Introduction

riginally appearing in the Year 848 of the reign of our most benevolent Archpotentate Malichar (RM), the Encyclopaedia Elyden was intended as a core glossary; a compendium of the sum of mortal knowledge until that point, or at least the collected knowledge of the Korachani empire and its people. Granted, such knowledge was only available to the upper echelons of the empire's society as most of its populace were illiterate and had no time or inclination to digest such information, though it was there: the totality of the Korachani empire's knowledge bound within a single volume for the first time in the Fifth Age of Mortal Life. Should one choose to enlighten oneself thusly.

The original Encyclopaedia Elyden was far from the first such compendium. One can trace the first Korachani Natural History of the World to the 2-volume 'Collected Histories' by Morlhar the Elder in the year 142 before the Reign of Malichar. The first volume of the Encyclopaedia Elyden built upon the knowledge of the 'Collected Histories' (much of which remains correct to this day), through the travels and discoveries by St. Esperion, though even with the aid of past visionaries it was miniscule when compared with later multiple-volume editions, and was rife with incorrect assumptions, half-truths and pure misinformation, much of which was simply nonsensical or even comical when viewed with the smug detachment brought about by current advances in scientific theory. The 848 RM edition largely concerned itself with ancient histories, the (now outdated) categorisation of Elyden's fauna and flora, and served as a directory of nations and their people, many of which have since gone extinct. In addition, it also contained treatises on mythologies and other esoteric subjects, in particular early studies into the rediscovery on the nature of the Atramenta and the Firmament. Those studying the period in which it was penned could do worse than read the original edition of the Encyclopaedia Elyden as it serves as a fascinating glimpse into life of the age.

Later editions of the Encyclopaedia built upon what had come before, correcting, altering and slowly adding to the empire's wealth of knowledge. The so-called age of discovery that gripped the Korachani empire between 950 & 1100 RM saw an explosion in land exploration and a similar period, between c. 1300 & 1450 RM led to the charting of its oceans and cataloguing of distant lands and peoples through many crusades and expeditions, leading to many new discoveries. Scientific and alchemical innovations followed and with every new breakthrough and discovery – the unravelling of umbriska, perfecting the Atramental arts into technarcane processes that is recognisable in most developed nations today, the consolidation of the Seven laws of Alchemy and so-on.

The 3359 RM edition saw a major overhauling of the volumes and was the first step in the long process that led to the volumes you hold now. Every entry was deconstructed, updated, reformatted and reset and it was sorted into five disparate volumes, a format that has been kept to this very day. Many plates were remade to match new discoveries or to update old ones based on the passage of history and advancements in scientific theory. It was a categorical success and remains one of the most sought-after editions amongst collectors, despite its relatively distant publishing date. This was no-doubt helped by a foreword written by the Archpotentate Malichar himself: an extremely rare honour indeed.

The world we now live in is greatly changed. Once-great nations are on the wane and the wildernesses that once stood between them have become a harsh barrier through which travel is difficult. Seas are drying up and the natural world shrieks as it adjusts to its new laws, if such we may call them. Sleeping gods pollute the landscape around them. Elyden is become a changed world, and we must treat her as such, to be examined and catalogued as though we were exploring her for the first time. We hope that this tome can help in the taming of this new unruly world, and pray that we have not reached the end of our time.

This edition is the culmination of attempts to categorise this chaotic, dying world. Despite our greatest efforts, our resources are not what they once were and contact with distant lands has dwindled. Every entry has been updated to reflect changes in the natural and political world, and while every effort was taken to do so carefully, no responsibility can be taken for incorrect or outdated entries.

It is likely that many regions and settlements detailed in the following pages are now changed or may no longer exist. The countless varieties of flora and fauna described may likewise now be extinct or radically changed in the wake of the cycles of the Arcane Tempers. Borders have waxed and waned more in the past decades than they have in millennia and the task of keeping track of them is thankless and dangerous, for direct surveying is necessary in most cases. Regional histories, likewise tempestuous in these changing times under the long shadows of dying nations, are difficult to unearth.

Every warlord or tyrant seeks to aggrandise his own accomplishments and belittle those of his neighbours, rendering the task of unbiased collating of data difficult, if not outright impossible.

In this grey age, known not for its mighty empires or glorious armies, but rather its hollow metropolises and suffering wretches, scraps of history may yet lie undisturbed, unknown to all but those who experienced them first hand. One would otherwise need to sift through miles of decaying corridors within the old capital and countless mouldy repositories without, most of which have lied undisturbed for decades, or worse: lie ruined, their knowledge and secrets lost. For information pertaining to more distant lands and esoteric subjects, one must search even farther, deeper, for those who survive in positions of power do not share their knowledge lightly.

Regardless, what remains of her nation's accounts, treatises, essays, theses, and histories, must first be unearthed: a task rendered all the more difficult by the painstaking cataloguing of each entry; the dividing of individual works into those of fiction, fact, or distortion; the cross-referencing of each entry with others pertaining to the same subject or era; the searching for errors (both those mistaken, and those deliberate); the discarding of erroneous transcripts or translations; the additions of plates and etchings where necessary; the typesetting of pages; their printing, binding; and finally, after no little amount of work, their publishing in book form for the prosperity of mortals the world around.

This is not to mention the dangerous work that our field researchers must face on a day-to-day basis. Our historians, mythographers, cartographers, genealogists, researchers and countless others, must leave their musty offices to explore this darkening world to document changes that took place during recent wars and political upheavals. Cities have fallen, to be replaced by new ones as-yet unmarked on the Atlas Elyden. Entire regions have changed following the corruption of natural land by the Materia Omna. Once-wastelands have begun to recover as others wane under the shadow of drying seas.

It is a task, many would agree, far easier said than done.

Some may look with horror at the torture that goes into researching a volume such as this, and they would not be wrong. The author prays that his labours have not been wasted. He has sat in his chambers researching this tome for what feels like an eternity, where in fact it is but three decades. He inherited this task from his mentor, Azhar of Korachan, as he inherited it from his master, and already the author instructs his successor for the mammoth task that lies ahead of her.

What follows is a general overview of the land called Elyden, her history and events – from the mythical and near-forgotten to the recent and still-evolving – and all creatures and objects that have and still do call her home. The author hopes that this may be of practical use to some and of esoteric interest to others.

The Editor-in-Chief, Agaliar Hashmaim of Eleogach 4006 RM

A Note on Entries

Although this volume forms part of a greater collective, the contents herein-found may be perused without knowledge of or need for reference to the other volumes in the series, though choosing to do so might grant readers with enlightenment on a myriad of specialist subjects beyond the scope of what this volume seeks to cover.

Encyclopaedia entries are arranged in ascending alphabetical order and individual pages are labelled for the researcher's ease of reference

Each new entry in a page is clearly labelled in FULL CAPITAL, BOLD, AND UNDERLINED text, and is followed by the descriptive text which may vary in length between entries. Any pertinent information in the descriptive text with its own entry in this, the First Volume of the Encyclopaedia Elyden, will be listed in UNDERLINED CAPITALISED TEXT, informing the reader that he may peruse more information on the subject by finding the entry of the corresponding name.

Units of Measurement use traditionally-accepted imperial norms; the Korachani mile and tonne being foremost amongst them.

Entries with multiple naming conventions will be followed by disparate numbered entries under the same headers. Similarly, references to specific entries with multiple numbered entries will specify which numbered entry they are referring to, in uppercase.

A note on Nomenclature

This reference volume is presented from a Korachani viewpoint, as are the accompanying volumes in the series.

As a result, many of the entries use the Korachani name or term for them, unless otherwise specified. It is most noticeable with regards to foreign place names, many of which are listed under the more well-known or understandable Korachani names or transliterations of native names. Due to this, many otherwise unrelated place names may have similar or identical names, as those were the names given to them by Korachani explorers, often using a Korachani word to describe the place.

Examples of this are the names Bassorah and Ghalletha, which appear in various areas across Elyden. In Korachani, bassorah means crossroads, and many foreign lands or places encountered by explorers were given that name, irrespective of whether the name had already been used elsewhere. Similarly, ghalletha means wasteland, and the name has been given to various areas across Elyden in different times.

Many entries will also contain abbreviations following the bold underlined entry name as a form of shorthand quickly identifying what the entry is regarding. These abbreviations are summarised below for ease of reference:

VOLUME THE FIRST

Being in part a Core Glossary of Elyden, and in part a Dictionary of Terms

'A CIVILISATION THAT HAS NOT YET FALLEN HAS NOT YET
FULFILLED ITS POTENTIAL! Lan. Soc. Common nihilistic saying around the INNER SEA REGION. It is representative of the many empires that have come and gone throughout the ages, and also means that even things doomed to fail are not necessarily failures or without value.

'A CLOSED MIND IS LIKE A LOCKED DOOR! Lan. Soc. Saying common in THE VORANDINE that best encapsulates the character of its people – inquisitive, and open to learning, perhaps in defiance of the ignorance that proliferates in the east. The rise of the UNITED VORANDI COUNCIL over the past decade has seen this mentality challenged by its GODSMEN policing force, which seeks to subjugate its own people.

A CORONACH TO ELYDEN: Art. An epic poem written by BLANESCHI

WALLIA in c 2910 RM that popularised the term MORIBUND EMPIRE in reference to the KORACHANI EMPIRE. Though the cumbersome text is now largely ignored, the term remains somewhat popular, especially south of THE INNER SEA, where it used in a derogatory fashion.

A NEW HISTORY OF ELYDEN: Vol. 17-volume historical treatise penned by the polymath LUNTEV in the last decades of his life and published posthumously in 3670 RM to much acclaim. The work has made its way across ELYDEN, where it sits proudly in major collections in every continent. Though many facts presented therein are now outdated and superseded by the ENCYCLOPAEDIA ELYDEN and other modern volumes it remains a valuable work, as it shows in great detail a historical timeline of MENISCEA and EASTERN LLACHATUL, which is invaluable for the corroboration of extant knowledge.

A SAVI: Geo. Mountain in the north west of AHRISHEN, running 680-miles from west to east, forming a natural border between the DESOLATION OF ASTUDAN, which lies in its rain shadow, and the south eastern reaches of THE OLD FOREST. THE CHILD'S ESTUARY is located along its south-facing slope, at the source of the river SAVEST. Its southern-face is made up of sparse montane forests that are watered by many streams and rivers that lead into the AHRISHENI WATERWAYS.

A'NOTHA: Set. Fortified settlement in the region of FURUD in the c west of THE SURRACH. The government there is known to restrict free speech, with the only available newspaper being controlled by the rulers and used for propaganda (Pop. c. 6,000).

AAAM: Geo. 1. An inimical hydrothermal system situated in the north of KHARKHARADONTIS, around the cinder cone volcano of the same name⁽²⁾. It is noted for its unearthly colours, ranging from yellow, orange, and brown minerals, to blue and green pools, which are corrosive; and its noxious gases, which render it uninhabitable to most MORTALS. Indeed, there is little, if any, flora and fauna to be found there.

2. (11,250-ft.) Cinder cone volcano in the c north of KHARKHARADONTIS. It is responsible for the above^(1.) hydrothermal system that dominates the surrounding area.

AABAR QAREM: also 'City of Paradise'. Set. Major metropolis in QARALAM that emerged from an ancient oasis. Today it is famed for its large carhedral-like cisterns.

Until a few decades ago, the city had a significant problem with crime lords, who had entered in agreements with the then governor, Aham Zemor to take a share of trade profits. The deep-rooted crime-guilds were eventually eradicated in 3961 RM by governor Mejnoun Abardouf.

Aabar Qarem is known to foreigners as the City of Paradise (an ancient name dating back to its origins as an oasis waypoint), and this misnomer draws hundreds of destitute people to the city each year from all over Qaralam and beyond, leading to a growing shanty town outside the city proper. Many of these migrants are press-ganged into the Qaralami army, enticed by promises of food and lodgings (Pop. c. 150,000).

AADAX: Rvr. River in the west of THE SURRACH, flowing south west for 200-miles from sources in the BROCHITTER Mountains, before meeting its parent, the river BRUD.

AADAZIR: Set. Fortified settlement in the c of KAZZAR^(2.) along the southern foothills of the OZZARUN Mountains. Its main industry is iron mining and its southern slopes are covered in tailings that make travel across them very difficult. The environs surrounding the city are known for their RUST SLUGS, which have become a pest in the settlement (Pop. c. 4,800).

AADRO CIRRIS: m. Med. Per. (B. 2551 – D. 2689 RM) Surgeon and FLESHWRIGHT who spent decades building upon centuries of research in the science of PALINGENESIS, finally giving birth to the first complete successful MORTAL CLONE through palingenesis in 2613 RM.

The mortal was a perfect clone of himself and outlived him, though never developed the yearning for anatomical and cloning research that his PRIMOGENITOR did. The clone's fate remains unknown, though it is suspected by many to have been used as a source for organs, blood, and skin that Aadro kept for use on himself if needed, possibly explaining his longevity.

AAHES: Sea. Sea off the north western coast of NORTHERN SAMMAEA, off the northern coasts of ERET^(2.) and IZABAL^(1.).

AAHING: Set. Coastal settlement in the far south west of RAONGEN⁽²⁾, overlooking the BAY OF ESHINII⁽¹⁾. Once a small fishing village, Aahing has grown in recent decades due to its strategic location near AMBER deposits along the coast, attracting traders and prospectors from across the empire. It is known for its tight-knit community, where ancient traditions are fiercely preserved despite the encroaching influence of industrialization from the more urbanized regions of Raongen. (Pop. c. 6 200)

AAHMAS: Mil. Rnk. BASSORAH^(1.) (crossroad) guards in SUOR. They have a relatively high social status and are well-equipped, working shifts that last entire seasons, living in nearby crossroad towers. The importance of the crossroad determines the number of aahmas and size of the tower that guards it, with major highway intersections often being fully defended, with major fortresses covering them, forcing travellers to pass under them. Aahmas also patrol the hinterlands surrounding crossroads for people who intentionally bypass checkpoints.

AAKHA: Set. Settlement in the far north west of LAASKHA. It was originally founded as a centre of logging operations in the ARPAROH forest. Following the destruction of the forest, most of the logging settlements were deserted, with people moving to Aakha, which remains now as a centre of horse-rearing famed across the KORACHANI EMPIRE. Aakhan horses are traded with merchants travelling along the RED ROUTE, which passes through the settlement (Pop. c. 5,500).

AALABA: Set. City close to the region of PHYLON in the east of TARTAK. It is renowned across SAMMAEA, particularly in KARAKHAS and JURRAS⁽²⁾, for its breeding of PHYLACTERS.

Historically, most of its trade revolved around the exporting and raising of these exotic creatures, though following the \underline{FADING} of the $\underline{FIFTHAGE}$, this practice diminished largely due to dwindling numbers of phylacters as $\underline{MORTALS}$ encroached on their territories (Pop. c. 34,000).

AALARAD: Rvr. River in the south east of TARTAK, flowing for 420-miles before meeting with lake KASABAD and its parent, the river KHARAD.

AALARIS: Set. Principal city in the region of ILLASAN in the south of JURRAS⁽²⁾, known for the expansive grain, barley, and cotton fields that surround its walls, as well as its textile MANUFACTORIES. It forms a part of the RED ROUTE, and many of its textiles are sold to merchants travelling along the route (Pop. c. 46,200).

AALISSA O ALMAGOTA: Per. F. (B. 3919). Current ARCH CHANCELLOR of ALMAGEST. A native of the city of UMMARA, she grew up she was elected to power in 3983 RM and is popular amongst the nations' citizens and electorate, and is known for her increasingly right-wing and socialist policies, which are the result of decades of slow changes orchestrated by her predecessors and the republic council.

AAMAGH: Dem. 'Aamaghi'. His. Pol. Set. Ancient city in the realm of HARA^(1.). Civil war in the region saw Aamagh take control of many coastal settlements around the SEA OF DERAEA, becoming capital after its armies took the old capital in Hara in c. -875 RM. By c. -860 RM the city had become a major trading centre, serving trade-routes linking the KINGDOM OF AMNATH in the south west, with IPHIGENA^(1.) to the north east. It would later evolve into the city of AMAGER.

AAMINA: Pol. Set. City in KAZZAR^{(2.),} and its capital since 3462 RM. The city has served as a major base to the GODSLAYERS since their arrival in Kazzar in 3148 RM, growing steadily as it attracted followers from across ELYDEN (Pop. c. 1,090,000).

AANIME: Set. City in the c west of TZALLRACH, in the forest of OKONER. It is a major source of wood for the capital, and is known for its carpenters and woodworkers (Pop. c. 24,500).

AANTH: Plr. 'Aantha'. Mor. Grotesque corrupted form of ASICTHAI native to N'RAKH that are thought to have emerged in the SECOND AGE from an unverified MORTAL bloodline likely following prolonged exposure to ATRAMENTAL TAINT.

Standing between 5- and 6-ft. tall, their bodies are hunched, of spindly limbs and paunchy gut, with thick skin that varies between rough and chitinous between individuals, sometimes even on the same specimen. They have large black featureless eyes, and specimens have been recorded having more than a single pair, sometimes arranged haphazardly on their faces. Similarly, it is not uncommon for individuals to have errant limbs, usually vestigial and unsightly and rarely fully functioning.

Such specimens are thought by aanth communities to have been blessed by their god, $\underline{MAALKAT}$, and are often chosen to be $\underline{ATTERKHATS}$ and may go on to become \underline{SHAMEN} . Careful study shows that aanth bodies are closely attuned to the $\underline{ATRAMENTA}$. Though they are stronger at withstanding its effects than other humanoids despite their apparent physical corruption.

Aantha live in small semi-nomadic family groups known as SODALITIES, generally consisting of a single dominant female, a handful of K'HAT champions and many young. A few aanth settlements do exist despite their natural dislike of large groups, the largest of which is known as EKALLU (more commonly known as THE SILKEN CITY). See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life Asicthain.

AAORA: 1. Geo. Major highland area dominating the c south of AZAZEM, running for c. 300-miles across the nation. It is known for the many DUSTSTONE formations along its northern face, which are prone to collapse and landslides, making travel in the area difficult. The AISHAN Badlands are perhaps the most well-known example of these formations.

Its southern face is a source to many rivers that flow south into THE INNER SEA and the SEA OF BATHOS (1.), though many more have since run dry or become despoiled by the unfettered DROSS industries of the nation.

2. Lak. Endorheic lake located in the c south west of AZAZEM, to the west of the AAORA Mountains. It is relatively shallow and a few streams and rivers low into it, though it has no permanent outlet. It is thought to have once been much larger though has slowly waned in size throughout the FIFTH AGE. It has been known to flood in hot summers, and harsh winters, causing an overflow to the west, leading to the river EPHANOSH.

AAQU: For. Dense jungle in the c east of PNESSA. It is largely uninhabited but is said to be infested with AANTHA and their organic resin refuges, making it dangerous for HUMANS and other MORTALS to travel through. The fortress of KUUDRII guards its northern-most reaches and periodically sends soldiers into Aaqu to cleanse it of any perceived threats.

AAREN: 1. Geo. Island off the north western coast of THE SURRACH, in the north west of NORTHERN SAMMAEA, forming one of its many regions. Its natives were believed to have MAGICKAL power over waves & wind and are said to capture ships for plunder to this day.

2. Sea. Sea off the north western coast of THE SURRACH, between the island of Aaren^(1.) in the west, and the Surrachi mainland to the east.

3. Pol. Set. City-port and capital located on the north west of the eponymous island^(1,), which is known for its fine seafood and expert salvagers. Ancient legends of widespread MAGICKAL traditions of controlling waves & wind are largely unfounded, but its rulers are thought to be shaper who have power over weather (similar to TEMPESTARIIN) (Pop. unknown).

AARRUAM: Geo. Ridge in the c north west of THE SURRACH running for some 200-miles, dividing the KAILIK from the SHAAT LOTHA. It serves as a border between the regions of SCABRIA^(1.) and DAKTRA.

AART: 1. Geo. Island off the eastern coast of VAALK, 45-miles off the coast.
 2. Set. Small city on the eponymous^(1.) island off the coast of eastern VAALK. Its people are expert coastal engineers, and are renowned for their locks and canals (Pop. c. 18,000).

AARU: 1. Geo. Small island off the coast of TETHYSIA in the SEA OF MYMEREA. It is uninhabited save for the priests and acolytes who tend to the offerings of the sun in the Temple of Aaru. Notable locations on the island are the TEMPLE OF THE FEAST OF SOLSTICE, and THE GREAT LIGHTHOUSE OF AARU, which commands the best views of the Mymerea, making sea travel in the area safer.

2. Dei. Rel. Oth. Demigod worshipped in TZALLRACH, RHEA and TETHYSIA (though it has largely been superseded in Tethysia by the CHURCH OF KATHISIS^(1.)). It embodies light, the OTHERWORLD and the FIRMAMENT. See Vol IV: Gods and Pantheons.

AARU, LIGHTHOUSE OF: Arc. Rui. Large archaic lighthouse and temple to the KATHIAN pantheon situated on the isle of AARU in the east of TETHYSIA. The lighthouse stands atop a steep cliff and despite the wane of ELYDEN'S seas, it remains close to the sea, where its beacon is kept lit at all times as a beacon to ships.

The lighthouse is an ancient edifice, and was already standing when the PROPHET KATHISIS first led his followers north from RHEA in 1572 RM. At the time, the lighthouse was ruined and half crumbled, though it was later restored to prominence.

AASHA: His. Set. Ancient city in the east of BA'AKH that was founded in c. -1100 RM by SVATHI immigrants who established contact with other Svathi colonies (these would collectively become known as DHEA) and with their kin who repopulated lands to the south, later becoming known as the DHAMATEANS. The city-states of Dhea rapidly coalesced, though in –947 RM Aasha broke away, forsaking the TERATHAN faith that had developed in the SIELLAN HIGHLANDS just west of its lands and adopting a purely astrological-based religion instead.

Friction with Dhea and Dhamatea increased following this sundering of cultures, leading to a loss of trade, though the establishment of relations with SALOROC in c. -700 allowed it to thrive as a solitary city-state.

By c. -470 RM, Aasha had become affected by an increase in ATRAMENTAL ACTIVITY across Dhea and Dhamatea, leading to the abandonment of its religion in favour of an extreme cult of THE VOID that had made it there from IO 100-years earlier. The city began sacrificing people to the demon TASHATARAS (a pit in the south of Dhea believed to be the source of much of the taint in the region). The city closed its doors to the outside world, abandoning all trade and vassal towns to their fate. The city later emerged from this vapid state after around 50-years, forging new contact with the Ionic city of TYROPOEA and re-establishing tentative relations with Dhea and Dhamatea, though Aasha had become a changed place.

Its society had deteriorated into a fetishist dervish cult known as the KIHOTA that was dominated by a matriarchal religion that sent young women into the corrupted lands beyond the city. Those who returned to the city uncorrupted within a year were elevated to acolytes and became citizens of the city. This government, if such it could be called, advocated the signing of the DIVIDE OF BA'AKH (Dhea and Dhamatea having by then come together as the nation of Ba'akh) in 201 RM and remained in power until c. 250 RM, where it began to lose influence to merchants and traders (many of them former acolytes of the Kihota), who wanted closer ties to surrounding states. In 284 RM they seized control of the city, effectively ending the dominance of the religion and ratified an alliance with BAALBETH, merging the two states.

In 469 RM the city was occupied by Korachani troops, which sailed there from Io en-masse, taking the city and establishing it as a base for its armies, which over the coming 150-years would conquer Ba'akh. The city lost its connection with Ba'akh during this time, and it took on various imperial traits and influences, leading to it becoming known as ASISH, the Ionic name for the city.

AASHA, PRINCIPALITY OF: Pol. Following the signing of the DIVIDE OF BA'AKH in 201 RM, the official name of the city-state and environs of AASHA. The name lasted until KORACHANI forces occupied the city in 469 RM, after which it became known as ASISH, derived from the IONIC name for the region.

AAT: Rel. Originally a saint of the Church of Rahana in the Six Cities region of The Surrach, Aat is now one aspect of the duotheistic religion of Ianahn, commonly linked with the Ivory Moon Siella. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

AATHRICE: Geo. Island in the south of the PANTHEON ISLES, in the east of LLACHATUL. It was once known for its native MONOCEROUS population, though these went extinct in the wild centuries ago, though they continue to be bred in captivity in the city VABBOITRUR. Though that is the only city of note on the island, there are various small communities that play little role in the overall economy of the Pantheon Isles.

AATI: Eth. Primitive HUMANS that were relatively common in the north of SAMMAEA in the FOURTH AGE. The aati people were partially responsible for the waning and eventual splintering of the nation of SALLON. They sacked many major central cities of the defeated nation and eventually settled there, coming to worship a corrupted idol discovered in ancient catacombs deep beneath the surface. Little is known of them following the FADING of the FOURTH AGE, though it is thought that the idol was partially responsible for their own eventual disappearance. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

AAYUTÉ: Phil. Set. Oas. Plateau-city in the c east of NALARDIL in the west of MENISCEA, known as an oasis in an otherwise dry region. The base of the plateau is surrounded by ancient stone ruins, thought to date back some 1200-year, to a time when the climate was more favourable, and ELYDEN was not dying.

The plateau was once home to an ancient temple of thought that eventually came to be surrounded by a new city. Over the years new abodes were added besides and above the existing structures until a new continuous city was formed in c. 3180 RM, famed for having no streets in the traditional sense, with them all taking the form of enclosed corridors and hallways. A tunnel was later hewn from the base of the mesa to a newly constructed forum in the centre of the city, linking the city with the lands beyond. This tunnel is guarded by a heavy metal fortified gate that can be sealed shut if need be.

The city remains occupied to this day and though it has no resources or strategic value, it is prized for its philosophers, most of whom now transcribe ancient texts, annotating and updating them (Pop. c. 52,200).

AB AESSENAS: Myr. Rui. Ancient monolith in the far west of WESTERN LLACHATUL, in congested territories between ANAGAR and RAONGEN^(2.). It is of seven sides, each of a footprint of around 15-ft. and is some 400-ft. Tall, forming a cage-like structure on the top, inside which is a pearlescent orb, thought by some to be a soulstone. The monoliths surface is smooth and though it has some marks, it appears to be well-preserved considering its age, and it is thought to date back to the THIRD AGE.

Some have postulated that it might be responsible for the change in character of the people of Anagar, who went from simple descendants of a failed KORACHANI colony to a belligerent people in the span of a few decades. Indeed, prior to their arrival in the region, the Raongeni people were already shunning the region, though they did not know why. There appears to be no link between the structure and the culture of the people of Anagar.

ABA KASSAR: Ind. Set. Fortified settlement in the c of PORPHYR, just north of the sulphuric wastes of LAMAYA. Its main industry is the extraction and processing of sulphur, which is used in industrial processes that are common in the nation (Pop. c. 5,000).

ABACARDAT: Nat. Nation located to the east of SOUTHERN SAMMAEA, to the south of the SEA OF LETHEA. Its climate ranges from hot-humid, to semi-arid farther inland, and it has long dry summers and mild winters with few, often severe, storms. Waning sea levels over the past millennia have led to an increase in land size and the diminishing of the SEA OF UHBATAQ, leaving it a heavily salinated endorheic lake – far removed from the thriving waters and harbours it once supported.

Abacardat originated in the decades following the UPHEAVAL OF LETHEA that devastated lands surrounding the Sea of Lethea in 1303 RM. Prior to this, the entire southern coast of the sea was home to the UMMIDIAN EMPIRE, whose cities were levelled by the massive earthquake that caused the Upheaval, leaving the region in chaos. The empire fractured into dozens of disparate states which only stabilised until the arrival of the cultural hero ATTRAH, whose actions led to the solidifying of rival political entities in 1401 RM, which collectively became known as Abacardat.

A severe outbreak of FAHR'S PLAGUE in 2138 RM devastated the west of Abacardat, leading to a schism that saw east separate from west, with an independent region centred around the city of HEMANAT appearing between them, along the river SYASHAN, which became known as the JAHADAT STATES. The west would become a SULTANATE in 2326 RM, founded by the HALFBLOOD caste known as the JAHINN^(2.), which remains the ruling class and a caste apart from their mortal subjects to this day. In 2563 RM the Sultanate succeeded in reuniting the east of Abacardat (by then known as the REFORMED NATION OF ABACARDAT) with the west following a 2-year war, though the two territories remain physically divided by the Jahadat States, which had emerged in around 2294 RM.

Though it later suffered following the wane of the Sea of Uhbataq, Abacardat still remains a powerful region, its military maintaining control of cities that in some cases are divided by a hundred miles of dry savannahs. This is necessary against occasional incursions in its north western territories by HADDURATHI barbarians.

The JAHINN SULTANATE is beloved by the people of Abacardat, most of whom have been indoctrinated into acceptance of the autocracy and are blind to its excesses. However, though individual Jahinn might overindulge in debauchery, the Sultanate as a whole is reactive to the needs of the people. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

ABACINIA: Rel. The mortal name of the woman who was persecuted for acting against the old tyranny of and blinded, eventually being martyred in the ZAYIID (present-day IDRIIS) in c. 900 RM. A cult of personality grew around her over the next decades, and by c. 1000 RM she had become widely known as the BLIND GOD, with people regarding her as a deific figure. Worship of her spread west into DHAT, where by c. 1200

RM it had developed onto the ABACINIC religion, which over the next centuries spread across most of the island of ISEA.

ABACINISM: Rel. Major religion practiced on the island of ISEA, particularly amongst the people of DHAT, IDRIIS, and IRORA. Its deity is known as the BLIND GOD, and its worshippers are ABACINITES.

The religion developed in Dhat in c. 1200 RM and emerged from an older cult of personality that had spread in ZAYIID (present-day Idriis) following the martyrdom of the woman ABACINIA, who would go on to become known as the Blind God.

Many adherents of Abacinism are known to blind themselves to better experience the world as their deity does, who was blinded before being martyred in c. 900 RM. For most, this is symbolic – either using blindfolds while praying, or spending time in penance in darkened rooms. Only the most extreme of worshippers go so far as to blind themselves, and they are highly regarded by their peers, standing as a caste apart, living off alms and spending their days in contemplation and praying. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

ABACINITES: Rel. The religious followers of ABACINISM. In some cases, this is used in reference to the more extreme followers who blind themselves in pursuit of their faith.

ABACUUN: Set. Settlement in the c of KULIGALA, in the east of the CARCHEMISHI PENINSULA^(1.) in the east of SAMMAEA. It was founded by refugees fleeing an earthquake in c. 3300 RM who settled down in the area beside a stream (Pop. c. 6,400).

ABADDIAL: m. Pol. Mil. Per. (B. 292 – D. 501 RM) influential MORTAL DESPOSYNI general and politician in the time of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR'S absence. Following his return to KORACHAN in 331 RM Abaddial was one of the few desposyni who escaped THE CULLING that saw most of his kin killed by Malichar for becoming complacent spendthrifts.

He was an accomplished ATRAMENTIST and lived far beyond his mortal lifespan due to his studies, and lived to work with Malichar following his return to power, who is said to have been proud of him. Despite his strength of character, his distant descendants would squander their line's reputation, and would eventually be culled by Malichar in future acts of retribution. This has not stained the memory of Abaddial, however, and the Archpotentate himself commissioned the construction of a monumental triumphal ARCH outside the city of KHADON in his memory following his eventual death of old age in 501 RM.

ABADDIAL, ARCH OF: Pol. Mil. Arc. A monumental triumphal arch commissioned by the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR to honour the life of his descendant ABADDIAL, who was amongst his most favoured of the DESPOSYNI. The arch how stands in the upper ward of the city of KHADON, but was some distance from the city's outer limits when it was completed in 532 RM.

ABAELLA: Geo. Homeland of the BAELONAE, said to have been an orange wasteland in the south of the present day VESPERTINE LEAGUE, ABAFRA: Set. Small coastal city in the far north of KASPIA. Its upper class is made up of ancestral bloodlines who can trace their ancestry back hundreds of years, and who are very wealthy. The city is known for its many coastal taverns and hostels, where seamen live during their short stints on dry land (Pop. c. 12,000).

ABAHIR: Set. Coastal settlement in the south east of EZASUH(2.).

The environs surrounding the city are the habitat of an endemic plant that produces a large flower that blooms for only a few days every 5-years, and which are famed for their medicinal properties. Attempts to cultivate the flower have failed and most wild specimens have since been cut down, with only a few remaining in inaccessible areas.

Some within Abahir dedicate their lives to protecting the plants, camping next to them to keep them safe from poachers (Pop. c. 7,200).

ABAKETH: Ind. Set. Fortified settlement in the far north of AETHIOS. It is located in the region of DAGESARETH, and its main industry is the quarrying of SOULSTONES on a large scale. Most aspects of life revolve around the mining of soulstones, or supporting the industry and its workers, or making sure its quarries are well-guarded.

Its upper classes are made up of SHAPERS who are adept at manipulating the soulstones to gather information from them, and it is this information that drives the city's economy (Pop. c. 8,000).

ABALA: Sea. Bay to the south east of SUOR, forming the north westernmost part of the SEA OF ORMA.

ABALASSOS NEPHTHYS x. Sup. Pol. Per. (B. unknown) SCIONIC CREATURE of unknown origins who is the ruler of ACHAA⁽²⁾. It is a gifted SHAPER, with power over the air and sky, though rules largely by proxy, through a caste of high-born regents.

ABALAM: 1. Geo. Pass in the south west of ALAM BETHYL, between the NARAHASAPHAEL Mountains in the north and the NIRSHADA and DIVUMMA Mountains in the south.

2. Set. Small city in the south west of ALAM BETHYL, in the territory of BOTHUAR^(1.). It controls the Abalam pass^(1.) (Pop. c. 12,300).

ABALASOON: Geo. Coastal sandy plains in the west of KREM, known for its columns of translucent blackened glass from ancient lightning strikes, dominated by a gigantic branching one that looks like a glass tree shorn of its leaves. The sand in the region is bestowed with particular traits that allow for the production of glass of tremendous resilience.

It is thought that the tradition of constructing GLASTEEL originated in this region, in c. 2920 RM, spreading down the coast, becoming a major part of the region's culture by c. 3090 RM. Today the city of OSAIOON is a major manufacturer of glasteel.

ABALON: also, 'the Iridescent City'. Set. City in the far north west of NAARETH, at the tip of a south-facing peninsula along the border with SUOR. It is renowned for its mother-of-pearl, which is sold in its raw form and as processed object d'art around ELYDEN, bringing much wealth to the city. Its harbour is deep and its mariners are experts at navigating the treacherous waters of the ORMA and the ROILING SEA beyond (Pop. c. 41.500).

ABANA: Lak: Lake in the Far east of RHINOCOLOURA, forming part of the border with it and PNESSA.

ABNNOA: Set. Small fortified city in the south of Tisara, on the northern periphery of the TITHON forest. Its main industry is logging (Pop. c. 12,600).

ABAR: Geo. Island off the southern coast of the MULL CITY-STATES.

ABAR HADAL: Set. City in the south east of AYAD. It is a centre of fruit cultivation and is renowned for the vast tracts of orchards and farmlands and the many hamlets that surround it (Pop. c. 32,000).

ABARFAR: Sec. Small city in the south of ABATTUR, in the northern foothills of the VOULLOR Mountains (Pop. c. 12,000).

ABARHAL: 1. Sea. Narrow sea dividing the eponymous headland (2.) from the mainland that forms the eastern reaches of EASTERN MENISCEA.

- 2. Geo. Headland in the north east of MENISCEA, occupied by the eponymous nation⁽³⁾ and the PARTHISAN colony of IBANNEM^(1,). It is separated from the mainland by a relatively narrow isthmus, known as UCRAS, and is divided into two, the northern-most part is mostly occupied by Ibannem, and the south, which is dominated by the nation of Abarhal.
- 3. Nm. Land in the far north east of MENISCEA, separated from the mainland by an isthmus that was once a narrow land-bridge. Little is known of the region, save that IMPERIAL contact with it was made in c. 1000 RM. Following c. 1200 RM contact with the region was lost for some time. Contact was re-established recently, revealing a land blackened by war and wrath, populated by DEGENERATES, chorsairs and neighbouring PARTHISAN colonists in IBANNEM. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

ABARIS: 1. Set. Small city in the far north of MECHABET, overlooking the SEA OF ERUISA (Pop. c. 17,300).

2. Ast. Golden-tailed comet that was identified and named after the 2nd century ALMAGESTI astronomer RAGEL ABARIS.

ABARTA: Set. City in the c of THE SURRACH, to the north of the woodlands of HANNASTRA. It is known for its towering stone watchtowers and winding streets and its main industry is the cultivation of grain and milling of flour, most of which is traded north, finding its way as a commodity along the IVORY ROAD trade-route (Pop. c. 28,000).

ABARTH: Set. City in the south west of the LAEUSCA region of southern SKAROS. It lies above an aquifer and is known for its many canals, and the water's height running through them is based on seasonal rains, whose waters collect below the flat plains.

It was once a centre of trade, though has since waned in influence, though some of its mercantile families remain powerful across the south of Skaros (Pop. c. 21,000).

- ABARULLIA: 1. Sea. Inland sea that until c. 3000 RM dominated the southern-most reaches of OTINTH. The waning of ELYDEN'S oceans saw the sea dry up, leaving behind a series of salty basins, which over time were covered in alluvial depositions from the various rivers of the area. Today the region is dominated by wetlands, fertile grasslands, plains, and sparse woodlands.
 - 2. Geo. Grasslands, plains and sparse woodlands that dominate the south of OTINTH, which over the past millennia have replaced the shallow inland sea^(1.) that once dominated the region.
 - 3. wetlands in the c of the above plains $^{(2,)}$, along the course of the river $\underline{AM\,ROTAHA}$, where various tributaries meet with it.
- ABARURD: Set. Tropical city in the tribe of EBURUL, in the south east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER^(1.). It is situated in a rainforest, along the course of the river BARRAH. It is known for its theatrical traditions, and it mounts lavish historical dramas (Pop. c. 80,000).
- ABASA: Set. Coastal settlement in the west of KHAMID that is known for its deep bell-shaped wells, many of which have stairs leading down into them, in which one can find hidden rooms (Pop. c. 3,800).
- ABASAK: Set. Ind. Settlement in the south of TZALLRACH, known for its LODESTONE mines that penetrate vertically into the hard stone of the area (Pop. c. 4,000).
- ABASLA: 1. Geo. Plains in the c of AYAD, bordered to the south by of the PARNASIAN Mountains, and the north by MT. TAMURIM.
 - 2. Riv. River in the c of AYAD, flowing east for 215-miles from sources in the north east of the PARNASIAN Mountains, before meeting its parent, the river DOROPHONOS.
 - 3. Lak. Lake in the c of Ayad, along the course of the river of the same name (2.).
- ABASOR: Set. Fortified city in the south west of THETIS, relatively close to the border with north eastern RHEA. It works in tandem with fort AKKU to patrol over 1,000-miles of the border with Rhea, and is a major recruiting ground for the Thetishi army, with its forces skilled at reconnaissance and self-sufficiency (Pop. c. 18,000).
- ABASHERA: 1. Rvr. Major river in NAARETH, flowing south east for 500miles from sources in the IROTHA, DYLPHIRA and CYBAN Mountains before emptying in the GULF OF VEGATETH.
 - 2. Geo. Flatlands in the south east of NAARETH, known to flood in seasonal tides. The region is known for its bald cypress forest and the salt-flats that dominate its periphery.
- ABASSABAD: Lak. Lake in the south of TARTAK, along the course of the river LLIRA.
- ABASSUN: Geo. Ancient formation on the north western-most point on the EKETH isthmus in the south of KHAMID, close to AMENARKHON'S LIGHTHOUSE. The feature takes the form of a small, level plateau overlooking the coast and is covered in undecipherable linear glyphs.

Though unknown, the feature is thought to be extremely old, possibly dating back to the THIRD AGE, if not earlier.

ABATH: Set. KARKADANNI city in the east of RHINOCOLOURA, on the scrub woodlands around lake ABANA, where, in 1050 RM, KORACHANI explorers made contact with native karkadanni for the first time.

Little is known of the city and its people, and it was last documented by imperial scholars in c. 2450 RM, when the city was described as a 'gem in the jungle' (Pop. unknown).

- ABATHA: Mil. Str. Fortress on the island of TIRGATOA^(2.) in the colony of IBANNEM^(1.) in the north east of MENISCEA. It guards entrance into the main bay that leads to the capital, Ibannem^(2.).
- ABATRA: Geo. Verdant island off the south western coast of WESTERN SAMMAEA, in the COTRIAN ISLES, forming a part of the ISLAND STATES OF IRY.
- ABATTAN: Set. Coastal city in the north of AYAD, overlooking the BAY OF ORAT. Its people are renowned for their string instruments (Pop. c. 42,000).

ABATTI: Lan. Language spoken in the nation of ABATTUR, that emerged in c. 3200 – 3400 RM from the predecessor language of TISHANNAN that was spoken by its TISARAN occupiers. See Vol II: Languages.

ABATTUR: Dem. 'Abattur'. Ntn. Nation in the far north east of EASTERN LLACHATUL, bordering WESTERN MENISCEA, where it serves as a bridge between the two continents. It is of a cool temperate climate, with wet winters in the west and drier winters in the east. It is bordered to the east and south by the CABIENAN highlands and the Rotting Mountains of VOULLOR respectively, and its western territories overlook the BAY OF GEAUA.

It is populated by a mix of people, predominantly the UTTRAN, HALFBLOODS descended from the OTHERWORLDER ISRAPHAEL; and also TISTANNI HUMANS with ancient FOURTH AGE SEITHIN blood, and more recently humans with MALANI ancestry from the historical region of AMILLAERE^(3.). All three ethnicities live together and, though uncommon, unions between them are not unheard of.

The OTHERWORLDER ISRAPHAEL, being the primogenitor of the uttrani people, plays an important part in Abatturi culture, and its stark alien body remains a central relic in their lands to this day, becoming the centre of a posthumous cult of personality that evolved into a religion by c. 2300 RM. Over the next centuries the cult evolved, leading to two distinct sects forming with growing differences that led to a cultural fracture in c. 2470 RM that is now remembered as the UTTRANI SCHISM. The schism led to war with TISHANNA who repatriated uttrani who had been living in their lands, many of them born there. The war ended in 2511 RM, with Tishanna forming a new republic (renaming itself TISARA), appropriating a long stretch of Abatturi territories and drawing up a new border between the two states that it policed.

Abattur petitioned Tisara to forego its hold over their shared border, and to return the territories that were taken from it. In 2614 RM it acquiesced to the request to dismantle its military presence along the border, but refused to return the territories. The uttrani grew bitter and insular after this, almost severing ties with Tisara, keeping only the most basic of trade routes open. This led to Tisara being excised from the EGETAKHAN ROAD trade-route, losing influence in the region.

The Abattur of today emerged as an independent state in 2913 RM, following two centuries of Tisaran subjugation. It was annexed in 2730 RM following a short war by a new imperialist Tisaran regime that absorbed the native uttrani population and encouraged travel between the disparate lands and the mingling of their people. It promoted freedom of religion and other cultural observances in a bid to placate the people of both lands. Despite good intentions, the efforts at integration were ultimately unsuccessful, with the long-lived uttrani remembering their old lives, leading to a deep-seated hatred of what to them were little more than usurpers and occupiers. Opposing ideologies also led to an increase in gang culture in many Tisaran cities that had experienced an influx of Abatturi immigration following the annexation. This further added to unrest across the nation.

In c. 2905 RM an uprising in the city of LAILLA gained momentum, drawing other settlements to its cause over the coming months, leading to an assault on the Tisaran administrative centre of NETCHA in 2908 RM. The uprising was quelled, with the instigators put to death, but fighting could not be stopped across the former uttrani territories. The conflict escalated over the coming years, ending in a parley in late 2912 RM from which Abattur emerged an independent state in 2913 RM. This led to a wave of repatriation, with Abattur making a formal call for uttrani living in Tisara to move back to their ancestral lands to join their kin that had left during the early days of the war. Many left, enticed by the promise of a new beginning for their people, though some stayed in the human lands, where their descendants remain to this day.

A plutocratic council of six representatives was established – four uttrani and two humans – and ruled for the next centuries, shepherding the nation into the modern age. SUNSTONE deposits were found in the region of VRESSELA in 3411 RM, leading to technological innovations and bringing newfound wealth to Lailla. A cultural revolution followed this in 3492 RM, leading to the collapse of the old government and the eventual rise of a new feudal technocracy, which came to be ruled by a technocrat. This state lasted for around 200-years, after which a political revolution in 3601 RM saw the establishment of a new republic. The nation was divided into 26 districts, with each one represented by a senator who would petition a chair, based in Lailla, to set and alter legislature. The present elected chair is NORICAS VEICA.

Abattur has never been occupied by another nation since gaining its independence, remaining self-governing to this day, though it was involved a war over resources with MEHITIEL between 3326 and 3353 RM. It has been a close ally of LOEGRESS since c. 3920 RM. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

ABATTURI LUGH: see LUGH, ABATTURI.

ABBA TARI: Set. Small city in the north of PARTHIS, in the valley of MIKALI. It forms a part of the RED ROUTE and is home to many hostels and inns that cater to the mercantile traffic that passes through it (Pop. c. 14,200).

ABBAN: Set. Ind. City in the south east of MHAROKK known for its collieries. It is a part of the SALT ROAD and provides the many vehicles that pass through it with fuel (Pop. c. 15,200).

ABBAR: Set. City in the north of the MULL CITY-STATES. Its people are known for their hearty cuisine, which has become popular in the east of HOLOLACH^(1.) (Pop. c. 24,500).

ABBARI HIGHLANDS: Geo. Rim in PARTHIS surrounding the east part of the MIKALI VALLEY, extending for 200-miles from the city of PHOLIKIS south, to the city of KANDIA.

ABBARUD: m. Sup. Pol. His. Per. (B. 3142 – D. 3241 RM) Royal consort of queen ARLEIE and the first king of KOMMEA following her death in 3177 RM of AEPATHY.

A KHAMIDIAN nobleman by birth, he was exiled for his homeland for his own safety due to his father's assassination. He travelled to Kommea in c. 3160 RM accompanied by four mute SHAPERS who would go on to become his advisors following the queen's death in 3177 RM. They were married in 3172 RM and she became queen later that same year following her father's death.

As royal consort to the queen he made a name for himself as a skilled diplomat and ambassador, who fostered solid relations with neighbouring states — an important move to the fledgeling kingdom. In public he was seen as terse and showed little affection, but Arleie was clearly in love with him and the people blamed any oddities in character on his foreign upbringing and culture.

Many believed that he was somehow responsible for Arleie's death, but this was never proven, though this reputation followed him to the grave and persists amongst many historians to this day.

He founded the ABBARUDIAN DYNASTY – the first of five major royal lines to rule Kommea, which are now known as the KOMMEAN DYNASTIES.

ABBARUDIAN DYNASTY: see KOMMEAN DYNASTIES.

ABBAS: Arc. Mil. Fortress in the north of ALMAGEST, along the course of the river DANUR. The fort guards UMBRA extraction via SIPHON ENGINES to the north west.

ABBACI: For. Large virginal forest in the south west of DATEPHA on the island of ISEA. It is known for its dense growth and uninterrupted canopy, in the centre of which stands the ancient tower of AMENT.

ABBASI: Set. City in the c west of ALMAGEST, on the eastern shore of lake BITHYN. The lands surrounding the city are replete with an endemic form of fungus that has learnt to thrive amid the DUSTSTONE-rich environment. Though inedible, it is harvested for use in making an artificial leather-like material (Pop. c. 15,600).

ABBATON: (B. c. 3000 RM) Oth. OTHERWORLDER of ambiguous heritage who guards the TEMPLE OF PARTHIA ATEX at the foot of the ARETH valley in the BALAUR Mountain in the west of PARTHIS. Little is known about the being other than that it is an accomplished TRANSIENT, and that it has never spoken a word, standing vigil at the steps of the temple, never sleeping, never leaving its post.

ABBATOS: also 'the Charnel City'. Set. Free-city in the far east of KHARKHARADONTIS, overlooking the BITTER SEA and the west of ABACARDAT. The city is known for its ossuaries and the reverence placed upon the bodies of the dead, which are entombed in great mausoleumhalls, where they are visible to visitors and relatives. Bones are seen as holy items and are sometimes kept in small reliquaries by the descendants of the dead.

The city's theocracy is ruled by bonepriests who oversee the rituals of internment and are second only to the CATARCHS who rule the city (Pop. c. 18,000).

ABBATA: Rui. Ruin in the c south west of VAALK, commonly attributed to the DEMIURGE AVRAHAM.

ABBAY: Set. Coastal city in the south of ABRAXA^(2.), known for its production of the famed dye known as ABRAXA RED. The city is surrounded by vast plots with multiple large vats where annatto seeds are suspended as part of the dye-making process (Pop. c. 90,000).

ABBEN: Rvr. River in the c of the territories of ETHISTONITH in RHINOCOLOURA, flowing north for 225-miles from sources in the KADDRAS and ADARAS Mountains before meeting its parent, the river SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾.

ABBER: Set. City in the north east of SURUTUR. It is cut off from the rest of the nation by the FIRMAMENTAL WASTES of KOHNOR. It maintains a large harbour that it uses to keep contact with the rest of the nation (Pop. c. 40.000).

ABBEY: Pol. Rnk. Governors in the REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO, who may oversee single city or a larger region. They emerged in the decades following the SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE in a time of relative instability across the Reformed Empire of Sarastro as old governors were excised in favour of new rulers more sycophantic to the desires of the LICHKING SATHEP. The post is non-hereditary (though it is not uncommon for the child of a former Abbey to succeed their parent) and is typically appointed by Sathep himself or, more commonly, a member of the OVERCOUNCIL. There is a great deal of open corruption involved in the process and bribery and favours are par for the course.

ABBEY OF THE HOLY SWORD: Rel. Mil. Str. Abbey in the city of AGLAIA⁽²⁾ in AZAZEM. It is located just outside of the city proper and is situated atop a north eastern ravelin, overlooking agricultural lands without the confines of the city. Its sisters revere the SWORD TARTARUCH as a SYMBOL of the KORACHANI EMPIRE'S might, and often accompany its armed forces on campaign.

ABBI DA'AD: 1. Geo. Peninsula in the south east of ZHARIAH^(2.). It stretches for over 300-miles and is the largest and most prominent of the peninsulas in this region of Zhariah. It is dominated by an ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED^(2.) forest^(3.).

2. Sup. Geo. Region ATRAMENTAL TAINT in the south east of ZHARIAH⁽²⁾. The region is noted for its many UMBRA mines and the DUSTSTONE formations.

3. For. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED forest in the south east of ZHARIAH^(2.).

ABBIEL: Set. Small city in the c south of OSSIEL, situated along the banks of the river OLECRASSA, in an area of hard level earth that is prone to flooding. In response to flooding many of its structures are free-standing, tethered to deep pylons, allowing them to float as floodwaters rise. Its main industry is the mining of FIRMATITE, which is panned (placer mining) for in bends in the river Olecrassa (Pop. c. 12,300).

ABBISH: Geo. Mountain in the east of AQUARIIA, forming an extension of the BLACK MOUNTAINS. Its expanse is uneven, with jagged folds and steep valleys that are impossible for mortals to traverse. Locals claim that there are ancient rock-hewn tombs and cenotaphs from the FOURTH AGE located deep in the valleys, that are said to remain largely undisturbed by MORTAL hands.

ABBOK PALACE: Rui. Modern palace in the south east of AHKA bombedout by KORACHANI attacks over the past decades. It is sprawling, with many wings, and was once famed for its large glass-domed courtyard that was home to an expansive horticultural collection. It is presently occupied by allied defence forces who continue to use it as a base, despite its destruction.

ABCAN: Set. Settlement in the c west of LOEGRESS^(1.), in the north of the CANTICATONA Mountains. Its main industry is copper mining, with gold mining as a by-product (Pop. c. 3,400).

ABCESS WASTES, the: Geo. ATRAMENTAL WASTELAND in the c north of the UMBRA SOKHAR wastes. It is noted for its vile stench and tar-like substance that covers everything all land in the region. Explorers have described a maw-like cave that rots in the middle of a grotesque hill, like a hollowed-out cadaver.

The region is categorised as a $\underline{\text{MODERATE THREAT}}$ by the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI}}$ $\underline{\text{INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES}}$.

ABCESSA: Geo. ATRAMENTAL WASTELAND in the region of TELLURIA in the c of AZAZEM. It is known for its soft coral-like DUSTSTONE formations that ooze a sap-like substance. Attempts have been made to collect and use the sap, though the ruins of such endeavours dot the area.

ABDA: Set. Small city in the c west of the tribe of ITTRA, in the c of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER^(1.) (Pop. c. 11,000).

ABDAKROS: 1. Pol. Geo. PARTHISAN colony in the north of the island of IRUGNA^(1.). The colony was established in 3978 RM, and years of conflict with natives followed until 3985 RM, when a treaty was signed between the ANCIENT of Irugna^(2.) and the colonists, declaring an end to hostilities and creating a united front against the MALEFACTOR HORDES.

Since then, Abdakros has become a vital source of food and copper to Parthis, whose native reserves have dwindled.

2. Pol. Set. Capital of the above colony^(1.) in IRGUNA.

ABDASTARTUS ANAAH: m. Mil. Pol. Per. (B. 3931 RM) GRANDMASTER of the ARÂTHUAHI ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION since 3988 RM. The first child of a minor PATRICIAN HOUSE, he was born very weak and spent his first decade battling aepathy and other Atramental illnesses, and his parents never thought he would survive. But by his 14th birthday he had miraculously defeated his ailments and owed to dedicate his life to helping others.

Forsaking the normal duties of a firstborn son of a Patrician, he signed up to the Arâthuahi Order, becoming a SHADOW HUNTER, before rising through the ranks following exemplary work and dedication to the tenets of the Order.

He spends most of his days in a bespoke ACERGENE suit and takes intravenous vitamins and supplements to remain healthy. Despite this, his body appears withered and is bent well-beyond his years.

He is known for his harsh yet meticulously competent leadership, though cares little for individuals beneath him. He prioritizes the Order's mission above all else, often at the expense of individual agents, which has earned him the reluctant respect of those beneath him.

ABDESHUA: Set. Settlement in the c of GIBEAH. Its architecture is known for its fort-like walls and narrow windows (Pop. unknown).

ABDITORY OF EIGHA: Arc. Library and treasury in the city of GARES, in the INTERURBAN STATES, where various treasures and the wealth of the States are held. The structure is well-defended and consists of miles of subterranean crypts and vaults. Many rumours surround the Abditory and some claim that artefacts though long-since lost are contained within its vaults.

ABDREN: Set. City in ABRAXA^(2.). Like most southern Abraxan cities, it is located in a tropical climate and its people have learnt to live with the surrounding rainforest, engineering its trees over countless years to yield more fruit. The city is a massive structure akin to a magnificent stepped pyramid with hanging gardens. Specific tracts of the surrounding forest have been cleared for crops, though the people of Abdren have ensured that the canopy above remains largely unbroken (Pop. c. 52,000).

ABEBA: Set. Small city and surrounding settlements in the north west of TZALLRACH, known for their wine production, notably the vintage known as SUMMER FLOWER, which is popular across Tzallrach. It is also sold to merchants passing through the region along the GREAT ROAD (Pop. c. 18,000).

ABELE: Flo. Also 'White Poplar'. Deciduous tree common to the western shores of the APHOTIS and ADUM. Once abundant, they have become sparser in recent years. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

ABELLÁN: Sec. Major city in the north west of the nation of Bror⁽²⁾ (Pop. c. 62,000).

ABELLONA: Set. City on the island of BRONEA in the south west of SAMMAEA, overlooking the SEA OF LERAMUGH (Pop. c. 37,200).

ABERALIZ: Sup. Geo. Blasted plains in the c east of the UMBRA SOKHAR, commonly regarded as one of the most ATRAMENTALLY bombed place in all of ELYDEN. It was the site of testing for ATRAMENTAL BOMBS for centuries though was finally abandoned in 3727 RM, when this particular period of $\underline{\text{TECHNARCANE}}$ innovation ended following the detonation of the bomb that created the crater of $\underline{\text{SHAOJESEH}}$.

Today, dozens of gigantic concrete pylons litter the site, most of them now crumbling, their iron skeletons rusting under still skies. These were originally covered with testing equipment, but most are now broken and useless

Some of the pylons are covered in thick tentacle-like growths that creep up them like vines, using them as an anchor as they consume them.

ABERAN: 1. Dem. 'Aberanni'. Ntn. An ancient north eastern SAMMAEAN empire and civilisation that emerged in the late THIRD AGE and is thought to have extended into the FOURTH AGE. If this is true, it one of the longest continuous documented empires in ELYDEN'S history, having risen in c. -11000 RM, before its decline and fragmentation in c. -9000 RM into various city-states and nations, amongst which was the municipality of Aberan^(2,), which survived until c. -6000 RM.

Situated south of the present-day ANUBIAN DESERT (the higher shorelines and slightly cooler climate meaning the Anubian region was not as inhospitable then as it is today), it encompassed, at its peak in c. - 9800 RM, what today are the south of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES, SUOR, the HARRUS forest and the west of NAARETH.

2. Pol. An ancient city-state and municipality that inherited the lands and culture of the earlier Aberanni empire.

ABERANNI: His. Lan. Now-extinct language that was spoken in the empire of ABERAN in the north east of SAMMAEA. The language is thought to be one of the oldest and longest-lived MORTAL tongues, and it outlived the fall of Aberan, and is thought to have survived until the FADING of the FOURTH AGE and is believed to be the root for extant KHERI and DEMIAN, the latter of which is the root of extant SOLYENI. See Vol II: Languages.

ABERASH HATHAM, TOWERS OF: Arc. Set. Name given to two ancient towers in the c of LIACHATUL – one in the c of AHRISHEN near lake NAIDA, and the other is in the c of VIRAHAN near the SALKHAN MASSIF.

Both were originally conical, dominated by upwardly spiralling loggias and are thought to have had an estimated original height of 2,000-feet, but are now ruised.

The towers are relics of another age, thought to belong to the \underline{RETHAN} civilisation that flourished in the \underline{FOURTH} AGE of life. They were found ruined when the area was repopulated c. -800 RM, but were slowly rebuilt into great citadels, that serve as self-contained cities and fortresses.

The Ahrisheni tower is largely ruined, with only a single portion of its once-towering height still standing, at little more than 100-ft. The settlement at its feet is largely constructed from the rubble of the fallen tower and stands on a hill that is formed from the debris of the fallen tower (Pop. c. 3,400).

The Virahani tower is in better condition, and have been restored, though even so it only spans a height of some 200-ft. A large market dominated the base of the tower, and much of the city is situated on the inside-face of the tower's loggia, reaching up towards the ruler's palace at its apex (Pop. c. 7,200).

ABERASH THE TRANSIENT, ONÉSIMUS: (B. 3943 – D. 4007 RM) Sup. PRISMERIST, born in PERGOST.

ABERIA: 1. Sea. Bay along the western-coast of PELASGOS, forming a large cliff-flanked inlet south of the OSSRAN PENINSULA. Its waters were corrupted by the ancient manufactory-city of BRALOS, though they have largely recovered since its closure in c. 3400 RM.

2. Rvr. river in the west of PELASGOS, flowing into the eponymous Sea.

ABERRATION OF GHIYULK: Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region in the south of ABACARDAT that is known for its soap-like rocks that fester under the harsh sun of Abacardat. In summer the land oozes a pus-like substance that attracts vermin and exudes a noxious stench that makes it uninhabitable by MORTALS.

The region is categorised as Dangerous by the Korachani Institute of Atramental Studies.

ABERRO TAL: For. Forest in the c west of IZABAL^(1.).

ABESH: Set. Major coastal city in the south west of THETIS, just north of the mouth of the river NAILAH. It is known for its large harbours, and it is amongst the busiest ports and shipyards in Thetis (Pop. c. 68,300).

ABESSE: Set. Settlement in the south of N'RAKH, along the confluence of the river SIBASSA with lake C'KHAMAR. It is mentioned in the poem 'THE HEART OF SAMMAEA', and its existence is thought by many to be apocryphal (Pop. unknown).

ABET: Lak. Lake in the c east of the nation of BANT, along the course of the river ILLASRAAH.

ABETETH SOT VII: (B. 3901 RM) Pol. Present ruler of EREBETH. A selfprofessed umbraphage she has undergone many ATRAMENTAL operations to extent her life and she has come to rely on many technarcane orthoses to keep her body supple, without which she would invariably perish.

ABEYANCER: Pol. Rnk. Elite rank within the CONCORDANTIST ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION. Abeyancers are experts at gathering information and often spend long periods of time in neutral and enemy territories, collecting information that is passed on to the Order. They are amongst the most well-informed groups within the KORACHANI EMPIRE, controlling and manipulating what information is spread via newspapers, pamphlets, and telegraphs to best-serve the needs of the empire.

They are responsible for most internal military intelligence in the empire. They are also responsible for disseminating news and information amongst the general populace, and what they choose to keep from the public is doubly as important as what they choose to share.

ABEZETHIBOU: (B. Unknown – D. 209 RM) Oth. OTHERWORLDER, said to be amongst the first of its kind and extremely powerful. Historical accounts dating back to the THIRD AGE place it sporadically across ELYDEN, corroborating its physical appearance. Most appearances were recorded around large cities and metropolises, before momentous events and natural disasters, and the otherworlder became recognised as a harbinger of doom and destruction.

Abezethibou visited the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR during his ITINERARY in KHARKHARADONTIS in 209 RM, challenging him in combat. Defeated by Malichar, it was purportedly killed, ending an immeasurably long life.

ABHA: 1. His. Ntn. Now-extinct nation in the north east of BROR^(1.), north of extant RASTAN. It marked the north eastern-most boundary of the LAHAED Mountains and is rocky, known for its tropical wet climate. Recently (alongside northern Rastan), much of the terrain in Abha liquefied in a great FIRMAMENTAL eruption that was without precedent or explanation.

The nation is now largely an igneous wasteland, its surviving populace scattered, some of them fleeing into the Mountains to the south, with its territories absorbed by KASIHAAL. The molten rock slowly solidified and reshaped the coast, leaving it with a rounded featureless coastline that is only now being explored anew. See Vol III: Extinct States.

2. Rui. Buried capital of the eponymous now-extinct nation^(1,), in the far east of what is now KASIHAAL. It lies under hundreds of feet of solid rock that once liquefied, burying most of the nation. Many attempts have been made to penetrate the city, which is believed to survive largely intact beneath the thick layer of stone.

ABHENAS: Set. Major city in the c north of TISARA, along the course of the river TAIHA. It is probably the most self-sustaining city in Tisara, and is surrounded by fields and grazing land, and operates various manufactories and industries within and without its walls (Pop. c. 180,000).

ABIDE: Rvr. River in the north of ANDILUTH flowing north for 550-miles from sources in the northern CAMMOREAN Mountains. It rarely flows all-year round and is fed by snowmelt and flood-waters.

ABIECE: Geo. Cave-system in a highland region in the valley of LIENE in the south west of CISNERIA. It was used by ancient mortals as a burial place for the dead, though has been abandoned for millennia, its interred bodies allowed to rot and be forgotten.

Legends of the area claim that the caves are a gateway to the realm of the dead, which is why it was chosen as a burial place. SHAMEN were said to oversee the burials and would confer with the dead in times of need.

It is thought that the region may be an OVERLAY with the OTHERWORLD, making ANIMISIM and similar acts of shaping relatively easy, though this theory has not been proven due to the difficulty in accessing the area.

ABIES: Set. Ind. Fortified conurbation in the eastern face of the GROWING
MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER^(1.), in the tribal territories of ROASI. The region is famed for its platinum mines (Pop. c. 23,000).

ABIGER: Arc. Major fort. In the south east of GNOTH, overlooking the SEA
OF LIAKARRA and guarding the entrance into the BAY OF ACHAMA from the south.

ABIGER KORIC: (B. 3959 RM) Present WARMARSHALL of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, based in the mighty fortress of AGOSTAN in the far south of Korachan. At the time of writing, he is in charge of 59 legions. He has been known to lecture at the IMPERIAL MILITARY ACADEMY.

ABIHON: Set. Settlement in the east of GNOTH. It is known for its INDRIK trainers and is surrounded by large paddocks. Its people still make use of indriks as mounts and beasts of burden (Pop. c. 3,000).

ABILAM: Set. Major harbour in TERION, in the north west of SAMMAEA, overlooking the BAY OF BHAAD. Its deep natural harbour makes it a perfect port (Pop. c. 70,000).

ABILIKIA: Set. Small fortified coastal settlement in the north east of the SARASTROAN colony of IPSISSIMA^(1.). Its main industry is whaling and hunting seals (Pop. c. 2,000).

ABILLO: Set. Small city in the south of the TEMPLAR STATES in the SIDIRION hills^(2,). It maintains a large well that is free for travellers and outsiders to use, though it is guarded against abuse (Pop. c. 18,000).

ABIMELECH: m. (B. 3902 RM) Pol. Archapex and ruling FIRMAMENTAL.

SHAPER within the COURT OF DREAMS in RHEA.

ABIMOLOCH: Set. Fortified MANUFACTORY city on the north east of the ZOHELETH region in eastern PARTHIS, 25-miles from the SEA OF TARAMAR. It is renowned for its TRANSIENT ENGINES; a form of TECHNACHI that is completely mechanical, devoid of the fleshy cores that characterise their imperial counterparts, such as the SICTHAINEN TECHNA.

The city is also home to the main CHAPTER^(3.) of the WHITE BANK, its creditors and PROLOCUTORS, often rising to great power and influence within the city (Pop. c. 580,000).

ABIND: Sea. Bay off the northern coast of KOMMEA, forming an extension of the SEA OF AKRY. It is long and narrow, reaching around 85-miles inland, at the end of which is the capital, HOLLAMEA.

ABINOR: 1. Geo. Plains occupying the southern mainland of the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS.

2. Rvr. River in the same region, flowing for 60-miles from the south of the HELICAR Mountains before reaching the coast at the ERYMBAS CHANNEL.

ABIQAR: Set. Major city in the south east of ARERAQTH. Its people are known as master technologists, cogitators and TECHNARCANISTS, though they are insular, only sharing their works with the capital in LLAZGQUR.

Rumours surrounding the city abound in distant lands, including how its technarcanists modify their bodies with machinery that put the HEART ENGINES of the INNER SEA REGION to shame; or how the bowels of its manufactories are inhabited by techno-organic demons that predate the appearance of the MORTAL on ELYDEN.

The people of Abiqar do little to quash these rumours, though it is unlikely that any of them are entirely true (Pop. c. 330,500).

ABIR PARIA: (B. c. 35 RM) Pol. Exiled prince who in 73 RM rediscovered the ruin of the EBON PALACE. He excavated and restored the palace and urged people to repopulate the region, and it became a prosperous tradetown by 300 RM. Little is known of his fate though he is thought to have ruled for some years.

ABIRESSIA: For. Region of sparse woodland in the c of GNOTH, stretching from lake IAMTI in the south to lake HARAST in the north. It is home to various wildlife, including INDRIKS, and have many pockets of protected areas that the GIGANRI of Gnoth do not maintain, allowing them to exist in their natural state. While not virginal, these regions have not been touched by mortal hands for thousands of years at least, with some regions being far older.

ABIYEA: Set. Settlement in the c north of LIDEA, towards the north western end of the canyon of GOLET. Access between the bottom and top of the canyon is made possible through a handful of funiculars that operate for 16 hours a day (Pop. c. 6,500).

- ABJURA: Set. Southern-most of the TETRARCHY cities in JURRAS⁽²⁾. Of all the Tetrarchy cities, Abjura maintains the most links with the JURRASI SYNHOD (Pop. c. 849,000).
- ABLATIA: 1. Pol. Geo. Southernmost of the five political states of VALBAR^(2.). It is the most hospitable of the five states, and has the least permafrost amongst them.
- 2. Set. City in the south of VALBAR^(2.) It originated as a provision stop in Almagesti-occupied Valbar^(1.) in c. 3040 RM though rapidly grew into a thriving settlement, where visitors from Almagest would settle before making their way into the frigid north. Almagest abandoned Valbar in 3468 RM, though Ablatia was amongst the handful of cities that remained behind, becoming a central city in the founding of the coalition of VALBAR DHAI, later becoming its capital. The collapse of Valbar Dhai in 3936 RM saw Ablatia diminish and the formation of the new Valbaran five state coalition saw the capital move away from the city.

Despite its relatively small size, Ablatia remains a haven to Almagesti expatriates and diplomats, and, like many other Valbaran cities, it is geothermally-powered (Pop. c. 12,000).

ABOMASSA: Rel. Str. Sacrificial temple located in the heart of the city of KERRAS PELLN^(2.), where the CULT OF KHARANI is based. The temple is known for its four chambers, the largest of which is known as the offering chamber. It contains a large altar behind which is a chute-like channel that leads to a deep chamber in which the deity KHARANI^(2.) is said to be interred. Bloodletting rituals are conducted here, with the blood of the faithful being spilled into the chute, with the intention of sustaining Kharani until his eventual rebirth.

ABOMINABLE WASTES, the: see KASSENTHE.

- ABORA: Set. Small city in the c north of ALLASAN, along the course of the river BORUS. It is known for its vineyards and wine production (Pop. c. 15,000).
- ABORASHEEL: Geo. Large karst formation in the south west of NÁRTHEL, famed for its gigantic cavern, YGGDRASA.
- ABORAT: Set. Pol. Ruling city in the tribe of KANAATI, in the c north of MULCIBER⁽¹⁾, in the north of the GROWING MOUNTAINS. (Pop. c. 55,000).
- ABRAGOS: Set. Settlement in the PARTHISAN colony of ABDAKROS⁽¹⁾ on the island of MHILOS, in the north west of IRUGNA⁽¹⁾.
- ABOSHATHOT: Geo. Expansive mountain-range in the north west of NORTHERN SAMMAEA, forming the south eastern border between the south east of THE SURRACH and the north west of ETUA. The mountains are old, and parts of their eastern face are known for their duststone formations, landslides, and earthquakes.
- ABRAISA: Ser. Small coastal city in the south of SABAISA (Pop. c. 16,600).
 ABRAKAS: 1. Rvr. Salt marsh in the north of KARAKHAS fed by many seasonal rivers from the basin rim that surrounds it.
 - It was once part of the BAY OF TARAKH, though became landlocked with the retreat of SEA OF AZAM. Its waters retreat in summer, killing the marsh and leaving its surface below sea level, though it rises again following the rains of the wet season, revitalising the entire area.
 - 2. Arc. Pair of black square towers close to the winter boundary of the above marshlands, dating back to c. 2000 RM when the region was still coastal. There was once a great mud-brick city at the base of the towers though it has since disappeared and towers are believed to be abandoned and hollow.
- ABRAMAL: 1. Geo. Island off the eastern coast of THUMAL.
 - 2. Set. Settlement in the east of $\underline{\text{THUMAL}}$, known for its shipyards (Pop. c. 16,750).
- ABRAMELIA: Alc. Set. City in the far north of ATARAXIA. It is known for its ALCHEMICAL tradition that dates back to the early days of the mortal reconquest of the region in the FIFTH AGE. The city appeared to support the many alchemists that coalesced there, eventually funding an alchemical college there, which is famed for thousands of miles (Pop. c. 47.400).
- ABRAN: Set. Fortified settlement in the region of NUCTEMERA in then of EREBETH, known for its wines and trade-houses that transport it south west to the capital in BETENATH (Pop. c. 4,000).

- ABRAS: 1. Rvr. River in the east of BISBUT, flowing east for 350-miles from sources in the KANDIA Mountains.
 - 2. Lak. Lake in the c of BISBUT, along the course of the river HADRA. It is all that remains of a once-thriving inland sea that was lost to the waning of ELYDEN'S seas, and was home to the ancient capital of SUVAYA, which was abandoned by c. 2400 RM as the sea diminished into the small lake that remains to this day.
 - 3. Rel. Shrine in the AHHAS city of TIAL ESH, where relics of the Godking NEPHTHALONT are kept. The shrine is visited by travelling ahhas families during their circumnavigation of the GROWING MOUNTAINS as part of their religious practice.
- ABRASHYAH: Ser. Coastal city in the east of ATARAXIA, at the mouth of the river MALAKAH. In the past it was a major rural centre, producing much food and supporting dozens of small communities, but industrialisation saw it change into a metropolitan centre that receives much trade from upstream, as far West as GNOTH, AQUARIIA, and HOLOLACH^(1.), which is then traded across Ataraxia and beyond. The city is steadily growing, necessitating the construction of new districts (Pop. c. 50.000).
- ABRAT: Set. Settlement in the south of AHKA, along the southern shore of lake OSTOS. It was once a centre of agriculture in the region, and though it and its satellites remain major producers of grain and rations for use in the war-effort against KORACHAN, it is much diminished from its peak, just 2-decades ago (Pop. c. 15,500).
- ABRAVAD: Set. City that exists along a border between the nations of HAÏRAMAL and GRARNEÂST in the west of SAMMAEA, and it is shared between the two, having a coalition government. This has given it its own culture that stands out from either parent state, and is a major mercantile hub and is the easiest way for one to travel between nations (Pop. c. 43,000).
- ABRAXA: 1. Sea. Sea off the western coast of WESTERN SAMMAEA, flanked to the north by the MAUNURIN TRIBES and Abraxa⁽²⁾ and to the south by CARNYNGA and the west of AEONAS. The north western reaches of the sea are dominated by hundreds of islands, which together are known as the PREPOTENCY OF THREPHO, which serve as a border, of sorts, with the SEA OF NARANOR.
 - 2. Dem. 'Abraxan'. Ntn. Nation in the far west of SAMMAEA. It is known for its city-states, pyramids, and the WOLD jungles, where it is situated. It exports teak, ANNATTO, latex, and star anise. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.
- ABRAXA RED: form of ANNATTO dye produced in the city of ABBAY in coastal ABRAXA (2.). It is considered to be the most vivid red dye known in ELYDEN by connoisseurs and is extremely popular in THE SURRACH, where it is used to dye clothes.
- ABRHINA: Geo. Plains in the west of OPHAR, historically known for MONOCEROUS herds. Though now extinct, the monocerous remains a cultural animal of Ophar.
- ABRID: Lan. In KORACHANI, the name given to the Spring Equinox.
- ABRIGAT: Ind. Str. Fortress-manufactory in the far west of PHYRR, close to the border with METHUMN, along the mid-span of the GRAVI Mountains. It was constructed over decades in the in c. 38th century using a cut and cover method, where machinery dug down before a roof was constructed out of 20-ft. thick reinforced concrete that was covered in soil, with the region repopulated with native fauna to hide its exact location. Little is known of the structure's full extent, and it is believed that further tunnels and subterranean chambers continued to be added after the structure was covered again.
 - Its purpose remains unknown to most people, though it is believed to protect birthing ateliers where ATRAMENTALLY-infused creatures are born. Others claim that it is a silo for ATRAMENTAL BOMBS.
- ABSCISIA: Set. Fortified city in the far north west of PORPHYR, along the banks of the river SOCCATOROS. It is a major source of rubber, and it is known for its expansive groves of rubber trees, with their trunks sloughed to collect rubber (Pop. c. 43,000).
- ABSIS: Set. city in AEONAS. It is built atop an intricate system of caverns, which have been used as sewers for centuries (Pop. unknown).

ABSOLIA: See. Small coastal city in the south west of VAALK, overlooking the SEA OF AZAM. It forms a part of the main route of the SHADOW MARCH, and is known for its large flagellant culture, with religious extremists kneeling before its large church beating themselves with barbed whips. Many of them are recruited by the Marches, where their excessive penitence agitates the other pilgrims into greater acts of devotion (Pop. c. 18,200).

ABSOLVER THRALL: Rel. Rnl. Voc. Slave rank within both the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE and the REFORMED CHURCH OF SARASTRO.

Absolver thralls accompany priests to confession and spend their days praying for the absolution of sinners' souls. They are often recruited from failed SECTARIANS who are unable to complete their studies, and as a result are the lowest-regarded of church servants by fully-ordained members of the clergy. The laity regards them as simpletons, but vital to the running of their respective churches.

