more than what a family of HELOTS can hope to earn in a lifetime.

WIRRAN: Rel. Mar. LAASKHAN warrior-sisters dating back to -71 RM. After the KORACHANI subjugation of LAASKHA in 15 RM the order was officially disbanded, with those amongst its members who did not oppose the imperial occupation becoming guards and mercenaries.

The order was revived in 1309 RM, with members coming from nobility and foundlings raised in imperial ORPHANOTROPHIA who are inspired by the native warrior-culture that was subsumed by the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE centuries before. They act as agents of the Church within Laaskha, though do work beyond its borders, should their investigations take them outside the nation.

WISE, the: Myt. His. Common epithet by which the DEMIURGE URAKABARAMEEL was once known.

WISENT: Fau. Bulky horned bovine once common in the north of LLACHATUL, though now restricted to the far west and east of the continent. See Vol: II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

WITAN: also 'guidestone'. Str. Complex in the c of the HENDECARCHY of CYRENIA, in MALAN. It is made up of seven granite monoliths arranged in a pattern around each other. Remnants from a past age, the monoliths are each inscribed with dozens of commandments and mandates, most of which are weathered beyond recognition. Those that are visible are written in an unknown script that remains largely undeciphered.

Some believe that the monument dates back to the days of the NAHORIAN empire.

WITCH: Sup. Soc. Rnk. Pejorative term used within the TWIN EMPIRES and their vassal territories for FIRMAMENTAL SHAPERS or, less precisely, any shapers from so-called heathen territories outside their borders. See Vol IV: Shaping.

WITCH OF BLADES: see SWERTHA, WITCH OF BLADES.

WITCH CRUSADES: see SCOURGE OF WITCHES.

WITCH-KNIGHTS, the: Int. Org., Sup. Order of militant FIRMAMENTISTS that emerged in the so-called heathen lands east of the KORACHANI EMPIRE in the wake of various CRUSADES against Firmamentists and their allies, most notably the SCOURGE OF WITCHES. Based in the city of MAHSERTH in AHRISHEN, the order spans many nations and ethnicities, and is most active in Ahrishen, BAATAN, SAUA, TAMAR, TEMUIA, and VIRAHAN, though members can be found in KHAMID, the south west of \underline{MALAN} , and $\underline{TZALLRACH}$. FORT INVERGA, in the south of Malan, is a major stronghold of the Witch-knights.

Originally, they worked to weaken the influence of the Korachani Empire in the east, though after its Sundering in 3705 RM their efforts were divided between the HIGH- and LOW-EMPIRES, as well as other influential regions, such as VENTHIR.

They act as defenders to those in need and travel the free lands to the east of the INNER SEA, with a focus on lands bordering the SEA OF PROPONTIS, where most crusades against Firmamentists took place, explaining their ubiquitous sightings in Ahrishen, where most settlements are under the aegis of at least one witch-knight, who studies martial and mystic techniques to help defend against possible attack. They educate people on the realities of life around the Inner Sea, and dispel myths and fallacies to better-equip people against imperial propaganda.

Their name is intentional, and they have taken the Korachani slur against Firmamentists and made it their own. Some people in the free lands decry their efforts, claiming that they invite further attention and enmity from the Korachani empire, though most support them in their work, welcoming them when they arrive in their settlements.

Witch-knights revel in their individuality and no-two are alike, with differing Firmamental abilities, martial styles drawn from the histories and cultures of their member-nations.

One can only become a Witch-knight by apprenticing under an existing Witch-knight, and travelling into lands of the high- or Lowempires, actively fighting against forces and sentients that oppose Firmamentism. Only upon successfully returning to the Citadel of the Light-aegis in Mahserth is the prospect knighted and granted membership into the order, upon presentation of a unique aluminium sigil.

WITCHFINDER GENERAL: Sup. Rnk. Prominent rank in the AVÉNETHI

ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION. Witchfinder generals are responsible for the launching of WITCH CRUSADES as well as smaller scale persecutions of FIRMAMENTAL SHAPERS both within and without the EMPIRE.

WITCHOLME: Lan. Geo. Common name within the KORACHANI EMPIRE for the heathen lands east of its dominion – typically used in relation to the FOREST-KINGDOMS of MALAN, though the term was also used in the past in relation to KOLCHIS and ALAM BETHYL.

WITCHSLAYERS, the: Mar. Org. Heretical splinter group of the AVÉNETHI SANCTIFIED ORDERS OF THE INQUISITION. It appeared in c. 2800 RM in ALMAGEST and spread from there. It launched various xenophobic campaigns from strongholds in the east of Almagest into THE OLD FOREST across the DESOLATION OF ASTUDAN, or into heathen lands such as AHRISHEN, or TEMUIA. Most of these campaigns were not sanctioned and they were eventually excommunicated from the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE and the Orders of the Inquisition in 3008 RM, a few years before the Avénethi expulsion from Almagest, following its independence in 3014 RM.

Most of their members were executed or imprisoned, though some escaped, settling lands in the Desolation of Astudan to the east of the Almagesti city of APOTEGA, where they recruit and continue to launch campaigns east. They are based in the independent city of AVENETHACHAN, which is located in the north west of the Desolation of Astudan.

WITCH WARS, the: see SCOURGE OF WITCHES.

WITNESS: 1. Org. Rnk. Extremist members of the cult of AARU^(2.) in RHEA. Though few in number they are a ubiquitous sight in large cities in Rhea, where they beg for alms and are known for their vows of silence.

2. Pol. Rel. Rnk. Members of the ORDER OF WITNESSES. They are important figures in KARGAMAN culture and oversee the temples and idols of KARGAMAN IDOLATRY, and also conduct rituals in their honour. Most witnesses are women, though there is otherwise no restriction on who can become a Witness, other than the requirement of citizenship and having undertaken the secretive Rite of Third Baptism.

Witnesses are respected members of Kargaman society and form a vital part of the $\underline{\text{UNITED ASSEMBLY}}$ – the government of Kargama, which convenes in $\underline{\text{KARGHEMIR}}^{(2)}$.

WITNESSES, ORDER OF: Rel. Org. Religious Order in present-day KARGAMA that originated in c. 800 RM within the ELITAGRAI city-states, possibly in response to growing threats in the west and east, in the form of the CONSANGUINE DYNASTIES, and the TRISKETHIAN DOMAINS, respectively. During this time the Elitagri city-states were only loosely united, and were of little deterrent to their expansionist neighbours. The formation of the Order of Witnesses helped to unite the people of these disparate states in a more culturally unified whole.

Its members, known as WITNESSES^(2.), oversee the temples and idols of KARGAMAN IDOLATRY, and also conduct rituals in their honour. Following the subjugation of PHAND in 1126 RM, the Witnesses replaced the vanquished CONSANGUINE priests that had overseen the Kargaman Idols until then, and remained as religious rulers.

By c. 1350 RM the order had become extremely influential in Elitagra, it though saw this influence wane following the growth of the KARGEMMAN PLUTOCRATIC HOUSES between c. 1630 – 1660 RM, and after decades of opposing the plutocrats, they eventually came to support them, legitimising the founding of the KARGEMMAN MONARCHY in 1682 RM.

The Order remains the backbone of culture and religion in Kargama to this day, and the JURISPRUDENT (the chairperson of its ruling council, the UNITED ASSEMBLY) is elected from within its ranks.

WIZEN: Set. Coastal settlement in the Free Land of TRINITANIA⁽¹⁾ northern coast of SAMMAEA, in the far north of KHARKHARADONTIS, overlooking the SEA OF UGOLOTH. It forms part of the SALT ROAD (Pop. c. 7.200).

WOLD: For. Major rainforest in the south west of WESTERN SAMMAEA, dominating lands west and south of the SANTOREAN Mountains, from the south of RAHENG in the north to AEONAS and BELEGOR^(1.) in the south. It is at its densest in CARNYNGA and very little is known about it to outsiders.

WOLD BEETLES: Fau. Gigantic beetles common to the jungles of the WOLD rainforest in the west of SAMMAEA, and surrounding tropical regions. They can grow to the size of cattle, and are renowned for their spongy carapaces, which are usually covered in epiphytes, mosses and fungi. They crawl across the undergrowth, searching for leaves, seeds, roots and wood to eat. As they move, they transport spores, seeds and smaller animals on their backs, helping to keep the environment and vermin populations stable. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

WOLD SNAKE: Fau. Gigantic constrictor snakes native to the jungles of the WOLD rainforest in the west of WESTERN SAMMAEA, where they are an apex predator. Individuals have been reported growing up to 75-ft. long and weighing some 5,000 lbs. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

WOLMASH: Rvr. Major river in the north of WESTERN SAMMAEA, flowing east through KARGAMA for over 2,800-miles from sources in the DIRION and VIRTIVON Mountains, until reaching the coast at the SEA OF ORRIDA. The river is winding and relatively fast-moving, and its course across Kargama has shaped the landscape there — both political and physical — for millennia.

WOLVES, the: Lit. 'yo-Virkan'. Soc. Mil. His. Common nickname used in KORACHANI territories in CENTRAL LLACHATUL for the imperial armies.

The term is particularly common in SKAROS, AZAZEM and northern LAASKHA. Few today know the source of the name, but historical documents dating to c. 1800 – 2400 RM recount how marching armies were responsible for slowly eradicating wolves and other predators from rural areas, which until then were a very present threat. It's likely that the name was inherited from the armies' deeds while on campaign.

WOMB-BORN: Soc. Lan. Colloquial term in the KORACHANI EMPIRE for those born through mundane means without the aid of TECHNARCANA.

WOOD OF CATS: see NORABOSK.

WOODEN THRONE, the: Pol. Str. Seat of power of the HENDECARCH of MYEIN, MALAN. The throne is carved from the ancient root of the FIRST TREE, thought to have been the first tree crafted by the DEMIURGES during their shaping of ELYDEN. It is now housed within the PALACE OF THE HENDECARCH^(1.) in the city of NETHEA.

WORD BEARER: Rel. Rnk. A caste within the CULT OF NERGAAL in CUTH. They are similar in rank to high priests and their words are sacred, considered by most in Cuth to be the will of NERGAAL and KENG.

WORK-SLAVE: see: HELOT.

WORKNAH: Geo. Mountainous region in the c south of VENTHIR, known for its rich gold reserves. The northern foothills of the mountains are known for their open cast mines, many of which have been in operation since antiquity.

 $\underline{WORLD'S\ CROWN,\ the} : see\ \underline{ACHARKHARA}.$

WORLD'S FADING, the: Lan. Common vernacular amongst the people of the HIGH- and LOW-EMPIRES, and other lands around the INNER SEA. The term refers to the general degradation of the natural world – the retreat and drying of seas, corruption of the land, the growing influence of the ATRAMENTA and the perceived unravelling of the natural laws that became evident by c. 3700 RM, only to increase since then.

Though most regions have their own localised events, these are best summed up by the absolute corruption represented by the wastes of KHARKHARADONTIS (and, to a lesser but possibly more well-known extent, the wastes of the UMBRA SOKHAR). Common knowledge is restricted in most cases to localised phenomena, with most people knowing little about the effects of the world at large. The degradation of the natural laws has, over the past few centuries, brought with it a slow decline of civilisation, resulting in the decline of mortal populations, with many urban areas left as ruins and ghost-towns, their meagre populations mere fragments of what they once were. Only a few large cities remain, supported by what are invariably satellite vassal cities.

WORLD'S SCEPTRE, the: see KARKARMIS.

WORLD'S THRONE, the: see SHAKHURA.

WORMWOOD: 1. Ast. Con Primary star of the constellation DORCAS. Ceased shining on night of the 3rd KAIONAL of ASHTALEN in 4006 RM, presaging the birth of an OTHERWORLDER. The otherworlder would later be revealed to be the TERMAGANT OF BEDLAM.

2. see WORMWOOD BREW.

WORMWOOD BREW: Bev. Highly alcoholic distilled anise-flavoured spirit common in Llachatul, particularly Skaros and ALMAGEST. See Vol II: Beverages.

WOSRET: Oth, His. An ancient OTHERWORLDER, said by some Carceran legends to be the first otherworlder ever, who stands vigil over the BRIDGE OF DESPAIR in CARCERI guarding it against those deemed unworthy to pass.

WRAITHBOG, the: Geo. Dark fenland in the south west of AHRISHEN, known for its closeness to the OTHERWORLD, where spirits of the dead can be felt and, at times, seen. Balefires burn throughout the fen said to be a spirit waiting for release from its vessel.

WRETCHLANDS, the: see CIEMBAS.

WRECK OF THE AKOTUL: Rui. Veh. Tec. A wrecked Juggernaut-class warship stranded in the ASHARUTH region of the west of LAASKHA. The ship was stranded following the retreat of the seas in the fourth millennium RM.

WRITHEN: Sup. Mor. Wretched creatures descended from DEGENERATE
HUMANS that is considered a naturally-formed MORTAL PEOPLES. See Vol
II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

WRITHING LANDS, the: see ENALLAD.

WRITHING SEA, the: see IPERIA.

WROK: Sct. Coastal city in the c east of the XETEAN STATES. It is home to the largest navy in the XETEAN STATES, which patrols the waters of the ZIRANDIAN SEA (Pop. c. 66,200).

WROKHARR: Mil. Rnk. Berserker-knights of KARAKHAS. They are acolytes of the BLOOD MOON, who enter a drug-induced state of frenzy before battle, displaying great acts of strength and fortitude. Their use has waned since the event of ranged weaponry, though they are still used.

WROZAR: Geo. Island in the south east of the MAIDEN ISLES, off the south eastern coast of MENISCEA.

WSORALL: Sup. Voc. FIRMAMENTAL SHAPERS from SABIA whose SPHERE allows them to see and subtly manipulate the auras of people they encounter. They are able to determine the general mood or disposition of a person upon meeting them and may be able to alter this attitude, to aid in interactions and diplomacy.

They play an important role in Sabian culture and are a caste apart from others serving as ambassadors between cities. See Vol IV: Shapers and Shaping.

WUHIA: Mil. Rnk. Knightly caste in SAUA. They are famed for the fire-drakes they ride into battle.

WYCHAN: also 'the Occultists' City'. Set. Small independent city-state completely enclaved within the south east of MHAROKK. It encompasses the southern shore of lake OMAR and is of temperate dry climate with little natural land given its size. What it does possess is rocky with sparse vegetation.

It emerged as a settlement along part of a trade-route following the introduction of the KORACHANI prefecturate to Mharokk in 2702 RM, though the immediate region surrounding it already had a reputation for being home to many occultists and mystics throughout the FIFTH AGE, in no small part due to a nearby LEY that remained undiscovered by conquering nations for most of its existence. Though CENSORS and EXOCRINES stifled many of their regions' heretical beliefs, they were unable to completely eradicate the occultist tendencies of the region.

The settlement slowly grew, attracting ATRAMENTISTS and FIRMAMENTISTS alike through to the end of the third millennium RM, after which it became a centre for the study of the MATERIA OMNA, resulting in a large college of the AVÉNETHI SANCTIFIED ORDER OF THE INQUISITION being funded there.

The years preceding the WAR OF SUNDERING were fraught with disruption and the Avénethi Order left in 3699 RM. Their absence led to further unrest in Mharokk, which eventually defected to Sarastroan under duress in 3728 RM. Wychan seceded from Mharokk amidst the chaos of the Sundering, and survived for decades relatively unchallenged.

Since then, it has continued to be a haven to shapers from all cultures and backgrounds, and together they work to keep the city-state hidden from prying eyes and defended from harm. Though foreign powers know of its location and its independence, it managed to protect its assets (some say by offering the services of its shapers to foreign nations as favours to preserve its independence), and its army of well-trained shapers pose a mighty deterrent to anyone who would attempt to attack the city and its environs. As a result, it has been publicly ignored by both Korachan and SARASTRO, though some independent merchants do maintain a secretive trade-route with the city.

Sarastroan diplomats recently established offices in Wychan and trade agreements are being drawn up, leading many to believe that Sarastro may be eyeing a diplomatic take-over of the city, possibly with the goal of eventually moving against Mharokk (Pop. c. 103,000). See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

WYNDOUR: Rvr. River in the c east of LOEGRESS^(1.), flowing east 280-miles from various sources in the far east of the AIFÉ and DONN Mountains, before emptying into the BAY OF VAULLA.

WYNN: Soc. Rnk. In PERGOST, title/rank given to elder women. It is used as a mark of respect and is thought to be mystical in origin.

WYRD: Oth. Type of HALFBLOOD. Wyrds are known to be creatures of fate and destiny; their very presence in an area is said to be portentous. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

WYRDAN: Pol. Soc, Sup. PATRICIAN HOUSE in KHURAUR, known to be the only house in Khuraur whose members are allowed by law to be SHAPERS.

Members of the House are known for their thin skin, large dark eyes, and long slender fingers (often displaying POLYDACTYLY), with most shapers afflicted by a scoliosis-like condition. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

WYRDIS: Geo. Region in the west of the HENDECARCHY of ATALLUA, in the south east of MALAN. It is known for its strange rock formations that arc across the deep valleys of the area, like branching stone arches, covered in thick mosses, ferns, gigantic nectar-producing plants, and EPIPHYTES.

WYRDWORT: Flo. Psychoactive herb native to warm temperate lands in WESTERN LLACHATUL that is dried and brewed as a tea. It numbs the body while enhancing the mind, and within around 30-minutes of consuming it the drinker experiences a limpness of the limbs, with all attempts at communicating ending up as gibbering and babbling, though the mind is heightened, with senses picking up things that would otherwise be undetected and thoughts and racing at 10 times the usual speed. While in this state users can perceive the OTHERWORLD without the need for SHAPING and may commune with SPIRITS (1), particularly those of the recent dead. This has led to its use in some FUNERAL CUSTOMS, particularly in RAONGEN (2.), where it allows mourners contact their dead relatives.

Due to the psychedelic nature of the drug, it is relatively useless to gain any useful information, though some still attempt to use it. There is a legend of an ancient Raongeni king who was killed in battle, whose wife took wyrdwort to commune with his spirit, who told her that his brother killed him. She had the brother executed, propagating a civil war that lasted for years. Upon her deathbed she confessed to killing him herself.

It is cultivated in large numbers in Raongen, where it is largely used locally, though it is also grown in smaller numbers elsewhere.

WYSARCH: Mil. Sup. Rnk. FIRMAMENTAL rank in MALANI military. The term wysarch is a generic one, and individuals can have wildly differing powers, with some specialising in subterfuge, infiltration, information retrieval, pyrotechnics, etc.

XABAR AHKA: Set. Settlement in the north of AHKA, along the course of the river AMALTHEA (Pop. c. 20,000).

 $\underline{XADAR} : \mathit{Set.}$ Settlement in the c south west of $\underline{SURUTUR}$ (Pop. c. 5,000).

XADRIA: Geo. Island off the north western coast of SAMMAEA, west of the KORACHANI colony of TAVVARDA.

XAGADRRA: Set. Major city on the mainland of the present-day PANTHEON ISLES. In c. 1322 RM it became an ally of TODRRA, becoming a founding part of the GHAZHARID AUTOCRACY, alongside ONELL Xagadrra took advantage of the uncertainty following the failed war with RHEA, in which the Autocracy found itself losing power, wealth and influence. From here were seeds of dissent sown, and, as the last of the Ghazharid Autocrats secreted themselves in their stronghold in TODRRA, the people of the Pantheon Isles were shown that they did not need any Autocrats to survive. By 1631 RM the city of Xagadrra had amassed a large loyal following concentrated around the peninsula of KARAXHANES, even as the rest of the Pantheon Isles struggled in the power vacuum following the disappearance of the Ghazharid Autocracy.

LIMOTH^(1.), confident after its victories against SURUTURI colonies in the western Pantheon Isles, declared war on Xagadrra, which was eventually defeated and occupied in 2806 RM, signifying the end of the war, and the Limothan dominance over the Pantheon Isles (Pop. c. 154,000).

XAHAEL: Lake in the south east of the Growing Mountains of Mulciber, in the tribal territory of Ninir.

XEIA: Rvr. Expansive delta of the river MARAGA, dominating the c coastline of OPHIUSSA that flows into the border between the BAY OF TASHI in the north and the SEA OF SERPENTS. It is very fertile, but yearly floods make agriculture in the area untenable, though the banks of the river Maraga for many miles upstream are covered in farmlands.

XANATHOS: Rui. Once named SHANATH, though renamed to Xanathos following the KORACHANI victories against NÁRTHEL in 84 RM, the city-state was once a controlling influence around the NÁRTHELI STRAIT. Increased pollution in its waters led to Korachan abandoning the city by c. 200 RM. Over the following centuries it was allowed to decay and, by 270 RM it began to sink into the NÁRTHELI STRAIT.

At one point, centuries later, the city was completely submerged, though later withdrawal of the coastline found it re-emerged by c. 3200 RM. Since then, it has intermittently been a haven to bandits and others who live on the fringes of society.

XANTHAON: Geo. Mountain-range in the west of THE SURRACH, forming a natural border with TERION. The mountain is named after the XANTHIC kingdom of antiquity.

XANTHIA: Dem. 'Xanthic'. Int. His. Ntn. Ancient kingdom in what is now TERION and the south west of THE SURRACH, that rose in c. 0 RM and lasted until c. 1500 RM, at which point the XANTHIC PRINCES were defeated by invading corsairs from the west. The kingdom is remembered for its opulent palaces, the warren-like settlements surrounding them and the dark yellow robes that their rulers are said to have worn. At the height of its powers, it extended as far east as the caverns of IANTHA, in the northern face of the STRAMINEA Mountains.

The empire is mostly known today for the amethyst skulls that its craftsmen fashioned, and their elongated craniums, the latter of which is a trait that is still fond in the south of the Surrach.