ABUAYA: Geo. basin on the western-coast of TZALLRACH, enclosed by the KANDON hills. The basin is noted for its many streams and c marshlands that lead to the waters of the BROKEN LANDS. The marshes are relatively fertile and have been worked for the past few centuries, since the region was revealed by the retreating waters of ELYDEN.

ABUFIHAMAT: Myr. His. Rel. In the cosmogony and ancient mythologies of ELYDEN, the ninth of the Two-and-Twenty DEMIURGES, and precursor to the artificially-created BAPHOMET. Abufihamat was a tyrannical ruler who, after losing its divinity, was concerned only with amassing followers to regain what strength it could. It oppressed its own people for power and wealth, leading to their own downfall and later descent into anonymity (they are remembered now only as THE FORGOTTEN). They opposed their iron-hard rule of their Demiurge forebear and some amongst them formed secret cults dedicated to opposing Abufihamat's every tenet. Over time the cults came to worship a corrupted capriform idol of Abufihamat that reversed everything their Demiurge creator believed in. In time this Idols would become known as Baphomet, and its worship became commonplace across ancient Elyden, eventually leading to the Demiurge's reincarnation under that name.

Abufihamat sought any reason to prolong its life and offered the heretical worshippers Baphomet everything they wanted in return for worship, but it gained nothing from this, as the adulation was being bestowed upon the false idol, and not the Demiurge. Abufihamat would eventually die, all of its worshippers gone. In its place was reborn Baphomet. Some maintain that Baphomet is merely a reincarnated form of Abufihamat, though others claim it is another entity altogether. See Vol IV: the Two-and-Twenty Demiurges.

ABULIA: also 'THE NINE', and 'THE NINE WATCHERS'. Sup. Dre. Per. Nine FIRMAMENTAL beings that dwell atop the CLOUDY PEAK in LYRIDIA, in the KYTHI Mountains. They are mummified seers that followed the ancient LYRADEAN religion that dominated the AMNATHI KINGDOMS of the region between c. -2300 & -100 RM, though little more is known about their origins. What is known is that they possess true farsight (unlike their augurs whose visions and prophecies are little more than glimpses into possible futures), and that it does not rely on the MATERIA OMNA to function. They became potent figures, with the augurs' cult that developed around them becoming the ruling force of Lyridia.

Though technically each of the Nine Abulia is responsible for a particular region of the nation they are incapable of ruling due to their catatonic states. They are kept alive in archaic technarcane engines that resembles an amphitheatrical temple in VISSIL in the Kythi Mountains 20-miles east of the capital in MYRA. The engines keep their bodies in a state of stasis that they can only leave by imbibing a mixture of drugs that is mechanically pumped into them by the UBYRS whenever THE SIBYL or her AUGURS require a prophecy. The shock of returning to life is great and the manifold dreams experienced throughout their lingering comas rush back to them with great pain, their contents to be interpreted by the Sibyl and her augurs.

Scholars are in disagreement as to the nature of the Abulia's visions. The most commonly-held belief is that the Abulia can detect the dreams and ancient whisperings of the DEMIURGES, observed somehow across the gulf of time.

ABULIA TAXIS: Int. His. Large gold-plated idols dedicated to the ABULIA, in c LYRIDIA, 140-miles north west of the capital in MYRA. The idols take the form of nine statues, 100-ft. tall each, depicting THE NINE, their heads arched towards the sky, their arms straight by their side. The statues are positioned atop a rise in the terrain and can be seen for miles around, showing anyone approaching Myra the power of the Abulia.

They were built in c. 300 RM following the KORACHANI EMPIRE'S conquering of western LYRADEA in 84 RM, on a site previously occupied by a similar, if smaller, statue that was toppled in c. 100 RM.

ABUNA: Rel. priestly caste in AETHIOS, who emerged following AETHIOSI release from vassalage in 3810 RM, becoming its rulers.

When KORACHAN declared war on Aethios in 2943 RM following the completion of the DAM OF AESAPIA, people became disillusioned with the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, which until then had been its main religion. They could not understand how a god shared between Aethios and Korachan could lead the latter into battle against its own worshippers. They forsook worship of the UNDYING MACHINE and toppled its churches, allowing them to be reclaimed by nature.

The Abuna evolved from the leaders of the animist movement that emerged from this time, who returned to a worship of the river SHIBBOLETH (a), in the guise of <a href="ST. SHIBBOLETH, as it had been corrupted millennia before by Korachani CENSORS. The river Shibboleth was returned to a place of prominence in their worship, becoming the head of a cycle of nature spirits, at the centre of which was the ATRAMENTAL antagonist that represented temptation and corruption.

With the Aethiosi vassalage to SARASTRO in 3379 RM, the Abuna diminished, remaining as the leaders of a MYSTERY CULT that grew in the shadows of their Sarastroan oppressors. By the time of Aethiosi independence in 3810 RM, the Abuna had emerged as leaders who abolished the AETHIOSI ROYAL HOUSE, taking control, becoming its rulers in what is today known as the HOLY REPUBLIC.

ABYD CARGI: Geo. Rocky region in the north west of GIBEAH, composed of layers of alternating igneous and metamorphic rocks. It is relatively abundant in ore and minerals, though the many volcanoes and frequent earthquakes in the region make these resources difficult to exploit.

The area is largely uninhabited, though small mining operations can be found there, bordering the IAHTHEN forest.

ABYDDOS: Geo. Rocky region serving as a border between the north east of RHINOCOLOURA and the far west of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER(1.), specifically the tribal territories of ILLPHAGOS. It is noted for its many volcanic cones, sulphurous fields, and colourful geysers. The area is renowned for the electrical discharges that pepper the ash clouds that hang above the cones.

Abyddos is thought by some to be ATRAMENTALLY-ACTIVE, though it is so inimical to exploration that this remains merely a hypothesis.

ABYR: Sea. Strait off the western coast of THE VORANDINE, to the north west of the BAY OF NURCYA. Its coast is well-known for its EVOLAM kelp, which is used in many ATRAMENTALLY-BASED industries across ELYDEN.

ABYSM OF BARATHRUM: Geo. Immense hollow in the far south west of the PRISON CARCERI, stretching for some 1,300-miles from north to south, from the INTERURBAN STATES to the KHARKHARADONTID desert. It is amongst the largest and deepest of hollows in Carceri, and a staircase of 823,543 treacherous steps is said to lead down from its already abyssal depths into the fiery heart of ELYDEN, amid ancient silent engines whose purpose is now lost to time.

ABYSM OF SHIBBOLETH: Geo. Deepest known sea-trench, in the BATHASHAL OCEAN. Exploration of the area is difficult and the depths of the Abysm remain largely unexplored regions.

Some SHAPERS have managed to probe the shallower parts of the Abysm, revealing geometric patterns that have been interpreted as artificial grids or cities, amongst other hypotheses.

ABYSMAL MARROW: Geo. The centre of THE BLACK FOUNTAIN, occupying a radius or around 10-miles and area of some 300-square-miles. It is a hellish nucleus that spreads for some 10-miles in all directions. Utterly black, devoid of air and deathly cold, it has been described by those few who have observed it as 'the absence of space'. Those few who have ventured even close to it have been obliterated and even those who have merely approached it from the relative 'safety' of the Penumbra (itself an otherworldly glassy landscape of constant lightning strikes) have lost their minds. Its centre-most point is known as APOPHIS, and this is where the Black Fountain lies.

It is possibly the most inhospitable place in all of ELYDEN, and is more dangerous to mortal life than the deepest ocean floor or the vacuum of the void. Few have even observed it due to the inherent difficulty in reaching it and the inimical nature of surrounding regions, not to mention the inky void of the Marrow itself. Observation from within the surrounding PENUMBRA^(1.) are possible, though even to approach within 100-miles requires observers to wear the most sophisticated SOFTSUITS, lest their bodies be torn apart or forever changed. See Vol IV: the Nullambit, the Black Fountain, and the True Meniscus.

ABYSMAL STAIRCASE: also 'THE ETERNAL STAIRCASE'. And 'VALLACK'. Int.

Geo. Dre. Rotten stone stairs circling a wide circular borehole of seemingly endless depth. It is found in overgrown ruins in the c eastern tangles of
THE OLD FOREST, and is said to lead to the depths of the PRISON CARCERI.

Those who venture far enough down the stairs hear distant screams, see a dull nauseous light and sleep fitfully, their DREAMS polluted by grotesque visions and vivid nightmares of illogical architecture; all symptoms of the domain of the DEMIURGE VORROPOHAIAH. Some believe that a DREAMSCAPE lies in the depths, explaining the increasing effects the farther one goes, though they become so strong that none have reached the bottom

ABYSS, the: Arc. Colloquial name for a regraded lower-class district in the CITY OF ALMAGEST, known for its lack of sunlight.

ABYSS OF ENESH: Sca. Sea, once forming the eastern-most part of the STRAIT OF NÁRTHEL, which is now silted up. It is a deep basin, forming the western-most part of the DARK SEA, and separating the nations of NÁRTHEL, SOTHRA and TAMAR. The Abyss is 235-miles long, its uncharacteristically deep waters and small coastal shelf rendering seatravel treacherous in winter months. This was notably so in ancient times, with records from the late FOURTH AGE and early FIFTH AGE attesting to navigational difficulties away from the coast.

Many local legends surround the Abyss, with most naming it as the place an ancient OTHERWORLDER returned to ELYDEN in ancient times.

ABYSS, TEMPLE OF THE: Rel. Str. Temple of THE ABYSSAL TEMPLARS in the fortress of ABYSSIA, in the north west of GIBEAH. It contains the incorruptible body of the PROPHET MEDEVAS.

ABYSSAL: Fau. In the vernacular of the KORACHANI language, the word abyssal is commonly used to describe creatures that have been corrupted by the ATRAMENTA. The term is synonymous with GROTESQUE, though the former is used to describe animals and beasts afflicted by ATRAMENTAL DISEASES, whilst the latter is usually used in association with humanoids of a relatively stable bloodline. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

ABYSSAL TEMPLARS, the: Org. Knightly order based in the east of SAMMAEA, in GIBEAH.

Founded in the ELLAN KINGDOMS in -41 RM by the prophet MEDEVAS (a follower of the otherworlder MARAX BERITH), the order adhered to a nihilistic dogma that opposed the spread of religion and knowledge. The date of the order's founding, when correlated with the KORACHANI calendar is synchronous with the birth of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR, a fact that some imperial scholars claim to be part of Marax Berith's ultimate purpose on ELYDEN.

They are based in the fortress of ABYSSIA, which they claimed as their own in 83 RM, slowly claiming lands around it over the ensuing years, all the way north to the coast of the ROILING SEA. The surrounding lands were claimed by the Ellan kingdoms – a loose coalition of people who repopulated this region of Sammaea following the FADING of the FOURTH AGE. Together, they formed a strong opposition to the spread of the Abyssal Templars.

The order is small, concerned more with following the tenets of its dogma to the letter than gaining membership or prestige. Its knight's colours are a black field (symbolising the decay of the world), which lies beneath a red disc. Beneath their tabards, they wear tightly woven wattle armour. Their armour, though primitive by imperial standards, is highly effective, given their region and the climate they traditionally operate in.

They shun modern weaponry and prefer to wield large hammers and clubs, and they delight in using them against monuments and structures.

In c. 3705 RM the Abyssal Templars came under control of the last 3 Sorcerer-kings, who were exiled from CHEIRA in 3702 RM. Under their leadership, the Templars found their reach increased, and they were crusading across all of north eastern Sammaea, as well as lands north of the DARK SEA and east of the LAPETAN. There, they launched campaigns against libraries and churches, bringing back certain books and trophies that they did not destroy for the SORCERER-KINGS. This activity lasted for around a century, until increased policing of the waters north east of Sammaea put an end to their activities outside of Sammaea.

Since the arrival of the Sorcerer-kings the leadership of the order has been restricted to three concurrent leaders, each overseeing a different facet of the order. Each Sorcerer-king may take on an apprentice, though only after a meticulous selection-process, and their training can take years. Assassination as a means of progression through the ranks is accepted, often lauded.

Today the templars have largely eschewed their militant ways and they campaign throughout the east of Sammaea – mostly Cheira, Gibeah, and MULCIBER^(1.), though they can sometimes be seen beyond these lands – bringing their nihilistic teachings to those who would listen, teaching them of the meaninglessness of life and mortal endeavour.

ABYSSIA: Arc. Mil. Metal temple-fortress and surrounding city in the north west of GIBEAH, belonging to the ABYSSAL TEMPLARS. It dates back to the FOURTH AGE and was abandoned following the fading of that age, and was reclaimed by the followers of the PROPHET MEDEVAS in 83 RM, and remains the headquarters of the ABYSSAL TEMPLARS to this day (Pop. c. 12,750).

ABZAYINE: Geo. Island off the western coast of THE VORANDINE, to the south west of the BAY OF LASHA.

ACACINNATH: His. Pol. Ancient city-state, possibly empire, thought today to be composed of HUMANS, SHIE and KERATIN, in what is now the far east of Luachatul, covering what are today the east of CUTH and most of the west of RHEA, as well as small parts of KREM. Sometime in the FOURTH AGE it used wealth and influence acquired through its powerful mercantile caravans and ships in an attempt to tame the potent supranaturally-enhancing effects possessed by the dust of the nearby CINNABAR WASTES. For a while it succeeded, and its ruling plutocracy gained great power and wisdom over the MATERIA OMNA by ingesting plants grown in the dust. The fate of Acacinnath is ultimately unknown, but it collapsed some decades later, without further mention, though its ruins were later resettled by the aforementioned nations.

Two figures with traits similar to those of the old Acacinnathi rulers would emerge centuries later, in the $3^{\rm rd}$ millennium of the FIFTH AGE, eventually going on to fund the so-called ACACINNATHI DYNASTY, which rules Cuth to this day.

ACACINNATHI DYNASTY: Pol. The ruling family in KREM since 2703 RM, following the mysterious appearance of a male and female claiming to be siblings, with traits similar to those of the old ACACINNATHI rulers that, in the FOURTH AGE learnt how to exploit the supranaturally-enhancing effects of the CINNABAR WASTES. Using their supranatural powers and SHAPING they were able to amass a large following and were able to supplant the then rulers, coming to rule over Krem. They reopened the cinnabar mines, distributing the dust to their most loyal followers in small doses. The mines were heavily guarded and anyone caught stealing even a single grain of dust was severely punished. As a result, the mines were directly operated by members of the dynasty.

The dynasty is known for its elongated facial features, and for its Incestuous marriages between siblings, which continues to this day.

ACADEMY OF ATRAMENTAL ARTS: Edu. Str. Org. Institute of higher learning in the c east of JURRAS^(2.), where youths selected from the general populace of Jurras are sent to train and study in the ATRAMENTAL ARTS, specifically ATRAMENTISM. Most licenced SHAPERS in Jurras learnt their craft here. The Academy is highly-regarded, though some consider its training regimen to be archaic, and many prospects find themselves unable to complete their first year of training. Though uncommon, deaths amongst prospects are not unheard of.

ACALISSA: Set. Coastal settlement in northern CANNOS. It is a major manufacturer of honey and honeycomb (Pop. c. 4,000).

ACAMAS I, KING: (B. c. 3888 – D. 3968 RM) Pol. King of CYHLAGHARR who inherited the throne in 3902 RM. He was assassinated in 3968 RM by what are thought to have been PARTHISAN spies in a bid to destabilise Cyhlagharr. His son, ACAMAS II, inherited the throne and was able to maintain order.

ACAMAS II, KING: (B. 3937 RM) Pol. King of CYHLAGHARR, who rules from the PALACE OF TYRAGHON in the capital city of CYHULIR. He inherited the throne from his father ACAMAS I in 3968 RM following his assassination by what are believed to be PARTHISAN spies. He was able to maintain order, even improving the Sovereign nation's economy, though its policies and culture remain taboo to most outsiders.

ACAMAS' FIELD: Arc. Int. Major arena in the city of GYRGYLLA in the c east of CYHLAGHARR. It hosts events and games, including slave battles, pit fights, and other forms of ritual combat that are enjoyed by oghurs. It can seat over 15,000 oghurs and sees a great deal of tourism from other cities in Cyhlagharr.

ACANA: Lak. Lake in the south of OPHIUSSA between the ESATH Mountains and the rocky hills of GOMELA.

ACAR: 1. Mil. Str. Fortress in the c north of SARASTRO, guarding the below diamond mines.

2. Set. Ind. Diamond mines in the c north of SARASTRO (Pop. c. 6,100).

ACARTAS: Geo. Island off the south western coast of WESTERN SAMMAEA, in the COTRIAN ISLES, forming a part of the ISLAND STATES OF IRY.

ACASTIX: 1. His. Ancient FOURTH AGE culture that existed in the c of present-day SKAROS. It is thought to have been populated by KERATIN and HUMANS, though fell in wake of the WAR OF SCOURGING. Its main city and capital bore the same name^(2,), and it controlled dozens of surrounding cities and the ruins of some of them form the foundations of extant settlements.

2. Rui. Ancient capital of the small state of Acastix^(1.), in the region of PHACHOR in the c of SKAROS. It was once renowned for its helix-shaped towers, though the last of these was destroyed in an earthquake in 1313 RM. Despite this, much of its old architecture remains, close to the picturesque karst formations, and it has become a popular site to those undergoing the GRAND TOUR.

ACATAS: Eth. His. Ancient people that repopulated the north east of SAMMAEA in c. -1500 RM following the WAR OF SCOURGING that led to the FADING of the FOURTH AGE.

Its people would settle the span of the river SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾ that is currently occupied by the south of AETHIOS and the north of RHINOCOLOURA.

ACATEA: Sup. Ind. Expansive UMBRA quarry funded by a newly-liberated SARASTRO in 158 RM (a series of bloody coups in its largest cities over the past years had led to its sundering from the VENATHI EMPIRE in 157 RM) in the south western reaches of the NEYSHABUR; a region noted for its DUSTSTONE formations, which are commonly indicative of deeper umbra reserves. The quarry, alongside others in THE SHAMAL area north of Neyshabur saw the conflict known as the WAR OF THE TRIPTYCH develop, over which Sarastro and Venath (later to become VENTHIR) battled over the region's umbra deposits.

The quarries that appeared around Acatea became a major Sarastroan industry, with raw umbra transported over 1,350-miles north west to the city of CARULA where it was processed. The appearance of SATHEP THE RISEN in 180 RM saw much of the umbra excavated in Acatea redirected to his purposes.

The mine served Sarastro until 2523 RM, when it was finally abandoned after centuries of dwindling resources rendered its upkeep untenable. The place was allowed to rot, where it was ignored by the KHERI nomads of the ANUBIAN desert, though as THE SHADOW MARCH developed, it became a stopping point for pilgrims emerging from the Anubian desert on their way to the SEPULCHRAL PALACE.

The mines have since been converted into a large caravanseral that serves weary pilgrims during their travels.

ACATER: Soc. Labourers in the DROSS Industries. Most are SLAVES, owned by the powerful LASHESI or ATROPI.

ACATTRASH: Rvr. River flowing west for 400-miles from the south east of the DESOLATION OF ASTUDAN into the north west of THE OLD FOREST before joining with lake ATOLLA.

ACAU GORI: Pol. Set. Major city in the south east of CHEIRA, and capital city of its eleventh prefecture. The city is known for its many tree-shrines whose branches are festooned with thousands of colourful prayer flags (Pop. c. 132,000).

ACCA HOAL: Geo. Expansive arid endorheic basin dominating the north of the nation of TAAN AN. It is sparsely populated though is home to a diverse array of endemic wildlife, and its south easternmost expanse forms a part of the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region of ZENEGE RES.

It was once known for its large lake, STONNARA, that was fed by seasonal streams and also from water running off a damaged section of the AQUEDUCT OF CREPHITHISS, at what is now the city of RYCRAAT. This was repaired later in the FIFTH AGE, leading to the waning and eventual drying of the lake. Despite this, temporary lakes may appear within the basin after particularly wet rainy seasons, though these typically dry up within a few weeks of the rains having ended, though they do result in the rapid growth of unnumbered flowers that bloom and die within a few weeks of the lakes having dried. weeks of the rains stopping. It is a spectacular sight that many travellers.

ACCARASIA: Geo. Plains dominating the c and south east of ELAT. Following the EZASUHI^(2.) colonisation of south western RAONGEN^(2.) in 3133 RM this region became a major site of battles and wars that took place over the following decades while the borders of what would become the colony of Elat were established.

ACCAUTH: Arc. Mil. Fortress and waystation in the east of SERROK, forming an east part of the MURET PASS.

ACCENSOR: Mil. Rnk. Rank within the SANCTIFIED ORDERS OF THE INQUISITION. This is the first true rank attained following a NEOPHYTE'S graduation, and Accensors form the bulk of most Orders, making themselves useful to their commanding officers in any way possible, fulfilling a martial role in many cases. The first Accensors were bearers of great lanterns that served as a focal point of most inquisitors' retinues, and it remains a great honour to bear such a lantern to this day.

ACCORD, CRUCIBLE OF THE: His. Pol. Obj. Ancient artefact crafted in c. 900 RM by the first generation HALFBLOOD ISTAR^(1.). Istar was able to unite many disparate tribes, whose rulers were forced to cut their palms and allow some of their blood to flow into the accord – a gesture symbolic of the newfound unity of the region, which by c. 940 RM gave rise to the nation of VAEVECTA (1.).

The Crucible of the Accord became a powerful cultural, political and religious artefact within Vaevecta and new tribal leaders would undertake the same ritual that their ancestors had, by letting their blood into the Crucible, which took a prominent place within the throne room of Istar, who was the undisputed ruler of Vaevecta for centuries.

The death of Istar in 1612 RM threw Vaevecta into chaos. Its territories were eventually divided amongst the dozens of tribal rulers who maintained a semblance of unity through a confederacy of tribes. The throne room was converted into council chambers where the various tribal rulers would convene when needed, and where new leaders would be sworn, and the ancient tradition of bloodletting into the Crucible continued for centuries, though it eventually died out by c. 2000 RM, by which time the regions' unity had been lost as individual tribes warred against each other and their cultures waned to corruption and mismanagement of resources. By 2140 RM the Crucible had been lost, its whereabouts uncertain, though it was claimed by various tribes. Over the years most of these claims were debunked or simply forgotten.

Today most surrounding cultures claim the artefact is lost, or that it never existed in the first place, though a small temple outside the city of SUMESI in the nation of AHOPAH claims to possess the Crucible of the Accord.

It is guarded by a small sect of virgin halfblooded monks, who claim to be descendants of Istar, who they regard as a holy figure and cultural champion. The halfbloods are the only persons who are allowed to see it, and never leave the cavern temple once they are appointed. It is their belief that so long as the Crucible remains intact there remains hope for the vision of a reunited Vaevecta.

ACCORD OF THE GATE, the: Pol. Com. Charter signed in 2824 RM between various parties, including THE ORDER OF THE GATE and the nations of TAHALL, PARTHIS, ALMAGEST, and KORACHAN, standardising the passage of vessels and taxation of trade across the GATE OF ERBETH, ensuring that no single entity would monopolise trade across its waters, though the nation of Tahall would be able to tax westward trade across the Gate, via the city of BARATALL. In 3699 RM the island-nation of OD MEGINNAS (1.) joined the accord, becoming a major influence on trade across the Gate.

ACCOUNT OF YEARS: Vol. First major census and annal within KORACHANI EMPIRE, published in c. 750 RM after years of record-taking. It contains many details that are important to scholars today for depicting life around the INNER SEA over three millennia ago, and is still consulted to verify records of the day.

A copy of the expansive 3-volume tome is kept in all major libraries in the empire, and beyond, typically open to any to peruse.

ACEITUNA: 1. Geo. Valley in the north of PARAIYA, in the south west of the region of BISBUT, overlooking the BAY OF ERUISA.

2. Set. Fortified city in the north of PARAIYA, in the Aceitunian valleys of BISBUT, appearing in c. 500 RM. The fortress was intended to ward against a PARTHISAN offensive that never came, though it now guards the BAY OF ERUISA, 18-miles distant (Pop. c. 31,500).

ACENNATH BES: FIRMAMENTALLY ACTIVE centre of the RTHEI desert in the north west of THETIS in EASTERN LLACHATUL. The sand here is razor sharp, and parts of the desert have fused together into glass that reflects the sun, making an already inhospitable region almost impossible to traverse.

ACERGENE SUIT: Nou. Acergenicist, Lit. 'air growth'. A TECHNARCANE discipline concerning itself with the important role of purifying the air of ATRAMENTAL IMPURITIES. Acergenicists operate on both large and small scales, with machinery for the former being cheaper and larger (often purifying the air of entire manufactories or complexes) and the latter being far more expensive though smaller, sometimes even seen on a personal scale (in the form of suits of hermetically sealed armour with purifying machinery on their backs). These suits, commonly referred to as SOFTSUITS or HARDSUITS, are used mostly in the maintenance of SIPHON ENGINES or in the exploration of Atramentally Tainted regions.

ACERYON: Set. Coastal settlement in the south east of GNOTH, overlooking the SEA OF LIAKARRA. It is noted for its snaking streets and steeply-stepped shores, where gurus share their knowledge (Pop. c. 2.000).

ACHAA: 1. For. FIRMAMENTALLY TAINTED rainforest dominating the southern coast of the nation of Achaa⁽²⁾ in the south of MENISCEA. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED.

The rainforest is spectacular, influenced by the FIRMAMENT as much as it is the climate of the region, and it is dominated by dense fecund stretches and vast tracts that grow as though in defiance of gravity.

2. Nm. Nation in the far south east of MENISCEA, located well within the influence of the MENISCUS, with the SEA OF ASEER to its south west and the SEA OF NARANOR to its east.

Most of its large cities are located in the east, away from the unstable rainforest of the same name^(1,), which is under the heavy influence of the TRUE MENISCUS. These cities are linked by a well-maintained trade network and share many cultural links with each other. The region is ruled by a ruthless upper-caste, without which the nation would no doubt have faltered. Little else is known of the nation, though its western-most reaches are uninhabited due to their proximity to Meniscea. It was a member of the FEDERATION OF FREE NATIONS OF MENISCEA, until its disbanding in 3272 RM. It is ruled by the SCION ABALASSOS NEPHTHYS. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

ACHAATU: Arc. Int. Twin colossi in the c south of THE SURRACH guarding the 12-mile-wide pass across the pass of MELOGGOS. They were erected during the height of the empire of SELAHIM and guarded the route into its southern lands.

ACHAD: also 'City of Priests'. Set. Major city in the west of GNOTH known for its large population of priests, monks, ascetics, and philosophers. This one city represents all the different schools of Gnothi philosophical thought, as well as dozens of different types of faiths and religions. It is known for its huge amphitheatre-temple, where people can talk and discuss their points of view, and its mixed population, which is home to many foreigners of different race and creed. It is also the western-most major stop along the GNOTHI ROAD, and offers markets and storage to the many merchants that pass through it (Pop. c. 48,000).

ACHAIAH: also 'the Silent Witness'. f. Myr. His. In the mythology and ancient history of ELYDEN, twentieth of the Two-and-Twenty DEMIURGES, whose children were the DERUWEIDS.

The Myth of the 'LOVER AND THE TREE' describes her as forsaking her divine roots and her mortal children following the fall of the Demiurges, after which she wandered Elyden, using her touch to restore life to ailing flora and fauna as she savoured the beauty of the world she had helped shape through new eyes.

It was during her days of itinerancy that she met and fell in love with the OTHERWORLDER METTUSRAH. Together, the two forsook the mortal world and retreated together, where they enjoyed their own company. But she was persecuted by her jealous brother ASHTERATH^(2.), who had loved her since before their fall. He hounded the two across Elyden, never pausing in his hunt. Finally, answering her pleas of help, THE SHAPER had her changed into a great tree, which is now known as the as TREE OF AGEN.

Mettusrah, grief-stricken, never left her side and over the years, as her body grew, her bark consumed him, until he became part of her roots, still sapient.

Through her transformed nature, Achaiah was allowed to grow old unlike any of the other Demiurges, and she is recognised in lore as being wise and just, with sages coming to her from across Elyden for advice and insight: gifts she cannot grant as she is unable to converse with mortals, though the mummified body of Mettusrah acts as her tongue on rare occasions.

Her children, the DERUWEIDS, abandoned by their primogenitor more than once, filled the void left in their lives with bodily mutilation, thought by scholars as being a form of chastisement for what they perceived to be their own errors. The deruweids dwindled over the years, though eventually some would rediscover their old mother, realising the true error of their ways, devoting their lives to maintaining the Tree of Agen and slowly shaping their bodies in her image.

Her known SCIONS are: DENDYDRIS and SALIX. See Vol IV: the Two-and-Twenty Demiurges.

ACHAL: Geo. Sludge wastes outside of the industrial city of MANUFACTORIA in PARTHIS. The region is infested with SCAVS, destitutes who search through the detritus and chemicals fort anything of value they can sell back to the city. The place is inhospitable and rife with disease and illness and only the most desperate spend any amount of time there.

Prior to the formation of the wastes, the region was a small lake, but its waters became polluted over centuries of industry, leading to the thick gloop of chemical jelly that characterises it today. They jelly is cut up and left in the sun to harden and sold as crude firelighters that are used across the surrounding region.

ACHALA: Rui. Ancient temple in the southern foothills of the GAMIGAHUA massif in the east of THE SURRACH. It is attributed to ancient VAPULA of the SECOND AGE.

ACHALAL: Geo. Highlands in the north of SARASTRO, forming the western-most reaches of the JAELA Mountains stretching into the plains of SHAMAS SHUGAL.

ACHAMA: Sea. Bay in the south east of GNOTH in the north of the SEA
OF LIAKARRA and estuary of the river ACHAMOTH.

ACHAMOTH: 1. Rvr. Major river dominating the south east of GNOTH and the north west of AQUARIIA, flowing for over 1,000-miles south west from sources in the NUNAKI and NARAHASAPHAEL Mountains before reaching the BAY OF ACHAMA, itself the northern-most part of the SEA OF LIAKARRA.

2. Set. Fortified monastery in the south east of GNOTH, north of the HARKONNA Mountains close to the border with TAHALL (Pop. c. 2,200).

ACHAN, PROPHET OF ARAKHAMÈ: (B. 3971 – D. ? RM) Prophet in KARAKHAS who rose to dominance in the region in 3999 RM, after speaking of a great war that would mark the turn of the millennium, and more importantly, the end of the FIFTH AGE.

He sermonised atop the HILL OF THE BLOOD MOON outside PARVIS, at the south eastern foot of the KATHAN Mountain and gathered many followers there who, by 4005 RM, had crossed northern SAMMAEA into the wilderness of VENTHIR, where they constructed a great TEMPLE dedicated to KHAR'ILLAE.

ACHANYANA: Geo. Mountain in the south west of THE SURRACH, forming the north western-most part of the STRAMINEA Mountains.

ACHARKHARA: also 'the World's Crown'. Geo. Large mountain-chain in the c of SAMMAEA, which alongside the KARKARMIS and SHAKHURAN Mountain forms what is commonly known as the GREAT SAMMAEAN TRIAD, and serves as a natural border, dividing the central Sammaean supercontinent into three commonly-recognised regions: the NORTHERN, WESTERN, and SOUTHERN subcontinents.

The Acharkharan Mountains are the eastern-most of the Great Sammaean Triad, and stretch from the c of the continent to the east, reaching as far as the so-called FORGOTTEN DOMAINS and MOUNT STYGIA. Its steep, ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED crags have been the bane of physical surveyors since the first daring explorations of the Mountains began in the second century RM. This is largely due to the many earthquakes and volcanoes that are common to the region, as well as their remoteness and distance from any notable major civilizations.

In c. 1180 RM $\underline{\text{MT. KLAUVAKA}}$, a large volcano in the south east of the mountains, erupted, causing landslides and great destruction. Today a huge crater can still be seen gouged through the south eastern face of the mountain.

ACHAT: Rvr. River in MECHABET, flowing north west for 750-miles from sources in the BALAUR Mountains. The river is fed largely by the many springs in the Mountains northern face. It is slow-moving and wide, reaching over 4-miles in width at its widest point, 100-miles south east of the city-state of Mechabet.

ACHATECHT XI: (B. 3933 RM) Pol. Current Chief Technocrat of SARAGOS. Like most Saragosi technocrats, they are known for their orthoses, which have prolonged their life beyond their natural means. They have been Chief Technocrat since 3979 RM.

ACHAXCE BENNALAB: f. Mil. His. Per (B. 3666 – D. 3821 RM) A historical SARASTROAN SARAKASHAR (general) who served in the MHAROKKIN CAMPAIGN of the WAR OF SUNDERING. Originally a member of the OVERCOUNCIL of the LICHKING SATHEP, she was chosen to replace Sarakashar ARKHIMYDES BELIN, who died on the 18th MALICHALEN 3705 RM of injuries sustained in battle. She was disliked at first, though attitudes towards her improved following a string of victories that culminated in securing the city of TAKUH, which proved invaluable during the Mharokkin Campaign, despite the regions' eventual loss.

ACHEA: Rui. Ruin on the island of OXTER in the KORACHANI colony of TAVVADRA.

ACHELOS: Rvr. River in the north east of PELASGOS, flowing for 125-miles from the BULOS highlands before meeting with its parent, the river EGGOS.

ACHEMÉ: Set. Coastal settlement in the north east of the BARRIER LANDS (Pop. c. 4,600).

ACHERA: 1. Ntm. Microstate in the south west of CENTRAL LLACHATUL occupying 961 square-miles of land in the foothills of the far west of the CHACTHORNYS Mountains to the north of AZAZEM, at the corner between the border with LAASKHA and IPANAH⁽²⁾.

Achera owes its roots to Patrician House Elnath winning a tender to take control of the citadel of Achera^(2.) in 3043 RM after the Korachani military had no more use for it. The Warofthe Artifexes had ended in 3014 RM, with the loss of Almagest and the devastation of the nation of Asibala, which lied to the north of the citadel. For decades after the war the citadel remained an active garrison, defending against a possible attack from Almagest or acts of barbarism by displaced Asibaians, but they never came and after close to three decades the cost of maintaining the citadel became prohibitive.

House Elnath was entrusted with stewardship of the citadel, maintaining it and carrying out patrols in the north in return for the right to work the lands surrounding it. By then a large city had grown around the citadel, in which was a great caravanserai that House Elnath took over.

It was granted the right to self-govern by THE SEVEN in 3394 RM, though in a loophole engineered by the Korachani government, it is still answerable to the empire should the need arise.

To help patrol the land, House Elnath founded an order of knights that are bound to both neutrality and the people of Achera. The order of knights remains, though is now devoted to humanitarian aid and running of hostels in the city, instead of crusading against perceived threats. See Vol II: Extant Realms and Nations.

2. also, 'THE RUSTING CITADEL'. Arc. Citadel around which the city of Achera⁽³⁾ appeared. Though known as a citadel, this is in fact a monolithic structure spanning hundreds of miles of wasteland, bordering the far north east of LAASKHA, the north west of AZAZEM and the south west of IPANAH⁽²⁾. Originally a series of defensive redoubts known as the ACHERAN LINES erected in the early days of KORACHANI dominance in Laaskha in response to dissident attacks, the network grew into a military conurbation with a surrounding population of over 100,000 at its peak in c. 2850 RM.

3. Set. Main city of the above microstate ^(1,). Appearing in c. 2520 RM after the construction centuries earlier of the citadel of Achera ^(2,), it existed neutral land between LAASKHA and AZAZEM, forming its own government that was overseen by the military command of the citadel. The city would cater to soldiers stationed at the citadel, growing steadily over the coming centuries, until by c. 2850 RM, when it was a metropolis with around 100,000 people, and a large caravanserai serving trade between Laaskha and Azazem.

Following this the town began to see less traffic as trade-routes shifted south. The citadel was abandoned by the Korachani military and, after a call for tender, its stewardship was entrusted to PATRICIAN HOUSE ELNATH in 3043 RM, which renovated the citadel and took over control of the surrounding city and caravanserai, which had continued to diminish, controlling around 900 square-miles of land that became the microstate of Achera. The RED ROUTE — a major trade-route circumventing the Inner Sea — found was rerouted in c. 3600 RM and began passing through the Achera, injecting it with a new lease of life and brining trade to the city (Pop. c. 67,000).

ACHERAN LINES: Arc. KORACHANI-built defensive lines in ACHERA^(1.) and the north east of LAASKHA that run for over 80–miles. The fortress of Achera^(2.) is located at their centre.

ACHERUSA: Set. Major city in AHRISHEN along the banks of lake CYIDA (and by extension, river SAVEST). Due to its central location, it acts as a hub of trade along the GREY ROAD within Ahrishen, linking north, south, west and east. It is twinned with the city of QASHEN, 75-miles east, which links Acherusa to the river ARESH^(2.).

The city is partially built on stilts and its harbour is tiered to accommodate fluctuating height of lake Cyida (Pop. c. 170,500).

ACHET: Rvr. River in MECHABET.

ACHI: Rvr. Major river dominating the west and north west of SAUA, flowing for 1,277-miles from sources in the HADASHIN, KOKORO, MERA, and THE BLUE Mountains before meeting its parent, the river TAKRE.

ACHIMEN: Set. City in the south west of PORPHYR, close to the border with SABAISA (Pop. c. 34,000).

ACHIOTE: Flo. Shrub common in tropical islands off the western coast of SAMMAEA, as well as parts of the mainland. It is a source of ANNATTO dye that is widely used in the region the tree. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

ACHIRESA: See. Small city in the c south west of EREBETH. It is famed for both its glassblowers and large-scale glass factories (Pop. c. 16,500).

ACHOLLIA: (8,330-ft.) Geo. Large volcano in the south eastern face of the KOTHA ICHOLLIGHA Mountain in the far north east of THETIS. The volcano is fed by the FIRMAMENTAL stresses in the area and is extremely active, its peaks and cones displaying spectacular formations and unnatural-seeming arches. LODELITHS are also known to break free from the main formation, where they float until the harsh winds of the region eventually break them down.

ACHOR: Geo. Canyon in the south east of TZALLRACH, between the Mountains of MAULIMM and KARARTA Mountains. The region is known for its flaking red scab-like rocks and shallow caverns peppering the canyon walls.

ACHOREHEN: For. Coastal rainforest in the north of GIBEAH.

ACHORSIA: Set. City in the south west of PARTHIS, along the course of the river ESHMUN, and the major trade-route linking the north west and south west Parthis, and forming part of both the PARTHISAN ROAD as well as the RED ROUTE. As such it is a major hub of river and land trade in the region (c. 31,000).

ACHOSO: Set. Logging settlement in the c south of ATARAXIA, along the border of the OSOMATHIA forest. The sky above it is thick with the smoke of the machinery that is employed to cut down the trees (Pop. c. 7,200).

ACHRA, ORDER OF: Org. Order of knights based in the HORSCH territories of the north of ALMAGEST, bound to neutrality. It is thought that they have pacts with various institutions and governments, including the HIGH-EMPIRE OF KORACHAN and the SOCIALIST REPUBLIC OF ALMAGEST that keeps them safe. Their role in the region is to safeguard passage across the STRAIT OF SKAROS, and the Seas of APHOTIS, ADUM, and SEKHEM.

ACHRABAL: Dem. 'Achrabali'. Ntn. Small nation in the south west of SOUTHERN SAMMAEA, east of the BATHASHAL OCEAN south of the SEA OF AMMASH⁽²⁾, west of LHACCIDA⁽²⁾ and west of SIMBARA.

It emerged in 3692 RM following a civil war in LHACCIDA and is now known for its assassins and turbulent politickal warring. It is ruled by a council known as the AMASSED – TELEPATHS of great skill and cunning that share a hive mind. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

ACHRAT: Lak. Lake in the east of MECHABET, along the course of the river ACHET.

ACHRIS: Set. Settlement in the prefecture of Terechant^(1.) in the c south of HOLOLACH^(1.). It forms a part of THE WAY trade-route (Pop. c. 5,000).

ACHSHI: 1. Sea. Sea in LLACHATUL, off the coast of MADOUR.

2. Dem. 'Achshian'. Eth. Predecessors of the RHAMIAN people, appearing in c. -1300 RM, and surviving until c. 200 RM, after which point the area was colonised by KORACHANI immigrants, who named the area Rhamia. They were of tan skin and dark hair, and are thought to have originated farther south.

There are few pure Achshian people left today as they have mixed with Korachani colonists over the millennia, and their culture has been largely forgotten.

ACHSIL: Set. Small city in the south west of the BARRIER LANDS (Pop. c. 16,000).

ACHTHOS: 1. Rvr. River in the east of PELASGOS, flowing for 240-miles from its source in the c of the BULOPARRI Mountains before meeting with its parent, the river ELISSANAS.

2. Lak. Lake in eastern PELASGOS, along the course of the above river.

ACHUA: Geo. Lowland region in the north west of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of ALAMUT, along the southern shore of lake MASTI. The place is lush with wetland flora and fauna particularly HORSETAILS, and remains as a relatively uncorrupted region.

ACHUEN: Geo. Peninsula in the far south west of RHINOCOLOURA, protruding for over 100-miles into west of lake AKASM^(1.).

ACHUID: Rui. Abandoned settlement in the north of Valbar^(2,). It was once a thriving whaling outpost, but an increasingly cooling climate and the slow retreat of the sealine left it deserted in c. 3200 RM. Today its, gigantic slaughterhouses and boatyards remain undisturbed, little different to when they were abandoned 8 centuries ago.

ACHUTA: Ind. Set. Major processing plant in the c north east of VALBAR^(2.), which processes silver mined within the DREAMSCAPE of PIL AUSH^(2.). Silver mined there is artificial in origin (having appeared suddenly within the dreamscape where nothing had existed prior to 3941 RM), and is renowned across ELYDEN for its perfection and purity, though some silversmiths doubt its permanence, being born from a dreamscape, so some refuse to work with it. It is also the capital of the state of $\underline{OLBRI}^{(1)}$ (Pop. c. 18,000).

ACHYTHAESS: 1. Geo. Island off the western coast of the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS. Its bears some ancient GERICIAN ruins, though little is known of them.

2. Set. Fortified settlement on the above island. There are a few coastal settlements on the island, which are largely self-sufficient and which maintain little contact with the mainland (Pop. c. 1,000).

ACIOCH: Set. Small city in the north west of SEDISIA, overlooking the border with OTINTH. It is partially built from the ruin of an old KORACHANI city that was abandoned with the colony of OHDURTAR (Pop. c. 18,000).

ACIONNA: Rvr. River in the c north of TISARA that flows west and north for 580-miles from sources in the LHANA highlands, before meeting the coast at the GULF OF USEA. The lower course of the river (in the nation's north) is home to vast tracts of flax plantations, and grazing lands for sheep, which are vital for the nations' textile industry.

ACMON: Soc. Pol. Ruling caste amongst the DVERGAI of CHTHRYID Little is known of the caste other than the title, as its members are insular, never leaving their CLADES. It is thought that they maintain some form of involuntary relationship with the ATRAMENTA though this cannot be verified.

ACOLYTE: Soc. Rel. In a specific sense, the followers and acolytes of the HIEROMONARCHS in RHEA, prior to their wane in c. 3242 RM. Today they remain as stewards and pages of the Hieromonarchs in IACIO, and fulfil an important gubernatorial role.

ACOLYTES OF ISPEIA: Org. Named after ITS FOUNDER, the Ispeian solipsists seek perfection of the self, often eschewing life outside their immediate reach entirely. By default, most Acolytes of Ispeia are rich, with servants attending to their needs as they lose themselves in their own thoughts. Though regarded as an Org. there is little in the form of leadership, and most members only maintain contact through correspondence, if even that.

The organisation was founded in the city of ALMAGEST in c 2280 RM, by the solipsist patrician-princess Ispeia. It gained a small following in the subsequent decades, with Ispeia becoming a cult leader, though as members became more engrossed in the self, any sense of cohesion dissolved. Despite this, the tenets of Ispeia have slowly spread to other major cities around the INNER SEA, finding a major foothold in KETESH.

ACON: Set. Fortified coastal city in the south east of the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS. The remains of a now-empty sprawling manufactory complex loom over the city, and they have become a haven to miscreants, DEGENERATES and there are even rumours of GRUAIMIN lurking in the tunnels and pipes beneath the structure (Pop. c. 41,000).

ACQUIESCA: Set. City in the south of ELEKHID, just north of the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region of CHIGOTER. It originated as a small town in c. 3320 RM, founded by SHAPERS over the ATRAMENTAL LEY, known as the LEYLINE OF THE ACQUIESCENT, to take advantage of the heightened ARCANE TEMPERS in the region. The city slowly emerged from this haven of shapers and remains a centre of Atramental study to this day.

The city is also home to the ORDER OF THE ACQUIESCENT MONKS, who guard the leyline day and night (Pop. c. 42,700).

ACQUIESCENT MONKS, ORDER OF THE: Org. Monks based in the city of ACQUIESCA in the south of ELEKHID, who are tasked with guarding the LEYLINE OF THE ACQUIESCENT.

ACRASIA: 1. (5,950-ft.) Geo. Volcano in the north west of the tribe of ILLPHAGOS, in the west of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER^(1.). The volcano is thought to be dormant, though its last recorded eruption was in 3184 RM, where it buried the eponymous city beneath a thick layer of ash.

2. Flo. Dru. Weed common to the western face of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER^(1.). It is made into a drug with powerful sedative or mollifying properties that is traded along the SALT ROAD, where it reaches most medical markets across the NEAR HEMISPHERE, including the INNER SEA REGION. See Vol II: Drugs.

- 3. Set. Modern city built atop the ruin of an older city destroyed by an eruption of Mt. Acrasia^(1,) in the north west of the tribe of ILLPHAGOS, in the west of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER^(1,). It is known for its industrial-scale manufactories that produce the drug acrasia^(2,) (Pop. c. 25,000).
- ACRATHEA: Str. Mountaintop shrine in the west of the HENDECARCHY of MYEIN in the west of MALAN, in the MEMNIDS. It is ancient, predating the Malani FOREST KINGDOMS, and even the precursor state of AMILLAERE⁽³⁾.
- ACRCIN: Set. Settlement in the c south of CYHLAGHARR. It is known for its tanning of ANKYLOURA hides, which are used throughout Cyhlagharri society (Pop. c. 3,000).
- ACROPAA: Set. Small city in the north of LAASKHA. Its main industry is to manufacture of saltpetre, which is used in gunpowder manufacture.
- ACROPOLIS OF CAUR: Arc. Pol. Governmental palace in TEIRA, VENTHIR.
- ACROPOLIS OF LANETHOS, the: Int. Rui. His. Str. Ancient petrified city of monolithic magnitude in the south of the ANTHARAN DESERT in the south east of METHUMN. Were it still inhabited, the acropolis could possibly accommodate at least 10,000,000 people, making it one of the largest cities ever recorded. Its construction is commonly attributed to the DEMIURGE VORROPOHAIAH, though this is unverified, and it lies unfinished, abandoned to his paranoias.
 - It is now considered one of the $\underline{\text{NINE WONDERS OF THE ANCIENT}}$ WORLD.
- ACSATHO: Set. Major settlement in the region of BETAHAL in the north of THE SURRACH. It is the northern-most Surrachi city along the IVORY ROAD and is the gateway into the Surrach from the north (Pop. c. 32,000).
- ACSIS: Geo. Region in the south east of THE OLD FOREST that was destroyed in the WAR OF SCOURGING. Its people were subjugated by the legions of the DEMIURGE RACHANAEL during the war, its cities drained of populace which were taken many miles south as slaves. The remains of primitive SERAPI culture dot the region, and evidence suggests that the DEMIURGE ASHTERATH was a dominant force in the region, his children the major subjugating influence over the people of Acsis.
 - Following the war and the expulsion of Rachanael's followers, the remnants of the Acsisi people moved south east following the $\underline{\text{FADING}}$ of the $\underline{\text{FOURTH AGE}}$, settling the scrubland and later becoming known as the $\underline{\text{ACHSHI}}$ people.
- ACTAEA: 1. Lak. Lake in the c of AHRISHEN, forming part of the river SAVEST, and fed by the same river.
 - 2. Geo. Plains and river basin in the north east of AETHIOS, flanked by the ARAM Mountain to the west and the GROWING MOUNTAINS to the east. The plains are named after the ancient city-state that preceded the present-day capital of ETHAND, and were renowned for their beauty, being as they are one of the major sources of the river SHIBBOLETH^(3.). Scattered ruins believed by most to belong to ancient AIKLAHS dot the region, predating the ancient city-state of Actanors.
- ACTANDRAS: Mil. Dre. Str. Outpost of the SOMNIARECHI ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION, located deep within the VÂRRAN PLAINS in the centre of VÂRR. The outpost was established in c. 1310 RM as part of the concerted efforts by the Order and other KORACHANI forces in trying to stall the spread of dreamscapes in the region during a period now known as the ONEIRIC SCOURGE.
 - Though the phenomenon was largely curtailed by c. 1400 RM, the Order maintained a presence in the region to monitor the OVERLAY there between the MATERIAL PLANE and the DREAMWORLD, even remaining there following the independence of Vârr in 3791 RM.
- ACTANORS: 1. Geo. Plains and river basin in the north east of AETHIOS, flanked by the ARAM Mountain to the west and the great GROWING MOUNTAINS to the east. The plains are named after the ancient city-state that preceded the present-day capital of ETHAND and are renowned for their beauty (being as the river NARRATI, one of the largest tributaries of the river SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾, flows through the plains) and ancient scattered remains believed by most to belong to the aiklahs.

- 2. Dem. 'Actanorsi'. His. Ntn. Extinct nation in the north of SAMMAEA that existed between c. -850 and 2547, ending when the KORACHANI exile ETHAND renamed the capital and surrounding lands to AETHIOS, though many current commentators claim that culturally, Actanors was supplanted by Aethios at least 200 years earlier, in c. 2300 RM.
- Under the leadership of the warlord ELBIAN, its forces attacked the free-city of SIRIPHAS in 545 RM. Despite the city's defences, the attackers were able to make their way into the mountain passes above the city, allowing them a vantage point that led to the fall of the city, which was looted and razed. Rich from the plunder, the Elbian was able to buy the services of many mercenaries, allowing him to unite the settlements and tribes surrounding Actanors under his banner.
- This eventually led to the formation of ETHAND by c. 1000 RM, replacing Actanors as the capital of the region, which flourished through trade with Siriphas, which by then had recovered and had become the centre of a major trade-route now known as the SALT ROAD.
- AUERENI raids ravaged the settlements of the plains of Actanors, forcing the region to seek an alliance with territories in the south west. This would ultimately lead to the formation of AETHIOS in 2942 RM, which coincided with the drying of the FOUNTAIN OF VOL, which local legend claimed would keep Actanors safe as long as its waters ran. See Vol III: Extinct States.
- 3. Set. Once-capital of Actanors^(2,), it emerged in c. -900 RM and remained a major city, waxing and waning under different guises, to this day. It was capital of AETHIOS until 2943 RM, when the ruling city was moved to ETHAND^(2,) (Pop. c. 28,000).
- ACTHUNON: Set. Ind. Small city in the c west of SERROK. It is located in the region of KRALVISSRA, and is known for its expansive coal-mines (Pop. c. 12,000).
- ACTS OF SHAPING: Myt. His. In the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN, the actions of the DEMIURGES that led to the creation of ELYDEN and the other PLANETS and the first living creatures, before the birth of the Two-and-Twenty MORTAL PEOPLES. See Vol IV: the Mythologia Elyden.
- ACTURA: Geo. Natural solitary monolith situated in the ILLIMUGH region of LOEGRESS^(1.). Though believed to be natural in origin, the monolith is covered in undecipherable runes, attributed to an ancient age and SHAPERS can detect odd forms covering it in the MATERIA OMNA.
- ACYLL: Set. Ind. Small city in the c west of SERROK. It is located in the region of KRALVISSRA, and is known for its expansive coal-mines (Pop. c. 18,000).
- ACYOTTAGOD: Pol. Ser. Capital city of SERROK, situated close to the northern bank of the river BEREKODRA, though for much of the year the river flow is boosted by melt and flood waters, which bring its waters close to the stone stepped banks, where the faithful of dozens of different religions congregate to pray. It is noted for its many different churches and guild-halls and is the most metropolitan region within all of Serrok (Pop. c. 708,000).
- AD: also 'Tribe of Ad. Dem. 'Adan'. Eth. Ancient ethnic group that emerged in the south east of LLACHATUL in the early years of the FIFTH AGE, some centuries following the devastation of in the WAR OF SCOURGING.
- By c. -1500 -900 RM, the so-called Tribes of Ad went to repopulate the eastern-most ruins of the ACACINNATHIEMPIRE, in what is today the east of KREM, moving slowly West as SERAPIS attacked them from the TURCAR desert. These attacks prevented the people of Ad from settling down, and they were forced ever-west, quarrelling amongst themselves as they defended against serapi attacks.
- By c. -880 RM, the charismatic warlord BOKKORN was able to unite many of the disparate Tribes of Ad. Together they constructed a great cob wall, DAR CINNRA, which at its peak stretched for over 500-miles in what is today the north east of Krem, which stalled the serapi attacks, affording them the chance to settle down around the river SEBBADDI, where they founded the city of AD PIYAN in c. -800 RM.
- From this city would the domains of Ad eventually grow, moving steadily west until they encountered the great city-state of $\underline{\text{MON KETTRA}}$ at the coast in c. 720RM. Already a powerful influence in the region, its king demanded the explorers abandon their allegiances and pledge loyalty to him. They refused, and were executed, their heads sent back east. Amongst the dead was a prince of Ad Piyan. When word of his death reached the city, its rulers declared war on Mon Kettra. For decades they fought, until in c.-600 RM, when the destruction of Ad Piyan and its dependencies led to the demise of the Tribes of Ad, whose survivors were absorbed by Kingdom of Mon Kettra.

Those who survived the destruction of Ad Piyan scattered, either going east, where they reclaimed the lands surrounding Dar Cinnra; and south, where they disappeared beyond the great MO-ORASSIM Mountains. Some settled the area around the KYONKHER desert, becoming nomads who survive there to this day; whereas others continued south, where they met the fishermen of the BRAGGAY lagoons. Together, they would establish the state of MOTANTA, which by -200 RM had come to dominate the lands around the lagoons of Braggay, as far north as the fortress of HATADA, which survives to this day.

The Adan people survive relatively unchanged, and are of dark skin and hair, with eyes that commonly range from blue to green.

AD NETIR: Geo. Deep caverns in the north west of Kephuaan, in the north western face of the GARDAGHIN Mountains. They link to the surface through deep vertical shafts and clefts, some of which are as much as 1,000-ft. deep, and most are inaccessible to mortals. These clefts and shafts lead to deep water-filled chambers, in which local myths and legends claim live atrophied mortals of pale skin and large black eyes. The caves are so dangerous to larger mortals that they remain relatively unexplored to this day, with most knowledge of them fed by rumours and legends.

AD PIYAN: Pol. Set. Capital city of the ancient nation of AD, after the TRIBES OF AD were united by the warlord BOKKORON. It was abandoned millennia past, and remains as a ruin, miles from the river that once sustained it. It was destroyed in c. -600 RM by forces of MON KETTRA, which later became AM ONKRET.

ADA: 1. Geo. Small mountain and southern-most extension of the OTHACHA Mountain in the north west of KORACHAN.

2. Set. Controlling city in the region of HATHURAN in the c south west of THE SURRACH, along the course of the river Hathuran. It is known for its finely dyed camel hair garments (Pop. c. 48,000).

ADAAM: Set. Small city in the west of ARKOS⁽²⁾, along the course of the river FALX. It is known for its falconry (Pop. c. 19,000).

ADAG: Set. Major port in the island of GAAN in the SEA OF BYSSOS. It is home to major drydocks and harbours (Pop. c. 20,000).

ADAGRIN: Set. City in the east of CYHLAGHARR, along the banks of the river ORGDA. A massive ALCHEMBRAL explosion in 1008 RM left the city ruined, the waters of the river Orgda tainted for years later. The city is now ruined, having slowly crumbled into the river over the ensuing centuries.

ADAHAD: Set. Settlement in the north east of SALOROC. (Pop. c. 9,000).

ADAIA: 1. Pol. Ser. Capital city of SAUA. The city is situated on the western foothills of the SHIORI Mountains and is divided into three general districts, each walled and situated higher along the Mountain than the

The lowest district, known as ARIA, is home to most lower-class dwellings, industries, and businesses. Two gates – one in the south and another in the west – lead into the city from outside.

The mid-district is its main mercantile centre, and is home to a large open-air market. Known locally as the RAOKA, this district is divided into dozens of smaller areas, each controlled by one or more noble families.

The highest district, also known as Adaia, is home to its largest temples, administrative buildings and the ancient citadel around which the city was built. It is home to the most prestigious noble families in all of Saua and is home to the DIADON. All of the FIVE-AND-SIXTY STATES of Saua have a presence in the city (Pop. c. 1,695,000).

- 2. Pol. Before the unification of SAUA in 3108 RM, Adaia was the name of one of the FIVE THRONES of SA'WEH.
- 3. Noble district in the eponymous city in SAUA.
- 4. Arc. Palace of the DIADON in the SHIORI Mountain in SAUA.

ADAII: Set. Coastal settlement in the south west of PNESSA (Pop. c. 5,400).

ADALKH PASS: Geo. Com. Dominant pass roughly in the centre of the LAHAED Mountains in BROR^(1.). Though referred to as a pass it is a large geological depression with many paths affording passage across the Mountain

ADALLA: Geo. Shale mountain some 450-miles long, in the c west of VÂRR, bordering the north east of KORACHAN. Local legends claim that the mountain (commonly accepted to be an artificial construction) is made up of the loose chippings of an ancient monument constructed by a now-dead deity (possibly the DEMIURGE VORROPOHAIAH). The mountain forms the eastern arm of the RHAECHA Mountain though the two are strikingly different from one another, possibly lending credence to the local legends.

ADALOMM: Set. Major coastal city in the north east of ELEKHID, deep in the BAY OF HINGIL. It has close relations with MULCIBER, given its proximity to the tribe of HAVATH (Pop. c. 369,000).

ADAM: Sea. Bay situated along the eastern coast of VENTHIR, forming the centre of an ancient impact crater known as THE RIMA, where large deposits of METEORE are found and mined.

ADAMA: 1. Geo. Small island off the north eastern coast of the TECHNOCRATIC REPUBLIC OF SARAGOS and a contested region for many centuries between the small nation and VENTHIR. The island is the central peak of a half-sunken meteor-crater known as THE RIMA and is a natural source of adamantine and meteoric iron.

2. (450-ft.) Geo. The highest point of the above island $^{(1.)}$ and c peak of the RIMA crater.

3. Set. Ind. Mining settlement on the eponymous island $\underline{\text{VENTHIR}}$ first began mining the region in c. 300 RM, though excavation and true exploitation of its mineral resources only began in 402 RM following the arrival of the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI EMPIRE}}$ to the region, which remained stable for many centuries, save for amateurish banditry that was easily quelled, though the abolition of the $\underline{\text{TECHNARCANE}}$ arts in 1921 RM caused much disruption in the region.

The technarcanists exiled following QUEEN HETEPHERES' paranoid edicts settled the KAUTULD PLAINS, a region directly to the west of ADAMA. Venthiri culture and power steadily declined following its controversial abolition of technarcana, allowing SARAGOS to grow into a potent republic.

Its technocracy knew very well the wealth of ore that lay in the mines. As Venthir wallowed in the negligence of its tyrant, Saragos attacked the mines of Adama in 2408 RM, resulting in it taking control of the mines in 2413 RM. The next centuries were dominated by warfare, with Venthiri armies repeatedly attacking Adama, which had been well-fortified by the Saragosi occupiers.

That changed as Venthir clawed its way back to power. The so-called EGRET CRUSADES of Venthir had brought renewed wealth to the nations and its slave-armies had grown powerful. Hungry to reclaim its lost territories, Venthir attacked Saragos in 3405 RM. Three years of brutal warfare followed, but Saragos had prepared for the conflict well, and fended-off the attacks.

Though the war ended in 3408 RM with the defeat of Venthiri forces, their ships blockaded Adama for a year. This status quo ended in a large naval battle, in which both fleets were near-obliterated, though Saragos maintained control of Adama.

Most of its mines were exhausted by c. 3700 RM, and Adama survived by concentrating on the working of raw materials that continued to be mined in the region, and it became a healthy trade-city, its amazing natural harbours serving the northern contingents of the Saragosi navy. Despite the apparently depleted reserves, the area was continuously guarded by Saragosi troops, though daring prospectors still managed to penetrate the largely-abandoned shafts in the hope of finding new veins. Though mostly empty, small amounts of impure adamantine have been found, but at great cost to miners (Pop. c. 9,000).

ADAMAKAN: also 'THE ADAMANTINE CITADEL'. Arc. A large star fort originally constructed in EPHEMERIS (now ALMAGEST) in c. -200 RM (though added to, demolished and re-fortified many times throughout its history), the fortress was home to the region's ruling caste and served as a place of safety in the event of attack, with most of Ephemeris' satellite town's populations able to withdraw into it with a few days' notice. As Ephemeris grew alongside AZZIJ and Almagest, the area became the great conurbation now known as the City of Almagest, the citadel's primary function became obsolete, with the sprawling city coming to envelop it.

Following the arrival of the KORACHANI EMPIRE into Almagest in the 3rd century RM, Adamakan became an administrative area overseeing most of the economical and industrial goings on in the city's northern districts. The metal walls of the star-fort, no longer needed for immediate defence, became overgrown with huts and shanties that grew slowly over its life, and though only one true road, the ADAMANTINE WAY, leads into the 'grounds' of the fort (now a gated district housing the offices and residences of administrative personnel), many skyways, balconies and walkways lead to it from above ground.

ADAMANTINE: also METEORICIRON. Dark metal, commonly thought to be of extra-terrestrial origin, brought to Elyden via meteorite impacts. When tempered it is unsurpassed in both toughness and resilience to force, as well as ATRAMENTAL CORRUPTION or FIRMAMENTAL effects.

It is prized by the KORACHANI EMPIRE for its durability and usefulness, and is used in speciality projects and as the foundations and skeletons of large structures and machines.

ADAMANTINE CITADEL, the: see ADAMAKAN.

ADAMANTINE KING, the: ancient golem that wanders the PHTHALIS wastes in the far south west of KHARKHARADONTIS, and thought to be the only sentient 'being' in the expansive region due to the inimical nature of the wastes.

ADAMANTINE WAY: Arc. Major thoroughfare in the CITY OF ALMAGEST.

ADAMASTOR: 1. Sea. Sea in the south west of SAMMAEA forming a southern extension of the SEA OF KRIHIEK. It is bordered by SIMBARA, CEGANE, and CENGUISSE. The sea is named after the eerie monolith that looms over its south eastern shore.

2. His. Arc. Ancient monolith in the c north west of CENGUISSE that overlooks the sea of the same name^(1,). The monolith is made of a grotesque black lattice-like substance and splits into four tooth-like needles at the top, between which crackle short bursts of electricity.

The monolith is around 350-ft high and is visible to the north from the sea, and is mildly ATRAMENTALLY ACTIVE, corrupting the soil and earth around it.

Little is known of its origins, though it is attributed to dark powers by most people. Scholars date it to the THIRD AGE and attribute its construction to an unknown SCIONIC CREATURE.

The region is categorised as a LEAST CONCERN by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

- ADAMATI: 1. Geo. Expansive rugged hills on the eastern face of the BLACK MOUNTAIN of NORETANAS, some 200-miles long. The region is home to many adamantine mines under the control of SKAROS.
 - Ind. SKAROSIAN-controlled mines in the region of the same name (1.), in various states of use. They fall under control of the city- of ANEON.

ADAMM: 1. Set. Ind. City and steel foundry in the north west of PELASGOS, taking up some 10-miles of the river ATHALAR'S eastern banks. It enjoyed its height of production around the time of the EGRET CRUSADES around 3250 RM where it produced countless steel items – girders for habitation blocks, and ribs for vessels, as well as smaller items – many of which are sold to merchants travelling along the RED ROUTE.

Iron reserves began to dwindle in c. 3800 RM and though production has decreased, it remains active, mostly serving the caravans that cross through it on their circuit of the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 27,000).

ADAMMER: Set. Fortified settlement in the west of SHOTHA, known to trade with THE OLD FOREST, specifically the settlement of VACHECHOS (Pop. c. 8,000).

ADANNU: Cal. Apocalyptic calendar of the AANTH people of N'RAKH. See Vol II: Month and Lunar Cycle in Elyden.

ADAQ HOND: Set. Ind. Settlement in the c north of CHEIRA. Its main industry in coal quarrying (Pop. c. 5,000).

ADARA: 1. For. Sparse forest dominating the south east of AZAZEM.

2. Ser. Settlement in the south east of AZAZEM. The settlement is surrounded by woodlands and is known for its plentiful game, which is sustained by various PATRICIAN HOUSES, which summer there for the sport (Pop. c. 5,000).

ADARAR: Ind. SOULSTONE mine on the large headland in the south west of the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS, connected to the mainland by a narrow isthmus.

ADARAS: Geo. Mountain-range dominating the c of the territories of ETHISTONITH in RHINOCOLOURA, from north to south, forming part of the ETHISTONI HIGHLANDS.

ADARIA: Rvr. River in the c west of VÂRR, flowing east through the PLAINS OF VÂRR for 375-miles, from sources in the northern face of the ADALLA Mountains before meeting its parent, the river ICHORIA.

ADASIBA: Rvr. River in the east of TZALLRACH, flowing for 460-miles west from sources in the MAULIMM highlands and NADAIRA Mountains before meeting with its parent, the river ARELLI.

ADASICH: Set. Independent city-state in the c west of THE SURRACH. The city's emblem is a hyena's head, and is adopted in various guises across the city and its culture. It is a major centre of industry, and most of the city is comprised of a gigantic MANUFACTORY, with amenities and workers apartments contained within the sprawling structure (Pop. c. 37.800).

ADATAD: 1. Lak. Lake in the east of Sammaea, along the course of river YAGOTH PHTHAN, at a fork where the MAHEEAL meets its parent, the river Yagoth Phthan

2. Set. Mil. Settlement in the far east of PNESSA, overlooking the border with ELEKHID. It is a military centre (Pop. c. 9,000).

ADAVAM: Geo. Mountain-range and highland region in the north east of RHINOCOLOURA, west of the glass hills of ATHORNA in the west of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. The south western steppe of the Mountains is home to the crater known as CTHAITH, in which meteoric ore deposits were once found.

ADAYM: Ind. ADAMANTINE mines in the ancient SOVEREIGNTY OF THYM in the north of present-day N'RAKH. The mines were spent long ago and now lie deserted, a blight in the arid terrain of the area.

ADDA: Geo. Mountain-range that forms the northern border of RHAMIA with THE OLD FOREST. In c LLACHATUL In 321 RM a colossal idol dedicated to the UNDYING MACHINE and the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR was constructed in its southern-face, completed in 407 RM. The bass carving depicts seven snakes (symbolising the first seven nations conquered by KORACHAN) surrounding a stylised representation of THE INNER SEA, above which stands the Archpotentate Malichar, and the Undying Machine behind him. The Idol has since become known as THE IDOL OF ADDA.

ADDA, IDOL of: see ADDA.

ADDA, PASS of: Geo. Pass through the gap between the HAAG HAAD and ADDA Mountains that forms a border between THE OLD FOREST and RHAMIA, though it is little-used today.

ADDAJAL: Set. Mesa-city in the south east of THE OLD FOREST, 137-miles north of the ADDA Mountain along the edge of lake VARRADA. The city is known for its stone beehives and flower groves (Pop. c. 34,200).

ADDAM: Set. Settlement in ARKOS^(1.) built on the ruins of a previous city. It is known for its bird-trainers, which are famed even in Arkos, whose birds are used for messaging throughout the region (Pop. c. 8,300).

ADDEN: Geo. Large upland region in the south east of the DESOLATION
OF ASTUDAN, forming the western-most part of the SALKHAN along the border with north western AHRISHEN.

ADDIDAL: Set. Ind. Settlement in the north west of the tribe of EBURUL in the south east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. It is a major source of aluminium in the Growing Mountains (Pop. c. 3,500).

 \underline{ADEL} : Sca. Bay in the north of \underline{TISARA} , forming a south western part of the \underline{SEA} OF \underline{IALCUS} .

ADELL: Rel. SZIKALIAN monastery in the far east of THE SURRACH, in the western-face of the PAMEROAS Mountains.

ADEPEP: Int. Rel. Site of religious importance in the c of LAASKHA. It is home to a sprawling shrine in which is interred a relic containing the skull of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR'S mortal vessel. It is heavily guarded and forms part of THE SHADOW MARCH, attracting many pilgrims from across the empire.

ADEPT: His. Pol. Rnk. SHAPERS in early FIFTH AGE TRISKETHIA who became skilled in the study of SOULSTONES and the application of their use. They became widespread in c. -50 RM and were pivotal in the founding of the city of ELIXIA, and went on to become the rulers of the TRISKETHIAN DOMAINS.

Over the years, most Adepts came to forsake their shaping roots, becoming politicians and industrialists instead, and the SOULSEER caste emerged in c. 500 RM, taking over their role as scholar shapers, who would later pioneer soulstone-based TECHNARCANE engines.

The Adepts were eventually were overthrown by the SOULSEERS in 2479 RM during the THIRD TECHNARCANE REVOLUTION of the Triskethian Domains, where their numbers were slain, to be replaced by the Soulseers.

ADGAYA: Geo. Island off the western coast of THE VORANDINE, between the larger island of KEYUSH^(1.) to the west and the mainland to the east.

ADHARA: also 'THE MAIDENS'. Geo. Rocky island-chain in the north east of KOMMEA. The islands are rugged and have been weather-worn into dangerous edges, and the sea surrounding the islands is dangerous to ships, with many wrecks littering the area.

It is believed that their name is linked to the myth of the SEVEN MAIDENS^(2.).

ADHASA: Set. Fortified coastal city in the south west of PORPHYR, overlooking the SEA OF OTALGIA (Pop. c. 3,900).

ADHERA: Dem. 'Adheran'. Ntn. Nation in the south west of SAMMAEA, overlooking the bay of LRITHA. Its climate ranges from tropical savannah in the north west to humid subtropical and arid in the south.

In 2836 RM the southern borders of Adhera expanded greatly south of the Shakhuran⁽²⁾ Mountains following a victorious war against the republic of RAMIS, which collapse following this.

The Shakhuran⁽¹⁾ peninsula was visited by KORACHANI missionaries in c. 2820 RM, who managed supplant the dominant religion (known as SOULHAEK) with the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, though the enforced faith never gained a solid-enough footing, and within a century it had already become corrupted into a mask of the old religion. The Korachani occupiers departed decades later, before 3000 RM.

It emerged victorious from a lengthy and bloody war that was conducted across the Shakhuran⁽²⁾ Mountains with RAMIS, absorbing its northern territories in 2836 RM, after which Ramis collapsed. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

ADHERENTS OF KENG: Rel. Org. One of two sects that make up the organised religion of the empire of CUTH. It emerged from the CULT OF NERGAAL in 3259 RM, following the death of KENG, the religion's founder. Though he was elevated to godhood, there was disagreement within the church. Some claimed Keng was the true deity and Nergaal was merely the herald to his ascent to godhood. Others claimed that Keng was merely a prophet, who brought word of Nergaal to Cuth.

This led to entrenched partisanism, with 2 distinct sects forming in 3259 RM – the CULT OF NERGAAL, and the Adherents of Keng, which together are referred to as the TWIN CHURCHES OF CUTH. To this day, there exists a degree of enmity between members of the two sects, which still vie for spiritual control of Cult.

Other than the belief in the true divinity of Keng, the Adherents of Keng differ little from the larger Cult of Nergaal in their customs and dogma, which remain archaic, antiquated and ritualistic by the standards of most modern nations. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

ADHERENTS OF THE REPENTANT: Org. Rel. Followers of the DEMIURGE ALLAISHADA following her latter days of mourning in the FOURTH AGE, when she was known as Allaishada the Repentant. The order remained active in the mountains of eastern IAISHA during the FADING between the Fourth and FIFTH AGES, though most of its members were slain more recently by KORACHANI ICONOCLASTS (2-). Their last major strongholds remain in present-day laisha, SATARIEL and BA'AKH.

The Adherents of the Repentant are largely ascetics, though militant cults do exist, acting as protectors to the down-trodden. Most links with the Demiurge Allaishada have since been lost, or have been corrupted beyond what they once were, with possibly the symbol of the three-pair-wings that are tattooed on their chests or worn as necklaces or other emblems as reminder to the order's ancient roots.

ADHES: Sea. Relatively small crater-like sea in the island-continent of ISEA, which gives the landmass its distinctive crescent-shape. The sea is relatively shallow, and has shrunk greatly over the past millennium with the lowering of ELYDEN'S seas, with the narrow opening leading into it, known as the GATES OF DHAT, shrinking to no more over 18-miles wide.

ADHI: Lan. KNAESSI word meaning water. It is often used to name bodies of water, such as lakes.

ADHRA: Lak: Lake in the east of KHALHAT, along the course of the river SISARA.

ADI: Ser. Fortified settlement in the far south east of the HENDECARCHY of ATALLUA in the ARGENT Mountains, in the south east of MALAN. It is a caravanserai that serves merchants travelling between the Malani city of CYTIS and the TETHYSIAN outpost of EPHAR (Pop. c. 8,000).

ADI BIEL: also 'wellwater' Bev. Water flavoured with savannah herbs that is kept cool in deep wells, which is where its more common name comes from. It is most commonly found in KARGAMA, ESPERTINE LEAGUE, though it is traded across WESTERN SAMMAEA in a multitude of different forms and tastes. See Vol II: Beverages.

ADIEL: Set. Settlement in the c of VENTHIR, in the region of ZAMAINI. Its main industry is the cultivation of pistachios (Pop. c. 5,650).

ADIMINIA: Geo. Picturesque badlands region in the south of the KAZZARAN peninsula^(1.), in the far south of KAZZAR and the north west of the BARRIER LANDS. The region is characterised by large crystalline formations and fused glass-like structures. Some geologists have postulated that the region was artificially created through some ancient calamity, possibly an event during the WAR OF SCOURGING.

ADINA: Set. Settlement in the

ADIS: 1. Sea. Bay in the east of KETESH, overlooking THE INNER SEA.

2. Set. Small settlement in KETESH that appeared in 3500 RM 5-miles south east of the city of KETESH^(2.), following the silting of the latter's harbours. The city is the main harbour and entry into the region, besides the city of IAT, and the surrounding lands are devoted to agriculture to sustain the capital of Ketesh^(3.) (Pop. c. 8,400).

ADJURA: Rel. Oth. Monastery in the north of GNOTH, along the course of the river NEPHOT. The mystics who dwell there are said to commune with SPIRITS in the OTHERWORLD, and are accomplished exorcists. The monastery is thought to exist over a region where the ARCANE TEMPERS are favoured by the FIRMAMENT. The monastery is one of the seven MONASTERIES OF THOUGHT.

ADMANATI: Geo. Hills in the far east of the BLACK MOUNTAINS.

ADMACHADAN: Ind. Pol. Str. A sprawling concrete fortress-manufactory in the heart of KHIRITT, capital of PHYRR that also serves as the palace of the IMPERIARCH HEDRAL IDRAVAYN. A dystopian fortress of reinforced concrete and steel that is home to a million slaves, it towers above the rest of the city, its brutalist architecture a grim testament to the industrial machine of Phyrr. The exterior is an imposing, featureless mass of weathered concrete, punctuated tall thin windows and massive, sootstained smoke stacks, chimneys, and metal piping.

Inside, it is a labyrinthine network of assembly lines, workshops, and dormitories, all connected by narrow walkways and dimly lit corridors that hum with the constant drone of machinery. The air is thick with the acrid stench of burning oil and metal, and the oppressive heat from the forges and furnaces is inescapable. Slaves live their entire lives within these walls, their existence reduced to the repetitive motions of their labour. They sleep in cramped, overcrowded barracks, and their only respite is the brief moments of rest between gruelling shifts or the occasional enforced visits to the Great Misrah, where they are forced to cheer at rallies by the Imperiarch.