XANTHIS: Geo. Jagged mountains in the c south of KASIHAAL, running roughly analogously to the TROPIC OF MAOCARHL forming a relatively young part of the LAHAED Mountain chain

XANTHIC PRINCES: His. Pol. Rulers of ancient XANTHIA in what is now TERION and the west of THE SURRACH, known for the dark yellow robes they wore. Scholars today think they may have been SHAPERS, though there is little evidence to support this.

XARADH: Rvr. Wetlands in the c north west of RHINOCOLOURA, along the course of the river SHIBBOLETH^(3.). The wetlands occupy some 1,500 square-miles and encompass around 140-miles of the course of the river Shibboleth, as well as the confluence where its tributary, the river WENNAN meets it.

XARETH: For. Straight forest in the north eastern reaches of THE OLD FOREST. In -593 RM ARESHI people fled west into it. Their descendants became known as the HAEAGHI people and populated the north east of the Old Forest, mixing with natives there. By c. 0 RM they had moved far south, founding what would later become known as the city of Haeagh.

XARR: Geo. Island off the north western coast of the island of IRUGNA^(1.), belonging to the PARTHISAN colony of ABDAKROS^(1.).

XEGODIA: Geo. Island off the eastern coast of the PARTHISAN colony of EZHIRAYA^(2,).

XEGOT: Set. Settlement in the c east of the tribe of CHRIL, in the c of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. It is located close to the ATRAMENTAL WASTES of ULESSMAL, and is home to a cadre of ATRAMENTAL SHAPERS who research the region (Pop. c. 4,000).

XEIDON: Set. Fortified coastal city in the west of the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS (Pop. c. 42,000).

XELEN: 1. Geo. Small island to the north west of MALETH, belonging to LAASKHA. The island measures only around 10-miles in length and is largely uninhabited.

2. Mil. Str. Fort on the island of the same name, with fortifications facing south.

XEM HAHKA: Set. Major fortified city in the north of AHKA, in the region of AHKESH. The city is along the major trade-route linking Ahka with ATARAXIA, and is known for its flour mills, food warehouses and merchant yards. It has grown rapidly from a modest caravanserai in the past decades and is largely populated by refugees from the war in the south (Pop. c. 50,000).

XENADUS VELTHUR IV, NINTH OF THE ELEVEN: m. Pol. Per. (B. 3900 RM) Ninth of the HENDECARCHS of MALAN and ruler of the HENDECARCHY of NHORA.

XENIA: 1. Geo. Long peninsula in the east of SAMMAEA, forming the south eastern-most tip of CHEIRA, protruding into the waters of the MIROVEAN OCEAN. When it was first encountered by KORACHANI explorers in 611 RM it was an island though the diminishing of ELYDEN'S seas saw it joined with the mainland by c. 3500 RM.

The land, though is largely uninhabited and possesses few resources of note, though the Cheiran people, whose culture revolves around large catamarans that travel along the Mosasa and western Mirovea, have several ports there where they can resupply before moving north to Cheira

2. Sea. Bay to the north of the above peninsula $^{(1.)}$.

XENOMACHI ORDER: His. Pol. Org. A historical ORDER OF THE SANCTIFIED INQUISITION in the KORACHANI EMPIRE founded in 532 RM. Originally concerned with eradicating non-humans from the empire's territories, it was known for its zealous crusades and xenophobic campaigns against non-human MORTALS.

It was eventually disbanded in 3754 RM after years of changing attitudes to other mortal peoples following the SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE left manufactories and fields in dire need of able-bodied workers. This led to an influx of non-humans into many industrial and agricultural regions, many of which have since integrated with wider populations across the empire.

XENURIA: Set. Fortified settlement in the region of ROBAT in the c west of THE SURRACH. Its mines produce high-quality sandstone that is used along the IVORY ROAD (Pop. c. 4,000).

XERAKH IV OF THE BLOODY MOON: (B. 3939 RM) Pol. KERATIN ruler of KERRAS PELLN and head of the keratin hegemony in the nation.

XERGA: Set. Major city in the north west of EIKARTHYEA, in the east of EASTERN MENISCEA. It is the sole remaining jade mine in the nation, and plays a major part of the economy (Pop. c. 65,000).

XERIC WASTES, the: Geo. Expansive basin desert in WESTERN SAMMAEA that dominates the c and south east of the VESPERTINE LEAGUE, stretching across the border into the north west of NASTAL. It is thought to be one of the driest areas of Elyden and is entirely devoid of settlements and even ancient ruins, indicating that it was always inhospitable.

XERICA: Geo. Sandy desert in the north east of the KHARKHARADONTID desert, just south of the MOLOTH KHAMMOTHUL Mountains. The desert is expansive and featureless, though snowmelt in late summer leads to seasonal rivers forming, feeding them.

XESTA: Set. Settlement in the south east of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of EDICULE⁽¹⁾. It is situated along a fork in the river SACHARA, and controls trade along its waters. The settlement is renowned for its fine bread and cakes (Pop. c. 22,300).

XETEAN STATES, the: Dem. 'Xetean'. Ntn. Coalition of states in the south east of SOUTHERN SAMMAEA. Its northern territories were once part of the mid-fifth Age ILLAKRARAN empire. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

XEUS: 1. Set. Settlement in the north west of PELASGOS in the region of CHIREA. It's a producer of cattle for the larger cities in the region (Pop. c. 1.000).

2. Rui. Ancient FOURTH AGE ruin not 1-mile distant from the eponymous present-day settlement. There are known to be vast catacombs but they are largely collapsed, their treasures and mysteries hidden.

XEXILIB: For. Coastal mangrove in the south east of ELEKHID, at the mouth of the river GRELLOR.

XILIA: Rui. City in the PANTHEON ISLES, on the BHALASSIAN PENINSULA^(1.). The city grew powerful following the demise of the GHAZHARID AUTOCRACY in 1630 RM. It would go on to form an alliance with XAGADRRA in c. 2700 RM, against a growing threat of LIMOTHAN^(1.) expansion from the western-most part of the archipelago. It was razed by Limothan armies in 2804 RM following a brutal war that saw the allied forces of the Pantheon Isles defeated, their lands taken by Limoth.

XIMENES, ARCHREDEMPTOR: (B. 3893) Rel. Figurehead of the Church of the Undying Machine.

XIONG: Set. Settlement in the south west of RAONGEN⁽²⁾. Its main industry is the mining of AMBER (Pop. c. 6,000).

XOANON: Ind. Set. Major gold mines in the south of the SAGGAR region of THE SURRACH. The land surrounding the settlements in this region is a wasteland, pock-marked with dozens of spent gold mines (Pop. c. 10,000).

XYCHA: Set. Settlement in the region of AHEPPO in the c north east of THE SURRACH. It is known for its spiced honey (Pop. c. 4,900).

XYLLAUL: Mil. Str. Defensive line stretching for 360-miles in the south west of THE OLD FOREST, overlooking the nation of AZAZEM. The walls are ancient and would not withstand a bombardment from modern artillery for long.

XYRPHANI EMPIRE, the: His. Nm. Extinct empire in the west of MENISCEA, the capital of which was the city of IODPHI. It rose in c. 720 RM from the void left from the collapse of the iron age VOLTUMNI culture. It lasted for close to three millennia, finally crumbling in 3685 RM following a prolonged period of strife, and the effects of the diminishing sea of XYRPHAAT^(1.), which left the entire region fragmented. A descendant state known as Xyrphaat^(3.) emerged in the years following the fall of the Xyrphani empire, but was unable to maintain control over such a large expanse of land, and fragmented by c. 3710 RM, from which emerged a series of loosely allied city-states. See Vol III: Extinct States.

XYRPHANI PINE: Flo. Large pines endemic to the east of Meniscea, in the east of Areraqth, Xyrphaat, Abarhal, and the north of Eikarthyea. They can grow to 250-ft high and have expansive canopies. Their wood is inadequate for the lumber industry but large swathes of Xyrphani pine woodlands have been cut down for firewood, though large forests dominated by the trees remain relatively common, especially in Xyrphaat.

XYRPHAAT: 1. His. Sea. Now-dead sea that existed in the north east of the extant region of Xyrphaat⁽³⁾ in the north west of MENISCEA. It diminished during the third millennium and was considered disappeared by c. 3200 RM, leaving in its wake a flat expanse made up of saltlands, stagnant pools and bleached coral forests that collectively are known as the Wastes of Xyrphaat⁽²⁾.

2. Geo. Expansive wasteland dominating the east of Xyrphaat⁽³⁾ that was, until c. 3000 RM a large shallow sea⁽¹⁾. The region is largely ignored today, though the river \underline{VARAYA} still serves as a source of life there.

3. Dem. 'Xyrphaat'. Geo. Pol. Culturally united region in the north west of MENISCEA, known for its many city-states, which are united by strong shared culture and history, though which have been divided and at odds with each other for over three-centuries, since 3685 RM and the crumbling of the XYRPHANI EMPIRE.

Originally founded in 3688 RM as the descendant empire of Xyrphaat, it fragmented within decades due to conflicting interests and an inability to maintain a centralised government. This led to a prolonged period of conflict, now known as the Great Slaughter, that lasted from c. 3740 – 3780 RM, in which millions of people died during sieges, battles and wars that changed the political landscape of Xyrphaat

Its states are constantly in flux and at any one time can number anything between 100-300 separate states, each with anything from a single city to a collection of settlements united under a single banner. The largest such state, as of the printing of this volume, is \underline{YDONTA} .

Geographically, Xyrphaat is dominated by an expansive lowland area to its east, which as 'recently' as c. 3000 RM, was largely submerged between the shallow Sea of Xyrphaat^(1.). the Disappearance of the sea due to waning sea levels left the east of Xyrphaat devastated, and was a major contributing factor to the death of its predecessor empire. The west of the region is a dry wasteland, that remains economically valuable due to its rich deposits of crystalline FIRMATITE. Today its north western-most territories lie on the ruin of the FOURTH AGE empire of JORINDHIA. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

XYSA: Set. Major city in the region of EDALLA in the west of THE SURRACH.

The city is dominated by a large MANUFACTORY what is divided into different districts, each dedicated to the production of different items.

The manufactories are all powered by a single central furnace that routes heat and power across its many districts (Pop. c. 38,400).

 \underline{XYSTA} : Set. Fortified coastal city in the west of the $\underline{FREE-ISLES}$ OF $\underline{PELASGOS}$ (Pop. c. 31,000).

XYSTUS: Set. City in the far south east of RHINOCOLOURA, with trade links to CHEIRA. The city sometimes trades imports from the region of WAELMIGH north, with some items finding their way into imperial circulation as rare, expensive, object d'art (Pop. c. 60,000).

Y

YA RETH: Set. Fortified settlement in the west of KOLCHIS (Pop. c. 4,400).

YACHOTH: Rui. Ruins in the far west of LLACHATUL, overlooking the division between the Seas of SUDUNIR and POLARIS. The ruins take the form of mortal-made gigantic basaltic pylons that protrude from the ice sheet. Little is known of the culture that created these structures, though they are thought to have been made by the ancient SALRIDEAN⁽²⁾ culture.

YAD: also 'Iad'. Set. Major city in SEDALLIA. The land around it is incredibly flat – it was once a coastal city though the sea retreated leaving it the peak of a flat expanse that is now used for farming rice (Pop. c. 263,000).

YADPRIA: Set. Coastal settlement in the south west of AQUARIIA, overlooking the SEA OF ASTER (Pop. c. 18,000).

YAGGOKTRA: 1. Geo. Island in the BHALASSIAN ARCHIPELAGO⁽²⁾. of the PANTHEON ISLES, to the east of LLACHATUL.

2. Mil. Str. Coastal fortress in the BHALASSIAN ARCHIPELAGO^(2.). of the PANTHEON ISLES, to the east of LLACHATUL. It is one of many academies where mercenaries and marines are trained to escort merchant vessels across the archipelago, and it is also used as a base for part of the Pantheon Isles' navy.

YAGGUTH: 1. Rui. IALDABAON idol and icon, named so after one of the 6 clones that the DEMIURGE created.

2. Int. Sup. His. Gigantic malformed humanoid body discovered by the empire in 999 RM, buried in the crawling dust dunes of the northern Kharkharadontid desert. The body was attributed to the Demiurge Ialdabaoth, and a manufactory was erected around it to study the body and perhaps learn secrets of the Klada. There, Technarcane machines and a chorus of hundreds of SIPHON ENGINES and slave-set were used to learn the secrets of the body's construction, leading to many breakthroughs, which led to the appearance of the first cloned STEEL LEGIONS in c. 1200 RM. Great ATRAMENTAL filters known as siphon engines, were constructed around the manufactory to render the place habitable, but the UMBRA was too strong, and in 1414 RM the manufactory was abandoned, the half-fossilised body left to rot under the rusted ruins as the desert reclaimed it.

YAGHREBBEH THE BLACK: (B. c. 160 RM) Sup. DEOCHANI

ATRAMENTIST, who in the early years of the KORACHANIEMPIRE became a feared individual, carving a small 'empire' in the west of the KORACHANI PENINSULA amid the chaos that had ensued following the disappearance of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR in 84 RM. A gifted SHAPER, he was obsessed with learning what the Atramenta was capable of and, under the aegis of THE SEVEN, was granted land in the AKARSA where he established ATELIERS and fortresses where he could carry out his research unopposed. It is largely his findings during this time that paved the way for future advancements in Atramentism and TECHNARCANA on which we rely today.

By 260 RM he had established a large region within the Akarsa, including settlements where his sadistic experiments were carried out under the knowledge of The Seven, who turned a blind eye to his malpractices as they reaped the rewards of his findings in their own projects and diversions.

The Archpotentate Malichar's rebirth as an OTHERWORLDER saw him return to the capital in 331 RM, where he rapidly brought the REIGN OF THE EMPTY THRONE to an end and set about restoring the empire he had built to order. He sought out Yaghrebbeh in his Aksaran fortress and fought him, slaying him and his forces, ending his reign, and bringing justice to the region. The ateliers and fortresses were toppled, and nothing remains of them today.

That has not deterred opportunists and explorers, who to this day seek out the region in the hopes of uncovering some ancient relic or technarcana, though few, if any, are successful. Indeed, many now question the authenticity of the tale itself, with some scholars claiming it apocryphal and little more than a parable to show the might of the Archpotentate.

YAGHUK: Lan. Language spoken by the YAGHUKLI people of the BROKEN LANDS. It borrows heavily from the language of the preceding early FIFTH AGE kingdom of CHIWENOOL known as CHIWEN. See Vol III: Languages.

YAGHUKLI: Eth. People native to the north west of NORTHERN SAMMAEA, in what is now commonly known as the BARRIER LANDS. Descended from the servant caste of the early FIFTH AGE CHIWENOOL kingdom, they have since mingled with various people from surrounding lands, making them diverse of appearance, though linked by a shared heritage and the disparate pantheon that they still worship to this day.

YAGHUKLI PANTHEON: Rel. A rich mythology and belief system structured around a pantheon of gods that are worshipped by the YAGHUKLI people of the BARRIER LANDS.

Though there are a handful of deities shared amongst the various peoples of the Barrier Lands, the pantheon has never been formalised beyond local cults, which may differ wildly from region to region. Most of these beliefs developed locally in the wake of the collapse of the CHIWENOOL kingdom in c. 500 RM, while others were imported centuries later from outside lands or otherwise influenced by contact with other Sammaean peoples.

These external influences include a worship of the god HASHARAN – a corrupt form of the UNDYING MACHINE, originally brought there by KORACHANI missionaries and exocrines in c. 1440 RM; various corrupted deities, including AHIT, which are likely based on figures from KARGAMAN IDOLATRY of the west and SURRACHI beliefs in the east; as well as deeper chthonic mysteries of the south that have been adapted into the multifaceted deity of death and the underworld known as SHERTAL.

YAGNOTH PHTHAN: Rvr. Major river located in the east of SAMMAEA, flowing south for 4,350-miles from many sources in the ZELET badlands, the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER, the BELLAUAN RIDGE, and the LEKKUK Mountains, amongst others, passing through RHINOCOLOURA, PNESSA and CHEIRA, before emptying into the MIROVEAN OCEAN. The river is prone to heavy flooding following monsoon rains and meltwater in farther north, leading it its waters bursting their banks, causing it to expand to 10 – 15-miles in width for months at a time. As a result, there are few reliable crossings of the Yagnoth Phthan, and most of them are ferry crossings rather than physical crossings.

YAGNOTH RASHEI: Rvr. Delta of the river YAGNOTH PHTHAN. Though it is farmed, work is temporary and is suspended for two thirds of the year as the entire delta and much of the river itself are inundated, becoming flooded from flood- and melt-waters from across CHEIRA, PNESSA and RHINOCOLOURA. This leads to an area of over 10,00 square-miles to become flooded for between 6 - 8 months of the year. When the waters subside, the delta is left replenished with fertile silt in which new crops, primarily rice, are planted.

 $\underline{\underline{YAGRAII}}$: Set. Small fortified city in the far north of $\underline{ELEKHID}$ (Pop. c. 16,400).

YAGRUSH: Set. City in the c north west of JURRAS^(2.), which alongside its twin, AYAMUR, flank the eastern bank of the river EBULLANAS (Pop. c. 59,500).

YAH: Sea. Bay in the STRAIT OF SKAROS, off the north eastern coast of ATARAXIA.

YAH SAXIA: See. Small coastal city in the east of ATARAXIA, overlooking the BAY OF YAH. Its main industry is fishing, and cured fish is its main export, being sold to merchants travelling the RED ROUTE, which passes through the town (Pop. c. 20,000).

YAHHALA: 1. For. Sparse forest in the c west of GNOTH.

2. Set. Settlement in the c west of $\underline{\text{GNOTH}}$, along the course of the river $\underline{\text{MARAGA}}$ (Pop. c. 1,500).

YAHHALAN TEXTS: Phil. Philosophical writings originating in the Yahhala region of GNOTH.

YAJARTAN REEFS: Geo. Sea. Series of reefs off the south eastern coast of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES, forming a rim around the BRINE SEA. They make navigating entry into the sea difficult, and only experienced mariners are able to set courses across them.

YALAR: Set. TEMUJAN settlement in the ENEARHI, forming the southernmost part of the VALAR PRINCIPALITIES and the region's largest settlement. It is a centre of the region's goat trade and is known for its large goat markets, where individuals are auctioned and bred (Pop. c. 6,400).

YALATAL: see THE CONGRUENCE.

YALDA VAHUTH: Leg. Myt. Character in SAMMAEAN mythologies.

YALOLIAC REGIME: Pol. Org. Government of SURUTUR since 2934 RM. It is a dynastic line where albinos are revered. In-breeding is common, and children of the ruling house who are not born albinos are drafted into an elite army known as the BOTHA NTIGHA.

YAMABUSHI: also 'SOUL-COUNTER'. Sup. Org. Loose order of FIRMAMENTISTS in SAUA, mostly concentrated in the FOREST OF REVERIES, though can be found in any region where the Firmament holds sway. They spend their days ATTUNED, looking at the OTHERWORLD and cataloguing the souls they find, spending time amongst their ancestors, rarely returning to their mortal bodies.

As a result, the oldest soul-counters are well-respected by their peers and they are interred in shrines, where neophytes tend to their bodily needs, feeding them POMMER resin. Upon death their bodies mummify as result of the pommer resin and they remain on display in their shrines. Many visit the region of AKENARA in pilgrimage to pay their respects to soul-counters, living and dead.

YANAVASH: Geo. Expansive mountain chain in the east of ELEKHID, stretching for over 50-miles from its northern border with MULCIBER, to its southern border with CHEIRA. It is divided in two by a wide valley known as the YANAVI PASS, which is the main access between west and eastern Elekhid.

YANAVI PASS: Geo. Pass dividing the YANAVASH mountains in the c west of ELEKHID, allowing ease of traffic and transport between the west and east of the Kingdom.

YANDAR DASHE: (B. c. 1295 – D. 1362 RM) Pol. His. KETTARANGI champion who in 1333 RM founded a new city atop the ruins of MON KETTRA, naming it AM ONKRET. With his aid many disparate city states and homesteads were brought together to form a powerful republic.

YANGAGDAT: Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region in the north west of the Dune Sea, along the border between eastern ETUA and the north west of KHARKHARADONTIS. The region encompasses some 25,000 square-miles of fibrous lattice-like stone. It is brittle and prone to collapse, discouraging travel across it. Indeed, the only lifeforms that call it home are the hordes of scuttling lice that dwell in their millions in its hollows, feeding on deep ichor. They will swarm over any other creature that would cross their path, devouring them alive.

There are rumours of ancient catacombs filled with an entire civilisation's worth of bodies and their burial treasures dotted around the region – the remnants of a FOURTH AGE culture – though none have penetrated deep-enough into the region to ding them.

YANN: Geo. Rvr. Now-dry river in the east of CUTH that once flowed south from sources in the east of the MO-ORASSIM Mountains for 560-miles, before emptying in the SEA OF PYTHEA. Drying of various sources in the Mo-orassim Mountains led to the death of the river by c. 3350 RM.

YANNAH: Set. Settlement in the JAM ARREQ region in the north eastern mainland of the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT. It is famed for its Roah trainers (Pop. c 10,000).

YAO, the: Rui. Old colossi in the west of SAUA, built in 3158 RM by emperor HUATA to commemorate the death of emperor HU (the 1st emperor of SAUA) in 3147 RM.

YAPUAN: Set. City in the c of KREM, along the course of the endorheic seasonal river NOSHEER. Its people are expert potters and use an ancient method of baking clay that has been forgotten elsewhere, making their crockery highly prized across the DARK SEA (Pop. c. 42,000).

YARAOM: see YARAOMIC PEOPLE.