The fortress-manufactory is divided into levels, with subterranean areas reserved for TECHNARCANE ATELIERS and laboratories where SHAPERS and TECHNARCHS experiment and develop new industrial processes. The youngest, expendable, slaves work in deplorable conditions in these lowest levels, with more experienced slaves working in the more established areas above. The uppermost tiers house overseers Technarchs, with the uppermost cupola housing the Imperiarch's penthouse and workshops.

ADOCT: Set. Settlement 40-miles north of the CITY OF ALMAGEST, along the south eastern coast of the SEKHEM SEA. It is a coal-boom town that was settled in 3205 RM that still produces much of the coal used in Almagest. Slaves from KOLCHIS were traditionally used in its quarries and mines, though the practice of slavery diminished towards the FADING of the FIFTH AGE (Pop. c. 4,600).

ADON: Set. Settlement in the north west of MELAIS, in the north of AZAZEM. It is known for its many fortified farmsteads and chateaus and plentiful fields (Pop. c. 9,000).

ADONICA ASTARTUS: f. Mil. Pol. Per. (B. 3926 RM) Grandmistress of the AVÉNETHI ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION since 3962 RM. She lost an arm in 3951 RM while working as a field agent and now wears the mummified hand as a necklace.

She is a large woman, standing over 6-ft. tall, with a wide frame. A formidable figure, she does not suffer fools. A SHAPER herself (an ANAMNREAR – a common MINASTERIA (1.) for agents of this Order), she follows the strict word of ATRAMENTAL law to the letter, never putting herself above it. As such she considers herself an example to all KORACHANI shapers and expects the best from every licensed shaper, and is particularly contemptuous of unlicensed shapers.

ADONIS: Pol. Rnk. Titles granted to the rulers of the city of TEIRA in VENTHIR. The title was instated by HOUSE ASHURA in 575 RM following its full inheritance of administrative duties in Teira, and was later granted to its rulers upon their appointment of the role, though the title is not strictly hereditary.

ADOS: Rvr. River in the east of KORACHAN, flowing for around 80-miles from sources in the east of the FATUACH Mountains before emptying in the gulf of LEMAS. Many of its tributaries have become seasonal, though for the most-part its waters are drinkable.

ADOTHA: 1. Sct. Conurbation in the east of KORACHAN, made up of around 12 settlements close to the river ADOS. The region was famed in antiquity for its vast vineyards, and the tradition remains alive to this day. It is one of the major wine-producers in Korachan and its wines are famed across the HIGH-EMPIRE (Pop. c. 6,400).

2. Bev. Wine from the eponymous region in eastern KORACHAN, famed for its smoky taste. See Vol II: Beverages.

 \underline{ADRA} : Sea. Small bay in the north east of \underline{VAALK} , between the cities of \underline{KETESH} and $\underline{KEKALAKIB}$.

ADRAHAN: Set. Settlement in the west of RHEA, known for its aluminium mines, which are the main industry of the nation (Pop. c. 6,000).

ADRAHKA: Sec. Small city and surrounding farming settlements in the north of AHKA. It is known for its many fields and food production. It and its surrounding settlements are a recruiting ground for the Ahkan defence. It is also located along the recently relocated course of the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 15,000).

ADRIEL: Set. Major coastal city in the west of OSSIEL. It is one of the most populous cities in the nation and is home to a devoted cult of ILLATHUR (Pop. c. 400,000).

ADSAL: Set. Settlement in the north west of SAUA in the region of HADASHIN. Its main industry is the quarrying of limestone from nearby karst formations, and its stone is favoured amongst Sauan sculptors (Pop. c. 5,800).

ADSULLA: Rvr. River in ABATTUR flowing west and north for 730-miles from sources in the VOULLOR Mountains, before meeting the coast at the BAY OF PRAET.

ADTUH: Set. Farming settlement in the south west of AQUARIIA. It is expansive with a small settlement that is surrounded by miles upon miles of fields that are peppered with large fortified farmsteads (Pop. c. 5,000).

ADUGALLA: Rvr. River in the south of TZALLRACH, flowing west for 300-miles from sources in the ODONTWE and LITANI Mountains before meeting its parent, the river CHIEN.

ADUGANA: Lake in the south of TZALLRACH, forming part of the course of the river ADUGALLA.

ADUL TA': Set. City in the north of KHULL, known for its interesting architecture, in that most of it is constructed atop a large vault spanning the river EHAROR. Many properties have trapdoors and 'wells' that lead down into the river, as well as secret chambers that link to the old sewers and riverbank (Pop. c. 40,200).

ADULIEK: Geo. Mountains in the c of OTINTH, dividing the OREAHASHI basin in the north east from the rest of the nation.

ADUM, SEA OF: Sea. Northern-most sea making up the STRAIT OF SKAROS, north of the SEA OF APHOTIS. The diminishing of the sea has left it salty, and its waters are filthy from polluted currents from the south, rendering it sterile and without natural life of note. What settlements once existed on its edge have long since died, remaining as hollow shells, far from the shore due to the sea's slow withdrawal.

ADUMBRAESK: 1. Lan. Sup. A corruption of an older imperial term originating in c. 400 RM, 'A' UMBRISKA', meaning 'against the shadow'. The word is mostly used in reference to the BA'AKHI caste of ATRAMENTAL. Wardens (known locally as the TELRAAS) whose study of and work in combating the Atramenta led to the creation of the first crude TECHNARCANE engines that served as the predecessors of more modern SIPHON ENGINES in -92 RM in the city of ALBA. Following the imperial dominance in the region in 634 RM, the word Telraas fell into disfavour, replaced by Adumbraesk. Those in the order who remained and claimed loyalty to KORACHAN were effectively merged with the myriad hierarchies and ranks of the technarcane orders.

2. Rui. Sup. Ruined FOURTH AGE tower on the periphery of THE BLEEDING PLAINS in the west of AETHIOS. The place is slowly sinking into a morass of shadowstuff that has already claimed the steel colossi that once guarded it.

ADUMBRATION OF KORACHAN: His. Mys. Rel. Period in KORACHANI history commonly-accepted to have been between c. 2930 and 2950 RM, where many people of various social hierarchies, reported strange sightings such as angelic visitations, holy fogs, OTHERWORLDLY sensations and premonitions and visions, amongst others.

Though the veracity of many claims are doubted, the sheer mass and widespread nature of reports has lent credence to the event, which is thought by some theosophists to have presaged THE WAR OF THE ARTIFEXES, which began in 3001 RM with the SIEGE OF VIRANUL in AZAZEM, and a general decline in imperial culture and the empire itself.

AEACHIS: For. Sup. Fetid ATRAMENTAL jungles forming part of the larger WAELMIGH rainforest in the west of CHEIRA. The jungles are filled with lamprey-like vines and black tendrils, whose touch brings about a wasting sickness. Very little is known about this region of Waelmigh as it is so inimical to intelligent life. Some explorers speak of a DEATH-CULT of OTHERWORLDERS in its depths, but it is likely no-more than rumour.

AEARN: Geo. Expansive wetlands in the c west of GNOTH, along the course of the great river MARAGA.

AEDAN: Rui. Ancient OPRETIAN settlement built on the ruins of an older ERASHAN city that was known as AETAL. Little is known of the city, other than it was fortified and was often the target of LHAUS incursions.

The city is believed to have fallen against oghur attacks in 723 RM and remains now as a ruin in the far east of THE SURRACH.

AEDDANA: Sct. Fortress-city in the south west of the BAKHRAN STATES, and headquarters of its military forces (Pop. c. 150,000).

AEDE: Set. Fortified coastal settlement in the far south west of CALBIA^(1.)
(Pop. c. 6,000).

AEDENIS: Geo. 1. Small Pelasgosi island located on the 40th parallel in the Brown Waters. Largely insignificant, the island is mostly notable for a small Atramental forest and bone-fields that dominate its interior. Worship of the Undying Machine was brought to the island by the missionary, and later, St. Lameter in c. 580 RM.

2. Set. Settlement on the above island $^{(1.)}$ (Pop. c. 6,000).

AEGIS: Obj. ADAMANTINE shield and relic from the FOURTH AGE found by the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR in a barrow in BACHAN, KORACHAN, in –5 RM. It was given to the IRON ANGEL upon her completion in 341 RM and is thought to still be in her possession.

AEGIS TRIUMPHANT, the: Arc. Monument in the HENDECARCHY of AMILLAERE^(1.), 10-miles north of the city of Amillaere^(2.). It takes the form of a gigantic 150-ft. tall crystalline monument of the LADY AEGIS overlooking the AEGISWAY. Those who pass by the monument are said to receive her blessing. Like many monuments in Malan, the crystal was sourced in the caves of THAENILLA.

AEGISAN: see LADY'S PALACE, THE.

AEGISWAY, the: Com. Main trade route in MALAN, snaking its way through most major cities in all of its elven HENDECARCHIES, joining up with the GREAT ROAD in various areas, including the cities of AGLABHA and ATHELIAT, which are major trade centres. To be able to move trade along the Aegisway merchants need a special charter from the LADY AEGIS (granted by proxy, through a specific government commission that is based in Atheliat, which needs to be renewed every three years, ensuring that competition remains strong. Merchants who have such a charter are known as Aegismen and Aegiswomen, and wear blue clothing as a mark of their station, making them clearly recognised across Malan. See Vol II: Major Trade Routes.

AEGIMON: Set. Town in the east of ALMAGEST, overlooking the borders of THE OLD FOREST and THE DESOLATION OF ASTUDAN. The environs around the settlement are heavily guarded against a perceived threat from the east, though few instances of such antagonism have been recorded (Pop. c. 13,300).

AEGNORS: Set. Fortified city in the far north west of AETHIOS, close to the border with the UMBRA SOKHAR. It is home to a militant order clad in SOFTSUITS that venture west into the region of DEARTH to hunt ATRAMENTALLY CORRUPTED creatures that might pose a risk to Aethios. (Pop. c. 28,000).

AEHARI: 1. Oth. Sup. In the classical school of thought, Aehari were considered the evil OTHERWORLDERS (with the ILLITHAMÉ their opposites). For centuries, classical scholars believed that otherworlders fell into one of two (and very rarely both) classifications: the black and white, or evil and good.

It is only more recently that they have been more thoroughly studied and categorised, leading to an abandonment of this classical dichotomous belief. Few otherworlders admit knowledge of their own purpose and many are hollow beings, distraught by a false purpose that mortal belief has convinced them they should have, that they simply do not feel.

It is unlikely that we will ever truly decipher the mysteries of the otherworlders, and as such the false belief that they are here to guide the true or punish the wicked remains a dominant one amongst most folk.

2. also 'the Demon'. Ast. Con. Constellation in the polar skies of the Southern Hemisphere. See Vol II: Constellations.

AEHAROCK: noun. 'acharockear', Plr. 'acharockin'. Pol. One of the governmental MINASTERIA (1.) in the KORACHANI EMPIRE, comprised mostly of scholars who study OTHERWORLDERS (particularly those once categorised as AEHARI), their HALFBLOOD scions and the OTHERWORLDLY plane. The more accomplished amongst the Acharockin – usually augmented with stimulant drugs or by technarcane ORTHOSES such as IRON MANTLES (2.) – can penetrate the otherworldly plane and pluck otherworlders prematurely from their lifeless repose. Such experiments are dangerous and often break the minds and bodies of those attempting it, though the secrets gleaned are often seen as worth the risk.

The chief Minasteria of the aeharockin was located in KITHALOI, in the south of KARAKHAS, where it studied the effects of the ATRAMENTA until the SUNDERING OF THE KORACHANI EMPIRE in 3705 RM, at which point it moved south into the UMBRA SOKHAR, in TAGAGNACH, one of its research outposts. The proximity of Tagagnach to the Umbra Sokhar is of no coincidence, and makes manipulation of the ATRAMENTA there relatively easy.

Aeharockear are fascinated by Aehari, and seek them out through mundane means also, eager for the chance to study and converse with them, though few such meetings end amicably.

AEHAREON: Rui. Abandoned temple-complex in the c of the HENDECARCHY of NHORA in the north of MALAN, its stairway flanked by two statues of unidentified OTHERWORLDERS. The complex is believed to date back to the early FOURTH AGE, where it may have been used for a religious purpose. The area has fascinated explorers since its rediscovery in in the FIFTH AGE. AEHKAUROLOR: Geo. Sup. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region in the west of LOEGRESS⁽¹⁾, to the east of the VOULLOR Mountains, covering some 10,000-square-miles.

It is characterised by black jagged rocks, intricate DUSTSTONE formations, and large conical peaks in the foothills of the Voullor Mountain in which the remains of ancient carved structures can be found – early FIFTH AGE hovels of ancient PRAETTANIAN people (predecessors of extant KOMMEANS).

The taint was first recorded in c. 2700 RM and steadily increased over the next centuries, leading to various settlements becoming abandoned, including the city of place is now abandoned.

The region is categorised as LEAST CONCERN by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

AEL'S PAVILION: Arc. Int. Stone pavilion in the dry hills of ASARTHI in the far north of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of SYRTIS^(1.). It is a relic of a past age, though little more is known besides that.

AELAOS: Set. Major fortified city in the far north of PELASGOS, overlooking the HERESIAN PLAINS in the east of KORACHAN. It is a major trading influence in the region, and a link between the two nations (Pop. c. 53,020).

AELENIA'S CRATER: Geo. Crater in the south east of PARAIYA, around 2-miles wide. It is known to locals for strange sightings and the unexplained lights that are sometimes seen above or within it. It is thought to be FIRMAMENTALLY—active, though little research has been done on it and remains largely unknown to KORACHANI scholars.

AELGHILLA: also 'THE HIGH-CITY'. Set. City and outlying settlements in the isthmus between the SEA OF VAULLA and the GULF OF HARURHOTA in TETHYSIA. Its central citadel, the ILLHATEG, has unobstructed views of the surrounding seas. The city is relatively untainted and remains as one of the largest cities along the MYMEREAN coast (Pop. c. 90,000).

AELLCHTH: also 'THE SKY TEMPLE'. (31,210-ft.) Rel. Arc. Myt. His. Immeasurably ancient temple whose foundations are said to crown the SAMMAEAN TRIAD Mountain-chain. Thought to be the highest point in ELYDEN it is believed to have been constructed by the DEMIURGES at the height of their power, after creating the perfect world, in an area that would be inaccessible to MORTALS.

It is a large temple with twenty-two large thrones of a substance unknown to Elyden and impervious to harm. Indeed, despite its age, the temple is devoid of any weathering, and does not show its age. The place howls in echo of its hollow construction from where <a href="https://www.twenty.com/www.twenty.com/www.twenty.com/www.twenty.com/www.twenty.com/www.twenty.com/www.twenty.com/ww.twenty.

AELLEAD: Myt. His. In the ancient Religions and mythology of ELYDEN, the name given in the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN to THE SHAPER of the universe, the DEMIURGES, and the sower of the IMMORTAL SEEDS from which were born the Two-and-Twenty MORTAL PEOPLES.

No true source exists for the name outside of translations of the Mythologia Elyden appearing in the THIRD AGE. Some agree on two common roots: the 'ae' ligature, once commonly used in words describing OTHERWORLDERS of a morally dark persuasion; and 'illi' being used in words with the opposite meaning, hence, 'the Being of Two Halves' or 'the Light and Dark', being two common epithets. See Vol IV: the Mythologia Elyden.

AELLO, THE GODHEAD: Arc. Int. An ancient monument of mystic origins in a style commonly referred to as a GODHEAD, that takes the form of a gigantic stone head in the north of the UMBRA SOKHAR. Like so many of ELYDEN'S ancient edifices, there is little that can today explain the strangeness that is the Godhead.

Aello is more than a colossal head though, and it is regarded as a semi-aware abomination that locals revere as a deity out of fear. The Godhead lies on the ground at an angle, as a decapitated head might, the stone in its neck soft and soap-like and weeping a pungent liquid that can only be described as sap or blood. Its humanoid features only serve to make the edifice, whose origins are unknown, all the stranger, as do the unique trees and creepers that grow around it. The wood from those unholy plants is dried, and their resin is used by its worshippers in divine rituals. Those who breathe in the smoke of these resins are said to converse with the Godhead, hearing portentous words. See Vol IV: Gods and Pantheons.

AELLOS: Geo. Temperate plains and sparse woodlands dominating the north east of JURRAS⁽²⁾. The river EURRTOS flows through it, providing fresh water for many of its settlements.

AELON: Set. Settlement in the north of LHACCIDA. Its main industry is viticulture, which is an ancient tradition that was brought to the region by an ancient order of knights that has since disappeared. Its wines are dry and fruity with a faint effervescence from faint FIRMAMENTAL influences in the region (Pop. c. 3,200).

AELOR: 1. His. Pol. Geo. One of five distinct political and cultural regions to emerge from the collapse of the Therashian Empire in 902 RM. It was the southern-most of the territories and was named after the mystic figure who had brought the philosophy of AELORANISM to Therashian Empire, instead adopting the teachings of the ORDER OF EPISTEMIC ESOTERY.

Its territories would eventually give rise to the nation of LAN-THALL, which itself would be consumed by the CITIZENRY OF THALI. See Vol III: Extinct States.

2. (D. c. -12 RM) Phi. Rel. Figure of religious and philosophical importance in the north of WESTERN SAMMAEA, and whose teachings led to the rise of the religion known as AELORANISM. A nameless late generation HALFBLOOD that emerged in the city of THERASH in c. -110 RM, they spent years spreading a simple message of knowledge and understanding.

Within a decade, a religio-philosophy had emerged that espoused a dogma that knowledge of the world could help to cure most negative emotions such as ignorance, bigotry, hatred and fear.

These teachings became very popular amongst the lower classes and the mystics' teachings rapidly spread, by which time they had earned the nickname Aelor, which in the Therashian tongue meant 'wise one'. They received opposition from the ruling classes but were eventually adopted by the armies and even some amongst the upper classes, leading to the movement becoming commonplace in Therash and some surrounding regions, by c. -20 RM.

Their death in c. -12 RM war mourned across Therash, and a palace-like tomb was constructed outside of the city, which remains today as a large shrine in the north of SATHAII.

AELOR, TOMB OF: Rel. Str. Tomb and shrine in the north of SATHAII where the body of the HALFBLOOD Aelor is interred. The tomb is also a shrine of the AELORAN CHURCH and is popular with pilgrims of the faith, who seek it out from across the north west of SAMMAEA, where the religion holds sway.

AELORANISM: Rel. Religio-philosophy that originated in the city of THERASH in the north west of SAMMAEA early in c. -100 RM, and which has since become a major religion in SATHAII, the north of the CITIZENRY OF THALI, as well as the VESPERTINE LEAGUE, where doctrine varies by region.

The religion is based on the teachings of a nameless mystic, thought now to have been a late generation HALFBLOOD, whose teachings revolved around knowledge and understanding. Their main dogma was that knowledge of the world could help to cure most negative emotions such as ignorance, bigotry, hatred and fear. Their teachings became very popular amongst the lower classes and the mystics' teachings rapidly spread, by which time they had earned the nickname of AELOR, which in the Therashian tongue meant 'wise one'. They received opposition from the ruling classes but were eventually adopted by the armies and even some amongst the upper classes, leading to the philosophy becoming relatively commonplace in Therash and some surrounding regions, by c. -20 RM.

By the time of their death, their dogma had become cemented in the minds of the Therashian people, and what had originated merely as a guiding philosophy eventually grew into a fully-fledged religion that took on the name of Aeloranism, after its founders' nickname. Literacy was espoused amongst all classes, though those not conforming to the main tenets of the faith began to be ostracised for their beliefs. Many felt that this harsh stance went against the original teachings of the Mystic, and opposed the changing tenets of the faith. These people were branded as heretics in an edict that was passed in 82 RM, and were exiled from Therash. These exiles would go on to found various secretive monasteries that espoused the true tenets of the faith – knowledge and understanding – and would eventually become known as the ORDER OF EPISTEMIC ESOTERY.

Aeloranism supported the conquests of SONI-VAPHRA, who in the space of a few decades, starting in c. 115 RM was able to subjugate a vast swathe of territories to the east of Therash, which became known as the THERASHAN EMPIRE. Priests of the Aelor accompanied the armies in these campaigns, and spread the word of Aeloranism amongst subjugated people, forcing them to abandon their own beliefs and convert to worship of Aelor. Unlike the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, very little effort was made to convert local deities into saints of the conquering religion, and instead they were simply quashed, with those who refused being executed or exiled into foreign lands.

By this time the original dogma of the philosophy Ser. down by Aelor had been corrupted into a machine of propaganda to further the interests of the empire, while feeding the people the quotations and passages of Aelor that they wanted to hear. Priests had become educators as much as spiritual leaders, teaching the twisted tenets of Aeloranism to the young to instil in them a sense of conformity and community.

The eventual collapse of the Therashian empire in 902 RM left the church of Aeloranism relatively strong, and it became one of the few constants over the next centuries as the region recovered from collapse. One of the five states that emerged in the power vacuum was Aelor, whose people had unshackled themselves from the politics that had consumed Aeloranism, and instead returned to the teachings of the Order of Epistemic Esotery as a philosophy, rather than a religion.

The Church survives to this day as a major religion in the north west of Sammaea, and is common in Sathaii, the north of the Citizenry of Thali, as well as the Vespertine League. Its doctrine has changed little in the millennia, and it can be said that its tenets reverted to a more philosophical outlook closer to their origins once the Therashian empire collapsed, though there have been divisions in denominations over the years, particularly in the Vespertine League, where it is interpreted differently in different regions. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

AELORIA: Sup. Set. Settlement in the c south west of WESTERN MENISCEA, situated on a LODELITH about a mile above the WESTERN TULURKRYPH, above the far east of VARU. It is home to a few separate communities of AIKLAHS who take advantage of Aeloria's isolation, which helps to defend them and keep their presence largely unknown. The settlement is otherwise accessible by SKYSKIFF (Pop. c. 2,200).

AEMETMEN: lit. 'empty thought'. Org. Caste of warrior-monks in RHEA originating in c. 1000 RM. They devote their lives to asceticism and studying the FIRMAMENT, seeking a union with it that few others can obtain. This union is called Aemetmen, 'the empty mind'. Once this state is reached, they claim to be granted an insight that guides their movements and thoughts, aiding them in combat.

They dwell in monasteries in the north eastern face of the AHRAN HIGHLANDS and are largely insular, though they do trade a nectar wine with the cities in return for any goods or materials they may need. In the past the monks have aided the people of Rhea in times of need and the people of more civilised lands keep a cordial relationship with the monks, would the need for aid ever arise again.

AEMISIA: Set. Coastal city in the south west of SEDALLIA perched on a cliff-top, overlooking the SEA OF KRAKEA (Pop. c. 84,200).

AENEAN OIL SANDS: Sup. Geo. Large flat expanse of naturally-polluted land in the c east of PELASGOS that is covered in thick oil seep that mars the surface, coating all the land. Various bitumen 'quarries' can be found across the region, where machinery and slaves scrape the surface for bitumen that is used in industry. The largest of these is the settlement of CLYSIS.

AENEON: Set. Settlement in the c north west of KHARKHARADONTIS, within the REALM OF THE MARKED PALL. It is famed for its gleaming bronze domes and its expansive cisterns and aqueducts that draw water from springs in the UBRATIA Mountains (Pop. unknown).

AENU: Sea. Coast along the south of KHAMID, measuring some 180-miles long, between the isthmus of EKETH and the headland of AMUTH. The sea is relatively shallow here and is home to many small coastal settlements, which thrive on fishing.

AEONAN PENINSULA: Geo. Long peninsula dominating the south west of the nation of AEONAS. The western-most tip is part of the ISLAND STATES OF IRY.

AEONAS: Ntn. Nation in the south west of Western Sammaea. Climate/terrain *

It has been ruled by an autocratic plutocratic republic since 3588 RM, which comprises three seats of power, which, in theory are occupied by representatives from rotating corporations and conglomerates, but which have been held by the same three factions since 3628 RM – the SILDELK RING, HOUSE VODUS, and the PEOPLE'S COALITION. It is known for its fine ebony. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

AEONIA: For. Major forest in the c west of GNOTH, stretching from the ALKAHEST in the west to the coast of SEGATAYA in the east.

AEPATHY: Med. Sup. ATRAMENTAL AILMENT causing the ATRAMENTA to become attracted to the sufferer in levels that, over time, are detrimental to their health. It is considered to be a congenital condition. Sufferers are often born without symptoms, though over their formative years they may become pale, their veins protuberant and dark, their eyes sunken, and with thin scleras. Over the years, their bodies may become twisted and/or sick. Few sufferers live long, with most reaching their early or late teens before the disease claims them. The condition has fascinated BIOPSISTS for many years, who have used their blood in the creation of UMBRANS, particularly SIPHONS. See Vol II: Diseases and Illnesses.

AEPATHY TOWNS: see OMITTED ONES.

AEQHEN: Set. Settlement in the far south west of RAONGEN^(2,). Its main industry is sheep rearing (Pop. c. 6,000).

AERNA: Set. Small coastal city in the north east of KOMMEA, in the north of the HOLLOW COASTLINE, overlooking a deep fjord (Pop. c. 13,000).

AERUGIA: Geo. Rust desert to the east of the KARARTA Mountains north of the city of KEPHOTEKR.

AERUGINIA: also 'the Copper Wastes' and 'the Green Desert'. Sup. Geo. Stony desert in the IMBRIAN Badlands in c south eastern CEHOPHELA, named after its copper-rich rock formations, which gives the region its distinctive colouring. The region is known for its picturesque natural monuments, though is of little use to industry so has been largely ignored over the years.

AES: Arc. Mil. Fortress in the south west of ARKOS^(1.), guarding the copper mines there.

AESALLA: Flo. The eldest individual tree known in the c of the HENDECARCHY of AMILLAERE^(1.), in the c of MALAN, within the city of the same name^(2.). The tree is immense, larger than many other nations' cities, its main trunk a monolithic thing, its bark petrified and stone-like, covered in FIRMAMENTAL runes and ley-markers, the eldest of which are believed to date back to the first days of MORTAL life.

The Malani people do not often share their myths and legends with outsiders, though KORACHANI scholars believe that the Tree is amongst one of the first creations of the DEMIURGES, possibly attributable to ASHTERATH

AESAPIA: 1. Arc. Dam built across the river SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾ in AETHIOS in 2943 RM, following close to a century of construction. The completion of the dam changed life in Aethios, providing the entire nation with hydroelectric power, but in so-doing the flow of the river was irrevocably altered, leading to nations downstream of the dam, such as PARAIYA and LIDEA, suffering greatly as a consequence.

KORACHAN declared war on Aethios following attempts at dissuading it from constructing the dam, and managed to destroy it 3017 RM, following years of failed attempts. The destruction of the dam caused untold damages to both Aethiosi and Korachani cities and thousands are thought to have perished by its flooding waters, and thousands more were displaced.

Even though the course of the river Shibboleth was restored close to a millennia ago, the changes caused by its damming were great and, in some cases, irreversible. $\underline{\text{MERILLS}}, \text{ which swam upstream to lake } \underline{\text{SIBALLA}} \text{ and } \underline{\text{AKASM}}^{(1.)} \text{ to spawn, were unable to do so for 6-decades, leading to their near extinction, from which they are yet to recover. The sight of them slamming their bloodied and broken bodies against the dam was one that featured in many pieces of art from the day, and remains part of Aethiosi$ cultural memory to this day. Even now, for a distance of over 200-miles upstream from the location of the broken dam, the land is grey and lifeless, a fact exacerbated by the encroaching shadow in the region of the BLEEDING PLAINS.

Today, the remnants of the dam still stymie the flow of the river Shibboleth, and merills find it difficult to make their way up the concrete foundations, that still serve as a barrier to uninterrupted travel along the river.

- 2. Lak. Artificial lake caused by the damming of the river SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾. Despite the dam's destruction in 3017 RM, a small lake still remains just upstream of the dam's remnants, though it is much reduced in size to the great reservoir that once collected beyond the dam.
- 3. Set. City constructed at the edge of the above dam^(1.). At its peak, just before the destruction of the dam, it boasted a population of close to a million, but it is now greatly diminished, though still draws electricity through hydroelectric means. (Pop. c. 90,000).

AESCETICKS, the: Org. Esoteric group based in the district of EGISIUM in the CITY OF ALMAGEST, whose search for mental perfection left their bodies withered and broken, but their minds incredibly acute, sensitive to both the ATRAMENTA and the FIRMAMENT.

The group was prevalent between c. 1300-1800~RM, and was at its peak of power at around 1650 RM, where high-ranking members were amongst the most trusted and influential INTELLIGENTSIA in the city, though a power-shift removed most of them from power, seeing the Aesceticks dwindle in renown.

AESILAN: 1. For. Forest in the far south of KOLCHIS, thought to have been the source for the native name for the land^(2.).

2. Lan. Ntn. Native name for the GREY FOREST of KOLCHIS, used by locals and the people of ALAM BETHYL, who share a LANGUAGE. Corruptions of the name are used west of there, including in GNOTH and beyond.

AESLIL: Rvr. River flowing east and north east in the south east of MENISCEA, serving as a border between the nations of IMELKOT in the north and TAES in the south. The river was recently the subject of POLITICAL TENSIONS between the two nations, with its course altering, moving south slowly yet steadily over the past centuries.

AESLIL NEUTRAL ZONE: Geo. Pol. Territory between the nations of <a href="Image: Image: Image:

This led to a big discrepancy between the original borders as set down in 3789 RM and in 3992 RM, when a conclave between the two nations was called for, though no accord could be reached. This led to the land situated between the original borders from three centuries ago and the later shifted borders becoming contested.

Troops from both nations now occupy the neutral zone and people have been forced to vacate their homes, with some not even being given a choice as to which nation they wanted to flee to. People are discouraged from entering this neutral zone and those found within it are typically shot by troops from either side.

AESOPA: Rvr. River in the north west of PELASGOS, that dried some centuries ago. It once fed the industries in the settlement of CHIARO, which was abandoned after the river dried up. The river is thought to have dried due to damming and its natural sources, which used to flow for most of the year, running dry all year round.

AESSAS: Set. Small city in the south east of Zhariah^(2.) (Pop. c. 12,800).

AETA: Set. Settlement in the region of SYNCRASIA in the north of THE SURRACH. Its people are expert tinkers and are skilled and making and mending small engines and machines (Pop. c. 5,800).

AETANORS: Set. Mil. Small fortified city in the north of AETHIOS, along the ARAMI ROAD, linking the c of Aethios to the north east (Pop. c. 12,800).

AETAL: Set. Ancient city in the west of ERASHA, founded by ARABEALLI immigrants in c. -900 RM. The settlement slowly grew as the region established itself as part of the re-emerging Erashan culture that appeared in c. -350 RM, though as the region slowly collapsed, the city fell into anarchy and diminished by the rise of the AGE OF STEEL.

The ruins of Aetal were repopulated in c. 615 RM by the nation of OPRET, and renamed AEDAN.

AETEREN: Set. Coastal settlement in the west of RAONGEN⁽²⁾ (Pop. c. 4.300).

AETHER: Lan. Archaic term used interchangeably with the FIRMAMENT. The word was common in the antiquity of the FIFTH AGE and was likely a remnant from usage in past ages.

Some regions note a distinction between Aether and the Firmament with the former used to describe the physical realm of the Firmament with the latter used to denote the element itself, in relation to $\underline{\text{SHAPERS}}$ and its effects felt in the mortal plane.

AETHER WINDS: Sup. Supranatural phenomenon affecting the MATERIA OMNA and the acts of SHAPERS. Similar to the way climate affects localised weather, so too do the Aether winds affect shaping in specific areas. This is similar to the ARCANE TEMPERS, but tend to affect only specific spheres. Certain regions might make shaping or the use of technarcane engines more or less effective as a result, despite their location relative to the NULLAMBIT.

Both MALAN and GNOTH are positioned in regions affected by strong FIRMAMENTAL aether winds, making acts of shaping that call upon the Firmament particularly strong, despite them being closer to THE BLACK FOUNTAIN than THE TRUE MENISCUS. See Vol IV: Supranatural Features.

AETHERBLOOD: Lan. Common term in the east of LLACHATUL and some regions in the west of MENISCEA, used in reference to HALFBLOODED creatures who claim to be able to trace their descent to an ILLITHAMÉ.

AETHERIAL THRONE: Pol. Rel. Obj. The throne of THE TAELLANNIR—the OTHERWORLDLY autocrat and living-god of LOEGRESS (1.). The throne was discovered in the westernmost reaches of the HOLLOW COASTLINE in the northeast of Loegress in 3177 RM after three months of searching following a cryptic edict uttered by the Taellannir to her HIEROPHANTS.
The throne is a single intricately shaped glass-like marble of strange qualities and unknown origin, with some theologists claiming it was brought there by the Taellannir from the OTHERWORLD, or otherwise shaped in-situ from the essence of the otherworld.

It was taken back to the castle of CAER SIDI^(2.) and was installed as her throne, where it remains to this day. Following her abandonment of Loegress in 3919 RM, the throne remained empty, with the kingdom ruled by elected Hierophant regents on her behalf.

The original site where the throne was found remains a place of religious significance to this day. The temple of CAELL EN WAYR was built over the site, which is guarded by a small order of hierophant templars.

AETHERIC CAUTERITY: Int. Sup. SUPRANATURAL phenomenon observed in space that can causes the ELEMENTAE VITALE to be felt upon ELYDEN, causing severe burns to mortals exposed to them. More extreme effects include necrosis of the flesh and death. Fortunately. ELYDEN is largely protected from these effects thanks to its atmosphere, which shields from the worst effects. There are regions of Elyden where the Aetheric Cauterity is felt more than others. See Vol IV: the Materia Omna.

AETHIOS: Dem. 'Aethiosi'. Ntn. Nation in the north of SAMMAEA, positioned south of N'RAKH., east of the UMBRA SOKHAR, west of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER, and north of RHINOCOLOURA. The name Aethios was first used to describe the people surrounding a 1,000-mile stretch of the river SHIBBOLETH^(3,) in 2543 RM by the expatriated KORACHANI PATRICIAN ETHAND. This followed decades of conflict in the region and led to the unification of its people.

The damming of the river Shibboleth in 2943 RM saw the ROYAL HOUSE OF ETHAND reach full power, under whose aegis its cities prospered, but the damming led to a declaration of war by the Korachani empire, and the eventual destruction of the dam. The region remained independent until the REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO, hungry for lucrative Aethiosi SOULSTONE mines, declared war, eventually forcing the Royal House into a vassalage that lasted for centuries, before Sarastro lost interest due to more pressing matters in the north. A priestly caste called the ABUNA fought for independence, finally gaining it in c. 3810 RM, abolishing the Royal House of Ethand.

This led to the formation of the HOLY REPUBLIC of Aethios in 3817 RM, which remains in control to this day, under the counsel of the Abuna, whose spiritualist beliefs are the backbone of the kingdom. An ARCHNEGUS is elected from the ranks of the NEGUS upper classes, who rules for seven years. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

AETHIOSI: Lan. Language spoken in AETHIOS and by traders in the north of RHINOCOLOURA. It originated from AKSARAN⁽²⁾ and travelled north to Rhinocoloura via trade early in the FIFTH AGE, where it mixed with ill-defined native tongues, taking on its own form.

It has since taken on many KORACHANI influences from the days when the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE was a dominant religion there, through remains a distinct SAMMAEAN language. See Vol II: Languages.

AETHIOSI ANIMISM: Rel. Mys. The dominant religion in the HOLY REPUBLIC OF AETHIOS. Originally worshippers of the UNDYING MACHINE, the people of Aethios forsook the teachings of the DEMIURGE RACHANAEL after the KORACHANI EMPIRE attacked in 2943 RM following the completion of the dam of AESAPIA (1.). The destruction of the dam levelled many cities and killed innocents in their thousands, causing many people to become disillusioned with their deity, who was also the deity of the armies that had attacked them, and caused the destruction of the dam.

After the war was won the people of Aethios toppled all churches of the Undying Machine, and left them to be reclaimed by nature. This was originally unintentional, but as the ruins were reclaimed by nature, it became a symbolic gesture, one that reminded them of the strength of nature over corruption. This was a powerful notion, as Aethios had struggled against Atramental Corruption for some time, and people began to worship nature as a triumphant force.

Before the coming of Korachani MISSIONARIES to their lands, the ancestors of Aethios worshipped the river SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾ as a deity and source of life, and they found themselves returning to this. The river once more became prominent in their worship, becoming the head of a cycle of nature spirits, at the centre of which was the ATRAMENTA – an antagonist that represented temptation and corruption.

Shapers became its priests, known as IMAMNI, reviving an old tradition that had been abandoned with the dwindling of the SEPHIAN caste's power in Aethios. These shapers would become the ABUNA, who would eventually go on to liberate Aethios from SARASTROAN subjugation in 3810 RM, becoming the rulers of the new Holy Republic in 3817 RM. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

AETLIS: Set. Settlement in the c north east of AETHIOS, in the south western face of the ARAM Mountains. Its main industry is agate mining, which it does through the use of deep vertical shafts (Pop. c. 8,000).

AETONIA: also 'the Eternal City'. Set. City in the north west of SAMMAEA, to the south west of SEPAHAUNAT. It has existed continuously for millennia, as far back as formal records or legends of the area permit, waxing and waning variably over time, at times being a metropolis, at other little more than a caravanserai.

Today, it is a small settlement, surrounded by the crumbled ruins of what was before, housing a large caravanserai, market where wayfarers can trade, and is noted for its expansive library, with recovered tomes from its myriad histories, rescued from the ruins, housed in a subterranean vaulted treasury (Pop. c. 1,000).

AEVITERNITY, TEMPLE OF: Rel. Str. Religious temple in the city of HETEPHEROPOLIS, VENTHIR, dating to PRE-IMPERIAL times. In its original incarnation, it was dedicated to the divinity and immortality of QUEEN HETEPHERES. Following its vassalage to the KORACHANI EMPIRE, it remained as a symbol of her potency though only secondary to that of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR, whose missionaries forcibly established his own temple there.

Following the Sundering of the Korachani empire in 3705 RM, the Church of the Undying Machine lost influence in Venthir and the Temple of Aeviternity regained prominence, remaining the centre of the Cult of the Sphinx to this day.

AEYUAN: Set. City in the south west of RAONGEN⁽²⁾, along the course of river GARAILI (Pop. c. 40,000).

AF'OIL: Set. City in the north of $\underline{GREST}^{(1)}$ in the island-continent of $\underline{BROR}^{(1)}$ (Pop unknown).

AFAINASAY: His. Ntn. Now-extinct nation in the island-continent of $\underline{BROR}^{(1)}$ in the c north of present-day $\underline{GREST}^{(1)}$.

It emerged in c. 1450 RM and eventually became a part of the COALITION OF SURISSIA. It faltered following the Coalition's collapse in 2132 RM, and its former territories eventually merged with those of EGRAT in c. 2300 RM, keeping the name Egrat. See Vol III: Extinct States.

AFARIEN: Set. Small coastal city in the north east of MENISCEA, located in an exclave of ABARHAL^(3,) in the eponymous headland^(2,). It is surrounded by the PARTHISAN colony of IBANNEM^(1,). The two disparate lands have learnt to coexist, though the people of Afarien are weary of the colonists, knowing that they may decide to expand their borders without notice. As a result, it has enacted a citizen army, which over the years has become well-trained and prepared for the worst (Pop. c. 12,000).

AFFISH: Atr. Sup. Geo. Region of ATRAMENTAL TAINT in the north of ALMAGEST, to the south west of the MARMARA MASSIF. The region is replete with DUSTSTONE and narrow caverns that are rife with flora and fauna that are adapted to the terrain. The deeper caves in the region are rich in raw UMBRA, and two SIPHON ENGINES are located nearby: ISTIMATI in the west and KETLANDIR in the south. The taint from Affish seeps into the river KETTCHA, rendering it undrinkable and inimical to life.

AFFITAI: Set. Fortified settlement in the far south of PNESSA, in the region of SIMEANAGH. Its main industry is logging (Pop. c. 3,000).

AFIMI: Set. Small city in the c north west of PNESSA. Its main industry is the mining of SOULSTONES, which is done via surface mining that is mostly done through slave labour. The soulstones are used in the TECHNARCANE industry, though a small number are also exported at great profit. Each soulstone is thoroughly examined by SHAPERS to decide where it is best used – industry, export, or research (Pop. c. 13,000).

AFIZ, PYLON OF: Set. Coastal pylon fortress in the south east of TETHYSIA, overlooking the inland sea of HASOTLEPH. The pylon once served as a harbour from which exploratory fleets were launched east, though the withdrawal of the seas in the region have now left it land-locked, though its defensive batteries and troops continue to guard the immediate coastline (Pop. c. 5,500).

AFGAH: Rui. Abandoned settlement in the c of BA'AKH. It was once a healthy caravanserai, serving trade and travel going north and south along the east of Ba'akh, though as the region died it slowly waned until its abandonment in c. 3200 RM.

AFLUHEN: Rui. Ruins in the c north west of AHRISHEN, 28-miles from the river PELADA. Prior to the SEA OF PYREA diminishing this settlement was notable for its shipyards, though it was abandoned in c. 3750 RM, following years of struggle after it became landlocked, and remains now as a ghost town, its shipyards stark against the surrounding land.

AFTAH: Rui. Abandoned settlement in the c of BA'AKH. Once the heart of a thriving agricultural centre, it is built on a rocky hill, commanding unrivalled views of the enveloping region. Its stone houses are now empty and crumbling, the farmlands that once surrounded it barren and ashen.

AFTERLIFE: Sup. Rel. Belief that death of the MORTAL body is not final and that the individual continues to live on within the SPIRIT (1.). In many cases, this belief also involves the OTHERWORLD and/or OTHERWORLDERS, whose life cycles are inextricably linked with death and the spirit. The belief in the afterlife in a mystical sense is not universal despite empirical knowledge regarding the otherworld and otherworlders, and even amongst people who believe in an afterlife there is much conflict as to interpretation. See Vol IV: The Afterlife and the Spirit.

Various beliefs in the afterlife are summarised below:

1. In the Church of the Undying Machine and most of its offshoots and sects, the afterlife is regarded with pragmatic fatalism, as is expected of the KORACHANI EMPIRE. The typical belief is that the spirits of the dead await in the otherworld until an unnamed and unspecified eschatological event (commonly referred to but never specific in doctrine as the RUINATION) that culminates in the unceremonious ceasing of the universe and all within it. At this point the spirits of the dead (both those who had died prior to and those who died during the ending of time) will be consumed by the LORD RACHANAEL, before he too is obliterated, bringing worshipper and deity together in ecstatic union, even if only for an infinitesimal moment.

The religion's stance on otherworlders and halfbloods is complex and has changed many times throughout its history (for theological as well as political reasons). For many generations now, the doctrine has accepted otherworlders as a step in the path to the Ruination, and that spirits reborn as otherworlders before this time (whether still alive or having been reborn and ultimately expired before the Ruination) will enjoy a more intimate connection with the Lord Rachanael at the moment of the Ruination.

2. In VENTHIR, the afterlife is known as ALINA.

AGA: Rvr. River in the south of BA'AKH, flowing north east for 400-miles from sources in the northern peaks of the STERHBEL Mountains before emptying in the DAARKEN GULF. The cities of AGUR and SUMA'YA were built on its banks (with the former once being a coastal city). Despite the history of ATRAMENTAL-CORRUPTION in the region surrounding the river, the Aga has flown relatively clean throughout most of its existence.

Despite this, man-made pollution during KORACHANI occupation of Ba'akh did blacken its waters, though with the imperial withdrawal in 3097 RM the river has slowly recovered.

AGABERA: 1. Rvr. River in the north west of GNOTH, flowing south for 530-miles from sources in the VAGNOSTAN Mountains before meeting its tributary, the river MARAGA, where it widens to the wetlands known as the AGABERAN WATERS.

2. Mys. In GNOTHI MYSTICISM, Agabera was the daughter of VAGNOSTAN.

AGABERAN WATERS: Rvr. Wetlands in the north west of GNOTH, along the termination of the river AGABERA, as it meets its parent, the river MARAGA.

AGAIA: Atr. Mil. Coastal fortress belonging to the WHITE LEAGUE in the north east of PARTHIS, overlooking the SEA OF TARAMAR. The fortress was erected in c. 3100 RM and guards the route south into the SEA OF BYSSOS (Pop. c. 42,000).

AGAIR: Pol. Set. Island-capital of ESHIR^(2.), on the island of AGORIN, overlooking the SEA OF ORRIDA, guarding the entrance into the SEA OF AGAIRA. The city is at least 2 millennia old and has existed in various incarnations, the oldest of which is thought to have been a monastery of the ASSEERI PANTHEON that dates back to c. 2140 RM.

Successive incarnations were heavily fortified and the antiquated bastions of the city have since seen the city outgrow them, and they now guard its Noble district. Though once coastal, the city is now some distance from the coast, though remains prosperous, linked to the surrounding seas by the port of ANARIK (Pop. c. 225,500).

AGAIRA: Sea. Small sea, about 1,500 square-miles, located just to the north of ESHIR^(2.), dividing the mainland from the islands of AGORIN and GEMARIS. The sea is named after the city of AGAIR, which is situated nearby on the island of Gemaris.

AGALLOCH: For. Sparse EAGLEWOOD forest in the c north east of AZAZEM. Woodlands had existed here for millennia but they had been cut down by c. 2200 RM to make room for fields and farmland, though trees began to slowly reclaim the land after the farms were abandoned.

AGALLOCH WATERWAYS: Rvr. Ind. Major network of canals in the north of AZAZEM. They once served as a major industrial and agricultural transportation system, moving grain, flour, and other food produce from across the north and east of Azazem to the more populated west in a vast agricultural network that totalled tens of thousands of miles of canals and rivers. As the region's main industry changed from agricultural to the manufacture of dross many of these waterways were abandoned. Some were reclaimed by nature, while others became the centre of settlements and the main mode of transportation between them.

Many rivers that flowed south from the CHACTHORNYS Mountains were once controlled, leading to the creation of a vast network of canals between 1300-1600 RM. They were linked by hundreds of locks that were used to raise and lower the levels of different canals, allowing barges and other vessels to safely traverse them from one side of Azazem to the other.

As the agricultural industries of Azazem gave way to dross manufacture, many of these waterways found themselves becoming abandoned, with various courses becoming overgrown and unnavigable as nature slowly took over. Entire stretches would flood as the dams in the Chacthornys fell into disrepair, leading to settlements becoming abandoned. Eventually, entire stretches of the old network were overtaken by large seasonal lakes, such as VANKER and RANNO^(1,1), that continue to lead to the dilapidation of older parts of the network.

Other parts of the waterway remain in use to this day, and supply various manufactories, such as GATTARACH with raw grain, which is then processed into flour for distribution across Azazem.

AGALOSH: Sct. Shanty-city 10-miles north east of ALMAGEST, in the wastes of SUPHLATUS. The city appeared as a result of the construction and domestic waste that emerges constantly from the CITY OF ALMAGEST and is largely populated by exiles and scavs and other outcasts from the city-proper.

It exists largely outside the laws of Almagest, though its populace is occasionally culled or press-ganged into military or religious service (Pop. c. 37,000)

AGAMAN: Mil. Org. Militant group based in KASPIA, made up of blademasters who are noted for their elaborate brocaded clothing, their mountain-monasteries, and their eschewal of modern military tactics and equipment. Little is known of the group's tenets, and its members proffer few words or explanation to outsiders.

AGAPE TABLE: Rel. Arc. Soc. Stone tables found in hypogea and catacombs in PRE-IMPERIAL KORACHAN. The tables, which were hewn from the living rock of the catacombs, were used in funereal feasts where the living would honour the lives of the dead.

It was a Common feature, and its use was carried over into graveyards of the early Church of the Iron Deity (the precursor of the Church of the Undying Machine), with a stone table outside the funereal chapel, where mourners would feast during burial masses. When burial customs shifted and Funerary towers became the cultural norm, the tradition of agape tables changed once more, with a table being located in the bottom of most funerary towers, where the skulls of the dead are consecrated before being placed into storage.

AGAPH: Geo. Inland cliff system in the west of OSSIEL, and which is known for its vast deposits of JET.

AGARAN: Lan. Language of the INTERURBAN STATES, that emerged as a creole of KORACHANI, TARAHAN and PARTHISAN between c. 2800 – 3150 RM. See Vol II: Languages.

AGARAR: Set. Small city in the c south west of VENTHIR. It is known for its ancient public baths, many of which are still in use today (Pop. c. 15,000).

AGARES THE CALLOUS, HEIR OF JURRAS: (B. c. 250 RM) Oth. Sup. HALFBLOODED ATRAMENTIST, and ruling member of the short-lived city-state of JURRAS⁽³⁾. He fled into the KHARKHARADONTID hinterlands with followers of the SCION KHAR'ILLAE, after the KORACHANI EMPIRE took control of Jurras inn 403 RM, after which he disappeared.

He is believed to have been executed by KORACHANI LICTORS, though infrequent appearances across Jurras since then, led to him becoming a figure of legend, believed to still be alive by many. Apocryphal sightings have him mounted on a corrupted MONITOR^(2.).

AGARIA: Set. City to the north of SATARNICA in the c north west of the VESPERTINE LEAGUE in the north of SAMMAEA. The settlement is built amid the ruin of a gigantic square tower that is thought to have once formed part of the defences surrounding the gates of Satarnica. The settlement's innermost districts are built into the tower's foundations, with more outlying structures constructed from masonry plundered from ruined sections of the tower (Pop. unknown).

AGARIK: Set. Ind. Mining settlement in the c north east of GNOTH, in the region of AGASTIA, specialising in the mining of rare crystalline FIRMATITE, which is used in architecture and the construction of FIRMAMENTALLY-sensitive statues (Pop. c. 1,200).

AGARTHA: Set. City in the c of TETHYSIA, in the region of ANGMEHEN, situated atop a 20-ft.-deep sinkhole that collapsed c. 3284 RM. The city was severely damaged but was immediately repopulated and repaired, eventually outgrowing the sinkhole (Pop. c. 122,000).

AGASAKI: 1. Geo. Mountain pass in the far north of the KOKORO Mountains, linking the north west of SAUA with the south east of VIRAHAN. The pass leads to the wetland forest of TAIROKO in Saua and is rarely travelled today, with most using the ORCAMMOR PASS 67-miles to the north east instead.

2. Mil. Str. Fortress in the north west of SAUA, guarding the eponymous pass. It has in influence diminished since its height, hundreds of years ago, and is now controlled by a handful of guards.

AGASTIA: 1. Sup. Geo. FIRMAMENTALLY active region in the c north east of GNOTH, along the northern POLAR CIRCLE. For the most part it is cracked and dry with little running water and many large FIRMATITE crystals, which have been mined for centuries and are used in Gnothi architecture.

2. Alc. Rui. Ancient ruined settlement in the above region in the north east of GNOTH, where it is believed the ALCHEMICAL methods of sublimation were devised.

3. Str. Monument to the eponymous settlement, now ruined, that existed in GNOTH. The monument is of a dull metal and depicts, in abstract form, the transmutation of a solid (its base) to gas (its crown).

AGATEGA: Set. Major city in the c north west of the DOMAINS OF SHAUATAS. It is a centre of the region's apocalyptic cult, and is home to various temples, each dedicated to a different eschatological aspect of the cult (Pop. c. 147,500). *

AGATHIS: Geo. Large cave-riddled mesa in the north west of TZALLRACH.

The caverns are known for their mosses that glow faintly in the dark, illuminating the passages.

AGAVE: Flo. Fleshy-leaved plants common to arid regions across ELYDEN, particularly around THE INNER SEA and LLACHATUL. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

AGDAL: Rui. Abandoned city in the c-south east of TARTAK. The city was overwhelmed by the ATRAMENTAL WASTELANDS of HOTUTAER in c. 3288 RM, and was abandoned soon after.

AGE OF THE MACHINE: See AGE OF STEEL.

AGE OF MYTH: also 'Age of Wonders'. Myt. His. Common vernacular used across various nations and territories to denote the time of MYTHOHISTORY and history that is considered so far removed from the present as to be thought of as mythical by laymen. Most consider the FOURTH AGE to be the last officially recognised period that is considered to fall within the Age of Myth. Following this, the current FIFTH AGE, sometimes known as the AGE OF STEEL, is considered the contemporary epoch, despite being over 5-millennia long.

AGE OF STEEL: Myr. His. Epoch that dominated the FIFTH AGE OF MORTAL LIFE, commonly accepted to have begun in 1 RM with the unification of the KORACHANI city-states at the hands of the POTENTATE (later ARCHPOTENTATE) MALICHAR. Though many equate it with the Fifth Age, the Age of Steel comprises only the latter four millennia of the Fifth Age, which is itself is some 6,000 years long.

AGE OF WONDERS, the: Myr. His. Often used synonymously with the AGE OF MYTH, the Age of Wonders is more accurately used to describe the period during which the Two-and-Twenty DEMIURGES shapes ELYDEN and created life, otherwise known as the FIRST AGE OF SHAPING.

AGEA: Set. Settlement in the north east of KHITAI. Its main industry is shale quarrying, which has been ongoing for centuries in deep pits, many of which are now abandoned and flooded (Pop. c. 6,000).

AGEN, TREE OF: Int. Flo. Myt. His. Ageless tree in the GUTHAOCH region in the north west of THE OLD FOREST. The tree was once the DEMIURGE ACHAIAH, but after years of persecution at the hands of her brother ASHTERATH, she begged to THE SHAPER to take away her beauty and wisdom to be rid of him.

The Shaper uncharacteristically heeded her calls and turned her into the $\overline{\text{TREE OF AGEN}}$, losing her mobility and beauty, though maintaining her wisdom and timelessness, which were later transferred to the otherworlder $\underline{\text{METTUSRAH}}$, whose body became interred within her own bark-like body.

AGES, TREE OF: Rel. Flo. Tree of religious significance in the verdant lands of HADASSALON in the south west of SARASTRO. It is overseen by mystics, and has been the c of the MANCHR faith since c. 750 RM, and a sacred place as far back as the latter FOURTH AGE. The nuts of this tree contain many seeds, sometimes as little as one, often many more, up to 120. It is said that whoever picks up such a nut will live as long as the number of seeds it contains.

Being the font from which such seeds are born, the tree is seen as timeless and it is believed that even the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR visited the tree in his travels in 339 RM on his way to war. None know what he learnt there. This passage is possibly only told by the Manchr as a means to evade ICONOCLASTIC retribution. If so, it has worked – the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE recognises the place as sacred ground). A single Manchr warrior-monk guards the place at all times, his neophyte inheriting the position upon his death. A great brass cog is imbedded in the trunk of the tree, and I believed to have been placed there by an Otherworlder. One of the teeth is notched, illegible heirographs etched beneath it. The Manchr say that the tree will die when the bark covers the mark, all its scions dying with it.

AGGACTHAR: Flo. Also 'THE STONE TREE'. A specific petrified tree dating back to an ancient time, located within the stone forest of NITTHAL, in the south west of RTHEI. The only upright example of its kind in the area, Aggacthar is the centre of a substantial DERUWEID cult that dominates the region for miles around.

AGGORD BRINI: m. Pol. Per. (B. 3929 RM) Present Speaker of the GILDED UNION, the government of METHUMN, elected in 3977 RM. He is a corpulent figure who moves through the aid of a technarcane engine and is disliked by the common people.

AGGOSHETH: Geo. Rugged rocky area that dominates around 40,000-square-miles of the north west of SARAGOS, forming the southern-most part of the WORKNAH Mountains south of the ARUT DAZ.

AGGRABIA: Geo. Region of crystalline desert in the north east of TULURKRYPH^(1,) in the c south of WESTERN MENISCEA. The area is noted for its beauty, but it is FIRMAMENTALLY CORRUPTED, preventing any lengthy sojourn by mortals within its domains.

AGHA LLYR VÂNA: Lcg. Myt. VENATHI legend and myth, chronicling the trails of a culture-hero and the unification of two lands through his exploits – thought by many to broadly represent present-day TZALLRACH and VENTHIR. The myth is now largely forgotten, supplanted by corrupted imperialised versions, though some variants of it survive in rural areas of Venthir and northern SARASTRO.

The origins of the legend are believed to lie in the prevalent FOURTH AGE folklore involving the SOUTHERN PALADIN, which became corrupted throughout the FADING, later diverging as different cultures emerged. The Agha Llyr Vâna was such a legend that emerged in the late NATHI KINGDOM, becoming popular in the later empire of Venath. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

AGHAMA: Set. City-manufactory in the south of PHYRR, in the region of SLIMA. Its main industry is the mining and refining of iron into steel, which is used in various engineering and manufacturing works across Pyrr (Pop. c. 15.500).

AGHARIT: Set. City-manufactory in the far north west of PHYRR in the region of VEGHAKIR. The city is relatively isolated and lies along the course of the HAMMUIANDI river and is relatively close with the northern nation of ADHERA. Agharit has a grim reputation for its brutal living conditions. The workers, many of whom are born, live, and die within the confines of the city, are subjected to harsh labour in the manufactories, where the air is thick with smoke and the walls resonate with the constant clang of hammers.

The city is also known for its "Iron Prayer," a daily ritual where workers offer up their toil to the Imperiarch, believing that their suffering fuels the strength of Phyrran armies (Pop. c. 20,000).

AGHATYRAELL: Rel. Dei. Obj. The largest and most storied of the grotesque ancient KARGAMAN IDOLS. It was discovered in the region of KARGHEMIR⁽¹⁾ by ELITAGRI people in c. -1100 RM and was taken to the village of PHAND⁽²⁾, where it was responsible for a population growth, through which the settlement grew into a great city.

By c. -820 RM the city had grown into a major political and military power in the region, during which time its culture became distinct from that of the Elitagri territories in the east, possibly through the idol's influence. A cult soon emerged around the idol, whose disfigured face and body were believed to ward against evil. Those born with similar deformities were considered as sacred and were chosen by the cult to be groomed as priests. These priests later came to wield great power, and by c. -500 RM had become the rulers of Phand, in turn giving rise to the CONSANGUINE DYNASTY, in which incestuous unions were common. Ironically, this also resulted in a higher number of birth defects, which were interpreted as the favour of Aghatyraell, leading to more people than ever worshipping it.

The growing dominion of Phand over surrounding cities allowed worship of Aghatyraell to spread even further, and it becoming the dominant idol outside of the FEDERATION OF ELITAGRI STATES. In 1122 RM Elitagra declared war on Phand and its armies marched west, eventually besieging the city of Phand itself in 1126 RM. The city fell following a 3-month siege and the Idol of Aghatyraell was toppled soon after, ending almost two millennia of influence.

AGHEA: Set. Settlement in the c south of VALBAR^(2,). Its roots lie in the ruin of an ancient Almagesti city, though its present incarnation is much diminished. It is an agricultural centre, and its fields are peppered with the remnant of ancient ruins, vehicles, and manufactories. (Pop. c. 4.750).

AGIKASSA: Set. City on the eastern coast of PORPHYR. It is home to the largest harbour along the MIROVEAN coast in the nation, and it is one of few cities where contact with the outside world is allowed on a large scale. As a result, it is home to many embassies and offices where foreign dignitaries can stay while visiting the nation (Pop. c. 50,000).

AGILNA: Rui. Ind. Gigantic abandoned open-cast diamond mine in the region of TELLURIC in the south of ALMAGEST. At its height it was one of the largest diamond mines in ELYDEN and was guarded by troops from the STEEL CITADEL, though it is now empty, a haunt to degenerates and scays.

AGISTER: Pol. Rnk. An administrative title and rank in the KORACHANI

EMPIRE, overseeing logging operations. Though with the dying of ELYDEN'S natural resources, this is now a rare and largely symbolic rank for a PATRICIAN or similarly high-born individual to hold.

AGIUS, THE PANSOPHIC: m. Alc. Mys. Art. Per. (B. c. 2000 – D. 2677 RM)

LAASKHAN polymath: ALCHEMIST, ATRAMENTIST, contemplative, sculptor, inventor, architect, mathematician, engineer, geologist, technarcanist, cartographer and wordsmith.

A man whose unquenchable curiosity and expertise was equalled by few other mortals, Agius was a mysterious figure, a legend in his own (albeit unnaturally long) lifetime. He was able to prolong his life through archaic alchemical means, allowing him to spend more time examining the world around him. Once an inquisitive man, exploring ELYDEN extensively, he spent his last century of life in isolation as his writings slowly turned to gibberish, and he died alone in BAAYN during a time when his earlier works – once ground-breaking – had fallen out of favour. They have seen a resurgence since his death as scholars re-evaluate his work, which is not considered to have been pioneering and laying the foundations for those who came after him.

Amongst his many published works is the $\underline{\text{TETHRAN CODEX}}$, which is now in private hands in $\underline{\text{TETHRA}}$.

AGLABHA: Pol. Set. Large coastal city and capital of the HENDECARCHY of LONAR in the far south west of MALAN, situated along the south western coast of the nation, overlooking the BAY OF GITHKA. It is home to the LONARI HENDECARCH, and is a vital link in the GREAT ROAD trade-route, and its markets, auction houses and ports are busy with the hustle and bustle of mercantile life, moving trade between the Malani trade route known as the AEGISWAY with the Great Road.

It was a stronghold of LARAMI^(1.) independence following the death of emperor LADRAOLAN III in 2021 RM and was the last major Larami city to fall to the armies of the Lady Aegis in 2075 RM, after which the nation of Malan was founded. It remains amongst the more independent regions of the FOREST KINGDOMS, and its culture probably shares more with Saua than it does with the northern kingdoms.

Today it is known for its large passenger and port and those arriving to the city must first view the great statue known as MALAN RESPLENDENT on their way into the Bay of Githka (Pop. c. 650,000).

AGLAEN: Sup. Edu. Set. Small city in the south west of SKAROS. It is known for its small ATRAMENTAL college, where many prospective shapers from around Skaros are sent to be assessed and, if they are found worthy, study (Pop. c. 17,200).

AGLAIA: 1. Lak. Lake in the north west of AZAZEM, giving its name to the capital. It is fed by various rivers that flow from the north, as well as the seasonal river DIANOSH.

2. Pol. Set. Capital city of AZAZEM in an area that is now called ATROPHY, over 200-miles west of the nations' centre. Founded in c. -120 RM, the city was once renowned for its expansive walls and its prosperity. It grew rich from trading food and gems (spinels) with other cities both within and without Azazem, becoming close with PRE-IMPERIAL KORACHAN during this time, but after the nation became a vassal of Korachani empire in 11 RM it began to wane somewhat in influence as the Azazemi capital BASILEA became more important both politically and economically.

During this time Agalia continued to grow, slowly regaining some of its clout, with many merchant houses establishing themselves there. It expanded greatly as an agricultural centre, with spinel quarries supplementing its income. In 123 RM the Basileus, revolted against their Korachani overlords, with the city of Basilea becoming a hotbed of close quarter fighting in palaces, temples and granaries. The Basileids were defeated in 124 RM, and Korachan made the decision to move the capital to Aglaia.

Throughout its subjugation, Aglaia has been a hub of food production and the home for ledgers and records of the empire's food consumption, with powerful ATROPI HOUSES making their homes there. It remains so to this day, though where once fields prevailed around it, now stands a lifeless dustbowl and countless dross manufactories. Within, the city is an anachronism – with large parts unchanged from its classical heart, with red tiled roofs, simple plastered buildings, and even the memory of its ancient bucolic roots resurfacing in certain streets and areas. These districts are harshly contrasted by the industrialised mantle that has changed the rest of the city, which are marred by rows of dross pipelines, processing facilities, FLESH MARKETS, manufactories, all shrouded in a pall of smog, beneath which lie unseen moss and algae farms deep underground.

The city also forms a vital link in the RED ROUTE, and has large markets and auction houses where goods are traded and sold (Pop. c. 1,840,000).

AGLAOPHOTIS: Flo. Dru. Temperate herb found around THE INNER SEA, IAPETAN and DARK SEA regions. The herb is known as a timeless remedy for POSSESSION, various fevers and personality disorders. When burnt, the resin of this herb acts as a powerful sedative and it is smoked by OCCULTISTS and the like in some archaic regions during rituals, particularly in KHAMID and MHAROKK. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

AGNAES: 1. f. Myt. Phil. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, a SCION of the DEMIURGE URAKABARAMEEL. She was known as a philosopher and scholar and the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN describes her as travelling the world than her ancestors created, studying the laws and customs of the mortals that inherited it, making sense of the chaos that followed in the Demiurges' footsteps. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

2. Geo. Mountain-range in the c of LLACHATUL, forming an eastern reach of the TOLIASOR Mountains serving as a border between ATARAXIA in the north and AHKA in the south.

AGNERIST: Pol. His. Historic ALMAGESTI colony in what is now the eastern-most expanse of the lands populated by the CALLOW HORDES in eastern RAONGEN^(2.). It is remembered to most now as the LOST DEMESNE.

AGNIX: Set. Coastal city in the c north of the mainland PANTHEON ISLES. It has a strong militia that serves a council that operates with relative autonomy from the monarchy (Pop. c. 38,000).

AGNOSI: Lan. Phil. Common term used in GNOTH to describe those philosophers and mystics who have only just begun their search for truth. It can be used in a derogatory sense though its common meaning is neutral.

AGO: Rvr. River in the west of GREST⁽¹⁾ in the west of the island-continent of BROR⁽¹⁾. It flows west for 550-miles from various sources, before emptying in the SEA OF NDORTUR.

AGOG: Pol. Rnk. The ruling caste in RHAMIA. The Agogs are descended from the first HIEROGOTHS that arrived there in exodus from VÂRR in c. 1000 RM after the KORACHANI EMPIRE'S presence there. The Agogs quickly established themselves in the region, drawing the its disparate people together, forming what would, by c. 1200 RM, be known as Rhamia.

The Agogs remain in Rhamia to this day, a powerful upper-caste from which its Archagog is drawn in elaborate and archaic drafting rituals that are known to last years. Many Agogs have a reputation for being practitioners of the various ATRAMENTAL arts, some of which appearing in public as SHAPERS. Despite this, there is little-to-no TECHNARCANIST or BIOMECHANIST tradition amongst the Agogs and their subjects, though they are known as harsh breeders, culling any offspring known to show physical signs of ATRAMENTAL CORRUPTION.

AGONEPHATOSH, BELL OF: Mus. Obj. BELL installed in the bell-tower added to the BASTION OF STEEL in KHADON, KORACHAN in 2378 RM. It is named after OLL AGONEPHATOSH, the CAMPANOLOGIST who crafted it, and weighs over 780,000 lbs. and is over 24-ft. tall.

It is now believed to be the largest bell in the Korachani empire, after the previous record-holder, the BELL OF MARTYRS, disappeared in the waters of lake SILEB during the SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE.

Following his death in 2409 RM Agonephatosh was mummified and placed in a shrine within the cupola of the bell-tower which he was interred, looking over the city of Khadon, with his famed bell in the foreground.

AGONISTS: Mys. Rnk. Org. Contemplative ascetics in PERGOST who act as SIN-EATERS. Most settlements and large TURAAN groups have at least one agonist amongst them, who takes the guilt and sins of others, helping them to grieve and seek atonement. They operate independently of the DREAMING NIGHT and form their own group. They are known for their mustard robes and silent demeanours. Individuals do not remain amongst the same community for long, and most return to their monasteries to cleanse themselves and to meditate after months or years of selfless work.

AGONNAR: 1. Set. Small coastal city in the far south west of THE SURRACH, forming the last stop along the IVORY ROAD within Surrachi territories before continuing south (Pop. c. 19,000).

2. Mil. Arc. Major fortress of the KNIGHTS AENEOUS in the far south west of THE SURRACH, guarding the IVORY ROAD before it heads south into ROMOREA (2.). The knights patrol the region for miles around and are ruthless to bandits and itinerants who may be a threat to the caravans on the road

AGONNUR: Rui. Ruined settlement in the c east of the PANTHEON ISLES.

It was abandoned in c. 2000 RM following the growth of the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region of ESTRALLON, and remains to this day, eerily silent and well-preserved.

AGOR: also 'the Holy Stone'. Int. Leg. A large basaltic boulder in the c south west of NÁRTHEL said to mark the place where the first ever PLAGI city was founded, though such a city would be so ancient that nothing would now remain of it if it was real, so it is unlikely that the claim is true.

Whatever the source of the legend, the place is often visited by plagi nomads who venture far north of their homelands in the UMBRA SOKHAR, with a semi-permanent settlement found at its foot. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

AGORIN: Geo. Island off the northern coast of ESHIR(2), to the north west of the SEA OF AGAIRA. It is home to the capital of Eshir, AGAIRA. The island features in the region's history, and was the site of a major early FIFTH AGE battle, during which an entire culture was effectively destroyed, paving the way for the ancestral culture that would later give rise to Eshir.

AGORIN, BATTLE OF: His. War. Battle (see above) *

AGORNA: Mil. Arc. Fortress in the far north of the ZOLANDETH region in the c north of AETHIOS, perched on the southern slopes of the AGRABU highlands. The fort was constructed in c. 1600 RM after increased N'RAKHI raids in the northern territories of Aethios. The fort remains in use and has grown into a small settlement, though N'rakhi territories have retreated north since its construction (Pop. c. 2,000).

AGORNON: Rnk. Oth. HALFBLOODED middle-caste found in the citystate of HAZOR, under the command of the TYRANON caste. The Agornons are the spawn of otherworldly breeders who mate with human slaves, and serve as a middle-class in Hazorin society, fulfilling various roles.

AGOS: Rel. Mesa-top monastery on an island off the western coast of the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS. The monks of Agos follow an archaic form of the imperial creed, often regarded as apocryphal by CHURCH ecclesiastics, though due to their isolation and pacifistic natures, they are granted clemency. Neophytes amongst the Agos travel across the Free-isles and PELASGOS, stopping usually at manufactories and other large conurbation, sermonising the slaves there about the weakness of the flesh and propagating the belief that weak wills give rise to corruption of the body. They have gained quite a following in surrounding settlements (Pop. c. 500).

AGOSTAN: Mils. Str. Major series of fortification in the south of KORACHANI in the c south of the KORACHANI PENINSULA. It is the base of the IMPERIAL ARMY, and is a sprawling complex that is heavily fortified and with access to both coasts via well-maintained roads, west to BUACHAN, and east to the coastal fort of PLUATA (2.). It also home to the IMPERIAL MILITARY ACADEMY, where members of the KORACHANI nobility are sent to train for commissioned ranks within the imperial army.

AGOUTRA: Geo. Mountain range in the north west of PARAIYA, comprising the ATARA, SOUBA, and GARABA mountains. The entire range is known for its scree and landslides and there are few settlements located within them, though they are home to many hinterlanders who live off the wild AGRABU: Geo. Craggy hills dominating the south east of N'RAKH, said by local folklore to be the resting place of the dead. Many ruined colossi dot their highest peaks, some carved from the actual rock; others made from blocks of granite that were somehow hauled up the hills from ancient quarries in southern N'KHOSA.

AGRAM: Rvr. River in the c north east of OPHIUSSA, flowing for 210-miles from sources in the HARKONA Mountains and the HONEAN Ridge, before it reaches lake OREI.

AGRAT: Set. Settlement in the south west of AZAZEM, in the west of the region of KARAFFAR. It was the site of a major earthquake that struck the region in c. 2900 RM, which levelled an older iteration and the extant settlement is built on the ruin of the old one (Pop. c. 5,700).

AGRERIA: Geo. Single natural stone bridge crossing the CHASMA DRACONA in the STRAIT OF NÁRTHEL. It was once well-guarded as the only natural crossing of the strait, though with its eventual drying up and the appearance of no less than eight largely permanent crossings the usefulness of the bridge waned and the fortresses surrounding it were abandoned.

The bridge collapsed in 2896 RM following an earthquake that wracked the region, though the name was later given to the first part of the strait to close in c. 3700 RM following the retreat of ELYDEN'S seas.

AGRETH: Set. Major coastal city in the south west of KOLCHIS. It is the largest Kolchisi city situated south of the northern POLAR CIRCLE and has become a busy harbour, with most sea trade reaching the nation through its ports.

It is also the point of entry into Kolchis for most foreigners, and it has many hostels, hotels and taverns, and also has various charter services that can arrange passage to more distant parts of the nation (Pop. c. 250,000).

AGREZH: Geo. Sub-tropical savannah region in the far south east of CHEIRA. It is considered uncivilised by most and has a few city-states surrounded by temporarily nomadic settlements that are constructed from wattle.

AGRIS: Geo. Island off the south western coast of WESTERN SAMMAEA, to the north of AEONAS.

AGRNN SOUND: Sea. Major inlet in the west of CYHLAGHARR, stretching for 170-miles inland.

AGRONNA: Rvr. River in the far east of TISARA, flowing north for 300-miles from sources in the far east of the LHANA highlands and the north of the VOULLOR Mountains before meeting its parent, the river ADSULLA.

AGUBBRA ESCHA: (D. 2847 RM) Woman whose actions unified the native population of the PANTHEON ISLES into resistance against the LIMOTHAN (a) occupation. She led the battle against the final Limothan outpost in YICTAIANDA, ejecting them in 2825 RM, leading to hard-won independence which remains to this day. She became the first ruler of what would become known as the ESCHAN DYNASTY, which rules the archipelago to this day.

 \underline{AGUA} : 1. Geo. Peninsula in the far south west of \underline{GYZHA} , dividing the \underline{SEA} \underline{OF} \underline{DAZHAT} from the \underline{SEA} \underline{OF} $\underline{DUAHRAT}$.

2. Rui. Ancient merill fortress on the island of BRANAT, off the south western coast of GYZHA. The fortress is made from a soapy stone, and is shunned by people of the region.

3. Set. Coastal settlement in the eponymous peninsula in the far south west of mainland GYZHA. Its terraced inland hills are thought to have been made by ancient quarrying, shaped through millennia of weathering. The same terraces are now used as fields by the people of Agua. Its people practice an ancient form of stilt fishing – with fishermen standing on poles in shallow waters, waiting for hours at a time to fill their quota (Pop. c. 3.000).

AGUBOKHAR: 1. Int. His. Wretched dungeon in the c of the MULL CITYSTATES. The ruin is thought to be an ancient prison dating back to the later FOURTH AGE. Its dungeons sprawl for miles in all directions, and though most are now collapsed or otherwise blocked, some stretch south as far as the extant city of Agubokhar^(2,), with some maintaining that they lead to basements and vaults beneath the city

2. Set. City in the c south of the MULL CITY-STATES, to the south of the above region^(1,). It lies along the passage of THE WAY, a trade-route that links the Mull city-states with OPHIUSSA in the far west (Pop. c. 19,000).

AGUEA: Lak. Artificial reservoir along the course of the river ICHORIA in the east of KORACHAN. It is formed by the damming of the Ichoria at the city of ZEPHANICHAN. The dam serves two purposes: providing hydroelectricity of the city and its many manufactories; and refining the water before allowing it to continues in its flow south west.

The city's many industries pump the river with chemical waste, ATRAMENTALLY-polluted ichor, and worse, rendering the river not only sterile, but incredibly dangerous to the millions of mortals that live close by. Reservoir is bordered by dozens of treatment plants that pump water into their vats, where the water is treated and the worst of the chemicals are extracted and turned into foul jelly-like blocks. These blocks are used in some foul industries, and what is not used is disposed of in the dumping ground of SORDOR, a few miles away.

AGUG HORN: Set. Small fortified coastal city in the east of BANT, overlooking the SEA OF KURKAL. Its fortifications are outdated though continue to be a point of pride amongst the populace, who keep them in pristine condition despite their age (Pop. c. 18,000).

AGUM: Set. Small city in the c of VENTHIR, along the course of the river ULAAM. It is famed for its works of fine gold filigree that are traded across the Dark Sea (Pop. c. 18,000).