YARAOMIC PEOPLE: also 'Iaraom Bassha'. Dem. 'Yaraomic'. Int. His. Eth. Early FIFTH AGE ethnic group native to the north of SAMMAEA, believed to be descended from various (as yet debated)* FOURTH AGE cultures whose remnants mingled during the FADING and spread across northern Sammaea in what are now eastern VAALK, northern MHAROKK, LIDEA and BA'AKH.

Their culture is largely forgotten today following millennia of subjugation by KORACHANI settlers during the first millennium of imperial expansion into Sammaea that saw all lands bordering the INNER SEA appropriated, and their native peoples either taken as SLAVES, forced into compliance with introduced imperial customs, or forced to resettle into ever more inhospitable lands.

The Yaraomic People were no different. Originally occupying ancestral territories that spanned over 1,000,000-miles in area (including the lands of AMANNI, ASUWAN, EREDATA, EVURAHAN, GARHADDON, GHALATTA, MHARAKA, and LEKKHUA), they lived in pastoral communities known as kindreds. Made up of extended families that rarely numbered more than a hundred individuals, they were ruled by family elders of either sex and shared a common culture and belief systems that persisted across vast distances.

Unlike people north of the Inner Sea, they never coalesced into a singular state with a central government, and never had a written language which likely contributed to their erasure from history. However, they were an artistic people, creating pictographic poetry, elaborate pottery, brightly-patterned fabrics, and shared deep-rooted mythologies and genealogies via ancient oral traditions, and they valued storytellers and loremasters, who rose to positions of prominence in their societies. They did not build large cities, though a few large settlements did appear, where nomads and merchants traded, but they were few and far between.

Their coastal settlements traded with merchants from Llachatul, but they were naturally insular, to the point that most northerners thought of them as surly or aloof. They were deeply protective of their culture, with documented instances of merchants coming to blows with foreign traders over ill-conceived comments and inquiries. This reputation only worsened as interactions with more gregarious LASCAR, Korachani, and GERICIAN traders increased.

The Korachani conquest of VALKA in late 19 RM brought new pressure to the westernmost Yaraomic lands, and over the next centuries, they were pushed east as Korachani armies spread east towards the city of KEKELIB – the only major urban area inhabited by the Yaraomic People. With them came missionaries, EXOCRINES and ICONOCLASTS, who slowly spread imperial propaganda amongst the native people.

This pressure increased as the Korachani empire established new colonies, and client & vassal states in northern Sammaea, including KARAKHAS in 121 RM, IO in 212 RM, Ba'akh in 634 RM, and Lidea in 911 RM. Each conquest established arbitrary borders that dug indiscriminately into Yaraomic lands, cutting thousands of Yaraomic people off from each other. This shattered families and destroyed trade routes.

The Yaraomic People were enslaved, and those that escaped this fate were forced into hiding, in ever-dwindling native territories. By c. 900 RM Mharaka alone remained as a cultural bastion, ruled over by the mythic SHEPHERD KING, though others returned to the nomadic ways.

The borders of Mharaka slowly waned as imperial influence increased in the region, until c. 930 RM when its armies began sweeping through the last remaining Yaraomic lands, eventually taking Kekelib in razing it in 933 RM, effectively ending the history of the Yaraomic People.

Over the years, they begrudgingly became absorbed by Korachani culture. Those few who clung to their old ways migrated to less hospitable areas where the bulk of Korachani eyes could not see them, becoming nomads and scavengers.

Today, so long after their fate was established, they remain as a scattered people, their blood diluted by millennia of hardship and misfortunes. They are fed stories of their tragic past by lorekeepers known as <code>IARAOM GRABBA</code>, who scour their old territories for any sliver of preimperial history, poetry, and art they can find to help rebuild their buried heritage. This is known as the <code>GREAT STRUGGLE</code>, and they have made a lavish hodgepodge mythohistory that borrows from what they know and marries it with over a hundred generations of Korachani culture, which they recount to younger generations as myths, legends and religions of from their past, keeping them alive. This is known as the <code>IUN IARAOM MAHTA</code> — the Yaraomic Telling and it is very personal to them, passed down exclusively via oral traditions.

YARAOMIC TELLING, the: see IUN IARAOM MAHTA.

YARUBDA: Geo. Sandy desert in the east of PHYRR, to the east of the larger ANTHAR desert.

YASAMAR: Set. Small city in the south east of NÁRTHEL. It has struggled under various regimes over the past few hundred years, and is today a place of jaded people who do not trust their rulers, and who have come to only care about money. Its people claim that its merchants were the ones responsible for opening up trade routes into the DARK SEA (Pop. c. 17,000).

YASH UYUN: 1. Geo. Natural area in the east of RAONGEN^(2.), to the west of the AZAKKALIN Massif, just north of the northern POLAR CIRCLE, ranging from taiga in the south to intermittent permafrost in the north. There are few settlements here, and the region is largely unexplored, though there are some fortresses in the eastern-most expanses, guarding against the predations of the CALLOW HORDES.

2. Pol. Geo. One of the seven INDUSTRIES of RAONGEN⁽²⁾, located in the east of the empire.

YASHALPA: Rel. Prostitute demigod in NAARETH and nearby lands, especially in KHITAI. Priests collect homeless boys/girls for prostitution. They are well-cared for and retire young and relatively wealthy, though at times morally broken. See Vol IV: Gods and Pantheons.

YASHMIN: His. Nm. Late FOURTH AGE empire in the south east of SAMMAEA, in what are now the north east of KHAR NADUL, HANNAH, the far west of QARALAM and the far south east of HOGGOTHA ISZ. The empire was multicultural, being made up of a mix of HUMANS, DVERG, VAPULIM, LACER, KARKADANNI, and PLAGI (in that order of prevalence), and was famed for its architecture and deviousness with which it punished law-breakers.

Its most famed ruler was $\underline{JAINKAUROS},$ a \underline{SHAPER} whose power was only matched by his sadism, who is mentioned in various independent sources from across Sammaea, most of which make reference to his fabled LABYRINTH, which even during its time was an object of morbid fascination. See Vol III: Extinct States.

YASHODHARA: also 'the Bearer of Flame'. Arc. Granite statue in the north of THE SURRACH, south of the NGHALLEAL Mountains in the region of USSAMAR. It is thought to date back to the early FOURTH AGE and depicts a humanoid with arms outstretched, its hand originally bearing unending flames. It is unknown how the flames burnt, though it is thought to be a FIRMAMENTAL effect that, stopped burning in c. 338 RM.

YASSMINA I: (B. 2493 – 2589 RM) Pol. His. Legendary queen of RAMIS who acceded to the throne following the untimely passing of her father Jedethen in 2518 RM, and went on to rule for seven decades until her passing in 2589 RM. She is perhaps better remembered today for having fought in the battle of THIOPHOSS, earning her the respect of her male lieutenants. However, she was also a formidable politician in her own right, and was able to hold together a kingdom that might otherwise have collapsed. Indeed, Ramis waned greatly in power and influence following her death, and it had crumbled within around 40-years, during the reign of her grandchild IEDETHEN II.

The name Yassmina remains very common to this day in the south of ADHERA, and the north of METHMUN and PHYRR.

YATARENT: Set. Settlement in the south of SEDISIA. Its main industry is the production of plum wine (Pop. c. 6,000).

YATHAROTH: Rvr. River in the north east of GNOTH, flowing for 500-miles from subterranean sources in the east of the NARAHASAPHAEL Mountains before meeting its parent, the river ACHAMOTH. Only the last 325-miles of its course are above-ground – the remainder, including most of its true sources, are found within the OTUCHTHON cave-system.

YATI: Org. Caste of ascetes within EZASUH^(2.). They are few in numbers and misanthropic, choosing to live in the wilderness away from settlements and any other organised forms of philosophies and religions.

YAVID: Set. Settlement in the c north of the TEMPLAR STATES, in the south west of the region of AVVIRAM. Its main industry is agriculture, specifically the growing of the TSAMMA plant (Pop. c. 7,800).

YAWA: Ind. Set. Fortified tin-mining settlement in the c east of TZALLRACH (Pop. c. 7,500).

YAZATA: Mys. Rnk. Spirit-seekers in SAUA and AHRISHEN. The Yazata are priests and erudites who, through ascetics and meditation seek a communion with the spirits. Noteworthy for their ability to commune with ancestral spirits without recourse to the FIRMAMENT (though this may be because of locations favoured by the Yazata where the Firmament is known to be strong and malleable to ANIMISM).

YAZOEH: Geo. Rocky region dominating the north east of GIBEAH, made up of sheer Karst formations that are covered in dense jungle.

YBEI: 1. Rui. Ancient ruin in ALLASAN, thought to date back to the FOURTH AGE of life. It was once a great tower, though it was ruined centuries past, the rubble becoming the hillock on which a contemporary stronghold was built in 3874 RM.

2. Rui. The lair of the DORN KINGS. Built on the ruins of a far larger older tower, its rubble forming the hill on which the fortress's foundations lay. It is located in the northern reaches of the IPOTANE, in SOUTHERN MHAROKK. The Dorn Kings rose following the dissolution of powers in the region, preying on trade and commerce passing through what remains of THE RED ROUTE.

YBOT: Int. His. Arc. Ancient petrified ark lying half buried in the badlands of MEREHIM, in the far south east of the UMBRA SOKHAR wastes.

YDIRA: Sea. Inland sea in the south of SAMMAEA, protruding north form the SEA OF SAMMAIDU, dividing the city-states of MULIEBRA from YSACYITHAIA.

YDONAD: Rui. Ancient ruin on the isle of YSSAB, to the east of south eastern SAMMAEA. The ruin was once a cliff-side temple, flanked by gigantic triple-featured humanoids, though most such features are now tarnished. The inner chamber can still be accessed, barely and is said to contain a red stone altar, thought to be made the rocks of ARAKHAMÉ.

YDONTA: 1. Pol. One of seven states that make up the Kingdom of TAHOMIA, in the east of MENISCEA. It was originally an independent nation, though was annexed by TAHOM in c. 3250 RM.

2. Pol. Set. Capital of the eponymous state⁽¹⁾. Today it is a city in the east of TAHOMIA (Pop. c. 350,000).

YEAR: Ast. The orbital period of the PLANET ELYDEN around the sun SOL, measured in days, which is 365.8571 days.

The $\underline{\text{KORACHANI CALENDAR}}$ measures this as 366 days, with every 7-years deducting a day to keep the calendar year synchronised with the astronomical year.

YED ZAURA: Set. City in the south east of I'THANA (Pop. c. 50,000).

YEDDA: Set. Settlement in the east of NOAVATUR, in the region of VOHUR (Pop. c. 6.000).

YEDDIDA: Set. Major coastal settlement in the south west of the PARTHISAN colony of ABDAKROS⁽¹⁾ on the island of IRUGNA⁽¹⁾ (Pop. c. 64,200).

YEGG: Dem. 'Yeggish'. Also 'City of Thieves'. Set. Once-thriving and rapidly growing city located in the south west of METHUMN, deep in the AMMASHI⁽¹⁾ peninsula. The settlement emerged from a looter's camp where the riches of the nearby necropolis of ZEALA were unearthed in c. 3600 RM could be exploited. The seemingly limitless riches they discovered allowed the settlement to grow rapidly into a thriving city, which survived by exporting the riches and exotic artefacts of the necropolis all across WESTERN SAMMAEA, and beyond via the ports of HEZAZ.

Over the years Yegg found its once-bountiful mortal-made resources waning, and by c. 3850 RM it was struggling, with many of its prospectors having already left. Today, it is a hollow place, its rapidly constructed structures pitted from the acidic rains of the region, the remnants of its populace to stubborn to leave (Pop. c. 5,000).

YEGGOTORRAR: 1. Geo. Island off the southern coast of the PANTHEON ISLES.

2. Major fortress on the above island^(1.) in the PANTHEON ISLES.

YEHHAN: Set. City in the north of the territories of ETHISTONITH in RHINOCOLOURA, that until 2945 RM was the centre of a large conurbation of which it was capital. Shifting cultural trends saw the capital moved from Yehhan to OBEAH in 2899 RM. The city is known for its late-generation halfblood population, descended from HAZORIN royalty that was exiled from NEANDARA in 3469 RM following the storming of its capital in the wake of its otherworldly ruler's assassination in 3462 RM (Pop. c. 40,000).

YEN: Set. Settlement in the east of the JAHADAT STATES, under the control of the city of SASASHAH (Pop. c. 6,000).

YENARUSH: Set. City in the region of LEGED in the east of the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT in the north west of SAMMAEA. It is the hub of the OPIATE manufacture in Sepahaunat and is wealthy (Pop. c. 40,000).

YENED: Set. Fortified settlement in the south east of the JAHADAT STATES, under the control of the city of NAWDARA (Pop. c. 4,000).

 $\underline{\textbf{YETTIS}}\text{: }\textit{Mil. Str. } Fortress in the north of <math display="inline">\underline{\textbf{KETESH}}^{(2.)}.$

YEEZ: Rvr. River in the east of LLACHATUL, flowing east from sources in the KOTHA ICHOLLIGHA Mountains, before meeting the coast at the inner waterways of the SEA OF MYMEREA.

YELLOW FOREST, the: For. Sicily forest in the c north of SKAROS. It was an unexceptional woodland for many years, ignored by most and visited by some patricians for game hunting.

In 3616 RM construction of a strange technarcane facility or manufactory (known only as Technarcane Station III) was completed in the middle of the woodlands, following 6-years of construction. A marked change was observed in the woodland once its Technarcane engines were switched on in the winter of 3617 RM. Within weeks, all flora surrounding the structure had begun to turn sickly and yellowish, their wood brittle. Eventually, all vegetation in a 2-mile radius suffered the same fate, though the trees did not die. Whatever had caused the sickness was also sustaining them.

The forest remains sickly to this day, eerily silent and home to little-ifany fauna. There are no nearby settlements, indicating that the location was specifically chosen, whether for something that already existed there, or its distance from settlements, or something else that remains unknown. YELLOW RIVER, the: Rvr. River in the north west of VIRAHAN, named after its yellowish colour from sulphur that makes its way into the river in the region of ENIGAR. This is due to the nearby presence of the volcano AITHNA. It is the source of its parent, the larger river ARESH^(2,).

YELLRAKH: Rvr. River in the c east of THE SURRACH, flowing west for c 800-miles from sources in the GAMIGAHUA before reaching the endorheic basin in the north of the SURRACHI PLAINS. During the wet seasons, between KORAHALEN and SATAVALEN, rains flood the river banks and cause a temporary lake, known as IGRAAL, to form on most years.

YENNIDU: Geo. small mountain in the far south of IMEAL, forming a headland that protrudes into the north east of the SEA OF INDIRILL. Historically, it was an important region, with many ruins peppered across its foothills to this day.

YEPPO: Set. City in the c east of THE SURRACH in the north west of SAMMAEA. Little is known about it other than its ruling thaumaturge caste, which is noted for its strict religious laws. Any form of SHAPING other than that practiced by its thaumaturges is forbidden (Pop. c. 71,800).

YERAK: Ind. Set. Settlement in the c of LAASKHA, located at the northernedge of the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region of BETHAL. Its main industry is the extraction of raw UMBRA (Pop. c. 6,200).

YERIUS: Set. Small coastal city in the south east of the HENDECARCHY of HATON in the c north east of MALAN. Its main industry is fishing (Pop. c. 18,000).

YERSA: Mys. Sup. In SAUA, the SPIRITS of fallen ancestors made manifest. This occurs naturally, though rarely, in the FOREST OF REVERIES, in what ANIMISTS believe to be the result of a strong LACUNA there between the MATERIAL PLANE and the FIRMAMENT. This link causes the spirits of the dead to be appear within the confined of the forest, where they inhabit trees and other objects.

Ethereal things, they are felt rather than seen, their emotions manifesting as tangible feelings and auras that affect those who wander within the forest. Many such yersa are felt as malignant forces; embittered by what may be millennia of confinement to the Material Plane.

YESUGHAN: (B. 3949 RM) Pol. HIGH-MASTER OF THE PLAINSLEAGUE and ruler of DUARIAHAHN, TEMUJA.

YETRIA: 1. Geo. eastern-most island of THUMAL, 250-miles from the eastern coast.

2. Set. City on the above island^(1.) (Pop. c. 23,200).

YICTAIANDA: Pol. Set. Capital of the PANTHEON ISLES. It was resettled by AGUBBRA ESCHA, leader of the native resistance, after she ejected the last remnants of the LIMOTHAN^(1.) occupation from its citadel in 2825 RM. Her forces settled the central palace, which became the ancestral home of her family, which would go on to become the ruling dynasty of the Pantheon Isles, ruling to this day (Pop. c. 880,000).

YGG: Int. Rui. Ancient monument in the c west of GIBEAH. It dates back to the FOURTH AGE of life, and is attributed to SPHINXES. Little is known of the ruins' original creators but sphinxes are recorded in the area as recently as the early FIFTH AGE, though wars against them whittled their numbers to such a degree and they have not been seen in over 3,500 years.

YGGATHALUR: Geo. The north east-most part of the NGHALLEAL Mountains in the north east of THE SURRACH, extending into south western OPHAR. It's notable for its sightly granite formations along its western-face, ranging from orange, to brown and red in colour.

YGGDARASA: Geo. Limestone cavern system in the south west of NÁRTHEL, between the IAHAL Mountains and the west of the UEFIR Highlands. The caverns lead down in a sharp diagonal decline, turning into a steep pit that has been explored to a depth of no less than 2-miles, but which is known to continue further.

Side-chambers are known to link with the PRISON CARCERI, though it is unknown if the deeper unexplored portions are independent systems or also linked to Carceri. Its main entrance is 283-ft above sea level.

YGGOUAGO: Geo. Mountain-range in the east of CHEIRA. Running north-to-south for over 700-miles.

- YGRALLA: Geo. Region in the south of CYHLAGHARR, north of the NGHALLEAL Mountains. It is dry and known for giant indigenous vultures, known as GYPS, that were traditionally trained by falconers. Though the tradition is on the wane, the settlement of MAGRLIR remains a major centre of gyps training.
- YIBBUGHAN SHALLOWS: Sea. Reef off the eastern coast of GIBEAH.
- YIBRAM: Sca. Bay in the far south west of THE SURRACH, separating the mainland from the island of RALISS^(1.).
- YIBROAEL: For. Jungle dominating the south east of GIBEAH, known for its many watercourses and wildlife, particularly HAYAVARS, making it quite dangerous.
- YIDRI: Geo. Island in the north of the PREPOTENCY OF THREPHO, in the island chain known as the BRIDESMAIDENS(1.).
- YIDUI: also 'Cradle of Death'. Geo. Massive impact crater in the c west of KHARKHARADONTIS, some 280-miles wide. There are no records of its origin, suggesting that it was formed long before the appearance of the MORTAL PEOPLES. PLAGI and ETHERI legends refer to it as the Cradle of Death, and say that it grew suddenly, as though from nothing, bringing death and destruction to the land around it.
 - Today, any sign of this death is long gone and it is but another weathered feature of the expanse of Kharkharadontis.
- YIGG: Geo. Dre. Major cave-system in the north of BANT, in the c of the CARCHEMISHI PENINSULA (1.), in the east of SAMMAEA. The entire region is known for its sinkholes and shallow caverns, with roots penetrating the caves, and strange teeth growing through the soft walls – likely linked to the DREAMSCAPE of the NEPHILIMS' MAW which encompasses the region.
- YIGGNON: Rui. SALRIDEAN^(2.) ruins in the WHITE SHEET, in the far north of LLACHATUL, first discovered by a DURCHAAN^(1.) expedition to KHOLAMOR, in 3786 RM. the ruins take the form of basaltic pylons.
- YIKAOT: Set. Coastal city in the north of KULIGALA, overlooking the SEA OF KURKAL (Pop. c. 42,000).
- YIKKA: Sea. Bay in the north of KULIGALA, to the west of the SEA OF KURKAL.
- YIMALUGH: Geo. Island off the north eastern coast of ELEKHID, in the ENEPHIAN REEF, revealed by sea levels over the past centuries. On the island was an ancient temple, thus-far unattributed and thought to predate human influence in the region by millennia. Little else is known of it, and the hewn writing on the temple walls are unique in ELYDEN, remaining untranslated to this day.
- YIMAVALRA: Rvr. River in the far south of THE VORANDINE, flowing south and west for 315-miles from sources in the ZYCHE badlands and ZEHINE Mountains, before meeting the coast at the BAY OF NURCYA.
- YINALADA: Rvr. River in the c-south east of THE VORANDINE, flowing north east for 500-miles from sources in the BOTH RATHO and ERIVOINE Mountains, before meeting its parent, the river MANADARAS.
- YIRSHAM: Set. Settlement in the far north of PORPHYR. It is located in the region of BASHINDA, which is noted for its rich ore reserves. Its main industries are copper and zinc mining (Pop. c. 6,000).
- YISIRA: Set. City in the south east of the HENDECARCHY of AONIA, in MALAN. It lies close to the ruins of MATH NEL, and people there are known to explore it. Its main industry is agriculture, and it produces a lot of the food that is consumed in MELIBODHA (Pop. c. 15,000).
- YITRAMM: Set. Small fortified city in the south of ELEKHID, to the east of the region of GAREXE. Its main industry is the quarrying of the fine marble from which the geometric rock features of Garexe are made up of (Pop. c. 14,000).
- YIZAKIAGA: 1. Island in the south east of the PANTHEON ISLES.
 2. Mil. Str. Coastal island fortress in the south east of the PANTHEON ISLES, on the above island^(1.).
- YLANDA: Geo. The smaller of two islands (the other being YSSAB) that serve as a division between the south of MIROVEA and the north of LERAMUGH. The island is largely known for the ancient metallic tower that crowns its highest peak, known as the Tower of the BLOOD MOON.
- YLEM: 1. Ele. Unique ore found in the eponymous island city-state^(2.) in the west of THE SURRACH. It is thought to date back to the earliest days of SHAPING and is easily manipulable by SHAPERS, making it a prized

- material amongst such individuals. It is crafted into intricate and exquisitely-detailed object d'art which are sold across $\underline{\text{ELYDEN}}$, and is also used in the creation of $\underline{\text{FOCI}}^{(2.)}$.
- 2. Pol. Set. Independent coastal city on the island of RALISS. Its primary industry is the mining of an ancient material, also known as ylem^(1.), that is thought to date to the earliest days of the DEMIURGES' shaping of ELYDEN. The material is easily malleable by SHAPERS and is sold around Elyden to them for research purposes and crafted into object d'art (Pop. c. 90,000).
- YLIVI: Set. Settlement in the region of YEPPO in the c east of THE SURRACH. It emerged in c. 3820 RM when the purported remains of FIRST AGE ILLIDRAEN settlements and remains to this day a major scholarly centre for the study of illidraen and other MORTAL PEOPLES (Pop. c. 4,800).
- YMALESSE: 1. Geo. Lage lodelith c. 1000 miles south off south eastern LLACHATUL, to the east of the MIROVEAN OCEAN. It is home to the mysterious eponymous tower⁽²⁾.
- 2. Arc. White needle-like tower that rises for close to a mile from the centre of the above island⁽¹⁾. The tower is 100-ft. wide at its base and is devoid of features and is of a porcelain or dull metallic substance. It has not been explored in detail due to its distance from the INNER SEA REGION.
- YMEA: Sea. Shallow sea off the north western coast of SAMMAEA, just south of the SEA OF LYNNAE. The sea is incredibly briny, with hard salty formations just off the coast, which itself is bordered by crystalline formations, marking the barrier between sea and land.
 - The strange conditions of the sea have given rise to a unique ecosystem of strange life-forms that thrive in the salty waters. The sea is also very shallow, limiting sea traffic across it and forcing most vessels to take slow-moving shallow-hulled forms.
- YMEN: Rel. Site of religious importance in the far south west of LIDEA, in the ALOS badlands. Myth claims that the region was once the site if a great battle that took place during the WAR OF SCOURGING at the end of the FOURTH AGE.
- The fossilised remains of the dead litter the area, embedded in the rock, centre-most of these remains is the body of a SCION of the UNDYING MACHINE, the legendary warrior-prince OSSELDOR, who fell in battle against a MESOCHTHON. Though Osseldor is later said to have reappeared as an OTHERWORLDER, the site remains an important place of pilgrimage along THE SHADOW MARCH, and it is said the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR spent some time here during the conquest of Lidea. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

YO-HAMA VADA: see BLOOD SPORT, THE.