AGUR: Set. City in the east of SUMA'YA (formerly BA'AKH), overlooking the DAARKEN GULF that dates back to c. -1500 RM. Founded on the banks of what was then the mouth of the river AGA by ITHOIAN settlers, the settlement became a hub of fishing and its ships dominated a 100-mile stretch of the coast for centuries to come. This activity led to trade with IDAN (later known as TYROPOEA) across the Daarken Gulf. In 1163 it was successfully besieged by immigrant SVATHI who had moved south from present-day LYRIDIA in a great exodus of their ancient homeland. By c. -1000 RM the entire region became known as DHAMATEA after its c-most city and Agur remained an important part of the nation, even after the abandonment of Dhamatea in c. -850 RM due to ATRAMENTAL TAINT. Indeed, the city grew with refugees from the doomed city and thrived.

After another period of increased Atramental activity between -490 and -450 RM left the surrounding regions tainted, Agur became a stronghold to knights and other military forces who scoured the countryside for survivors, who continued to flock to the city. Unable to accommodate them all, a great shanty appeared outside its walls, its population over twice that of the city proper.

The city remained a stronghold of the knights as the taint of the region slowly increased, culminating in c. -190 RM with the exacerbation of ATRAMENTALTAINT in Dhamatea which left the region depopulated and corrupted. By the time Agur had become a stronghold to the knights, most of them had become corrupted by the Atramental effects, and were unable to leave. Order was restored to the region through the actions of the secretive Atramental caste known as the ADUMBRAESKI, which erected crude SIPHON ENGINES in many settlements.

Agur was such a place to be reborn through the siphon engines and it continued to be ruled by the knights, until it was attacked in 469 RM by a KORACHANI army that had sailed across the Daarken Gulf from IO. Following months of bloody sea battle and coastal sieges, the city was taken by the imperial forces and was used as a base of operations for its lengthy attack of Ba'akh, which ended in 634 RM with the taking of BAALBETH – the last free city in Ba'akh.

With most of its populace shipped to Io and SARASTRO as slaves, the city saw an influx of immigrants from imperial nations, who helped elevate it. The knights were exiled, their fortresses taken by the imperial administration in Agur, which remained there until the departure of Korachan from Ba'akh in 3097 RM.

The death of the SHAPER SAECHIN in ARTALSCELLI in 1274 RM left many imperial nations in chaos. In Ba'akh, the subsequent decades left dozens of patrician families bankrupted, particularly in the region around Agur and RUATHA. This left many siphon engines unattended, which in turn led to increased Atramental activity. By c. 1350 RM the effects could no longer be ignored – birth defects had increased tenfold and instances of AEPATHY had become alarmingly common. A hospital was founded in Agur in 1372 RM to combat its debilitating effects and research into the disease led to the creation of SIPHONS: VAT-BORN shapers with the ability to directly draw ambient UMBRA to them. Siphons could be created relatively easily in laboratory conditions and within a century two distinct kinds were known; larval siphons with a latent ability to drain the Atramenta from their surroundings (albeit at the cost of their health and higher brain functions) and the rarer shapers whose ability to manipulate the Atramenta made them of great importance to the empire.

Agur became a centre of siphon research and its manufactories began creating larval siphons in the thousands. These were used, either individually in smaller settlements, or embedded in the siphon engines as SICTHAINEN TECHNA, to combat the Atramenta that was assaulting Belakh

Despite its best efforts, Korachani found the maintenance of the unnumbered siphon engines of Ba'akh untenable and abandoned the nation to the DOMNITORS in 2732 RM and they in turn abandoned the region in 3097 RM. Agur was one of the last places the Domnitors left, and they took with them most of the machinery from the siphon manufactories, leaving the city with a diminished population and no resources or industries of note.

The empire's withdrawal left Ba'akh in a chaos that lasted over 2-centuries and ended in the dominance of the city of SUMA'YA, which in 3309 RM destroyed Agur, taking its populace and working machinery south west to Suma'ya. It was this scavenging-mentality that ensured Suma'ya survived those dark days, allowing it to resettle those same cities decades later. Agur was resettled in 3421 RM and under the leadership of the TYRANT OF SUMA'YA, Agur's larval siphon manufactories were reestablished, and new siphons became an integral part of its obscene new religion (Pop. c. 45,000).

AHAABARIPAR: Rvr. River in the c east of LAASKHA, flowing for 280-miles from sources in the northern face of the ARECANTHEA Mountain, before joining with its parent, the river SAARATAPARR. Its waters are tainted by its course through the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED lands of BETHAL, which thicken its waters and see its banks take on a fleshy consistency in the area known as IZAPOSAN.

AHAACHA: Set. Coastal settlement in the north east of BANT, in the west of the CARCHEMISHI PENINSULA^(1.), in the east of SAMMAEA (Pop. c. 4,000).

AHAFRAT: His. Ntn. Historical nation in the AMMASHI^(1.) peninsula in the south west of SAMMAEA, in what are now the east of AMMESH and the south of HABOT. It emerged in 2876 RM after around three centuries of rule by a republic council, and became a sovereignty proud of its independence, unlike many surrounding states, which were coalitions and alliances of cities. Its people were fiercely independent and bravely defended their land from attack. Indeed, Ahafrat was the last state in the Ammashi^(1.) peninsula to sign the AMMASHI TREATY in 3594 RM.

Following years of prosperity, the AMMASHI COALITION, its neighbour to the west, coalesced into a centralised republic council in c. 3705 RM. It grew confident under its new government, and began to apply pressure to the western Ahafrati cities. At the time Ahafrat was struggling under the reign of an unpopular and incompetent ruler, who under increasing economic losses and the looming threat of invasion agreed to an exchange of much of his western lands in return for more trade rights. The government of Ahafrat collapsed soon after this, falling under the yoke of a tyrant who in 3743 RM secured marriage into the ruling dynasty of HABBOT, in which its remaining territories were absorbed by the eastern kingdom, effectively ending the nation of Ahafrat.

The extant capital city of Habot, AHEHAFRET, is named after the sovereignty. See Vol III: Extinct States.

AHAGGAD: 1. Sea. Sea off the south western coast of BROR^(1.), to the south west of $\underline{GREST}^{(1.)}$, south of the KOGILIR Highlands.

2. His. Nm. Now-extinct state in the island-continent of BROR^(1.) in the south of present-day GREST^(1.), extending into the west of what is today CREPISCULA^(2.).

It emerged in c. 1450 RM around the coastal city of NEYEM and eventually became a part of the COALITION OF SURISSIA. It faltered following the Coalition's collapse in 2132 RM, and clashed with nearby Crepiscula over resources. Crepisculan conflicts with the BARBARIAN STATES following this time drew resources from its west, giving Ahaggad chance to flourish.

Between c. 2200-2400~RM its culture spread into nearby $\underline{\text{EGRAT}}$, though it continued to clash with Crepiscula, which at the time was going through a period of expansion. By c. 2430~RM it had completely absorbed the nation of Egrat after a series of ineffective rulers led to its collapse.

The rise of the house of IUNITANT in the merchant town of SCELD between c. 3150 – 3200 RM led to a shifting in power centres in Ahaggad. Wealth began to flow to Sceld instead of Neyem, weakening the capital. This escalated in a schism within the nation in 3234 RM that led directly to a civil war that consumed it for three decades, ending in 3263 RM with a victory for Sceld. This led to the death of Ahaggad. The capital was moved to Sceld, and the sovereign kingdom of Grest was born. See Vol III: Extinct States.

AHAMA: Sea. Sea to the south east of the SEA OF TARAMAR, in the INNER SEA, bordering the northern coast of JURRAS^(2.) and the north western coast of VAALK. Its waters are relatively deep, though overfishing has reduced its yield.

AHAMAN: Set. Small city in the east of MHAROKK, situated along the confluence of the river AMOA and SHIBBOLETH. Its harbour brings produce into the Amoa. It also forms a link along the course of the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 18,500).

AHAMM: Set. Coastal settlement in the region of IAT RAZDA in the far west of THE SURRACH. It is the site of a shrine that contains the skull of an OTHERWORLDER that is visited by pilgrims from across the state (Pop. c. 14,000).

AHAROR: 1. Cui. Dre. Creamy blue sheep CHEESE that is made in the south east of AZAZEM. It is famed for its ONEIRIC qualities, and is used by both ONEIROMANCERS as a consumable FOCUS⁽²⁾, as well as by non-SHAPERS to make it easier for oneiromancers to manipulate their DREAMS, or simply to experience more vivid dreams.

2. Set. Settlement in the south east of AZAZEM. It is famed for its cheese production and was the first place to produce the eponymous^(2.) cheese on an industrial scale, which is used by ONEIROMANCERS across the KORACHANI EMPIRE and beyond (Pop. c. 6,300).

AHATHRA: Rvr. Braided part of the river HATHURAN that stretches for some 90-miles in the c south west of THE SURRACH. The braiding is possible due to the level terrain in the area. AHATI ANO: For. Major forest dominating the north west of MIRALUL.

AHARES: Set. Settlement in the c south of AHRISHEN, along the northern shore of lake AMATIDA. Its main industry revolves around the gathering and drying of reeds (Pop. c. 4,400).

AHATESSUIN: Geo. Rocky plains in the c of LIDEA, rising to the south into the foothills of the ORIAN Mountains.

AHATUAT: Set. City in the north of the LEVANTINE region of south eastern AHRISHEN, along a headland in lake AMATIDA. The city is a major mercantile influence in the rocky depressed area and is renowned for the vast network of canals and aqueducts that surround it, known as THE AHATUAT (Pop. c. 190,000).

AHATUAT, THE: Arc. Rvr. Intricate and expansive network of canals and aqueducts in the dry rocky region of south east AHRISHEN, known as the LEVANTINE, at the centre of which is the eponymous city of AHATUAT. The canals provide a source of much needed water to the few dozen-or-so settlements in the region, and also act as an effective transportation network, with more traffic along its wider canals taking the form of long narrow barges.

AHASUERUS, THE WANDERING: (B. 3950 RM VAALK) An itinerant SET and EXOCRINE, whose travels have taken him across LLACHATUL and gained him many followers, even in the so-called free lands of the east (particularly in AHRISHEN), many of whom claim him to be possessed by the ATRAMENTA, acting as a prophet of sorts.

He is described as a slender figure, cloaked, with an $\underline{IRON\ MANTLE}^{(2)}$ on his back, powering his shaping and is silent, speaking only when needed and often in riddles.

 $\underline{\text{AHDAL}}$: Lake in the c of $\underline{\text{PARTHIS}}$, along the course of the river ESHMUN.

AHDIA: Set. Ind. Granite and quartz quarries in the c of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of UCHRON (Pop. c. 6,000).

AHEAXIA: Mil. Str. Major coastal fortress in the north of the PARTHISAN colony of EZHIRAYA (2.). It guards entrance into the inland SEA OF BLAGIA.

AHEFAK: Leg. Mor. Mortal champion in the THIRD AGE, famed in the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN for casting the SCION TALLAS⁽²⁾ down in the region of PESSUNDATA in what is now the west of SARAGOS. Their memory has largely been forgotten today, but some traditions and folklore are thought to retain parts of the Ahefak tales, including the uttering of curses in everyday life. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

AHEHAFRET: Pol. Sct. Capital of HABOT, in the AMMASHI^(1,) peninsula in the south west of SAMMAEA, along the banks of the river GITTARANDI. It is famed for its ancient pylon temples, which surround its extant districts to this day. It forms a part of the NACRE ROAD and was the capital of the earlier FIFTH AGE state of AHAFRAT, after which it takes its name (Pop. c. 730,000).

AHELLA: 1. Geo. Small Mountain in the north east of TAMAR, forming the eastern-most part of the KYTHI Mountains.

2. Set. Settlement in the east of $\underline{\text{TAMAR}}$, close to the river $\underline{\text{ROHOTHA}}$ (Pop. c. 7,000).

AHEMA: Set. Settlement in the region of KATURUSH on the west of THE SURRACH, along the course of the river ESSRA (Pop. c. 7,500).

AHEMMA: Set. Small fortified city in the north of AMMESH, around 7-miles from the border with KEPHUAAN and it trades north with the cities of BOMMER and SALARA.

It controls an ancient bridge over the river TAMANTI that dates back to the FOURTH AGE and it is covered in marble cladding that is well-maintained to this day (Pop. c. 20,000).

AHEMMAGHRA: Sec. Small city in the c west of METHUMN, along the ELIKAMMAN ridge. It is a major stronghold of the ISHINAL CULTS (Pop. c. 20,000).

AHEMMAYSH: Set. Major coastal fortified city in the far north of KEPHUAAN. It lies close to the border with TAAN AN, and it maintains close ties with its northern neighbour, with trade between the two being common (Pop. c. 870,000).

AHEN: Set. Fortified city in the west of AHRISHEN, along the coast of ST.

Jerush, though the retreat of the SEA OF PYREA found the island landlocked by c. 3700 RM (Pop. c. 13,000).

AHEPPO: Set. Major city-state in the c of THE SURRACH. It is known for its art and fine honey (Pop. c. 32,000).

AHEREN: His. Lan. Ancient language thought to date back to the late FOURTH AGE OF MORTAL LIFE. It was once spoken by various peoples to the south east of the INNER SEA, in what are now present-day IO, SARASTRO, and EHBOT (now ARKOS^(1.)), though today it has been largely superseded by SARASTROAN.

Today it is spoken as a common language by most tribes of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of Mulciber, though it is not the first language of any peoples there. It is also spoken by some SIRIPHAGAN traders and its ancient noble houses. See Vol II: Languages.

AHEXAHOR: Set. Major coastal city in the north west of ZATAUR, in the south east of SAMMAEA. It is a major harbour and is renowned for its shipyards (Pop. c. 204,000).

AHHAR: Set. Fortified settlement in the east of the BARRIER LANDS, not far from the border with ROMOREA⁽²⁾. Its people are militant and are infamous for the lion pelts they wear, and their soldiers are a common sight along the border (Pop. c. 4,600).

AHHAS: Pol. Rak. Pariah merchants in the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER, who serve as a neutral faction amongst the tribes of the region. They are descended from the closest acolytes of the God-king NEPHTHALONT and despite the differences amongst the various tribes of the area, they are seen as untouchable due to this ancient link. Though they remain loyal to Nephthalont and worship him as they did before his death, they do not share their religious views with the tribes, whose own cults have become extremist and inflexible to the views of others.

The ahhas live itinerant lives, travelling in large caravans circumventing the other tribal territories, buying and selling goods as they travel, and bringing news and rumours of goings on in other tribes. They have been employed as spies, but this is not encouraged by most ahhas families, who rely on their neutrality to garner the hospitality of the tribes. They do maintain a single city, called TIAL ESH, in the south west of Mulciber, and many large cities across Mulciber have ahhas communities or ghettoes.

AHHEA: see EBON PALACE, THE.

AHI EH: Lak. Lake in the c of SARASTRO, forming part of the course of the river SOLONA.

AHINA: Ntm. Now-extinct nation that emerged in the west of THE SURRACH in the mid-35th century from a coastal enclave from a mix of people, including naturalised descendants of KORACHANI immigrants and SAVI natives. The nation collapsed in c. 3580 RM following a devastating PLAGUE that left its cities empty, its economy dead.

The vacuum left in the wake of Ahina's demise led to a period of strife, in which rival tyrants and warlords warred for decades, though eventually the nation of $\underline{SAVIANA}$, (the name of which is derived from the native name of the region $-\underline{SAVIUD}$) rose to power in c. 3600 RM. See Vol III: Extinct nations

AHINAN: Lan. Languages spoken by the short-lived nation of AHINA, and, later, its descendants, the people of SAVIANA and, later, the SIX CITIES, also speak. See Vol II: Languages.

AHINAN CALENDAR: Cal. Calendar unique to the region of the SIX CITIES and surrounding states in the west of THE SURRACH. The calendar is derived from the founding of AHINA in 2484 RM and is currently in the year 1523 AB (translated as 'Founding of Ahina') as of 4007 RM. See Vol II: Month and Lunar Cycle in Elyden.

AHIT: Rel. Deity in the YAGHUKLI PANTHEON that is worshipped by various peoples in the Barrier Lands. Ahit is a corruption of Kargaman Idolatry from the west, tempered by centuries of local belief and. Ahit is a goddess of the home and embodies protection and the strength of womanhood. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

AHKA: 1. Ntn. Nation to the west of the STRAIT OF SKAROS, in the shadow of the BLACK MOUNTAIN. It is of a dry cool-temperate climate and is bordered in the west by the TOLIASOR Mountains.

It appeared in the centuries following the KORACHANI attack and defeat of the nation of ARGHA in 2906 RM, though suffered centuries of native resistance, as well as competition from $\underline{ALMAGESTI}$ symposia sent there between c. 3100-3216 RM. Its people are simple, living in familial settlements farming the volcanic soils in the foothills of Mt. $\underline{VRAMATHIS}$ and $\underline{MALEHOTHEA}$, and mining rich iron reserves found between the ETRON and OTHOR Mountains in the south.

They are distantly descended from LASCAR (2-) colonists who bred with the descendants of FOURTH AGE people who resettled the plains of AHKESH in the FIFTH AGE. They inherited their Arghan ancestors' skills with metallurgy and mining, though for most of its existence, the region has been hounded by privateers and slavers, which is partially to blame for its lack of large coastal cities. This predation reached a crux in c. 3980 RM, when Korachani colonists settled the coast in their search for new resources, pushing the natives north following brutal skirmishes, into ATARAXIA, which took them on as refugees.

PARTHIS soon came to the aid of Ahka and opposed Korachani blockades and attacks on its offshore UMBRAL RIGS and iron mines, and the region became contested between the two powers, in what is now known as the AHKAN WAR, with the conflicts commonly recognised as the first modern theatre of war, with trenches and massed bombardments taking place there, presaging the manner in which future wars will be fought. The trenches of VALTICA were the first and most expansive such trenches constructed between 3988 – 3992 RM and lie in ruin today, a wasteland of pyrrhic warfare.

The region remains largely contested to this day, with the natives in a loose alliance with Parthis as its south eastern territories are mired in conflict. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

2. Pol. Set. Capital city of the eponymous nation. Once a thriving harbour and rich from its ATRAMENTAL refineries, where raw UMBRA from the MERAK MIRA was processed, the city is now the focus of KORACHANI attacks and has diminished greatly over the past decades. Many of its districts have been reduced to rubble, and thousands of families have been displaced, either to the city of DAHKAT, or north into ATARAXIA (Pop. c. 71,500).

AHKAN: Lan. Language spoken in AHKA, that uses an ancient MULL script that was common to the region when Ahka rose to power. It is similar to ARGHAMISH, suggesting a common root, most likely a late FOURTH AGE MULL language, though many words share etymologies with early AZAHARI. See Vol II: Languages.

AHKAN WAR: Mil. Ongoing conflict between the KORACHANI EMPIRE and the state of AHKA. Beginning in c. 3980 RM when Korachani settlers landed in the south east of Ahka, it has escalated since then, becoming a major theatre of war and a testing ground for a more modern form of warfare – for instance, an intricate trench system, now known as the VALTICAN DEARTH, was constructed by Korachani engineers and become the site of a terrible pyrrhic battle in which hundreds of thousands of troops were slain for little gain.

PARTHIS came to the defence of Ahka in 3989 RM and has been fighting against Korachan since then, bringing war to the INNER SEA.

AHKESH: Geo. Temperate plains in the north of AHKA, east of the BLACK MOUNTAIN to the south of the SEMITRAT Mountains just west of the STRAIT OF SKAROS. The plains are fed by the river AMALTHEA, and are home to the majority of Ahkan arable lands.

AHLEM ARIS: 1. Myt. In mythology, home of the SERAPIS, the children of the DEMIURGE ASHTERATH, said to be what is now the far north east of KHARKHARADONTIS, bordered by the MOLOTH KHAMMOTHUL Mountain. The 22-sided trapezohedron known as UMA is found there.

2. Rui. Crumbled ruin in the far north of KHARKHARADONTIS in a highland plateau along the southern-face of the MOLOTH KHAMMOTHUL Mountains to the south of the UMBRA SOKHAR wastes. It is believed to be an ancient SERAPI city, though was abandoned millennia past. Little now remains of it through which we might piece together the areas' history.

AHLEQ: Set. Settlement in the north west of CHEIRA (Pop. c. 7,200).

AHMES: Rui. MINTHAN ruin in the c-south east of present-day THETIS, though to date back to c. 2800 RM.

AHMET: Rui. Classical EBERRAN ruin, now located on an island just north of KHEMET, in KHAMID. The ruin exists now as a single columned wall, free-standing and partially buried, its grotesque soapstone bosses leering from the region's sands. The ruin is thought to have been a votive temple of the early Eberran religion.

AHLAKSISH: Rui. Once-major UMBRA production region in the north of BA'AKH, though was abandoned in c. 2550 RM following the uncontrollable spread of powerful ATRAMENTAL TAINT in the area of HAMNEITH. The region and the city at its centre are ruined and overgrown with the fleshy stuff of the Hamneith.

AHLIEN: Sec. Coastal city in the north east of ZHARIAH⁽²⁾. It is known for its harbour and mercantile warehouses(Pop. c. 72,000).

AHLIKIA: Set. Small fortified coastal settlement in the far south east of the SARASTROAN colony of IPSISSIMA^(1.). Its main industry is whaling and hunting seals (Pop. c. 2,000).

AHMETH: Com. Set. Major fortified city in the far east of THETIS. It is a major centre of commerce, and trades east with TETHYSIA (Pop. c. 83,700).

AHMSHERE: Ser. Small city in the south west of QARALAM. It has a storied history, and is believed to be one of the oldest permanently inhabited regions in the nation, if not all of the south east of SAMMAEA, and it is mentioned FOURTH AGE texts, when it was an oasis caravanserai (Pop. c. 15,500).

AHOKAI: 1. Lak. Lake in the c north of KHURAUR, fed by waters from river TUHAFAJ and Ahokaj.

2. Rvr. River in the c north of KHURAUR flowing seasonally from sources in the south of the KRATHI hills.

3. Set. Major city in KHURAUR, surrounding the fortress and ATELIER of LHORAEX. It was once capital of Khuraur, though that was moved to the specifically-built city of KHURAURA in 3386 RM. It is a major stop along the RED ROUTE and is famed for its large markets and many caravanserais (Pop. c. 1,190,400).

AHOPAH: Dem. 'Ahopahi'. Ntn. Nation in the south east of WESTERN MENISCEA, known for its monsoons. It emerged in c. 2220 RM following decades of strife following the disintegration of its precursor state, VAEVECTA^(1.), in c. 2140 RM.

Its people revere the ancient $\underline{HALFBLOOD}$ $\underline{ISTAR}^{(1.)}$ as a deity. See Vol IV: Nations and Realms.

AHOPESH: Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTALLY-ACTIVE region in the east of LYRIDIA DHAI, acting as a border with LYRIDIA for around 200-miles. It emerged in c. 2300 RM. The taint, while moderate, manifests almost exclusively in physical corruption and the land itself is untouched, which makes travel in the region particularly dangerous.

The region is categorised as a MODERATE THREAT by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

AHORI TARRO: Set. Major city in the north of SAUA, along the course of the river TARROKO (Pop. c. 120,000).

AHRA: (8,420-ft.) Geo. Highland peak in the north east of ANUBIA, forming the western-most part of the AHSET Mountains. The ancient ruined temple of OD MARTA is situated between Ahra and the Ahset.

AHRAAD: Mil. Arc. Fortress in the north of the KORACHANI colony of CRASSULA, in the far north east of MENISCEA.

AHRAK: Geo. Saline wet plains in the east of JURRAS^(2.), created from the lowering of the SEA OF FOR, leaving the once-fertile shallow sea waterlogged and salty.

AHRAMA: Int. Rui. Seven ruined 5-sided pyramids in the south east of the UMBRA SOKHAR in the c north east of SAMMAEA. Little is known of the culture that built them or later adopted them as their own, though what treasures the ruins they once contained have long-since been plundered. Various half-sunken and corroded colossi made of a strange metallic substance echo the culture of their unknown creators.

The pyramids themselves vary greatly in size, averaging around 500-feet in hight, with the smallest some 100-feet high, and the largest, MALRA, possibly taller than 1,000-feet.

AHRAN HIGHLANDS: Geo. Highlands in the c of RHEA, known for their flat-tops, and winding, twisted terrain. The highlands are one of the many sources of the river ENNOIA.

AHRE MANN: Ser. City in the far north of LLACHATUL, overlooking the SEA OF SUDUNIR. The city forms part of a loosely allied people who control the region around the arctic circle north of THE VORANDINE (Pop. c. 60,000).

AHRISHEN: Ntn. Dem. 'Ahrisheni'. Nation roughly in the c of LLACHATUL, east of RHAMIA and west of SAUA. It is a flat land consisting of expansive wetlands, lakes, and rolling grasslands divided by a multitude of rivers and canals that dominate life and culture there, and it is protected along all its land-borders by Mountains.

Emerging in -3 RM from the autocracy of ARSHEESH following the death of king AHRISHEN I, the nation was renamed in his honour following his death. This marked the beginning of a long MONARCHIC PERIOD that lasted until 3312 RM, during which seven different dynasties ruled. In 2612 RM King OSHORN I subjugated the UNITED KINGDOMS OF EBUSHEN after years of campaign, ending their 16-centuries of independence, increasing the territories of Ahrishen to the north east as a result

The period of Ahrisheni Monarchies ended in 3312 RM, following years of economic decline and rioting over rationing of food. As recently as a millennium past, the SEA OF PROPONTIS extended 500-miles inland of the present coast, where prosperous harbours and ports dominated the coastline. Most are now ruined, hundreds of miles from open water, following the retreat of ELYDEN'S oceans. This destroyed the region's economy, and the HOUSE OF ARRODIA was overthrown in 3312 RM, and most of the royal family was executed.

The region devolved into around a dozen rival baronies that struggled amid the continued change in climate and sea level, as well as increased piracy and slave-raids from the west. This state of affairs lasted until the arrival of the supranatural unageing infant known as the CHILD-PRINCE, who managed to unify the region as a Kingdom in 3763 RM, supplanting its traditional sky-based religion. The shamen nevertheless remain important figures in Ahrishen, overseeing the kingdoms' elemental religion. The Child-Prince reigns as a monarch, though direct government is exercised by the GREAT SYNOD, with members elected from the 17 territories of the Kingdom.

The river ARESH^(2.) flows through Almagest, feeding already rich soils with nutrients through its yearly flooding, before emptying into the Propontis. Its people are famed hydraulic engineers due to their experience in handling flood management in their notoriously flat homeland – they are experts at constructing dykes and canals, as well as dry moats, which are intended to capture floodwaters.

Rich cities and their vast farmlands thrive along the floodplains of this river, each surrounded by dykes and canals that defend against flooding. Between the cities live great herds that thrive amidst the ruins of ancient coastlines. The Ahrisheni people are particularly weary of ATRAMENTISM, following a period of history in which queen AMAQEELA I granted baronies to Atramentists who were suspected to have been prolonging her life, causing the stillbirths of over a dozen of her children. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

AHRISHEN I: (D. -3 RM) Pol. First king of AHRISHEN, who took power following the death of his father MENEVATH II in -21 RM. The nation of ARSHEESH was renamed in his honour following his death in -3 RM.

AHRISHENI: Lan. Language of AHRISHEN, which emerged from the earlier ARESHAN language. See Vol II: Languages.

AHRISHENI BASIN: Geo. Relatively lowland area in the c of LLACHATUL comprising the south of AHRISHEN, most of THE HARÉSHKI plains and the south west of SAUA.

AHRISHENI MONARCHIES: Pol. His. The ruling government of AHRISHEN throughout most of its history, encompassing seven distinct dynasties and ruling houses that governed the nation almost uninterruptedly from -3 RM, with the coronation of King AHRISHEN I, to 3312 RM, with the disintegration of the monarchy into various states due to waning sea levels and the eventual disappearance of the SEA OF PROPONTIS. There were two periods when the monarchy stopped for 37 and 102 years, between 991 and 1028, and 2371 and 2473 RM, respectively, the first due to a war of succession, and the second due to revolution.

The seven houses of the Ahrisheni Monarchy (and the two intermonarchy periods) were: – The House of Menevath: (-3 – 614 RM) dating back to c. -150 RM, the House of Menevath was the ruling house of Arsheesh, though the death of Menevath II in -21 RM was his son Ahrishen I accede. He was loved by many, and upon his death in -3 RM his son had the kingdom named after him.

Those who followed Ahrishen I were reminded of his legacy through the name of their kingdom, and were careful not to tarnish the name of Menevath. They were responsible for pushing the borders of Ahrishen farther east and had to contend with KORACHANI attentions from the west, forcing them to fortify their coastline, which in those days was far more expansive than today.

The House's last king was DHAAHAN II, whose two sons predeceased him, and who was killed in battle in 614 RM to a mercenary force led by HAMAR ULLUREN, who claimed the throne through his mother's ancestry.

- The House of Ulluren: (614 991 RM). Group of mercenaries led by Ahesha Ulluren. SH'AHRIN III died suddenly in 991 RM after falling off her horse, leaving no heirs and a House that was without a clear successor, plunging the kingdom into a period of chaos where the monarchy crumbled and various claimants squabbled for the throne in a period that is now known as the first inter-monarchic period.
- The first inter-monarchic period: (991 1028 RM) The death of Sh'Ahrin III saw AHRISHEN descend into a period of effective anarchy, with various noble houses vying for the throne. This period lasted for 37-years and was characterised by sporadic periods of coastal piracy and slave-raids, as well as an increase in banditry. In the north east, various minor houses allied with each other, founding the UNITED KINGDOMS OF EBUSHEN, which would remain a thorn in the side of Ahrishen for some 16 centuries.

By c. 1015 RM, house of Amnicia had risen above its competitors, and was able to reunite the remnants Ahrishen (save Ebushen) into a cohesive whole, during which it came to call itself the Amnician Dynasty.

- The Amnician Dynasty: (1028 - 1611 RM) This dynasty established its capital in the city of $\underline{\text{AMNICA}},$ which was its ancestral home. The early death of its first king $\underline{\text{USHEN I}}$ 1033 RM saw his daughter, queen $\underline{\text{ANUSHEN I}}$ accede, and she began a matrilineal tradition that characterized the rule of the Amnician Dynasty its near six-centuries of Ahrisheni rule.

Many rulers of the Amnician Dynasty concentrated on strengthening the coast and invested heavily in the kingdom's navy, both of which were instrumental in deterring pirates and slavers, leading to a time of relative prosperity. The priesthood prospered under the rule of the Amnician Dynasty, and many temples were dedicated to the Welkin Sky throughout its tenure, most of them under the patronage of queen AQBETH I, and many of them remain in use to this day.

The death of queen SHEKZEJETH II in the 1611 RM of a protracted sickness should have seen her daughter ISBAAHA accede to the throne, but her cousin AQEEL OF TANDENDER travelled to Ahrishen from Ebushen before her death and carried out a coup d'état, killing Isbaaha and taking the throne, beginning the rule of the House of Tandender.

– The House of Tandender: (1611 − 1975 RM) the House of Tendendum remained in Amnica and ruled for over 350-years. Aqeel's goal was to unite Ahrishen with Ebushen, but the rulers of the United Kingdoms had their own agendas, which did not involve him. His rule instead brought increased tensions, which escalated during his grandson AQEL III's reign, when war broke out in 1696 RM. The war outlived him and consumed his daughter, AMAQELA's reign. She prolonged her life through the use of ATRAMENTAL tinctures and finally defeated the United Kingdoms' forces in 1781, signing a treaty that saw her territories expand and peace restored along the border.

Amaqeela I became a recluse in her later years and granted baronies to many of the ATRAMENTISTS who had helped in extending her life – a n unpopular move, that her son, AQEEL IV spend many years reversing after becoming king. To this day, the people of Ahrishen are wary of Atramentists and shapers.

The next centuries were largely uneventful, and Ahrishen was able to consolidate its position, trading with its neighbours, and defending against piracy and slavery. The House's last king was HASARAL I, whose children all predeceased him. His death in 1975 RM left the House without direct heirs and the throne passed to a distant cousin of partial HARÉ SHKAN ancestry, MUNTER OF UMATRA, marking the end of the House of Tandender.

– The House of Umatra: (1975 – 2371 RM) Munter moved the capital to the canal city of UMATRA, which became a picturesque centre to the monarchy, though whose reliance on canals in place of roads made it difficult to expand. Munter's reign was long and he invested much time and money into expanding the waterways of the kingdom, which served to link many cities together, creating an invaluable trade network that lasts to this day.

His great grandson MUNTER III was not as charismatic as his forebears and lost much support from the barons, and when he died in 2102 RM, he left the kingdom an unstable place. In c. 2290 RM the kingdom was sundered in two, with the south west remaining under the control of House Umatra, and the north east splitting into various baronies that opposed it. The House ultimately ended with the death in battle of king GISHEN IV, and the exile of his son DIERDFAN to Haré Shka by the barons, leading to the second inter-monarchy period

- The second inter-monarchic period: (2371 2473 RM) The House of Umatra collapsed amid its own internal squabbles, with its remnants forming the west of the Ahrisheni region. The rest of the land was divided amongst dozens of barons who clashed against each other. The period ended when $\underline{\text{VOKNA~II}}$, great granddaughter of Gishen IV, returned to $\underline{\text{AHRISHEN}}$ from Haré Shka in 2472 RM, beginning the Flun-Sandra Sovereignty.
- The Flun-Sandra Sovereignty: (2473 3109 RM) Haré Shkan culture spread throughout $\underline{AHRISHEN}$ under the Flun-Sandra Sovereignty, and links between the two nations thrived during this time. In 2770 RM, the capital was moved to $\underline{MAHSERTH}$, where it remains to this day.

King $\underline{OSHORN\,I}$ campaigned for years in the north of Ahrishen against the United Kingdoms of Ebushen, winning finally in 2612 RM, assimilating them and greatly expanding the borders of Ahrishen. The next years were characterised by a strengthening of administrative centres and trade routes to hold the large kingdom together.

Queen JOSHKA II is remembered for formally dividing the kingdom into baronies, and for stripping the titles off the landed gentry, which saw a large degree of social upheaval, but which is now considered as a masterstroke and which served the kingdom well going ahead. She is also remembered for embracing industrialisation and initiated a push to spread the many canals of Ahrishen to its newly-industrialised regions, linking them together in a network that is still used today.

King NUSHIR II was assassinated in 3109 RM, leaving no direct heir. Baron ZEGIR OF ARRODIA performed a coup d'état, seizing the throne, ending the line of Flun-Sandran monarchs and starting the House of Arrodia.

– The House of Arrodia: (3109 – 3312 RM) Originating in the hills in the west of Ahrishen, House Arrodia experienced many calamities, including a severe plague in 3117 RM and increased Korachani coastal raids. It also saw the territories of Ebushen, that had been won by Oshorn I, break away to form the nation of VIRAHAN in 3389 RM, following years of petitions. One of the last acts attributed to the monarchy before its eventual collapse was the founding of the ROYAL CORPS OF HYDRAULIC ENGINEERS in 3299 RM.

In the end it was the continued wane of the coastline that would be the eventual downfall of the House of Arrodia, which suffered from unrecoverable economic collapse of the region. Massed riots began in 3311 RM over the rationing of bread. These events escalated and continued throughout the next year, leading to the overthrowing of the monarchy and the EXECUTION of most of the royal family.

AHRISHEN devolved into a series of warring baronies after this, and it was only the arrival of the supranatural unageing infant known as the CHILD-PRINCE, whose presence managed to unify the region once more in 3763 RM.

AHRISHENI WATERWAYS: Rvr. System of rivers, lakes and canals dominating the QOCHLAN and ARESHI^(1.) plains in the c of AHRISHEN, that are fed from rivers and streams from the highlands and mountains that surround the nation.

The waterways have been in use for millennia and in many places, little remains of the original natural rivers, which have been shaped by generations of mortal hands into straight courses with locks and canals to aid in navigation. It is estimated that there are no less than 5,000–miles of canals, of which 900 are major 'highways' used for commerce.

They are maintained by the ROYAL CORPS OF HYDRAULIC ENGINEERS, who are entrusted with the building of and maintenance of the canals and waterways, as well as their defence, particularly in isolated areas.

AHRISHENI CALENDAR: see CALENDAR, AHRISHENI

AHRISHENI FLU: Med. Severe and contagious flu originating in the marshes and trenches of the south west of AHRISHEN. See Vol II: Diseases and Illnesses.

AHSAAT: Set. Fortified city in the region of KNAESS to the north of the PSAMMOL Mountains. Its fortresses are old and date back to a more uncertain time in the region, and today most have been converted to civilian uses (Pop. c. 32,200).

AHSET: Geo. High, treacherous Mountain in the north east of SAMMAEA, serving as a border between the north east of ANUBIA and the west of VENTHIR. It measures around 475-miles long, with the GO BISAMMAM desert to its east and the MOLACHARI DESERT to their south west. The Ahset Mountain is partially responsible for the rain shadow that forms the Molachari Desert, alongside the southern reaches of the WORKNAH highlands.

AHSHURPAL: Geo. Gigantic canyon river in the south west of SAMMAEA, its main source in the northern face of the SHAKHURAN Mountain, flowing north and then west for over 4,000-miles through the west of HOGGOTHA ISZ, into the north east of ADHERA, GRARNEÂST and finally into SYNCHTHONITHA, where the river empties into the BAY OF ASDU. At their deepest, the canyons are over 200-ft. high and are spectacular when viewed from above.

In Adhera, the canyon widens, and its sides become stepped, with the river narrowing, becoming fast-flowing. Its banks are peppered with cyclopean ruins and idols, many of which were unearthed by the river itself. Little is known of these ruins.

AHSOVAA: Lan. Native name for the MOLOTH KHAMMOTHUL Mountain
The name is derived from the ancient name Ashovah, meaning 'desert barrier'.

AHSUDET: Geo. Mountain in the north of KHAMID, just over 300-miles long, serving as a border with the HENDECARCHY of LONAR in MALAN. Its southern foothills, in Khamid, are home to many ruby quarries.

AHTEPTIS: Geo. Mountain-range in the c of KHAMID, forming a part of the larger NEFERATH Mountains.

AHTII: Set. Fortified city in the west of PNESSA, south of lake AKASM⁽¹⁾. It was constructed through prisoner labour as a settlement for political prisoners and enemies of the state to live in 'exile'. Following its completion in 3400 RM it was used as a prison where ELEKHIDIAN prisoners of war were held during the WAR OF SECESSION, between 3402 – 3409 RM. The prisoners were released as part of the peace treaty that saw Elekhid officially recognised as an independent nation, and the prison was abandoned in 3411 RM with the release of the last prisoner.

The structure was left to rot, became overgrown and reclaimed by nature, though by c. 3840 RM it was ironically occupied by political pariahs and their followers, after which it grew as an independent city that was later claimed by the new Hammen Regime in 3962 RM, with resistors executed (Pop. c. 25,000).

AHURA ANATHA: Rel. Str. Temple of the ANATHA BAETYL in the north east of TZALLRACH, in the northern foothills of the KHUN Mountains.

AHUREDH: Lit. 'Fire Wine'. Bev. Wine produced in the island-state of SAELEH(1.), originating in its ancestral state of SALL ATH, south of the SEA OF MIROVEA. The wine was first documented by KORACHANI explorers in 1947 RM, far from its source, and it eventually became popular in the northern imperial states. The difficulty inherent in supplying Korachani cities with the wine made its cost prohibitive to all but the wealthiest of families, further increasing its value. Many imitations appeared in Korachan, particularly the east of NÁRTHEL, which boasted similar soils and climate, though all vintages paled next to fire wine.

The wine dwindled in supply alongside the Sall athi culture, and had disappeared completely by c. 2400 RM. Years later another city-state –

Saeleh – appeared close to the ruins of the Sall athi capital, and grapes continue to be cultivated on the slopes of $\underline{\text{DER}}$, though the secrets of the potency of Ahuredh appears to be lost. See Vol II: Beverages.

AHUT: Ind. Set. Large gold mining settlement in the east of SARASTRO, west of the JAELA Mountains in the region of HAGAAT. It is known for its expansive open-cast gold mine and the large machinery used in its extraction (Pop. c. 8,000).

AHVEG: Rui. Ancient ruin in the north east of TAMAR, the remnants of a once-great minaret still visible through compact soil and scrub. The ruin is thought to lend its name to two nearby settlements – ARAGOSH to the south and ARENA to the east.

AHWEN: Set. City and surrounding villages in the west of AHRISHEN (Pop. c. 17,000).

AHYONI: Obj. Pol. Pectoral of leadership in TEMUJA, consisting of coinlike disks, each representing one of the men or women to have worn it in the past. Many of them are very ancient, handed down from elder-toelder.

AIADIN: Mil. Str. Fortress in the west of EREBETH, guarding mines in the surrounding region.

AIAKKAN SLATE, the: Int. His. Tec. Obj. A significant TECHNARCANE artifact that was discovered by the AIWAHAN ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION in 812 RM on behalf of the KORACHANI EMPIRE. The slate was a remarkably well-preserved piece of technarcana that was reverse-engineered, allowing the empire to take great strides forward in technarcane research that put it centuries ahead of its enemies.

AIANNI: Rui. Ancient FIFTH AGE YARAOMIC settlement in the territory of MHARAKA, in the west of LIDEA. It was one of few Yaraomic settlements of note, and was overtaken by KORACHANI forces in c. 900 RM during their conquest of Lidea.

AIBEL: Set. Settlement in the c of TISARA, in the northern face of the LHANA Highlands. It controls a pass that crosses the highlands, leading south to the mining centre of LUGEAS (Pop. c.).

AIBIELL: 1. Lak. One of seven major lakes in KOMMEA, collectively known as the SEVEN MAIDENS^(1,), situated in the c north of the kingdom. It forms a part of the course of the river GOIRATH and lies within a basin between the VAELDRAN and BRAT EDRAN Mountains, where it is a haven to local fauna.

2. Dei. Rel. Myt. One of the SEVEN MAIDENS^(2.) of KOMMEAN myths. She bears aspects of all four seasons and it commonly depicted as a trickster, at times malicious, and at times playful. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

AIDA: Sea. Gulf in the north of SAMMAEA, close to the SEA OF ORRIDA.

AIDRI-VELEA: Ast. Comet that appears in the NORTHERN HEMISPHERE approximately every 53 years. The yearly SESALID METEOR SHOWER is associated with the comet Aidri-Velea, which was first described and named in the modern age by a pair of IONIC astronomers Aidri and Velea, in 2623 RM. It was last seen in 4001 RM.

AIERT: For. Coastal woodlands in the far north west of the VESPERTINE
LEAGUE, believed by some mythographers to be the remnants of an ancient garden created by the SCION ZEVIIT. The woodland floor is dense with the rotting remains of ancient trees, and fungi cover most of the area, giving the air a heavy musty feel that is avoided by most.

AIFÉ: Geo. Mountains in the south west of LOEGRESS^(1.), to the north of lake BUILL. Their westernmost reaches form a border with north eastern TETHYSIA.

AIGA: 1. Geo. Island in the north west of the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS. It was once a thriving port, though was destroyed during the chaos that led to the independence of the Free-Isles. A large naval battle took place in the waters north west of the city, and opportunists still ply the waters in search for relics of the war.

2. Rui. Ruined castle on the above island, thought to date back some 2,000-years.

AIGER: Set. Settlement in the north east of AHRISHEN. It is built inside a small crater and is naturally defended by the crater wall (Pop. c. 9,000).

AIGOKHERA: Set. Major coastal city in the north of the BARRIER LANDS in the north west of NORTHERN SAMMAEA. The city controls miles of surrounding lands, including the entrance into two nearby lagoons. Its rulers are known as the $\underline{SAGDALONS}$ and have controlled the region since c. 3615 RM (Pop. c. 210,000).

AIHANE: Rvr. Endorheic river dominating the steppes of TEMUR, flowing inward from the plains of TOGARMAH, and south from the ILLIGARHI, for 1,300-miles It forms lake SAH AUR at its deepest. The river is the source of life for most of the GREATTOWNS of the eastern plains, providing water and means to transport.

AIHWAR: Fau. Lan. TEMUJAN word for horse. Less commonly, it is also attributed to a legendary horse-rider who is said to have tamed the horses of the TOGARMAH.

AIKLAH: Mor. One of the many GODSBORN children of the DEMIURGE ARIMASPI. They are humanoid in shape, with striking avian features; stiff mane-like feathers covering their necks, and the backs of their arms. Their faces are muzzled by short powerful beaks and large expressive eyes, their scaly are limbs nimble and adept with both tools and weapons.

They are believed to have been relatively common at one time; and their remains and past ruins dot AETHIOS, the west of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER, RHINOCOLOURA as well as the far north and east of MHAROKK, possibly marking the extent of their previous domains. However, if they were once numerous, their numbers are now few, and they are only rarely seen by merchants travelling the eastern reaches of the SALT ROAD; their indistinct shapes flitting through the scrub and rough terrain of the Growing Mountains and Aethios.

They are now sedentary creatures, rarely leaving the cover of the hills they call home; distrustful of outsiders and adept trackers – few who see them do so without them knowing.

Some red stone idols have been encountered in the south west of the Growing Mountains, covered in guano and bone-offerings; though it seems as though such sites of worship are temporary – constructed by groups who settle in an area, and then abandoned as they move on. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

AILAS: Set. Major city in the c-south east of the OLD FOREST. Like many larger cities in the east, it is largely autonomous and has, in the past, expressed apprehension at coming to the aid of other regions of the Old Forest that have been attacked by foes such as ALMAGEST or KORACHAN. Its relative distance from these nations has allowed it to grow complacent giving its people freedoms that those in the south or west of the Old Forest have been denied (Pop. c. 127,000).

AILAVON: Soc. Org. One of the 17 GRAND HOUSES of the NACRE LEAGUE. The House is based in eastern AKANTHRA and made its money manufacturing and repairing LANDSHIPS and AMBULANTS that are used to haul trade across the NACRE ROAD and controlling toll markers along the road.

AILLEN: Set. Small city in the c of LOEGRESS^(1.) (Pop. c. 16,000).

AILMENT, ATRAMENTAL: see ATRAMENTAL AILMENT.

AILURAS: Rel. Rui. Ruins in the GERUT wastes in the far east of the nation of BROR^(2.). Little remains of the postulated temple-complex following centuries of solidified mudslides and shifting sands, though the giant wingless sphinx statues that guard its entrance pylon remain relatively intact.

AIM: Set. Coastal city in the c west of Grest^(1.) in the island-continent of Bror^(1.), overlooking the south of the strait of ANDAS (Pop. c. 43,000).

AIMAECZH: Set. Coastal settlement in the south east of the region of KHURTAE in the OKKHAMI PENINSULA in the eponymous NATION. It is known for its shrimping (Pop. c. 5,500).

AIMALEOCH: Set. The northern-most and largest of three LACER enclaves within the east of LIDEA, located in the western face of the SHIBOTHA Mountains (Pop. unknown).

AIMANT: 1. Plr. 'Aimants'. Sup. SPHERE of FIRMAMENTAL common in the north eastern parts of LLACHATUL, but found throughout the continent in small numbers. Its SHAPERS are gifted with power over metals, particularly LODELITHS. Some aimants also have control over the LIGHT UNDYING, though this ability is often limited in scope.

Geo. FIRMAMENTALLY-altered stone. Such stones are light and very tough, typically magnetised, often with crystalline forms. Items made from aimant tend to float and they can be made unmovable by SHAPERS. They are very common in the north east of KREM, and are a major export.

3. Set. Settlement deep in TULURKRYPH^{(2.),} accessible only to the most powerful of FIRMAMENTISTS, who are able to counter the otherwise-inimical effects of the FIRMAMENT there. It is considered the capital of the region though it has no political or military power over other cities and peoples in the region (Pop. c. 1,000).

AIMANT THRONE, the: Pol. Obj. Throne and seat of FIRMAMENTAL power in the capital of TULURKRYPH^(2.), AIMANT^(3.).

AIMEND: Rvr. Wetlands in the c north east of LOEGRESS⁽¹⁾, taking up some 70-miles of the course of the river MORRINACH. The wetlands form the historical westernmost extent of the BAY OF ERMAE⁽¹⁾, prior to the lowering of sea levels centuries ago.

AIMMON THE FICKLE: (B. 3360 RM) Sup. Wandering ATRAMENTIST and erratic pyromaniac. He wears EELYOUHN and giant serpent masks alongside his own masked face, in symbolism of the bestiality of nature.

AINAHA: Ind. Set. Mining city in the c north west of VIRAHAN. The region is a major exporter of sulphur (Pop. c. 17,800).

AINE: 1. Lak. One of seven major lakes in KOMMEA, collectively known as the SEVEN MAIDENS⁽¹⁾, situated in the far north east of the kingdom.

2. Dei. Rel. Myt. One of the SEVEN MAIDENS^(2.) of KOMMEAN myths. She is most commonly associated with summer, warmth, and prosperity. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

3. Set. Major city in the c of ABATTUR. It is an industrial centre, specialising in the manufacture of fare SUNSTONE ENGINES, which are powered by SUNSTONES mined in CARADAR and LOSA, to the east (Pop. c. 68,000).

AIONAL: Cal. In the KORACHANI CALENDAR, the first DAY OF THE WEEK. See Vol II: Month and Lunar cycle in Elyden: Calendars.

AIORACH: Pol. Sec. Small city in the north of TARTAK, overlooking the delta of the river KHARAD that is effectively an exclave of KORACHAN following a convoluted series of political and military events over the past two millennia.

The area now occupied by Aiorach was once a Korachani coastal fortress overlooking the BAY OF SAHIM^(1.). Tartak changed hands in 2132 RM following a war and fell under Parthisan rule, though the fortress and surrounding lands remained in Korachani hands under a new treaty, ensuring that the terms of Korachani withdrawal weren't broken. This agreement was to last for 2,000 years, after which the territory would report to Tartak.

The fort was manned and heavily guarded, with troops Korachani keeping a close eye on events, but this surveillance would wane over time, with the number of troops stationed there lessening, until the fortress was effectively abandoned to a skeleton crew by c. 2600 RM.

The fortress soon fell into disuse after that, though the Tartakasid government could not do anything to it as it was still technically a Korachani exclave, and any movement into it would constitute an act of war that would have negated the terms of the peace treaty.

The fortress was plundered for materials over the years until only its footprint and foundations remained. It eventually became a haven to vagrants passing through the region, who built a shanty village there. By c. 3000 RM destitute and desperate people from nearby cities found themselves gravitating to the area, building towers up and tunnels down, making sure never to cross the outline of the old bastions and risk antagonising the Tartakasid government – so long as they remained within the old Korachani borders they would be free of retribution.

Today, Aiorach remains as an oddity, its people living in a lawless limbo between two states, with neither claiming full responsibility over them. They are largely self-sufficient, have formed their own micro-state with all services and industries required to keep its population fed, housed, and employed. Its main form of foreign income is the manufacture of a strange hallucinogenic drug derived from a moss that is endemic to its tunnels that finds its way into the black-markets of surrounding regions.

The 2,000-year lease on the territory ends in 4132~RM – just over 100-years – and it is unknown what will happen to the people of Aiorach (Pop. c. 14,000).

 $\underline{AIOS\ KATH}$: 1. Sup. Geo. Major $\underline{ATRAMENTALLY\ TAINTED}$ region in the far south of \underline{TARTAK} .

2. Sup. Ind. A major UMBRA pipeline in TARTAK, crossing 475-miles of land from the border with the CAMMOREAN SHADOW in the south to the city of $\underline{SAHIM}^{(2)}$ in the north.

AIR: Mys. Alc. Ele. The first element in the ALCHEMICAL philosophy of GNOTHI MYSTICISM.

AIRMED: Mil. Str. Major bastion in the far south west of KOMMEA. Its forces patrol the nations' borders, which are shared with HALEDONIA, HARITH, and LOEGRESS⁽¹⁾ in the region.

The fortress itself originated as a classical star fort, though has been modernised and expanded with various concentric layers of walls and bastions AIROR: See. Fortified settlement in the north of the tribe of ILLPHAGOS, in the west of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER^(1.). Its main industry is the manufacture of the drug ACRASIA^(2.) (Pop. c. 25,000).

AIRSHIP: Tec. Dirigible vehicle that navigates under its own power. Though airships of various forms have appeared across ELYDEN over the past century, they remain relatively rare and experimental, with many people remaining distrustful of them.

They are common in the east of SAMMAEA, particularly around the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER, SARAGOS, CHEIRA and surrounding lands, where they traverse above difficult terrain, greatly speeding up travel.

The militaries of other regions have experimented with small airships to drop bombs or carry out surveillance, but they are far from being common.

AÏRTUN: Fau. Gliding saltwater fish common to shallow waters in the north east of the SEA OF ASEER. They are around 18" – 24" long and have large fins. They have small organs similar to those of BLADDER EELS that they use to help in their gliding, which is possible due to the ARCANE TEMPERS in the regions they call home. They are incapable of true flight, though can glide for long distances before gravity forces them back into the water, where they breather and procreate. They subsist on a diet of flying insects, which they catch in the air. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

AISHA: Geo. Region Badlands in the c north of AZAZEM, covering around 20,000 square-miles to the north of the AAORA Highlands. The region is dominated by weathered DUSTSTONE formations that have been carved by wind and water erosion into basin dominated by twisting canyons buttes and mesas in the centre of which is lake HATTEL.

AISLE OF GHARAKHLOR, the: Rui. Arc. Ancient monolithic road in the south of KASPIA, now ruined and half buried in the LILTHAOST FOREST. It is thought to have once been a major thoroughfare, and possibly part of an expansive FOURTH AGE trade-route. Many settlements in the south of Kaspia have plundered stones that once formed part of the Aisle and in some cases entire structures have been made from reclaimed stone from the ancient road.

Many scholars and historians rank it as one of the $\underline{\text{WONDERS OF THE}}$ ANCIENT WORLD.

AISLE OF STIGHO: Int. His. Rui. An antediluvian staircase carved from basalt stone leading to a hewn platform at the crown of the STIGHO WALL, a natural steep-sided escarpment in the north of VENTHIR (originally NÁRTHEL). Runes, their forms and meanings defaced by time, flank the platform, their purpose now lost, though occasionally humming when the FIRMAMENT holds sway. TANITH OF THE TWOWORLDS, who wanders the saltlands of Nárthel and SARASTRO, is known to make a pilgrimage here every nine years.

AISLE OF THURION: see THURION, AISLE OF.

AISLING: Dru. Psychoactive hallucinogenic drug that creates a link between the users' mind and the OTHERWORLD, causing vivid visions. Its main use is as a recreational drug, and it is also used by SHAPERS before ASTRALLY PROJECTING into the otherworld.

Occasionally, users will report a bad trip, in which they see ghostly figures. These are likely $\underline{SPIRITS}^{(1)}$ within the otherworld that the drug makes perceivable to the user.

Prolonged or over use physically weakens the user, who become prone to headaches, clouded judgement/thoughts, nose/ear bleeds, as well as memory loss.

The drug is entirely synthetic and was first produced in SATARIEL, though its use there has been outlawed due to an 'pandemic' of abuse that was experienced in the city of LARIEL, though illicit production and use remains common. See Vol II: Drugs.

AITAIA: Set. Settlement in the west of ELEKHID (Pop. unknown).

AITHAR: Plr. 'aithar'. Mor. One of the original Two-and-Twenty MORTAL PEOPLES, and the children of the DEMIURGE MALACHAI. The aithar were bird-like mortals with feathered arms and digitigrade hind legs.

They suffered the consequences for their fathers' sins of apathy and ennui, growing hollow, grey and apathetic themselves. This in turn led to the weakening of their sire, which caused them to grow weaker still until Malachai eventually fell into a deep torpor, making him the first Demiurge to 'die'.

Without his aegis and guidance, the aithar dwindled and degenerated as the other mortals spread across Elyden, learning of their world. Their territories waned until all that was left was a decrepit land in which cowered their degenerate descendants – the ALAKHI. They survive today in the region of STOLAS, where they unknowingly worship craven idols of their Demiurge father as he slowly rots away beneath them. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life: Sicthain.

AITHNA: (8,100-ft.) Geo. Volcano located in the south east of the SALKHAN MASSIF in AHRISHEN. The soil on its slopes is very fertile, home to some of the largest farms in Ahrishen.

AIU: m. Myt. His. Per. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, a scion of the DEMIURGE TALANTEHUT. He was the father of ISABELLINE, the faceless Champion of the Scales. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

AIUCTAII: Set. Settlement in the north west of ELEKHID, along the course of the river MAHEZEAL (Pop. unknown).

AIVHAR, THE WOLF: Rel. Religion in TEMUJAN SPIRITUALISM, the TUTELARY SPIRIT of battle, warfare and honour. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

AIWAHAN ORDER: Pol. Org. One of the major SANCTIFIED ORDERS OF
THE INQUISITION in the KORACHANI EMPIRE that is entrusted with protecting imperial technologies, ensuing its secrets do not fall into the wrong hands.

Its members also devote much of their time to exploring ancient ruins, searching for lost TECHNARCANA. As such, its members were a common sight in exploratory expeditions and colonist parties, alongside members of the MORÉHAN ORDER, where they would search foreign lands for ancient technologies that would either be destroyed or appropriated and later stored within the VAULT OF VAURNOS, which is amongst one of the most heavily guarded fortresses within the Korachani empire.

The Aiwahan Order is home to more technarcanists than any other Order, and many of them are also expert historians, specialising in ancient history. They are archaeologists, studying machinery they unearth, looking for ways it can be reverse engineered for modern applications. They are also custodians, preserving specific examples of technarcana, including the INVOCATION ENGINES that power all temples of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, ensuring that the secrets of their workings are not lost.

Less famously, though no less important, is the Order's sacred duty—the maintenance and guarding of the LEADEN THRONE in which is interred the body of the UNDYING MACHINE. This part of the Order is even more secretive than the rest, and little is known of it, though it does employ many DEMIURNES.

The order was founded in 341 RM after the return of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR to the empire following his rebirth and, more importantly, his construction of the Leaden Throne to sustain the UNDYING MACHINE. The importance of this archaic technarcane engine was not lost on the founders of the Order, who, under the aegis of Malichar himself, began cataloguing the first rudimentary instances of technarcana that had appeared in the empire in what would later become known as the CODEX TECHNARCANA. Their spies marked enemy technologies for imperial armies to destroy or acquire even as they determined what technarcana would and would not be allowed to be used by the masses across the empire. Originally based outside the SEPULCHRAL PALACE, the LANGUE⁽¹⁾ of the Order was moved to $\underline{\text{MALICHARICHAN}}$ in north eastern $\underline{\text{PELASGOS}}$ in 1106 RM due to the difficulties in maintaining such a large institution in such difficult conditions.

Other events that the Order played a prominent role in include the discovery of the AIAKKAN SLATE in 812 RM, which allowed imperial technarcane studies to take a massive leap forward; and the so-called SILENT WAR, in which the newly SUNDERED EMPIRE became the field of battle for a covert war in which Aiwahan agents fought an unpublicized and largely forgotten war with SARASTRO to prevent sacred technologies from falling into the wrong hands.

Today the Order is mostly concerned with recording technologies, keeping meticulous details including schematics and blueprints of any technologies used and encountered by the empire. The Order also works closely with the COUNCIL OF SEVEN, determining what technologies will be made available to the masses, and which will remain in the hands of the government to avoid oversaturation or risk of abuse.

The Order has a complex organisation and it employs many demiurnes. Unlike most other Orders, which are strictly hierarchal, it has many titles of roughly corresponding rank, though this is not as important within the Order as it is amongst others. Most common titles are those TECHNO CUSTODIANS, MACHINE ARCHIVISTS and ARCHAEOLATORS, which are civilian positions and rarely engage in hostile activity (though they may be attached to such groups as adjuncts). More militant ranks include those of ASSESSOR, INQUISITOR, PROCURATOR, and TECHNOCLAST.

The Order's present Grandmaster is MACHAEUS ZIDEON.

AIZYRIANA: Set. Major fortified city in the far north of METHUMN, along the course of the river HELAGHILRA, close to the border with ADHERA to the north west and PHYRR to the north east. It is one of the more gregarious cities in Methumn and has a large market where merchants from the aforementioned nations can buy and sell goods (Pop. c. 85,000).

AJALON: Set. Settlement in the south east of TETHYSIA, in the EIDOGOTATH, known as 'the place of the DHEEZAN' after the many creatures that populate the region. The city is renowned its husbandry of the creatures and for other objects that come from them (Pop. c. 9,000).

AJALADI: Set. Settlement in the c west of RHINOCOLOURA. It is known for its cattle rearing (Pop. c. 7,000).

AJAS: Lak. Lake in the south east of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES, along the course of the river MEREN SIN.

AJASA: Rvr. River in the south east of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES flowing south for 380-miles from sources in the HASHATH Mountains before meeting with its parent, the river MEREN SIN.

AJMOEIA: also 'Asmodeià'. Geo. Plains in the north of the VESPERTINE LEAGUE.

AJOAR: Set. Settlement in the south of the HENDECARCHY of DERAEIA in the east of MALAN, along the south western shore of lake HÂT (Pop. c. 4,300).

AJURAT: Set. Abandoned city along the course of the river KARIBAT in the c east of JURRAS⁽²⁾. The city was fouled by the ATRAMENTAL TAINT of the region of MUSOMERIEL inc. 2900 RM. By c. 3040 RM its once-thriving population of 60,000 had dwindled to less than 10,000. The city was finally deserted in c. 3100 RM, the remaining tainted populace executed and most of its buildings toppled. The city has since become of locus for ATRAMENTAL activity and is now a source of taint, rather than just displaying symptoms carried along the river Karibat. It is shunned, a byword for corruption to the Jurrasi people.

AKAARA: Set. Major city in the north of KAZZAR⁽²⁾, overlooking the BAY OF KAIAKAN. Known for its stark, angular architecture that reflects the austere ideology of the GODSLAYERS, Akaara is a hub of trade in the region and scholarship, with many merchants and intellectuals visiting its libraries and academies. Akaara's marketplaces are a crossroads of cultures, with goods from distant lands traded under the watchful eye of the University, ensuring the city remains a stronghold of the Godslayers' influence (Pop. c. 76,000).

AKACHA: Nm. Powerful nation in south east SAMMAEA. It broke away from the once-great empire of ILLAKRAR in 2823 RM, following a tumultuous civil war that tore the empire asunder, and its northern territories were once part of the AKHSARAYAN empire. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

AKACHI: also 'the God-slayer'. f. Myr. His. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, a SCION of the DEMIURGE MALACHAI. She is famed in the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN for having assassinated her father as he suffered in a weakened state after escaping from enslavement by the other Demiurges. To her this was an act of mercy but to the Demiurges this was an unforgivable act, and she was forevermore shunned, turning her and her children into pariahs that were soon forgotten from ancient history, weakening her.

Akachi assumed her father's mantle (quite literally – skinning him and wearing his feathered hide as a cloak that granted her various powers) and overtook leadership of the AL AKHI in the wake of her father's death, its body rotting on the landscape of STOLAS in testament to the dark deed. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

AKAGHA: also 'the Crown of Korachan'. Geo. Massif in the north of KORACHAN that forms the southern-most part of the RHAECHA Mountains.

AKAILANA: Arc. Int. Monument a few miles east of KHADON in KORACHAN. It originated as a settlement following a PLAGUE outbreak in c. 760 RM when people left the city in large numbers. Some remained close and the settlement of Akailana eventually appeared, where these exiles congregated. The settlement grew steadily, becoming a major satellite of Khadon and by c. 2000 RM it boasted a population of 20,000 bodies.

Another outbreak of plague erupted in the west of Korachan in c. 2800 RM, and Akailana was heavily affected. People were ruthlessly killed to avoid plague spreading to the capital. Floka, a plague doctor in charge of controlling the plague, killed almost everyone in the city. He was the last victim, and was the only one (including royalty and clergy) who was given a true grave above the mass grave of other victims. It is now a shrine and a national monument outside the walls of Khadon.

AKAL: Set. Small city in the far north of KASPIA, in the region of SHUK RAZHA. Its main industry is the mining of meteore (Pop. c. 12,500).

AKAMANAH: Oth. Otherworlder of deception. It visited the High-Born Prince Naphtali of Duariahahn in 4006 RM, taunting him.

AKAMAS: Rui. Ruined city in the south east of AHKA. The city was once home to an exclusive ATRAMENTAL college, and its faculty and students died defending the city from KORACHANI attack in 3997 RM. Following this the city was used as a staging point for Korachani troops, though it has since been abandoned following years of PARTHISAN bombardment.

AKAMEN: Mil. Mattock-wielding troops of SABIA.

AKAMM Geo. Rugged hills in the east of VÂRR, and geologically part of the ADALLA Mountains.

AKANAKA: also 'the Marble Tomb'. Arc. His. Int. A sprawling sepulchre to an unknown PHAROANT in the c of KHAMID, west of the AHTEPTIS Mountains. The tomb was looted years ago and survives now as a halfburied relic of the Pharoants' legacy, its pylon-like towers and mausolea weathered and ruined, yet still an awe-inspiring sight.

AKANAR: Geo. Expansive shrublands dominating the south of the SULTANATE OF ABACARDAT.

AKANOS: Set. Small fortified city in the region of ZILION in the west of THE SURRACH (Pop. c. 15,800).

AKANTHRA: Nm. Dem. 'Akanthran'. Nation in the south of SAMMAEA, to the east of the SEA OF KRIHIEK. It is ruled by merchant hegemons who control most trade that crossed their territories along the NACRE ROAD, and its cities are incredibly wealthy as a result. It is amongst the more industrialised nations outside of the INNER SEA REGION, and most of its cities are surrounded in a blanket of smog as a result.

In c. 1180 RM what is now Akanthra was devastated by the aftermath of the $\underline{\text{MT. KLAUVAKAN CALAMITY}}$, including famine and plague throughout the 12^{th} century RM. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

AKARCERA: Arc. Fortified prison in the north of ALMAGEST, in the north facing slopes of the MARMARA Massif. The prison uses forced labour to mine from deep pits that are only accessible through claustrophobic elevator shafts (Pop. c. 8,000).

AKARRIS: Set. Fortified settlement in the west of ETUA. It is situated in terrain that is less hostile than the norm in the GIGGERAGH desert, though little else is known of it (Pop. unknown).

AKARSA: 1. Geo. Dry hilly plains in the west of KORACHAN.

2. Set. Settlement in the west of KORACHAN known for its clam farms (Pop. c. 13,500).

AKASHA: Pol. Set. Capital city of IAISHA, located in the west of the nation. It was once coastal though is now some distance from the sea (Pop. c. 386.400).

AKASHLLA: Mys. Sup. Leg. In many mystical writings, the capital city of the OTHERWORLD. There is little empirical evidence supporting the existence of this city despite millennia of reports from ANIMISTS and SHAPERS returning from ASTRAL PROJECTIONS claiming to have seen a brilliant white tiered city. Indeed, it is unknown how SPIRITS and unborn OTHERWORLDERS organise themselves in the otherworld and if they even make use of cities. Despite this, the belief in the city persists, with many sojourning in the otherworld with the specific intention of finding it. Many have claimed to have encountered it during their astral travels, though accounts vary, casting doubt over the veracity of their claims. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

AKASHLLAN PRINCIPLES: Mys. Phil. Sup. Belief that within the OTHERWORLD can be found the sum totality of events, knowledge, emotions and experiences to have ever occurred in the past, present, or future, and that it is possible, however unlikely, that all of these principles may, though the right methods, be learnt by a single entity with contact with the otherworld.

The belief was popular for a while in PARTHIS, though went out of fashion in c. 2650 RM. A secretive group of PATRICIANS and SHAPERS remains in operation in TETHRA that continues the tradition. The group has, since c. 3840 RM, been constructing a HEART ENGINE that it hopes will reveal all of this, but so far, the results have been catastrophic, with the engine obliterating the minds of the shapers and LARVAE that have been interred within.

The Principles are named after the fabled capital city of the Otherworld, AKASHLLA, AKASHUN: Set. Small city in the c north of the territories of ETHISTONITH in RHINOCOLOURA. It is a major source of myrrh in the region (Pop. c. 17,500).

AKASM: 1. Lak. Large lake in the south of the territories of ETHISTONITH in RHINOCOLOURA, along the DANOSOTH Mountains. It is commonly considered as the main source of the river SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾, which flows over 5,000-miles north to the INNER SEA from the lake. Its northern shores are known for their black sand and glass-like stones, and it was traditionally the site where many MERILLS would spawn, though pollution and corruption of the river Shibboleth, as well as damming and industrialisation along its course has led to them dwindling greatly in numbers, with very few merills reaching the lake.

 Geo. Island located in the south west of the above lake^(1.) in the west of PNESSA. It is around 30-miles long and 5-miles wide and is rocky and uninhabited.

AKATA: Geo. Mountain in the south west of PARAIYA.

AKATHA: Set. Small city in BARATHEA^(1.), west of the HANNAM marshes (Pop. c. 18,000).

AKDA: Geo. Highland region in the north of AHOPAH in the south east of WESTERN MENISCEA. It forms a part of the MENEFIR Mountain-chain.

AKEHATH: Sct. Fortified coastal settlement in the north of KARAKHAS, guarding sea trade-routes into DEKANA (Pop. c. 20,000).

AKELLA: 1. Geo. The southern-most peninsula of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of CARIA^(4,).

2. Geo. Highlands on the eponymous $\underline{CARIAN}^{(2)}$ peninsula, in the south of the $\underline{HAR\acute{E}SHK}$. Its spine is craggy, its slopes treacherous, with many natural land bridges and lakes.

AKENARA: Mys. For. Region in the FOREST OF REVERIES in the north west of SAUA, known for the many SOUL-COUNTERS who live there. Many visit the region to wander in the idyllic landscape, paying their respects to the shrines of the YAMABUSHI (soul-counters), living and dead. AKENGORON GABRA: m. Mil. Pol. Per. (B. 3630 – 3705 RM) Historical KORACHANI ARCHPATRICIAN and, later, member of the COUNCIL OF SEVEN. He is remembered for abandoning his duties in KHADON during the WAR OF SUNDERING to join in the SIEGE OF ANAKARRA. He commissioned a bespoke armed vessel from his own pocket that he crewed with mercenaries and personal guards who accompanied him to VAALTHA (now VAALK), eventually taking part in the blockade of ANAKARRA and, later, the attack and retaking of the city. He died during the attack and is remembered amongst some people of Anakarra as a liberator to this day.

AKEMA: Set. Small city in the region of ADA in the c west of THE SURRACH (Pop. c. 15,600).

 $\underline{\text{AKEMAN}}$: 1. Lake in the c of $\underline{\text{TAMAR}}$, fed by the rivers $\underline{\text{MESISA}}$ and $\underline{\text{CATAMA}}$.

2. Set. City in the c of $\underline{\text{TAMAR}}$, along the banks of lake Akeman^(1.), acting as a trade centre, given its location along the $\underline{\text{GREAT ROAD}}$ (Pop. c. 13,500).

AKER: Geo. Cavern in the c south of RAONG, with passages leading into the PRISON CARCERI. Its upper reaches, which are considered to be part of the natural world, are known for their giant selenite crystals that were once worshipped as part of the regions' nature pantheon.

Conversely, the deepest reaches of the caves are said to lead to the socalled CHAMBER OF TEARS, in which one of Carceri's largest underground seas is located. Despite this link, the passages are not traversable as they lead to the side of the chamber, about 1400-ft. above the Sca.

AKERAS: Set. Settlement in the south of JURRAS⁽²⁾ in the LLURAN WASTES. It is noted for its large keratin population, most of which are dark-skinned. They are natives to the region and claim ancestry from the ancient FOURTH AGE keratin empire of FANES (Pop. c. 4,300).

AKET ARESHET: also 'the Stone Labyrinth'. Geo. Area of around 900-square miles in the c of KHAMID, south east of the SNIEMET Mountains. It is notable for its expansive slot canyons and fractured coast riddled with narrow inlets and caverns. The region is dangerous and known for its many hollows and cave-ins.

AKET HARASH NIL: also 'the Stone Wasteland'. Geo. Badlands region in KHARR, KHAMID. Prior to the CATACLYSM OF KHAMID (101 RM) the area was more fertile, fed by the river LAUL EGLEA, though its course was altered by the destruction of the land, leaving what remained of Aket Harah Nil a parched stony region.

AKETA: Ind. Set. Major MANUFACTORY in the city of CYPRIA^(3,) in PELASGOS. It originated as a workhouse in the 4th century following KORACHANI conquest there. The manufactory makes up around 60,000 of the city's 350,000 population.

AKGTUR: Geo. Natural caverns in TARTAK whose deepest chambers are hewn into gigantic halls with geometric hourglass-shaped columns. The place is ancient and the bones and blood of past victims still cover a tarnished iron altar that stands before a great stalactite carved in the form of a wretched capriform being.

AKH: 1. Geo. Fortified city in the south of KARAKHAS, along the southern shore of lake ASANA^(1,). Alongside SANGATTA, Akh is responsible for patrolling the region of LATERITIA from marauders (Pop. c. 20,000).

2. (B. c. -70 – D. -29 RM) Pol. Mil. ADUMBRAESK and champion in DHEA, whose actions led to the rebuilding of Dhea and DHAMATEA following inimical ATRAMENTAL activity there in c. -190 RM. Born in ORA⁽³⁾, he joined the Adumbraeski at a young age, rapidly rising through the ranks of the order. His work in restoring corrupted terrain to habitability was lauded and played a huge role in restoring Dhea to working order.

Though not a leader, his charisma and ability to unite people together garnered him much support and in by -30 RM he became leader of the Adumbraeski and Dhea itself, though by then he was already sick from a lifetime of working with the ATRAMENTA. His martyrdom to the Atramenta the next year helped bring the disparate people of the region together, which was renamed BA'AKH (meaning 'Place of Akh') in his honour, though it soon fragmented into 17 states; each of which came under the control of one of his lieutenants. His son, ATETH, took control of the tainted region of SUMA'YA.

AKHADARRA: Rel. Dei. Deity of the AKHADARRISM religion that is widely-practiced in KHAMID. See Vol IV: Gods and Pantheons.

AKHADARRISM: Rel. The primary religion practiced in KHAMID. A monotheism, it centres around worship of a destructive nature deity, known as AKHADARRA, which requires appeasement through active prayer, worship and devotion.

Unsurprisingly, its roots lie in the aftermath of the CATACLYSM OF KHAMID, in which the calamity's survivors were forced to live in a harmful chaotic landscape that was still changing. It persisted into the modern age, defying KORACHANI attempts at subverting it to its own means. The religion had been largely crushed by c. 3180 RM following an expansive campaign by ICONOCLASTS⁽²⁾ and CHURCH troops, but it survived as a pervasive underground MYSTERY CULT while the Church of the Undying Machine was Set. up as the state religion. The latter would wane with the final departure of Korachan from Khamid in 3781 RM, and it was rapidly replaced by a resurgent observance of Akhadarra, which persists to this day.

The Church is pervasive, and permeates all aspects of Khamidian culture, from state to private residences. Past PHAROANTS are considered to become servants of the Akhadarran deity (a prestigious role, akin to sainthood) and worship of past Pharoants as patron spirits forms a large part of the faith, with followers often choosing a Pharoant who shared a birth- or death-day with them, or some other arbitrary choice. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

AKHAR: His. Set. Ancient settlement that emerged in ERON SOTH in c. 420 RM along the mouth of the river Telilash. Initially little more than a fishing village, it later grew into a successful port under OPHAMI rule, becoming a major settlement by c. 700 RM, serving large fishing vessels that plied the waters of the southern CAMARINAL SEA. Increased CYHLAGHARRI aggression between c. 715 – 723 RM led to a period of strife with Akhari naval vessels commonly engaging oghur ships. This period of aggression suddenly ended in late 723 RM; following the Cyhlagharri declaration of war on OPRET.

Following the oghur victories in Opret they continued marching north in 752 RM, besieging Akhar later that year. It was taken the next year, with Cyhlagharr taking control of its ports, which were modified to accommodate their larger vessels, and the city began seeing Cyhlagharri reinforcements arrive from across the Camarinal. A great deal of its populace was taken west, as slaves before the city was reclaimed in 755 RM. The city was later restored to working order, its ports refitted for the more modest human vessels, and over the next decades it enjoyed a period of growth, emerging as a major fishing port in the region, supplying many neighbouring regions with fish.