- YO- LABRYS: lit. 'the Maze'. Geo. A large region in the west of VAALK characterised by a labyrinth-like series of heavily ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED slot-canyons that are covered in adapted flora and fauna.
 - The region is categorised as a MODERATE THREAT by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.
- YOBATHIA: Set. Small city in the c north of ATARAXIA, along the course of the river ASTAHKH (Pop. c. 17,000).
- YOETHAS: Set. Small city in the far north of PORPHYR. It is located in the region of BASHINDA, which is noted for its rich ore reserves. Its main industries are lead and zinc mining (Pop. c. 14,000).
- YOMA: also 'Ioma'. Pol. Set. City and state in the c of SAUA, and one of the original five city-states before Saua was united in 3108 RM (Pop. c. 57,000)
- YONOTH: Rui. Ruined city in the far north west of PORPHYR. It is ancient, and its people are thought to have died due to the worsening qualities of the SEA OF LETHEA in the FOURTH AGE.
- YONTA: also 'City of the Gate'. Set. Fortified city in the c of RAONGEN⁽²⁾, south west of Lake TAHONG. The city was, until 3999 RM, part of THE VORANDINE, though the change in regime that took place two years earlier saw the city break away, remaining independent until it was eventually absorbed by Raongen, following decades of close ties and shared cultural traits. Since then, it has become a major centre of trade between the two regions.

The city is famed for its monolithic partially-ruined granite gateway, which predates the city by millennia. Rubble from the gateway has been used in the construction of certain structures, many of which are still standing today.

Hills surrounding the city are famed for floating lights that have guided lost travellers to safe lands (Pop. c. 42,000).

YOSADEL: Set. City in the south west of RHAMIA, known for its expansive coal open cast mines (Pop. c. 8,300).

YOSSIN: Set. Fortified settlement in the north of THE SURRACH (Pop. c. 8.000).

YOSSO: For. Forest in the north of SAUA.

YOSSOLA: Geo. Ele. Iron protrusions in the ANOMOFERROH in the west of BASSORAH⁽²⁾. They are thought to be ATRAMENTAL in origin.

YOTHSHAMMANEI: Rel. Str. Temple in the north east of the DANAED
SULRACH, discovered in c. 750 by KORACHANI explorers. The temple is a subterranean multi-chambered funerary complex (most of which has not yet been explored) dedicated to the art of KLADOS that was practiced by the LHAUS.

Various ruined examples of archaic technarcane machinery were found in the depths, including vats containing the doctored skeletons of what scholars postulate to be ITERANTS. This technology contributed in many ways to the rise of technarcana in the empire.

YOTHSHAMMANEI ESCARPMENT: Geo. Natural escarpment running for over 75-miles in the nation of TRAKIA, 330-miles south of present-day OPHAR. The escarpment once served as a natural border between the LHAUS enclaves to the south and HUMAN lands to the north. An ancient human fort, known as GALLET, was constructed in c. 675

RM to guard the region, though it now lies ruined, abandoned by its original occupants for many centuries.

YOTHSHAMMANEI TABLETS: Rel. Obj. Tablets discovered in the ancient temple of YOTHSHAMMANEI describing, in hieroglyphic form, various practices associated with the art of KLADOS.

YOU'LL HAVE MORE LUCK BREACHING THE WALLS OF TETHRA! Lan. Soc. PARTHISAN saying, indicating that a said task is near-impossible. The city of TETHRA is guarded by an elaborate and expansive system of star forts and entrenchments, some of which may be outdated, but all of which are well-maintained and staffed, and certainly impressive. Together, these fortifications are said to be impregnable without the aid of SHAPING.

YOURAHIR: Geo. Island to the far north of ELAT.

 $\underline{\text{YOURII}}$: Set. Major city in the west of $\underline{\text{PNESSA}}$, along the course of the river $\underline{\text{TRIGGAS}}$ (Pop. c. 64,000).

YPOKHANDRA: 1. also 'the Black Lands'. Geo. Sandy area of the ALOS in LIDEA, known for the SOUL-PEARLS embedded in the bedrock beneath. The place is visited by OTHERWORLDERS who sojourn in the area as they reflect on the fates of unborn spirits.

2. Mil. Str. Large fortress in the above region (1.) erected in c. 1300 RM following explorations of the region discovering large SOUL-PEARL deposits there. The soul-pearls were quarried in an extensive open-cast mines that lasted until 1895 RM. Operations there ended largely due to over-exploitation from the great demand BA'AKH had for the stones; as well as incessant Paraiyan attacks against its workers and caravans moving from there. Since the mines' closure, the fortress has been garrisoned by a single STEEL LEGION and auxiliaries, guarding the area from scavengers. This state persisted until c. 3430 RM, when the legion disappeared, leaving the tower unguarded. It fell into disrepair after this, and following the SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE in 3705 RM the fortress became part of SARASTROAN-controlled Lidea, though it has been allowed to fall into disrepair.

3. Mil. Str. Coastal fortress in the north east of JURRAS^(2.).

YPSILOR & SONS: Tec. Combining technical expertise with ATRAMENTAL ingenuity, Ypsilor & Sons is a much more recent addition to the HOROLOGISTS of KORACHAN, having only been established in 3822 RM.

What it lacks in experience and established ties, it makes up for in ingenuity – Ypsilor was the first horologist to make use of TECHNARCANA in the manufacture of watches, and his patented Atramental processes ensure the most precise timekeeping devices in all of ELYDEN.

The rapid fame of Ypsilor (later named Ypsilor and Son in 3849 RM and Ypsilor & Sons in 3855 RM) led to many exclusive commissions, including all timekeeping devices employed by the Korachani military since 3903 RM, much to the disappointment of other more-established horologists.

Based in the city of Korachan, Ypsilor & Sons has a presence in cities in seven different nations across the $\underline{\text{INNER SEA}}$.

YRANNAI: also 'Life Pairing' Soc. Common social practice in VAUN that is analogous to wedlock. Adults seek permanent spiritual and intellectual companionship with another individual, who can be of any sex, with which they seek to spend their lives. There is no public ceremony or ritual involved in this, though pairs may decide mark their companionship with a private ceremony, and their union typically lasts until the death of one of the individuals.

As around half of these unions are incapable of naturally bearing young, adoption and surrogacy are both common practices amongst life pairings and a child raised through either adoption or surrogacy is socially and culturally no different to one born in what we would call the traditional way.

YRRANAH APHIR: also 'the Shaper King'. m. Pol. His. Per. (D. c. 1170 RM). Cultural hero in LAOD who rose amid the ruin of the kingdom of ALAOGGA during a time of chaos. He was a SHAPER, and is said to have found the EBON GRAIL, which he used to heal wounded soldiers. Other legends paint him as a uniter of disparate peoples in the region, where he is sometimes referred to as the Shaper King, though this is unlikely to be true as the region now occupied by southern Laod was dominated by warring small states and kingdoms for many years before and after the time of his supposed death.

YSACYITHAIA: Dem. 'Ysacyithaian'. Ntn. Empire in the far south of SAMMAEA, north of the SEA OF SAMMAIDU. Its north west emerged from the ruin of the earlier state of ILIMNILL. There are many refugees heading north, which are being stopped by the border troops of ZAKRON. It is a nation of animal husbandry, and has many skilled cattlemen, who are lords of their vast lands, and well-armed, whose ranchers also acts as private troops. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

YSALLEA: 1. Geo. Cliffs in the east of EIKARTHYEA.

2. Lak. Salty lake in the east of EIKARTHYEA.

YSSAB: Geo. The larger of two islands (the other being YLANDA) that serve as a division between the south of the MIROVEAN OCEAN and the north of the LERAMUGH. The island is known for the basaltic idols that lay half-buried beneath its dark soils, facing north. It is populated by pastoral and agrarian people, though is devoid of any civilisations of note.

YSSDARA: Set. Coastal settlement in the west of SABAISA. Its main industry is crabbing (Pop. c. 7,000).

YSTHUAN: Pol. Sct. Capital city of YSACYITHAIA. It is the westernmost point along the ISHMMARRAN TRAIL, and caters to the many merchants and travellers that cross through it (Pop. unknown).

YSTRA: Int. His. Str. Ancient petrified ark lying half buried in the badlands of MEREHIM, in the far south east of the UMBRA SOKHAR wastes.

YTALI 1. Geo. Expansive boggy terrain in the south east of CARNYNGA, close to the border with AEONAS in the south and BELEGOR in the east.
2. Sec. Small city in the above region^(1,) in the south east of CARNYNGA. The city and its environs are isolated and largely forgotten by its parent nation. Its people are insular and content to be left alone. Its main industry is milking of snake venom, which is used to make antivenoms which are sold to surrounding regions (Pop. c. 12,000).

YTTRIA: 1. Geo. Region in the c of THE SURRACH, in the SURRACHI PLAINS.

2. Pol. Set. Main city in the eponymous region, known for its wide shallow marble quarries (Pop. c. 34,800).

YUBARAH: Set. Cliffside settlement in the north west of BASSORAH⁽²⁾, in the GORRAN Mountains the city is a centre of copper production and copper goods (Pop. c. 6,500).

YUCOM: Set. Major city in the of CHEIRA, and capital city of the eighth prefecture of Cheira (Pop. c. 60,000).

- YUDDA: Mar. Rnk. LAASKHAN Warrior caste. Pre-empire lived apart from normal society; after the KORACHANI occupation and subsequent integration in imperial culture, they were drawn from remaining Laaskhan troops and their ancestors their bodies augmented by the ATRAMENTA.
- YUDHEI: Fau. Strange OTHERWORLDLY beings that survive outside the ecologies of the MORTAL PLANE. They gain sustenance through solitude, growing weak when surrounded by MORTALS. They are alien things, of a single eye and no other features on their bulbous heads, though they are possessed with multiple arms, with no legs to speak of. Some postulate that they might be refugees from another PLANET entirely.
- YUAN: 1. Sea. Bay on the far south west of RAONGEN⁽²⁾, to the west of the larger BAY OF ORAN. It was a strait until c. 3200 RM, separating the mainland from the nearby CRESCENT ISLE, but lowering sea levels over the next centuries saw the island link to the mainland through the formation of a narrow isthmus at the city of YUANONG, which has since created a canal that links the Bay of Yuan with the SEA OF SUDUNIR once
 - 2. Pol. Major noble household in RAONGEN^(2.), based in the city of YUANONG. The household controls shipping across the south west of Raongen, and has grown wealthy of sea trade and offering charter services. It owns the second-largest fleet of ships in Raongen after the navy itself.
- YUAN CRESCENT: Geo. Crescent-shaped peninsula in the far south west of RAONGEN⁽²⁾. It was an island until c. 3200 RM hen the waning of Elyden's seas saw it increase in size and eventually connect with the mainland, close to the city of Yuanong, which later built a canal to cross the isthmus.
- YUANONG: Set. Major fortified coastal city in the far south west of RAONGEN^(2.), along a narrow isthmus that connects the mainland with the peninsula known as the YUAN CRESCENT. Prior to c. 3200 RM the peninsula was an island, and Yuanong overlooked the strait of YUAN across to the island, though lowering sea levels over the next centuries saw the island connect to the island via a narrow isthmus, which the city has since grown to encompass, constructing a canal that reunites the Bay of Yuan^(1.) (as it is now known) with the SEA OF SUDUNIR in the west.

The city is home to the Yuan^(2,) household, which is one of the most powerful ruling houses in the kingdom, controlling a vast fleet of merchant vessels.

- YULIA: 1. Geo. Mountain range dominating the eastern coast of ARERAQTH in the north east of MENISCEA. It stretches for around 500 miles, 300 of which form the eponymous peninsula⁽²⁾ the region is noted for its rugged natural beauty, its black moss-covered rocks, and its near year-round rain. A particular formation in the east of the mountains is said to be the languid body of the SCION SUSHRA, who fell in love with the place and fell asleep, becoming part of the land. Her dreams are said to permeate the thoughts of those who sleep in the area, giving them visions of unending fractal mountains and forestscapes.
 - 2. Geo. Peninsula in the eastern coast of ARERAQTH in the north east of MENISCEA, formed by the protrusion of the eponymous mountains^(1.).
- YUR: Mil. Str. Fortress in the c east of the BARRIER LANDS, along the course of the IVORY ROAD trade route. It is controlled by the KNIGHTS AENEOUS, who guard merchants travelling along the road.
- YUSSAI: Rel. Str. Org. Monastery dedicated to the cult of SATHEP in the c west of SARASTRO.
- YUSSHA: Set. Fortified coastal settlement in the west of RAONGEN⁽²⁾. Its main industry is the cultivation of EVOLAMKELP (Pop. c. 6,000).
- YUUA: Sea. Sea strait in the far north east of the BOILING SEA, between the north west of TZALLRACH and the south of MALAN.
- YUUAZA: Set. Small coastal city in the far north west of TZALLRACH, controlling the entrance into the SEA OF MUSSAR (Pop. c. 50,000).
- YUUNA: For. Dry forest in the south of the HENDECARCHY of CHLORIS, in the south west MALAN, bordering the north of TZALLRACH.
- YVRESSE: Set. City in the far north west of THE SURRACH, within the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region of THESMOTH. It is populated by ATRAMENTISTS and other SHAPERS who research the surrounding region.
- In c. 3960 RM an agreement was reached with PARTHIS, to allow its merchants to pass through the city and its environs as part of the traderoute known as the PARTHISAN ROAD. Parthis pays a handsome tithe for the privilege, and its technarcanists also help to maintain the many SIPHON ENGINES that protect the area from ATRAMENTAL TAINT (Pop. c. 47,500).

YVRON: Lak. Lake in the north east of ELEKHID.

Z

ZAARA SHUR: (B.3933 RM) Pol. Present ruler and religious leader of ELEKHID.

ZAAVAR: Set. Settlement in the c north of VAALK, just south west of the SEA OF BASSANDER. It is built atop the ruin of an ancient FIFTH AGE YARAOMIC settlement, which was known as ESHAVA (Pop. c. 15,000).

ZAAZUASH: Rui. Once a major city in the c south west of THE SURRACH, whose main industry was the mining of SOULSTONES for TECHNARCANE use. It grew rich off of the exportation of the stones and technarcane devices that required them as fuel, and boasted a population of over 100,000 during its height in c. 3200 RM. It was devastated by the sudden appearance of the ATRAMENTALWASTES of HARAT CHLO between 3681 – 3684 RM and was abandoned soon after. As the Atramental wastes expanded, surrounding settlements were also claimed and slowly refugees made their way to the city and eventually continued the soulstone industry. Much of the city is now deserted, the clay bricks of its abandoned districts disintegrated into grey mounds around the populated area.

The area around the city is a waterlogged wasteland peppered with wretched trees and the shallowly buried remains of the ancient city.

ZABO: Set. Old capital of JIRIDUN, which was moved to the city of OD MEGINNAS^(L) in 3651 RM. Since then, the city has been allowed to dwindle in power and size, with many people moving to the new capital (Pop. c. 28,000).

ZABEL: 1. Pol. Northern district in the CITY OF ALMAGEST, noted for its role in the city's infrastructure. The district was a slum, its residents making a living off of the recycling of the rest of the city's waste, which they would separate into things that were of value (which would either be kept or sold back to the city) and waste, which was disposed of. There was a status quo between the people of the district (who called themselves Zabelites) and the administration, which turned a blind eye to their activities so long as they continued to keep the rest of the city clean.

ZABRA: Rui. Ruined library in the south of the GO BISAMMAM desert in VENTHIR, inhabited by vagrants. It was once part of a thriving culture that described the region as a shallow inland sea.

Zabra is conspicuous for the remnants of wooden boats that litter the slopes west of the ruin.

ZABRAN: Wea. Summer southerly wind that blows across the east of GNOTH and AQUARIIA, bringing moist air from the sea inland, where it meets warmer northerly winds from the NARAHASAPHAEL and BLACK MOUNTAIN.

ZACCHAD: 1. Geo. Island south of the TOLIASOR Mountains, in THE INNER SEA, and part of the KORACHANI colony of AMONDOR.

2. Mil. Str. Major fortress in the KORACHANI colony of AMONDOR, south of the TOLIASOR Mountains. It is renowned as being one of four Korachani fortresses to house one of the legendary 150-ton cannons, known collectively as the FOUR ANGELS.

ZACHULL: 1. Geo. Region, covering an estimated 80,000 square-miles, in the north west of KHARKHARADONTIS known for the fleshy single stemmed trees that grow in its confines, their vine like tendrils slowly snaking across the ground as though of their own volition.

See. Large fortified conurbation and city state in the eponymous region (Pop. c. 117,000).

ZADAI: Ind. Set. Gold mining settlement in the c south of VENTHIR, just north east of the WORKNAH Mountains (Pop. c. 9,000).

ZADAK: 1. Geo. Roughlands in the north east of BA'AKH, dominated by escarpments and knolls. Many natural wells and oases in area have attracted settlers, becoming populated.

2. Geo. Rocky peninsula in the north east of BA'AKH.

3. Set. City in the north east of $\underline{BA'AKH}$. It was once a major city in the region and is now crumbling, abandoned to $\underline{ATRAMENTAL\ TAINTED}$ and retreating coastlines in c. 3390 RM.

ZADAMM: Set. Small city in the north of PNESSA. It is infamous for its cutpurses, and it is rumoured that they owe fealty to its noble houses (Pop. c. 12,000).

ZADDOCK: (B. 1902 – 2383 RM) Tec. Renowned TECHNOLOGIST and pioneer of artificial life-forms and constructs. Born in VENTHIR, Zaddock was a master technologist who innovated many methods of cheapening and spreading the availability of CREANTS and constructs (TECHNACHI), such as STEEL OGHURS. He was exiled from Venthir in 1939 RM by an increasingly paranoid sovereign, QUEEN HETEPHERES, and alongside many technologists who accompanied with him fled SOUTH to the city of SARAGOS, from where the nation of SARAGOS would eventually evolve.

ZADISI: Set. Coastal settlement in the north east of $\underline{ZHARIAH}^{(2)}$ (Pop. c. 8,000).

ZADUH: Rui. Old capital of the TRAGIC KINGDOM, on what are now known as the GHOUL ISLES. It was once a great harbour, known for its gilded domes and many merchant ships that trades west and east. Today it is a grey ruin, some distance from the coast due to the diminishing waters of ELYDEN. The ruin and much of the surrounding coast are shrouded in thick mists, as cool sea air meets the warmer ais that hangs over the island.

ZADZHEN: Rel. Ser. Fortified city in the south west of SAUA, in the plains of NATAMURRA. It is dominated by a large shrine around which is a market, where merchants travelling along the GREAT ROAD sell their wares (Pop. c. 38,000).

ZAFEED: 1. Ind. Soc. PATRICIAN HOUSE famed for its luxury CONVEYORS.

The house originated in SARASTRO, though its vehicles are in use across the LOW-EMPIRE OF SARASTRO and other parts of the INNER SEA REGION today. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

2. Ind. Veh. Manufacturers of luxury conveyors, ranging from single-person vehicles to larger 4–6 person capacities. Their main factory is based in the city of CARULA in SARASTRO, though there are other manufactories across the LOW-EMPIRE OF SARASTRO, including NERIDUN in VAALK.

The house's current patriarch is the subject of various rumours and legends due to his reclusive nature, pallid skin, and unnatural old age – he turned 288 in 4005 RM, though it is no secret that he regularly visits FLESHWRIGHTS and makes use of cutting-edge ATRAMENTAL procedures which are likely responsible for his longevity.

Zafeed conveyors are famed for their design and reliability, and are costed to prohibit purchase by all but the wealthiest of individuals, making them highly coveted across the INNER SEA REGION. They are characterised by their large intricately spoked forewheels, wave-like panelling, gold-trim, and tapering design. The manufacturer's favoured colour is dark maroon though other colours are also available.

The manufacturer also creates be spoke vehicles for the most discerning patrons — typically incredibly wealthy patricians with specific requirements, which may not all be legal.

ZAFFRE: Pol. Set. City-state in the c north east of THE SURRACH in the north west of SAMMAEA, that is renowned for the large dark blue dome of its main administrative structure as well as the many other similarly-coloured domes around the city.

The city has been under the leadership of an OTHERWORLDER since 4007 RM, around which a sizeable cult of personality has grown, attracting pilgrims from around the Surrach. It is also known for its multiculturalism, especially its tolerance, if not outright celebration, of different religions and faiths. Its settlements are amongst the major producers of lumber in the Surrach (Pop. c. 92,000).

ZAGAN: Pol. Set. Capital of the island-nation of IRUGNA(2.). The city's emblem is the winged bull, and it is dominated by the CITADEL of the ANCIENT, an archaic structure where the seat of power in Irugna is located. Most jobs in the city revolve around the upkeep and smooth operations of the government located within the Citadel of the Ancient. The city is also home to the main mint for Irugna, and most coins used in the nation are made there, in large heavily-guarded subterranean mints (Pop. c. 209,120).

ZAGRAS: Geo. Small mountain in the c north west of SARASTRO.

ZAHARA: Set. Small city in the north of NÁRTHEL along the course of the river UEFIRAT. It is a major agricultural centre in the region (Pop. c. 17,000).

ZAHARAN DESERT: Geo. Desert in the east of MENISCEA, dominating the south of SHAZGIN, and the north of VALA. Though largely uninhabited it is renowned for its pathfinders, who are adept at navigating by starlight and living off the land. They make shallow caves that they lie in during the day and travel at night.

ZAHAT YA HZA: Lit 'plain of the gods'. Geo. Highland flat-topped steppes in the north of SAUA, bordering the south east of TEMUJA. The region is high-altitude and very rough. Natives of the seven states found within its borders are barrel-chested and recognised as formidable warriors due to their stamina.

ZAHAT YISO: Mar, Rnk. Prolific warrior-caste in the ZAHAT YA HZA region in the north of SAUA.

ZAIAMANA: Set. Small city in the c south of AMMESH. It controls a pass across the NAGHIGH Mountains (Pop. c. 17,000).

ZAIDA: Int. Mys. Ancient gigantic immobile golem that towers over the city of BEH ZAIDA in the north west of the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT. It is thought to have at one time been capable of independent motion, though is now immobile. Despite this, it is active, and it is believed that an ancient siphon engine, possibly attributed to the DEMIURGE NYARLOTH, lies within its chest, still working, purifying the air.

ZAIID: Set. Small city in the north of ZHARIAH⁽²⁾ (Pop. c. 12,400).

ZAIN: Set. Settlement in the c west of GNOTH, just outside the city of PITTACAEL, known for its study of the stars and thorough cataloguing of the births moments of OTHERWORLDERS. Its scholars are authorities on the subject (Pop. c. 6,000).

ZAKHAR: Rel. Ancient site in the east of AZAZEM that forms part of THE SHADOW MARCH.

ZAKHARNA, THE UNTOUCHABLE: Oth. HALFBLOOD whose body is similar to that of a DEGENERATE. She is cursed to wander THE OLD FOREST alone, without protection. She warns those who approach her to be careful what they wish for. She speaks ill of AGEN.

ZAKKAR: Geo. Island to the east of GIBEAH, in the SEA OF BALIMAN.

ZAKRON: Dem. 'Zakron'. Ntn. Nation in the south east of SAMMAEA. It broke away from the once-great empire of ILLAKRAR(2.) in 2823 RM, and took part of the old territories of AKHSARAY.

The nation is famed for its GOD-ANCESTORS, which are interred within CANOPIC ENGINES – great archaic machines that allow their consciousnesses to survive for millennia after their VESSELS have perished. They serve as rulers, advisors and deities alike to the otherwise backwards people of Zakron, whose entire culture revolves around venerating, serving and maintaining the engines.

In c. 1180 RM territories now occupied by north western Zakron were devastated by the aftermath of the MT. KLAUVAKAN CALAMITY, including famine and plage throughout the 12th century RM. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

ZALATHAR: Sct. Coastal city in the west of the CITIZENRY OF THALI. The city is located in steep valleys that are flanked by the SANTOREAN Mountains, giving it a tiered appearance. It is built atop a late FOURTH AGE citadel that is thought to have belonged to CATACHIS⁽²⁾ alchemists, and ancient sewers and vaults are often encountered during excavation works, revealing long-sealed ateliers and workshops.

MERILL sightings off the coast are becoming increasingly more common, and fishermen often report hearing eerie sounds coming from the deep sea when out at night (Pop. c. 72,500).

ZALBAIGALED: (D. 339 RM) Mil. His. Ancient SARASTROAN general who for decades led his troops to victory against KORACHANI attacks, until his eventual defeat at the appearance of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR in 339 RM, who in a night of fighting did with a small elite band of warriors what the Korachani army had for decades been unable to. Zalbaigaled was executed alongside most high-ranking resistors by Malichar, paving the way for the imperial governance of Sarastro under the aegis of SATHEP THE RISEN.

ZALDRID: Set. Fortified border city in the south of ZAKRON, overlooking the great plains of northern YSACYITHAIA. It is home to many mounted troops that patrol the border against refugees heading north (Pop. c. 22,000).

ZALEA: Rvr. River in the c west of the HENDECARCHY of NHORA in the north east of MALAN, flowing west for 180-miles from sources in the THARORAT Mountains, before meeting the coast at the GULF OF ELRI.

ZALEAT: Set. Small city in the c of OKKHAM (Pop. c. 19,000).

ZALICHYA: Set. Fortified settlement in the region of NUCTEMERA in the north of EREBETH, known for its wines (Pop. c. 4,400).

ZALIKHA: See. Fortified city in the far north of KHAMID, close to the border with MALANI FOREST-KINGDOM of LONAR. It forms a part of the GREAT ROAD trade-route, and its port and market are busy with merchants moving goods to and from the region (Pop. c. 19,000).

ZALKAH: Int. Set. Independent AIKLAH settlement in the far south of AETHIOS, in the region of DHABB. The settlement is heavily fortified by steep-sided cob walls, and protected by cliff peaks that are unassailable by humans. Aiklahs based in this settlement harass nearby caravans heading SOUTH to the SALT ROAD (Pop. c. unknown).

ZAMAINI: Geo. For. Sparsely wooded area in the c of VENTHIR, north of the SHANA Mountains. It was once known for its pistachio trees, and though the region is still renowned for its pistachio cultivation, this is now done on an industrial scale within private orchards, and very few of the trees grow wild today.

ZAMARR: Set. Settlement in the c south of AZAZEM, in the north of the SHIARTHAR plains, known for its mutton and wool production (Pop. c. 1500)

ZAMAZHAEL: Int. Fau. Geo. Skeleton of a gargantuan creature, its origins unknown, deep in the Wastes of VERMES in the c of MENISCEA. The steel-hard bones are embedded in the rock of the region, ribs protruding like pieces of ancient architecture, vertebrae providing shelter to herds of smaller beast. On the bones are etched disparate archaic scripts, as though succeeding civilisations have come and gone, leaving little more than a simple record of their passing, while the bones of the great beast live on.

ZAMEN: Set. Small city in the c north east of OPHIUSSA. it forms a part of THE WAY trade-route, and offers accommodation to hose travelling along the route (Pop. c. 13,000).

ZAMINDAR: Pol. Soc. Nobility in the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT, similar to PATRICIANS of the INNER SEA REGION. They are landowners, similar to feudal lords, who lease their land to tenants who work them and pay their rent as a percentage of produce grown.

ZAMTHAN: Set. Fortified settlement in the south west of TRAKIA in the region of SABBAROT (Pop. c. 6,800).

ZAMURRA: For. Jungles in the south east of ACHAA⁽²⁾, dominating the south eastern face of the MENEFIR Mountains.

ZAN KAMMAR: (B. 3972 RM) Int. HUMAN born in the VENTHIRI city of HAUTIA, known for his gigantism. He is 7'5" and weighs 580 lbs. He achieved fame in the court of QUEEN HETEPHERES, and now travels across Venthir and beyond, challenging local strongmen to martial contests. He has never lost a match.

ZANBAUR: Geo. Ridge in the east of SAMMAEA, forming an extension of the expansive UHBATAQI Mountain-range⁽⁴⁾. It serves as a border between the JAHADAT STATES and the surrounding SULTANATE OF ABACARDAT.

ZANBUR: Set. Small city in the west of the JAHADAT STATES, under the control of the city of NAI. It is known for its ancient ruined fortifications, whose scale suggest they were constructed by beings larger than HUMANS (Pop. c. 14,000).

ZAND: Rui. Ruined city in the north of BA'AKH, in the ZADAKI peninsula. The city was, until c. 2800 RM a centre of ATRAMENTAL processing, with the facility of BA'UGAR just outside its walls, though changing economies saw the place plumet in wealth almost overnight, leaving it ruined by c. 2880 RM.

ZANDAR ADESH: Set. City in the c east of THE SURRACH. It is an industrious city that is known for its historical leathermaking, which remains a major industry there. Many of its buildings have awnings and canopies made from brightly dyed leather (Pop. c. 28,500).

ZANDERA: Set. Small city in the region of BACALUSIA in the c west of THE SURRACH. It is known for its fine limestone (Pop. c. 17,000).

ZANDIR: Set. Small city in the north west of ETUA, in the northern periphery of the GIGGERAGH desert. It taps into deep natural aquifers from which it draws water, which it also uses to siphon cool subterranean air that it uses to cool its buildings (Pop. c. 12,800).

ZANER: Rui. Abandoned city in the south east of NÁRTHEL. Once a part of SARASTRO, the city was successfully besieged by VENTHIRI forces during the WAR OF SUNDERING, after which it was used as a staging post for Venthiri and KORACHANI armies throughout the war, though was later abandoned. Following the war the region occupied by the city would be claimed by Sarastro.

ZANGHI: Geo. For. Wretched waterlogged forest in the north west of KORACHAN, in west of the SUEVRAN Basin. It is known for its thick mosses and mouldy close air and is commonly said to be ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED, even though this is not the case, as though the claim is needed to explain a wretchedness that is ultimately mundane in nature.

ZANNA: Set. Small coastal city in the far east of NOAVATUR. Its main industry is logging. The industry is an ancient one in the region, so-much-so that its forests are all artificially-planted and were once used for the building of ships. It is also rumoured to be a hotbed of smuggling (Pop. c. 13,000).

ZAOL: Set. Settlement in the region of ASKLEPIA in the c west of THE SURRACH. It is situated along the IVORY ROAD and operates a caravan that operates for 60-miles between it and Asklepia where the injured are seen to. (Pop. c. 8,000).

ZAPAR: Mil. SAUAN foot soldiers, recognised by their red livery.

ZAPHARESH: Set. Major city in the c south west of Mehitiel. It was founded atop the ruin of an ancient monolithic structure that is believed to have been a temple, with people setting up their dwellings in old crypts and cisterns, with public and religious structures being founded in the foundations of larger rooms. Today little direct trace of the old structure remains, though tell-tale signs can be found across the city, including blocks of marble that were repurposed from the original structure and ancient gargoyles and statues adorning squares and public spaces (Pop. c. 275,000).

ZAQEN: Geo. Mountain in the south west of NÁRTHEL, forming part of the border with SALOROC.

ZAQIP: Set. Settlement in the c east of VENTHIR. Every generation, the firstborn children of its noble houses partake in a dangerous hunt, the prize of which is a phylacter. Should one be slain the one responsible for its killing will earn great prestige from themselves and their family (Pop. c. 10,000).

ZAQQIM: Myt. Keeper of the gates of hell in ancient IONIC myths.

ZAQQIM, TEARS OF: Int. Rui. Obj. Spherical stones in the west of IO, in the north west of the region of ELIHAMAGNA. They were once coastal though the lowering of sea levels throughout the Fifth Age has seen them move steadily from the coast, and they are now 20-miles from the coast. There are hundreds of spheres in all, most of which are around 5 ft. wide and encrusted with years of being underwater

The spheres are associated with the ancient mythological figure \underline{ZAQQIM} , though few today know this.

ZARAGAZ: Geo. Scrubland in the c of KHURAUR. It is known for its richly coloured sandstone rocks that vary in colour from deep violets, to reds and browns. The rocks are worn down by winds into a similarly coloured soil that blows east into KARAKHAS in summer.

ZARAKON & TODTH: Ind. Bus. POWDERGUN manufacturers, based in lower PELASGOS, largely active between c. 2350 - 2880 RM. Renowned for their fine work in filigree and inlay, and their ornamental and ceremonial weaponry.

ZARALL DYNASTY: see DYNASTY, ZARALL.

ZAR NISHUBHAL, TEMPLE OF THE: Int. His. Str. Ancient IONIC temple, transported to the city of KHADON in KORACHAN, and rebuilt brick-by-brick, during the age of KORACHANI exploration and domination of the INNER SEA. It remains to this day, an anachronistic structure, now covered by glass, in in the high-district in Khadon.

ZARALL III: m. Per. (B. 3203 – 3288 RM). Pol. His. Historic sultan of SHAZGIN, who was assassinated by his HAREM. His cousin HAFFALIN inherited the SULTANATE.

ZARANDINE: Ser. City in the east of THE VORANDINE. It was the centre of one of the states that emerged in the chaos following the death of king VORAND in 2393 RM and is built along the course of the river MANADARAS, and is surrounded by plains made up of old silt deposits from previous courses of the river that are difficult to traverse on foot, leading to the use of stilt walkers. Winds from the east often uncover ruins from early FOURTH AGE cultures that locals investigate. The UNITED VORANDI COUNCIL has condemned this, sending Godsmen to such sites to destroy them.

It is known for its zoo, where a menagerie of flora and fauna from across the Vorandine are kept so that the Vorandi people can see what they would otherwise be denied. It also home to a large communal shrine dedicated to the GOD WHO SPEAKS that is built atop an ONEIRIC LEY where mortals are more inclined to DREAM. Inside, it is filled with deep pallets where the faithful can take mild opiates to help them relax in the hopes of being chosen by the God Who Speaks to receive a vision. Monks devoted to the God Who Speaks tend to the faithful, recording any dreams and visions as they happen (Pop. c. 48,000).

ZARARA: Geo. Island off the north western coast of DANU, to the north of the SEA OF IDALIA. It was 'discovered' and named by the explorer BOHMIUS.

ZARATABA: Set. Major cliff-side city in the east of RHEA. Originally a fishing settlement, with dwellings built on the edge of the sea-side It has, since the birth of Rhea in 1394 RM, been a hub of culture, and attracted people from surrounding lands who had been displaced from their homes, including many refugees from the PANTHEON ISLES who had been persecuted by their tyrannical rulers. This led to an ill-fated attack against Rhea, which ended in 1563 RM, with the humiliation of the Pantheon Isles whose navy was squandered on futile attacks, and whose isles became targets to pirate attacks.

Zarataba grew into a prosperous metropolis, with over 1,500,000 people by c. 1900 RM, though the waning of ELYDEN'S seas and increasing instability in the FIRMAMENTAL ARCANE TEMPERS in the region saw it dwindle, and today it is around half that size and 3-miles from the coast (Pop. c. 1,109,000).

ZARATH KORNAI, the HAMMER: m. Pol. Per. (B. 3941 RM) Highranking member of the MORÉHAN ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION. His early life was marked by unfortunate circumstances, and he is believed to have been an orphan, but he was recruited into the Order at a young age.

Officially bearing the rank of INQUISITOR, he earned his first commendations as an Inquirer posted to the colony of TAVVADRA^(1.). In 3998 RM he was sent to the PATRICIAN^(2.) class frigate ST. ACHETUNA as an attaché, where he remains to this day, enforcing the will of the ARCHPOTENTATE through his position.

He is rightfully feared for his interrogation techniques, which have uncovered numerous hidden heretical cells across territories within and without the KORACHANI EMPIRE.

ZARATTAY: Set. Settlement in the south east of RHEA. It is known for its cotton production (Pop. c. 4,000).

ZARAY: Set. Small city in the south of THE VORANDINE. Its main industry is the mining and drying of ALVELITE, which is transported west to the city of NYCARAT for further refining (Pop. c. 8,200).

ZARAZESH: Lak. Endorheic lake and expansive salt flats in the c of THE SURRACH. The lake is fed by seasonal river that gather into temporary river in the BERAGOT basin. The surface of the lake is around 180-ft. below sea-level and is believed to be the deepest point in the Surrach.

ZARB: 1. Geo. Mountain pass across the west of the RIPHAEA Mountains in the north of the UMBRA SOKHAR, linking the trade city of KAIOUDA with the rest of the Umbra Sokhar.

2. Set. Major city in the c of KARAKHAS. One of its most notable industries is the breeding of PHYLACTERS, some of which are sold to merchants travelling on the SALT ROAD, which passes through the city (Pop. c. 67,000).

ZARB, TOWER OF: Rui. Ancient mountain-stronghold in the far north of the UMBRA SOKHAR, close to the border with KARAKHAS. Its towers were toppled centuries ago, and all that remains now is the untarnished parament bearing the livery of its forgotten household. Attempts to penetrate the rubble surrounding the ruin have thus-far been unsuccessful.

ZAREN: Fau. 5-horned even-toed ungulate common to VENTHIR and TZALLRACH, though their numbers have diminished greatly since the desertification of their habitats. See Vol II: Therops.

ZARGA: Rvr. Largely seasonal river in the west of Khuraur, flowing into lake Khura for most of the year.

ZARGATANNA: Set. Fortified city in the west of KHURAUR, situated along the course of the river ZARGA. For much of its history the city was an independent entity, ruled by the self-proclaimed SCION AKHADOS since 2285 RM until his death at the hands of the GODSLAYERS in 3986 RM. Since then, the city has been under the control of Godslayer caretakes working under the Khurauri government.

It forms a part of the SALT ROAD and the sale and trade of certain goods (such as religious objects and certain resins and materials) is outlawed by the Godslayers. Many merchants have taken to circumventing the city to avoid the confiscation of their goods, but the Godslayers patrol the lands surrounding the city and will attack and destroy any merchant caravans that have avoided the city (Pop. c. 29,800).

ZARI: Ind. Set. Gold mines in the c east of the SAGGAR region of THE SURRACH (Pop. c. 4,200).

ZARIFIRA II: f. Per. (B. 3937 RM) Pol. His. Present Sultana of SHAZGIN.

ZARIN TA': Set. Fortified city in the c west of KHULL, overlooking the northern-most reaches of the MELUHULLU basin. It is the only major city that maintains a permanent district where the SAN nomads can consider their home, and where they can seek unconditional shelter (Pop. c. 24,000).

ZARNOTHUA: see St. ZARNOTHUA.

ZAROQ: Rui. Early FIFTH AGE ruin located in the ATRAMENTAL WASTELAND of QEBEL VAR, in the north west of ABACARDAT. It is now thought to have been a large citadel, and its dungeons are the target of spelunkers and explorers to this day, many of who die in the wastes of the Qebel Var before even reaching the remnants of the citadel.

ZAROSH ZULL: (B. 3952 RM) Pol. Current Archminister of TAHALL.

ZARQON: Soc. Org. One of the 17 GRAND HOUSES of the NACRE LEAGUE. The House is based in ZHARIAH and is known for its involvement in the trade of antiquities and religious artifacts, as well as alchemical ingredients and goods. It is possibly the smallest of the Grand Houses, with only a handful of small auction houses spread across the eastern stretch of the Nacre Road, though its dealings in various esoteric products have earnt it a reputation across the trade-route for rendering bespoke services to many noble houses and monarchies, sourcing specific and rare goods for them on commission. It also offers messenger services between these exclusive noble houses, offering TELEGRAPHY and courier services between them, which despite its small size has served to make it influential amongst the upper echelons of society along the trade-route.

House Zarqon also has a reputation for dabbling in the more shadowy aspects of trade, including smuggling and espionage, thought has gone to great lengths to deny these allegations, which have mostly come from rival House ORYSAI.

ZARRA: Set. Major city in the south east of VALA (Pop. c. 180,000).

ZARRI ZAKIR: Sct. Tiered city in the region of JORDALLA in the c east of THE SURRACH, known for its large date and pomegranate groves (Pop. c. 50,000).

ZARU AURGRG: 1. Geo. One of the few populated regions of the so-called 'UNCLAIMED LANDS' in the c north east of KASPIA. The region is ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED, and is a morass of fleshy swamps that exist despite the cold, oozing blood like ichor that clings web-like to the few hardy trees and knolls in the area.

2. Set. Small city to the far north of the above region in the c north east of KASPIA. The people that live there are little understood and shy away from outsiders, and have little contact with the rest of Kaspia. Its main industry is whaling, and it sustains most of the population (Pop. c. 12.000).

ZARUVA: Geo. Island off the south western coast of GNOTH, on which the statue of PANDION RATIX is situated. The island is often passed by those approaching Gnoth from the SEA OF SERPENTS.