The slow corruption of the land and the growth of what would later become known as HOGHSOTHAMON saw Akhar diminish, the river Telilash growing diseased. The city became insular, only allowing merchants within its walls (and even then, relegating them to a specific district that was overseen by beak-masked SHAPERS). This began a period of decline. Surrounding cities stopped trading with it and it was last mentioned in records in c. 2595 RM, where it was described by the traveller UTISAS THE ELDER as '...a ruin that echoes a far brighter memory than its remnants can now attest to. The settlement is a tomb, its few residents little more than ghosts going about their routines seemingly oblivious to the fate of the structures around them.'

It is believed that the city became $\underline{\text{ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED}}$ sometime in c. 2500 – 2550 RM, with the majority of its populace dying within a matter of months. The region never recovered and the growth of the Hoghsothamon meant that it was never resettled.

AKHADOS: Pol. Ruler of the KHURAURI city of ZARGATANNA for 1700-years. He was killed by GODSLAYERS in 3986 RM and they have ruled in his stead since then.

AKHELIZ: Dem. 'Akhelizi'. Nm. Small nation in the north east of the island-continent of BROR^(1,), situated along the TROPIC OF MAOCARHL. It is characterised by its high temperatures and misty mornings. Its chief deity is known as ONORESH; a common divinity in the region, though the SUPPLICANTS OF THE LEVIATHAN have appeared here in the late FIFTH AGE, following their earlier appearance in RASTAN. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

- AKHET: Geo. Granite Mountain in the south west of N'RAKH, bordering the c east of AETHIOS.
- AKHET ANKH: also 'the Living Lands'. Geo. Region in KHAMID that was largely unaffected by the CATACLYSM of 101 RM.
- AKHOUS: Lak. Shallow marshy lake in the east of KHAMID, along the course of the river NAHAL.
- AKHRA: Set. Small city in the east of KARAKHAS overlooking lake ALANCARAC (Pop. c. 18,000).
- AKHSARAY: Dem. 'Akhsarayan'. His. Ntn. Extinct empire that once dominated lands in the south of the GOLDEN CRESCENT, in what are now the south of KHAR NADUL, eastern ZAKRON, northern ILLAKRAR, and western AKACHA. It was a rival of the empire of Illakrar⁽²⁾ to its south east.
- AKHSI, the: Soc. Rnk. Caste in the TARAHID ANNEXES, whose members are selected from foundlings afflicted with CYCLOCEPHALY. The caste forms a middle-mercantile class and, though its members are often blind or crippled, they are influential and wealthy, controlling great interests in the TARAHAN cities.
- AKHU: Lak. Endorheic lake in the north of KHURAUR, in the north west of the KRATHI hills in the LLYSHIS depression.
- AKIFID: Set. Settlement in the west of TARTAK. Its main industry is the cultivation of cotton (Pop. c. 3,600).
- AKILLA: For. Forest in the west of the HENDECARCHY of NHORA in the north of MALAN. It is home to much wildlife including the largest known population of CALCATRICES.
- AKINA: Set. Fortified KORACHANI colony on the eastern coast of AHKA, in contested lands that are occupied by Korachani troops. It was claimed in 4000 RM and remains under Korachani control to this day (Pop. c. 7,400).
- AKITOS: Geo. Small island around 10-miles long, situated along the border between PELASGOS and the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS. The island has been contested since the separation of Pelasgos in 3794 RM, with both sides gaining control of it at various points (Pop. c. 7,000).
- AKKA: (8,900-ft.) Gco. Highest peak of the AKKAUR Mountains in the north of BISBUT.
- AKKAR: Arc. Major bridge in the far south of PHYRR, crossing the URRABANA river. The river is long and made of a foundation of granite pillars on which steel framing allows traffic to pass in both directions above the wide river, which is prone to flooding. and forming a part of the city of EKALLA.
- AKKAUR: Geo. Coastal Mountain-range, 280-miles long, in the far north of BISBUT.
- AKKAD: Pol. Duchy in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of CARIA (4.).
- AKKEA: Set. TROGLODYTE⁽³⁾ settlement in the north east of SARASTRO, in the western foothills of the JAELA Mountains (Pop. c. 4,000).
- AKKIA: Set. Settlement in on the island of ANDRATHIS off the eastern coast of the PARTHISAN colony of EZHIRAYA⁽²⁾. Its main industry is the quarrying of fine pink limestone that is exported to Parthis for use in architecture (Pop. c. 6,800).
- AKKODA: Set. Settlement in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of CARIA(4.), overlooking the SEA OF URAN (Pop. c. 20,000).
- AKKODUA: 1. Geo. western-most peninsula of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of CARIA⁽⁴⁾.
 - 2. Geo. Grasslands and plains in the $\underline{\text{HAR\acute{E}SHKI CITY-KINGDOM}}$ of $\underline{\text{CARIA}}^{(4)}$. The region is replete with hundreds of small rivers flowing south from the $\underline{\text{CARIAN}}^{(2)}$ Mountain
- AKKU: Mil. Str. Fortress in the south west of THETIS, close to the border with RHEA. It, alongside the city of ABASOR, is responsible for patrolling over 1,000-miles of border with Rhea.
- AKKURUT: Set. Fortified coastal city in the west of BISBUT, overlooking the SEA OF ERUISA (Pop. c. 16,500).
- AKLON: Mil. Fort in the south of Trakia, overlooking the contested lands bordering its southern territories and the north of Khalhat. It is home to most of the region's forces, which patrol the border.

- AKORALEN: Cal. In the KORACHANI CALENDAR, the twelfth month of twelve, comprising 30-days. It is considered the third of three months of autumn. See Vol II: Month and Lunar Cycle in Elyden.
- AKORIA: Set. Small city in the c of THE SURRACH, in the region of AEDDANA, along the course of the river ESSRA (Pop. c. 17,200).
- AKORIS: Set. Major harbour and shipyard along the south eastern coast of JURRAS⁽²⁾. Founded in the centuries after Jurrasi gained independence following the fall of the INTERREGES in 3167 RM, Akoris quickly grew in prominence due to its strategic location along a key sea route that connects the INNER SEA to the southern SEA OF DEKANA.
 - It resisted the later PARTHISAN acquisition of Jurras in 3703 RM and spent many decades fighting against its new rulers, with unrest in the city finally subsiding by c. 3740 RM (Pop. c. 90,000).
- AKRA: Ind. Ser. Settlement in the c south west of ATARAXIA situated in a shallow valley between the Tabit Mountains in the north and the Kattar Mountains in the south. Its main industry is lead mining, and many of its miners are descended from unions between humans and MULLS following the fall of ARGHA around 1,000-years ago (Pop. c. 8,200).
- AKRABATOR: Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region in the east of KARAKHAS, stretching into the western reaches of lake ALANCARAC. The region is amongst one of the first to experience the supranatural phenomenon known as BLOOD RAINS, originating in 4001 RM. The region was once a relatively fertile part of Karakhas and was home to pastures used for grazing animals, though the Blood Rains ruined that in a matter of months. Once prosperous settlements now lie abandoned under the desert's influence, including the once-metropolis of EPHANAS. Refugees from these settlements spread across the east of Karakhas, though a few founded new settlements outside the worst reaches of the rains, most notable amongst them the city of NOALANIS.
 - These rains are thought to be linked to the cycle of the BLOOD MOON and are strongest when it is full and the IVORY MOON is new. The effects of the rains on the flora and fauna of the region are studied by the scholars of Noalanis, who answer to the HURHEKH caste who have come to rule the city and use the blood rains in their experiments.
 - The region is categorised as a MODERATE THREAT by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.
- AKRAD: Set. Settlement in the south west of the PARTHISAN colony of ABDAKROS^(1.) on the island of IRUGNA^(1.). Its main industry is copper mining (Pop. c. 7,600).
- AKRAN CURRENT: Sea. Warm surface ocean current to the north of the SEA OF MYMEREA that flows north west into the SEA OF AKRY from the EASTERN MYMEREAN CURRENT. The current brings warm water into the Sea.
- AKRAS: Rui. Ruin in the c west of THE SURRACH, 15-miles north east of MT. AKRASIA. It was buried beneath ash following an eruption in c. 3300 RM and remains abandoned to this day.
- AKRB: also 'THE SCORPION CITY'. Set. Despotic walled city just south east of the region of MOAH in the far north of KHARKHARADONTIS, in the north of SAMMAEA. The city has a powerful militocratic culture and is home to many disparate bands of raiders and bandits.
- The city seems to thrive despite its location and controls many smaller settlements for miles around. (Pop. unknown).
- AKROL: Mil. Str. One of three fortresses in ESHIR^(2.) associated with the SABRIYAN STONE (the other two being AVIRAR and LAUK), restored and expanded by c. 3311 RM after the reacquisition of the Stone in 3203 RM following its rediscovery by the Atramentist Aliqur who used it subjugate part of the south east off Eshir.
 - The fort is located in the north of Eshir, to the north west of the LEDGE OF LARCIA, though it was originally coastal, providing a solid defence at the north of the nation. The expansion of lands in the wake of the retreat of the GULF OF ESHIRON left it largely without purpose, though it remains manned to this day.
- AKROR: Mil. Fortress in the north east of TARTAK, in the region of THE BLACK MARSHES, partially responsible for keeping the DEGENERATE populations that haunt the ruins of old SHER in check. It is also the main entrance into Tartak from the nation of JURRAS⁽²⁾.

AKRY: Dem. 'Akran'. Sea. Temperate sea off the north eastern coast of EASTERN LLACHATUL, forming a north western extension of the SEA OF MYMEREA. It is bordered by the nations of SEDALLIA, MEHITIEL, LOEGRESS^(1.), and KOMMEA.

AKSAMANA: Pol. Set. Capital of IMEAL, situated in the south of the nation, in the rugged hills between the ATIS Highlands in the north and Mount YENNIDU in the south (Pop. c. 875,000).

AKSARAN: 1. Soc. Eth. Cultural group that dominated the equatorial east of SAMMAEA between c. -200 and 1200 RM, in what are today CHEIRA, GIBEAH, PNESSA, and SERROK. Though they shared cultural traits, thought to have been at least partially inherited from a long-dead FOURTH AGE culture whose ruins dot the area, they were not a unified people and comprised hundreds, if not thousands, of different tribal groups scattered around the rainforests and jungles of the region, each with its own distinctions and idiosyncrasies. Each tribe has its own dialect though many root words were the same, providing further proof of a shared heritage.

The Aksarans were eventually absorbed by the rapid growth and expansion of the $\underline{\text{UALLA MIGHAN}}$ culture, which appeared in c. 1100 RM in the far east of Sammaea.

2. Lan. Language spoken in present-day CHEIRA, PNESSA, SERROK, OKKHAM, and ELEKHID. It is descended from an earlier Aksaran tongue that was spoken in the WAELMIGH rainforest early in the FIFTH AGE, and spread to surrounding lands between -200 and 1200 RM through trade.

It shares a common root with the earlier AHERENI language spoken in the east of SAMMAEA, but Aksaran is thought to have also inherited certain features from an ancient IROTHANI tongue. See Vol II: Languages.

AKSUM: also 'Axum'. Ser. City in a region of levelled rainforest in AURUM⁽²⁾. The city is renowned for its basalt walls and stepped structures as well as its hanging gardens, and the embossed carvings framed by heavy marble that adorn its religious and municipal structures. Vines and creepers are not uncommon though most of the jungles around it are levelled. The city is considered to be one of the most advanced and wealthy in Aurum (Pop. c. 44,000).

AKUBATH: Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region in the far north of ESHIR⁽²⁾. It has been present for as long as records exist, though only began to grow considerably following a filter explosion in a SIPHON ENGINE array in 3349 RM in the city of SABRIM, which left it devastated. The surrounding region slowly found levels of taint increasing, spreading over the ensuing centuries to encompass an area no smaller than 2,500 square-miles. The taint largely manifests as ATRAMENTAL BUBOES scattered across the land, though the air itself is also thick, with unprotected MORTALS experiencing difficulty in breathing, growing increasingly nauseated the longer they spend in such lands.

AKUCID: settlement in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of CARIA⁽⁴⁾. The city is one of the larger cities in the kingdom, and overlooks the gulf of Caria⁽¹⁾.

The settlement first appeared in c, 3300 RM, though only grew into a city following the abandonment of coastal cities during the most pronounced period of lessening of the SEA OF URAN, between c. 3800 and 3900 RM (Pop. c. 53,000).

AKUHAR: coastal settlement in the south west of TARTAK (Pop. c. 8,000).

AKURKARII: small city in the south of PNESSA. Its main industry is logging (Pop. c. 13,000).

AL AKHI: 1. Also 'BIDEKIN'. These creatures are corrupted descendants of the AITHAR, who were themselves the children of the DEMIURGE MALACHAI. Like their ancestors, the al akhi live mostly in the region STOLAS and are insular, regarded as somewhat of a rarity to outsiders and unknown to those in distant lands.

They stand roughly 6-7' tall and are of emaciated frames and overlong spindly limbs (their TOTEM-LORDS [primitive priests] in particular seem to suffer from the condition). Their bodies are hairless, though primitive feathers (often spine-like) are common on their forearms, backs, necks and shins, which are more prominent on males. Their heads are muzzled by long slender beaks, which limit their vocal abilities (al akhi language is nonetheless complex, and relies heavily on the written form and head gestures). The al akhi are prone to distorted features and aberrant forms are not unusual, with a rare few appearing as little more than misshapen beasts.

Al akhi society is tribal and revolves heavily around idolatry: traditionally that of an anthropomorphic avian totem known as MERKABH, which is believed by scholars and mythologists to be a corrupted form of the now-dead Demiurge Malachai. Males are dominant in these societies, though females do play in important role in the creatures' primitive religion. Important members of society are mummified and placed in niches within family hovels, where they remain with their tribes as ancestral figures, who the birdmen pray to in times of personal trouble (in a practice similar to SAUAN and TEMUJAN ancestral spirit worship).

Like most of ELYDEN'S BEAST-MEN, al akhi are fetishists and of a poor technological position. They fashion crude metal weapons but seem to have little affinity for clothing and armour beyond rags (they wear little clothing and use heavy wattle shields only rarely), though they have been known to scavenge ruined metal from the DESOLATION OF ASTUDAN (particularly the passage THE RED ROUTE takes through it on its way to GÂTHA), though such forays outside STOLAS are rare or sporadic at best. See Vol II: the Two-and-Twenty Mortal Tribes.

2. Lan. Language spoken by the eponymous MORTAL PEOPLES (1.), which is a debased corruption of an ancient AITHAR tongue. See Vol II: Languages.

AL GHUL: also 'manes'. Mor. ASICTHAIN from the lands of northern SAMMAEA, the term is synonymous with the MANES of the HIGH-EMPIRE.

Deformed mortals that devolved from $\underline{\text{HUMANS}}$ and other mortal peoples corrupted over centuries of exposure to $\underline{\text{ATRAMENTAL TAINT}}$ during the $\underline{\text{FADING}}$.

They shun the light and their bodies are pallid and skeletal, looking like corpses. They are flesh-eaters, living on vermin, scavenging corpses, and attacking mortals, and they are known to cannibalise their young.

They are bereft of any form of culture or civilisation and have no sense of modesty, barely using tools. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life: Asicthain.

AL GHUL, TEMPLE OF: Rel. Str. Temple dedicated to an ancient KORACHANI saint that is largely forgotten now save for the region in the immediate vicinity of the temple, in north eastern AZAZEM. The temple forms part of THE SHADOW MARCH, where it is visited by the faithful of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE.

AL FARAN: For. Forest in the south east of TEMUJA, just west of the MAGHORATE WOODS.

AL VIRAYHA: Flo. Singular tree in the c north of LIDEA, west of the river OXYS and south of the city of ZERED. It is unique in form and is unlike any other tree that grows in the region, with its expansive canopy, twisted trunk, and gnarled lattice-like trunk, which has been carved with strange messages for centuries, if not millennia. Its origins are unknown though it has existed in the area since records began, with some claiming that it dates back to the FOURTH AGE.

ALAAN: Ind. Set. Major city in the VORA GHALL region of LAASKHA. It is the largest city along the river LLORTHA, 80-miles from the coast, dominating trade along its course. It is home to the KORACHANI MINASTERIA^(2.) of PROCULIN (Pop. c. 156,000).

ALAAS: 1. Dem. 'Alaasish'. Ntn. Extinct nation that dominated the south west of CENTRAL LLACHATUL late in the FOURTH AGE into the early FIFTH AGE in what are now the west of LAASKHA, east of AZAZEM and south of SKAROS. It emerged from the ruin of the OLYAMMYAD EMPIRE and was one of few powers to exist throughout the FADING between the two Ages, though it declined to corruption by c. -700 RM, leaving a power vacuum that was only filled by the rise of LASCAR(3.) in -420 RM. See Vol III: Extinct States.

2. Geo. Rolling hills in the far west of $\underline{IPANAH}^{(2)}$, stretching west into the east of $\underline{CHANDOS}^{(3)}$ and the north east of $\underline{LAASKHA}$. Thought to have once been verdant, they are now little more than scrub, of little value. The hills once marked the easternmost extent of the region of $\underline{ARPAROH}^{(2)}$.

ALAASISH: His. Lan. Now-extinct language of the ancient ALAASISH nation. The later LASCAR^(4.) tongue would emerge from it, later going on to form the basis for modern LAASKHAN. See Vol II: Languages.

ALABANDA: Bev. Alcohol in THE SURRACH made from triple-distilled goat's milk. See Vol II: Beverages.

ALABAS AZER III: m. Pol. His. Per. (B. 3824 – ?) the 5th and final DORN KING of ALLASAN who was only a child when the LAACHOMI warlord Benett invaded Allasan and executed his father, taking his mother as his bride, uniting the two lands under his banner. He raised Azer III as his own son and died in 3887 RM without any natural heirs, leaving Allasan to him. Wracked by guilt and haunted by his father's failure as king, Azer III exiled himself, disappearing into the Allasani wilderness, never to be seen again.

ALABASTER COUNCIL, the: Pol. The ruling council of the WHITE LEAGUE, originally based in TETHRA. Founded in 3406 RM after it took control of Tethra, and PARTHIS. The council was disbanded in 3701 RM and the League exiled from Parthis after the SECULAR REPUBLIC rose to power, taking control of the nation, though it eventually reformed to oversee the evacuation of White League CHAPTERS⁽²⁾ to new territories, though since then the League has been allowed back into Parthis.

Today the Alabaster Council is based in DHALONA, Its five members have traditionally been the warlords of the three strongest chapters, the PROLOCUTOR of the Legion, and an imperial representative.

ALABASTER KING, the: Myr. Common epithet by which the DEMIURGE AVRAHAM was once known.

ALABASTER HOST, the: see WHITE LEAGUE, THE.

ALACANT: Set. Major shippard and fortified harbour in the c north west of SARASTRO, at the mouth of the river SOLONA. It is also a centre for privateers sanctioned by the crown who prey on KORACHANI merchant vessels to the west. Though most of their spoils go to Alacant and ARGEA, some go towards an order known as the SISTERS OF THE SAIL, who pray for their safe return.

In the summer of 4006 RM the tanker Sherrib ran aground just a few miles south of the city of Alacant in the SEA OF TAIMA, spilling over 8,000,000 gallons of raw UMBRA, which spread across no less than 250-miles of coastline, causing irreversible damage to flora and fauna in the south east of the Sea. (Pop. c. 228,700).

ALACHAN: Set. Settlement in the west of PELASGOS, overlooking the bay of KRYTHEA. It was once a large KORACHANI city, built in c. 1200 RM, though suffered with the shrinking of the bay and shifting of the river KRYTHOS in later centuries and was allowed to wither by c. 3400 RM. It remains as a fishing village, the ruins of the far larger city crumbling less than a mile to the south (Pop. c. 1,750).

ALACHRIS: Set. Coastal city in the prefecture of EROSENEA^(1,) in the north of HOLOLACH^(1,). The city has a large harbour and accepts trade from the west (Pop. c. 24,500).

ALACOEL: Rui. Ruined city in the region of SÛR GHATH in the west of THE SURRACH.

ALACRAN, the: (B. 3612 RM) Oth. Pol. HALFBLOODED ruler of the city-state of SIRIPHAGOS, born of the ASKER lineage. Though he wields ultimate power, the city and its territories are overseen by a plutocratic merchant council. He rose to power in 3934 RM.

ALADYA: 1. Geo. Island off the southern coast of SURUTUR.

2. Set. Coastal settlement and surrounding plantations on the eponymous island $^{(1.)}$ in the south of SURUTUR. Known for its cultivation and preparation of cinnamon (Pop. c. 3,500).

ALAHAIM: Pol. Set. City in the north of the JAHADAT STATES, in the east of SAMMAEA, and capital of one of the twelve States (Pop. c. 80,800).

ALAHAR: Sup. Arc. ATRAMENTAL flesh 'tower' in the badlands of CHULAT in the south east of THE SURRACH. Its sickly stench draws vermin to it, which are slowly killed by its sticky writhing 'roots', and it is thought to draw sustenance from their rotting bodies which litter the ground for hundreds of feet around it.

The tower is thought to be alive and possibly sapient, to a fashion, though few have penetrated the flesh-like roots that surround it to study it further.

ALAHKA: Mil. Set. Fortified coastal settlement in the far north of AHKA, largely untouched by KORACHANI offensives (Pop. c. 6,800).

ALAJIZ: also 'the Barrier'. Geo. A string of basaltic monadnocks (sheer-sided ridges) that stretch for some 75-miles in the c north of ANUBIA. The area is also known for an ancient temple, possibly dating back to the time of the LOST ONES.

ALALKRA: 1. Geo. Mountain pass across the KARAKATHARI Mountains, linking IZABAL⁽¹⁾ in the west with SAGITTARIA in the east.

2. See. Trade city in the far west of SAGITTARIA along the eponymous pass (Pop. c. 38,000).

ALAM BETHYL: Ntn. Dem. 'Bethylan'. Located in the north of CENTRAL LLACHATUL surrounding the SEA OF ADUM, most of Alam Bethyl is located within the northern POLAR CIRCLE, meaning that most of its cities experience at least one 24-hour period of night and at least 24-hour period of day every year in midwinter and midsummer, respectively. It is cold and sparsely populated and is amongst the north western-most populated regions of LLACHATUL that have been extensively explored by the KORACHANI EMPIRE. To its north is the LOST DEMESNE that dominates the east of RAONGEN (2.).

The people of Alam Bethyl, like many surrounding regions in the north of Central Llachatul, are descended from a mix of two peoples – the indigenous early FIFTH AGE people known today as the TREE-DWELLERS, who dwelt in forests of monolithic trees, most of which have now been cut down; and more recent early KOLCHISI immigrants who moved there in around 900 RM. These immigrants largely wiped out the remnants of the Tree-dweller culture, that had dwindled in around 400 RM, though they did take over many of their customs and culture, and some of the gigantic tree stumps are still settled to this day.

Since then, Alam Bethyl has expanded west and east, reaching as far as the BAND Mountains in c. 3200 RM, where its armies clashed with Kolchisi communities. This propagated a war that lasted for centuries, and to this day the two regions exist in a stasis of political unease and outright war is only prevented by their common enemy in ALMAGEST.

Insular and xenophobic, the people of Alam Bethyl are a relic of ancient shamanistic times living in defiance of the modern ages' turn to industrialisation. Living in pastoral kindreds, their larger communities tend to gravitate towards their large pillar-temples, from where seasonal culling rituals take place. These rituals are designed to eliminate weak children and maintain strong bloodlines to keep their star-deities appeased. Its culture is based around this brutal practice of sacrifice, and is overseen by a shamanistic caste known as SORCERESS (2.), who are known for their bestial death-masks and who revere various totemic beasts that are based on their ancient constellations. Many outside observers believe this sorcerer caste to be largely responsible for the regions' aversion to technology and progress, possibly as a means of maintaining power. Indeed, classical Atramentism remains strong in Alam Bethyl, which is thought to have a far larger proportion of accomplished shapers than KORACHAN.

Alam Bethyl has been united under a Federalist government since 3482 RM, when its territories were forged anew following a civil war that gripped the region for three decades, eventually leading to the deposing of the ruling SORCERER^(2,) caste. There are nine largely autonomous states, each of which answers to the FEDERAL ASSEMBLY, which is located in the capital in SA RETH. The Assembly is currently ruled by Chancellor ASEMMA AMBARAS.

Alam Bethyl has been a target of SLAVERY and coastal raids for centuries and its culture has developed in response to this, with monolithic brutalist fortresses dotting its coastline, turning it into a veritable fortress. Bristling with artillery, garrisoned troops and well-trained martial shapers, these towers provide adequate defence against most slave raids, and are large enough to accommodate surrounding populations in times of need, with deep labyrinthine dungeons that are said to reach CARCERI. So effective are these towers that some have become settlements in their own right, with subterranean dwellings serving as shelter and abodes to their people. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms

ALAMA: Set. Small city in the c north of THE SURRACH, along the course of the river RAMEAL. It is known for its fine silks (Pop. c. 18,000).

ALAMAK: Plr. 'Alamaki'. Soc. Rnk. Caste or order of beastmasters in TZALLRACH who raise and train the black lions for which the region is famed.

ALAMAN: His. Rui. Ancient FOURTH AGE city in the present-day c of VAALK, just north west of the city of ANAGHORA. It is famed for its architecture, though most of it is now destroyed or buried in the soil. It is a popular stop along the GRAND TOUR, and is visited by many artists whose works are commonly found for sale in markers around the INNER SEA REGION.

ALAMANARA: Int. His. Rui. Ancient tower in the north west of the territories of ETHISTONITH in RHINOCOLOURA thought to date back to the FOURTH AGE, though little is known of its roots. It is made of an unidentifiable metal and, despite its name, is thought to be solid. The tower is around 20-ft. Wide at the base and rises for some 80-ft. tapering suddenly at the apex. It is covered in a thick layer of lichen and mosses, with vines and other creepers growing thickly at its base. Attempts at penetrating the surface have so-far proven unsuccessful, and excavation works outside it have revealed that the tower -more correctly called a pillar) penetrates the earth to a depth of no less than 100-ft. Possibly much deeper. Some believe that it is linked some way to the PRISON CARCERI, though this claim is otherwise unfounded.

ALAMEA: Set. Settlement in the c east of VENTHIR along the course of the river TEIRIS and the western shore of lake ANATU (Pop. c. 5,800).

ALAMERA: Set. City in the south east of VENTHIR, around 250-miles west of TEIRA, along the course of the river TEIRIS. In classical times, the settlement was a major source of food and livestock in the region, though desertification of the area has resulted in a lessening of that role over the years. It now acts as a trade depository for settlements across the SHARA plains, supplying Teira (Pop. c. 76,000).

ALAMI BIT: See BIT, ALAMI.

ALAMORT: Set. Major independent fortified city along the border between ATARAXIA and AHKA, to the north and south, respectively. It is divided into nine districts and is ruled by a conclave made up of the elected rulers of each district, as well as permanent envoys from Ataraxia and Ahka, for a total of 11 representatives. The city is notable for its small number free oghurs, who claim ancestry from a mercenary company that settled the region in c. 3320 after a short-lived Korachani campaign there.

The city has 2-gates – one in the north and another in the south, and it is dominated by a large thoroughfare linking the two, in the middle of which is a large market where merchants from the neighbouring nations convene. Consulates from both nations can also be found here, amongst PARTHISAN diplomats, who are said to have the ear of the conclave.

The city is characterised by subtle differences between its north and southern districts, which take on various cultural aspects of Ataraxia and Ahka, respectively.

Alamort became an ally of Ahka in 3992 RM, following KORACHANI attacks against it that had been ongoing for two years, and continues to take on Ahkan refugees, tending to them in its hospitals, and harassing Korachani troops that venture too far north.

The city emerged in c. 3100 RM from a caravanserai that had existed there since c. 1450 RM, serving trade between the north and south of the then-nation of ARGHA. The fragmentation of Argha following successive Korachani attacks in 2906 RM saw the region suffer. Alamort provided succour to struggling people inside its fortified walls, and maintained well-guarded trade-routes, after which it began to grow as the nations of Ataraxia and Ahka developed to the north and south respectively. It recently found the $\underline{\text{RED ROUTE}}$ passing through its territories after the trade-route moved west in the wake of the Korachani attack of Ahka (Pop. c. 82,000).

ALAMUT: 1. Pol. One of the eight HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOMS, flanking the river SARA. Historically, many of its people are descended from ELYRIAN refugees who fled there in 864 RM following their persecution by a caste of FIRMAMENTISTS known as CAZHANS.

- 2. Pol. Duchy in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of ALAMUT.
- 3. Set. City in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOMS, situated on both sides of the river SARA, which at that point along its course is a relatively deep canyon. The city is of two halves the older tiered citadel and its environs on the southern bank and the rural portion (which possesses the majority of its populace) on the northern bank. The city is connected by a single large aqueduct that doubles as a bridge, which transports water from the EREDUI springs in the north to the citadel in the south. It is located along the passage of the GREAT ROAD, and sees trade from across the INNER SEA REGION cross through its marketplaces (Pop. c. 1,065,000).

4. Mil. Castle ALAMUT, a citadel in the city-state of Alamut and ancestral home of its ruling caste.

ALANAD: Rvr. River in the south of AHKA, flowing south for 270-miles from sources in the OTHOR MASSIF, before emptying in the SEA OF SUTT. The river passes through various lakes, including the APAN, OSTOS and PATAN before reaching its mouth.

ALANCARAC: also 'the Black Lake'. Lak. Lake along the border between KARAKHAS and PARAIYA and source of the river NOTHIYA.

ALANTI: Mil. Arc. Major fortress in the HORSCH territories in the north of ALMAGEST. It guards entry into the SEA OF SAECULA and is home to THE ORDER OF ACHRA.

ALAOGGA: His. Ntn. Ancient FIFTH AGE kingdom that existed in the west of EASTERN MENISCEA, in what is now the south of LAOD. It collapsed in c. 840 RM. See Vol III: Extinct States.

ALAR: Set. Bridge-city in the south west of the HENDECARCHY of LONAR in the south west of MALAN, situated along the course of the river TAKRE. The entire city is built over vaulted foundations over the river and is the crossing closest to the coast, 40-miles from the BAY OF GITHKA. It is a link along the GREAT ROAD, and merchants pass through the city on their way to TZALLRACH (Pop. c. 35,500).

ALARLU: Set. Settlement in the south west of VAALK, close to the coast of the SEA OF AZAM. Located in what was once a fishing region, the retreat of the sea in the fourth millennium saw many refugees move inland, settling what would later become Alarlu, which has since become a hub of spice production — with cumin, red pepper and oregano in particular being sold to merchants that pass by while travelling the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 8,000).

 \underline{ALAS} : Set. Small city in the south of $\underline{MASSALAR}^{(1.)}$, close to the border with $\underline{CISNERIA}$. It is the second-largest city in Massalar (Pop. c. 19,000).

ALASAEL: Geo. Island off the north eastern coast of TAHALL, south of the GNOTHI coast in the SEA OF MARDEN, covering little-more than 1,600-square miles. KORACHANI exploratory records dating back to c. 1200 RM mention a cluster of small black-topped island in the region, and it is believed that the slow waning of ELYDEN'S seas revealed the base of those islands, which became known in Korachan as Alasael, after the explorers' wife. A colony was established there in c. 1750 RM though little records exist of this so it is unlikely to have survived long.

Little is known of the island though the GIGANRI and HUMANS of the area have little interest in it, with only a few scattered trading settlements along the northern coast attesting to any colonisation efforts – both past and current.

ALASS: Set. Settlement in the east of THE SURRACH, north of the GAMIGAHUA massif. Its primary industry is the large-scale quarrying of rubies (Pop. c. 9,000).

ALASSIA: Set. Small coastal city in the far north west of THE VORANDINE, close to the border with the TWILIGHT STATES. Its main industry is the harvesting of EVOLAM kelp that is vital to various modern ATRAMENTAL industries, including CLONING and FLESHWRIGHTING.

Like many other coastal settlements in the north west of the Vorandine, Alassia has recently reported increased cases of people going missing at sea, with merill abductions blamed by an increasingly distraught populace (Pop. c. 18,000).

ALASTOR, VARPULIS OF HOLOLACH: (B. 3902 RM) Oth. Pol. 7th generation HALFBLOOD and divine king of HOLOLACH^(1.), known as the VARPULIS He is old, yet of a striking figure, and has amassed a retinue of hundreds of advisors, many of which are from foreign lands. Though old, his mind remains sharp.

ALATAS: Mil. Arc. Large fortress chain in the far south of ALMAGEST, overlooking the SKAROSIAN WASTES and, to the west, SKAROS itself. Most of Almagest's southern armies are stationed there.

ALATEAN: His. Caravanserai and later small nation that appeared over the ruins of the city of ERASHA in c. -900 RM. By c. -400 The city had re-emerged as a major influence in the area, taking on the old name of Erasha. It controlled the surrounding region for miles around, its harbourcity of HOALAN becoming capital in c. -100 RM. During this time the region became prosperous, becoming wealthy from trade with newer nations to the north and east, though the growth of the KORACHANIEMPIRE eventually crippled it and it degenerated into anarchy before being taken by PARTHIA in 237 RM, after which the region became known as ERON SOTH.

The city of Alatean diminished following the sundering of Eron Soth, though it was resettled in c. 1200 RM by $\underline{\text{OPHAMI}}$ settlers, and it became a major caravanserai by c. 1275 RM, later to emerge as a powerful city known as $\underline{\text{HOLOTHAN}}$.

ALAUNYR: Geo. Headland in the north of LOEGRESS⁽¹⁾ that is famed for the vast wetlands of SALDHUIN, where the deltas of various rivers, including the NYNWAR, BRANWYLL and the EREDWYN meet the coast. The regions known for its bucolic nature, and it is sparsely-populated, with the only settlement of note being the coastal city of ARACO.

ALAWAR: Set. Small city in the east of ABACARDAT, close to the border with the JAHADAT STATES ((Pop. c. 12,000).

ALBA: 1. His. DHEAN caravanserai founded in c. -1150 RM, connecting the newly-founded cities of ORA^(3.) and ENDA, as well as new stone-quarries in the east of the SHIBOTHA Mountain. It grew rapidly, becoming a stronghold to mercenaries and guards, protecting central Dhea from LACER incursions from the south eastern arm of the Shibotha. In -105 RM a ATRAMENTAL PLAGUE was brought to the city by DHAMATEAN refugees from the south, leaving it deserted, its buildings corrupted. A caste of secretive Atramental scholars known as the ADUMBRAESKI emerged during this time, trying to annul its effects. In -92 RM they constructed the first of many crude siphon engines in the ruin of Alba and within 2-decades it had been cleansed of the Atramental effects and renamed BAALBETH, which would in years to come grow into a prosperous city.

2. Set. Coastal settlement in the far south of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of MEDES (Pop. c. 5,000).

ALBALI: Ind. Set. Major industrial city in the north west of AQUARIIA, along the course of the river ISARRA. As recently as 900-years-ago there was another settlement by the same name, about 10-miles north west of the present city, along the then-coast, though the dwindling of the SEA OF LIAKARRA saw the city abandoned and resettled farther south, to what had become part of the course of the river Isarra, where the present city is located.

Today it is a major industrial centre and forms a vital link along $\underline{\text{THE}}$ $\underline{\text{WAY}}$ trade-route (Pop. c. 750,000).

ALBASON: Set. Small city in the c south of RAONGEN⁽²⁾ (Pop. c. 12,000). ALBASSITA: Ntn. Dem. 'Albassitan'. Nation in the north west of WESTERN MENISCEA, to the east of the SEA OF AKRY.

The nation is largely situated on the rocky scarps of the DANARAT hills and to the south west of the EGETAKH Mountains. It is known as a nation of FIRMAMENTISTS, whose traditions are ingrained in their culture, and whose SHAPERS are typically found in the upper echelons of its society. Its modern Firmamental traditions were brought there by MIRALULI SHAPERS who fled persecution north into Albassita. See Vol III: Extant

ALBBA: Geo. Harsh region o sporadic permafrost in the northern POLAR CIRCLE, in the far north of ALMAGEST, beyond the MARMARA MASSIF. The land is inhospitable and known for its sharp rocky peaks and pillars.

ALBBACHAN: Alc. Set. northern-most permanent settlement in ALMAGEST, north of the POLAR CIRCLE. The settlement is a centre of ATRAMENTAL and ALCHEMICAL research and is Almagest's main manufacturer of CLONES outside of the capital. The area is warmed by the ISKIMANNA geothermal vents (Pop. c. 68,000).

ALBEDA: Sup. Geo. FIRMAMENTALLY-ACTIVE region in the south of SHAZGIN, forming the western-most part of the Wastes of VERMES. It is known for its stark white rocks, which reflect sunlight in a prism of colours, blinding those who venture too close.

ALBEGNO: Set. Small city in the south of KORACHAN. The environs outside the city are carved by an ancient now-extinct river. Its main industry is the fabrication of metal clothing, such as the fine chain garments or gorgets (armour covering the neck) worn by patricians (Pop. c. 12,000).

ALBEN: 1. Lak. Lake in the c-south east of AHRISHEN, forming an extension of the larger lake Creneisa through wetlands braided rivers.

2. Set. Stilt settlement in the c south of AHRISHEN, in wetlands between

2. Set. Stilt settlement in the c south of AHRISHEN, in wetlands between the east of lake CRENEISA and the west of lake Alben^(1.). Its main industry revolves around the gathering and drying of reeds (Pop. c. 4,000).

ALBICA: 1. Geo. Region in the south west of THE SURRACH, dominated by the ALBICANT FIELDS. Its controlling city is DAYLAM.

2. Set. Small city in the c south west of $\underline{\text{THE SURRACH}}$ (Pop. c. 13,500).

ALBICANT FIELDS: Geo. Dry plains in the south west of THE SURRACH, overlooking the coast of the BAY OF BHAAD. The plains are noted for their pale colour.

ALBANDICA: Set. City in the PRISON CARCERI, close to the CHAMBER OF SORROWS (Pop. unknown).

ALBITIA: 1. Geo. Mountain in the north of the TARAHID ANNEXES, forming the south western part of the SIPYLANA Mountains. The mountains are the greatest source of ore for the nation.

2. Set. Mining conurbation in the eponymous Mountains providing the region with iron, quartz and gold (Pop. c. 16,000).

ALBULAANISM: Rel. Org. Religion prevalent in AQUARIIA known for the importance it places in the twin moons SIELLA and ARAKHAMÉ. The symbol of the cult – the twin moons, Red in front of Ivory, features in the nations' flag. The religion is a corruption of the CULT OF LIFE AND DEATH that was brought there by DHANUSII refugees fleeing persecution early in the KORACHANI EMPIRE'S tenure. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

ALBUM OF LITANIES, the: Rel. Vol. Standardised prayer book, sanctioned by the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE used throughout the KORACHANI EMPIRE by its faithful to aid in the recital of prayers.

ALBUR PASS: Geo. Mountain pass in the far north of ALAM BETHYL, flanked by the UKTHOLLIST colossi.

ALCAAN: Geo. Mountain range in the south east of KASPIA, serving as a border with the north of the HENDECARCHY of CYRENIA in the far north of MALAN. The mountain is ancient, its inclines shallow, treacherous with rounded boulders and shattered flint-like monoliths.

ALCAMENA: Set. Coastal city in the north east of SARAGOS known for its processing of raw METEORIC IRON mined on the island of ADAMA. Its harbours are busy with merchant vessels ready to purchase processed iron (Pop. c. 150,000).

ALCANTARA: also 'the Bridge'. His. Ast. Con. Now-extinct constellation in the NORTHERN HEMISPHERE. It fragmented in c. 900 RM after centuries of fragmentation as its constituent STARS^(2.) slowly disappeared. It was replaced in c. 1300 by the constellation OCULUS, which was formally recognised by the KORACHANI astronomical community in 1312 RM, after decades of informal usage. See Vol II: Constellations.

ALCHEMBRY: Alc. Mys. Sup. Field of ALCHEMY that concerns itself specifically with the results of alchemical ATRAMENTISM.

ALCHEMIE: see also ALCHEMY (2.).

ALCHEMIE GROTESQUE: Alc. Mys. Vol. Codex penned by the deranged alchemist VEREH THE PANSOPHIC, printed in c. 1200 RM, detailing the methods and philosophies of the School of ALCHEMIE, developed in MIDAL, VENTHIR. His travels across the BLACK MOUNTAINS were instrumental in the works' creation, and it has been consulted by alchemists ever since.

ALCHEMIST OF ST. AGYNES, the: m. Alc. Per. (D. 2877 RM) AZAZEMI mystic, ALCHEMIST and polymath who is now remembered as the designer of ST. AGYNES'S CLOCK, the workings of which remain a mystery to this day.

ALCHEMY: also 'alchymy'. Alc. Mys. Sup. 1. Ancient practice that led to the sciences of chemistry, and eventually CLONING and PALINGENESIS. Though chemistry has largely supplanted alchemy, it remains a branch of science that is very much alive, often combining chemistry with the study of the ATRAMENTA and the FIRMAMENT.

Alchemy is most-commonly practiced in GNOTH, Though little is known of the lands beyond the impenetrable BLACK MOUNTAIN, those few explorers who have been there and back speak of slender, graceful giants who worship sun and moons and dragons and quicksilver and follow a rigid archaic philosophy known as alchemy.

2. also 'ALCHEMIE'. School of TECHNARCANA in the KORACHANI EMPIRE, originating in ALMAGEST and dominating the eastern coast of the STRAIT OF SKAROS. The school of alchemie maintains that through the correct application and manipulation of common materials and elements, a practitioner can create any substance; specifically, something known as THE ANANTH, a raw material from which the FIRMAMENT and ATRAMENTA were created. Their labs and POLYANDRIONS are commonly filled with labyrinthine networks of pipes and vats, burners and archaic engines, diffusing, distilling, boiling and melding various liquids and substances. Through its marriage with the Atramenta, the art of alchemie gave rise, in c. 1250 RM to the secrets of Atramental infusions which in turn were a turning point for the empire, allowing countless different applications that further separate the empire from other nations. It is known or its so-called SEVEN LAWS.

ALCHIARAN DYNASTY: His. Pol. Now-extinct monarchic dynasty that came to power in the KAZZARAN(1.) peninsula in the 24th century RM, ruling TATAR. One of many independent dynasties to come to power in the void left by the fading of the SETTARAN culture, which in c. 1150 RM gave way to a series of short-lived monarchical dynasties.

The Alchiaran Dynasty came to power in 2417 RM, bringing a level of unity to the region that had been absent since the time of Settaran rule.

The discovery in 2995 RM of the plant ASHHAR'S CROWN and its life-prolonging properties led to an explosion of the power the Alchiarans wielded. They grew incredibly rich and powerful by creating artificial scarcity and selling sterile cultivars to the highest bidders. The newfound wealth of the Dynasty did not filter down to the common people, whose lives became increasingly difficult even as their rulers lived in increasing decadence. Despite this, they were able to establish a pervasive cult of personality, that by c. 3250 RM worship of the Dynasty had overthrown the long-established religion of ISIRATUANISM.

The dynasty, and the entire monarchic line in Tatar, were ended in a civil war that was orchestrated by agents of the GODSLAYERS working from the region of SYRYSA. After close to a decade of fighting, the royal family was finally ousted in 3372 RM. The fields where Ashhar's Crown was grown were razed, with only a tiny plot escaping their scrutiny, from which all extant Ashhar's crowns are grown today.

In their wake, a republic was instated, which rules Tatar to this day. See Vol III: Extinct States.

ALCHIARAN BIT: see BIT, ALCHIARAN.

ALDAHASH: Set. Settlement in the west of the JAHADAT STATES, under the control of the city of BAKATAN (Pop. c. 10,000).

ALDARAD: Lak. Lake in the south of TARTAK, along the course of the river LLIRA.

ALDEBARRA: (B. 3333 – D. 3546 RM) Pol. The first ruler of SABAISA. A JAHINN from ABACARDAT, he was exiled in 3491 RM for marrying a KERATIN woman and having a son with her. He would cross the SEA OF BIMARIA and settle in the land he found here and would eventually reunite the struggling states of Sabaisa between 3524 – 3526 RM. His son, ALDEBARRA II, became ruler and Sultan of Sabaisa upon his death in 3546 RM.

ALDEBARRA II: (B.3492 RM) Pol. Present ruler of SABAISA and HALFBLOOD son of the JAHINN ALDEBARRA, who founded Sabaisa.

ALDRASÛN: see PIT OF ALDRASÛN.

ALEAH: Geo. Island off the south western coast of WESTERN SAMMAEA, in the COTRIAN ISLES, forming a part of the ISLAND STATES OF IRY. It is the south western-most island of the chain.

ALECULT: Set. Coastal city in the north of GREST^(1.) in the island-continent of BROR^(1.) (Pop. unknown).

ALEGI: Set. Settlement in the c of AQUARIIA, 49-miles east of the capital in MORR ISAKHANA, along the course of the river BELDAT (Pop. c. 10,000).

ALEISAR: Ind. Set. Major city in the north west of Abattur, located along the course of the river Sebrenna, downstream of the artificial lake Sebber, and at a fork where the Verbiea meets it. It is the largest city in Abattur and is home to many manufactories and is the backbone of its heavy industries (Pop. c. 1,160,400).

ALEKAMMI WASTES: Sup. Geo. Wastes forming the north east of the TURCAR desert in the c north west of TETHYSIA in EASTERN LLACHATUL. The wastes are notable for the LODELITHS that often break away from the NEHNAXIA to the east and flow slowly west, before the FIRMAMENTAL influence over them wanes, where they slowly make landfall. The Alekammi Wastes are strewn with gigantic boulder of such nature.

ALEMBIC PATH, the: Phil. Mys. Philosophy followed by many in MENISCEA, including most of its VALTHAS and GIGANRI populations. It is contemplative in nature, with followers often spending hours each day in meditation, which is meant to take any negative emotions, memories and thoughts and filter them through the meditative process into a positive aura that leads to better wellbeing and more productivity. This meditation can also take the form of physical activity, with individuals performing a ritualised series of motions that are said to aid in the filtration of negative to positive.

It is a very personal philosophy with few public buildings to its cause, with most people practising it in the privacy of their own homes or in large public parks that are not otherwise dedicated to the practice.

It is mostly practiced by the descendant states of the old FIFTH AGE VALARI empire, where it was founded. This includes FATH, ETUL, and VALA^(1.), as well as WESTERN LARISH, where it is so popular as to take the place of any major organised religion.

ALEMBISM: Sup. Rare SPHERE of SHAPING that is found in the FAR HEMISPHERE. Shapers who are adept in this sphere are said to be masters of transmutation, able to change the shape, texture, and colour of objects, as well as their state (solid, liquid, and gas). Most almebists follow the philosophy known as the ALEMBIC PATH.

True mastery of this sphere is difficult, and most almebists are only able to transmute certain materials, or are limited in the state or form they can SHAPE. See Vol IV: Spheres and types of Shaping.

ALEMM: Mil. One of two coastal fortresses overlooking the BAY OF BASILEA, in the south of AZAZEM.

ALEMMA: Set. City in the south of TZALLRACH, along the course of the river ARELLI. It is a major agricultural centre in the region, with fields stretching up and downstream for many miles (Pop. c. 33,200).

ALEL: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the east of SARASTRO, forming part of the NATHI ROAD, overlooking the NATHI PASS into VENTHIR.

ALERIA: Set. Fortified settlement in the north west of KORACHAN. It overlooks the RHAECHA Mountains and is home to a garrison of the imperial army, who patrol the border with CHTHYRID (Pop. c. 7,300).

ALERON MOREN: m. Per. (B. 3923 RM) High-ranking member of the KYONI ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION. His meticulous documentation of historical events have proved invaluable to the Order, and his seven volume CHRONICLES OF THE OLD EMPIRE is considered a definitive work on early imperial history.

ALETA: Sea. Small sea off the eastern coast of WESTERN MENISCEA, to the south west of the SEA OF LARISH^(1,). It is separated from the larger sea by a narrow strait that is controlled by the coastal city of ALIKAHKAT.

ALETARA: 1. Sea. Large Lagoon off the eastern coast of EASTERN
LLACHATUL, in the south of LIMOTH^(1.). It is bordered in the north by the eponymous island^(2.) and to the south by various smaller islands, atolls and reefs.

2. Geo. Large island of around 34,000 square-miles off the south eastern coast of $\underline{LIMOTH}^{(1)}$ in the east of $\underline{EASTERN}$ $\underline{LLACHATUL}$. It is noted for its serpentine geography, labyrinthine peninsulas, and dozens of bays and inlets. It is the largest island in the chain known as \underline{THE} $\underline{CONSTELLATIONS}$, and the most populated, with its largest city being the harbour of RESTOTH.

ALEW: Set. Coastal city in the west of the island of HAR BAQRI off the north western coast of the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT in the north west of SAMMAEA. The city is known for its shipyards and its harbour, and it is the main city on the island (Pop. c. 120,000).

ALGED: For. Small forest in the south east of AQUARIIA.

ALGHATE SOVEREIGNTY: Pol. Rnk. Ruling caste of SYCHTAN PREFECTURES.

ALGHOL: 1. Geo. Region in TEMUJA, famous for its great citadel – the heart of Temujan Military.

- 2. Mil. Citadel in the c south of TEMUJA, close to the border with the BRAHAIN, watches over pass between the schism and DORESAI.
- 3. Set. Small settlement at the base of the above citadel (Pop. c. 1,000).

ALGIA: Lak. Major lake in the south west of KASPIA.

ALGOL: 1. Also 'the Executioner'. Ast. Con. Constellation in the NORTHERN HEMISPHERE, shared amongst many cultures in SAMMAEA. It is the constellation that the moon ARAKHAMÉ and the PLANET Algol (2.) passes through the most. See Vol II: Constellation.

2. also 'the Nomad Star'. Ast. The second of seven-known PLANETS to orbit the star SOR. Its mean orbital distance from Sor is 62,000,000-miles and has an estimated diameter of 8,600 miles.

It is the second of the INNER PLANETS, and has a green surface. For many years was believed to be covered in thick vegetation, though this is now understood to be its atmosphere. What lies below the atmosphere is unknown, though it is likely extreme and inimical to life. See Vol II: Planets and Satellites.

ALGOL HAREN: Geo. Region in the far north west of the UMBRA SOKHAR, forming a narrow strip of unoccupied land between TARTAK, KHURAUR and KARAKHAS. The ATRAMENTA is particularly strong here. Historically, it was home to an Atramentally-adept culture which died out in the latter years of the FOURTH AGE, leaving behind a vast area of mesas, plateaus and towering tapering buttes in which they carved their homes and temples. Atop many of these structures are large crystalline globes that attract and concentrate the Atramenta, rendering the place in a dark light that is abuzz with electricity (which often arcs between the globes in the form of purple lightning).

KORACHANI explorers found the region in 83 RM, finding a large stone-age culture living in the ruins, its own belief-system corrupted by the Atramenta and the fragments of cultures left behind by the previous civilisation. The natives were mostly slain by c. 200 RM, either taken north as slaves or subjugated by the cadres of Imperial scholars, TECHNARCANISTS and ALCHEMISTS that settled in the region, which remained a playground for those studying the Atramenta even after the crumbling of the Korachani empire.

ALGOLEN: Cal. In the KORACHANI CALENDAR, the second month of twelve, comprising 30-days. It is named after the planet ALGOL⁽²⁾ and is considered the second of three months of winter. See Vol II: Months and Lunar Cycle in Elyden.

ALHARTH: Set. Settlement in the south of the JAHADAT STATES, under the control of the city of LOQTUSH (Pop. c. 4,800).

ALIANOS: Rui. Abandoned city in the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region of AEHKAUROLOR in the north west of LOEGRESS. It was abandoned in c. 3000 RM, following the spread of taint in the region and has remained so for the past millennium, a grim reminder of what the taint has taken.

ALIBASDUR: Set. City in the c north of LAOD. It is an important stop along the SOVEREIGNS' ROAD trade-route, where goods are traded with merchants of the BROKERS' ROAD (Pop. c. 65,000).

ALICH: Geo. Expansive rocky escarpment in the west of THE SURRACH, serving as a border between the regions of QATTISYSH and ADASICH.

ALIDDIA: Set. Small coastal city in the north of OD MEGINNAS^(1.), located deep in a narrow inlet, affording it shelter from the elements. Its main industry is fishing (Pop. c. 12,800).

ALIEON: Geo. Island off the northern coast of KETESH, north east of the SEA OF BASSANDER, and part of the IKUAI DARBOW island-chain.

ALIGOR KELL: m. Per. (B. 3839 – D. 3908 RM) PARTHISAN PATRICIAN of HOUSE KELL. He founded the KELL HOUSES, which have since become a ubiquitous sight in most Parthisan cities, caring for orphaned and mistreated children.

He devoted his life too helping these children and died penniless, but his life was later celebrated by thousands of people across Parthis, many of whom were children who had passed through his care and, in many cases, had gone on to become influential members of society. He was buried in the Grand Forum of Tethra – a place of great honour and recognition.

ALIGUAT: Set. Trade-city in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of MEDES.

The city is a major port, serving as a hub of trade between the Haréshk, SAUA and south western MALAN – specifically the HENDECARCHY of LONAR, and it is home to embassies of all those territories (Pop. c. 65,000).

ALIHEANS: Pol. Rulers of ancient SIRIPHAGOS.

ALIHEIO: Dem. 'Aliheioan'. Oth. A HALFBLOODED caste of FIRMAMENTISTS who gained control of the FREE-CITY OF SIRIPHAS in c. 1800 RM, which led to the rise of the Firmamental arts in the city and its eventual renaming in c. 1920 into SIRIPHAGOS.

ALIKAHKAT: Set. One of 3 cities in the ESHELI region of ETUL and FATH, with the other two being MALITET and ENERKHAT. Together they form a loose confederacy and trade network, with little links to the outside world other than occasional trade with Etul in the west and Fath in the porth

It is a coastal city and controls both the peninsula and the strait leading into the BAY OF ALETA. Originally a part of Fath, it broke away alongside Malitet and Enerkhat in 3529 RM, though by c. 3710 RM it had been absorbed by Etul. Alikahkat is now ruled by a strange being with SHIE-like qualities, though of indeterminate origin. Together with the rulers of the other Esheli cities, she forms a council that gathers seasonally to oversee matters of importance to the confederacy (Pop. c. 92,000).

ALINA: Mys. Rel. VENTHIRI AFTERLIFE.

ALINGIN: Set. Settlement in the far north of PORPHYR. It is located in the region of BASHINDA, which is noted for its rich ore reserves. Its main industry is copper mining (Pop. c. 4,000).

ALIQUAM: 1. Lak. Lake in c north of MOSTUE.

2. Set. City in the c north of MOSTUE. Its main industry is chromium mining, which is the nation's main resource (Pop. c. 40,000).

ALISHIN VAKAR: f. Pol. His. Per. (D. 3136 RM) see NALLINDE AND ALISHIN.

ALISSA: also 'THE RIVER OF SOULS'. RVr. River in the north of ALAM BETHYL flowing east and south for over 560-miles from sources in the BLACK MOUNTAINS, before reaching its mouth at the BAY OF ADAM.

ALIT: Mil. Str. Coastal fortress in the west of the PARTHISAN colony of $\underline{NISSA}^{(1.)}$.

ALIT NUR: Rel. Geo. Int. Site where the KORACHANI EXOCRINE and later ST. ALIT was stricken by fever and tempted by seven OTHERWORLDERS over nine-and-forty days before being rescued by the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR in 2692 RM, where he was elevated to living-saint and patron of MHAROKK. Through the implementation of many biomechanical and technarcane ORTHOSES and engines, the living-saint Alit lived many centuries in the settlement that erupted around the site where he was originally found, preaching to pilgrims undertaking THE SHADOW MARCH, though he died finally in 3003 RM, the settlement becoming a tomb and monument to the lives of those he inspired.

ALITENEA: 1. Pol. One of eight prefectures in HOLOLACH^(1.), controlling the c north east of Hololach, including part of the eastern border with ATARAXIA.

2. Set. City in the eponymous prefecture^(1.) in the c north east of HOLOLACH^(1.), positioned along the course of the river SABAAR (Pop. c. 58,000).

ALITHEN: Set. Small city in the north east of western ABACARDAT, along the course of the river OURED OUMAQ. Its main industry is cattle rearing. It is one of few links to the JAHADAT STATES, linking with the city of DABAHASH (Pop. c. 12,500).

ALITTU: Geo. Expansive limestone highland region dominating the western borders of KHULL, stretching into the north of the VESPERTINE LEAGUE. The area is known for its rocky uneven terrain and is riddled with caves – most of them small, though some of them expansive, is shallow.

ALIXA: Oth. Common HALFBLOOD breed. See Vol II: Anthropeidos..

ALIZAR: Mil. Fort in the northern-most point of the island of KORDIR off the northern coast of VENTHIR.

ALJANAS: See. Small city in the north of the JAHADAT STATES, under the control of the city of NAJ (Pop. c. 13,000).

ALK: Set. Heavily fortified city in the north of the HENDECARCHY of LONAR in the south west of MALAN, relatively close to the border with SAUA. It is famed for its concentric star fortifications and bastions, which were constructed centuries ago to defend against a Sauan attack that never came. Ironically, the city now has close dealings with the neighbouring nation (Pop. c. 43,900).

ALKAFAIA: Set. Settlement in the c north of ATARAXIA (Pop. c. 7,200).

ALKAHEST: 1. Alc. Mys. Ele. In GNOTH, the fourth element in the alchemical philosophy of GNOTHI MYSTICISM.

- 2. Geo. Region in the c west of GNOTH that is rich in ores and minerals, including iron, nickel, tin, and pyrite, amongst others. It is also known for its ancient ruins, dating back to the first years of mortal life, and is thought to have been created by the DEMIURGE URAKABARAMEEL for the early GIGANRI to use. It has been mined for as long as records recall and the mines of today are several strata below the ancient quarries, which were abandoned millennia past. It is one of few regions in Gnoth that has been dedicated to the mining of resources in this manner and efforts are made to contain its industry, preventing it from spreading farther than its present boundaries.
- 3. Rvr. River in the c west of GNOTH flowing east for 350-miles from sources in the Alkahesti^(2.) highlands before meeting its parent, the river MARAGA at lake IMAGA.
- 4. Alc. Set. Major city in the c of GNOTH, along the course of lake HARAST. It was once capital of a twin empire to Gnoth that collapsed in c. 2700 RM and was a major centre of ALCHEMICAL research and is named after one of the elements of GNOTHI MYSTICISM, though the tradition is largely forgotten today. It is home to the famed baroque statue known as the PASSION OF TALANTEHUT, and is also known for its iron foundries. It is the northern-most major city along the GNOTHI ROAD trade-route, and its markets are busy with activity (Pop. c. 121,000).

ALKER: Pol. Set. Capital city of ETUL, in the south east of the nation. It forms a major stop along the VALARI ROAD trade route, before it turns south to BENET MUVA (Pop. c. 95,000).

ALKRIG: Ser. Settlement in the c south west of PHYRR, to the north of the MAR SAHIGH Mountains. Its isolated location has shaped a hardy and self-reliant population, who have long relied on their arid environment for their livelihood. The settlement is primarily known for its small-scale mining operations, where locals extract iron and other minerals. The mines are dangerous, and accidents are common.

Alkrig is also a hub for those seeking to escape the more oppressive regions of Phyrr. Its distance from major cities means that it is somewhat overlooked by the Imperiarch's regime, allowing for a degree of autonomy (Pop. c. 7,000).

ALL: His. Myt. In the mythologies of MHAROKK and ancient history of KHARKHARADONTIS, a famed DJALLACH.

ALL ILLATH: For. Old growth forest in the c of MALAN, stretching across various HENDECARCHIES, including the south east of AMILLAERE^(1,), the north west of STHAMAN, and the far north of ATALLUA. In all, it covers some 40,000 square-miles of dense ancient reclaimed forest. It was once far larger, though dwindled with the expansion of the Malani civilisation.

'ALL THE SIBYL'S SERVANTS AND ALL THE SIBYL'S GOLD': Soc.

Rough translation of a common saying in LYRIDIA and surrounding lands used to indicate great difficulty, as in: All the Sibyl's servants and all the Sibyl's gold couldn't fix that mess. The phrase is commonly translated into various languages, keeping the same meaning.

ALLAD: Geo. Peninsular mountain range dominating the south east of LANTUA in the south of WESTERN MENISCEA. The range is the southernmost extension of the MENEFIR Mountain-chain.

ALLAHADAL: For. Tropical forest in the west of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES, to the north of the ETHITUL Mountains.

ALLAI: Geo. Island off the western-coast of ALLASAN, in the SEA OF AZAM.

ALLAIKONSAGO: Int. Sup. Geo. Fantastical region in the south of the UMBRA SOKHAR wastes. The region takes the form of a multi-levelled labyrinth hewn from the granite bedrock of a highland plateau to the east of the MOLOTH KHAMMOTHUL Mountains that serve as a border between the KHARKHARADONTID desert and the Umbra Sokhar.

The labyrinth, which covers some 100-square miles and is rumoured to lead into the depths of the PRISON CARCERI, is attributed by scholars to the stillborn DEMIURGE RYHASSHARAUCH and is said to have been created in a fever-dream in the FIRST AGE. No-one who is known to have entered the labyrinth has emerged.

ALLAISHADA: also 'the Resplendent One', 'Guardian of Light', and 'the Repentant One', f. Myt. Myt. His. In the mythology and ancient history of ELYDEN, first of the Two-and-Twenty DEMIURGES, whose children were the ILLIDRAEN.

Her known SCIONS are: ALLIAH, SUKKOTH, and TU'LAN. See Vol IV: the Two-and-Twenty Demiurges.

ALLAKAT: Pol. Geo. Tribe in the c of MULCIBER, to the east of the BOLILOT PEAKS, in the GROWING MOUNTAINS, in the north east of SAMMAEA. The tribe is famed for the ancient objects known as MYTHOLITHS that are found in its territories, primarily the highland plains of HELINOT. These mytholiths are worshipped as deities in Allakat in the place of the God-king NEPHTHALONT, who is regarded merely as a prophet heralding their first discovery.

ALLAMAR: Rvr. Large river in the north of HOLOLACH^(1.), flowing for 470-miles west of the TOLIASOR Mountains into the SEA OF LIAKARRA. It acts as a border in parts with AQUARIIA, ALLARIS: 1. Geo. Hilly region in the c of AZAZEM, to the north of the AAORA Mountains. It is known for its OLIVE oil production.

2. Soc. Pol. PATRICIAN HOUSE based in the c of AZAZEM. In 243 RM it became one of six Patrician Houses that seceded from the KORACHANI EMPIRE and formed the REPUBLIC OF LARATHUKH^(2.). The republic was attacked by Patrician Houses that had remained loyal to the empire, and it was toppled in 271 RM. House Allaris lost favour following this, and spent many centuries struggling to regain favour.

It is known for its ownership of lands on which survives the oldest known olive tree in $\underline{\text{ELYDEN}}$, the $\underline{\text{TREE OF DHOSTAR}}$. House Allaris maintains the tree and harvests $\underline{\text{OLIVES}}$ which are used to make the finest extra virgin olive oil in the $\underline{\text{KORACHANIEMPIRE}}$, which is reserved for the finest of palates and is said to have a smoky flavour. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

3. Set. City and base of \underline{HOUSE} ALLARIS^(2.), and centre of \underline{OLIVE} oil production in the region (Pop. c. 48,000).

ALLARIS, OIL OF: Cui. Fine extra-virgin OLIVE oil produced in the region of ALLARIS in the c of AZAZEM.

ALLARS: Geo. Island to the west of the AEONAN PENINSULA, forming a part of the ISLAND STATES OF IRY.

ALLARU: Set. City in the south west of TAHALL, along the delta of the river SUMRAMRU (Pop. c. 34,000).

ALLAS: Pol. Ser. Capital city of ALLASAN, located in the c. of the nation. It was taken by LAACHOMI raiders in 3831 RM, where a government was formed and surrounding lands were later taken, becoming the nation of Allasan. It remains the capital and is now loosely allied with MHAROKK. The city is now renowned for the quality and diversity of its wines, and the picturesque vineyards that surround its walls. It is a major stop along the RED ROUTE, and its wine auction halls are busy with merchants bidding on fine vintages that are then sold along the Route (Pop. c. 395,000).

ALLASAI: 1. Myr. His. In the mythology and ancient history of ELYDEN, the home of the DEMIURGE ALLAISHADA.

- 2. For. Hemiboreal forest in the west of SABIA.
- 3. Set. City in the west of SABIA (Pop. c. 128,000).

ALLASAN: Dem. 'Allasant'. Ntn. Small nation in NORTHERN SAMMAEA, to the west of MHAROKK, overlooking the SEA OF AZAM. It is of a temperate climate, with mild summers and dry winters, and is of rugged terrain that is dominated by two rivers – the CTHONA and LISSA – that flow from the westernmost expanse of the SOLON Highlands.

Originally forming the western territories of Mharokk, it had become a land of tension and political and cultural unease as by the end of the $37^{\rm th}$ century RM as tensions between the north and southern territories of the KORACHANI EMPIRE increased, leading ultimately to the WAR OF SUNDERING, that saw Korachan engulfed in a great civil war that ultimately saw it SUNDERED in two. It was during this time that the champion DAZAKUR rallied the disillusioned and forgotten people between the rivers Cthona and Lissa, leading to the surrounding lands splintering from its parent state in 3704 RM.

Dazakur became the first in the short-lived line of DORN KINGS, establishing a small sovereign state there around the city of ALLAS, after which the state was named. The SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE in 3705 RM saw Allasan formally recognised as an independent state, with Allas as its capital.

Allas was eventually taken by LAACHOMI invaders from the west in 3831 RM. The Laachomi warlord, Benett, executed King Alabas Azer II and took his wife as his own, uniting the two lands, becoming ruler of Allasan. He raised Azer's son – ALABAS AZER III – as his own, forcing him to keep his birth father's name. Benett died in 3887 RM without a natural male heir, leaving Azer III to rule, but he was haunted by his father's failures and exiled himself unceremoniously as a form of atonement, never to return, ending the line of Dorn Kings.

Allasan has since been ruled by a series of matrilineal stewards (known as $\underline{\text{QUEEN-REGENTS}}$) descended from Azer III's sister. They are prevented by ancient decree from passing any new laws or edicts, which has led to Allasan stagnating. Despite this, the Queen-regents live in luxury, and act to all intents and purposes like monarchs. The present ruler is Queen-regent $\underline{\text{TABOR ALEN III}}$.

Political and military pressure from the REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO has led many to believe that Allasan will soon be absorbed by the greater power. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

ALLASH: Rvr. River in the c of SABIA, flowing for 275-miles from sources in the SANEM Mountains before emptying in the BAY OF OTROST.

ALLAT: Fau. Large predatory THEROPS found in lands to the north and west of the SEA OF ETAGIRIA with traits common to large reptiles and lions. It is known for its large powerful tail that it uses to make sweeping attacks against its prey, which are designed to imbalance and trip. They are the national animal of HANNAH, where they were once extremely common. See Vol III: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

ALLATHU: Set. Settlement in the c north of ELEKHID. It is twinned with the small city of GHARALL, which faces it across the river VHOTHAL. Together they operate a ferry service that allows one of the few crossings of the river (Pop. c. 8,000).

2. Mil. Set. Fortified coastal city in the west of \underline{IACIO} (Pop. c. 645,000).

ALLAUI: Mil. KORACHANI fortress in MADOUR, 20-miles north east of the hill of AVRAN; part of the eastern VARRACHON Mountain The fortress was originally erected in 674 RM as a stronghold around which mining and logging operations could safely take place. The place was abandoned in 1007 RM, with most resources in the immediate area exhausted, and its garrison moved south into VARR. The fort remained empty throughout the rest of RHAMIAN history, until the KORACHANI EMPIRE invaded Rhamia in 3992 RM and appropriated many such abandoned sites.

In the next decade, the fortress was expanded underground, a large complex of STEEL WOMBS created there where BIOMACHINISTS and FLESHWRIGHTS operated, creating HAGHOUERS for use in the expected war

In 4004 RM, during the construction of a new chamber, a hollow was breached – believed by many to have been a passage into the PRISON CARCERI. Within a few months, the fortress was empty, any sign of habitation gone. Whatever was revealed that day is unknown but the area is shunned and has been allowed to rot by the Rhamians, who know better than to go too close to the Varrachon.

ALLCHET: Set. Fortified city in the far west of THE OLD FOREST (Pop. c. 17,400).

ALLIA: Rvr. Expansive river over 3,500-miles long, flowing from sources in the HAAG HAAD Mountains in the south of THE OLD FOREST in the c of LLACHATUL, through the Old Forest and THE DESOLATION OF ASTUDAN, before disappearing down a large sinkhole beneath the foundations of the city of GÂTHA. Its waters provide most of the sustenance that the Old Forest needs.

ALLIAH: f. Myt. His. In the mythology and ancient history of ELYDEN, a SCION, possibly of the DEMIURGE ALLAISHADA. She was reborn as an angelic OTHERWORLDER, far comelier than her supposed mother, and is often claimed to have been sighted around what is now THE HARÉSHK, becoming a symbol of love, beauty and desire.

Nothing is known of her eventual fate, though her angelic figure remains the image that most picture when thinking of an angel today. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

ALLIAH'S HOURGLASS: Rel. Obj. Religious artifact said to have been carried by the OTHERWORLDER ALLIAH but now carried by the ARCHCLERIC MOSTOS of SYRTIS^(3.), it is a reverential artefact amongst the people of THE HARÉSHK, specifically in Syrtis.

ALLO'S AISLE: Sup. Geo. A 40-mile stretch towards the end of the MARTYR'S ROAD in KHARKHARADONTIS that is rendered relatively safe to travel through a series of SIPHON ENGINES located there. The primary use of the engines is to draw ambient UMBRA to power the vast TECHNARCANE engines within the SEPULCHRAL PALACE and other structures at the terminus of the SHADOW MARCH. The safety that they provide to pilgrims is merely a beneficial side-effect, though one that is much appreciated by the PETITIONERS OF THE MACHINE who are granted a reprieve from the trials of the road.

The road is named after the last known pilgrim to have died of AEPATHY contracted while undertaking the Shadow March before the siphon engines were completed.

ALLOA: His. Rui. Ancient city of the AMNATHI kingdom, dominating the HALOLAN plains of eastern AMNATH, though with its fragmentation in 589 RM into nine states it became subjected to opportunistic predation by an increasingly aggressive NATHI KINGDOM, which by c. -500 RM had forcibly expanded its borders west, absorbing most of Alloa, claiming the last of its people as slaves by c. -450 RM. It was officially destroyed and sacked in -442 RM, and would remain a ruin for most of the KORACHANI EMPIRE'S tenure.

ALLOCER MAHN: (B.3572 RM) Pol. Mil. Influential ARCHPATRICIAN and general of the 3rd IMPERIAL LEGION, with 36 regiments (including seven STEEL LEGIONS) serving under his banner, which bears the mark of the horned lion. An addict of BIOMECHANA and FLESHWRIGHTING, and with close connections to the HOUSE ARTIFEX. By the time of the war, little of his natural fleshy body remained, with most replaced with ORTHOSES or vat-grown replacements. Though never implicitly mentioned, it is thought that he was an ATRAMENTAL SHAPER.

ALLOGENES: Mil. Set. Fortified city in the west of GNOTH, known for its study of the otherworld and its heart engines used in such studies (Pop. c. 38,000).

ALLORU: Set. Settlement in the c south of SARASTRO, in the region of ATABIRRUSH, known for its camel farms (Pop. c. 4,000).

ALLOTHUAGG: Sea. Subterranean sea in the CHAMBER OF TEARS, in the PRISON CARCERI. The sea is expansive, and made up of salt-water sourced from the snaking river PISHRON. Ancient machines are used by ROPOHAII settlement bordering the sea to separate the salt from the water.

ALLOTROPHIA: Pol. Set. Capital city of MACELLARIA, situated in the south of the nation, in the south of WESTERN SAMMAEA. It is a home to various perverse FLESHWRIGHTING and BIOMACHINERY cults and is a centre of innovation of those arts (Pop. c. 800,000).

ALLUCITA: 1. His. Ntn. Ancient early FIFTH AGE nation that dominated the western foothills of the GROWING MOUNTAINS and was later superseded by MULCIBER.

Appearing in c. -1000 RM, concentrated around a fertile, if dry region, the nation became a major source of ADAMANTINE and freestone, which was valued as material for sculptors and engineers, and grew wealthy off its trade with surrounding regions. The nation prospered until c. -400

RM, when its ruler was usurped by the OTHERWORLDER NEPHTHALONT, who over the coming centuries, would expand the territories of Allucita to encompass most of the Growing Mountains. The capital in METEBDAN was abandoned, and a new capital was founded in c. -350 RM, and named Mulciber, after which the nation was renamed. See Vol III: Extinct States.

2. Set. City in the tribe of EATAN in the c west of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. The city dates back to c. -600 RM, when it was a major trade centre of the nation of Allucita and was later built over in c. 220 RM, and remains populated to this day (Pop. c. 22,800).

ALLUKAH: f. Myr. His. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, a SCION of indeterminate heritage (though believed by some to be a daughter of KHARANI, born to a MORTAL mother and left to her own devices). She is mention in the Mythologia Elyden as being a sadist and warmonger who took pleasure in torturing others and causing psychological pain. She was also beholden to the cycle of the BLOOD MOON ARAKHAMÉ, degenerating into a bestial state I which she would stalk and slay prey, including mortals, sucking their blood and leaving their bodies as dry husks.

She was also said to be command legions of VARAKOLAKS – wretched spirit-beasts that terrorise the DREAMS of MORTALS.

Various regions, particularly the south east of Sammaea, around the GOLDEN CRESCENT region, have myths and legends of bloodsucking wretches living in the wilderness, preying on weak animals and solitary travellers, that some scholars think might be traced back to Allukah, perhaps in the form of deformed progeny or descendants. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

ALMA: Set. Major city in the far west of NAARETH, along the course of the river KYNTHA. It is a major centre of the CHURCH OF THE VOLUTE and forms part of the EAST ROAD (Pop. c. 480,000).

ALMAGEST, the: Ast. Vol. ALMAGEST was once home to many great astronomers and, years before the KORACHANI EMPIRE'S conquest of the INNER SEA, was refuge to a sizeable number of PARAPEGMISTS. A great study of ELYDEN'S skies was penned under the name of 'The Almagest'. This tome was the basis upon which all later astronomical lore was built within the empire. Only two copies of the oversized codex are known to exist; one within the college of astronomy in the district of THARDAIA, in the CITY OF ALMAGEST, and another in private hands in KHADON, KORACHAN

ALMAGEST, CITY OF: also 'the City-nation' and 'the Rainy City'. Pol. Set. Capital city of the SOCIALIST REPUBLIC OF ALMAGEST.

The city owes its roots to the early FIFTH AGE city-states of Almagest, AZZII, and EPHEMERIS, which were positioned close to the rivers ASSAYER and NUNCIUS. These small towns acted as caravanserais for the traffic heading south and east from mines and quarries in the north east, the raw iron and copper destined for barges and skiffs heading south to LASCAR⁽³⁾ (now SKAROS and LAASKHA), and formed a confederacy in c. – 200 RM.

As the three towns grew wealthy from commerce, they quickly outgrew their original purpose and, by c. -100 RM had established many ports along the eastern shore of the SEA OF SEKHEM. Their influence extended as far south and east as the Korachan city-states. Were it not for these thriving cities, the realm of Almagest would have remained little more than a collection of allied townships. It is during this time that the Astronomical treatise known as THE ALMAGEST was first penned.

By c. 100 RM the three main towns of the Confederacy had outgrown their old walls, their outskirts merging together into a contiguous principality, becoming one of the largest conurbations to the north of the INNER SEA, establishing the singular city of Almagest as it is known today, and leading to the formation of the homogenised ALMAGESTI tongue. It is from here that the armies of Almagest were able to subjugate surrounding lands, establishing the fledgling nation of Almagest, of which this great city became its capital in 125 RM.