ZASUIR'S DAGGER: Geo. (21,900-ft.) Gigantic natural stone pinnacle in the c south of MALAN, along the border between the HENDECARCHIES of STHAMAN and ATALLUA. The pinnacle appears is amongst the highest natural formations in ELYDEN and its relative narrowness only adds to the spectacle. It has fascinated MORTALS for many millennia as the carvings and graffiti in its surface can attest to. Some of these ancient records are thought to be from the earliest days of the mortal peoples, and are thought to have been left by early SEITHIN.

Today, it exists along a border in a relatively uninhabited region of the FOREST KINGDOMS and it has been largely forgotten by the people of Malan. Its present name is thought to come from an ancient explorer or champion who 'rediscovered' it in the FIFTH AGE.

ZATAL: Set. Small city in the west of the HENDECARCHY of NHORA in the north of MALAN, on the edge of the AKILLAN forest. Its main industry is the breeding of CALCATRICES for captive sale and export (Pop. c. 18,400).

ZATAUR: Dem. 'Zatauri'. Ntn. Nation in the far south west of SAMMAEA. It broke away from the once-great empire of ILLAKRAR in 2823 RM, following a great civil war that tore the empire asunder. Its government is known as the VIGESIMAL COURT. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

ZATHAL: Geo. Boulder fields in the west of TAHALL, believed to have been carried there by an ancient glacier. Some of the boulders are gigantic, well-rounded, seemingly placed there at random. The soil of the region is incredibly dark, almost black and covered in thick green moss and lichen, as are the boulders, the few plants that live here strange and native to Zathal.

ZATHAR TA': Set. City in the north west of KHULL. It was founded years ago by deserters of the SORCERER-KINGS' armies during the conflict with the KHULLAN INQUISITION, though later went on to become a productive region, and is known to day for its dye manufactories (Pop. c. 38.400).

ZATSHUR BRIDGE: Arc. Wrought-iron bridge crossing the river NHAL in ALMAGEST.

ZATTA: Set. Small city in the c north west of PNESSA. Its main industry is the quarrying of granite. There is a curfew prohibiting people from leaving their homes after dark, though the reason for this is unknown (Pop. c. 14.400)

ZAUAMM: Set. Settlement in the c north east of PNESSA (Pop. c. 6,000).

ZAUATE: Ast. Only known moon of the PLANET NIHAV. See Vol II: Planets and Satellites.

ZAURALL: Rvr. River in the c east of AQUARIIA, flowing west for 370-miles from sources in the TOLIASOR and BLACK MOUNTAINS before meeting its parent, the river ISARRA.

ZAUVIIR: Geo. Southern-most major island in the Federation of UGURIIT. ZAWABAH: Pol. Set. Capital of ABACARDAT since the rise of the ZAWABAH: Pol. Set. Capital of ABACARDAT since the rise of the IAHINN⁽²⁾ Sultanate, in 2326 RM (Pop. c. 510,500).

ZAYANOZA: (D. 3362 RM) Pol. Pirate Queen and founder of the nation DHA NAR, who in c. 3300 RM usurped control of the predecessor state of DANNAR. Her fleet, known as the FIVE SAILS, was made up of pirates and brigands from across the SEA OF SAVAEN and the DRAGON ISLES, blockaded its harbours and attacked its merchant fleet, allowing her to wrest political control within a few years. Her leadership brought great prosperity to the region and set the foundations for a powerful dynasty that remains in power to this day, and she is now considered a genius politician and economist.

ZAYAT: Set. Settlement in the south of the BAKHRAN STATES in the north west of THE SURRACH. It is known for its large forums and speaking halls, that date back to ancient cultures in the area (Pop. c. 6,800).

ZAYATA: Set. City in the south east of SHAZGIN, situated along the banks of the river ATTIL. The surrounding area is known for its water-bearing plants, which have many uses in industry, including extracting water, creating alcohol, as well as the making clothing from their dried fibres (Pop. c. 39,500).

ZAYIID: 1. His. Ntm. Extinct empire that dominated the north east of the island of Isea, occupying during its peak in c. 2000 RM present day IDRIIS, the northern half of DATEPHA and IRORA, and the easternmost reaches of DHAT.

Little is known to us of this early FIFTH AGE empire, other than it was known by its people and neighbours as a tyranny in which non HUMANS, be they SEEDBORN or GODSBORN, were subjugated as slaves. It collapsed in c. 2400 RM, leading to an exodus of former slaves and persecute people from its old territories. Its collapse left a power vacuum, from which would emerge the aforementioned nations over the next 200-years. See Vol III: Extinct States.

2. Ruling dynasty of the above empire $^{(1.)}$ which was topped in c. 2400 RM during a rebellion from which the $\underline{\text{QIADIR}}$ kindred would later emerge as a major political power.

ZAYNAL: Set. Fortified settlement in the west of the JAHADAT STATES, under the control of the city of BAKATAN. A large part of the city is located in the bottom of a crevasse, with the rest overlooking it from above (Pop. c. 7,500).

ZBALL GHAR: also 'the Chamber City'. Pol. Set. Capital of the MULL CITY-STATES. It is home to the parliament and is where the 12 yearly meetings of the chamber members take place. The city increases greatly in size during times of parliament as the retinues and entourages of the six different districts congregate amid the great amphitheatre overlooking lake ERUSK. It is a vital link in the RED ROUTE and is the eastern-most terminus of THE WAY trade-route and as such it is known for its large open-air markets (Pop. c. 171,500).

ZBANNA: Set. Small city in the c of KARAKHAS, 20-miles east of the capital in DEKANA. It is a major producer of food for the metropolis, and forms a part of both the SALT ROAD and the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 17,500).

ZEAK: Sec. Small city in the north west of PNESSA. It is a mercantile centre and trades goods with MULCIBER and the tribe of ESSENIA. A large part of its population is made up of the descendants of immigrants who moved there from the abandoned city of THEL, which was abandoned in c. 3800 RM (Pop. c. 18,400).

ZEALA: Rui. Vast subterranean Third Age necropolis, located in the south of METHUMN, in the east of the Ammashi⁽¹⁾ peninsula in Sammaea. The necropolis was rediscovered by Methumni explorers in c. 3600 RM; the first time it was opened since its sealing millennia past. The necropolis was expansive, hewn from the hard rocks of the region on dozens of different levels, and contained vast halls, sepulchres, death-chapels, Embalming galleries, and public cemeteries, amongst other rooms. To this day the entirety of the complex has not been explored and many regions lie sealed, lost and forgotten.

A boom-town, known as YEGG appeared a few miles outside the borders of Zeala, and rapidly grew rich off the sale of looted riches, though as the natural world's decay sped up and the contents of the necropolis waned. the city began to struggle, and it is now greatly reduced in size.

ZEAN: Dem. 'Zeanan'. His. Ntn. Ancient FIFTH AGE kingdom in the south east of BROR (1.), in what is now the south of the TIAMOLDORAN CITY STATES.

ZEAR: Set. Fortified settlement in the region of BACALUSIA in the c of THE SURRACH. It is known for its fine limestone (Pop. c. 8,000).

ZEBAAD: Rui. Arc. Wide-based monolith in the c of ZHARIAH⁽²⁾. It is covered in logographic text of indeterminate origin but with some similarities to certain ancient IROTHANI glyphs, which is likely a clue to its provenance. It is made from dull metal that is entirely covered in moss and minute fungi, though it is unknown if the two are related. Interestingly, shapers who observe it note a dampening effect on nearby ATRAMENTAL TAINT that has stymied the advance of the Atramental region of MANOLORA to the north.

ZECAMII: Set. Small city in the south west of PNESSA (Pop. c. 15,000).

ZEDESH: Set. Settlement in the c of MHAROKK, north of the SOLON HIGHLANDS. It is known for its vast surface mines, which during their peak production in c. 2800 RM supported a population of 80,000. Dozens of square miles surround the west of the remaining town, whose old buildings are largely abandoned today (Pop. c. 9,000).

ZEDESH NU: Geo. Pass in c MHAROKK crossing the c west of the SOLON HIGHLANDS.

ZEFAR: Set. Coastal City in the west of NALARDIL. Local legends claim that it was founded by a genius. It is a stop along the EGETAKHAN ROAD (Pop. c. 55,000).

ZEGIR OF ARRODIA: (3082 – 3143 RM) Pol. His. Baron of ARRODIA, and later King of AHRISHEN following his coup d'état in MAHSERTH in 3109 RM in the wake of the assassination of King NUSHIR II. He was the first king of the HOUSE OF ARRODIA.

ZEHETI: Set. Fortified city in the far south of AETHIOS, along the border with RHINOCOLOURA. Though relations between the two nations are strained, the city maintains regular trade with the south (Pop. c. 35,000).

ZEHINE: Geo. Mountain in WESTERN LLACHATUL, serving as a border between the south of THE VORANDINE and RAONGEN⁽²⁾.

ZEIT: Ser. Settlement in the south west of SURUTUR, in the southern foothills of the BOKKARIS Mountains (Pop. c. 8,000).

ZELATOR: Rel. Rnk. Title within the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE bestowed upon highest-ranking monk in a monastery. The Zelator is in charge of all monks within the monastery. The female equivalent is Zelatrix.

ZELATRIX: Rel. Rnk. Title within the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE bestowed upon highest-ranking sister in a monastery. The Zelator is in charge of all monks within the monastery. The female equivalent is Zelator.

ZELEKSE: Pol. Set. Capital city of EGINAZ, in the east of the nation, overlooking the BAY OF MOLTU (Pop. c. 130,000).

ZELEL: Sea. Bay in the north east of the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT. It forms part of the coastal shelf known as the NAKOSSAN WATERS.

ZELER: Set. Major city in the c east of CHEIRA, and capital city of the ninth prefecture of Cheira (Pop. c. 90,000).

ZELET: Geo. Badlands region in the south east of RHINOCOLOURA, forming its south eastern-most border with PNESSA.

ZELETH: Geo. Plains and terraced fields in the south east of the continent of BROR(1.), along the border between the north east of the DOMAINS OF SHAUATAS and the south of EMENRIST. The plains were, as recently as the mid FOURTH AGE, predominantly made up of sparse woodland, but most of this was cut down by mortals by the time of the FADING to make way for pasture and farmlands, most of which are still used to this day.

ZELGHAWALI: Set. Settlement in the c of NOAVATUR, known for its subterranean caravanserais (Pop. c. 6,000).

ZELOET: Set. Coastal settlement in the c of OKKHAM. Its main industry is clamming (Pop. c. 8,000).

ZELOPHEHEA: (D. c. 43 RM) Sup. Med. Tec. Acolyte of the shadow in the infancy of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, a polymath whose expertise lay in fields as varied as ATRAMENTISM, TECHNARCANA, EMPYREALOGY, theosophy and ESCHATOLOGY. Her immoral probings of the flesh and Atramenta ultimately gave rise to the first rudimentary Atramental body modifications, which would later introduce to the empire such grotesque creations such as UMBRANS and other VAT-BORN beings.

ZELYON: Set. Metropolis in the c north west of BELEGOR in the c west of SAMMAEA. It thrives through its use of aquifers and it is famed for its expansive vaulted cisterns, in which can be found many unique ghettos and districts whose inhabitants live most of their lives underground (Pop. c. 810,000).

ZEMAAM: Set. Settlement in the south west of NARTHEL along the course of the river LOBKIR. It is a major cultivator of ARRAKESH trees, the fruit of which are used in medicines used against ATRAMENTAL MALADIES (Pop. c. 10,000).

ZEMELA: Rel. Ast. Star worshipped by the people of ZEMELEN.

ZEMELEN: Dem. 'Zemelish'. Also 'the City of Stargazers'. Set. Independent city-state located south of the TROPIC OF MAOCARHL, in the far south east of KHARKHARADONTIS, in the east of SAMMAEA. The stone city was founded in the third millennium RM by a diaspora of BANTISH natives, who travelled south west from their homeland following the wane of their territories. These immigrants mixed with the nomadic natives of the region – an ashen-skinned race of humans with distant PLAGI ancestry – leading to them settling down by c. 3100 RM, where the natives' stargazing culture took hold.

Though many Zemelish people still follow the CHURCH OF THE NEPHILIM, a new cult has arisen that orbits around the obsession of a particular star from which the city draws its name – ZEMELA, a mythic OTHERWORLDER in the legends of the natives who is meant to return to ELYDEN in that exact location and lead the MORTAL PEOPLES into the future (Pop. unknown).

ZEMEN: 1. Rvr. Largest river in AZAZEM, dominating its eastern territories. It flows for 500-miles south west from the highlands of ANATONA, before emptying in the SEA OF BATHOS⁽¹⁾.

It's waters are largely untainted due to most industries being located in the east, though the diminishing other rivers in Azazem have seen new farming settlements appear in the lands around the river and its tributaries.

The region surrounding the river was devastated in 3088 RM, when heavy rains caused by TEMPESTARII SHAPERS working for the government in an effort to replenish the region caused massive floods that in turn led to large scale erosion of the entire Doruk region and massive landslides in the surrounding hills and mountains that left hundreds of thousands dead and displaced. The event massively altered the course of the river, shifting its course as much as 20-miles west in some places.

- 2. Lak. Lake along the course of the eponymous river in the east of the DORUK dust bowl in the east of AZAZEM.
- 3. Set. Small fortified city in the east of \underline{AZAZEM} , in the far northern shore of the lake of the same name^(2.) (Pop. c. 33,000).

ZENARCH: Pol. Rnk. Ruling caste and title in the city-state of MERN in THE SURRACH. A triad of SHAPERS and OTHERWORLDER worshippers. Their rule is harsh and they forbid the Arts under their rule.

ZENDIK: also 'the Heretics' City'. Set. City in the far south west of THE SURRACH, in the region of GAAP. It is small, and considered to be independent from Gaap, and is ruled by SHAPERS who were excommunicated from Gaap in c. 3780 RM (Pop. c. 10,000).

ZENEGE RES: also 'Umbra Veil'. Sup. Geo. Vast region of ATRAMENTAL TAINT dominating the east of TAAN AN. It has been extensively mined for UMBRA for centuries and is guarded by elite shapers known as the SHABRAZIG. The Atramental taint within the Zenege Res manifests as a thick black haze that renders long range vision almost impossible and also results in laboured breathing. Prolonged exposure is extremely dangerous to mortals, and workers must all wear softsuits if they intend on spending any amount of time there.

The wasteland is largely empty, though scattered mines and derricks can be found, which are busy with workers and small workers villages that are protected by rudimentary siphon engines. Largest of these regions are CYMMARA and IKARESH, which are the two major umbra manufacturers in the Zenege Res. The region serves as the main industry and export of the Taan An.

The region is categorised as a MODERATE THREAT by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

ZENEGE RES PIPELINE: Ind. Str. Major UMBRA pipeline in the nation of TAAN AN in the AMMASHI peninsula that links the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED regions of ZENEGE RES and UBERRET with various umbra processing cities, such as AMATIA, RYCRAAT, and CUR APON, before heading north west to URAMMALET, where it is exported at great profit.

ZENID: 1. Sea. Bay off the c north western coast of SKAROS, known for the relative fertility of its waters.

2. Set. Settlement in north western SKAROS. The region was once famed for its fishing fleets, though it is now 3-miles from the coast and its main resource is now salt, gathered in expansive pans between it and the coast, which is traded around Skaros (Pop. c. 2,800).

ZENIZAIA: Soc. ETHERI outcasts. Laws amongst the etheri nomads are harsh and individuals not adhering to these laws are branded on their forehead and cast out of their family group to wander the wastes alone. The brands mark them as outcasts so no etheri will acknowledge them.

Most either travel to civilised lands or continue to live solitary lives until they are eventually claimed by the Umbra Sokhar. The cities within the UMBRA SOKHAR care little for their marks and employ them as expedition guides in the wastes, where their talents are of great use.

ZENONA: Set. Series of around 2-dozen fortified homesteads in the region of CONCUPISCEA, known for their distinct wine-making (Pop. c. 4,200).

ZENRAS: Set. Farming expanse in the c of SKAROS, comprising as many as a dozen separate settlements over a vast area (Pop. c. 9,200).

ZEOL: Rui. Ancient temple in the south of the region of COSECETEN in the north of CHAUTULA. The temple is believed to date to the late FOURTH AGE though little clues remain as to the culture that constructed it. IT is used as a navigational tool today, and caravanserais and travellers often make camp at its foot, leading to its deterioration.

ZEONAN MALEDICTION: Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTALLY CORRUPTED region dominating the east of the island of Kaapan, off the southern coast of Laaskha. Flora and fauna that dwell in the region too long find their bodies growing tumours and getting sick.

ZEOT: Set. Small city in the east of OKKHAM (Pop. c. 20,000).

ZEPHANICHAN: 1. One of seven original CITY-STATES of KORACHAN, which were united by the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR prior to 1 RM.

2. Ind. Set. Major industrial city in the east of Korachan. It is noted for its iron-works and is known for its vast manufactories, each of which serves as the house to its slave and helot work-forces, which are proud workers and fiercely-loyal to their Patrician Houses, and who often find themselves at odds with each other over the honour of their manufactories.

The river ICHORIA, which flows just east of the city, is dammed at Zephanichan, creating the great reservoir of AGUEA, where waters befouled by countless industries, are treated, before being allowed to continue in their flow west, where they also provide electricity for its manufactories.

It is infamous as the base of operations of the organised crime syndicate known as $\underline{\text{THE HOUSEHOLD}}$, which has existed there for millennia, since the unification of the seven City-states of Korachan by the $\underline{\text{ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR}}$ led to the overthrowing of the then-ruling royal house.

Today it forms a part of the SULPHUR ROAD east with VÂRR, with large storage yards and sulphur refineries; and it also provides and repairs AMBULANTS that are used along the route. It is infamous for the legend of the GATEWAY TO THE INFERNAL REST (Pop. c. 1,038,400).

ZERAHULL: Rvr. River in the south west of EZASUH⁽²⁾, flowing east from the south of the THABAT Mountains, before meeting the coast at the SEA OF EZASUH⁽¹⁾.

ZERED: Set. Major coastal city in the north of LIDEA, renowned for its massed willow groves, which are used within the KORACHANI EMPIRE to process chemicals used in medical procedures. As a result of its importance, the city is well-protected and is home to a large alchemical college. It also forms part of both the SALT ROAD and the RED ROUTE.

The city is relatively recent, having appeared in c. 3600 RM after the receding waters of the Elyden revealed new ground, close the mouth of the river OXYS. An edict was passed in the city in 3966 RM in which all non-HUMANS were outlawed, following years of unrest and increasing bigotry. This led to an exodus of various peoples from the city over the coming years, who settled the area north west of Zered, eventually founding the shanty city of GAREA, which stands to this day despite various attempts over the years at eradicating it.

Zered remains a city of humans to this day and non-humans are not welcome, even if only visiting (Pop. c. 330,800).

ZERESH: 1. Rvr. Delta of the river GARARIS, in the north of ESHIR⁽²⁾.
2. Set. Coastal settlement in the north of ESHIR⁽²⁾, to the east of the delta of the river GARARIS (Pop. c. 5,000).

ZERESAN FLATS: Geo. Coastal plains in the west of METHUMN, to the south east of the BAY OF LRITHA. The plains stretch around 170-miles north to south to past the city of HEZAZ^(2,) and are filled with the bleached remnants of centuries-old corals and sponges.

ZERODON: Geo. Mountain in the far west of SERROK, forming a border with CHEIRA in the west.

ZERONT: Set. Settlement in the far north east of PORPHYR (Pop. c. 5,800).

ZESAKAEL: Set. City in the region of ASADAUL, in the north east of SIMBARA, in the south of SAMMAEA. It shares a common polytheistic pantheon with other cities of Asadaul (Pop. unknown).

ZESHON: Set. Major fortified city in the far north of ELEKHID. It commonly trades with MULCIBER and has close diplomatic relations with the tribes of LINARIS, NUNEA, ESSERIS, and NINIR (Pop. c. 45,000).

ZESHT: Rui. Collapsed portion in the east of the CITY OF ALMAGEST known colloquially as a home to many DEGENERATES and WRITHENS. The relative geological instability of the region, alongside its political unimportance, have allowed the populace of Zesht to remain relatively unharmed and untouched by the city's laws and dogma (Pop. c. 4,000).

ZESTA: Rel. Str. LACHRYMIST monastery in the c south of THE SURRACH, just north west of the tower of ENTOMA.

ZESTAR: Set. Small city in the north of PNESSA (Pop. c. 10,500).

ZESTOR RIM: Geo. Coastal rocky highland region in the west of PORPHYR.

ZETTRA: 1. Rui. Ruined fortress on the island of LYRNICA off the north western coast of SAMMAEA, west of the KORACHANI colony of TAVVADRA. The fortress was built in the later FOURTH AGE to defend the surface world from the caverns of Zettra, around which it was constructed. The reason behind this is unknown.

2. Geo. Large vertical cavern on the island of LYRNICA off the north western coast of SAMMAEA, west of the KORACHANI colony of TAVVADRA. The cavern leads down for some 300-ft. before ending in an expansive flooded chamber. The largest cavern is guarded by a weathered sphinx statue. The fortress of the same name was constructed around the cavern in the FOURTH AGE, its true purpose unknown.

ZEUGAO: Set. Fortified settlement in the south west of EREBETH along the course of the IVORY ROAD. It is known for its caravanserais (Pop. c. 8.800).

ZEUL: Sec. Small city in the c north west of AETHIOS. It was once situated at the edge of the lake AESAPIA, which appeared upstream of the eponymous dam, though the eventual disappearance of the lake following the dam's destruction in 3017 RM led to the city's dwindling. It survives to this day thanks to the internal trade-route that links the north west of Aethios with the south (Pop. c. 14,000).

ZEUSON: Set. Settlement in the south east of the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS (Pop. c. 6,000).

ZEUXIS: Set. Settlement in the east of KULIGALA, in the east of the CARCHEMISHI PENINSULA (1.) in the east of SAMMAEA (Pop. c. 7,800).