It would clash against the expansionist Korachan over the next centuries, which were marked by a long period of unrest and war that ultimately ended in 379 RM with its capitulation to the larger power, under condition that the Council of the Almagest would be allowed to govern in relative autonomy. The city's defences were strengthened by the $\underline{\text{KYONI ORDER}}$ of the $\underline{\text{SANCTIFIED INQUISITION}}$ between 381 – 450

RM, soon becoming renowned across the Inner Sea Region for their intricate network of concentric bastions.

It is commonly regarded as the largest city in LLACHATUL, and at its peak in c. 3600 RM has a population of over 5-million people, though this has since diminished to 3-million. It is one of the wealthiest and most productive cities in Llachatul, and is known for its undercity and its spectacular vaulted harbours (both of which are partially a result of its streets being regraded). It forms a part of the RED ROUTE, and is busy from trade as distant as SIRIPHAGOS and EASTERN SAMMAEA.

The city was instrumental in Almagest gaining its independence from the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI EMPIRE}}$ in 3014 RM, following the $\underline{\text{WAR OF THE}}$ ARTIFEXES decades earlier. Its sundering from the empire affected both nations as well as the economy in the $\underline{\text{INNER SEA REGION}}$.

Though it remained powerful and a major city, it dwindled following this time. Lessening resources led to slow but steady decrease in its population that was exacerbated by regular press-ganging for conscripts in its wars (Pop. c. 4,200,000).

ALMAGEST, LOWER: Lan. Sec. Soc. Colloquial term within the city of ALMAGEST for a particular district south of the river NUNCIUS that is effectively a lawless enclave, ignored by the government and self-governing and self-regulating, with a multitude of workhouses and small manufactories belching soke into the air. A haven to the destitute, those on the run, and those who simply wish to be forgotten, it is a multi-faceted slum, occupying stories of regraded streets, old sewers, walled off vaults, and storage yards, and it rarely-if-ever sees any natural sunlight. It is a labyrinthine expanse, with stairs, lifts and metal walkways connecting different levels that reach down to the waterline, with passages and tunnels connecting to the coast.

People live in cramped vicinity to each other with unlicensed businesses operating amongst them. The air is thick with odours and smoke, and the whole place is filthy with water leaking from above, and sewage seeping from below. Indeed, many people use umbrellas or hats.

Many who dwell north of the river who live better lives wonder if Lower Almagest is even real, though it is very real. Few with any choice in the matter live there and as a result its denizens are bitter, broken and wretched. Many are drug-addled, fugitives, or unregistered shapers seeking shelter.

There exists an unspoken accord between the people of Lower Almagest and the city proper, with anyone from the city venturing into Lower Almagest forsaking the aid of the law and with IRONMEN patrols ending along the peripheries between the two entities. Any crimes committed within the confines of Lower Almagest fall under a form of vigilante or vendetta justice and the Ironmen will not intervene.

Its main industries are the manufacture of counterfeit or illegal goods, which can suffer little interference from the city proper, and drugs made here find their way in circulation across the city and nation of Almagest.

ALMAGEST, SOCIALIST REPUBLIC OF: Ntn. Dem. 'Almagesti'. Major nation in the c of Llachatul, east of the Seas of APHOTIS and SEKHEM. It dominated the north west of Central Llachatul and covers a vast area of over 1,000,000 square-miles, with climates ranging from cool temperate in the south to subpolar in its north and polar in the far north. The nation is dominated by frigid areas of wilderness that are peppered with busy isolated industries, with most of its major cities around the coast of the SEA OF APHOTIS.

The nation of Almagest has a long history, beginning as an independent land of astronomers and scholars in the first millennium of the FIFTH AGE, based around the coast of what are now the Sea of Aphotis and the STRAIT OF ALMAGEST. Its people were master builders and made large observatories of volcanic ask concrete and many of them remain standing to this day.

The Atramental arts gained a foothold there after CHEIROAHIN banished by the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR in KORACHAN between c. 50 – 100 RM settled the south of Almagest, bringing with them a PARAPEGMIST tradition.

It would clash against the expansionist Korachan over the next centuries, which were marked by a long period of unrest and war that ultimately ended in 379 RM with its capitulation to the larger power, under condition that the Council of the Almagest would be allowed to govern in relative autonomy. Almagest would expand its territories far to the north whilst under Korachani rule, and ores discovered in the far north would allow the vassal state to grow into a major industrial power — its geothermally-powered manufactories being amongst the most profitable in the empire. It enjoyed a level of autonomy that few other nations enjoyed and spent most of the AGE OF STEEL as a Korachani industrial centre, where it was home to many of the most influential PATRICIAN HOUSES.

Revolts in in the south of the nation between 900 - 975 RM forced Korachan to spend a great deal of resources on maintaining peace there. This was at the detriment of other colonies, and PARTHIS slipped away during this time.

A movement in LAASKHA calling itself the RENAISSANCE CRUSADE spread like wildfire across the Llachatuli territories of the Korachani empire between 1050 – 1100 RM, reaching. Headed by religious fundamentalists who opposed many scientific discoveries and newly-emergent artistic and scholarly movements (including the DEMIURGE RENAISSANCE), the crusades persecuted artists and scholars, many of whom fled to Almagest, where they were given refuge. This led to it becoming a hub of culture, and it was famed amongst the INTELLIGENTSIA and patrician classes as a welcoming place in which to sojourn.

Civil unrest in the late 3rd millennium RM saw Almagest as the centre of the dissenting nations. The conflict escalated into THE WAR OF THE ARTIFEXES, which engulfed most of c LLACHATUL and saw the already burgeoning problems of the Korachani empire further exacerbated. The war ended in 3014 RM with the signing of the ALMAGESTI TREATY, which saw Almagest a free nation with power-enough to rival Korachan.

Following its newfound independence, Almagest consolidated its territories, concentrating on expanding its existing industries, rebuilding cities that had been affected by the war, and establishing a sturdy infrastructure that by c. 3250 RM had allowed it to flex its military muscles. It expanded rapidly to the north into DURCHAA(1.), moving as far as the RYOGENI SEA, where it absorbed all of the peninsula of VALBAR(2.). It also expanded west across the STRAIT OF SKAROS, and south, pushing against SKAROS under the leadership of HOUSE ARTIFEX, which had become the main governing body of the Almagesti Republic by 3096 RM, ruling as president of its republic until the rise of ANDIRONICOS NOCTAMDE in 3404 RM. He dissolved the republic and founded a short-lived empire based on his cult of personality. By his death in 3462 RM, Almagest had near doubled in size and its ships were in control of Strait of Skaros.

His son HELVIARN was a weak ruler and seceded in 3475 RM without any heirs, leaving the empire in the hands of his six SENESCHALS^(1.), leading to a short period where they ruled Almagest as a hexarchy. By 3682 RM the hexarchic tradition had given way to a form of state capitalism where the government controls most businesses and industries, with its Patrician Houses acting as oligarchic custodians with great influence within the government. This has created a large class divide, where a minute part of the population controls the vast majority of its wealth. As a result, certain Patrician Houses are in control of specific ministries or certain industries, and generations of families live their entire lives in the employ of a particular House, spending their meagre wages in House-controlled markets.

Sporadically throughout its independence Almagest was the target of Korachani offensives, particularly in the decades of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR'S absence.

Today, Almagest remains a powerhouse of industry, with major coal and iron mining regions, though ELYDEN'S waning has left much of its other territories incapable of sustaining life: a blow to its large cities, which require a great deal of food to survive.

The capital, ALMAGEST, was once amongst the largest urban area in Elyden, with over 5-million bodies calling it home. It is now greatly diminished, where the threat of starvation and disease are ever-present. Its DROSS farms work constantly to feed its struggling cities, and the pipelines are heavily monitored for damages as a fault on a single pipeline could mean the death of thousands.

Industrial and military press-gangers are a present sight in most Almagesti settlements, and it is now considered a rite-of-passage to serve the nation whether in its sprawling polar quarries, or in military or civil service, serving in its armies and working in manufactories, respectively. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

ALMAGEST, UPPER: Lan. Set. Soc. Colloquial term within the city of ALMAGEST for a particular district in the north of the city, It is considered one of more upper-class regions of the city and most of its old bastions have been converted into gardens that are open to FREEMEN.

ALMAGESTI: Lan. Language spoken in ALMAGEST. It has a long and convoluted history and began as a distinct language dating to the early FIFTH AGE, following the homogenization of the languages of the three cultures of the settlements of ALMAGEST, AZZII, and EPHEMERIS in c. O RM. Following the arrival of KORACHAN to the region as suzerain, the language was largely supplanted by the KORACHANI tongue, which remained dominant until Almagest became independent following the ALMAGESTI TREATY in 3014 RM, after which the almost dead language of Almagesti was pushed to the fore once more. Today, it is one of two official languages in Almagest, alongside Korachani, which remains the defacto language of the lower classes. See Vol II: Languages.

ALMAGESTI COASTAL BULWARK: Mil. Str. Expansive coastal defences in the south west of ALMAGEST, along the eastern coast of the SEA OF APHOTIS. Stretching for some 300-miles in total from SCISSELA in the south to ARKAIM in the north, the bulwark takes the form of gigantic geometric concrete shapes that are scattered along shallow coastlines, acting as a deterrent to would-be invaders. Construction on the project began in c. 2980 RM, prior (and unrelated) to the outbreak of the WAR OF THE ARTIFEXES, and played a part in the ensuing conflicts, with construction continuing for many decades after Almagest gained its independence.

Their role as deterrent remains controversial to this day, with some claiming the nation's record for never being invaded as proof of its effectiveness, while others saying this is merely coincidental, and the bulwark was never needed.

Today, the concrete blocks lie ruined, with rusting rebar exposed to the elements as concrete crumbles around them. In some areas they have disintegrated completely, leaving a mass of rusted girders (ironically a better deterrent to landing parties than the blocks themselves), while in others they remain relatively intact and are still home to coastal artillery emplacements.

ALMAGESTI GREETING: Soc. Common gesture made in northern ALMAGEST and other cold or industrial regions, where a person holds both hands out in front of themselves in a form of greeting, so that the person they are meeting can see all their fingers. This is done to show that the person is a good worker and has not lost any fingers to industrial accidents or the widespread ailment known as FINGER ROT, both of which lead to people losing fingers.

ALMAGESTI MILE: unit of scale and measurement that gained popularity in ALMAGEST in c. 200 RM, and is comparable with the KORACHANI mile that has since become the standard across THE INNER SEA. It equals around 98 of an Korachani mile, making it longer.

ALMAGESTI PENINSULA: Geo. The primary central peninsula on which the city of ALMAGEST is built.

ALMAGESTI TEMPLE: 1. Rel. Following the WAR OF THE ARTIFEXES and the subsequent independence of ALMAGEST in 3014 RM, the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE that had until then been the main religion in Almagest (as elsewhere in the KORACHANI EMPIRE), underwent rapid changes.

Though the Church of the Undying Machine, based in Khadon, Korachan, remained its governing body, major changes in doctrine (particularly in its views on Rachanael and Malichar as the church's leader, and eventual attitudes towards saints) caused the Church of the Undying Machine to declare the Almagesti branch as heretical in c. 3110 RM, after which it severed all ties to the mother church, becoming known as the Almagesti Temple, after its main temple in the CITY of Almagest.

The church has since diverged even further from its precursor faith, coming to abandon worship of the Archpotentate Malichar as a living god, revering him only as a prophet and the vessel through which the UNDYING MACHINE was able to be reborn, and even then reference to him is only sparing, given the political situation between the two nations, and church propaganda now downplays his rebirth as an $\underline{\text{OTHERWORLDER}}$ out of fear of people openly revering him – the political leader of a rival nation – as a living god.

The artefact known as the EBON SHROUD plays a large role in the religion's history and worship. Claimed to be stained with the ichor of the DEMIURGE Rachanael, it has become a prominent relic. Preserved in a reliquary within the Almagesti Temple^{(2),} it has a acquired a potent symbolic status representing the dichotomy that funs deep within the teachings of the church – on the one hand it shows the fallibility of the mighty, but also how one can rise from a seemingly desperate situation.

Another major difference between the Almagesti Temple and the Church of the Undying Machine is its reverence of patron saints, which has only become more prominent in the 900-years since the churches founding. Today patron saints are the focal part of the religion, superseding direct worship of the Undying Machine, which has become an unknowable distant deity. Thusly, the saints serve as more understandable go-betweens – facets and aspects of the unfathomable Undying Machine that mortals can latch onto. The practice of preserving CORPI SANCTI is especially common within the Almagesti Temple.

This has led to much friction between the different denominations travelling along the Shadow March, which worshippers of the Almagesti Temple still undertake, albeit with less fervour than their southern counterparts.

Most churches of the Almagesti Temple are built around a huge iron clad statue of its patron saint and most people carry at least a pewter necklace about their person, while others might carry multiple trinkets and baubles, with those undertaking the Shadow March often showing their faith by bedecking themselves in dozens of such relics and fetishes.

Each settlement revers a particular patron saint, which shapes various aspects of doctrine and everyday culture, influencing things like the settlement's heraldry, favoured colours, attitudes, vocations and naming conventions. Larger cities might pay their respects to multiple saints (many of whom are the same saints that are revered by the Church of the Undying Machine, though new saints have been introduced over the years since Almagesti independence), leading to rivalries between different districts.

Today, the religion is followed by not only Almagest but also the people of $\underline{\text{VALBAR}}^{(2)}$. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

2. Rel. Str. Primary religious edifice of the religion known as the Almagesti Temple (1.), the temple is monolithic, occupying the highest point of the primary ALMAGESTI PENINSULA, and forms the centre of the eponymous ALMAGESTI religion. It is famed for being the resting place of the EBON SHROUD, which is said to be stained in the ichor of the DEMIURGE RACHANAEL.

ALMAGESTI TREATY: Pol. Treaty signed in 3014 RM by the IMPERIAL HIGH CONSULITE on behalf of the KORACHANI EMPIRE and LORD PATERFAMILIA ANTITHEOS of the ALMAGESTI UNION, ending the WAR OF THE ARTIFEXES. The treaty left Korachan weakened, its resources spent in the preceding war, though ALMAGEST was left eager to expand east into the BLACK MOUNTAINS. in its search for resources that until then had been discouraged by Korachan.

ALMAGESTI UNDERCITY: Arc. Geo. Following the arrival of the KORACHANI EMPIRE to ALMAGEST in 379 RM and the eventual growth its capital's conurbations into one large city by c 700 RM, the city began to grow upwards as well as outwards.

A massive regrading of its streets took place between 1632 and 1675 RM. Old crumbling streets were built over, becoming sewers and the condominiums around them becoming subterranean warehouses and basements.

This growth continued over the decades, leading to a network of disused tunnels, dry sewers and connecting subways inhabited by the DEGENERATES, MANES and the destitute.

ALMANA PLAINS: Geo. Plains in the east of JURRAS^(2.) known for its weather-worn rock pillars and sandstone ledges.

ALMAS: Plr. 'almas'. Mor. Archaic humanoid ASICTHAIN, said to be corrupt descendants of GIGANRI from ancient times, not unlike OGHURS, but smaller and more cunning. Some exist in the foothills of the BLACK MOUNTAINS, where they are thought to have originated, though most travelled east of there in the early $\underline{\text{FIFTH AGE}}$, settling around the $\underline{\text{TEMUJAN}}$ basin.

Feral, almost animalistic, they were once common in many untamed mountainous regions across CENTRAL LLACHATUL. They were most noted in uninhabited regions of TEMUIA and MALAN, though have largely been hunted to near extinction today, though small pockets of them still survive, forced into wretched lives of hiding. They remain a nuisance in Malan with the north west of the HENDECARCHY of CYRENIA and in the region of GELLAN in northern AMILLAERE^(L). See Vol II: classification and Taxonomy of Life: Asicthain.

ALMIRA: Set. Small city in the south of KHAR NADUL, in the badlands region of KARIMAHAL. It is effectively a self-governing enclave within KHAR NADUL, with little contact or relations with its parent nation. This is due to its religious beliefs, which are seen as non-traditional at best and idolatrous at worst. Indeed, Almira is the centre of all religious devotion to the ETERNAL TREE OF DIAOR, which is the only religious belief on the immediate area.

The city is the centre of a series of a few dozen settlements in Karimahal who share similar religious beliefs. It is ruled by a theocracy that oversees all these settlements, and its DIAORESSES wield great power amongst its people (Pop. c. 18,000).

ALNAIR: Mil. Set. Fortified city in the c. east of AQUARIIA, known for its iron mines.

Its strategic location near the iron-rich BLACK MOUNTAINS make Alnair a vital region to Aquariian industry during PARTHISAN occupation. Its importance continued following its eventual independence and today it is not only a centre of mining, but is also visited by occasional GIGANRI mystics from GNOTH, though their purpose there remains unknown (Pop. c. 40,000).

ALOADI: Sec. Small city in the west of RHINOCOLOURA, along the western shore of lake SHIBBETH, along the course of the river SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾. It is a major producer of legumes (Pop. c. 13,000).

ALOARE: Flo. A type of ALOE common in parts of LLACHATUL, particularly AZAZEM, LAASKHA, SKAROS and the south of ALMAGEST. It is more adapted to temperate climates than other aloes and has become an important economical plant within the KORACHANI EMPIRE, where its varied uses include sustenance (as food, water and, after distillation, a liquor known as BRAN), clothing (its fibrous leaves are woven into a crude form of hemp) and medicines (unguents and balms, including ALOARE, OIL OF).

Though many varieties exist, most are used for some or all of the above, though a rare few have flesh that is poisonous to the touch. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

ALOARE, OIL OF: Med. Oil of the ALOARE plant is known for its sterility and is often used to cleanse wounds. Elsewhere, the plants are cultivated for their oil which is used as an active ingredient in various balms and salves manufactured by pharmacists.

ALOE: Flo. Succulent plant that is common across arid parts of SAMMAEA and LLACHATUL. It is used in various industries, and is distilled into alcohol, in the form of BRAN; and has medicinal uses, amongst others. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

ALOGIA: Lak. Large lake in the c of GNOTH along the course of the river NEPHOT.

ALOGOS: Sea. Sea off the western-coast of the PELASGOSI peninsula, serving as a border between Pelasgosi islands and the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS.

ALOMHAR: Set. Harbour in the north western coast of $ERET^{(2)}$ (Pop. c. 18,300).

ALONIA: Rui. Ruined UMBRA extraction plant, and predecessor to the present plant, FASUA, located 18-miles south west.

ALORA: Set. City in the east of NORTHERN SIMBARA. The city is relatively new, having appeared in c. 3540 RM following the retreat of the SEA OF KRIHIEK left a large lagoon in its wake that links to the sea via a narrow half-mile-wide strait, a settlement appeared along the mouth of that strait, controlling the waters into the lagoon (which shares the same name)

The city increased in size since that time, growing into a powerful independent demesne (Pop. unknown).

ALOS: also 'the Graveyard'. Geo. Badlands region in LIDEA covering around 20,000 square-miles, noted for its wind-worn knolls. The place is named after the SOULSTONES that pepper the region, particularly in the area known as YPOKHANDRA⁽¹⁾.

ALOTARR: Pol. Set. Capital of ZOHAK, in the north west of the nation. It is a stop along the EGETAKHAN ROAD (Pop. c. 420,000).

ALOZSATAH: Fau. A variety of RACHAR taking the form of a gigantic floating jellyfish that siphons UMBRA from surrounding air, though leaves life around it twisted and maddened. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

ALPHITALA: Set. Coastal city on the island of ALPHITOMATIA. It is the main city on the island and by far the largest permanently populated settlement and is fortified (Pop. c. 41,000).

ALPHITOMATIA: Geo. Island off the eastern coast of SABAISA, around 12,300 square-miles in area. It is separated from the mainland by a narrow 7-miles strait, that is divided by a small island around 9-miles wide that was revealed over the past few hundred years. It is thought that should ELYDEN'S seas continue to retreat at the same rate, Alphitomatia will be linked to the mainland by a narrow bridge by 4200 RM.

ALPHRY: Set. Settlement in the east of RHEA, known for its production of a hallucinatory honey. The honey's properties are derived from rhododendron flowers, and was once used in religious rituals. Though this is no-longer the case, the honey remains a delicacy and is sold across ELYDEN to connoisseurs and gourmands (Pop. c. 4,000).

ALPHYN: Leg. Myt. Legendary EELYOUHN common in the myths of SAMMAEA, particularly in KARAKHAS, PARAIYA, southern MHAROKK and LIDEA.

Legends of Alphyns are thought to date back to the THIRD AGE, when eelyouhns were far more common and tales of martial prowess were told by merchants and travellers across NORTHERN SAMMAEA, where they are believed to have been most prevalent. It is unknown if the present legends are inspired by a specific individual or if they're a combination of various anecdotes and events. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

ALQIEL: Set. Coastal city in the south west of PNESSA. Its name is derived from a mythological figure that featured in pagan legends of the area prior to the waning of the SEA OF SUPPA (Pop. c. 40,000).

ALRAS: His. Ntn. Small FOURTH AGE nation whose domains consisted of the present-day region of GHAN in the north east of VENTHIR. The domains were a collective of separate city-states that controlled trade between the TORRENT OF KHARROCK (then little more than a narrow strait) and the DARK SEA. The nation was largely destroyed in the WAR OF SCOURGING, though many of its ruins were later repopulated by the NATHI people in the early FIFTH AGE. See Vol III: Extinct States.

ALRON: Set. Major city in the SIX CITIES region in the west of THE SURRACH, in north western SAMMAEA. It emerged from a smaller independent city of the same name around c. 3920 RM, and its territorial claims in the region were solidified following the deification of the catatonic seer-king AMENETHET, and is now recognised as the 7th major power in the Six Cities region.

The city is known for its many OGHUR labourers: remnants of the old AHINAN culture that is now extinct (Pop. c. 47,000).

ALSAAR: Rui. Ruined citadel, once belonging to PATRICIAN HOUSE EMMIRA, in the c west of LAASKHA. It remains now, surrounded by farmsteads and fields, as a hilltop ruin. The House fell on hard times in 3680 RM and the region was abandoned, though was later resettled by freemen farmers.

ALSCIA: Pol. Set. Capital city of ENDUI. Its foundations are built upon the eastern-most known path of the GREAT ROAD and many of its oldest buildings are built from reclaimed stones from the old road (Pop. c. 68,200).

ALSHAM: Set. Coastal city in the south of AQUARIIA known for its mercenaries (Pop. c. 15,300).

ALSHASIR: Ind. Set. Small city in the far south west of the SULTANATE OF

ABACARDAT. Its main industry is the quarrying of coal, most of which is exported and it is home to the great ambulant yards, which are used to transport the coal north to WAHADNA, where it transported over the BITTER SEA to SHIDAD, where it is moved overland to FATARAH, before being shipped away (Pop. c. 8,000).

ALSHAT: Rvr. River in the south east of AQUARIIA flowing west for 320-miles from sources in the western-face of the BLACK MOUNTAINS, before meetings its distributary, the river BELDAT, itself a tributary of the larger river ISARRA.

ALSUHAD: Set. Small city in the c north west of RHEA (Pop. c. 12,500).

ALTAGER: Set. City in the c-south east of AQUARIIA, along the course of the river ISARRA. It is a major centre of textile production and most of its produce is sold to merchants passing through the city while travelling THE WAY trade-route (Pop. c. 48,000).

ALTAHET: Lak. Lake in the c east of ALMAGEST, feeding the river ANDHOR.

ALTAKRACHIA: Geo. Expansive region dominated by gigantic granite tors in the north of ALMAGEST, north of the MARMARA MASSIF.

ALTAN: Set. Major coastal city in the south of TAHALL, overlooking the SEA OF SERPENTS. It is famed for its harbour and port-side marketplace, which sees exotic wares from the west and east of the GATE OF EREBETH, and is home to a great a mercantile tradition, and the LIGHTHOUSE OF ALTAN on an island 8-miles south of the city (Pop. c. 290,000).

ALTAN, LIGHTHOUSE OF: Str. Lighthouse 8-miles south of the city of ALTAN in the south of TAHALL. Great knowledge was once contained in the lighthouse, most notable of which of was the CODEX OF THE TAL 'IBA, though few are those with the expertise to truly understand them.

ALTAR: 1. Sea. Bay in the north of $\overline{\text{VAALK}}$, south of the $\overline{\text{SEA OF}}$ BASSANDER.

2. also 'THE BEAST' and 'THE DISCORDANT DEITY'. Myt. His. In many cultures' mythologies Altar plays a prominent role as an agent of Chaos in the early days of creation as featured in the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN. It is unclear whether or not Altar's origins lie with those of the other DEMIURGES or elsewhere.

3. Lan. In KORACHANI CHIRURGERY, gurneys and operating tables are often referred to as altars.

ALTAR OF AMUD VUL: Rui. Arc. Ancient basaltic altar located in the east of the ROMOREAN RIFT VALLEY in ROMOREA (2.), about 150-miles east of the city of NULAND. Little is known of its history, and it is named after an old indigenous myth that detailed the exile of a wicked deity and the misguided attempts of its followers to restore it to power in a ritual centred on a black altar.

The place is largely unknown today and is greatly damaged, though some ANIMISTS who have encountered the object have spoken of prominent echoes of the OTHERWORLD surrounding it.

ALTAR OF HAAGENTI: His. Rel. Rock-cut temple in the north easternfacing hills of the HAAGEN Mountains, overlooking the SOLACHAN desert in the south of SARASTRO. The temple is ancient, dating back to the time of the Haageni people, and is now disused, crumbling.

ALTAR OF NEITH: Rel. Mountain-top temple in the STERHBEL Mountains in the east of N'RAKH that is used in seasonal rituals by AANTH ATTERKHATS dedicated to the mother-deity MAALKAT. The name was a misattribution by KORACHANI explorers that remained in use.

ALTAR OF THE SORAKHEI: Rel. Place of worship of the ANOCHI and their people, the SORAKHEI of KARAKHAS.

ALTAR OF VAM ATAR: Geo. Expansive region of western-facing cliffs in the c of CUTH, forming the south of the MO-ORASSIM Mountains. The cliffs are high, and near-vertical, stretching for an expanse no less than 180-miles long and covering some 140 square-miles.

It is named after a SCION of the DEMIURGE NERGAAL, who features heavily in the culture and folklore of Cuth.

ALTER, IMAMN OF ARAMI: Oth. An OTHERWORLDER and IMAMN, that roams the north of KHARKHARADONTIS, caring for and sanctifying what trees it encounters. Those that are beyond salvation it destroys, making sure that their seeds, if any, are eradicated alongside the trees.

- ALTETH: Soc. Rnk. Eth. Caste of pale-skinned GIGANRI common in GNOTH. They are amongst the most common of the giganri castes and make up the majority of its population.
- ALTHA: 1. Rvr. River around 300-miles long, flowing east from the BELLEPHARA Mountain into the sea of DANAEL.
 - 2. Also 'the Autocracy of Altha'. Ntn. Nation created in 3712 RM following the sundering of the city of ASHAM from SAGITTARIA. Worship of the INTERMINABLE ONE waned following 3612 RM and remains rare there to this day. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.
- ALTIHIR: Lak. Lake in the c south of PORPHYR, fed by the river GOTOROS.
- ALTHITA: Set. City in the c north of KHULL. It has a long history, and was already a hub of trade within the THERASHIAN EMPIRE in c. 600 RM. The fall of the empire left the city in better state than most others, and it became part of the region of INGHULL.

In c. 1124 RM it became the centre of a rebuilding effort following a series of droughts. The warlord ASIPHYAL was able to muster a solid force in Althita, which became the centre of his efforts at restoring order to the land. It became his base and, following his coronation as the first king of Inghull in 1311 RM, after which it became the new capital and centre of the INGHULLAN MONARCHY until their ousting by the SORCERERKINGS (3.) centuries later.

Today it is much diminished from its previous greatness, though takes pride in its ancient monarchy's structures, which are still used today by its government and as bases by both the KHULLAN INQUISITION and the KOPHIC houses. It is perhaps most famed for the large royal necropolis that stands on a hill outside the city, where a millennium of royals and their closest family members lie entombed (Pop. c. 18,000).

- ALTILACUA: Set. Major city in the east of KULIGALA, in the east of the CARCHEMISHI PENINSULA^(1.) in the east of SAMMAEA, at the mouth of the river ESKUTET (Pop. c. 130,000).
- ALTIN: Ind. Set. Mining settlement in the north of MHAROKK, at the south eastern base of the ASUS highlands. The settlement emerged to support a large open-cast mine 1-mile south, which is a large producer of gold (Pop. c. 6,500).
- ALTURIGIA: also 'Walpurghia'. Set. Major city in the c of the HENDECARCHY of CYRENIA in the north west of MALAN. One of the few cities in Malan that lives despite of, rather than together with, the forest. Its high pylon-like walls are constantly battered by the roots and encroachment of the boreal forest around it (Pop. c. unknown).
- ALU GEEN: Pol. SORCERER-lord and present ruler of the city of TAL ZHAAN^(2.), making him the ruler of the eponymous state.
- ALUMIAN: Oth. Name for a breed of HALFBLOOD, known for the metallic growths on their bodies. See Vol II: Anthropeidos.
- ALUMINIUM: Ele. Metal common to various regions of ELYDEN, particularly in AZAZEM, the east of SKAROS, VAALK and RHEA. It is commonly used as a dying mordant, building material and, with increasing frequency around the coastal areas of LLACHATUL, in jewellery and engineering works.
- ALUMIUM STAFF: Obj. Claimed by the PLENIPOTENTIARY

 PHYRIGAMON as a mark of his rank (2nd Tier) within the MINARET OF LIGHT, of the FIRMAMENT.
- ALUN: Set. City in the c south of CEHOPHELA, close to the border with SEDALLIA along the western foothills of the EGETAKH Mountains. It is a stop along the VESHONAN PASSAGE trade route, brokering deals between Cehophelan and Sedallian merchants (Pop. c. 70,000).
- ALUNEM: Ind. Set. Salt mining settlement in the c of AZAZEM, in the south west of the AAORA Mountains. Most of the settlement is located within the expansive square chambers of the mines beneath the surface. The eastern reaches of the mine collapsed in 3876 RM, resulting in a large sinkhole that is now abandoned (Pop. c. 3,000).
- ALURUS: Set. Fortified settlement in the west of the SARASTROAN colony of IPSISSIMA^(1.). Its main industry is the mining of SOULSTONES, for which the colony is famed (Pop. c. 6,000).
- ALUS: Lake in the south of KOMMEA, along the course of the river GOIRATH within the ALUSIDAE plains.

- ALUSIDAE: Geo. Plains in the c south of KOMMEA. Originally woodlands, the area was slowly cut down over many centuries for farm and grazing lands, which today have been completely altered by mortal hands, with few if any signs of true nature.
 - A few pockets of old growth woods remain, separating farmlands, and they are ignored for the most part, with tales of forest spirits dissuading most people from venturing too close to them.
- ALUSMA: Set. Small coastal settlement on the island of $\underline{VALARCH}$, in $\underline{HOLOLACH}^{(1.)}$ (Pop. c. 1,900).
- ALVEAR: 1. Int. Rel. Obj. Moss-covered boulder in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of PALUS⁽¹⁾ that is a site of pilgrimage to those of the ASHKERONI faith.
- 2. Pol. Duchy in the $\underline{\text{HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM}}$ of $\underline{\text{PALUS}}^{(1.)}$. It is renowned as a major farming duchy in the Haréshk, with much cattle and crops raised here.
- ALVELITE: Ele. Material created from the waste sludge common in the region of ALVELM in the south of THE VORANDINE. It can be refined and moulded into various shapes as a substitute for metal, and is also used to make statues and other ornamental objects. Its main producer is NYCARAT.
- ALVELM: Int. Geo. Polluted wasteland that dominates the south of THE VORANDINE, forming 150-miles of its south eastern border, extending partially into RAONGEN^{2.)}. The terrain takes the form of a red-orange tarlike substance that covers the land (or is the land accounts are contradictory). Nothing grows there and what trees exist there are likely preserved in a state of death from a previous incarnation of the region before the pollution was present.

There is no explanation as to what created this blight, though its effect on life is inimical and the number of stillbirths, and birth defects in surrounding areas as far away as 100-miles are common, likely due to this. Entrepreneuring mortals have been able to dry this substance into a stone-like material known as ALVELITE.

- ALWAK: Ind. Set. Mining settlement in J'THANA (Pop. c. 41,500).
- ALYCTA: Set. Coastal city in the far south east of LYRIDIA, south of the BAY OF DETH, in land formerly controlled by NARTHEL. The city took advantage of the silting of the STRAIT OF NARTHEL and had become a major trade influence in the area by c 3890 RM.

Alycta, alongside its twin BYTRA, is now a major source of trade in Lyridia from both the west and east, and both cities are rapidly growing in wake of traffic that crosses them via the RED ROUTE since the silting of the Strait, and they are on the forefront of Lyridian modernisation (Pop. c. 318,500).

- ALYSCERY: Set. Fortified settlement in the region of BACALUSIA in the c west of THE SURRACH. It overlooks the pass of MISHANOS, west into the region of ADA (Pop. c. 98,000).
- ALYSMIA: Set. Small fortified city in the west of the UMBRA SOKHAR wastes in SAMMAEA. The city is a protectorate of the city of KADOTA and is a major source of troops, who train in the harsh terrain east of the city (Pop. c. 18,000).
- ALZABAL: Set. Coastal settlement in the north east of ZHARIAH^(2.). Its main industry is the cultivation of CANKERBLOOMS, which are processed into poison in the city of KAEIAH (Pop. c. 6,200).
- ALZIOLAR: Int. His. Arc. Massive stepwell located in the west of LOEGRESS^(1.), along the periphery of the ANGMEHEN Forest, close to the border with ABATTUR.

The stepwell is of palatial design and is hewn in its entirety from the sandstone of the region, descending for ten storeys and stretching for acres. It is labyrinthine in scope and during its prime, would have been almost completely submerged. Today, due to dying aquifers and lowering sea levels, the water has almost completely receded leaving only its lowest reaches filled.

It is thought to date back to the early FOURTH AGE, though little is known of the culture that created and used it.

ALZUAN: Set. Settlement in the north west of the SULTANATE OF ABACARDAT (Pop. c. 2,000).

AM AVITU: Set. Coastal settlement in the c south of GNOTH, overlooking the SEA OF COSSYRA. It forms a part of THE WAY trade-route (Pop. c. 3,000).

AM ONKRET: Pol. Ser. Capital of KREM, built atop the ruins of an ancient early FIFTH AGE metropolis of MON KETTRA, which was a powerful coastal city (Pop. c. 200,000).

AM ROTAHA: Rvr. Major river system dominating OTINTH and the south western-most part of RAONGEN^(2,). The main part of the river has a labyrinthine route across the URAHASH Massif, and flows south west for over 1,500-miles from sources in the ADULIEK and the MHUTHASH mountains, before emptying into the SEA OF DURAHRAT. The river's mouth was once over 200 miles north east, before the retreat of the sea led to the formation of the ABARULLIAN Plains.

A major part of the river also passes through the mildly ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region of MIHADDUN, before reaching the plains of ABARULLIA.

AM TASHTAH: Rvr. River in the south of OTINTH, flowing south for over 580-miles, from sources in the LERASA Mountains, before emptying into the SEA OF DURAHRAT.

AM TUAHEM: Rvr. Major river in OTINTH, flowing south for over 900-miles from various sources in the URAHASH Massif and the ATILIPHO region, before emptying into the SEA OF DURAHRAT.

AMAANA: Set. Settlement in the south west of HOAMM. In antiquity was famed for its crustaceans, which were trawled in the then-fertile waters of the southern ENGARA (Pop. c. 102,800).

AMAARI WATERS: also 'Amaai'. Geo. Island-filled waters that form the northern part of the SEA OF DAGGERS, south of the Federation of PERGOST.

AMAARIMA: Sect. Small city in the c east of THE SURRACH, along the course of the river HANNA (Pop. c. 99,500).

AMADIA: Dem. 'Amadian'. For. Wet, warm forest in the north west of TZALLRACH, bordering the south of MALAN, populated by an indigenous people known as AMADIANS who are less advanced that their fellows in the south. They acknowledge and worship both the FIRMAMENT and the ATRAMENTA but do not use either in a sign of reverence.

AMADIANS: Eth. The people who inhabit the region of AMADIA, in the north of TZALLRACH. They live simple pastoral lives and have little to do with contemporary TZALLRACHI politics.

They are thought to be the indigenous people of the area, inhabiting it in the early FIFTH AGE as NATHI people migrated north across the TORRENT OF KARROCK. The early Fifth Age nation of CHARAMA was populated by Amadians.

They are of dark skin, with predominantly black hair and dark eyes.

AMADIAN: Lan. Native language predominantly spoken in the north of TZALLRACH. It is ancient, and predates the development of the CHARAMANI, which emerged in the wake of NATHI colonisation attempts, whose language outlasted the colonists, taking on traits of the native Amadian. See Vol II: Languages.

AMAEL: Set. Coastal fishing settlement in the north west of TAMAR, close to the border with the PARTHISAN colony of SOTHRA.

Following years of tensions in the wake of the colony's appearance (during which it saw the construction of a major barracks), Amael now commonly trades with the city, and its vicinity to the colony has seen it grow through passing trade (Pop. c. 10,000).

AMAFRA: Set. Settlement in the c east of N'RAKH (Pop. c. 39,000).

AMAGAT: Set. Major city in the c of ALMAGEST, linking the cities of its south east with its western coast (Pop. c. 113,000).

AMAGAT, IDOL OF: Rui. Monolithic FECUND IDOL discovered west of the city of AMAGAT in central ALMAGEST in c. 1780 RM. In its original condition the idol would have stood some 40-ft tall and was surrounded by a large temple complex. When discovered, the complex had been reduced to little more than foundation and the idol was severely damaged, buried under millennia of soil and dust. The idol itself was surrounded by hundreds of MORTAL female hip bones and foetal skeletons, indicating a birth or fertility cult of sorts. The idol was excavated in 1994 RM and taken to a museum in the city of Almagest, with a replica erected on the original site in its place.

AMAGER: 1. Geo. Wide scrub-filled valley in the north west of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of PALUS^(1.), situated at the terminus of two geological features – the ASHER Mountains to the north and the MARCHOSILOS highlands to the south.

2. Pol. Duchy in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of NICADA. The duchy is thought to be most ATRAMENTALLY-ACTIVE in all of the Haréshk, with minor birth-defects common there, though even so it is still seen as idyllic by the peoples of the INNER SEA.

3. Rui. Ruin of a major HARÉSHKI city from which the northern region takes its name. It was once the seat of the Haréshki HIGH-KING, though following the assassination in 2295 RM of the then-High-king led to the court being abolished, and the capital moved to CARIA⁽⁶⁾ soon after.

AMAHIR: 1. Lak. Seasonal lake in the south of SARASTRO, fed by floodwaters that collect in the short wet-season from the SOLACHANI basin. Local legend says that the lake forms every 7-years, to coincide with the leap year, and though this is not precise, it is close to the recorded mean, which has the lake form once every 6-years or-so.

2. Set. Settlement in the south of SARASTRO that spends most time empty and becomes populated by nomads only when the eponymous lake forms, who congregate there to trade and perform wedding ceremonies and other rituals.

AMAIKO: For. Forest dominating the south western coast of NAARETH.

AMAIMON: (B. 3942) Charismatic, relatively long-serving ruler of TZALLRACH.

AMALA: Set. Settlement in the c north of AZAZEM, in the region of ALLARIS. It is known for its OLIVE oil production (Pop. c. 182,400).

AMALTHEA: also 'Mother of Ahka'. Rvr. Major river in AHKA flowing east from the TOLIASOR and AGNOS Mountains for 730-miles before reaching the STRAIT OF SKAROS. Its waters were once incredibly fertile and most major cities and arable lands exist around its influence, and it is known as MOTHER OF AHKA in local folklore.

AMAM: Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region in c-south east EREBETH, known for its SHADOWISPS.

AMAM KOHIR: Set. Settlement in the c west of AYAD (Pop. c. 7,400).

AMANAI: Set. Small city in the c of the BARRIER LANDS, along the route of the IVORY ROAD. It is home to a small order of gun knights who since c. 3200 RM have been sword to defend lands seen as sacred to worshippers of SHERTAL (Pop. c. 16,000).

AMANAL: Geo. Plains in the south of LYRIDIA DHAI. The plains are the remnants of the coastal shelf of the STRAIT OF NÁRTHEL, part of which was revealed following the slow drying of the strait and the seas that once fed it. The region closest to the coast, which until c. 3500 RM was submerged, is infertile and barren, ignored by most.

AMANNI: His. Ntn. Ancient FIFTH AGE territory once belonging the native YARAOMIC PEOPLE. It was situated in the north of SAMMAEA, forming the westernmost expanse of their ancestral lands, occupying the centre of extant VAALK, until it was appropriated and its people subjugated by KORACHANI armies between c. 20 – 250 RM following their conquest of VALKA.

Like most of Yaraomic history, very little remains of its people's culture today, and the caste of lorekeepers known as the IARAOM GRABBA travel across northern Sammaea searching for ancient artefacts to take to their fortress-library in IARSHUGGAH.

AMANSEE: Set. Settlement in the c south of KHAMID, close to the shore with PHARANX (Pop. c. 17,200).

AMANUENSIS: Rnk. Scribes and record-keepers that originating in ALMAGEST in c. 100 RM, with the rise of trade and wealth in the city. They were incorporated by the KORACHANI EMPIRE after its arrival in Almagest in 379 RM, their use spreading throughout the empire soon after.

AMANTHEA: also 'the HOME OF THE DEAD. Myt. Geo. Mythic area, believed to be in the north east of LIDEA, just north west of the BURKAN Mountains where the legendary Amantheans were said to originate. It features in Lidean creation myths; where it is regarded as the home of a tyrannical prince, whose dabbling with forbidden ATRAMENTAL practices earnt him his exile there.

AMAQEELA I: (B. 1681 – 1819 RM) Pol. His. Queen of HOUSE TANDENDER in AHRISHEN. She acceded the throne following the death of her father AQEEL III in 1727 RM, inheriting a kingdom that was embroiled in a complex war with the UNITED KINGDOMS OF EBUSHEN.

She is remembered now for having used ATRAMENTAL means to extend her life, as she did not want to die, leaving the kingdom in a state of war as her father had. She led Ahrishen to victory, and oversaw the signing of a peace treaty in 1781 RM, which was her territories expand, restoring peace to the borders. She gave birth to 18 children, though most were stillbirths or did not live beyond a few days, likely due to the drugs she was taking, and at the time of her death only 4 children were still alive.

She became more reclusive following the war, and kept the company of foreign SHAPERS whom many believed were responsible for her prolonged lifespan, and she elevated many to positions of power. Though it was the death of her beloved consort Misul of the Levant in 1791 that saw her withdraw from public life, delegating the matter of ruling to her children. She dressed for mourning for her remaining years and is said to have refused to take the drugs that kept her young, and she slowly deteriorated, dying a feeble woman in 1819 RM. Her son AQEEL IV acceded the throne and reversed many of the edicts of her later years, including the baronies that had been granted to her Atramentist entourage. This led to a troublesome period in AMNICA and beyond, as the Atramentists were hunted down and ousted.

AMAR ELET: also 'THE SPIRE OF ALLIANCES'. Arc. Tower in the south of TZALLRACH situated at the pass between the HEBAT and KARARTA Mountains. It once guarded the southern-most borders of Tzallrach, though as the borders moved farther south it became less important, and now houses guards that protect passage across the pass.

AMARA VEY: f. Per. (B. 3931 RM) High-ranking member of the KYONI

ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION, where she serves as a master engineer and expert in defensive siege planning. She has travelled extensively across the KORACHANIEMPIRE and has had a hand in shaping the defences of many major cities, and her protocols for quashing insurgencies and uprisings from within imperial cities remain the benchmark employed across Korachan to this day.

AMARANA, TREE OF: Myt. Flo. Mythical tree mentioned in the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN. It is referred to as a singular tree that was created by the DEMIURGE ARIMASPI to serve as nourishment and shelter for his favoured creations, the eelyouhns and AIKLAHS. Little else is known of it, and it is unknown if the Tree of Amarana was even real, with various explorers and scholars proposing possible locations for it, including the east of ELEKHID. Though with little evidence to support these claims, there is no consensus.

The manna trees that are found in the east of the WAELMIGHI rainforest share many traits with the Tree of Amarana, and it is thought that they are either descended from it or served as inspiration to its inclusion in the Mythologia Elyden.

AMARANTHA: Geo. Plains in the c west of THE SURRACH, between the SARRASTER and PSAMMOL Mountains. It is named after the purple flowers that dominate its terrain for a month after the first blooms in spring.

AMARANTHINE DESERT: Geo. Major stone desert dominating the southern highland territories of Krem, to the north of the MO-ORASSIM Mountains. The desert is noted for its hardy Amaranth weeds and brilliant rocks that range in colour from orange to deep purple.

AMARATH: Set. Small city in the south of TAHALL (Pop. c. 32,000).

AMARIA: Set. City in the south of VIRAHAN, close to the border with SAUA (Pop. c. 38,000).

AMARILLA: His. Myt. Geo. Ntn. Ancient historical territories belonging to the DEMIURGE ALLAISHADA and her tribe, the ILLIDRAEN. It is unknown where those territories were in relation to today's borders, though it is likely that they were in north western Meniscea.

AMARSIN: Set. Small coastal city in the c south of KHAMID, overlooking the PHARESES. It is known for its clams and fine pearls (Pop. c. 19,000).

AMARU: Geo. Small mountain in the south of IO, around 200-miles long. The mountain has, for most of Ionic history marked its southern-most border with south western SARASTRO. Amaru was home to a sizeable monastery of VOID APOSTATES, though their stronghold was destroyed by KORACHANI ICONOCLASTS^(1.) in 214 RM following the rise of the empire there 2-years earlier.

AMASAL: Sea. Sea off the north western coast of SIMBARA, and the eastern-most reaches of the SEA OF AMMASH⁽²⁾.

AMASIS: Sea. Sea in the far north of LLACHATUL, forming the westernmost part of the SEA OF POLARIS. The sea is often frozen, particularly in winter months.

AMASSED, the: Pol. Sup. Rnk. Ruling council of ACHRABAL made up of TELEPATHS who form a hive mind with each other, sharing their experiences and knowledge. Years of this exposure to centuries-worth of experiences have made them distant figures, their humanity shorn amid the countless shared experiences and memories that have merged into one, depriving them of their character. They are highly intelligent and ruthless, and speak as one, their voices merging into one another.

AMASTHA: Arc. Lighthouse in the far south west of THE SURRACH, overlooking the narrow strait between the mainland and the island of RALISS. The lighthouse makes use of three large parabolic mirrors that reflect light emitted by its central lantern to a variable point, up to around a mile distant. It was a wonder of the ancient world and, despite more modern lighthouses exiting in the Surrach, this continues to be used. Due to the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED waters of NAMEGHA, the narrow strait guarded by Amastha is the only entry into the stretch of coast leading up to NEGASH, 250-miles north.

AMATA: 1. Geo. Badlands in the c of MHAROKK, north of the SOLON HIGHLANDS.

2. Set. Small city in the c of $\underline{MHAROKK}$. It originated as a caravanseral midway along the 750 mile route of $\underline{THE\ RED\ ROUTE}$ between \underline{ASSORA} in \underline{VAALK} and \underline{DASSK} in southern Mharokk, and once bordered lake \underline{KARAT} but its borders have since dwindled, leaving the town diminished and some 3-miles from its shores, which continue to shrink (Pop. c. 14,500).

AMATAN: Lak. Lake in the c of THE SURRACH. Like its larger companion, lake ZARAZESH, it is endorheic (a remnant of an ancient inland sea that got cut off from the ocean) and salty, with little wildlife surviving there. Its waters are slightly pinkish on account of the minerals in the water. The mud from its sediment is used by nearby settlements in construction and cosmetics.

AMATHARIN: Set. Old hilltop settlement in the prefecture of ALITENEA^(L.) in the c north of HOLOLACH^(L.), 45-miles from the BAY OF AMATRRA. The settlement is perched atop the pinnacle of a rocky hill and in its past withstood many sieges (Pop. c. 4,000).

AMATHIS: Flo. Large succulent plant endemic to the north of THETIS, particularly the south western face of the HETHA GHUR highlands. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

AMATHU: Geo. Island in the SEA OF ASEER, off the south western coast of ACHAA^(2.). It was 'discovered' and named by the explorer BOHMIUS in 1526 RM.

AMATIA: Set. Fortified city in the c of TAAN AN, situated along the route of the ZENEGE RES PIPELINE. Its main industry is the refining of UMBRA that passes through it and it is also home to many SHABRAZIG, who patrol the pipeline along its central course (Pop. c. 33,000).

AMATIDA: Lak. Lake in the c south of AHRISHEN, in the north of the region of the LEVANTINE. The lake is fed by river flowing from the CARTIGA, ASHER and BHANNA Mountains and is linked to the river ARESH^(2.) by lake RANAGA and PANOIDA^(1.).

AMATRRA: Sea. Bay off the western coast of HOLOLACH^(1,), at the divide between the SEA OF MARDEN and the SEA OF LIAKARRA.

AMAURID ELK: Fau. Large THEROPS endemic to the south of Western Llachatul, most commonly OPHIUSSA, OTINTH, the PARNASIAN STATES, RAONGEN^(2.). SEDISIA, and the north of TAHALL. A pygmy variety can also be found in the rainforests of OKKHAM. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

AMAY: Set. Small coastal city in the west of GREST^(1.) in the island-continent of BROR^(1.) (Pop. c. 12,500).

AMAYMON: 1. His. Pol. North western-most of the nine AMNATHI states following the fragmentation of the AMNATHI KINGDOM in -589 RM. Together with Amnath it would rise to became LYRADEA by c. -300 RM. The city of TERARA became a major naval force in the SEA OF SPIRES, and its merchant and fishing fleets became the mainstay of the sea, though the rising dominance of the state of SHANATH, which controlled the western mouth of the NARTHELI STRAIT led to the signing of the TREATY OF THE STRAIT in -328 RM, which regulated trade. Following this agreement and with the aegis of Amnath, the state became a powerhouse of trade and commerce, its lands expanding north by c. -310 RM, where they reached the PYREAN Mountain and contact was made and established with the ARESHI people to the north.

2. His. Set. City and capital of the above state until the formation of LYRADEA in c. -300 RM. Built on the ruins of an ancient SVATHI metropolis, itself likely owing its roots to a far older city-state, the city of Amaymon maintained much of its influence following the rise of Lyradea and, with its unison with Amnath in c. -300 as a confederacy, a wealthy mercantile plutocracy emerged, controlling the twin nations though by -234 RM the capital and most influential city became VEPAR. After KORACHAN sundered Lyradea in two, taking the west for itself (becoming LYRIDIA DHAI) in 85 RM, Lyradea became known as LYRIDIA. Amaymon survived, though its proximity to imperial lands made it an easy target for banditry and opportunistic attacks over the next century, leading to a heavy BARRIMA influence there. Later edicts between the AUGURS and the Korachani government in 348 RM in MYRA ended in the safeguarding of the nation and its cities; Amaymon was never openly targeted by Korachan again.

Its newfound safety allowed the city to survive the apathy of the Lyridian rulers, and became one of the largest cities in the region of IBLIS region, alongside IMMIMETH. However, Amaymon is unique in one way. The exodus of Svathi people form NARTHEL following the empire's subjugation of the region in 84 RM. That, coupled with inbreeding and the PLAGUES that devastated the STRAIT OF NARTHEL in 163 RM led to the appearance of the TROGLODYTIC caste of southern Lyridia, who largely came to populate the caverns and foothills of the DHERKAZ region and became sycophants and slaves to the Augurs. Amaymon also saw a large influx of Svathi people and became one of the few cities their TROGLODYTE descendants ever called home. The city grew with its new population spurt, and came to rely on the scattered rubble of the ancient city it was founded on for construction material.

Amaymon remains a large city to this day, its citizen levy serving it well against the predations of opportunistic states and regents that have appeared in the wake of the Korachani empire (Pop. c. 42,000).

AMAYOKOWAN: Geo. Plains and sparse woodlands in the c north of KREM

AMBARSAN: Set. Major city in the c north east of CHEIRA, and capital city of the fourth prefecture of Cheira. It is a centre of silver production and its people are famed for their mining and skill in filigree (Pop. c. 48,000).

AMBATORR: Pol. Set. Capital of MIRALUL, located in the north west of the nation. It is also a stop along the EGETAKHAN ROAD (Pop. c. 138,000).

AMBER: Ele. Flo. Obj. Hardened tree sap that is valued for its appearance.

Early MORTALS attributed special powers to it, and it became closely associated with SHAPING in some regions where it was common, including present-day RAONGEN^{2,}, GNOTH, and parts of the OLD FOREST. Many ancient SHAPERS adorned themselves with AMBER jewellery, and tombs of FOURTH AGE and early FIFTH AGE shapers are often found with amber accoutrements. It is also used as glass within the cities of the Old Forest.

AMBERWINE: Bev. Alcoholic beverage made in PHUT and consumed across the SEA OF LARISH^(1.). Production is limited to a particular region and is one of the major exports of Phut. It is named after its vibrant translucent orange colour, which is not unlike amber. See Vol II: Beverages.

AMBER CITY, the: see KRASATOSH.

AMBER FORT, the: Mil. Rel. Str. Fortress-cathedral in the north of THE SURRACH, built by KORACHANI immigrants in c. 2380 RM to establish their claim of the region. The front of the fortress is dominated by a large rose window, the individual panes of glass of which are made of imported AMBER, which give the structure its name.

The fortress remained occupied by EXOCRINES of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE and a large contingent of guards and faithful following the abandonment of the Surrachi colonies by Korachan in c 2400 RM. Since then, the small city of RARADCHAN has grown around the fortress, which is the centre of a radical cult of the UNDYING MACHINE in the region, known as the CHILDREN OF RACHANAEL, which sends missionaries into the Surrach.

AMBER HOST, the: Int. His. Arc. Ancient statues built by shamen of the OLD FOREST, made of magickally-hardened tree sap and formed into the shapes of mighty warriors. In times of war, they would have been animated in defence of their land, though the art is today largely lost. They were last seen in battle against the armies of ALMAGEST in 3204 RM, where most were wiped out by artillery.

AMBER LANTERNS: Soc. Ritual common in the north eastern regions of THE OLD FOREST, which has abundant AMBER deposits. Hollow AMBERglass globes are polished, filled with nectar and placed in sacred groves, where they attract luminescent insects that inhabit the area, creating a place of surreal beauty where HEREMITES of the area spend their time.

AMBER MINARET, the: Edu. Sup. Str. Fortified FIRMEMENTAL college on the island of AMUL TET, in the BROKEN LANDS in the far south east of KHAMID. The college studies Firmamental (and, to a lesser degree, the ATRAMENTAL) theory and discourages practice, using the effects of the CATACLYSM as a cautionary tale against abuse of the MATERIA OMNA.

AMBER MONKS, the: His. Soc. The bodies of a dozen monks in the city of BOACHAN, in the north east of AZAZEM. The monks are famed for the AMBER-like resin in which they are encased. Little is known of their history, though they were discovered in ancient catacombs in c. 2840 RM years after the founding of the city, their origins unknown. It is thought that they were druids of the OLD FOREST.

AMBERGRIS: Fau. Obj. Waxy substance produced in the guts of whales. It is valued and used in the production of perfumes.

AMBISS: Geo. Collapsed cavern in the north eastern-face of the KYTHI Mountains in the south east of LYRIDIA, with links to the PRISON CARCERI. Prior to its collapse in 3492 RM, it was the starting point of two separate expeditions into Carceri. The first was lost, and the second returned with a detailed account of the ROPOHAII; the tribe of the DEMIURGE VORROPOHAIAH and its culture though, sadly, the library in which the accounts were held was destroyed in an earthquake in 3602 RM, and much of that knowledge has since been lost.

AMBIACT: Pol. Rnk. An administrative rank of diplomat, usually female, in AHRISHEN.

AMBIDEXTER: 1. Also 'Ambidext'. In scholarly circles an ambidext is used interchangeably as a verb or noun, describing something both light and dark, good and bad, right and wrong.

2. Oth. Breed of HALFBLOOD bearing traits of different houses and often mistakenly considered its own house. See Vol II: Anthropeidos..

AMBOERI: Geo. Island in the south of the SEA OF SEKHEM, around which the DAM OF ST. SIMEOL⁽¹⁾ was constructed between 3522 – 3758 RM.

AMBOLA: Set. Settlement in the south of the tribe of RAOSI, in the north of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. It is known for its large market, where merchants trade with SUUR'KA (Pop. c. 8,000).

AMBTOR: Pol. PATRICIAN HOUSE with many cities and ship-breaking industries around THE INNER SEA. Starting in c. 2800 RM it helped fund the construction of hundreds of miles of SIPHON ENGINES and settlements along a 1,000-mile stretch of THE SHADOW MARCH in KHARKHARADONTIS, leading to the founding of the KINGDOM OF THE HOLY LAND OF KHARKHARADONTIS, under the aegis of the KORACHANI EMPIRE. The kingdom lasted around 300-years, but ultimately failed, leading to House Ambtor going bankrupt, though it has since recovered, abandoning its DREAMS of a kingdom in the holy land.

Branches of the House remain active in Kharkharadontis, operating close to surviving siphon engines, where they dig for rare minerals and other resources, as well as catering to PETITIONERS OF THE MACHINE undertaking the March. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

AMBULANT: Veh. Tec. In the KORACHANI EMPIRE and other nations (most notably PARTHIS), steam-and-shadow-powered locomotive engines (generally wheeled or tracked, though more exotic varieties do exist) fulfilling various roles, usually to transport goods or as means of transportation. They take on many forms, from the lavish personal crawlers used by patricians, to the immense tracked land-trains that crawl across the imperial wastelands with trade goods. Expensive and difficult to maintain, they are the play-things of the rich or industrial workhorses that toil day and night in quarries and MANUFACTORIES.

AMBUS: Set. Ancient hilltop village in the east of AZAZEM. It is of little note, though is crowned by a small monastery and accompanying church, named the Sanctuary of the Eistar (an old name for the hill), which is of gothic style. Houses spiral down the steep hill, with withered trees, cliffs, and enclosed patches of greenery between them. People outside the immediate radius of the village know little about it other than its name, if that, and it is of little value to the empire, and is rarely visited by outsiders.

The church itself does in fact have an interesting history, and is the final resting place of a small order of knights, known as the ORDER OF THE EISTAR, whose 13 members died of unknown causes in 2877 RM, and whose bodies are interred upright in a crypt beneath the Sanctuary, where they naturally mummified. There once existed speculation as to the nature of the knights, with some claiming that the Sanctuary was the home to an ancient power-giving relic that was kept hidden and which was guarded by the knights, but this is unfounded.

AMDAYAN: Set. Settlement on the c of ABACARDAT (Pop. c. 6,000).

AMDUKA: Dem. 'Amdukian'. Geo. Region and city 160-miles north west of the VARRACHON Mountain in the south east of THE OLD FOREST, and one of its largest known cities. Its people are noted for their leather-brown skin, which is acquired from consuming, and using as an unguent, the poisonous sap of the BLOODTHORN (to which they grow immune, and use to coat their blades to this day).

The RITUAL OF BECOMING amongst the Amdukian includes tattooing with ink made from such sap. Common motifs include the red dragon. They are a martial people, and AMBER is mined in great quantity around the city, and the material has become synonymous with the city. An opportunistic people, not adverse to using things contrary to their culture if beneficial (for instance, though they oppose the KORACHANI EMPIRE they will not shy from using looted armour and weapons if it aids their cause). They have clashed against imperial forces many times, most notably in THE BATTLE OF THREE GORGES in 2793 RM.

The city is believed to be a religious centre for the people of the Old Forest and is said to be the crux of a pilgrimage that circumvents the forest (Pop. c. 550,000).

AMDUTIA: Set. City in the c north of $\underline{GREST}^{(1)}$ in the island-continent of $\underline{BROR}^{(1)}$ (Pop. unknown).

AMEIR IO SGIROUT: m. (B. 3851 – D. 3941 RM) Pol. Per. Historic king of ROMOREA (2.) who ascended the throne following his father's death in 3904 RM. He was known as a sadist who took pleasure in torturing slaves and enemy captives. He is believed to have been assassinated though, no public evidence exists supporting this, causing some to claim he was killed by a member of his own family or court to silence his depravities.

AMELEEN: Sea. Sea off the north eastern coast of ABACARDAT, forming an extension of the larger SEA OF LETHEA. Its waters are not as inimical as those of the Lethea, and the reason for this is unknown.

AMELLIER: Mil. Set. Major fortified coastal city in the south west of SEDISIA (Pop. c. 120,000).

AMEMARAN: Rvr. Wetlands in the far north east of TZALLRACH, along almost 200-miles of the course of the river BAELLI.

AMEME: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the far north east of TZALLRACH. It overlooks the NEHOMIAN valley north, into MALAN and guards the passage of the GREAT ROAD that crosses the border into those lands.

AMENABAST: Pol. Oth. So-called 'demon sultan' OTHERWORLDER, who between c. 900 – 1328 RM was the sadistic tyrant to the subjugated people of a land called DELIASHANA, in what are now SOLEYN, the west of \underline{SUOR} and the east of $\underline{MULCIBER}$. He was killed by the mortal champion $\underline{RAHANKHEN}$ I, who would go on to unite the Soleyn Territories and become the first $\underline{MAHANTKHAI}$.

AMENABAST'S ARCHIVE: His. Str. Ancient library in the east of what is now present-day MULCIBER, said to have belonged to the OTHERWORLDER AMENABAST. It was once a treasure-trove of ancient books and historic artifacts, though following Amenabast's death at the hands of RAHANKHEN I in 1328 RM, the library was allowed to fall into ruin, and its treasures were eventually looted over ensuing years, spreading across ELYDEN.

AMENARKHON'S LIGHTHOUSE: Str. Dating back to the golden age of KHAMID, this lighthouse stands, shallow-sided and stepped, like a tiered pyramid hanging precariously from a sheer pinnacle of rock overlooking the DARK SEA. The lighthouse is notable for its beacon, which continues to shine after close to four millennia of ruination; the PHOTOLITHS and powerful FIRMAMENTAL tethers that were placed on them still functioning after so many years.

AMENARMIS: Set. City in c KHAMID, along the course of the river ARAX. It is known for its sheep and wool production (Pop. c. 25,000).

AMENETHET: Pol. Seer-king in the SIX CITIES region in the west of THE SURRACH, in the north west of SAMMAEA. He was deified in c. 3940 RM, solidifying the political claims of the city of ALRON, which is now recognised as the 7th major power in the Six Cities region.

AMENSEF: Set. City in the east of KHAMID and military centre in the region (10,000).

AMENSHEPH: Obj. Obelisk in the south of KHEMET in KHAMID that once formed part of a temple-complex, though the latter is now ruined. The obelisk was famed in antiquity for the crystalline capstone that once topped it, though it disappeared in c. 1290 RM.

AMENT: Int. Arc. Geo. Flo. Strange structure in the south west of DATEPHA, surrounded by the expansive dense forest of ABBACI. It takes the form of a cylindrical tower that tapers slightly towards the base and which is crowned by a peaked dome. Its exterior is covered in two sets of opposing geometric swirls that conform to the golden ratio, with the negative space between them forming growths that slowly blister and expand over a large span of years before bursting, revealing brain-like growths that slowly wither and fall off, after which the cycle is repeated once more. The solid spiral-like frame of the structure shares aspects of both sun-bleached bone and hardwood, leading to the few NEAR HEMISPHERE scholars who have examined it to believe it is a living organism, and possibly the ancient work of a DEMIURGE or SCION.

Locals acknowledge it as the unknowable manifestation of the spirit of ELYDEN, though otherwise ignore it, though some outcasts have been known to openly revere it. They know little of its history, but its presence is embedded in the generational memory of Datephans from around the Abbaci region, indicating that it is immeasurably old, possibly dating to the FIRST AGES of life in Elyden.

AMEPARA: Set. Settlement in the east of THETIS (Pop. c. 3,400).

AMERAGASTER: Pol. Set. Capital of the REALM OF THE MARKED PALL. Little is known of its culture, though accounts from the 13th century KORACHANI explorers say that it is largely subterranean, built within an ancient expansive cistern that predates the city itself, which protects it from the heat (Pop. unknown).

AMERE: Set. City in the c north east of CISNERIA, along the course of the river BETRAOST. Its main export is lumber (Pop. c. 38,000).

AMERETAT: 1. Geo. Roughlands the north of SAMMAEA, along the southern border of IO and western SARASTRO, filled with misshapen boulders, mounds and scrubland. MT. AMARU, a place of traditional religious significance is found north of here.

2. Set. City in the above region in the south of $\underline{\text{IO}}$ (Pop. c. 63,000).

AMES: Set. Settlement in the c east of VENTHIR known for its MONITOR breeding (Pop. c. 7,200).

AMETHYST: 1. Ele. Purple form of quartz that is valued for its appearance.
2. Bev. Distilled alcoholic beverage made from the purple potatoes that are synonymous with the nations of ARERAQTH and EASTERN THANO in the north of MENISCEA. It is clear, with a faint purplish tint and is very strong, comprising around 40 – 50% ethanol, and is exported to the east of LLACHATUL overland and sea, where it is popular in KASPIA, PERGOST, and SABIA. Though the latter nations make their own versions of Amethyst, it lacks the renowned purple tint. See Vol II: Beverages.

AMETHYST CAP: Poi. Flo. Fungus common the woodlands of north western SAMMAEA, in the north of the CITIZENRY OF THALI and the VESPERTINE LEAGUE. It is known for its high arsenic content, and it is deadly to MORTALS. It is named after its deep purple colour, and individual specimens are appreciated for their beauty, with many people accidentally killing themselves simply by handling the mushrooms. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

AMHAD: Mil. Set. Fortified city in the north of AETHIOS. In antiquity, it was home to knights that CRUSADED into the UMBRA SOKHAR, to combat the effects of corruption there and prevent tainted creatures from wandering into Aethiosi lands. The tradition has since died out, though remains a potent cultural marker to its people. The city was abandoned in c. 2940 before completion of the dam of AESAPIA, though following its destruction in 3017 RM was slowly repopulated due to its strategic point where the river SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾ meets lake C'KHMAR (Pop. c. 69,000).

AMILLAERE: 1. Pol. First of the HENDECARCHIES of the FOREST KINGDOMS, located in the c MALAN. Its capital is the city of Amillaere^(3.), and it is ruled by the HENDECARCH SIANUSTARIL THE REGENT.

It is also home to the LADY AEGIS and is positioned at a conflux of FIRMAMENTAL eddies, and, despite the NULLAMBIT crossing through it, it is home to many SHAPERS. It is also home to the thickest and most ancient of the old growth and virginal forest of Malan, which are known as the ALL ILLATH, which engulfs AMILLAERE and parts of surrounding Kingdoms.

- 2. Pol. Set. Major fortified city and capital in the c of the above HENDECARCHY in the c of MALAN. It is made up of slender marble towers and minarets that mirror the spear-like trunks of the trees in the region, though many areas of the conurbation are also built in and around the forest on multiple levels, its own gardens made up of EPIPHYTES that grow on gargantuan branches of Malan's most ancient trees, most revered of which is the AESALLA. It is home to the REGENT SIANUSTARIL, First of the HENDECARCHS (Pop. c. 2,100,000).
- 3. His. Nm. Now-extinct FIFTH AGE kingdom ruled by the LADY AEGIS. It emerged from the period of strife that followed the collapse of the NAHORIAN EMPIRE. The Appearance of the Lady Aegis in what is now central MALAN in c. -80 RM brought stability to the region, and she united various states, resulting in the founding of the feudal kingdom of Amillaere. Meanwhile, the various warring Nahorian states had also stabilised, leading to the rise of LARAM (1.) in c. 100 RM.

The collapse of Laram in 2021 paved the way for the Lady Aegis to annex its territories, a process which was completed in 2075 RM, leading to the founding of Malan. Amillaere remained as one of the elven Forest Kingdoms and the seat of power of the Lady Aegis. See Vol III: Extinct States.

AMILANA: Rui. Ruin in the c of SARASTRO, to the north east of the OTINDHAR Mountains. It was abandoned following an uncontrolled outbreak of PLAGUE there in c. 3656 RM.

AMILIA: Int. Set. City in the c south west of Chautula. It is built atop and within a massive unidentified calcified body (possibly belonging to a SCION, MESOCHTHON, or ONEIRIC CREATURE), with the city's economy based almost wholly on the mining of the fossilised flesh (Pop. c. 23,000).

AMINOT: Set. Small city in the east of the emirate of DEITHO^(1.) in the c of LIMOTH^(1.), spanning both banks of the river RIATA (Pop. c. 14,300).

AMIRA: Set. City in the north west of MHAROKK, along the banks of the river CTHONA, 25-miles from the border with VAALK (Pop. c. 20,000).

AMIRTIS: Ind. Set. Fortified settlement in the east of the PARTHISAN colony of VARTA^(1.). Its main industry is the mining of BLOODSTONES (Pop. c. 4,000).

AMIS: Int. His. Rui. Half-buried and shattered colossus in the ORIM territories in the west of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. The colossus is said to be linked to the AIKLAH culture that once existed in what are now Mulciber, eastern AETHIOS and RHINOCOLOURA.

AMITTRA: Set. Major city in the c south of ATARAXIA, 100-miles south of the capital in ARKAM. Its main industry is open-cast coal mining, which dominates the landscape to the east of the city for dozens of miles. It also forms part of the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 380,000).

AMIUA: Geo. Island off the south western coast of WESTERN SAMMAEA, in the COTRIAN ISLES, forming a part of the ISLAND STATES OF IRY.

AMIZ: Rvr. River in the DOMAINS OF SHAUATAS connecting the AVITU in the north with the BITUAH in the south.

AMJARR, THE EXILED: (B. 3954) Current THANE of FARIS. He was exiled in 3993 RM by the VITYAZ-THANE of SABIA for disgracing his family in battle.

AMMAD: Set. Smal coastal city in the south west of AMMESH, in a deep creek north of the BAY OF TIRIL (Pop. c. 18,000).

AMMAI: Set. Small coastal city in the north west of THE VORANDINE, overlooking the SEA OF BYRIS. Its main industry is the harvesting of EVOLAM kelp that is vital to various modern ATRAMENTAL industries, including CLONING and FLESHWRIGHTING.

Like many other coastal settlements in the north west of the Vorandine, Terarine has recently reported increased cases of people going missing at sea, with merill abductions blamed by an increasingly distraught populace (Pop. c. 18,000).

AMMAN RACHAS: Geo. Plains in the north east of the AMMASHI^(1.)
peninsula, in the west of TAAN AN, crossing the border into the north of KEPHUAAN. The region was once the centre of an ethnicity that would in time become absorbed by the nation of Ammash^(3.). It was once quite densely-settled though the fracture of Ammash and the later period, known as the AMMASHI STRUGGLE, saw people move away from the area after which it became part of the border between Kephuaan and Taan An.

The region is now known for having been the birthplace of the ISHINAL CULTS – sodalities where SHAPERS could practice their art and meet with like-minded individuals.

AMMAON: Int. Str. Strange artificial structure in the south west of NASTAL⁽²⁾, in the far south west of the wastelands of SPHYRNIDONTIS. It is made from a single monolithic block of aragonite, which scholars have thus-far been unable to explain. Likewise, the purpose of the strange many-chambered tower or its distance from any known source of water or life remain a mystery.

AMMAR ORAH: His. Obj. Ancient relic in the c west of THE SURRACH, west of the THISATHON Mountains. It takes the form of a giant blue sphere, some 60-ft. Tall, stood on a solid stone plinth. Its surface is opaque, with pale clouds swirling beneath its surface. When the sun is behind it a vague shape can be seen within, not unlike a giant embryo. Nothing is known of this object's history and its name means 'sleeping child' in the SAVIUDI language.

AMMASH: 1. Geo. Peninsula in south western SAMMAEA, dividing the SEA OF MERCUVIA in the north west from the SEA OF AMMASH in the south east that includes the states of AMMESH, HABOT, KEPHUAAN, METHUMN, and TAAN AN. The peninsula is around 2,200-miles long and some 1,200-miles wide at its widest point and is largely made up of scrubland, savannah and rocky terrain, becoming Mountains in the south.

After the fragmentation of the major nation of Ammash⁽³⁾ into various inheritor states in c. 2550 RM, the peninsula became engulfed by a millennia-long period of conflict characterised by long times of tense inactivity interspersed with short intense periods of conflict, that became known as the AMMASHI STRUGGLE. The period ended with the signing of the AMMASHI TREATY in 3594 RM that saw the borders of nations in the peninsula take their present forms.

- 2. Sea. Sea in the south west of SAMMAEA, to the east of the BATHASHAL OCEAN, and the west of the SEA OF KRIHIEK.
- 3. Dem. 'Ammashi'. His. Ntn. Major historical FIFTH AGE nation that rose in c. 1180 RM to dominate the Ammashi^(1.) peninsula. In 1877 RM the capital was relocated from HAMMA to TAMMANA, which was more central and whose culture had grown over the last centuries to surpass that of the old stagnating capital.

The nation collapsed in c. 2550 RM following a century of troubles, including religious and political tensions between 2480 – 2550 RM following the spread of LAZANISM in its eastern territories; decades of increased taxes in its rural areas to fund lavish building projects on the mainland as its resources dwindled; and the eventual loss of its island territories (the $\underline{\text{CORAL KINGDOM}}$ and the $\underline{\text{AMMASHI FREE-ISLES}}$).

The eventual destruction of the MONSTRANCE OF FEALTY in an anonymous act of terrorism was the final straw that saw the nation fragment, leading to a long period of instability in the region, now known as the AMMASHI STRUGGLE, from which emerged the extant states of AMMESH, HABOT, KEPHUAAN, and TAAN AN. See Vol III: Extinct States.

AMMASHI BIT: see BIT, AMMASHI.

AMMASHI COALITION: His. Ntn. Historical coalition of states in the south west of the AMMASHI^(1,) peninsula in the south west of SAMMAEA, in what is now the lower 2/3^{rds} of the city states of AMMESH. It formed in c. 2700 RM as a means of defence against the increasing bands of marauders that had emerged after the fall of the nation of Ammash^(3,) in c. 2550 RM.

In 3567 RM it was the first outside state to agree to the joint proposal of KAPHAAR and the League of TAANALI cities to sign a defensive treaty to bring stability and peace to the peninsula. This was eventually ratified in 3594 in the form of the AMMASHI TREATY after which a concerted effort was made to rid the peninsula of the marauders that had terrorised it, leading to a time of prosperity in which trade and travel flourished once more.

This allowed the Ammashi coalition to grow stronger, its individual cities becoming more homogenised as trade and cultural exchange between them increased. In 3705 RM its coalition council was formalised as a central government based in the city of SATAMMA, and for the next few decades the former coalition prospered as a representative republic, and its cotton fields brought it much wealth that was put to good use by the republic. By c. 3740 RM the republic had become overconfident, and a series of expansionist councillors gained the majority vote, allowing them to put pressure on its eastern neighbour AHAFRAT, which at the time was struggling under the reign of an unpopular and incompetent ruler. Under the threat of invasion, Ahafrat collapsed, with its western territories willingly subjugating themselves under Ammashi rule in 3743 RM.

The republic faltered after this amid growing acts of dissent by a very vocal minority of Ahafrati nationals. The ruling councillors were voted out, to be replaced with overly cautious individuals who allowed the council to lose power, with many regions demanding independence. After years of growing unrest, the republic council finally collapsed in 3759 RM after various votes of no confidence and accusations of corruption and nepotism and the region fractured into various city states, becoming collectively known as AMMESH. See Vol III: Extinct States.

AMMASHI FREE-ISLES: Dem. 'Ammasht'. Geo. Ntn. A large island-chain covering some 30,000-square-miles south west of AMMESH, in the south of SAMMAEA. The islands are populated by the descendants of dissenters that arose in the final decades of the nation of AMMASH (3.) and were partially responsible for its eventual collapse in c. 2550 RM.