ZEVIIT: f. Myt. His. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, a child of the SCION SALIX and a SHIE king of the THIRD AGE in what is now the north west of SAMMAEA.

Contemporary MORTAL accounts paint her in a highly favourable light, being beloved by the people and the centre of a thriving religion that persisted for many centuries. She ruled with her husband throughout this time and left a lasting impression on the region, creating many beauteous natural spaces that over time became corrupted into vast forests, most of which are now lost. It is believed that the woodlands of AIERT in the far north west of the VESPERTINE LEAGUE are a remnant of such a place. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

ZEZIR: Rui. Expansive ruin in the north west of KHAR NADUL, in the foothills of the ACHARKHARAN Mountains. The ruin was once a large fortress that surrounded a great tiered ziggurat-like citadel, of which little now remains. It has been reclaimed by nature and it covered in the soil and flora of millennia. Few know of it, but it is famed amongst scholars for having been the centre of a great KERATIN civilisation.

ZHAANISH: Lan. Language spoken in the small state of TAL ZHAAN^(2.) and its satellite cities. It emerged from EHRENI^(2.) in c. 2900 RM following decades of KHULLAN (then INGHULL) influence from its ruler TAL. See Vol II: Languages.

ZHABLAN: Pol. Geo. Contested region along the 600-mile border between the south of TRAKIA and the north of KHALHAT covering some 25,000-square miles. In truth, the LHAUS of Khalhat claim all lands south of the GALLET LINES as their own, owing to their cultural heritage of the area, evidenced by the many ancient lhaus ruins in the region. The Trakians have no intention of 'returning' what amounts to 150,000-square miles of land to the lhaus, so they have fortified the south around the fortress of AKLON from which troops patrol the border. In Khalhat, the lhaus have built a strong defence comprising 5 major forts based around the fortress of LHOUA. Open battle is rare along the border, with both sides on the defensive, opening fire only if the opposing forces cross the border.

ZHAG CALOTHOTH: Str. Ancient granite idol in the far north of VALBAR, in the permafrost of the north western OLTHARUN Mountains.

ZHAGGÛFFRE: see THE FLESHWEAVE SPIRE.

ZHAGHAXI: Sup. Rnk. Caste of SHAPERS who are able to manipulate and influence weather who are common in HOLOLACH, where they work to calm the tremendous storms that wrack its southern coast. They are culturally and politically influential and often rise to positions of power in Hololach.

ZHAHAIO]: Geo. Cave-system in the north east of PERGOST, with links to the CHAMBER OF SOLITUDE, in the PRISON CARCERI.

ZHAKACHAN: also 'the Bleak Fortress'. Set. A military stronghold in the north of the UMBRA SOKHAR, in the south western foothills of the RIPHAEA Mountains. It is built atop the shattered ruin of an ancient SOKHARAN metropolis. It is the terminus of the TOSLETHI UMBRA PIPELINE, construction of which stalled sue to rising political tensions in the INNER SEA REGION.

ZHAKELHAAB: Oth. OTHERWORLDER reborn in the east of BROR^(1.) in 2384 RM. Immediately it was consumed by a yearning to search for its MORTAL vessel, which it found two years later in a mummified state in GHROND. It struck the vessel upon finding it, its alien fist breaking its chest and grasping a desiccated heart, which burst into flame upon being grasped. At the same time the otherworlder's chest also burst into flame, and it has burnt ever since.

The MORTALS who witnessed the event considered it a miracle and came to worship the otherworlder as a living deity. The religion of the BURNING HEART emerged around the veneration of the otherworlder and it is practiced in GHROND, KRENN, and the south of KASIHAAL.

Zhakelhaab dwells in a granite palace in the highlands of northern Ghrond, where it continues to be worshipped by various peoples to this day. It travels with a great entourage in a circuitous route amongst its faithful territories, spreading its esoteric teachings. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

ZHALL AGWEH: Geo. Ancient rock wall in the north east of the REHEMAZI peninsula in the east of PERGOST. Presently ruined, it is broken into unconnected stretches of wall, the longest single stretch of which is some 10-miles long; the remainder shattered by time and the elements, or buried beneath tightly-packed ice or permafrost.

Its purpose or age are unknown but scattered about its base are the remnants of structures and what may be dverg bones, some with inscriptions bearing remarkable similarities to the runes of S'HITH.

ZHANSHON BARAGON: (B. 3951 RM) Pol. Present ARCHEXPONENT of the UNITED VORANDI COUNCIL.

ZHARAMM: Set. Settlement in the north east of ELEKHID. Its main industry is the mining of lapis (Pop. c. 8,000).

ZHARIAH: 1. Dem. 'Zhariahan'. His. Ntn. Historical nation in the south east of SAMMAEA, occupying extant Zhariah^(2.), SHEZALIAH, and SAELEH.

It rose between c. 800 – 1100 RM from a series of smaller states, collectively known as the MEGHRANIZ BHOOKH, which roughly translates as 'otherborn territories', after the many rival dynastic HALFBLOODS that ruled its many small states. Over the course of a few centuries these halfbloods, many of whom shared the same lineage, slowly defeated each other until in 1107 RM the champion SKAETAH, had united dozens of cities and states together around the inland sea of ISTHIS. He first used the name Zhariah in c. 1170 RM and the name soon rose to prominence.

His armies marched as far west as the SHAROOK Highlands, taking settlements he found on the way. His rule was harsh and the laws of his land were equally-so, intended to make examples of those caught breaking laws, ensuring that order was maintained. His people were expert fishers, and the shore surrounding the Sea of Isthis became densely populated as a result.

The region developed into a monarchy in 1987 RM, with the HOUSE OF HINOL emerging in 2733 RM and ruling for over a millennium until 2917 RM when the death of king IAQRASHON III led to a schism within the kingdom which his twin heirs fought each other for the throne. Though his son IAQRASHA was the true heir, with the line of succession normally passing to a male heir, his sister IAQRADENNE nevertheless believed that she, being older, deserved the throne.

The civil war ended with the Iaqrasha's defeat in 2939 RM and the coronation of his Iaqradenne as queen of Zhariah. He was forced to bend the knee to her, though this never sat well with him and his followers, and after two years of humiliation they exiled themselves west into the Sharook, where they established a base in SULAMIA before moving farther west, eventually subjugating the nation of QARALAM, where he founded a new sultanate, harbouring a hatred for Zhariah that was inherited by his descendants and remains in Qaralam to this day.

The border between Qaralam and Zhariah remained a hotbed of military activity with the two nations rarely at peace for long. This state lasted for centuries until the two eventually reached an uneasy accord in 3223 RM, though Zharian fundamentalists saw this as a sign of weakness and turned on the House of Hinol. This Fundamentalist group would grow over the next centuries, eventually leading to another war that would see the kingdom fractured, its southern territories slipping away to give rise to the nation of SHEZALIAH in 3502 RM. The House of Hinol limped onwards for the next centuries until it was overthrown in 3913 by an anti-monarchist movement. See Vol III: Extinct States.

2. Dem. 'Zharian'. Ntn. Nation in the south east of SAMMAEA, to the west of SEA OF ERENEA. It is known for its dry temperate climate, ancient NYARLOTHI monuments and scattered ruins of ancient IROTHANI cities, and is thought to have been an Irothani colony in the late THIRD AGE.

It is located along an expansive MAGICKAL null, making the effects of both the ATRAMENTA and FIRMAMENT similar to if it were situated along the NULLAMBIT, so it has little direct SHAPING traditions.

Known officially as the People's Republic of Zhariah, the nation as it is recognised today emerged in 3954 RM following decades of unrest in the wake of the overthrowing of the ROYAL HOUSE OF HINOL in 3913 RM. A long-distance war with SIMBARA between 3843 – 3875 RM saw little actual conflict outside of spycraft, espionage and guerilla disruption, though it still cost Zhariah a lot of money, which left its people demoralised and politically fractured, dissatisfied with the way they had been treated by the monarchy.

The monarchy grew weaker over the next years, leading to a social revolution in which the various groups all targeted the monarchy as a scapegoat, using their OTHERWORLDLY bloodline as reason to oust them. By c. 3910 RM riots and workers strikes had become common, with the government forced to take severe measures, enforcing martial laws in many areas in order to combat the unrest. This only served to rile up the people even more, and civil war erupted in BHAL ZHARIAH in 3913 RM.

By the winter, most government and religious structures, both of which had become symbols of the corrupt monarchy, had been overtaken by civilians, stretching military forces thin, and late in the year the palace was eventually taken. The House of Hinol was ejected from the palace, with the queen and her closest family executed, with her extended family and court exiled. Most were pursued and slain before reaching the border, but some escaped to the MALANI FOREST-KINGDOM of LONAR, where they were accepted as political refugees, eventually rising within its own royal household. The old religion was eradicated and today few even remember its old name, knowing it only as the ZHARIAHAN FAITH and never speaking of it.

Despite their victory, the people of Zhariah could not settle on a ruler, and the land fractured, though a charismatic leader, the warlord RHOZHADEN, emerged in the south east of the nation, amassing a loyal following. By 3954 RM he managed to unite the entire nation whilst defending against SHEZALLAHAN attacks.

Under his rule Zhariah became an industrial power, mining its resources for its own use, selling what it did not need to nations around the ETAGIRIA, making him incredibly wealthy. Manufactories and mines have proliferated in the decades since his rise to power, and what its people see of the outside world is controlled, with contact with the rest of Elyden becoming more controlled over time. He established a slave mercenary force, known as the HYENAS, who sell their services across the south of Sammaea, and which have achieved great renown.

His obsession with the eradication of the House of Hinol has dominated his tenure as ruler of Zhariah, and special forces trained in espionage hunt across Elyden for remnants of the Royal House, particularly those who settled in Malan, which became political targets. In 3982 RM, following years of fruitless requests for the extradition of PRINCESS MARLERIE from Lonar, Rhozhaden declared war on Malan, resulting in a great many spies and operatives being sent into the HENDECARCHY in the hopes of manipulating its court. The last decades have been characterised by an amassing of troops and training off civilians in the ways of war should they be called upon to fight in the future.

The rule of Warlord Rhozhaden is harsh, and he maintains order through strict laws. Despite this, the capital city, Bhal Zhariah, is dominated by rival gangs that control stretches of its waterways who owe fealty to various political entities and noble houses from across Zhariah, many of which are openly against Rhozhaden and his rule.

The east of the nation is known for its higher-than-average proportion of mortals with HALFBLOODED features — a lingering remnant of its ancient <a href="https://halfelooded-base-sealing-remnant-base-sealing-remnant-base-sealing-base-sealing-remnant-base-sealing-base-seali

Caste-specific tattoos are common and serve to distinguish people, making it harder for slaves to escape their owners. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

ZHARIAHAN FAITH, the: His. Rel. Extinct religion what rose in ZHARIAH^(1.) between c. 1680 – 1800 RM, which elevated the ruling classes to divine ranks. This led to a schism between the lower and upper classes, which characterised the monarchy that grew from this new faith and from which the House of HINOL eventually emerged.

The religion lasted for over 2,000-years, becoming a symbol of the oppression of the monarchy, and it was eventually toppled by a revolution that culminated in 313 RM with the ousting of the royal family and the destruction of all religious structures and texts.

Almost a century later, most people have forsaken the religion to the point that its original name is no longer spoken of and few know of it, leading to the simple term Zhariahan Faith

ZHARIAN: Lan. Language spoken by the people of ZHARIAH and SHEZALIAH. It emerged from the earlier language of USHANAR MEGHRANIZ, which was spoken by the people of MEGHRANIZ BHOOKH. See Vol II: Languages.

ZHATABAAB: Rel. Obj. Chief religious texts of the EXARCHS in which the secrets of the SPIRIT-WORLD are contained. Through their use and techniques explained within, the exarchs have created GOLEMS⁽²⁾.

ZHKAA: Geo. Rocky fault running across most of south eastern TAHALL for some 380-miles. The region is incredibly rocky and prone to landslides in bad weather. It is shunned by most, not least of which because of the mild ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED wastes known as OSSOMRU that crown it.

ZHEMILACH: Ind. Set. MANUFACTORY city in the west of LIDEA, along the shores of the river SHIBBOLETH^(3.). In 3840 RM it became the birthplace of the ORTHODOX CHURCH OF RACHANAEL, a sect of the REFORMED CHURCH OF SARASTRO. To this day, the region surrounding the city is a hotbed of religious extremism, with opposing gangs made up of worshippers of the two religions clashing with each other, often leaving innocent people dead in their wake (Pop. c. 142,000).

ZHENKA: Set. City in EMENRIST. It is famed even as far away as the INNER SEA REGION for the maze that is hewn into the side of a steep cliff just outside the city (Pop. c. 18,200).

ZHETATA: Set. Fortified city in the south west of NOAVATUR. It is a source of raw umbra, which is piped to the port of KZANADEM⁽⁵⁾, from where it is shipped north (Pop. c. 35,000).

ZHI VULDA: For. Large cactus forest in the east of CANNOS on the island continent of BROR⁽¹⁾, in the rain shadow of the LAHAED Mountains. Individual trees grow to 15 – 20-ft. tall and look similar to non-succulent trees, though have thicker trunks and branches, in which they store water, and have no leaves, instead having minute needle-like hairs over their entire surface to discourage herbivores from eating them. They flower at most only once a year, and then only following a specific rain that occurs in mid to late spring. When these conditions are met, the cacti begin to flower. Over a short span of time each tree produces dozens if not hundreds of brightly coloured blooms, ranging from blood red to violet and deep purple. The flowers bloom at night and are withered by morning, and they are pollinated by the rare ZODIAC MOTH, whose life cycle is inextricably linked with that of this forest.

ZHIHALOLT: Rui. Ancient necropolis in the far north of LLACHATUL, beneath the WHITE SHEET, north of MENISCEA. Thought to date back to FOURTH AGE dverg culture, it is expansive, sprawling for miles in all directions.

ZHINNFARA: Str. Set. Fortress in the south east of PARAIYA, in the south of the region of MEGHA. The name is synonymous with the city that now surrounds it, that appeared in c. 3420 RM. The fortress was constructed to protect the many farms and farmlands in the region (Pop. c. 15,000).

ZHOFFAR ISLES: Geo. Large peninsula off the western coast of SAMMAEA, between the SEA OF NARANOR and the SEA OF LYNNAE, with mythical links to the dawn of ELYDEN, though if there was once evidence supporting this it has long since disappeared for the islands are virginal and carry very little trace of ancient life.

The isles are known in the $\underline{\text{INNER SEA REGION}}$ as the $\underline{\text{DRAGON ISLES}}$. They were appropriated by $\underline{\text{DHA NAR}}$ in c. 3620 RM.

ZHOTAXAS: Set. Coastal city in the north west of the nation of ZATAUR in the south east of SAMMAEA (Pop. c. 64,900).

ZHOULIL: Set. Settlement in the far east of MHAROKK, in the marshes of ILASIMA, known for its long history of training hippopotami as mounts (Pop. c. 4,200).

ZHUARR: Lake in the c north east of ELEKHID, forming part of the course of river IBEZUIL.

ZHUJI: Set. Small city in the c west of RAONGEN^(2.) in the south eastern reaches of the Erivoine Mountains. Its main industry is the quarrying of OMNATITE (Pop. c. 13,000).

ZHUREDDIL RIDGE: Geo. Geographical feature in the east of SAMMAEA, forming a natural border between PNESSA and ELEKHID.

ZHUREL: Set. Coastal settlement in the south west of SEDISIA (Pop. c. 8,000).

ZHUSH: Rvr. River in the c-south east of AQUARIIA, flowing west for 410-miles from sources in the REVASOR and TOLIASOR Mountains, before meeting its parent, the river ISARRA.

ZHYSALAY: Rui. Ancient abandoned caravanserai in the c east of the UMBRA SOKHAR. It was once part of the NOAVATURI TRAIL.

ZIACHAN: Rui. Ancient industrial area in the south west of PELASGOS that was once famed for its manufactories, iron foundries and chemical plants, which was notorious for its pollution and blight. It was surrounded by tailings and stood amid noxious chemical pools and other waste product from its many manufactories.

It was abandoned in c. 3700 RM and has since been allowed to rot, with most of the structures now collapsed and overgrown as nature attempts to reclaim the region. Flora and fauna have returned there, but physical corruption remains rampant, with the entire area being forbidden to commoners to enter.

ZIAMET: Set. Crossroads settlement in the west of THE OLD FOREST, in the north of the region of TAMSRAH (Pop. c. 15,750).

ZIBEL: Set. Coastal settlement in the west of NÁRTHEL. It was traditionally known for its long growing season but changing climates over recent centuries have seen its agricultural tradition waning (Pop. c. 6,800).

ZIBRAX: Set. Settlement in the west of ELEKHID, along the eastern banks of lake ADATAD (Pop. unknown).

ZIDEA: Set. Coastal settlement in the c north of GIBEAH (Pop. c. 5,000).

ZIHIMMAR DOS: m. Com. Pol. Per. (B. 3915 RM) One of the three TISRAHANS who rule the NACRE LEAGUE from the city of ENNERA in SIMBARA. Together with ANGALISH MORAD and DHACHAH TRAZI, he usurped control from the 17 councillors of the GRAND HOUSES during a tumultuous time following the declaration of war against MAENMIST.

He is a forceful and imposing figure, and his leadership style is direct and authoritative, often relying on intimidation to maintain order. Though seen as brutal by some, his followers respect his unwavering commitment to the League, and his willingness to sacrifice anything—and anyone—for its preservation. Since 3994 he has served as a general of the allied League forces in the war against MAENMIST.

ZIKHAR: Art. Obj. Fretted stringed musical instrument with roots in the west of NORTHERN SAMMAEA, which is very popular in THE SURRACH. The name Zikhar is used to describe various instruments, which can have different numbers of strings (typically ranging from 6 to 14) and which are even played differently – sometimes horizontally on the lap, or vertically, or held across the chest. They play a large role in culture and form an integral part of festivals and celebrations.

ZILANT: Oth. Form of HALFBLOOD, noted for its incorporeal wings. See Vol II: Anthropeidos..

ZILAR: His. Lan. Native name for IO. It fell from use following its subjugation by the KORACHANI EMPIRE and known now to few.

ZILARA: Geo. Plains in the west of THE SURRACH.

ZILAS: Set. Coastal settlement in the east of KARGAMA (Pop. c. 5,300).

ZILETRA: f. Pol. Mil. Soc. Per. The Sixth ARCHZEALOT of OSSIEL, serving the SOVEREIGN-MILITANT ILLATHUR. She was responsible for the rapid spread of anti-magickal rhetoric in c. 2400 RM and remains a powerful presence in Ossiel to this day.

ZILION: Set. Independent city in the region of ZILARA in the c south west of THE SURRACH. It is known for its elephant-based industries, where the beasts are used for lifting and carrying (Pop. c. 32,000).

ZILLALOR: Geo. Stone region in the c east of THE SURRACH, west of the ABOSHATHOT Mountains covered in granite pillars – remnants of erosion in the area that removed softer stone, leaving the pillars.

ZILLAS: Com. Soc. Merchant house based in the city of FENDOL in the east of KARGAMA. It has a monopoly on trade between Fendol and JALIR, in neighbouring ESHIR^(2.).

ZILPAH: Geo. Volcanically-active region in the c north east of RHEA, south of the AHRAN HIGHLANDS. The region is flat, and noted for its many geysers, chromatic springs, and sulphurous vents. It was a place of punishment in antiquity, where criminals were crucified and left to die amid the toxic fumes. Today the land is shunned and still littered with millennia-old corpses.

ZIMEITH: Set. Coastal settlement in the north west of GIBEAH. It is one of the more insular of Gibeahn nations and little is known about it (Pop. unknown).

ZIMITRA: 1. Badlands region in the c of KHULL, noted for its hewn cliffside necropolises in which have been found expansive columbariums (multiple winding rooms with shelves containing thousands of decorated urns containing the ashes of cremated mortals from an otherwise unknown culture).

2. Set. Small city in the c-south east of \underline{KHULL} , to the south of the region of Zimitra^(1.) (Pop. c. 14,000).

ZIMMRA: Set. Settlement in the c western GNOTH, along the course of the river MARAGA at the northern shore of lake CHRESTA (Pop. c. 2,000).

ZIMRI: Mil. Mus. Rnk. Wartime musicians and ralliers in JURRAS⁽²⁾, VAALK and LAASKHA.

ZINGARA: Geo. Island off the north eastern coast of Bror(1.), west of the ASCENSION ISLES.

ZINGE: Set. Isolated city in the c west of SAMMAEA, in the north west of SYNCHTHONITHA, noted for its xenophobia and its astronomer-caste that worships the star CALODIA (Pop. unknown).

ZINGHE: Str. Set. Fortress in the east of PARAIYA, in the east of the region of MEGHA. The name is synonymous with the settlement that now surrounds it, that appeared in c. 3500 RM. The fort itself was built to protect the many fields and farmlands to its west (Pop. c. 8,000).

ZINOST: Set. Coty in the north east of the HENDECARCHY of CYRENIA in the north west of MALAN (Pop. c. 45,000).

ZIRANDIA: Sea. Coastal sea in the far south east of SAMMAEA, along the southern coast of the XETEAN STATES.

ZIRITI: Geo. 1. Low mountainous region in the SARASTROAN colony of IPSISSIMA^(1.) in the far south east of SAMMAEA. it is entirely south of the southern POLAR CIRCLE and much of its area is frozen.

2. region of sporadic or permanent permafrost in the SARASTROAN colony of IPSISSIMA⁽¹⁾ in the far south east of SAMMAEA. the region lies south of the southern POLAR CIRCLE and is largely ignored by the colonists, though hunters and trappers do occasionally venture into the western-most expanse, which lies close to the capital of Ipsissima⁽²⁾.

ZIROL HARP: see HARP, ZIROL.

ZIRRATA: Set. Large city in the south of the region of TULURKRYPH^(2.) in the south of WESTERN MENISCEA (Pop. c. 52,000).

ZIRTHISH: Set. Small coastal city in the south of KOLCHIS, overlooking the SEA OF SEKHEM (Pop. c. 8,000).

ZISH: Rvr. River in the north west of LIDEA, flowing north west for 135-miles from sources in the SHIBOTHA Mountains before meeting the coast, in the SHADOW SEA.

ZITA: Set. Settlement in the c south of TZALLRACH, along the pass between the LITANI and HEBAT Mountains. Known for its ancient stone walls and towering gates, the settlement has a rich tradition of stone carving, with many of its buildings adorned with intricate reliefs depicting the region's history and the lion motif of ancient CHARATH. Despite its small size, Zita holds significant cultural importance as the site of the annual Lions' March, a festival celebrating the region's heritage and strength. (Pop. c. 8.000).

ZITERKARR: Rui. Ancient wells in the stone deserts south of the STRAMINEA Mountains in the north east of ROMOREA (2.), to the north west of KHARKHARADONTIS. There are 3 known pits in total, each within 3-miles of the others. They are around 15-ft wide, and hewn from the red rock of the region. Unidentifiable runes are carved into the walls of the pits. The pits have been explored to a depth of around 200-ft, though there is no sign of a base. There is little lore surrounding them, and the oral records of the native SAVI people fail to mention them completely.

ZITHAAN: Set. City in the centre of LAASKHA, to the east of the highlands of CAALUA. It originated as a steep hillside marble quarry in c. 800 RM and steadily grew from that. An earthquake levelled most of the settlement in 1355 RM, though it slowly rebuilt after this.

The quarry ceased operating in 2150 RM, and though the surrounding settlement dwindled, some people continued to live there, moving to the quarry itself, becoming the ancestors of the present-day city, which is completely located within the tiered levels and hollows of the quarry, their sides covered in the linear scars of cutting tools that were once used to slice blocks of limestone from the bedrock. As a result, it is known for its varied levels, each of which are accessible through gantries and walkways, with many buildings partially hewn from the remaining limestone, and whose roofs serve as the streets and floor level of the upper tiers. It is considered by outsiders as being a labyrinthine place, and locals pride themselves on their ability to successfully navigate its strangely-designed wards and districts. Dwellings with open roofs command higher prices than those lower down the city with multiple levels and other structures above them, and typically the higher tier a structure is on the more desirable it is (Pop. c. 32,000).

ZIUKBBAR: Set. Settlement in the south of SALOROC, just north of the MIRADOR Mountains. It emerged in c. 3750 RM from an earlier fort that was used by VENTHIRI armies during the WAR OF SUNDERING as a staging post for its armies before invading IO (Pop. c. 10,000).

ZIVA: Mil. Str. Major coastal fortress in the east of the AMMASHI FREE-ISLES, overlooking the bay leading to the capital city, EMMAFAIA.

ZOABAD: Lak. Lake in the south east of TARTAK, along the course of the river KHARAD.

ZOANOL: Geo. Flo. Giant coral-like mosses that grow across the c and south of MALAN, spanning labyrinthine regions within the Hendecarchies of LONAR, MYEIN, CHLORIS, and STHAMAN. The growths are often cultivated and extracted, where they are used in architecture. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

ZODD, LIBRARY OF: His. Edu. Str. Ancient tower, now partially collapsed, in the north west of the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT, in the north west of SAMMAEA. The tower and the adjoining subterranean library are attributed to an unknown FOURTH AGE culture, that is thought to have been destroyed in an earthquake in c. 800 RM. The ruins have been explored and many ancient artefacts and books have been retrieved and many chambers are thought to remain undisturbed to this day. Amongst them are some of the episodic writings of the polymath and FIFTH AGE explorer NINAVAND, dated till its destruction.

ZODIAC MOTH: Fau. Moth endemic to the dry regions of western BROR^(1.), particularly in the east of CANNOS, around the ZHI VULDA cactus forest. They spend most of their lives as caterpillars in a dormant state, living underground, sometimes for years, emerging only following spring rain (should it happen), eating the flesh of the surrounding cacti, before making a chrysalis after which they emerge as zodiac moths, so named for their nocturnal lifestyle and the star-like patterns on their dark wings. The rain also acts as a catalyst on the cacti of the surrounding forest, spurring them to flower. The flowering of the cacti and the emerging of zodiac moths from their chrysalises coincide, and the moths, which only live for a few days to a week at most, pollinate the flowers and mate, laying their fertilised eggs at the base of the trees. Once they hatch the larvae burrow beneath the soil and wait, sometimes for years, for the specific spring rain to summon them to the surface where the cycle beings again.

Fully grown moths can measure 6" long with wingspans between 8" - 10" and feature on the flag of Cannos. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

- ZOHADA: Set. Fortified settlement in the north west of the tribe of OURANASSA, in the far south west of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 4,750).
- ZOHAK: 1. Geo. Scrub plains in the south west of WESTERN MENISCEA, to the north west of in the WESTERN TULURKRYPH. The plains are faintly FIRMAMENTALLY TAINTED, with iron-hard stone formations that have been worn smooth over eons by wind and rain. The western-most reaches of the plains are home to endemic AUROCHS with large recurved horns.
- 2. Dem. 'Zohaki. Ntn. Sultanate in the west of MENISCEA, between SABAEA in the north and VARU in the south. Its north western-most reaches are dominated by shallow plains that were submerged as recently as three centuries ago.
 - *. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.
- ZOHELETH: 1. Geo. Highlands along the south eastern coast of PARTHIS, to the west of which is the depression known as the ZOHELETHI BASIN.
 2. Int. Arc. Geo. Serpent-stone in the south east of PARTHIS. A great manmade pit from which protrudes the decadent serpent-stone; relic of ancient SYBARITIC tradition.
- ZOHELETHI BASIN: Geo. Large depression in the rain-shadow of the ZOHELETHI HIGHLANDS in south eastern PARTHIS. It is a vast grass- and shrubland with sparse woodlands in the north west and is home to many vast swathes of farmlands and grazing herds.
- ZOIQUAGO: Geo. Mountain-range in the east of SAMMAEA, serving as a border between the north east of Cheira and the south west of GIBEAH.
- ZOLANDETH: Geo. Semi-arid rocky region in the far north of AETHIOS, characterised by flat-topped buttes and crumbly mesas. The region is noted for its large numbers of SOULSTONES, particularly in its north eastern-most reaches, which is known as DAGESARETH.
- ZOLIAH: Rvr. River in the north east of ZHARIAH^(2.), flowing south east for 650-miles, before meeting its parent, the river HENIAH.
- ZOLL: Set. City in the of east the MULL CITY-STATES. It forms part of the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 35,200).
- ZOLOK: 1. His. Ntn. One of many early FIFTH AGE cultures that emerged in the eastern PORPHYRI PENINSULA, dominating the stretch of land known as the HIT PHATHARLOSS, between c. -900 650 RM. They worshipped the SEA OF MIROVEA as a deity and originated the ARK-BUILDING culture (which continues in PORPHYR and SABAISA to this day), possibly as a means of revering the ocean. See Vol III: Extinct States.

 2. Rui. Ruined city in the east of PORPHYR, in the region of HIT PHATHARLOSS. It was one of the earliest ARK-BUILDING cities of the region, with remains of Arks dating back to c. 200 RM.
- ZO MAE: Set. Coastal city in the c of OKKHAM, overlooking a narrow inlet in the lagoon-like SEA OF ITAE. It is home to a major harbour and is a trading post, spreading trade goods south both over land and across the SEA OF KHURSA (Pop. c. 50,000).
- ZONARAS: Pol. Soc. Ind. PATRICIAN HOUSE with a large presence in LAASKHA. It has been the ruling house of Laaskha since 3718 RM. The house controls the saltpetre trade in the region, which is vital in the production of gunpowder, which is a major industry in the nation. See Vol II: Renowned Patrician Houses.
- ZONDA: Geo. Mountain pass in the c north east of CHEIRA, where the LABR-AGHTUL Mountains meet the ZOIQUAGO Mountains.
- ZOPISSA: 1. Sup. Geo. Region of ATRAMENTAL TAINT covering 6,000 square-miles in the north west of JURRAS^(2.), north of the plains of ALMANA that appeared with the retreat of ELYDEN'S seas in the region, leaving tainted coastal shelves exposed. The taint manifests as a liquefaction of land and solidification of the sea, rendering each in a thick jelly-like consistency, making the coastline to its west and east ambiguous. The material is known colloquially as zopissa^(2.) and is used in various trades.
 - The region is categorised as HIGHLY DANGEROUS by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.
 - 2. Sup. Obj. ATRAMENTAL substance that is collected in the above region^(1.) in the north of JURRAS^(2.). The material is mined as jelly-like - bricks with tar-like surfaces and is used in various industries. Most commonly it is strung out and turned into a rubber-like thread used in the production of iridescent garments worn by nobility and Atramentists in Jurras.

- It has also, over various times in history, been quarried and distilled into a drug, most notably used currently by eschatological cults^(3,) that have appeared in Jurras, claiming it is a stimulant, used to heighten their jaded senses in their rituals. See Vol II: Drugs and Addictions.
- 3. Org. Eschatological cult of sensation in JURRAS⁽²⁾, whose members believe that as the world is slowly ending, mortals require more and more stimuli. They are a strange mix of epicureans and solipsists.
- ZOR: Geo. Blasted plains in RHAMIA, the petrified stumps of many ancient trees encased in the uneven rocks of the region. The region was exploited by the KORACHANI EMPIRE from c. 300 850 RM, leaving the place the ruin it is today.
- ZOR AETIGHUR: Int. Rui. Reptilian-featured colossus in c southern RHAMIA. It is one of four such colossi in the region, attributed to SERAPI slavers from the FOURTH AGE.
- ZOR FAEDALUR: Int. Rui. Reptilian-featured colossus in the far north west of AHRISHEN. It is one of four such colossi in the region, attributed to SERAPI slavers from the FOURTH AGE.
- ZOR GORUGOTH: Int. Rui. Reptilian-featured colossus in the c south of RHAMIA. It is one of four such colossi in the region, attributed to SERAPI slavers from the FOURTH AGE.
- ZOR HEIL: Int. Rui. Reptilian-featured colossus in the c south of RHAMIA. It is one of four such colossi in the region, attributed to SERAPI slavers from the late FOURTH AGE.
- ZOROSOG DASCH: Rui. Ancient monument located in the south east of AKACHA in SOUTHERN SAMMAEA taking the form of nine large pylons arranged in a circular formation, arching towards each other, pointing towards an unseen crux. It is expansive, covering a large area, and is shunned by most, who believe old superstitions.
- $\overline{\underline{\text{COROTHOT}}}$: Rui. Ancient buried city in the north west of the $\overline{\underline{\text{EPHOT}}}$ $\overline{\underline{\text{THAS}}}$, in the c of $\underline{\underline{\text{ANUBIA}}}$.
- ZOSHAMA: Geo. Dry plains dominating the north east of I'THANA.
- ZOTHAGOT: Set. Settlement in the c west of the territories of ETHISTONITH in RHINOCOLOURA. It is a major breeder of camels that are used in trade in the region (Pop. c. 8,000).
- ZOTHOGG: Rui. Ancient ruins in the far south of KARAKHAS; carved out of a granite cliff-face, covered in odd hieroglyphs. They were overgrown until 732 RM, when KORACHANI explorers cleared the area and entered the hewn caverns within, never to return. Caves in the area lead to the underground network known as QABARRU, in the west of PARAIYA.
- ZOVETHYL: Set. Settlement in the east of KOLCHIS (Pop. c. 4,820).
- ZOWAS: Arc. Monument in the west of KREM, just west of the capital of AM ONKRET. The monument depicts the two ACACINNATHI founders of Krem, facing west.
- ZRIEL OBAKKH: (B. 3509 D. 3575 RM) Pol. Demagogue and resistor whose actions brought about the coalition of 17 disparate states, which together became known as the OKKHAMI FEDERATION in 3569 RM. He remains a cultural hero amongst the states of the Federation to this day.
- ZSAULOT: lit. 'the offering tree'. Flo. An ancient petrified tree in the plains of the far north of the UNCLAIMED LANDS. The tree is stuffed with the remains of sacrificial victims, their culture extinct millennia past. They were mummified through a mix of EMBALMING and the cold climate of the north, and they remain undisturbed, their pain-wracked faces emanating an unsettling aura that rare explorers in the region have commented upon.
- ZSINY YURKHOT: Sup. Fir. For. FIRMAMENTALLY-TAINTED rainforest in the far north of KASIHAAL in in the north east of the Island-continent of BROR (1.). Trees here have ferrous trunks that oxidise with prolonged contact with air. Their foliage has a red tint to it and their fruit is metallic and bitter to taste. This woodland is shunned by mortals, though is a haven to Firmamentally-altered flora and fauna alike.
- ZUBEREVH: Geo. Ancient weather-work monument carved from a cliff-face in the south east of the NEGUAR Mountains in the INTERURBAN

STATES. It is thought to date back to the THIRD AGE, though little is known about it. The cliffs below the gigantic carving are riddled with hand-hewn caves, their original purpose and contents long-since forgotten.

ZUHAL: Ser. City in the south east of the JAHADAT STATES, in the east of SAMMAEA, and capital of one of the twelve States (Pop. c. 47,500).

ZUHEHUTAUN: Set. City in the south of ZATAUR, in the far south of SAMMAEA (Pop. c. 50,000).

ZUIZETH: (11,660-ft.) Geo. Volcano in the eastern face of the YANAVASH Mountains.

ZULEICA WHITEMANE: (B. ? – D. 3862 RM) Sup. TZALLRACHI paladin and Firmamentist who in 3857 RM undertook the quest of the LEADEN THRONE – her objective, to slay the UNDYING MACHINE. Zuleica defeated the champion NAILLA BEATRIX, though later died of her injuries against other guardians of the SEPULCHRAL PALACE outside the temple of JUPITER BELUS. Her body was carried north during the 3rd SHADOW MARCH of 3862 RM, where it eventually returned to her home in SIMHAPARRAN, outside of which it is buried and guarded to this day.

ZUMA: Ser. Small fortified city in the south of the nation of ENITH in the north west of SAMMAEA (Pop. c. 13,000).

ZULNA: Set. Fortified settlement in the west of SOGASSA (Pop. c. 8,000). ZURACHAA: Set. Settlement in the c of DURCHAA^(1.), along the eastern shore of lake THYTHIA (Pop. c. 4,200).

ZURBAPH ODA: Set. Small city in the north of OKKHAM (Pop. c. 18.300).

ZURIABEN: Pol. Set. Capital city of ALBASSITA, located in the c south of the nation, It is a centre of FIRMAMENTAL study, at the centre of which is a large college housed in a wide tower. It is also major a stop along the EGETAKHAN ROAD (Pop. c. 800,000).

ZURVAN: 1. Lak. Lake in the c north east of GNOTH, along the course of the river NEPHOT.

2. Geo. Island in the eponymous lake in the c north east of GNOTH.

3. Rel. Str. Monastery in the c north east of GNOTH, located on the eponymous island. The monastery is one of the seven MONASTERIES OF THOUGHT and believes that gnosis can only be attained through material knowledge, and it is known for its exhaustive libraries.

ZURYA: Ser. Independent city and enclaved territory in the south east of SOUTHERN SAMMAEA. It is one of few surviving cities that were once part of the nation of THYSHIA, that was destroyed by prolonged volcanic activity culminating in the eruption of the IMENAZZI caldera in 3876 RM. Though most of the nation was displaced, forced into neighbouring states as refugees and migrants, Zurya was one of few cities that stubbornly continued, defying the expanding borders of neighbouring nations to remain an independent state.

Its people are stubborn and hard-working, and a large portion of its population are survivalists and hinterlanders, living in the wildernesses surrounding the caldera. Though the region was reduced to a wasteland in the decades following the eruption of 3876 RM, nature has since reclaimed it with fresh woodlands now covering a vast swathe of southern YSACYITHAIA, which Zurya is surrounded by.

Its main industries are logging, hunting and trapping, and much of its produce makes its way to BELERBYRIA – another independent city descended from Thyshia – for export elsewhere (Pop. c. 42,000).

ZUSANDAR: Set. Small city in the west of TATAR, in the north of SAMMAEA (Pop. c. 18,000).

ZUTH: 1. Set. Small city in the north east of IO, along the route of THE SHADOW MARCH. The city is known for its vast OLIVE groves and its large hostels, which serve those undertaking the March, (Pop. c. 8,500).
2. Set. Farming settlement in the c north of VENTHIR, to the east of the plains of HAMSHEN. It forms a part of the RED ROUTE, and provides food and provisions to travellers passing through its borders (Pop. c. 6,000).

ZUTRAS: m. Pol. Per. (B. 3949 RM) The current ANAGURAM of HABOT, who was elected by lottery in 3981 RM. At the time of their selection for the electoral lottery he was little more than a minor landowner from UVVADA, with a few families working on his land. He is regarded as competent and benevolent and is liked by the people, though has made enemies of the merchant lords of IKRARA over the matter of taxation some years ago.

ZYCHE: Geo. Roughland region in the south of THE VORANDINE, serving as a border between the ZEHINE Mountains in the south and the IDREGAN Massif in the north.

ZYLAR: Set. Settlement in the c north east of KARGAMA, to the north of the ONCETHMUS Hills. Its main industry is the mining of pyrite (Pop. c. 6,200).

ZYOTO: Sup. Geo. Badlands region in the far south of SHAZGIN, to the north west of the Wastes of VERMES that is famed for its shroud-shaped stone stacks and eerie geological formations. It is believed to be a link to the OTHERWORLD, which is somehow able to exert some form of physical influence on the land, resulting in the strange rock formations. Indeed, people native to the area and nomads who have passe through the land for generations all believe that GHOSTS and SPIRITS (1.) haunt the region, and it is thought that more OTHERWORLDERS are born there than elsewhere in ELYDEN.

ZYRIA TALITH: f. Per. (B. 3940 RM) High-ranking member of the ARÂTHUAHI ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION. Zyria is a powerful figure in the Order's internal politics, and her opinions and decisions carry considerable weight in the strategic planning and direction of the Order's activities. Her counsel is often sought by other high-ranking members, including JUSTICIARS, HIGH INQUISITORS, and even the GRANDMASTER himself, ABDASTARTUS ANAAH.

Misc

O-MILE MARKER: Int. His. Obj. The original mile marker in KHADON, dating back to before the conquest of the SEVEN CITY-STATES by the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR. All other milestones in the nation of KORACHAN as well as some continental vassals relate to this. It is now located in the middle of the city of Khadon in a small shrine outside an amanuensis guildhall.

20-MONTH WINTER, THE: see Mt. Klauvakan Calamity.

??: For. Expansive pine and spruce woodlands that dominate the island of ARCHAEDON⁽¹⁾. Of note is a minor FIRMAMENTAL overlay to the north east of the woodlands' expanse, that encourages wood growth and has left the barks of many trees hardened and pale in colour.

CREDITS

This tome is the culmination of my work on the conworld of Elyden. I have been living and adding to this world (in my head at least) since around 2004, when I was between jobs and trying to find a way to occupy my time. What started as a (long-since aborted) novel has since turned into a worldbuilding project that now occupies most of my free time.

For the past seven years I have been supported in my endeavour by my Patrons, and here is a list of all current supporters, whose patronage helped me work on Elyden.

DEMIURGE

Impesio, Justin Holt, Gabriel Robles

SHAPER

Margo Clarke, Marcus, Johannes Wild, Charles Moore, Matthew Cowart, Ben

ACOLYTE

George Taray, Evelyn, withintent, Timothy Kilgriff, Count Thalim, Raphael SUDROT, Rapscallion, AdmiralEm, Mark Smylie, Mark D Booth, Jakob, Conrad Staier, Jason Pyle, John Ess, Mike Conley, Matt Bogen, Pipe, Samir R, Jarod Long, Johannes Paavola,, Rightly, Dan Strand, Stephen Rubin, Carl Speakman, Astrofrancky, Talarius Gaming, david beach, Sergio Somalo San Rodrigo, Alex Kraemer, Kenneth Tessman, WatTyler, Dennis, Tomasz Marciniak, Huw Williams, Valkieri, Benjamin Michael Kimball, Duane Sibilly, Charles Norris, Luke Rowan, Joshua Mulvaney, John Stanton, Charles Town, Bearclops Gaming, Kergan, Aurelien Martins Sardinha, MisterFlowers, Spencer Russell Smith, Joseph Hackworth, Aaron Boomhower, Jesper Franck, nikkiro, zoqaeski, Ecl Wor, Ryan Watson, Thomas Webb, Reeker, Jim Roberts, Ashe Winter, Matt Lee, Barry, Austin Reyna, Adam Weller, Francis Lilly, Kenneth Tessman, ShiftyAlbert, Dean Clark, Terrafan, Mojave, J.B. Gibson, Jhaquez Harrison, Raymond Deuel, Brian Sedillo

FOLLOWER

S Jones, Joanna Farrugia, Richard Rogers, Christopher Martin, Kenneth Grim Nyhagen-Fosse, Mechanical Muse, Royal Frazier, Nessel, Artifexian, Alex, Treijim, Ryan Davidson, Ben Cochran, Urban, Emilie_M, Zheym, Brambies, Aandeg Muldrew, Edward Greenslade, Simon Kay, Jacob Kauhane, V, Ryan Young, Alex Macdonald, UFGame, Justin McCubbin, Pedro Rubio Tejero, Warren Taylor, Orgoj, Ashanti Major

Zalezsky

You can follow my work on WWW.WORLDOFELYDEN.COM and WWW.PATREON.COM/ELYDEN

> N. S. Mangion, October 2024