Growing unrest on the heavily-taxed islands grew into open dissent and following a short war, the islands found themselves sundered from the mainland, without aegis and leadership. They eventually fell prey to the attentions of LHACCIDAN slavers, which greatly reduced their population over the next decades, though they recovered through a short-lived alliance in c. 2680 – 2710 RM. The alliance would lead to inner strife though, and the islands would never truly coalesce, remaining in a perpetual state of flux, with short-lived coalitions peppered with intense wars (the largest of which is known as the GARR FALLACIES, which occurred between 3392 – 3397 RM). Today, the islands and their individual territories largely self-rule, though they do form a loose coalition that assembles in a council in the city of EMMAFAIA, which is known for its great marble hall

The Free-isles remain independent to this day, in a diminished state of unrest, defending themselves from the attentions of AMMESH and occasional pirates and slavers. Its people are expert mariners and ply their trade, be it fishing or ferrying people across islands, on TWIN-HULLED DHOWS. See Vol III: Extant Nations and States.

AMMASHI STRUGGLE: Pol. War. His. Tumultuous period in the history of the AMMASHI(1.) peninsula following fragmentation of the nation of Ammash^(3,) in c. 2550 RM. The collapse of Ammash was the culmination of various events that unfolded over the previous centuries, beginning with the breaking away of its south western islands and the formation of the CORAL KINGDOM in c. 2410 RM following years of conflict that slowly escalated due to increased taxation of marginalised people (largely on the islands of what are today the CORAL BARONIES, FALLAROUR, and the SHIBBOTHA ISLES) to fund increasingly extravagant spending on the mainland. This spending on grandiose municipal structures and monuments not only continued in the decades following the loss of the Coral Kingdom, but increased despite waning resources across Ammash. Another series of islands, now known as the AMMASHI FREE-ISLES, broke away in c. 2540 RM due to rising tithes to the mainland – a blow from which Ammash never recovered.

In 2547 RM the important cultural and political relic known as the MONSTRANCE OF FEALTY was destroyed by unidentified terrorists. The act also killed various members of the ruling council, throwing the government into turmoil. The next years were characterised by various mainland territories showing their disillusionment with the increasingly corrupt ruling party, with civil conflict and riots breaking out in various places, most notably in the region of RAMERRI, which led to the city of RAMERON being blockaded and ultimately falling to the dissidents in 2549 RM. The capital city TAMMANA was stormed the next year, leading to the collapse of the government, allowing various regions to break away, leaving Ammash in chaos.

The next centuries saw various groups, regions and individuals protecting themselves from their neighbours while they attempted to care out their own territories. Many of these entities eventually solidified into full states by c. 2650 RM, though tensions remained high as various leaders and tyrants clashed with one another over border disputes or undertaking full-fledged invasions. Short-lived alliances were forged as tentative trade returned, bringing a modicum of stability to the region.

By c. 2730 RM the old territories of Ammash had been largely divided amongst eight states: the Coral Kingdom (then known as SOLOGAMIA) and the Ammashi Free-isles on the islands west and south of the mainland, respectively; the Kingdom of KAPHAAR in the west; the League of TAANALI cities in the north; the state of RAMERRI in the c; the Kingdom of HABBOT in the east; the Sovereignty of AHAFRAT in the south east; and the AMMASHI COALITION in the south. Despite this, the hinterlands between their borders were populated by various bandit groups and marauders, which hindered travel between them and wreaked havoc with their agriculture, leading to centuries of tension and warfare that characterised the middle centuries of the Ammashi Struggle.

During this time, the peninsula became known for long times of tense inactivity interspersed with short intense periods of conflict that reshaped borders and changed alliances and enmities. In c. 3420 RM a large force of marauders from the east marched upon Ramerri, razing its farms and sacking its cities, ending with the sacking of its capital Rameron and the consolidation of marauder forces on the ruins. This brought renewed unease and chaos to the region, forcing surrounding states into defensive positions.

In c. 3565 RM the Kingdom of Kaphaar and the League of Taanali cities formed an alliance and were well on their way towards cleansing their borders of marauders. They sent envoys to the other states of the peninsula asking for a treaty in which they could pool their resources to finally rid their lands of threat, so that their people might one day live in peace, and cross borders without fear.

By 3594 RM all of the major states had acquiesced, and the AMMASHI TREATY was ratified in the neutral city of RAMINA where envoys from each of the by-then seven recognised states of Ammash drank wine from the Monstrance before letting blood into it to symbolise their unity. This marked the end of the Ammashi Struggle.

AMMASHI TREATY: Pol. His. A major political event that took place in the AMMASHI⁽¹⁾ peninsula in 3594 RM, which brought an end to a millennium of conflict and unease.

The collapse of the nation of Ammash⁽³⁾ in c. 2550 RM saw the peninsula thrown into disarray, with various rival states and nations rising to fill in the political void. This led to a tumultuous period that is now remembered as the Ammashi Struggle, during which these rival peoples coalesced into eight states: the CORAL KINGDOM and the AMMASHI FREE-ISLES on the islands west and south of the mainland, respectively; the Kingdom of KAPHAAR in the west; the League of TAANALI cities in the north; the state of RAMERRI in the c; the Kingdom of HABBOT in the east; the Sovereignty of AHAFRAT in the south east; and the AMMASHI COALITION in the south. Between these eight states were lawless regions populated by bandit groups and marauders, whose warbands hindered travel, and attacked farmlands and outlying settlements, leading to centuries of tension and warfare.

In c. 3562 RM Kaphaari artisans remade the MONSTRANCE OF FEALTY with the hopes of using it to bring about unity once more, if not in the form of a single Ammashi state, then at least as an alliance of like-minded people. Three years later Kaphaar allied itself with Taanal and through a concerted effort were able to rid their lands of marauders. They sent envoys to the other states of the peninsula asking for a treaty in which they could pool their resources to finally rid their lands of threat. The response was varied, with some states agreeing with little convincing and other outright refusing. Over time they won the fealty of various states, with Ahafrat being the last to be convinced, in 3594 RM.

With that, the Ammashi Treaty was drawn up and envoys from each of the states met in the neutral city of RAMINA, where they drank wine from the Monstrance before letting blood into it to symbolise their newfound unity. This marked the end of the Ammashi Struggle and a new time of peace in the peninsula.

The signing of the treaty led to a formalisation of borders in the peninsula, and over the next few decades the marauder groups, including the lawless state that had emerged on the ruin of Ramerri, which had been destroyed by marauders in c. 3420 RM, were finally quelled, leading to a time of prosperity. It was during this time that Taanal fused into a single political entity, becoming known as TAAN AN.

However, the destruction of their common foe eventually led to the abandonment of the Treaty, with various states acting against its spirit, marching against their supposed allies in their search for new resources, or using petty political affronts to justify wars intended to expand borders.

Today only the great city of Ramina still upholds the spirit of the Treaty and its Marshalls travel across the old Ammashi territories spreading word of the Treaty, using the symbol of the Monstrance, which remains in their city to this day, to raise awareness and hope of unity amongst the increasingly disparate peoples of the peninsula.

AMMASHIN: Lan. Language spoken by the people of AMMESH, the CORAL BARONIES, FALLAROUR, HABOT, KEPHUAAN and TAAN AN. It is descended from CLASSICAL AMMASHIN, which was spoken by the middle FIFTH AGE nation of AMMASHI⁽³⁾. See Vol II: Languages.

AMMASHIN, CLASSICAL: Lan. Middle FIFTH AGE language spoken by the people of the historical nation of AMMASH(3.). The language evolved into the AMMASHIN tongue that is still spoken across south western SAMMAEA to this day. See Vol II: Languages.

AMMEL: Set. Settlement in the east of NAARETH. Like most settlements in the region of JARRA, it is known for its apiarists and honey (Pop. c. 4,800).

AMMENT: Rvr. River in the north west of the BARRIER LANDS, flowing north from sources in SILMA Mountains.

AMMASIL: Plr. 'Ammasilin'. See PALE ONES.

AMMER: Set. City in the c of PARTHIS, in the southern foothills of the BALAUR⁽¹⁾ mountains, in the valley between them and the SIPYLANA Mountains (Pop. c. 41,000).

AMMESH: Soc. Pol. A loosely-united region of states in the south west of SAMMAEA. The area is located south of the TROPIC OF MAOCARHL, dominating the south of the TAAN ANI peninsula where it overlooks the SEA OF AMMASH^(2.). It is a of a dry temperate climate, and is dominated by savannahs in the north and garrigue, scrubland, and sparse scattered woods in the south.

Historically, the city-states are a remnant of a larger nation (known as Ammash⁽³⁾), of which Ammesh is a corruption) that once stretched to encompass present-day Ammesh and neighbouring HABOT, TAAN AN, and KEPHUAAN. Ammash collapsed in c. 2550 RM due to dwindling resources and the reluctance of its many island-tributaries to pay increasing tithes to the mainland, resulting in a fracture from which the region is yet to recover, and the creation of the AMMASHI FREE-ISLES.

The remnants of Ammash gave rise to the aforementioned states, including the AMMASHI COALITION, which survived until its collapse in c. 3750 RM.

The Ammashi coalition's failure led to the fracturing of its lands into a series of states that later formed a new alliance that came to be known as Ammesh in 3759 RM. The region is composed of around two dozen demesnes, each ruled by a central city, of which the city of HAMMA is considered dominant, hosting diplomats and envoys from the other demesnes during times of gathering.

Its people are skilled agriculturalists, making the most of the harsh land and climate of their home, designing intricate canals and irrigations systems that keep their vast cotton fields economically-viable. See Vol III: the Nations of Elyden.

AMMIT: Set. Settlement in the c south west of PHYRR, to the south of the ANTHAR desert (Pop. c. 3,800).

AMMOL: Sec. Fortified settlement in the north west of ALLASAN, close to the border with VAALK. It forms a part of the RED ROUTE and its troops guard the passage across the border (Pop. c. 5,800).

AMMONTRIR: Set. Major city in the north east of EZASUH⁽²⁾, abandoned in c. 2200 RM following the retreat of the SEA OF LIAKARRA.

AMMOS KOTH: Rui. Str. Ruined temple-complex in the far east of the KHARKHARADONTID wastes, to the west of the present-day borders of NOAVATUR, in the region of PHOGORTHA. It fell to the taint of the region and dwindling trade some centuries past, and lies now in ruins, its riches untouched.

AMNAS: Set. Small city in the south west of SEDISIA (Pop. c. 12,800).

AMNATH: Set. southern-most of the major LYRIDIAN cities, located along the course of the river HELISSOS. It is famed throughout Lyridia for its mix of TROGLODYTES and SVATHI natives and its relative lack of cave-settlements (though older districts still have some cavern dwellings).

The city originated in c. -1300 RM along the banks of the river Helissos in what is now southern Lyridia, claiming a population of as many as 15,000 bodies by -1100 RM, making it the dominant city in the old AMNATHI kingdom and one of the oldest cities of the FIFTH AGE. Amnath became the centre of one of the nine separate states that rose following the dissolution of the NARTHELI kingdom in -589 RM, and the sole remaining seat of power of the LYRADEANS' mystics, which would eventually evolve into the UBYRS that ruled the subsequent nation of Lyridia. The ubyrs maintain a strong presence there to this day. The city is also a stronghold to the BARRIMA (Pop. c. 38,200).

AMNATH, KINGDOM OF: also 'Amnathi Kingdoms'. His. Ntn. Originally a city appearing in c. -1150 RM in the south of present-day LYRIDIA, funded by the remnants of SVATHI people of the FOURTH AGE. The city expanded into a small nation built over the Svathi ruins under the leadership of matriarchal halfbloods descended from an otherworlder known as LYRADEA. The nation was eventually destroyed by civil war in -589 RM, leaving it fractured into nine regions: AMNATH, ALLOA, TAHMAL (1.1.). ENESH, TAMESIS, SHANATH, NICATH, AMAYMON, and TAMAR. See Vol III: Extinct States.

AMNATHI: His. Lan. Now-extinct language spoken by the early FIFTH AGE AMNATHI people. It evolved from the FOURTH AGE NAAMNI language. Modern LYRADEAN and TAMARAN are descended from it, as was the tongue of ancient NÁRTHEL (SVATHI) before subjugation by other nations caused their native tongues to die out. See Vol II: Languages.

AMNESH: Geo. Major canyon system in the c north east of Tulurkryph(2.) known for its many ancient basaltic monuments dotting its length. Their purpose is unknown though some scholars and explorers has speculated that they might be gravestones or markers, though they are unmarked.

AMNICA: Set. City in the c west of AHRISHEN, along the north western shore of lake NAIDA. It was the capital of Ahrishen between 1028 to 1975 RM, and was the seat of power of the AMNICIAN DYNASTY until its demise.

Today the city is the largest textile producer in Ahrishen and is famed across $\underline{\text{LLACHATUL}}$ for its wool fabrics and is a major exporter of fine woollen produce. Textiles produced here find their way across the $\underline{\text{INNER}}$ $\underline{\text{SEA REGION}}$ via the $\underline{\text{GREY}}$ and the $\underline{\text{GREAT ROAD}}$ trade-routes (Pop. c. 715,000).

AMNION: Oth. Type of HALFBLOOD known for its protective nature. Most likely of categorised halfbloods to raise a family. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

AMOA: Rvr. River in the east of MHAROKK, flowing south east for 170-miles from sources in the west of the HARAPPAN⁽¹⁾ Mountains before emptying in the mouth of the river SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾.

AMODI: Mil. Set. Small fortified city in the region of CHATOYANT in the west of THE SURRACH (Pop. c. 38,000).

AMODRA: Geo. Mountainous region in the c of ALMAGEST, overlooking the west of the VHALOID plains.

AMOEBID FIELDS: Int. Geo. Flo. Fau. Alien landscapes in the north of the nation of BROR⁽²⁾, and the c of KASIHAAL, noted for their translucent balloon-like growths that exist in their thousands, in tightly packed 'fields', swaying in the wind. Each visible growth reaches around 1-ft. Long, though in truth it is merely an extension of a massive organism that lives below the surface, like aspen trees or fungi. The amoebid growths have organs visible beneath the skin and are sticky to the touch. They sustain themselves by trapping insects and other small vermin, which are digested through their skin.

Taxonomists and scholars have thus far been unable to classify these strange beings, which seem to have no living relatives, making their origins even more mysterious. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

AMOLEH: Sea. Sea, just south of the city of AMONDOR^{(2.),} in the KORACHANI colony of Amondor, south of the TOLIASOR Mountains.

AMONDOR: 1. Pol. KORACHANI colony on the northern coast of THE INNER SEA, occupying the southern-most part of the TOLIASOR Mountains and eight island off its coast. Founded in c. 3740 RM, it was once a centre of piracy across the Inner Sea, though this tradition is now waning.

2. Pol. Set. Administrative centre of the KORACHANI colony of the same name south of the MULL CITY-STATES, and largest city on the mainland territories located there. It forms part of the RED ROUTE and its harbour bustles with freight and trade goods (Pop. c. 168,000).

AMOPHEA: Sec. City in the south of TAMAR, close to the estuary of the river Tamar. It remains a thriving port, though it is now about 2—miles from the coast, and skiffs sail up from the coast to deliver trade-goods left at the new harbour there (Pop. c. 48,000).

AMORO: 1. Pol. One of the FIVE-AND-SIXTY STATES in SAUA.

2. Set. Small city in the far north west of SAUA, north of the KOKORO Mountains. Its main industry is textiles (Pop. c. 20,000).

AMOTHIL: also 'the Sunken Citade!. Int. His. Rui. Ancient citade!, its monolithic size hidden largely beneath the miles of dust and twisted growths of the DUNE SEA in the east of KHARKHARADONTIS, in the east of the IATULKAN ridge.

Some attempts have been made by IMPERIAL archaeologists to explore its depths, the most celebrated being that of 379 RM. Hints of past explorations and robberies were revealed, though little was discovered other than the dank, foul, dormant air of untouched eons. Those who returned from the ruin were touched by the OTHERWORLDLY despair that emanates from it, and though praised in their homelands for being brave explorers, most ended their lives in despair.

AMPHISCARA: For. Expansive tropical forest in the east of SAMMAEA, to the north of the CARCHEMISHI PENINSULA^(1.). It is known for its belligerent tribes that have for many decades been a threat to the people of BANT.

AMRA: Set. Small coastal city in the north of SAGITTARIA, overlooking the SEA OF SERPENTS (Pop. c. 40,000).

AMRANTH: Leg. Rui. Ruin in the c of ALMAGEST, attributed to the eponymous lich, who is a popular culture figure there, often considered an antihero.

AMRAOT: Geo. 250-mile-long massif in the south west of ARKOS⁽¹⁾. The region is noted for the propensity for marine fossils – shells, trilobites, crabs – embedded in its rocks; as well as its many volcanoes, most of which are now dead (though records dating back to the time of THE CITADEL MOUNTS do mention some activity).

AMRATEAH: Set. City in the c of GIBEAH, positioned along the course of the river KHIORRER (Pop. c. 40,000).

AMRAVANDI: Set. Major coastal city in the west of IACIO. It is a major industrial centre in Iacio (Pop. c. 520,000).

AMREN: Sca. Bay in the south of the PARNASIAN STATES, between ELAT and GYZHA.

AMUANNA: Set. Major city in the far north of TZALLRACH, close to the southern border of the HENDECARCHY of CHLORIS in the south of MALAN. It is a major presence in the region and home to a large contingent of the Tzallrachi army, which patrols the border. It is also known for its lion breeders, known as ALAMAKI. The GREAT ROAD passes through the city, linking the Malani trade-routes with Tzallrach (Pop. c. 455,000).

AMUAR: also 'the Silver City'. Pol. Set. White city and capital of BISBUT, situated along the northern face of the KANDIAN Mountain facing north. The city is noted for its white architecture, though its people are known to live harsh lives in the shadow of oppressive nobility (Pop. c. 527,000).

AMUL TET: Edu. Geo. Island in the BROKEN LANDS in the far south east of KHAMID. It is home to the FIRMAMENTAL college known as the AMBER MINARET.

AMULET OF THE SANCTUM: Int. Rui. Obj. The tarnished floor, around 14-feet in diameter, of an ancient now-ruined temple in the plains of ELGREAD in the east of TAHALL. It was discovered by the explorer NAVAH BERDEN in c. 570 RM. A negative imprint was made of the stylised bass carving on the temple's floor and was taken back to KORACHAN where bronze casts were made of it. The temple itself collapsed in an earthquake in c 710 RM, and the original floor is now lost. After careful study, the icons on the amulet were revealed to correspond with the original TWO-AND-TWENTY MORTAL TRIBES and their DEMIURGE parents.

Three copies of the bronze plate were made, the first in 561 RM, and the second and third in 732 RM, with the first kept on display in the VESTIBULE OF STANDARDS in the BASTION OF STEEL in KHADON; the second given to TETHRA as a gift in 802 RM and the third taken to TEIRA by Adepts of QUEEN HETEPHERES THE STRANGLER in 1021 RM.

AMUNET: Rui. Ruined bastion in the north of SARASTRO, dating back to the WAR OF SUNDERING. Constructed by VENTHIRI engineers in the early days of the war as part of the NÁRTHELI LINES, Amunet served as a forward staging ground for the invasion south. It fell into disuse following the SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE and remains a ruin to this day.

AMURIYA: Set. Small city in the c of ALMAGEST, to the west of the ARTUL AKAEL, along the banks of the river DANUR, where the river HAZZATH meets it. Its main industry is reclaiming and recycling of junk and pollutants that makes their way down the river for industries farther upstream, and many of its people are descended from SCAVEN that settled the region centuries ago. The ramshackle settlement that merged was eventually folded into the Republic of Almagest in c. 3580 RM following decades of conflict and, eventually, war, with Almagesti armies besieging the city to claim it.

Today, its recycling industries are operated by three Patrician Houses that are at loggerheads with each other (Pop. c. 16,000).

AMURR: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the south of KETESH and home to many of its armies.

AMUT AKHI: Fau. Large grotesque forms of AL AKHI, displaying misshapen bodies. They are shunned by most al akhi flocks, hunted, and offered to MERKABH as tribute. In the wild, most such creatures rarely survive due to their debilitating deformities, though a rare few grow to be fearsome predators, which in turn become the object of obsessive cultural hunts by the al akhi. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

AMUTH: 1. Geo. Headland in the south west of KHAMID, dividing the AENU coast from the SEA OF PHARESES. The land is relatively barren, save its rolling badlands, which are largely devoid of man-made features.
2. Fau. Plr. 'Amutha'. Amphibious creature (commonly considered a THEROPS by imperial taxonomists), believed to be related to hippopotami. Heavy, covered in layers of fat and with a striped black and deep-red hide, they are amongst one of the most dangerous herbivores in ELYDEN due to their temper and bad eyesight. They are easily affected by ATRAMENTAL TAINT, with their bodies rapidly displaying taint before death.

Amutha were once a common sight in the inner waterways of KHAMID and TZALLRACH, they are now rare, relegated to marshy areas free of corruption. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

AMUZZUS: Set. City in the west of PORPHYR, at the fork where the river SCATURIAS meets its parent, the river GOR. It is a large conurbation, with miles of fertile fields surrounding it along the delta of the river Gor, which is very fertile from alluvial deposits carried by the river (Pop. c. 32,800).

AMYADA: See. Small city in the north west of AMMESH. It is one of the last stops along the NACRE ROAD trade route, before it ends in the city of HAMMA. It is a centre of entertainment, catering to the travellers and merchants, many of who have been on the road for thousands of miles. As such, it is known for its many theatres, concert halls, taverns, casinos and brothels (Pop. c. 18,000).

AMYLR: Str. Necropolis dating back to c. -2000 RM, built outside the city of AMNATH, where the most potent of its LYRADEAN seers were buried. By -589 RM, Amnath had fragmented, forming amongst others, the nation of LYRIDIA, where worship of the otherworlder Lyradea was forsaken. The necropolis continued to be used until c. 400 RM, by which point the city had outgrown its walls, forcing Amylr's destruction. The fate of the seers interred within is unknown.

AMYRIS: (B. c. 3793 RM) Pol. Ruler of the city of SYBARIS^(2.) in the west of SKAROS.

AN SIMEIA: also 'the Hidden City'. His. Alc. Rui. Ancient OPRETIAN city that appeared on the southern-face of the ASOGHAQUA Mountain, emerging in c. 850 RM, the city was funded by survivors of a war that had claimed Opret following a CYHLAGHARRI incursion in 723 RM that left the place ruined, the majority of its people either slain or taken West as slaves. Survivors of the war – either those who had lived through it, or their children, the vast majority of which were OGHUR half-breeds following the massed rape of women during the pillaging, hid from oghur culling parties and slave raids in the Asoghaqua Mountain where the settlement and others slowly grew. Its obscured location gave rise to the name 'the Hidden City', which became renowned in OPHAM as well as PARTHIA.

Its people reignited the Opretian ALCHEMICAL tradition, secretly restoring links with the LHAUS in c. 925 RM. Its alchemical enclaves became relatively potent, though the circumstances of the time meant they were denied a chance to grow or to truly show their talents.

Unlike the majority of Opretian people, those of An Simeia were accepting of their heritage, if not truly proud of it. Many amongst them came to refer to themselves as the 'Great Result' and the name SIMEIAN eventually appeared to describe those of both HUMAN and oghur ancestry.

An exiled outlaw alerted Cyhlagharr to the presence of the city in 938 RM, and in 941 RM they found it and razed it, slaying its occupants and taking what few they deemed fit West as slaves. Amongst them were various Simeian alchemists and alchembrists. The city of Parksimenia was later built on its ruins.

AN ABRIDGED LEXICON OF THE DEPTHS: BEING IN PART A

GUIDE TO THE MADDENING ABYSS: Vol. Treatise published privately in 3338 RM detailing an exploration of the depths of the PRISON CARCERI that took place between 3328 and 3331 RM. The book describes, in some detail, the culture and customs of the people of the so-called 'MADDENING ABYSS' and an abridged history of the regions, particularly the areas surrounding the cities of PANDAEMONIA and DISPATIS. Much of the text is based on the ramblings of the KORACHANI explorer DOTHIL.

ANAAD: Lan. KORACHANI word for glacier. The word is used in ALMAGESTI and other languages that emerged from them.

ANAAD BARATA: Geo. Glacier in the north of the nation of DURCHAA^(1,), in the c of the UTAGHAN Mountains.

ANAAD BARIANOM: Geo. Glacier in the north of the nation of VALBAR⁽²⁾, in the north of the OLTHARUN Mountains.

ANAAD KURAEN: Geo. Glacier in the north of the nation of VALBAR^(2.), in the north of the OLTHARUN Mountains.

ANAAD ONTA: Geo. Glacier in the north of the nation of $\underline{VALBAR}^{(2.)}$, in the north of the $\underline{OLTHARUN}$ Mountains.

ANAAD SOKAH: Geo. Major glacier in the north of the nation of $\underline{DURCHAA}^{(1)}$, in the c of the $\underline{UTAGHAN}$ Mountains.

ANAAD SOKH: Geo. Major glacier in the north of the nation of DURCHAA^{(1.),} in the north west of the UTAGHAN Mountains.

ANAAD ST. JOSTAN: Geo. Glacier in the north of the nation of VALBAR⁽²⁾, in the north of the OLTHARUN Mountains. It is named after ST. JOSTAN, an ALMAGESTI missionary who died in the region in c. 1320 RM.

ANAAD SURAMAN: Geo. Glacier in the north of the nation of $\underline{VALBAR}^{(2)}$, in the north of the $\underline{OLTHARUN}$ Mountains.

ANAAD VRAT: Geo. Glacier in the north of the nation of DURCHAA^(1.), in the c west of the UTAGHAN Mountains.

ANAAMATES: Rui. Ghost town in the north west of LAASKHA, in the region of IMMERUTH. Until c. 3500 RM the city was a major port and shipyard though the retreat of the STRAIT OF SKAROS left it land-locked, its harbours deserted. The rusted hulks of dozens of gigantic ships remain now, rotting under the dying sun.

ANABATH: Str. THANOSI polar outpost in the WHITE SHEET, in the far north west of LLACHATUL, overlooking the SEA OF POLARIS, to the north of WESTERN THANOS.

ANACASTA: Set. Coastal city in the far north east of KOMMEA, in the HOLLOW COASTLINE (Pop. c. 12,000).

ANACHA: 1. Set. City in the south east of AQUARIIA, overlooking the estuary of the river ALLAMAR. It was the capital of Aquariia whilst under PARTHISAN rule, though this was moved to MORR ISAKHANA following the ejection of Parthis in 3140 RM. Once located along coastal wetlands, the modern city is now half-a-mile inland, with its harbours maintained at great coast (Pop. c. 68,000).

2. Mil. Fortress 15-miles south west of the eponymous city, guarding the entrance into the estuary of the river ALLAMAR. The fortress was once situated on an island though it became part of the mainland around 3100 RM as the SEA OF LIAKARRA retreated.

ANACRISS: Set. City in the CHAMBER OF AGONIES in the PRISON CARCERI. It is known to the world-above through legends and tales of torture, where ROPOHAII agents would emerge at night to kidnap people for torture. This is unlikely, as what few documented accounts of the city exist have it as the headquarters of an order of ropoaii inquisitors who hunted the length and breadth of Carceri for dissenters and heretics (Pop. unknown)

ANAFA: Set. Major city in the south of ESHIR^(2.), along the eastern shore of lake EUSIS. It was once a coastal settlement, overlooking the BAY OF SABRIYA, but the bays dwindling and eventual disappearance to lowering sea levels in the 4th millennium RM saw the city become landlocked. Fortuitously, it was located at the edge of a natural depression that saw the newly-formed river GAMUS empty into it, forming the aforementioned lake Eusis in the process, which provided the city with a source of fresh water. As other settlements were abandoned due to the expanding coastline, the city attracted may refugees, who made Anafa their new home. In c. 2379 RM it became a base to the SEEKERS OF THE STONE, and remained a stronghold to them until their disbanding in 3202 RM.

Today, the city is home to their descendants, many of which continue the old traditions of their ancestral homes, including the veneration of guardian saints which were once the saints of individual towns. The followers of these saints put on large feasts in the hopes of outdoing those of rival sodalities, which is a large part of culture in Anafa (Pop. c. 180,000).

ANAGAR: 1. Dem. 'Anagari. Soc. Pol. Ntn. Militant people who live on the BYRISI peninsula in far west of WESTERN LLACHATUL, west of RAONGEN^(2.) and south of THE VORANDINE. The Anagari people are considered by most outsiders to be backwards and barbaric, subsisting off the rocky land, with most of their settlements scattered along the coastline. They do not recognise any national borders, and commonly move east overland into Raongen, attacking travellers, and north into the Vorandine across the STRAIT OF ABYR, where they raid coastal settlements. Its people are known for their love of firearms, which are thought to be sold to them by ALMAGESTI dealers to keep the region unstable. It has a relatively dense population for its size, though its people are scattered around its many territories, living in largely self-sustaining extended family groups, though there are considerable larger settlements, almost all of which are fortified. These fortifications are unrefined, with antiquated bastions made of crude concrete and lined with simple yet effective cannons.

The culture emerged from an abandoned KORACHANI colony that attempted to settle the region between c. 1540 – 1580 RM, after hearing stories of the rich OMNATITE reserves of Raongen. Failing to find any significant reserves, the colonists abandoned the region, though some remained behind, establishing small settlements, even coming to trade with the Raongeni people after a while.

Contact with Korachan was soon lost after this and the next recorded mention of the region in imperial records following this is in c. 1700 RM, when the region is described as being populated by a belligerent people who attack foreigners on sight.

It's difficult to say why Raongen has not quelled this threat given the massive resources it can command. See Voll III: Extant Realms and Nations.

2. Pol. Set. Main city in the above^(1.) region. It is home to most of the warriors that launch attacks east against RAONGEN^(2.) It is the largest permanent settlement in the state (Pop. c. 50,000).

ANAGHORA: Set. Fortified city in the c north of VAALK, in the south west of the SEA OF BASSANDER. The city is home to a large barracks of the Vaalkan army (Pop. c. 18,200).

ANAGOGIC ORDER OF ZABRASSANA: Mys. Org. Mystical order founded in the PARTHISAN city of TUALAR in 3673 RM by the PATRICIAN mystic ORCI NARAIMAN. The Order was created to propagate Nariaman's teachings and to bring about his ultimate goal of unleashing the spirit-demon Zabrassana upon ELYDEN, which he believed would end all MORTALKIND, allowing fate to take its course. The cult faded in c. 3840 RM, around a century after its founder's death, and its members scattered, his goal unfinished.

His teachings were rediscovered by the KHURAURI esotericist CHACEZASH in c. 3990 RM, who studied them extensively, going so far as buying a residence in a structure that Naraiman had built in Tualar in which to research his works.

ANAGURAM: Pol. Rnk. Ruling title in HABOT since the representative republic council in 3835 RM replaced the royal family as the ruling power. The Anaguram typically rules for life and a replacement is only elected upon the death of the incumbent Anaguram.

The election is a complex process that selects by lottery three citizens from each eligible settlement (designated by having a market). Each settlement is responsible for its own three candidates, whose names are then sent to Ahehafret for selection by lottery in which 22 names are selected at random. These individuals then choose 9 candidates from within their numbers and one of them is them selected by another lottery to be the Anaguram, who then selects a cabinet to serve as the new republic during their tenure.

ANAHARA: Geo. Saltlands in the north east of NORTHERN SIMBARA.

With the retreat of the twin seas of AMMASH⁽²⁾ and KRIHIEK throughout the FIFTH AGE, large parts of their lagoons and shallow coastal waters found themselves landlocked. Most are now dry, though a great many of them remain as incredibly salty bodies of water, inimical to life. Many Simbaran settlements were ruined by this, though a few survive, subsisting off the salt and other minerals revealed by the retreating waters.

ANAHEL: Mil. Str. Major highland fortress in the north of GNOTH, in the valley between the SOLUN highlands and the NARAHASAPHAEL Mountains, guarding against the wastelands of RAONGEN^(2.) and the CALLOW HORDES.

ANAHER: (4,982-ft.) Highest peak on MT. CARIA in the HARÉSHK, named after the WARRIOR-QUEEN ANAHERA, an OTHERWORLDER, who died on the peak.

ANAHERA, THE ARISEN: (B. Unknown) Oth. OTHERWORLDER and warrior-queen of the ILLIDRAEN. She died her mortal death in the last days of the FOURTH AGE during one of the deciding battles of a great war in the region, in what is now the city-state of CARIA⁽⁴⁾ in THE HARÉSHK. Haréshki legend states that she fought a last-stand against a horde of ATRAMENTAL creatures atop the highest peak of MT. CARIA before dying of her wounds, a mound of black corpses at her feet. Her body was carried to a local church where it was interred, the place (as well as the peak where she died) later becoming a site of pilgrimage and significant religious importance amongst the survivors of the war.

As civilisation crumbled, the natives of the area suffered greatly, the church falling into ruin and the interred body of the ILLIDRAEN disappearing. She was later reborn as an otherworlder. In this form, Anahera remained a powerful warrior and gifted SHAPER, commanding the SPHERES of earth and air. Resplendent in her armour; an ancient gift from the children of NYARLOTH, she became an emblem of Caria, though reciprocated the piety of the city-states' people with aloofness and a disdain that, were it not for her actions in defending the city and guiding it, would surely have alienated her.

ANAHITA: Rel. Dei. Demigoddess worshipped in the FOREST KINGDOMS of MALAN, in particular the south western HENDECARCHIES of LONAR and CHLORIS. She was a mariner who likely lived during the FADING preceding the early FIFTH AGE, in what is now the south west of Malan, though whose life has since been fictionalised and aggrandised, turning her into a near-mythical figure and champion who is worshipped as a patron, much like people in the KORACHANI EMPIRE might venerate a patron saint.

She is regarded today as a powerful champion of the people, an explorer, and a tamer of beasts, and most of her followers are strong women who seek to follow in her footsteps. She has temples in most major cities in Malan, particularly in the south west, where there are shrines in most settlements and crossroads. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

ANAHITA, CULT OF: Rel. Major religion in the FOREST KINGDOMS of MALAN, being most prevalent in the south western HENDECARCHIES of LONAR and CHLORIS, whose followers revere the demigoddess ANAHITA. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

ANAHITA, TEMPLE OF: Rel. Str. Main temple of the demigoddess ANAHITA, located in the south of the HENDECARCHY of CHLORIS. Originally located along a bend in the river SIELL NA, the movements of the river over the millennia have seen the river snake away from it, leaving an oxbow lake behind that has since been transformed into a beautiful garden and crescent-shaped pool, with the temple looking over it. The structure is of white marble, with three verdigris-covered domes one larger than the others on and a low surrounding wall behind which is a vast courtyard where those who follow Anahita gather to pray, particularly during spring festivals when pilgrims travel there from across Malan ANAILING: Pol. Set. Ruling city in the south east of the tribe of HAVATH, in the south east of MULCIBER, in the GROWING MOUNTAINS. The city is coastal and overlooks the BAY OF HINGIL (Pop. c. 205,000).

ANAKARRA: Pol. Set. Capital and largest city in VAALK. It was an unimportant settlement before VALKA succumbed to KORACHANI armies in 19 RM, after which it grew steadily into a major harbour, becoming capital in 223 RM. By c. 1000 RM it had become the largest and wealthiest city in Vaalk, thanks to coastal trade and the revenue-rich UMBRA mines of the region, to which it still has direct access to this day.

The retreat of the coastline eventually left it land-locked, its once thriving harbours deserted, though today the port-town of SALSUN serves as a link between the metropolis and the INNER SEA.

The city defected to SARASTRO on the 9th SATAVALEN 3704 RM, during the WAR OF SUNDERING, bringing chaos to VAALTHA (as Vaalk was then known). It became the site of the SIEGE OF ANAKARRA, which dragged on until the end of the war, when Vaalthan territories taken by Sarastro were returned to Korachan as part of the SARASTROAN TREATY on the 23rd SATAVALEN 3705 RM (Pop. c. 2,100,000).

ANAKARRA, SIEGE OF: Mil. War. His. A historical siege of the city of ANAKARRA that took place during the VAALTHAN WAR in the larger WAR OF SUNDERING. The siege began on the 11th HAELEN 3704 RM, following a month of imperial blockades enacted in response to the city's defection to SARASTRO on the 9th SATAVALEN 3704 RM.

Various allied imperial forces were involved in the siege, including AKENGORON GABRA, a member of the COUNCIL OF SEVEN, who abandoned his post and secretly sailed to Anakarra on a bespoke warship he commissioned for the purpose. The city had been well-fortified by Sarastroan forces prior to the siege and withstood attacks from imperial armies sent against it from the cities of TAHIL, MENORAH, and EGORA. A grand attack was ordered by Gabra on the 9th RACHALEN 3705 RM, in which thousands of new conscripts were thrown against the city, backed up by artillery strikes and other more seasoned troops, but the attack was fruitless. Gabra died during the attack and few further pushes against the city were made, though it remained blockaded and surrounded for the rest of the war.

The signing of the SARASTROAN TREATY on the 23rd Satavalen 3705 RM saw Sarastro forced to abandon its conquests in VAALTHA (now VAALK) and MHAROKK, and Anakarra was returned to Korachani control (though the nation would eventually fall to Sarastro in 3737 RM following decades of propaganda that went against the spirit of the Treaty.

ANAKARRA DO: see ANKADO.

ANAKARRAN VESTIBULE, the: Pol. Palace in ANAKARRA, VAALK. Home to the Vaalkan high-COGNATENSIA from 223 – 2103 RM. Following the death of the bloodline in 2103 RM, it became a bureaucratic structure, where the five ruling PATRICIAN HOUSES governed Vaalk. Following the SUNDERING OF THE KORACHANI EMPIRE, the Vestibule remained sympathetic to the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR and the UNDYING MACHINE, organising defences against an increasingly restless population.

ANAKIM: (B. Unknown) Oth. OTHERWORLDER, taking the form of a plated metallic angel wielding a blinding sceptre. Its allegiances are ambiguous and it is claimed by BA'AKHI scholars to have been expelled from the OTHERWORLD and cast down to ELYDEN for some undisclosed transgression.

ANALAM: His. Pol. Ancient FIFTH AGE tyrant who persecuted a caste of philosophers in what is present-day NASTAL⁽²⁾.

ANALOGON: Nou. 'Analogonear'. Plr. 'Analogonin'. Sup. Org. Mil. Rnk. An order of SHAPERS in the KORACHANI EMPIRE, whose MINASTERIA(2.) has been based in the city of FALKAN since 2935 RM. Its members are ATRAMENTAL shapers whose SPHERE grants them the power to alter their bodies and/or those of others, to various effect.

The process of altering ones' features is both painful and difficult, and can be accomplished only through long and arduous practice, which can leave the shaper permanently deformed and/or mentally scarred. The use of FOCI (commonly paper-thin metallic masks) is very common amongst such shapers. Also, the person whose body is being manipulated becomes greatly fatigued by the act, and it is recommended that individuals eat rich foods afterwards.

Perhaps most famously, Analogonin serve as expert spies, altering their appearance to mimic that of a particular individual. This is a rare and incredibly difficult feat to accomplish and there are only records of a few dozen shapers throughout imperial history who have successfully accomplished this, let alone made a career out of it. The chance of irreversibly changing or damaging ones' body is high, and it takes a great degree of discipline and calorific intake to maintain the transformation for any degree of time. Analogonin can be mistaken for FANI and VERSIPELLIANIN, which fulfil a similar role.

More commonly, Analogonin can be found serving as medical practitioners, assisting in surgeries, helping to close wounds and help bodies accept organ transplants. They are also found as plastic surgeons, where they reshape physical appearances for reconstructive purposes.

Beyond the traditional medical roles, Analogonin can also bring their talents to unconventional professions. They work as cosmetic surgeons, performing various bodily modifications and can also speed up the growth of hair and nails. Performance artists captivate audiences by manipulating their bodies in surreal ways, and in the realm of fashion, designers integrate living elements and adaptable fabrics, bringing innovation to their designs.

Many Analogonin find themselves working on the wrong side of the law, by dint of their abilities making it so easy for them to cause harm to others. They can easily alter a persons' bodily functions, changing the production of certain chemicals or hormones, causing imbalances and damage that can have unexpected consequences. Indeed, an Analogon randomly pulling at the insides of someone's body can inflict a great deal of damage, turning lucid people into raging maniacs or otherwise just shutting down someone's organs, causing organ failure or death.

In the military, they serve in both defensive and offensive roles. In the former case they are combat medics and field surgeons, trained to quickly close up wounds and perform emergency surgeries during battles. In the latter case they act as shock troops, inflicting pain on enemy troops and spreading chaos amongst their ranks. With the aid of drugs and iron mantles a single Analogon can devastate entire regiments of enemy troops. They can also alter their own bodies based on the climate and terrain they are fighting in to help them operate better. Thicker skin, increased lung capacity, strengthening hearts and muscles, all these and more are skills that can lead a unit of Analogonin to victory.

Particularly gifted individuals may also be able to prolong MORTAL lifespans. These Analogonin are highly sought after and their services command prizes only the richest of PATRICIANS can afford. Many Analogonin use these abilities on themselves, and individuals have been known to live for many centuries without any outside influence other than their own shaping.

They can also use their abilities to inflict great pain without leaving scars, making them assets in interrogations, and they often work with groups such as the IRON GUARD, the SANCTIFIED ORDERS OF THE INQUISITION, or the military.

They can also change their bodies, for instance increasing the thickness of their skin, growing their nails into claws, changing the constitution of their eyes, granting them increased vision under different conditions or allowing them to see under different spectra. Many of these alterations take time to implement and can cause great pain as the body slowly changes. In some instances, changes cannot be reversed – once a nail or hair grows it cannot then be shortened, for instance. Repeated changes to ones' body can also have unintended consequences that may not become apparent until much later in life.

Analogonin share many similarities with the MEDELIARIIN, in that both have control over bodies, though the latter tend to take a more altruistic role, working as healers, while the Analogonin are more befitting in a more brutal role. A key difference is that the changes wrought by Analogonin are usually quite painful, and many can only alter their own bodies following years of training to mute the pain. Even so, many Analogonin become addicted to painkillers as a way of coping with the trauma their bodies are put through.

The first Analogoni were a caste of loosely-connected imposters who between 300 and 450 RM took the likenesses of many power-figures in NARTHEL, killing them and rising to power in their place. The Minasteria's headquarters were originally located there in a citadel just outside the walls of the city of NICAEA in the foothills of the UEFIR Highlands, before being relocated following the SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE. See Vol IV: Spheres and types of Shaping.

ANALYTICAL ENGINE: also 'Trokhar Engine'. Tec. Mechanical computational engine that allows for mathematical calculations and data analysis through the use of punched cards bearing the instructions. The engine was devised in 2826 RM by the Parthisan mathematician and engineer TROKHAR DATHENKO, though was not produced on a functional scale until decades after his death, in 2871 RM, though was met by resistance in many places, particularly by SHAPERS and TECHNARCANISTS whose jobs were put at risk by the invention.

The engine was slowly accepted over the years and its use spread across the INNER SEA REGION, until it had become ubiquitous by c. 3100 RM, with most major government offices, large businesses, manufactories, and military centres possessing an engine to aid in computations despite their large upfront cost and upkeep requirements.

Despite their fears, the engines never fully replaced the use of shapers or HEART ENGINES and LARVAE, though they were a great asset in areas where the ARCANE TEMPERS made it difficult or outright impossible for shapers to work.

Ancient examples of advanced and sophisticated analytical engines have been found across ELYDEN, indicating that MORTALS (possibly with the aid of SCIONS) have been creating such engines for many ages. Examples include the cities of BIS and MIRADAS, the CITY-ENGINE OF UNNYARHIAL, and the SOUL-ENGINE^(L) of MEHARRAAT, amongst others.

ANAMATH: Set. Small city in the c of LAASKHA, in the region of THAZAKHA. It is a major crossroads and links the surrounding lands together, and it is known for many hostels and caravanserais (Pop. c. 15,000).

ANAMNRII: Nou. 'Anamnrear'. Plr. 'Anamnriin'. Also 'Psychometry'. Sup. Org. Mil. Rnk. An order of SHAPERS in the KORACHANI EMPIRE, whose MINASTERIA (2.) has been based in the city of HERESI in KORACHAN since 1235 RM. Its members are ATRAMENTAL shapers who possess powers of PSYCHOMETRY, allowing them to get information from an object or person through touch, via the PRINCIPLE OF CONTAGION.

Anamnriin are perhaps one of the more specific of orders of Korachani shapers, and though their skills are narrow, they are of importance to society.

By laying their hands on an object or person they can glean a who host of details, which vary based on the shaper as well as the length of time devoted to the examination. A cursory touch can reveal simple information such as where the person or object came from and, may also reveal an aura – in the case of a person, revealing their present emotions; and in the case of an object, hinting at the scenarios and moods that recently surrounded it. Even longer contract can give more information, possibly flashes revealing locations and events. Accomplished Anamnriin who maintain continuous contact and concentration for a significant amount of time can get specific details, including places, names and histories. This information is invaluable on various levels, including law enforcement (trace auras of a murder weapon or a murder suspect), bounty hunting and private investigating (tracking a fugitive), and in the antiques trade (correctly appraising the value of an object).

Indeed, Anamnriin are expert trackers and can lay their hands on the ground to get auric feedback including the number of people and objects that have passed over an area and how long ago. They can track specific objects and people if they are forearmed with a trace aura, effectively allowing them to track them over vast distances, much in the same way a tracker dog can follow a scent trail.

They can often work as archaeologists, wither in the field or in museums, where they use their abilities to find out the provenance of objects and sites, which has allowed them to flesh out historical records beyond any measure of doubt. Indeed, our vast knowledge of past ages is largely due to the diligent work of psychometrists working across the FIFTH AGE and earlier, piecing together fragments that would otherwise have been lost to time. See Vol IV: Spheres and types of Shaping.

ANANGON: Set. Small coastal city in the east of CUTH. It is home to shipyards, and large harbour where wood is shipped west (Pop. c. 17,000).

ANANTH, the: Myr. His. Ancient name for the SEA OF CHAOS from which the FIRMAMENT and the ATRAMENTA were born. The Ananth is believed to remain to this day as a mystical element and part of the MATERIA OMNA; the object of many ALCHEMISTS' searches, though to which capacity it affects the actions of SHAPERS is unknown and few, if any, can be said to have truly discovered it through Alchemical or TECHNARCANE processes.

ANANTHUL: Nm. Dem. 'Ananthulan'. This Kingdom is situated in the SOUTHERN HEMISPHERE, in the east of SAMMAEA, and its southern-most territories lie along the TROPIC OF MAOCARHL. Its climate is dry, though it becomes more verdant farther to the north, where scrub forests and sparse woodlands predominate.

Ananthul emerged from the void left by the SCION TELEANYARA APEXEIDE'S attack on the ancient PHARTHI capital of PANET in 1378 RM, which left it annihilated and its iconoclast leaders vanquished. The region regressed after this, with a series of tyrants emerging to fill the void. By around 1436 RM one region, known as Ananthul, had gained the upper hand and began to assimilate surrounding territories. Its ruler began calling himself the PHAOH, and his offspring would follow in his steps taking on the moniker as a title, starting the PHAOHNIC DYNASTY that survives in the region today. In 1443 RM, the name of Ananthul became officially recognised and used for the first time, remaining so to this day.

The nation and its people are quite secretive, and very little is known of its religion, which is known simply as LAX PORAR, and is worshipped privately within people's homes and has not been revealed to outsiders. Much like the rest of the nations in the PORPHYRI PENINSULA, it is known for its manufactories, and technarcane industries, of which it is a world-leader, with a great number of exports every year.

Its people, like others in the Porphyri peninsula, are descended from FOURTH AGE unions between the HUMAN inheritors of ELYDEN and the near-extinct IROTHANI — blue-skinned mortals beholden to the DEMIURGE NYARLOTH. Many individuals have skin with a faint blue taint, or skulls that are slightly elongated, as a result. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

ANANTHULA: Geo. Region to the south of ANANTHUL, characterised by its convoluted and pitted iron fields, rust-red flakes the size of cart-wheels laying on the corroded plains, the water at its shore orange from oxidisation. The land and sea around the region are largely devoid of life, though there is evidence of past civilisations in the hewn colossi and monuments that exist carved from pillars of metal into totemic idols, their features long-since corroded.

SABAISAN legend speaks of steel canyon valleys shrouded in darkness where sickly wombs sprout from the earth like grotesque flowers, strange beings growing within. The explorer NAVAH BERDEN saw the region from his famous expedition in 612 RM and decided not to explore the shore; the only land he felt inclined not to explore further during his travels. Few know the verity of the legends surrounding the land, though some scholars speculate that the hellish earthly wombs might be a corrupted remnant of the works of one of the Demiurges, possibly Nyarloth or his children, the IROTHANI.

ANAPARTHIA: Ind. Set. Settlement in the PARTHISAN colony of VARTA^(1.), almost 80-miles from the city. Its main industry is iron mining (Pop. c. 7,000).

ANAPIT NASTHALLA: Sup. Rui. Ancient cyclopean ruin deep in the jungles of FATHEL ID, in the west of NOAVATUR. It is thought to date back to the THIRD AGE OF LIFE, and is likely attributed to a DEMIURGE. It depicts a grotesque humanoid figure seated on a throne, some 100-ft. tall in all, hewn from a single block of unidentified metal that is now tarnished.

An aura of dread surrounds the ruin and those sensitive to the effects the MATERIA OMNA can feel a heavy aura that has kept mortals away from it for centuries, which is likely the reason the jungles of Fathel Id have never been exploited by logging operations.

ANARAS: Set. Small city in the far north of PORPHYR. It is located in the region of BASHINDA, which is noted for its rich ore reserves. Its main industries are lead and zinc mining (Pop. c. 12,000).

ANARCH: 1. Rnk. Hereditary title in TETHYSIA, not unlike that of PATRICIAN in the INNER SEA.

2. Pol. Rnk. Ruling title in TZALLRACH, synonymous with king. The title is hereditary, and is currently held by AMAIMON.

ANARGUL XYLIA, THIRD OF THE ELEVEN: m. Pol. Per. (B. 3824 RM)
Third of the HENDECARCHS of MALAN and ruler of the FOREST
KINGDOM of CHLORIS.

ANARIK: Set. Port on the south of the island of GEMARIS, serving as the main harbour of the capital city AGAIR. The settlement is a suburb of the capital, and the majority of its populace is involved in the port industry in some way or another (Pop. c. 9,000).

ANASAR: 1. Geo. Mountainous peninsula in the c north west of PERGOST, dividing the SEA OF DESZMEN from the AMAARI WATERS. Like most regions in Pergost, it is largely made up of permafrost, and there are few permanent settlements of any note. Indeed, most mortals who dwell there follow old tribal beliefs of the TURAAN and roam the land in family groups that build temporary rubble huts in their meandering of the landscape.

- 2. Set. Small city in the eponymous region^(1.) in the c north west of PERGOST. Like many parts of the far north of LLACHATUL, the city is relatively small, populated by a hardy people who have become experts at living off the unforgiving land and plying the waters of the DESZMEN GULF (Pop. c. 18,000).
- 3. Mil. His. Historical caste of MAMMOTH-cavalry in early PERGOSTI history. While mammoths aren't used in common life due to their rarity and stubborn nature, they were successfully bred in limited numbers for use in warfare by the people of the Anasar region. They typically served as platforms for ranged troops, musicians and ballistae, though were traditionally used as shock troops.

Their role diminished with the advent of gunpowder, though were used as recently as the civil war of 3682 RM, during which their numbers were whittled beyond recourse. Today they remain largely as mascots and specialised units – hauling artillery in difficult terrain, for instance.

ANASHIR: Set. Settlement in the c north east of TATAR, in the south of the HAZABOS region (Pop. c. 5,400).

ANASKINA: Set. Small city in the c north west of KAZZAR (Pop. c. 13.800)

ANASUL: 1. Mil. Str. Defensive lines in the north west of THE OLD FOREST, along the border with ALMAGEST, stretching for some 75-miles across the river IAGANNATH. They were constructed during the height of Almagesti offensives against the Old Forest in c. 2800 RM, at which time the borders of the Old Forest were some 20-miles farther north. Today they are antiquated, though are still manned by forces from the nearby fortresses of HIMET and SAMILET.

2. Set. Fortified city in the north west of THE OLD FOREST, 30-miles south of the eponymous fortifications that guard the border with $\underline{ALMAGEST}$ (Pop. c. 28,000).

ANATARIA: Set. Major coastal city in the far north east of METHUMN, along the northern border of the mouth of the river HELAGHILRA. It appeared only around 200 years ago in land reclaimed by lowering sea levels and deposition from the river. Originally an agricultural hub, it soon grew into an industrial centre, and is now thought by some to be a home to a manufactory where POSSESSION ENGINES are made (Pop. c. 330,000).

ANATHA BAETYL: 1. Rel. Major polytheistic religion in TZALLRACHI. It is also the name of its primary deity^(2.). See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

2. Rel. Primary deity of the TZALLRACHI polytheistic religion^(1.), taking the form of a lion goddess of warfare and strength. She is also a power in the city of BAALBETH, where she is a patron deity.

The religion is old, dating to the days of CHARAMAN culture and, though it diminished under its subjugation of the NATHI KINGDOM, it later re-emerged during the time of the CHARATH CROWN, becoming a major cultural influence by the appearance of CHÂR MATHI (Tzallrach)in 2101 RM. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

ANATHEROPS: Fau. One of the largest THEROPS (land animals) to walk ELYDEN. A mainstay in FOURTH AGE warfare, their numbers were whittled in the WAR OF SCOURGING, and very few survived the FADING of that age. Those that survived scattered across SAMMAEA, where they survive in small numbers to this day, though they can also be found on the subcontinent of EASTERN LLACHATUL. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

ANATJAL: Set. Fortified settlement in the east of the OLD FOREST. It forms a part of the GÂTHAN ROAD that brings trade to the east of the Old Forest from as far places such as AHRISHEN, SABIA and KASPIA, amongst others (Pop. c. 9,200)

ANATOLA: 1. Geo. Mountain in the far south east of ALMAGEST.

2. Geo. Mountain-chain forming the eastern-most border of STOLAS, with the DESOLATION OF ASTUDAN.

ANATU: Lak. Lake in the c east of VENTHIR, along the course of the river TEIRIS.

ANAVRAMI: His. Lan. Now-extinct HUMAN language that dates back to the THIRD AGE, believed to be descended from the first human tongue, gifted to them by the DEMIURGE AVRAHAM.

The language followed the spread of humans across ELYDEN during the Third Age, becoming the root for most extant human languages that would follow. Despite its importance to linguistic studies, little is known of it due to its ancient age. See Vol II: Languages.

ANAX: Plr. 'Anaxin'. Pol. Rnk. PELASGOSI noble title, loosely translated to mean lord or judge. Used during the so-called JUDICIARY AGE in Pelasgos (-300 RM – 5 RM). The Anaxin were regional rulers, roughly comparable with feudal lords, who answered to the ANAX-LORD and served as rulers, judges, and leaders of regional armies. The Anaxin were granted land and certain duties by the Anax-lord, who presided over the various judges of the old Pelasgosi states, setting disputes and overseeing laws.

After the Imperial conquest of Pelasgos in 73 RM, the title of Anax was maintained, becoming synonymous with that of ARCHPATRICIAN.

ANAX-LORD: Pol. Rnk. Title of the original rulers of PELASGOS that followed the FADING of the FOURTH AGE and its emergence form the leaderless Neolithic culture in c. -400 RM, until the arrival of the KORACHANI EMPIRE in c. 73 RM (though the title was later used in VÂRR beginning c. -50 – 50 RM). In Pelasgos, the Anax-Lord resided over the regional ANAXIN, while in Vârr, the Anax-Lord was superior to the HIEROGOTHS.

Despite the empire's subjugation of the nation in 73 RM, the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR continued to use the title, naming his governors Anax-lords. These regents maintained a degree of influence and anonymity throughout imperial rule, though by the end of the imperial occupation in Vârr in 3412 RM the line of the Anax-Lords had become so diluted by millennia of marriage to the PATRICIAN HOUSES that its worth was barely of note.

ANYA: Rvr. Drainage basin of the river ANAYATAS, in the north east of PORPHYR.

ANAYATAS: Rvr. River in the north east of PORPHYR flowing north for 390-miles from sources in the POROPHOSSYR Mountains before meeting the coast at the BAY OF XENIA.

ANCESTRAL FORTS: Rui. Old coastal forts dominating 120-miles of what was once the SUORI coastline, now around 35-miles inland from the SEA OF ORMA.

ANCESTRAL KNOLL: Int. His. Burial mounds in TEMUJA that date back to pre-Temujan times, when the region was populated by nomadic horsemen. These ancestral knolls were built over the burnt bodies of the dead as memorials to their VESSELS (bodies), that were left empty following the departure of the SPIRIT to the OTHERWORLD.

ANCESTRAL TOKEN: Leg. Arc. Soc. Known as CAYIYTH in MALANI.
Ancestral Tokens are small cenotaphs erected to mark the place of passing of an individual, usually one of renown or importance in the region. The tokens are revered and respected by the Malani and those passing them may leave a small offering to appease the SPIRIT">SPIRIT" in the deceased. Older tokens tend to be turned into milestones by those who commonly pass by them.

ANCHIAUS: Geo. Low long mountain-range in SAMMAEA, forming a border between the UMBRA SOKHAR and AETHIOS.

ANCIENT: Pol. Rulers of IRUGNA.

ANCIENT AZAHARI: see AZAHARI, ANCIENT.

ANCIENT, CITADEL OF THE: Pol. Str. House of the government of IRUGNA (2.). located in the capital city of ZAGAN.

ANCIENT RHEAN: see RHEAN, ANCIENT.

ANCIENT SUTHI: see SUTHI, ANCIENT.

ANCIENT SVATHI: see SVATHI, ANCIENT.

ANCONA: 1. Rvr. River in the c north west of AETHIOS, flowing for 270-miles from sources in the north east of the ANCHIAUS Mountains.

2. Rui. Ruined city in an elbow in the above river (1.).

ANDABATA: Mil. In AHRISHENI military, INDRIK riders that are used as powerful shock-cavalry and gun platforms. Their thick hides and unperturbable demeanours make them trustworthy mounts, though their upkeep and training are difficult and costly. They are bred and trained largely in the QOCHLAN region in the south of AHRISHEN.

ANDALLAN: Geo. Low mountain in the south west of WESTERN SAMMAEA, forming a border between the east of the MAUNURIN TRIBES and the west of ABRAXA⁽²⁾. It is an extension of the far larger SANTOREAN Mountain, and divides the WOLD rainforest in two.

ANDARA: Lak. Endorheic lake in the south east of PORPHYR, fed by various river flowing east from the east of POROPHOSSYR Mountains. The lake was at one point linked to the west of the SEA OF MIROVEA, though was left cut off some 400-years ago by waning sea levels.

ANDAS: Sea. Strait off the western coast of GREST^(1.) in the south west of the island-continent of BROR^(1.), separated from the SEA OF NDORTUR by the island of MBAST. The region is noted for the many MERILLS that congregate there, often attacking coastal settlements. The diminishing of the seas in the area has revealed many soapstone merill cities just off what was once the coastal shelf, overlooking deeper waters of the Ndortur.

ANDHA: 1. Geo. Region in the north of PHUT, characterised by its almost black soils, which are remarkably fertile.

2. Set. City in above region and main producer of food in the northern territories of \underline{PHUT} . The food is sent south to \underline{APHUTA} where it is catalogued and divided for distribution across the nation (Pop. c. 34,000).

ANDURRI: Int. Rel. necropolis in the south of the HODABR-AGHTUL Massif, in the c of CHEIRA, where in 3621 RM the body of the OTHERWORLDER HAR-RSI was found. The otherworlder would go on shape the religions and governments of the area and is still worshipped to this day, in the form of the PROPHET OF THE EMPYREAN.

ANDAFAR: Sea. Bay in the east of SAMMAEA, acting as a border between the nations of PORPHYR and SABAISA. Its waters are relatively deep still rich in marine life, that is the livelihood of the many settlements that border it.

ANDARA: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the north west of THE SURRACH, close to the border with EREBETH.

ANDGAR: Rvr. River in the south west of KEPHUAAN, flowing south for 45-miles from sources in the GARDAGHIN Mountains before meeting its mouth at the BAY OF LEPHAINA.

ANDHEM: Rvr. River in the south of AZAZEM, flowing south for 130-miles from the AAORA Mountains before joining with the river TARKA.

ANDHO: Arc. Rel. Votive temple in the c of KHARKHARADONTIS, along the portion of the SHADOW MARCH known as the MARTYRS' ROAD, where those who have died along the March are taken. It is the main institution responsible for maintaining a huge necropolis that exists to the west of the March.

The caretakers of the necropolis mix the blood of the dead in with the dust of the region to make a concrete that is used to make monuments for the dead, who are buried directly in the dust. Millions of people are thought to be buried in rough rows and columns within the necropolis.

ANDHOR: 1. Rvr. River in west of THE OLD FOREST flowing for 500-miles from sources in the GAEFANG, COELIS and NELCHA Mountains before joining with its parent, the river IAGANNATH.

2. Lak. Lake along the course of the river IAGANNATH, along the border between SKAROS and ALMAGEST. Both river and lake were named for the naturalist Andhor.

3. (B. 2381 – D. 2454 RM) KORACHANI naturalist who travelled extensively throughout SAMMAEA between 2400 – 2450 RM, cataloguing the flora and fauna that he discovered.

ANDILUTH: Dem. 'Andiluthan'. Geo. Ntn. A sparsely populated region in SAMMAEA, south of the SEA OF BYSSOS, Andiluth forms part of the so-called BYSSIAN STATES. It occupies an extremely flat windswept coastal shelf that was revealed by waning sea levels. Ancient marine fossils and calcified coral forests pepper the otherwise featureless shelf that in winter falls victim to tremendous storms that wrack the land, reaching a hundred miles inland, brining waves and lightning with them. Farther south, opals are mined in small numbers, and daring itinerants search for giant pearls washed ashore by the storms.

Andiluth is made up of large cities that are united in a loose coalition of people that formed in 3106 RM. These cities are fortified against the harsh storms, where its beachcombers and their WIND-POWERED WALKERS take shelter in winter.

The people of Andiluth are proud of their ancient history, and can trace back their lineages to nomads that once roamed the foothills of the CAMMOREAN Mountains, who moved north, settling newly-revealed natural harbours, becoming fishermen, battling constantly against the great storms to maintain their cities.

Today, only the most cosseted of inlets can support permanent harbours, and even these are abandoned in winter, with their populace seeking out the refuge of its walled capital, CARDAMATHIA, and other walled cities.

Elsewhere, Andiluthan folk cling to the nomadic lifestyle of their ancestors, building light wind-powered machines that crawl along the shore, which they use to comb the coastline for flotsam washed up after storms and to help defend against aggressive giant ANDILUTHAN CRABS, which also form a major part of their diets, with large groups of people eating bonfire-cooked crab meat as part of familial celebrations. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

ANDILUTHAN CRAB: Also 'Giant Crab'. Fau. DICHAGOR that grows to about the size of a large dog or pony and resembles a normal crab. They are sometimes used to carry cargo due to their strength and hardiness. Though a dichagor, they can survive days without contact with water. Rarely, some ancient examples are encountered that are the size of AMBULANTS.

See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

ANDILUTHAN SHELF: Geo. Expansive exposed costal shelf south of the SEA OF BYSSOS that was revealed over the course of 2500-years as the sea slowly retreated. The region covers an area of around 10,000-square miles and is covered in calcified coral forests, salt flats, and the sun-bleached fossils of ancient marine life.

For the most-part it is flat and featureless, ignored by the people of ANDILUTH, and it is wracked by severe winter storms that bring waves dozens of miles inland.

ANDIRONICOS NOCTAMDE: m. Mil. Pol. His. Per. (B. 3361 – D. 3462 RM)
ALMAGESTI general who dissolved the republic in 3404 RM and formed a short-lived empire with him as emperor. Under his leadership, Almagest continued its expansionist policies and he was responsible for acquiring new lands rich in resources to the north and east.

His son Helviarn acceded the throne following Noctamde's death, but he was considered weak by his advisors and lieutenants and eventually seceded in 3475 RM without any heirs, leaving the empire in the hands of his six SENESCHALS⁽¹⁾, leading to a short period where they ruled Almagest as a hexarchy.

ANDRACHA: Mil. Set. Fortified city in the south east of LYRIDIA DHAI, along the mouth of the river HELISSOS. Though the c city of the region remains COTHON, Andracha is growing into a regional power in its own right, with the SHADOW MARCH and as well as RED ROUTE passing through it, bringing money with them (Pop. c. 23,000).

ANDRAS: 1. Geo. Valley-system just outside the crumbling city of ANDRAPHALA in the east of SABAISA.

2. Geo. once-thriving river that watered the city of $\underline{ANDRAPHALA}$ in the east of $\underline{SABAISA}$. The river dried in c. 1300 – 1350 RM, leading to the city's downfall.

ANDRAPHALA: Pol. Set. Capital city of SABAISA. It originated in c. 120 RM as the home of a caste of ATRAMENTAL seers, who served as rulers. The city was assimilated by the empire of ZOLOK as it expanded south in c. 300 RM, and the seers were exiled, believed to be a threat to the crown. The SHAPERS would flee south, and would eventually establish the city of BODARAGH, becoming the ATTESTOR caste, which would go on to rule the small empire of SATTAR ISHA.

The city had become a metropolis by 800 RM, though crumbled into obscurity by c. 1200 RM due to the inaction and ennui of its rulers and the wane of Zolok. It was later resettled in c. 1400 RM after the scion TELEANYARA APEXEIDE united the lands of the south of Sattar Isha (present-day western Sabaisa) and MENKAR (present-day eastern Sabaisa) together in 1324 RM, following the devastation wrought by the UPHEAVAL OF LETHEA, becoming the capital in 1598, following around 2 centuries of rule under the so-called twin thrones of SABAISID BANNERS (Pop. c. 897,400).

ANDRASTE: f. His. Myt. Rel. Pol. War. Per. Pseudo-historical warrior-queen common in TISARAN lore and history, dating back to c. 1200 RM in TISHANNA. She is said to have fought against AMILLAERAN^(3.) forces, ultimately helping in uniting the disparate people of the region under a single identity.

Over the years various myths and legends emerged around her, causing her true deeds to become obscured and ultimately untraceable beyond the broad information presented above.

She remained an important figure in Tishannan culture, though it was the emergence of the TISHANNAN MONARCHY that really saw her explode in popularity. Over the previous decades the merchant lords of Tishanna fostered a new reverence of the figure, elevating her to status of deity and ancestral hero, largely supplanting the ancient animistic beliefs of the native people. All this was in preparation of the marriage into the DERAEIAN monarchy in 1922 RM, by which time her importance in local culture was well-cemented, and her link with the merchant houses made it easier to justify the founding of a new royal dynasty with her as its patron.

Since then, she has been revered as a deity – patron to the people of Tisara and protector of their lands. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

ANDRASTE, CULT OF: Rel. The main religion of TISARA, which is also observed in lesser numbers in neighbouring ABATTUR. The religion emerged in TISHANNA in c. 1910 RM after years of cultural manipulation by the merchant lords of the region, who took the cultural hero ANDRASTE and commissioned art – paintings, statues, concertos and so on – in her honour, with each new piece of art deifying her deeds one step further until she had become an ubiquitous presence in Tishannan life.

The marriage of the young merchant prince TOUTAT to Princess NABIRIA of DERAEIA cemented Andraste's new guise as patron deity of Tishanna, the bride and groom as the first royals of a divinely ordained dynasty that ruled in her name.

The religion grew following this, even outlasting the neutering of Monarchy in 2513, in which the last autocratic monarch, queen SHIRAT, established a new constitution that saw the monarchy relegated to a ceremonial position, though the monarch remained as the leader of the Cult of Andraste. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

ANDRATHIS: 1. Geo. Island off the eastern coast of the PARTHISAN colony of EZHIRAYA^(2.).

ANDROMACHY: Myr. In mythology, the act of a DEMIURGE (and, in some cases, SCIONS) gaining sustenance from the worship of mortals, most commonly humans. This can take extreme forms, such as with RACHANAEL or VORROPOHAIAH, where mortals are sacrificed to sustain them. See Vol IV: the Two-and-Twenty Demiurges.

ANDROMALIA: Pol. Set. Capital city of GHROND in the c south east of $\underline{BROR}^{(1)}$ (Pop. c. 172,200).

ANEA: Rvr. The main source of the river LEAR, flowing north west from sources in SUUR'KA and RAOSI in the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER, as well as the south of the HAAGENI Mountains to the east of the city-state of RETHKA. The river flows for around 1,000-miles before it merges with the river Lear, creating the river THAUR, which flows west to the sea of ERIA.

ANEAZS: Geo. Island off the eastern coast of NOAVATUR.

ANEID KINGS: Pot. The rulers of LAASKHA following the assassination of the TYRANT OF BALAAM in 96 RM, until 1008 RM.

ANELOT: Set. City in the west of AHRISHEN. The city straddles the banks of the river NALESH, 12-miles from the coast, though it was, until c. 3000 RM, a coastal city (Pop. c. 22,000).

ANEON: 1. Sea. Strait in LLACHATUL where the two disparate lands of SKAROS are at their closest, named for the coastal settlement situated on the main Skarosian coast.

2. Dem. 'Aneonian'. Set. Coastal city in SKAROS, which dominates trade across the Aneonian strait. It began as a humble colony on the western coast and grew throughout the IMPERIAL rule of Skaros, in no small part due to the ADAMANTINE mines that came to pepper the foothills of THE BLACK MOUNTAIN, that became known as the ADAMANTI HILLS (Pop. c. 39,500).

ANEPHA: Rui. Ancient ruins in the tribal territories of DRAKAINA, in the east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER.

ANETHA: Lak. Seasonal endorheic lake formed from the confluence of various different rivers, including the HOREMARA, in the DHAUDACAA region in the c east of THETIS.

ANKER: Mil. Str. Coastal fortress in the south west of TZALLRACH, guarding entry into the BAY OF ATTAS.

ANGAK: See. Small coastal city in the west of TARTAK. It is known for its deep harbour (Pop. c. 16,200).

ANGALISH MORAD: m. Com. Pol. Per. (B. 3929 RM) One of the three TISRAHANS who rule the NACRE LEAGUE from the city of ENNERA in SIMBARA. Together with DHACHAH TRAZI and ZIHIMMAR DOS, he usurped control from the 17 councillors of the $\underline{GRAND\ HOUSES}$ during a tumultuous time following the declaration of war against $\underline{MAENMIST}$.

He is a calculating strategist, known for his cold pragmatism and unyielding ambition and his demeanour is often stoic, masking the relentless drive that fuels his every action.

ANGAR: Rui. Deserted urban area in the c south west of BA'AKH, abandoned centuries ago following the retreat of the Korachani empire from the region. It was an industrial centre and was surrounded by many mining settlements, all of which are now silent.

ANGEL FALLS: also 'Dillithan ai'. Rvr. 200-ft. high waterfall in the c of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of ALAMUT. Its waters are thought to have healing properties by Monks of THE ORDER OF MANILL, who have various monasteries in the area.

ANGEL OF CROSSROADS, the: see BASSORAH (6.).

ANGEL OF KWEI: Int. Arc. Phil. Rel. Immense ancient granite idol in the south west of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES, about 50-miles inland of the BRINE SEA. It depicts a sullen four-winged angel, its face hidden beneath a hood, its details worn by sea spray and time to indistinction. It is the centre of the Soleyn Territories' unifying philosophy and religion known as KWEI; an unknowable figure that demands constant painful atonement and punishment. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

ANGEL'S LAKE, the: Lak. Lake in KASPIA where the ANGEL TAHIRA was first seen by the PROPHETESS HULDAH. It remains a holy place to this day, guarded by the SHIEUILL.

ANGEL'S TRUMPET: Flo. A variety of nightshade plant that is known for its toxic leaves and seeds. Ingestion can lead to violent and nightmarish hallucinations. It is native to tropical regions of WESTERN SAMMAEA, where it was traditionally ingested as a tea by SHAMEN undertaking vision or repentance quests. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

ANGEL'S WING, the: Geo. Isthmus in THE HARÉSHK.

ANGELUS IV: (B. 1158 – 1314 RM) Rel. Pol. Pope of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. Elected following the death of the Heretic pope ASELIEL III in 1217 RM, he reformed the church, undoing the damage of his predecessor, whose tenure later became known as the PAPAL HERESY. With the blessing of ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR, he gifted the lands north of the RHAECHA Mountains to the DVERGAI and other fey races that were displaced by the Papal Heresy. He was canonised in 1923 RM.

ANGGRSA: Ind. Sulphur mines in the region of ANGRDUR in the west of CYHLAGHARR (Pop. c. 3,000).

ANGMEHEN: For. Large deciduous (broadleaf) forest in the north east of EASTERN LLACHATUL, dominating the south of LOEGRESS⁽¹⁾, and stretching into western KOMMEA and the north east of TETHYSIA.

It is known for its proliferation of fungi, and its many streams and small rivers, most of which are tributaries of the river KALIMM. The region is rugged, known for its verdant gorges and steep rocky terrain, though is idyllic and virginal, remaining unclaimed by MORTALS for the most part.

ANGOR: also 'the Tower of Studies'. Edu. Str. College in RHINOCOLOURA, some 10-miles outside of the capital in SARDONYX. Many scholars in the region graduated from this college, which dates back to 1153 RM, when the nation was still under KORACHANI control. A small settlement has appeared around the college to cater to the needs of its students and staff (Pop. c. 2,500).

ANGRDA: Mil. Geo. Island-fortress in the GULF OF OPHAR^(1.). Following the successes of CYHLAGHARRI attacks against OPRET that culminated in 729 RM with the razing of effectively the entire nation. The OGHURS established a port and fortress north of the plains of ENDURAGH, from where they could launch occasional culling parties and slaver raids against the remnants of the Opretian people. In 754 RM the port was severely damaged by PARTHIAN forces during the oghur war against OPHAM.

The fortress fell into disuse following an $\underline{ATRAMENTAL}$ disaster around the Cyhlagharri city of $\underline{HALGDAGGR}$ in 1008 RM, though it later became the foundations for the $\underline{AZASAOTHI}$ fortress of \underline{DASOS} .

ANGRDUR: Geo. Coastal volcanic plains in the north of SAMMAEA, forming the eastern coast of CYHLAGHARR, characterised by treacherous black basaltic and igneous coasts peppered with small volcanic cones. The region is inimical to life, the sulphuric gasses that suffuse the air there killing anything that wanders there. The Cyhlagharri treat the region as a testing ground for young champions.

ANHEDONIA: Set. City in the TWILIGHT STATES. Its people suffer from a degrading form of ennui (Pop. c. 20,000).

ANIALLA: Geo. Mountain in the north east of SAMMAEA, serving as part of the border between the UMBRA SOKHAR in the west and RHINOCOLOURA in the east.

ANILESSA: Sect. Small city in the c south west of SAGITTARIA. It is surrounded by large fields and farmlands. It forms part of the IVORY ROAD (Pop. c. 15,000).

ANIMISM: Sup. Mys. A form of SHAPING, most commonly in FIRMAMENTISM. It is prevalent the nations of TEMUJA and SAUA, where much importance is given to the ancestral spirits. See Vol IV: Spheres and types of Shaping.

ANIROT: Set. City in the c north west of ROMOREA^(2.), along the south western periphery of the VACIVA Desert. It originated as a sacred pool whose waters are known for their restorative properties. It was settled by monks in the middle FIFTH AGE and a town eventually appeared there, growing to surround the pool, with businesses catering to pilgrims, though eventually industries emerged that made use of the water. The settlement continued to grow, coming to envelop the pool with industrial machinery and structures.

Today, the pool is largely forgotten, its holy history unknown to most people of the city, with a few remnants of the old monastic order tending to its polluted and diminished waters as best they can, knowing that it will soon be consumed.

The city now controls many satellite settlements, which are major coal producers in the area (Pop. c. 36,300).

ANIS: Sea. Bay forming the far south west of the SEA OF ANIPTERRA, in the north west of SAMMAEA, off the eastern coast of the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT and ENITH.

ANIT NUR: Geo. Plains in c AHKA known to be mildly ATRAMENTALLY

ANKADO: lit. 'little Anakarra'. Set. Originally known as 'ANAKARRA DO', a settlement across the BAY OF SALTRA in VAALK, considered by most to be an extension of the capital, ANAKARRA. The settlement appeared c. 1100 RM (Pop. c. 8,000).

ANKHES: Set. Coastal settlement in the north of KHAMID (Pop. c. 14,000).

ANKILL: Set. Coastal settlement in the region of EDALLA in the far west of THE SURRACH (Pop. c. 13,000).

ANKINT: Rvr. River in the c south east of AMMESH. It flows east for 110-miles from sources in the URARAGHI and NAGHIGH Mountains before meeting its parent, the river EKYANTI at lake IKARA.

ANIPTERRA: Sca. Shallow sea serving as the western-most divide between LLACHATUL to the north and SAMMAEA to the south. To the west is the archipelago of SEPAHAUNAT and to the east is the SEA OF ORRIDA.

ANISOS: Set. Fortified city and capital of IPANAH^(2.), located in the c north west of its lands. The city is known for its large DVERG population, and also has a large number of embassies, largely belonging to the many nations that surround Ipanah (Pop. c. 289,500).

ANKYACATH: Geo. Region in the south west of ANDILUTH that is strewn with gigantic fossilised remains of extinct creatures.

ANKYLOURA: Fau. Large thick-skinned THEROPS common in rocky regions in the north of SAMMAEA, particularly CYHLAGHARR and KARAKHAS. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

ANNAL OF WORMS, the: Vol. Ancient NECROMAGIN codex detailing funerary rituals and death-lore from around ELYDEN. Extremely rare and prized, it was originally penned in KARAKHAS in c. 960 RM, and though transcribed and reproduced many times throughout history, copies remain incredibly rare.

ANNALIST: Rel. Rnl. Operatives within the EXECRATOR HOSTS of the REFORMED CHURCH OF SARASTRO, who keep records of the hunts as well as those apprehended and the judgements handed down to them. These records are then presented to the Church for inclusion in its archives.

Though most annalists are of little use in the hunt itself, many have proven vital in the gathering of information both prior to and during the hunt.

ANNALS OF THE WORLD, the: Vol. Ancient early FIFTH AGE history of the world penned by the VAALKAN explorer Raudon (later discovered to be three generations of men who bore the same name) whose travels of the western INNER SEA took him as far as the extant SURRACH (then CHEGRINT). Much of what the people of the early Fifth Age came from these accounts, including many fallacies and ignorant anecdotes, some of which persist to this day.

ANNAS: Set. Settlement between the regions of IBLIS^(1,) in the west of LYRIDIA (Pop. unknown).

ANNASACH: Mil. Fortress in the far north west of NAARETH, close to the border SUOR and ANUBIA. It is built atop a FOURTH AGE ruin, which in turn is situated atop a strange basaltic rock-formation.

ANNATTO: natural colouring derived from seeds of the ACHIOTE tree, used in the manufacture of red dye. Its most famous manufacturer the city of ABBAY in the nation of ABRAXA^(2.), where it is known as ABRAXA

ANNEAMAL: For. Ancient old growth forest that dominates the north of OPHIUSSA and extends north into the south west of GNOTH, where it merges into the forest of AEONIA in the north east. It is protected by the ORDER OF TEREBINTH, whose members tend to its old trees, ensuring their survival amid the slow wane of ELYDEN.

ANNINGIT: Set. Small coastal city in the north of the KORACHANI colony of TAVVADRA, in the north west of SAMMAEA. Its main industry is fishing (Pop. c. 13,000).

ANNIS: Set. City in the c of FARIS. It is a major producer of pelts and musk, and much of this produce is sold to merchants passing through the city while travelling along the GÂTHAN ROAD (Pop. c. 36,000).

ANNOIA: Set. City in the north east of JURRAS⁽²⁾, situated along the course of the river EURRTOS (Pop. c. 41,800).

'ANNOYING AS A LIDEAN FLY': Lan. Soc. Common saying around the INNER SEA REGION, derived from the many incessant flies that swarm over LIDEAN markets. The saying is sometimes shortened to 'Annoying as a Lidean', thought to be directed at the very persistent haggling that Lidean merchants and peddlers are known for.

ANNULLARII: Nou. 'Annullear'. Plr. 'Annullariin'. Sup. Org. Mil. Rnk. An order of SHAPERS in the KORACHANI EMPIRE, whose MINASTERIA^(2.) has been located the city of BAAYN, in LAASKHA since 2207 RM Its members are ATRAMENTAL shapers whose SPHERE of influence allows them to interact with the shaping of others, effectively nullifying or at least stymicing them.

They are able to do this through an unrivalled knowledge of the MATERIA OMNA, that is achieved through harsh training and rigorous FOCUSING^(1.), with individual sessions often lasting for days. They are probably the order of Korachani Atramentists that spend the most amount of time in Focus, often living most of their waking lives this way. This is exhausting, though it is what allows them to accomplish the acts that other shapers are incapable of.

They are most commonly found serving in law enforcement and military agencies, such as the IRON GUARDS or the SANCTIFIED ORDERS OF THE INQUISITION, who utilise them as a safeguard, preventing enemy shapers from successfully using their powers. In this regard they are similar to damping engines, but are more subtle – their abilities can be directed against a single enemy, and can be used reactively against certain acts of shaping, whilst ignoring others.

Whilst Focused^{(1.),} an Annullarii is capable of anticipating the shaping of others, seeing infinitesimal changes in the Materia Omna that presage certain acts of shaping. They can then interfere in the triggering act of shaping, altering the Materia Omna, or simply distracting the opposing shaper, causing them to lose focus and/or ATTUNEMENT. Expert Annullarii have various methods of interfering with their targets, which together increase their chances of success. They can also warp the Materia Omna around them, creating null-zones or 'shields' that cannot be influenced by other shapers, effectively keeping them safe from outside interference.

Annullarii must be well versed in all forms of shaping in order to understand what acts their targets are attempting, and they probably spend more time studying other spheres of shaping than any other shapers in Korachan, making them extremely knowledgeable individuals – and highly in demand for more than just their powers of nullification.

They can be found in the courts of rulers and diplomats, where they must stay constantly alert against hostile attacks or scrying from afar. They can work as security guards in buildings ranging from palaces and embassies, to barracks and temples, or gambling halls or anywhere where shaping would be unwanted or considered an unfair advantage.

Failed Annullarii are interred in TECHNARCANE engines such as HEART ENGINES, which they then power until their bodies are finally spent. Such engines include SARCOPHAGI. See Vol IV: Spheres and types of Shaping.

ANNUNA: Sea. Bay to the west of METHUMN, forming an extension of the SEA OF MERCUVIA.

ANNUNA TIDE: Soc. Yearly festival observed in the city of NUNAGH in the west of METHUMN. The festival celebrates the bounties of the sea and the role the tide, which is particularly high in Nunagh, plays in this. The festival ends with a ceremonial offering to the sun deity RAKETH.

ANNUR: Mil. Fortress in the region of TULLANT in the north east of THE SURRACH. It guards an ATRAMENTAL extraction facility that refines raw UMBRA and pumps it to the city of Tullant, 65-miles to the north.

ANNURO: Mil. Set. Fortified settlement in the far north west of SAUA, close to the ORCAMMOR PASS that links the region with VIRAHAN (Pop. c. 10,000).

ANOCHI: 1. His. Pol. Historical SORCERER-KINGS of KARAKHAS who worshipped the SCION KHAR'ILLAE as a deity.

2. Pol. Since c. 2400 RM the word has been used more generally as a title for a ruler, and later, governor, in the regions of KARAKHAS, KHURAUR and TARTAK.

ANOESIS: Set. Settlement in the region of CONCUPISCEA in the c north east of THE SURRACH known for its near-inaccessible hedonistic monastery in which monks seek enlightenment through carnal activities of the basest nature. Some seek out the monastery believing it to be a place of pleasure, but only the most sadistic of those who travel there leave content, if at all (Pop. c. 14,000).

ANOMOFERROH: lit. 'rust'. Geo. The rusted fields dominating the southeast of SKAROS and the west of BASSORAH⁽²⁾ are famed for their scabrous appearance and are ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED. The flaky terrain is difficult to traverse and is a mix of browns, reds and oranges, from iron ores that have oxidised on contact with the air.

The region is expansive, covering some 90,000 square-miles, and encompasses the entirety of the FARRESH Mountains and despite its inimical nature is not particularly dangerous to mortals. Metal objects brought into the region oxidise far quicker than usual, which is partially why it has been left largely uninhabited across recorded history. RUST SLUGS are also common in the area, subsisting on the oxidised metals.

The region is categorised as LEAST CONCERN by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

ANOQUARIS: (D. 1972 RM) Pol. His. Daughter of king QUESDRON, whose death in 1926 RM saw her accede the throne of KARGEMMA with her twin brother ANOQUARON. In 1929 RM they decided to divide the realm in two, and drew lots to see who would rule which portion. She became the queen of TUL KARGEMMA in the west, and ruled from the city of KARGHEMIR^(2.) until her death.

She spent her last years in mourning after her brother's death in 1959 RM and died without an heir, which saw the throne go to her cousin Battuz.

ANOQUARON: (D. 1959 RM) Pol. His. Son of king QUESDRON, whose death in 1926 RM saw him accede the throne of Kargemma with his twin sister ANOQUARIS. In 1929 RM they decided to divide the realm in two, and drew lots to see who would rule which portion. He became the king of MILL KARGEMMA in the east, and ruled from the city of LERA until his death.

His death in 1959 RM led to months of political uncertainty, with members of the court divided between those who wanted to continue the tradition established by the sovereign twins, and others who wanted a return to a single ruler. Though he died with a male heir, the issue was taken to his sister in TUL KARGEMMA, who was so distraught by her brother's death that she was unable to make a ruling, so her court acted on her behalf, choosing to reunite the two kingdoms. Anoquaris moved her throne back to Lera and ruled a reunited Kargemma from there.

ANOTAL: 1. (11,430-ft) Geo. Volcanic vent in the region of ISKIMANNA in the north of ALMAGEST. The vent is part of the geothermal network that keeps part of Almagest warm and is named after ancient god of life.

2. Dei. Ancient early FIFTH AGE god of life once common to much of the c north of LLACHATUL, in what are now ALMAGEST, KOLCHIS and ALAM BETHYL.

The god was largely forgotten by the birth of the modern age, though remains known in Almagest in a corrupted form as a spirit of heat and remains associated with the volcanic region in north of the state. It is still worshipped in some isolated parts of the far north of Alam Bethyl, though is not openly acknowledged, though worship remains strong amongst its sorcerer^(2.) caste. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

ANOTH: Ser. Settlement in the south west of the emirate of LIMOTH⁽²⁾ in Limoth^(1,). Its main industry is agriculture (Pop. c. 6,800).

 $\underline{\text{ANOTONIA}}$: Mil. Fortress on the western coast of $\underline{\text{NÁRTHEL}}$ that defends the city of $\underline{\text{NEKOR}}$.

ANQA: Fau. Leg. Sup. Gigantic bird common to the far south west of SAMMAEA, particularly ILLAKRAR, AKACHA, and ZATAUR. It was first documented in c. 3800 RM, emerging from the flames of a destroyed Akachan birthing atelier. It is unknown if sightings of the bird are of the same individual or multiple specimens, though those few who have survived their terrorizing diving attacks describe different features, indicating that there are many such creatures. The name Anqa comes from an ancient Illakraran legend of a flame-wreathed bird. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

ANSA: Pol. Set. Capital city in the SOLEYN TERRITORIES. It became capital following the EXECUTION of the demon sultan AMENABAST by the first MAHANTKHAI, RAHANKHEN I, in 1328 RM (Pop. c. 1,000,000).

ANSAN: Set. Small city in the c north east of KULIGALA, in the east of the CARCHEMISHI PENINSULA (1.), in the east of SAMMAEA (Pop. c. 14,600).

ANSER: Set. Small coastal settlement in the c of ARKOS^(1.), overlooking the SEA OF ERIA (Pop. c. 2,400).

ANSORAH: Set. Coastal settlement in the south west of EZASUH⁽²⁾ (Pop. c. 4,500)

ANTABARR: Geo. Ntn. Small island-nation in the SEA OF BATYAE, off the western coast of SAMMAEA. The island is noted for its natural harbours and the sea trade that passes through them. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

ANTARA: Set. Settlement in the south east of TAMAR known for its saffron fields. Its produce is sold at great profit to merchants travelling along the GREAT ROAD trade-route (Pop. c. 5,000).

ANTARES, NOMARCH OF THE WEST PLAINS: (B. 3976 RM) Mil. Champion and NOMARCH of the western territories of TZALLRACH.

ANTASMORA: Set. City in the c of GREST^(1,) in the island-continent of BROR^(1,) along the course of the river HITULA. It is believed to be a metropolis though its people are secretive and unaccommodating to foreigners (Pop. unknown).

ANTENA: Geo. Mountain in the c west of ALTHA⁽²⁾, forming an extension of the larger BELLEPHARA Mountains.

ANTENAS: Geo. Plains that dominate the north of METHUMN, though they were much smaller for much of the FIFTH AGE, when the BAY OF LRITHA extended as much as 400-miles farther east, serving as a barrier between the Antenas plains in the south and the THIOPHOSS savannah in the north.

ANTENITH: Set Settlement in the c of ALTHA⁽²⁾. Its main industry is agriculture, and it a major source of food for the capital of DALATH⁽²⁾ (Pop. c. 5,000).

ANTENOR: Pol. PATRICIAN HOUSE that controls the most perfumeries in KORACHANI-controlled LLACHATUL. See Vol II: Patrician Houses. ANTEVALLA: Rvr. River in the west of AMMESH, flowing for 350-miles from sources in the LORAGHI and LARAPH Mountains, before emptying in the BAY OF LEPHET.

ANTHAR: Geo. Large desert in the south west of SAMMAEA, in the north of the AMMASHI^(1,1) peninsula, along the TROPIC OF MAOCARHL. It is around 165,000 square-miles in area and crosses the border between METHUMN in the west and PHYRR in the east and is largely barren, ignored by both lands.

ANTHEDAMIUS OF LARACE: m. Int. Mys. His. (D. 2744 RM) Infamous MYSTIC from the city of LARACE in SKAROS who enjoyed a few years of mild celebrity between 2721 – 2723 RM when some of his many predictions became publicly known, though when nothing came of them, the public turned against him, and he became a figure of ridicule. He eventually died in anonymity and penniless, and his skull was placed in a FUNERARY TOWER and his body appropriated for use in DROSS manufacture, as is customary in the KORACHANI EMPIRE.

His skull was taken from the funerary tower soon after his death and later changed hands multiple times, moving to various places across the empire, even being taken to the SEPULCHRAL PALACE by pilgrims in 2980 RM before being taken back to the HEARTLAND.

Centuries after his death, historians found a complete collection of his writings, which by then had been forgotten, and they were able to retroactively match them to certain historic events, all of which were relate to the general whereabouts of his skull at the time. This brought about a renewed interest in his works, and he is still remembered to this day in various OCCULTIST circles around the empire.

The whereabouts of the skull are now unknown.

ANTHER: Fau. Gigantic long-necked herbivorous THEROPS native to temperate-cool areas of LLACHATUL, primarily RAONGEN^(2.), GNOTH, THE OLD FOREST, and MALAN. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

ANTHIRQA: Set. Small city in the east of the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT in the north west of SAMMAEA (Pop. c. 6,500).

ANTHROPEIDOS: 1. Plr. 'anthropeidi'. Lan. Old KORACHANI word for HALFBLOODS. It has fallen out of favour in recent decades with the widespread usage of MOEMAGNUS. It remains popular in many academic circles, where it is used to describe any creature (not just halfbloods) born of divine blood, including SCIONS.

2. also 'the Halfblood'. Ast. Con. Constellation in the NORTHERN HEMISPHERE. See Vol II: Constellations.

ANTHROPEIDOS CRUSADES, the: see CRUSADES, ANTHROPEIDOS.

ANTHROPODERMY: Soc. The practice of binding books in human skin. Though rare, this activity has been recorded in various regions across ELYDEN, most notably KARAKHAS, in SAMMAEA. It was most commonly used in the creation of mystical or religious texts, many of which were devoted to the DEMIURGE KHARANI or the SCION KHAR'ILLAE. The AETHIOSI city of APHAERNA is famed for its collection of ancient books bound in human skin. Their origins are unknown and the script within them is also unknown.

ANTHUG: Str. Forced-labour camp and prison in the c north of PERGOST, along a lower peak of the DANTIS Mountains.

ANTIA: Ind. Set. Once a prosperous shipyard with large hostels and scrap merchants, Antia was one of the first settlements affected by the silting of the STRAIT OF NÁRTHEL.

Its shipyards were abandoned by their PATRICIAN benefactors and it dwindled in size until it was almost abandoned by c. 3880 RM. Today it is recognised for the small PATRICIAN HOUSE whose workers collect salt from nearby lakes and sell it to the south. (Pop. c. 2,800).

ANTIANE: Mil. Fort system in the south east of EREBETH close to the braided river of NURIA.

ANTILLIA: (10,210-ft.) Geo. Volcano in the far west of the ADDEN highlands in the south east of the DESOLATION OF ASTUDAN. The volcano last erupted in 3706 RM, dislodging thousands of people from both AHRISHEN and CARCERI below, with many refugees adding to the population of STYGA to the south west.

The volcano was named by the explorer and geologist VISOGH after his hometown of ANTILLIUM. Pyroclastic flows leading east from the volcano survive to this day, as do the lava flows, from which new flora has begun to appear.

ANTILLIUM: Set. River-side city in RHAMIA, controlling trade up-and-down the river ITHISH to the city of DREJIKAH at its mouth in the north of the SEA OF PROPONTIS (Pop. c. 16,000).

ANTIS: Ind. Set. MANUFACTORY city on the northern-edge of GAUGMOTHA, in the c east of VAALK, along the north western shore of lake TAASH (40,000).

ANTIUM: Rel. Monastery in the c north of AZAZEM. It is famed as the repository of the relic known as the TRIPTYCH OF ANTIUM.

ANTIUS: Set. Settlement in the plains of SARGOTH in the c of KARAKHAS. It is a major producer of food, with its volcanic soil known for its fertility (Pop. c. 4,400).

ANTORRES: Ind. Soc. KORACHANI PATRICIAN HOUSE with a background in engineering and innovating TECHNARCANA. It is most famed for having secured a contract in 3873 RM that make it the exclusive provider of technarcane sarcophagi to the Korachani government. Today all the SARCOPHAGI used on government buildings are made in the House manufactories in ZEPHANICHAN. This has given the house a great deal of wealth and influence within Korachan, with it having a permanent seat in the LEAGUE OF PATRICIANS. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

ANUAES: Set. Settlement in the west of TISARA, along the course of the river AXOIHA (Pop. c. 8,000).

ANUAT ANI: (6,830-ft.) Geo. Volcano in the south of the island of HAR JAKALL, in the north of SEPAHAUNAT. It is active, with lava flows restricted to the southern-face of the VULTAMAAN Mountains.

ANUBATRA: Set. Fortified city in the north of TARATI^(1.). It is the northern-most major city in the region, and trades north with VENTHIR, its parent-state, via the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 43,000).

ANUBIA: also 'the Caliphate of Anubia'. Ntn. Dem. 'Anubian'. Desert nation in the north east of EASTERN SAMMAEA, to the south of VENTHIR, east of SARASTRO, and west of SARAGOS. The vast area is populated by a culturally-linked people, known as KHERI, who share with each other little in the form of a unifying government, save the major city of ANUBIS, which exerts a degree of influence in the north east.

Anubians are dark skinned nomads who traditionally moved their herds from oasis to oasis, living off the land in familial sects, each led by a $\underline{\text{HOUGAN}}$ (spirit-master). The shadow of a common ancestry hangs over the people of this land. Known as the $\underline{\text{LOST ONES}}$, their kingdom disappeared in c. –200 RM and very little is now known of them. The Anubians are thought to know more, but they are reticent of sharing their history with others. It is thought by some that the ancient $\underline{\text{STONE CIRCLES}}$ that are common in the deserts of Anubia were erected by the Lost Ones.

Relatively few permanent settlements exist in Anubia, and those that do are usually centred around the arable lands in the far north and south west, which are largely cut off from each other, save for the occasional caravans that brave the deserts. The central desert, which stretches for over 1,600-miles to the south east to the border with Saragos and NAARETH, is the main feature of Anubia, and the largest stretch of it is known as the MOLACHARI DESERT, after the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR. It is a wasteland that covers over 750,000-square-miles and dominates the landscape of Anubia.

The region is united by its worship of what outsiders have come to call $\underline{MKISIH\ IDOLS}$ – creatures that were artificially created in $\underline{ATELIERS}$ in the west of $\underline{VENTHIR}$ and escaped, now roaming the deserts of Anubia, otherwise known as $\underline{MKISIHS}.$ It is thought that the religion is based on an older religion (possibly belonging to the Lost Ones), that became corrupted when desert nomads first encountered the escaped mkisihs. In some cases, the creatures have been captured and imprisoned in great stone temples, forced to witness the adulation of the Anubians. Upon death they are mummified, their bodies gilded, becoming idols that continue to be worshipped. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

ANUBIAN DESERT: see ANUBIA.

ANUBIAN STONE CIRCLE: Soc. Str. ANUBIA is famed for its sandstone circles, which dominate its eastern-most lands, reaching as far north west as the MOLACHARI DESERT and the hills of AHRA. The origins of the circles are unknown, as are their creators, but it is thought that they date back to the early FIFTH AGE, or possibly earlier. Though some have postulated that they may have belonged to the LOST ONES (ancestors of the Anubians), this is merely conjecture.

The circles are normally comprised of around a dozen (commonly 13) upright menhirs of greyish–red sandstone. Though they are today rounded and pitted by the elements, it is thought that they were once geometric in design. The discovery of a well-preserved circle around 50-mile south west of the settlement of APIS in 3349 RM revealed that a surface that is covered in intricate LITHOGLYPHS, with sun motifs. It is now thought that most, if not all such circles also bore similar markings, making some scholars think that they are religious in nature, dedicated to an unremembered sun-cult.

No less than 32 specific circles have been identified, almost all of them hidden or buried beneath the sands of the Molachari desert. Many are badly damaged, though all bear the same traits mentioned above. They are typically ignored by Anubian nomads, though have been chosen as sites to Set. up camp, with awnings attached to the stone menhirs, which may be damaged in the process.

ANUBAIN: Mor. Nomads of ANUBIA. See Vol II: the Nomads of Elyden.

ANUBIS: Set. Wealthy city-state in the far north of ANUBIA. It is the only major city in all of Anubia and the influence of its merchant-lords is felt far and wide across the RED ROUTE, for it is their caravans that bring trade to the other far-flung cities of the nation. It is known for its salt mines and resin pottery that is made from hardy endemic desert pines cultivated outside the city in expansive groves.

The city is controlled by the ABYSSAL TEMPLARS, who fund many of the merchant-houses found throughout the city. It is also a centre for SHADOW DANCER activity, and those with positions of power in the city are constantly wary of becoming a target to their blades (Pop. c. 310,000).

ANUES: Geo. Island off the south western coast of WESTERN SAMMAEA, to the north of AEONAS.

ANULESS: Geo. Spectacular geothermal geyser in the region of BEGAPHILIA, close to lake SEHUTH, in the west of the HENDECARCHY of HATON in the north of MALAN. It is known for its periodical eruptions, that usually occur on a cycle of roughly 18-days.

ANUNNIT: Set. Settlement in the east of SARASTRO along the confluence of the river UBAVVAN and its parent, the river SOLONA. It forms a part of the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 7,100).

ANUTU: Set. Settlement in the east of VENTHIR, along the course of the river MAPHANI⁽²⁾ (Pop. c. 12,000).

ANUSHEN: Set. Settlement on the island of USASAAR in the KORACHANI colony of TAVVADRA off the north western coast of SAMMAEA. Its main industry is the mining of phosphates (Pop. c. 6,500).

ANUSHEN I: (B. 1002 – D. 1090 RM) Pol. His. Daughter of USHEN I, the first king of the AMNICIAN DYNASTY in AHRISHEN. She began a matrilineal tradition that lased throughout the near six-century dominance of the Dynasty. Her rule was long and prosperous, and like her father, she concentrated on coastal defences, strengthening Ahrishen against pirates and slavers.

ANVOR: Set. Small city in the south east of VARR (Pop. c. 12,800).

ANYA: Pol. North eastern province of PORPHYR, in the south east of EASTERN SAMMAEA.

AO: Phil. Rel. Soc. The people of PARTHIS value empirical reasoning and observation, seeing them as the epitome of MORTALKIND'S quest for unbiased knowledge, and an end to enlightenment rather than simply a means. As such, in their pursuit of ultimate enlightenment they have anthropomorphised these tenets – empiricism and rationalism, amongst others – into a form of final enlightenment known simply as Ao. Similar to GNOTHI MYSTICISM, it is a philosophy that maintains that mortals should strive to seek knowledge as a means of elevating them above the beasts and fauna that surround them.

Ao is not a deity – Parthis remains secular, with most of its people being atheistic, refuting the divinity of the deities that are worshipped by other peoples. Indeed, most Parthisans see deities and the religions that surround them as a relic of ancient times when mortals, young and ignorant as to the physical laws of the world, sought to clothe major phenomena in mortal emotions as a way of explaining them. Ao is antithetical to this and represents the endeavour of empirical knowledge, with the ultimate goal, un attainable as it is, of absolute knowledge.

Many outsiders ignorant of the social and cultural significance of Ao misinterpret it as a deity, though most Parthisans would be adamant in their argument that it is merely a personification of gnosis.

AOGILI: Rvr. River in the c of RAONGEN^(2.), flowing north east for some 325-miles from sources in the ERIVOINE Mountains, before meeting the western shore of lake TAHONG.

AONIA: Pol. Sixth of the HENDECARCHIES of the FOREST KINGDOMS, located in the north west of MALAN. Its capital is the city of MELIBODHA, and it is ruled by the HENDECARCH PHARANDEAL TANUIT.

It borders eastern \underline{SAUA} and the south east of \underline{TEMUIA} , and has political and economic relations with both. The $\underline{OGSUASU}$ is the national animal of Aonia, and the Kingdom is renowned for the $\underline{HELIX\ TREES}$ that dominate much of its territories.

AORABANT: 1. Geo. Region in the c east of THE SURRACH. Its controlling city is IREEB.

2. Set. Settlement in the c of THE SURRACH, along the shores of lake ZARAZESH. Its primary industry is the collection of mineral-rich mud from the shores of the lake, which is used in pottery as well as cosmetic products that are used across the Surrach (Pop. c. 12,000).

AORAYAN: Set. City in the south west of RAONGEN (2.), close to the delta of the river SO AORA. (Pop. c. 40,000).

AOSODATH: See. City in the north east of TAHALL. It is a major link along the course of THE WAY trade-route (Pop. c. 35,000).

AOUAK: Ind. Set. Small city in the south of THETIS. It was originally a coastal city, but by c. 1200 RM the coastline of the KAT ENNA had retreated, leaving it landlocked, after which it slowly waned. It has since become a centre of industry, and its population is growing as manufactories appear, requiring more workers. (Pop. c. 14,800).

APACHAS: also 'Apachas Basin'. Geo. Plains dominating the north of KEPHUAAN. The plains from an endorheic basin and are sparsely populated by MORTALS, though are home to a varied ecosystem.

APAHKA: Set. Settlement in the south of AHKA, abandoned in 3999 RM after the death of a KORACHANI shaper caused the destruction of much of the administrative portion of the city. Subsequent attacks by Korachan levelled most of the city, and it remains a ruin to this day, with most of its populace either drafted into the war-effort or forced north.

APAN: Lake in the south of AHKA fed by the river ALANAD.

APAR: Lak. Lake in the east of LAASKHA, in the east hills of the ARCANTHEA Mountain along the course of the river PARRAN.

APARAL: 1. Geo. Island in the south of the EDECHOL Island-chain.

2. Mil. Coastal fortress on the eponymous island. The fortress controls part of the HOLOLACHI^(1.) fleet, which patrols the waters of the INNER SEA and the MARDEN, with an eye towards combating the threat of CYHLAGHARRI piracy in the region.

APARTH: Geo. Upland region along the south east coast of PARTHIS, acting as the northern coast of the STRAIT OF GATH.

APARI: Ind. Set. Gold-mining boom-town in the badlands of ULLUÍANNA in the west of TRAKIA. The settlement appeared in c. 3940 RM and gold production in the area is already waning, leading to the slow diminishing of the settlement (Pop. c. 8,000).

APARRA: Set. City in the c of SUOR, along the course of the river ISH HABBAR (Pop. c. 30,000).

APASHNU AHAN SAT IV, IBAS APASHIN EN' ANUBIA: (B. 3936 RM) Pol. Current ruler of the Caliphate of ANUBIA.

APASTRONIC CONGRESS: Org. Underground organisation based in the city of MAKHARA in KORACHAN that seeks to keep OTHERWORLDERS out of political and civil events. Some extremists just want to eradicate otherworlders and HALFBLOODS and fund fanatical gangs that scour the nation, persecuting otherworlders.

It is thought that these extremists are secretly supported by the CONCORDANTIST ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION, we fear the potential otherworlders have to upset the established status quo within the EMPIRE.

APATIS: Geo. Salt badlands region south east of the ZAHARAN DESERT in the west of VALA, in MENISCEA. The entire area is renowned for its rocky clusters of glass-like minerals. Of little-known worth, these formations reflect the already harsh light of the sub-tropical region across the salt-flats that surround it, making it blinding to most mortals. As a result, travel through it is rare.

APAZETTO: Pol. Soc. Bus. PATRICIAN HOUSE based on the island of LINDESS in the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS. It is known for its typewriters, which it has been making for many centuries, and it is amongst the most renowned names in typewriter production. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

APENATI: Rvr. River flowing west for over 500-miles from sources in the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER, before meeting its parent, the river RASELETH, at lake EMAHOM, in the plains of AROMUR.

APENTIS: Lan. KORACHANI word, its roots LAASKHAN, roughly translated as a penthouse. These are common residences for the PATRICIANS who live in imperial cities, particularly those who reside in high buildings.

APEX: PIr. 'apices'. Sup. Pol. Rnk. The 144 administrative FIRMAMENTISTS of the RHEAN government; who stand beneath the ABIMELECH. Wealthy land-owners, they wield great power and are recognised for their ostentatious clothes (they are renowned for the wooden wings they wear on their backs). Many apices devote their lives outside of their duties to the pursual of SHAPING, and many amongst them return to Rhea as OTHERWORLDERS; their mortal bodies relocated to the KENOTAPHO, in the west of Rhea.

APEXAUR: Fau. Carnivorous THEROPS, around the size of a horse, though possessing a large heavy tail and crocodile-like mouth. They are native to the north of Sammaea, and are most-seen today THE SURRACH and VAALK, though are sometimes seen as far east as BA'AKH and SUMA'YA. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

APHAALK: Geo. Hilly dry scrubland region in the c of VAALK, forming the 'neck' that connects the north of the nation to the east. It is a known refuge of AL GHUL and passage across it is dangerous.

APHAEN: Mil. Fortress in the far north of AETHIOS, that is built atop a ruined fort that once formed part of the APHAENI WALL that was built in c. 2950 RM to defend against KORACHANI attacks from the north.

APHAENI WALL: Rui. Wall in the north of AETHIOS, constructed in c 2950 RM following the declaration of war on Aethios by KORACHAN in the wake of the construction of the DAM OF AESAPIA. Though helpful in the defence against Korachan, the wall now lies in ruins, most of it reduced to rubble and dust.

APHAERNA: Set. City in the east of AETHIOS, in the south of the plains of ACTANORS. Like many settlements in the region, it is known for its large herds of AUROCHS. It is also known for its library of ancient books, many of which are bound in human flesh. The script in the books is unknown, and their origins are likewise a mystery (Pop. c. 32,000).

APHALASS: Set. city and religious centre in OPHIUSSA. The city falls under a harsh theocratic government that advocates large rituals and masses in the name of its religion (Pop. c. 95,000).

APHELIA: Geo. Extensive cave-system to the west of the GAEFANG Mountain The system is over 5-miles long and contains no less than five large limestone chambers, believed to be created through water erosion by the river NAHLA.

APHIENU: Geo. Rocky hills dominating the far western coast of RAONGEN^(2,).

APHOAD: Mil. Str. Fortress in the east of ALMAGEST, guarding the border with the OLD FOREST.

APHORA: Set. Settlement in the c north of AHRISHEN. Its main industry is iron mining (Pop. c. 6,200).

APHOTIC SEA, the: See APHOTIS.

APHOTIS: also 'the Aphotic Sea'. Sea. Sea to the north of the STRAIT OF SKAROS. Currents flowing north along the SKAROSIAN coast bring with them filth and other debris from THE INNER SEA into the Aphotis, where it remains even as the currents turn west and south down the CLOUDY COAST. To the north of Aphotis is another, smaller sea, ADUM, while the SEKHEM is found to the north east, where it leads north in a narrow cleft to KOLCHIS.

APHRAS, TEMPLE OF: Rel. Str. Ancient temple in the city of TUALAR, in the south of PARTHIS, that in 3648 RM was restored and converted into a museum of ancient religions. Its warehouses are said to contain ancient religious artefacts and knowledge that has been forbidden by many leaders across ELYDEN.

APHRASIA: Med. Paralysis of the vocal cords caused by the drug APHRASIC.

APHRASIC: Dru. Drug that renders the imbiber speechless, temporarily paralysing the vocal cords. The condition is referred to as APHRASIA. The drug is commonly produced in the settlement of MODANA in the east of SARASTRO, and is used largely illicitly by assassins, rather than as a recreational drug. See Vol II: Drugs and Addictions.

APHUTA: Set. Large city and capital of the socialist nation of PHUT. The city is dominated by a large port and harbour, which are the nation's only sea-route to other regions. It is also a major stop along the BROKERS' ROAD trade route (Pop. c. 320,000).

APHTHA: also 'the Silent City'. Set. Isolated mountain settlement in the c of TEMUJA, just south east of the LIP OF ALLIS. It is known as the home of ascetic FIRMAMENTISTS who eschew the act of SHAPING in favour of a study of its theories and philosophies. The city is also home to many monks of THE SILENT WORD, which is possibly responsible for its common name (Pop. c. 13,000).

APINAR: Set. Major city in the SIX CITIES region in the west of THE SURRACH, in the north west of SAMMAEA. Built on the ruins of the fallen capital of AHINA, Apinar is fertile, even by the standards of the Six Cities, and is surrounded by the APINE forest. Travel into and out of its satellite settlements is regulated and foreigners are rarely accepted there (Pop. c. 32,000).

APINE: 1. Rvr. River in the SIX CITIES region in the west of THE SURRACH in north western SAMMAEA.

2. For. Forest in the $\underline{\text{SIX CITIES}}$ region in the west of $\underline{\text{THE SURRACH}}$ in the north west of $\underline{\text{SAMMAEA}}$. The forest largely consists of olives, carobs, cypresses and blackbarks, which all thrive there.

APIS: Set. Oas. Oasis town in the c north east of ANUBIA, in the north of the MOLACHARI DESERT known for its MANTRA riders (Pop. c. 13,000).

APITU: Mil. Fortress in the far east of KHAMID, overlooking the border with MALAN. It forms a part of the route of the GREAT ROAD.

APLI: 1. Nm. Dem. 'Apli'. Nation and people that dominated the south of BROR. (1.) from the SEA OF AHAGGAD. (1.) in the west, to the EKEDDA in the east. They are thought to have arisen sometime in the latter part of the first millennium of the FOURTH AGE, and survived until c. 3100 RM, when they fragmented, following a gigantic ATRAMENTAL calamity that occurred in 2802 RM, as witnessed by the NOAVATURI explorer SUHRSIP. The same calamity is also thought to have destroyed the nation of TIAMOLDOR.

Later exploration revealed a land depleted of natural resources, devastated by the event, its terrain corrupted and all life – flora and fauna – altered beyond recognition. Today, the waning nation of CREPISCULA continues its ancestors' Atramental traditions.

2. Rui. The ruined capital city of the eponymous nation. At the time of its founding, the city was a coastal area, though the ATRAMENTAL disaster that destroyed it, and the later diminishing of the sea, has now left it some miles from the coast. At its height it was a thriving metropolis, its ships dominating trade across the SEA OF SAMMAIDU.

APLIS: Geo. Desert in the east of the Nation of BROR ^(2.), in the c north of the eponymous continent, home to the aberrant deity SHIBARITH and its followers. The region is known for intense FIRMAMENTAL storms that batter the thoughts of those caught in them, leaving them as babbling wretches after little more than an hour of exposure.

Despite the name, there is no link between the Aplis desert in the north and the similarly-named APLI wasteland in the south of Bror, and the similarities in name are likely due to etymological similarities, with both names being derived from an ancient word for desert.

APNUT: Geo. Large escarpment in IPANAH⁽²⁾, dividing the region in two.
APOCALAMA: Sec. Fortified settlement in the region of BETAHAL in the north of THE SURRACH. The city is perched atop a steep rise in the north of the \underline{STUL} massif and is well-fortified against attack and was known in the past for its heroic sallies (Pop. c. 14,000).

APOCHAN: 1. Geo. Island off the north western coast of ALMAGEST, in the SEA OF SEKHEM. The Island was once a prison for political prisoners and dissenters though has since been converted to a fortress.

2. Mil. Fortress and military harbour on the eponymous island.

APOCHRYS: Set. Coastal settlement in the c-south east of GNOTH, along the cliffs of SEGATAYA. It is known for its harbour and book presses (Pop. c. 4.800).

APOCRYPHA OF SOSTIS: Vol. Rel. Apocryphal texts found near the settlement of SOSTIS in the south of SKAROS, attributed to the early teachings of the prophet of RACHANAEL, MAGHAN, who predated the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR'S dissemination of the word of Rachanael by some ten years. Since Malichar's rise to power and the spread of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, the Apocrypha of Sostis has been declared false, all known instances of it destroyed.

APOCRYPHA TECHNARCANA: Vol. Unearthed in a dry well outside DIMASHK in LAASKHA 3903 RM, the steel-paged acid-etched writings of this great codex date back to the third century RM, and devote a great deal of space to a controversial history of technarcana and the birth of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE in the KORACHANI EMPIRE. Historians claim that the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR had many cults and sects of the then-new CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE excommunicated around the same time that the codex is said to have been written. This is possibly a remnant of those teachings.

The codex is kept under lock and key in the crypts of the $\underline{\text{BASTION OF}}$ $\underline{\text{STEEL}}$ in $\underline{\text{KHADON}}$, where none are allowed to read it, not even the $\underline{\text{PRIMATE MAGNUS}}$ of the $\underline{\text{CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE}}$.

APOCRYPHAL WAR, the: His. Purported war that many history books claim to have been fought between MIRALUL and OSSIEL in c. 2100 RM, and which Ossiel lost, but which is now thought to have been little more than Miraluli propaganda to explain natural disasters that struck Ossiel around that time

APOGRAPHER: Pol. Rnk. Tax collectors within the KORACHANI EMPIRE, recognised by the tattoo of a seven-pronged circle they carry on their left hands.

APOPHIS: Myt. Tec. In the myth surrounding TECHNARCANE studies in the KORACHANI EMPIRE, the so-called heart of the ATRAMENTA in the MATERIAL PLANE. It is the centremost point of the region known as the ABYSMAL MARROW in BLACK FOUNTAIN and can only be described as the absence of light, warmth, and matter. It is the most inhospitable part of the PENUMBRA, and is comparable to the MAAT of the MENISCUS. See Vol IV: the Materia Omna.

APOSTATE WARS: His. Major civil war that engulfed the region of present-day IO between -192 and -128 RM. The war is attributed to the growing differences between sects of the cult of THE VOID, with each city in the region developing its own sect, (and sometimes more), many of which came to differ wildly from each other. In particular was the disparity between the wealthy and the poor; the latter of which seemed to be the only ones constrained by the austere tenets of the religion. By c. -250 RM certain cults began to clash in the city of GARAP, heralding a time of unease in Io. In response, the IONIC HIERARCHS instated harsher laws in -233 RM, though these only punished the weak and disenfranchised. This precipitated a diaspora of faith, with hundreds choosing to ignore the Void, turning to other religions (including that of SHAMAR, which was still strong in the east of Io at the time), with others following the dogma of the so-called VOID APOSTATES that appeared at the centre of the various sects of the Void.

This continued until -192 RM, when tensions had escalated to a point that they could no longer be contained. An army of agnostic protestors stormed the palaces of the Hierarchs in Garap, their actions culminating in a city-wide battle that left Garap ruined, half-burnt, its GOLEM destroyed. Though the agnostics were defeated, they had managed to slay the majority of the Hierarchs, leaving the nation in chaos. The remaining Ionic Hierarchs turned against one another as they tried to restore order to the nation. As word of the fall of Garap spread across Io, other cities fell to disorder and war eventually claimed the nation with cities defecting and claiming independence.

Trade and traffic between such cities lessened and by c. -150 RM the region was sundered into as many as a dozen disparate duchies and city-states, each clinging to its own warped vision of the Void, their Void Apostates attacking each other in hollow holy wars. In the north, SALOROC and SCYTHEA became militocracies, their forces preying on the weak states to the south, destroying DIAKONIK temples without their own borders.

The city-state of BAESHA attacked Saloroc in -128 RM in an effort to end its predations. It succeeded in defeating the government of the city, and took amongst the spoils of war the city's golem south to Baesha. Its military and political superiority came to influence the surrounding cities, many of which became its vassals or allies. Baesha's victories against Saloroc ended the so-called Apostate Wars, and managed to bring a semblance of order to the region once more, uniting the disparate cities into a nation once more.

APOSTATE POPE: see DOMNENA III.

APOSTATE POPE, REIGN OF THE: His. Historical period in the KORACHANIEMPIRE, between 3802 – 3814 RM, following the election of ARCHBISHOP DOMNENA III to ARCHBISHOP MAGNUS. He moved the centre of the church from KHADON to his home of HELLOS, in PELASGOS and declared himself Pope, a title that disregarded close to 4 millennia of doctrine, placing himself above the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR.

From there he enacted radical reforms to the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, leading to the birth of a splinter sect that fractured the church. Fearing a repeat of the <a href="SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE, which saw the Church splinter into two (with the REFORMED CHURCH OF SARASTRO officially formed in ARGEA 3821 RM), the COUNCIL OF SEVEN moved to have the Archbishop Magnus removed from power.

Domnena III proved to be tenacious and incredibly difficult to kill and he wreaked havoc across Korachan, and by the time of his assassination in 3814 RM, his cult had spread beyond SOUTHERN PELASGOS to neighbouring lands.

It took the Church of the Undying Machine many years to quell the spread of the cult and to restore order to the institution and the empire itself.

APOSTLE OF THE ENGINE: Rel. Rank within the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, head of the order of the EXOCRINES and ENDOCRINES, based in the CATHEDRAL OF IRON AND SHADOW, in KHADON.

APOSTLE OF THE RELIQUARY: Rel. Rnk. Within THE CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, head of the order of ICONODULES, who travelled the KORACHANI EMPIRE with reliquaries of saints and OTHERWORLDERS.

APOTEGA: Set. Fortified settlement in the east of ALMAGEST, in the far south east of the HRIDAN DUSTSTONE formation overlooking SHOTHA. Its primary industry is the quarrying of duststone, which is ground into grit and used across Almagest to 'salt' snow. More recently it has become a centre of trade with Shotha and, through that contact, the east, and is slowly growing into a centre of mercancy (Pop. c. 26,000).

APOTROPE: Lan. KORACHANI name for a form of OTHERWORLDER said to ward off evil. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

APOTROPIC WARD: Obj. Necklace used throughout the KORACHANI EMPIRE, supposedly to ward off evil. Such wards commonly take the form of swords and thrones, as well as images depicting saints and other figures of importance within the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE.

APPLEHIVE: Flo. Cui. The fruit of a tree common to mildly FIRMAMENTALLY-TOUCHED regions in CENTRAL and EASTERN LLACHATUL, particularly in MALAN.

A specialised variety of bee known as the APPLEHIVE BEE is attracted to the small fruitlets that emerge in the weeks after the tree's flowers have been pollinated by other bees. They build hives around the fruitlets, which expand alongside the fruit as it grows. The bees eat the flesh of the growing fruit and replace it with honey, which is thicker than normal honey and of a pale orange/green colour. The hive is abandoned at the end of winter and is either eaten by wildlife or drops to the ground, and its seeds, which survive the appearance of the hive are dispersed, allowing the applehive trees to spread. In many cases the abandoned applehives are cultivated by mortals who consider them a delicacy, particularly in

The fruit itself is naturally bitter and in its natural form (without a hive growing around it) resembles a small unripened apple, but it is more commonly seen in the wild with a hive around it, which gives it a heady sweet taste and its distinctive pineapple-like appearance.

APPLEHIVE BEE: Fau. Specialised bees that subsist parasitically on the APPLEHIVE fruit, found in FIRMAMENTAL regions of MALAN and other temperate parts of northern CENTRAL and EASTERN LLACHATUL.

The bees form a small hive that envelops the fruitling during its first weeks of growth, and the bees eat its flesh as it grows, replacing it with honey, which keeps the core of the fruit alive. The hive is centred around a queen and workers, and it survives for around a year. The queen swarms at the end of winter, leaving the hive with a handful of drones and workers in search of a new fruitlet, where they start a new colony. The old colony eventually dies and is either eaten by wildlife or drops to the ground, with the seeds eventually dispersing, allowing for the propagation of the tree over time. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

APRODDA: Geo. Sparse lowland forest in the north of SAGITTARIA.

APROSA: Ind. Set. Granite-mining settlement in the c north west of $\underline{IZABAL}^{(1.)}$ (Pop. c. 9,000).

APSELLUS MESANIN: m. (D. 3168 RM) Edu. Per. ALMAGESTI botanist who travelled extensively across ELYDEN cataloguing the flora and fauna he discovered. The MESANIN GOLIATH, a giant ficus in the city of ALMAGEST, was planted by him over 800-years ago and thrived to this day despite the inimical climate.

APSIS: PIr. 'apses'. Cal. Amongst cultures with a lunar-based calendar, the lunar apsis is seen as an important event, comparable with solar equinoxes and solstices. The practice of marking the lunar apses was common amongst the Neolithic cultures of the INNER SEA, as well as currently in PELASGOS, LYRIDIA, SARASTRO, and IO with regards to the IVORY MOON (the WHITE CALENDAR); and BA'AKH, KARAKHAS, parts of KHARKHARADONTIS, LAASKHA, and VAALK with regards to the BLOOD MOON (the RED CALENDAR); and MALAN, in the case of both. See Vol II: Month and Lunar Cycle in Elyden.

APTELL: Set. Settlement in the c of AHRISHEN, along the northern shore of lake CYIDA. Its main industry is the cultivation of reeds (Pop. c. 5,200).

APTER: Rvr. River flowing south east for 200-miles from sources south of the BAND Mountains before emptying into the SEA OF SAECULA.

APTERIA: Set. Coastal city in ALMAGESTI territories in HORSCH. It controls the narrowest stretch across the SEA OF SAECULA between Almagest and Horsch, and pipes raw UMBRA from the SIPHON sites in MORARA, to the west, across the strait to the CITY OF ALMAGEST about 120-miles distant (Pop. c. 286,000).

APTHERA: Set. Small city in the c-south east of THETIS (Pop. c. 12,500). APUIA: Set. City in the west of KHAMID (Pop. c. 24,000).

APYRRA: Rvr. River in the far south west of AHRISHEN, flowing into the sea of ST. JERUSH. The river is largely polluted and abandoned, with various ruins along its banks.

AQA: Lake in the c south of AHRISHEN, to the west of lake MASTI.

AQADIZ: Sea. Reef off the northern coast of the SULTANATE OF
ABACARDAT, between the mainland and the SUEZHUNI Island-chain.

AQAHAR: Geo. Mountains and cliffs dominating the east of the island of HAR QALAM in the north of SEPAHAUNAT.

AQARA PHAT: see Str. Massive fortress-lighthouse in the far south east of CHEIRA, perched atop a rocky promontory of the YAGNOTH RASHEI, guarding the entrance upstream over the YAGNOTH PHATHAN. The lighthouse is built above a series of small caves that are known as the MOTHER'S WAY TEMPLES, which in antiquity were the site of a mystery cult.

AQARASHA: Geo. Rocky region in the far north of AHRISHEN, stretching across the border with THE OLD FOREST. The region is covered in scrub and sparse forest that becomes denser farther north. Once across the border it becomes very dense, covered in virgin growth.

AQARATH: Set Major city in the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT in the north west of SAMMAEA, on the periphery of the delta of the river

NEPHILA. It is a major agricultural centre and is home to the region's main religion of SYBARR (Pop. c. 40,000).

AQARRA: Set. Major city in the north of VALA in the c south east of WESTERN MENISCEA. The city was once far larger though has dwindled, possibly due to the retreat of the coastline, though remains a part of the VAEVECTAN TRAIL to this day (Pop. c. 68,000).

AQASHUNDAR: also 'giant salamander', and 'flat headed olm'. Fau. Gigantic animal from the salamander family that lives in the coastal valleys of southern QARALAM. Individuals can grow to over 15-ft. long (around half of which is their large tail) and are known for their wide heads and flat mouths and particularly their bright fern-like external gills that form a crest surrounding their head. The animal itself is pale with almost translucent skin, though the feathery gills resemble the colour of peacock tails. They live in freshwater sinkhole lakes that are most common in the south west of Qaralam, many of which are connected through deep limestone tunnels, but which form a contained system.

Aqashundars are solitary and have a fluctuating metabolism. They spend the short winters dormant, sleeping in underwater caves, and the rest of the year preying on aquatic life, though they have strong legs that allow them to travel over land, where they catch insects and small animals. They are a threat to travellers, particularly those staying off the NACRE ROAD, and though dangerous if unprovoked they startle easily, and their natural reaction is to attack. Their teeth and claws can leave deep wounds which heal slowly.

They are famed for their regenerative properties and have been known to regrow entire tails or limbs within months of amputation, with no long-lasting ill effects. They have long been studied by scholars and biologists, and their blood is harvested for use in various medicines and applications, including cloning and the creation of LARVAE and HAGHORIM. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

AQAZAK: Set. Small city in the east of the JAHADAT STATES, under the control of the city of SASASHAH (Pop. c. 15,000).

AQBETH I: (1416 – 1479 RM) Pol. His. Queen of the AMNICIAN DYNASTY in AHRISHEN, who was a devout member of the CHURCH OF THE WELKIN SKY, and who became a patron to many temples and monuments erected during her rule. She established a norm amongst her descendants, who would continue her patronage of the church, which prospered under the Amnician Dynasty.

AQEEL III: (B. 1653 – 1727 RM) Pol. His. King of the HOUSE OF TANDENDER in AHRISHEN, who experienced the consequences of generations of tensions with EBUSHEN with the breakout of war between the two states in 1696 RM. He died a broken man, regretful of being unable to end the war during his rule.

AQEEL IV: (B. 1788 – D. 1862 RM) Pol. His. Son of AMAQEELA I of HOUSE TANDENDER in AHRISHEN. The eldest of four surviving children at the time of her death in 1819 RM, he inherited an Ahrishen that had in the past decades found itself in decline, despite winning the war against UNITED KINGDOMS OF EBUSHEN in 1781 RM.

His mother had created new baronies for many of the ATRAMENTISTS who had prolonged her life over the years – a move that had been very unpopular amongst the populace. Following her death Aqeel IV was quick to reverse her edict, and spent most of his reign in conflict with these barons, who were systematically removed from power, and their lands restored to their previous owners. This period was Ahrishen grow increasingly distrustful of shapers in general Atramentism in particular – a mentality that remains so to this day.

AQEEL OF TANDENDER: (B. 1582 – D. 1669 RM) Pol. His. EBUSHENI nobleman who in 1611 RM travelled to AHRISHEN and performed a coup d'etat, killing the princess ISBAAHA after the death of her mother Shekzejeth II, taking the throne and beginning the ruler of the HOUSE OF TANDENDER.

AQLIA: Set. Ruin in the c of AZAZEM. In c. 3800 RM it was the site of an ecological disaster when spores of the tree SIGARA were released following experiments. The spores were deadly when inhaled, leading to a massed exodus from the city, leaving it abandoned and overrun by mutant strains of the tree, which remains there, isolated and prevented from spreading farther.

AQQARADIAN: Rel. Main religion worshipped by the people of CEHOPHELA. It was introduced by the OTHERWORLDER SAPHAHAKH in c. 2450 RM, becoming popular in the capital city MALADAE, from which it spread over the next centuries, supplanting the more primitive SEPU belief as the primary religion in Cehophela. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

AQRAHA: Set. City in the south of the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT, along the course of the river JEBED DHUSH (Pop. c. 25,000).

AQRAPH: Set. Coastal city in the south west of the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT. It is a major producer of cattle (Pop. c. 42,000).

AQRATH: Set. Settlement in the region of ZILION, in the c west of THE SURRACH (Pop. c. 7,200).

AQUARII: 1. Lit. 'people who dwell near the water'. Eth. Originally used in reference to mythical water-dwelling creatures, though with the rise of the empire and the encountering of new people, it instead came to be applied to a race of men discovered west of the INNER SEA by the KORACHANI EMPIRE in c. -600 RM, living between GNOTH and the BLACK MOUNTAINS.

The people of Aquariia were well-known to Parthia since at least 100 RM and were well-known for their coastal cities and beautiful lagoons, all of which have since been lost to the dwindling of the Sea Of Liakarra. The Aquarii were known for their theocracy, and though this was lost with the coming of the Korachani people in c. 13 RM.

2. Mil. Military caste in AQUARIIA, descended from ancient freed slaves, who remain as a caste apart from others (neither above nor below other castes). From this caste are drafted soldiers who fight in Aquariian armies and serve as well-disciplined and paid mercenaries.

AQUARIIA: Dem. 'Aquarit'. Ntn. A temperate land in the c-south east of WESTERN LLACHATUL, Aquariia overlooks the SEA OF LIAKARRA. It is of a cold temperate climate and is dry, with short moderately wet winters. The last millennium has seen its coastline expand as the Sea of Liakarra diminished, leaving the once prosperous lagoons of TABERNACEA dry, little more than a salty wasteland today, its ancient harbours landlocked, dozens of miles from the coast.

Like many other nations in the west of the INNER SEA, Aquariia emerged relatively early in the AGE OF STEEL following an exodus of minorities persecuted from the KORACHANI PENINSULA. These DHANUSII people scattered, with some heading beyond the GATE OF EREBETH, though most settled down closer. One group made peaceful landfall along the coast of Tabernacea, where they encountered the scattered AQUARII people – a loose collection of seafarers living along the coasts of the fertile lagoons of what was then a much more expansive Sea of Liakarra

The Dhanusii founded their own settlements and traded with the native Aquarii, offering their skills in ironworking, and sharing with them their worship of the duotheistic deities of LIFE AND DEATH, which over the next centuries would become corrupted by the moons-based religion of the Aquarii eventually becoming ALBULAANISM.

This period led to the construction of many observatories in the east of the nation, in the northern hills of the BLACK MOUNTAINS, around which new settlements emerged, effectively creating a dichotomy of culture, moving the power-centre away from the lagoons inland. This necessitated a reliable trade-network that provided food and other resources to the cities, as well as a police-force to guard the same routes. These so-called PRAETORIANS OF THE ROAD remain to this day, guarding caravans and the cities they travel to.

In the mid-12th century, the KORACHANI EMPIRE Set. up embassies in Aquariia to facilitate trade between the two nations, though by c. 1160 RM the embassies were being used by spies in an attempt to gain a foothold in the region. The Aquariian government expelled the envoys and refused to trade with the empire. This was a blow to its economy, and within a few years the strain was beginning to show. It was during this time that an alliance with Parthis was sought, leading to its willing induction into the Parthisan Republic as a vassal in 1206 RM.

Funded by their Parthisan occupiers, Aquariian mariners travelled far to the west, where they encountered simple pastoral people of what is now Ophiussa. Some settled the region and others returned home with others. This began a tradition of drafting foreigners for cheap manual labour, who became known as the AQUARII (2.) caste.

Aquariian defences were strengthened, and its harbours were bolstered and deepened, allowing larger ships to claim more of its resources.

The region flourished under Parthisan leadership, though the independence of Almagest in 1304 RM brought a change to the Inner Sea. In Aquariia a new movement began to grow, seeking independence from Parthis. Most people ignored the movement, though it slowly gained traction and an underground following. In 3021 RM the first Parthisan embassy was attacked in ASTER. This isolated incident was a precursor to increasing acts of vandalism and resistance over the next decade. A Parthisan Ministry in ANACHA was attacked in 3138 RM, with diplomats and soldiers killed and wounded.

This led to a rapid escalation of events. Most Parthisan expatriates and workers were evacuated from Aquariia, with the rest holding out in the capital. Supplies stopped being sent to Aquariia and over the next two years a blockade had been Set. up outside its harbours causing Parthis to send a fleet in retaliation.

This led to a 2-day naval exchange during which an important political figure, the Viscount Berig of Arimoloch, was captured from one of the Parthisan ships. That, alongside various Aquariian victories at sea, led to Parthis accepting the request for independence in 3140 RM.

The waning of the lagoons of Tabernacea became noticeable in c. 2500 RM. Many of the settlements surrounding it found themselves landlocked during extreme tides, and this only increased over the years. The city of TANIH was abandoned in 2756 RM, the first of many cities to be abandoned over the next millennium as the lagoons dwindled into nothing. By the time Parthis had departed all that remained of the Sea was a series of dwindling brine pools and salt flats. Today the salt flats have become Atramentally-corrupted in various regions, furthering the abandonment of this once-idyllic area.

Elsewhere, the nation of Aquariia survives, its economy thriving through the manufacturing of textiles and their exportation, alongside that of cotton and dried rice. To the north west, many settlements now have small GIGANRI populations, made up of individuals either exiled from GNOTH or who left their homeland willingly. Many are mystics who travel the countryside, and are welcomed and distrusted in equal measure. They bring skills that the humans lack, but are often seen as aloof and strange, though for the most-part they've forsaken the asceticism of their Gnothi counterparts. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

AQUARIIAN: Lan. Language spoken predominantly in AQUARIIA, that emerged from the earlier ROOT AQUARIIAN, which became corrupted by the KORACHANI language brought by immigrants from the east. It uses the DAIMALAN script, as does HOLOLACHI. See Vol II: Languages.

AQUARIIAN, ROOT: His. Lan. Now-extinct language that was once spoken in AQUARIIA, prior to the arrival of KORACHANI immigrants. It emerged in the early FIFTH AGE from the language of the native DAIMALAN people. See Vol II: Languages.

AQUEDUCT OF CREPHITHISS: Arc. His. Soc. Monolithic expansive aqueduct in TAAN AN, in the south west of SAMMAEA, that dominates the entire nation, serving as both its main transport route (with barges and ships travelling along exposed canals on the top of the aqueduct) and as its main water source, with water drawn from the KIRATU qanats (subterranean aqueducts) in surrounding mountains that follows gravity towards the coast, passing dozens of elevated cities along the way, ending at the metropolis of URAMMALET.

It is an ancient structure, thought to date to the THIRD AGE, though little, if anything, is known of its creators. It was rediscovered by the people of the early FIFTH AGE following the FADING of the FOURTH AGE, at which point it had been reduced to a ruin. Many sections were collapsed and lying in ruin on the ground, with various free-standing pillars and columns dotted across the north of the nation. Most of it had run dry, with waters carried from springs and snowmelt in the bordering TAOGHLIN, IGUSIGHI, and OMRBAS Mountains spilling out in damaged sections of the structure, where they formed rivers, draining down the valleys to the ACCA HOAL Basin, where they collected into the endorheic lake once known as STONNARA.

Seeing its value, the people slowly set about restoring it over many centuries, by the end of which the nation of AMMASH⁽³⁾ had appeared. They erected settlements at strategic points at the base of its vast pillars, with some even appearing on the top of complete stretches, along its water-bearing canals. Some sections of the aqueduct were never repaired, and remain now as gigantic solitary piers (columns), some of them hundreds of feet to a side, with hollows subterranean chambers. Some became the nucleus for new settlements that appeared around them like fungi on the stump of a dead tree. Some sections of the aqueduct were very thick and housed buildings within them, some rising for many storeys into the piers on which the aqueduct canals were supported.

For the most part, the aqueduct is now repaired and in good working order, linking many cities in a vast network of elevated canals that allow traffic to move in both directions as the aqueducts slowly converge and wind across the Acca Hoal to the great city of Cur Apon, capital of Taan An – their natural terminus, which was once located at the coast. The slow waning of Elyden's seas has seen the city become landlocked over time, where it is now over 200-miles from the coast. The aqueduct has been extended at great cost via much less impressive elevated canals that carry waters to the newer city of Urammalet, over 200-miles away at the present coast.

The original purpose or need for this large system of aqueducts is unknown, though it is thought that the area was far drier than it is today, perhaps necessitating an artificial source of water. The origin of the name Crephithiss is unknown, though it has been in use since the early Fifth Age, and might be a corruption of an older name, possibly for the aqueduct itself or the nation or culture in which it had been built.

AQUEDUCT OF THRYADAMI: Int. Arc. Expansive network of aqueducts in CARNYNGA, that spread water sourced in the SANTOREAN Mountains across the nation, including the arid north of SPHYRNIDONTIS wastes, allowing cities to thrive where they otherwise might not. It is considered by some to be one of the MODERN WONDERS of ELYDEN.

AQUILL: Set. Coastal city in the north eastern mainland of the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT in the north west of SAMMAEA. It overlooks the bay of ZELEL and is a major harbour in the north of the nation (Pop. c. 39,200).

AQURHA: Set. City in the far north of SAMEKON. Though largely independent, it pays vassalage fees to Samekon in the form of trade goods and resources. The city is said to own the strait that leads into the SEA OF POLARIS, making it very wealthy and a large hub of trade considering its northern latitude (Pop. unknown).

ARA KHIN: Mil. Ancient martial tradition, dating back to the early days of the FIFTH AGE, and thought to be a remnant from an older FOURTH AGE culture practiced in what is now SAUA, and inherited from earlier SA'WEHI and SAEDISHI traditions.

Commonly referred to as SWORD DANCERS, the ara khin study these ancient traditions as a form of meditation and were once a common sight in Sauan warfare, dominating the period of civil strife that saw Saedish fragment into Sa'weh.

ARA YETZIRAH: His. Rel. Pol. Per. One of three He'elan Archdukes — the rulers of the nation of Grest^(1.). Ara rules the Mansion (territory) of Furfur^(1.) in the north of Grest and commands 28 legions of troops who all bear her Sigil.

ARAAHT: Geo. Dry plains in the west of ARKOS⁽¹⁾, bordered by lake C'DATA to the west and the SEA OF ERIA in the east. During the reign of the CITADEL MOUNTS, the Araaht was forsaken by locals, after the large numbers of corrupted refugees that crossed through the area during the so-called DEGENERATE EXODUS of the KHARKHARADONTID deserts, reaching their peak in the region c. -550 RM. It was in the Araaht that piles of dead DEGENERATES and AANTH fleeing the SHADOW IN THE DESERT were burnt in great mounds, the largest of which is now remembered as the mound CHONUM.

The region bore witness to the rise of the AANTH civilisation, if such it can be called. In the early decades of the fifth century RM the foul creatures began expanding their territories, with various nests and gossamer forts appearing in the west of the Araaht; under the gaze of their birthing goddess MAALKAT. A long period of conflict with EHBOT (an imperial colony built over the conquered Citadel Mounts) followed, with the borders that crossed the region in a state of flux. By c. 875 RM the aanth were pushed back across the Araaht, with the humans' (their lands to the east of the Araaht by then known as Arkos) borders growing, reaching towards lake C'data, though by c. 1675 RM an increase in ATRAMENTAL activities in the region led to the retreat of the Arkosian borders, allowing the aanth to retake their lands, though the central expanse of the Araaht remains largely an unclaimed region.

ARABANT: (B. 3983) Current Emir of BANT. At only fourteen years old his mother is regent until he comes of age at sixteen.

ARABEALL: 1. His. Ancient state in the north of SAMMAEA that is mentioned in texts and records from the late FOURTH and early FIFTH AGES, though of which little physical evidence now remains. It is thought to have existed either south west or south east of present-day PARTHIS.
2. Eth. Ancient ethnic group from the north of SAMMAEA in what are now ANDILUTH, the south of PARTHIS, south west of TARTAK, and the east of TRAKIA, though which mingled with immigrants from the PARTHISAN PENINSULA later in the FIFTH AGE.

ARABIN: Mil. Str. Major fortress located in the north west of ESHIR⁽²⁾, overlooking the border with the far east of the VESPERTINE LEAGUE. It stands on both banks of the river GAMUS, and its MONITOR⁽²⁾ -mounted troops patrol the surrounding HIRIM valley, keeping it safe from potential incursions from the west.

ARACHA: Set. Settlement in the north east of AQUARIIA, along the course of the river \underline{HYACHA} (Pop. c. 6,000).

ARACHAI: Set. City in the c south of TZALLRACH, in the LURIUM Plains, situated at the fork between the river ARELLI and USSAMA. It is a major trade city in the region, ferrying goods from the north along the river ARELLI to SIMHAPARRAN (Pop. c. 115,000).

ARACHAZ: Geo. Region in the north west of the tribe of DATHOA in the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. Noted for its red rocks, rough terrain and many small buttes and mesas, it is a place of rugged beauty.

ARACHNODACTYLY: also 'Spider Fingers'. Med. Condition where the fingers are abnormally long and slender when compared with the rest of the hand. It is often accompanied by POLYDACTYLY.

ARACO: Set. Coastal city in the north of LOEGRESS^(1,) in the east of the headland of ALAUNYR, where it is the only settlement of note (Pop. c. 40,000).

ARADARA: Set. Settlement in the c of METHUMN. Its main industry is the mining of SERPENTINE (Pop. c. 5,000).

ARAELL: also 'the Angel Wings'. Ast. Con. Constellation in the polar skies of the NORTHERN HEMISPHERE. It is the brightest star in the Northern Hemisphere, and is commonly used in navigation See Vol II: Constellations.

ARAGAME: Rvr. River in the south east of KAZZAR, flowing south east for 160-miles from sources in the south of the OZZARUN Mountains, before meeting the coast at the SEA OF ESCHATA.

ARAGOSH: Set. Large town in the far east of TAMAR, built on the ruins of the city of ARRAGA which was deserted in c. 1200 RM. By c. 2000 RM it had begun to attract people; its deep harbours unaffected by the lowering sea-levels that were devastating the rest of the FAELIKKAN coast. In c. 2300 refugees from the THIRD WAR OF FAITH against AHRISHEN began flowing south, with many settling in Aragosh. Like its predecessor, ARRAGA, it emerged as a link with THE HARÉSHK, trading with EDICULE^(3,) and Ahrishen ever since; becoming its ally, largely unaffected by its slave-raids (Pop. c. 19,400).

ARAHAH: 1. Set. Small fortified city in the south west of SALOROC^(1.). It is the centre of the heavily fortified ARHAHN LINES, built against the threat of attack from SARASTROAN IO, and is home to many troops that patrol the western border with the southern nation (Pop. c. 16,000).

ARAHAHN LINES: Mil. Str. 40-miles of fortifications in the south of SALOROC^(1,) built in c. 3700 RM to defend against the threat of attack from SARASTROAN IO. They are manned to this day, though they are outdated by modern military engineering standards.

ARAHESH: Set. City in the c of KEPHUAAN, along the course of the river SHAYANDI where it meets lake VULA (Pop. c. 37,000).

ARAHIR: 1. Geo. Pass across the PARNASIAN Mountains, linking the east of ELAT with the c of AYAD.

2. Set. Small fortified city in the far east of ELAT, controlling the mountain pass linking Elat with AYAD. It is a major centre of trade (Pop. c. 18,000).

ARAIHATHAN: Geo. Stone desert in the c. of the DESOLATION OF
ASTLIDAN.

ARAK: Dei. Rel. Chief deity in the CHURCH OF ARAK worshipped in the nation of GIBEAH said to ride a chariot of fire. Though originally a solar deity, the persona of the deity has now been subsumed by the sole surviving otherworlder of a group of seven ASTERI, which now rules as a God-king. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

ARAK ABH: also 'the Red Keep'. Pol. Mil. Str. A large bastion and related forts and lines of defence in the KARAKHASID capital DEKANA, the entremost keep is the home to the ruling governments of the nation, and city, as well as the SARASTROAN administration. It has ancient roots, and the first keep here predated the arrival of KORACHAN, and was likely a stone age fort. The Korachani occupation was faced with strong opposition throughout its tenure in Karakhas, and the Arak Abh was home to the main garrison whose role it was to keep the capital secure.

It remains today, a formidable fortress and the centre of political and military life in Karakhas.

ARAK, CHURCH OF: Rel. Main religion in GIBEAH. It is ancient, dating back to the first centuries of the FIFTH AGE, following the FADING of the FOURTH AGE. With its roots in ancient standing stones in the jungles of BERDERA, its followers revere a primal unknowable deity known as Arak, who rides a chariot known as the EYE OF ARAK, which is synonymous with the sun.

The rebirth of the septuplet otherworlders known as the ASTERI shook the region in 1384 RM, though the church of Arak manipulated events so that the Asteri became prophets of Arak. Their influence in the region would affect Gibeahn history to such a degree that it would break away from UALLA MIGHA in 1727 RM, becoming an independent state to which the Asteri are political and religious rulers alike.

A mysterious plague-like malady reached Gibeah, affecting HALFBLOODS and OTHERWORLDERS, leaving one of the Asteri dead, their hive mind irrevocably altered by 3862 RM. This shattered mortal faith in the church, leading to a period of civil war that gripped Gibeah, toppling the church and leaving it isolated from the rest of Elyden. In 3878 RM a single Aster emerged from their citadel in TELQATEAH, in which the remaining Asteri hid years before. It killed a group of scavengers, precipitating a new period for the church, where over a decade of secularism was rapidly washed aside, replaced by a resurgent cult that utterly devoted itself to the sole remaining Aster. But, shorn from the consciousness of the other six asteri, it was unhinged and utterly psychotic, becoming a cruel ruler to whom its worshippers were nothing but playthings.

It ordered the construction of new monuments, and the workforce became little more than slaves to its fickle vanity. It would execute random people on a whim, leaving the populace living in terror, which it delighted in. The church became a monolithic entity, the sole governing body in Gibeah, its priests acting as censors and arbiters of what was and was not allowed. Very little was allowed. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

ARAKHAMÉ: Ast. Smallest of ELYDEN'S two moons (the other being SIELLA). It has a synodic orbit (full moon to full moon) of 21.5 days and a sidereal orbit (full orbit between a specific point in the sky) of 24 days. It is commonly associated with the DEMIURGE KHARANI and the SCION KHAR'ILLAE. Ancient SAMMAEAN legends claim that the moon was intend to be the eventual home of the IMMORTALS^(1.) that had been bequeathed to Kharani, which, through the hubris of the Demiurges were born prematurely, becoming the KERATIN. This forged an intrinsic link between mortal and satellite.

ARAKIEL: m. Alc. Per. (D. unknown) ATRAMENTAL pioneer, specialising in a form of ALEMBISM. He practiced the art in the early FIFTH AGE, rediscovering much of the SPHERE that was lost after the FADING of the FOURTH AGE. He was the founder of the School of ALCHEMIE in MIDAL, VENTHIR, in c. -360 RM and disappeared 2 decades later, his fate unknown.

ARAKK: Geo. Cliffy peninsula in the far east of VAALK, dividing THE INNER
SEA from the SEA OF NUTHEN. It is the eastern-most point in mainland Vaalk and home to the LIGHTHOUSE OF ASTUR.

ARALAN: 1. Geo. Headland to the north of KULIGALA. Until a few centuries ago it was an island, but it is now connected to the mainland by a narrow isthmus on which the fort and lock of EMPURIA were built.

2. Set. City in the north of KULIGALA (Pop. c. 30,000).

ARALAZEM: Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region dominating the north west of the nation of NIZZUM. It is the aftermath of an ancient ATRAMENTAL war, that left the region devastated, and dozens of cities toppled, and never resettled. Today, the descendants of the original inhabitants still live in the area, in a form of enclave within the main nation. They do what they can to retrieve the original culture of the region, and are proud of their heritage.

ARALKAL: Set. Small city in the north east of NÁRTHEL, in the region of GHALLETHA⁽³⁾. It is one of few settlements of note to survive in the region, and is known for its heady red wines, which are sold to merchants passing the city on their passage of the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 17,300).

ARALLON: Arc. Rel. Necropolis outside the city of BISMUTH in the c west of GNOTH. It is a place of natural and architectural beauty and is visited by those who are remembering their dead, who are mummified and stood up in family shrines. The eldest shrines date back to the FOURTH AGE and are revered as culturally-significant to Gnoth.

ARAM: Geo. Major mountain in the north east AETHIOS, and source of the river NARRATI.

ARAMAL: Set. Major city in the region of CARMATHAN in the HENDECARCHY of NHORA in the north east of MALAN. It is one of few remaining places that still values the vocation of BRANCHBRAIDING, and most living branchbraiders (known as CHIMILEEN in the Malani tongue) who are also SHAPERS come from this region. The city itself is a living example of the branchbraiding, and is home to various modern and ancient examples, which are meticulously tended to by branchbraiders.

Contrary to popular belief, the city is not entirely made from living wood and roots, but it is rather a curious blend of living wood and stone, expertly carved into natural shapes to apprehend the expected growth and expansion of the wood without causing damage to the structures (Pop. c. 58,000).

ARAMEG: Geo. Cave in the east of THE OLD FOREST, close to the pillar of DATH ARAMEG.

ARAMI: (15,200-ft.) Geo. Highest peak of the ARAM Mountains in the c north east of AETHIOS, its red rocks and sheer western-face visible for miles around.

ARAMI ROAD: Geo. Com. Trade-route linking the c of AETHIOS to the north east, passing north of the ARAM Mountains. See Vol II: Major Trade Routes.

ARAMMU: m. Myt. His. Per. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, a scion of the DEMIURGE DURUTHILHOTEP, who is still famed in KHAMID for having crafted the BRACER OF THE HAWK to aid the IFIRMIANS in their defence against the forces of RACHANAEL during the WAR OF SCOURGING.

Little else is known about Arammu, though he is thought to have fallen somewhere in Meniscea during the war. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

ARAMOTHA: Set. City in the far south of HOAMM, with harbours and a small fishing community (Pop. c. 35,000).

ARANAS: Set. Major city in the north of NASTAL⁽²⁾. It originated in the early FIFTH AGE as a commune for philosophers that were persecuted by the tyrant ANALAM. Today it is a major mercantile centre, trading goods from north, south, west, and east, across Nastal and the VESPERTINE LEAGUE, and it is renowned for its large vaulted storage yards and merchant houses, who are the nobility of the city (Pop. c. 196,000).

ARANATO: Set. City in the c north west of LIDEA. It was a historic region where laws were made, and today is a home to one of the largest prisons in Lidea (Pop. c. 28,000).

ARANAULL: 1. Geo. Temperate plateau in the south of SAMMAEA, named after the eponymous city that dominates the region.

2. Set. Major city in the above region^(1.), in the far north east of the kingdom of ELALLIA, in the south of SAMMAEA. Like most Elallian cities, it is ruled by a lord who is worshipped as a demigod, forming a pantheon beneath the NIMBUS GOD. In this case, the demigod is an OTHERWORLDER who bestows upon its subjects a semblance of immortality in return for unadulterated devotion. These immortals are taken to its subterranean palaces where they live agonising lives. They are ritually killed after seven years and buried, the SOUL STONES that inexplicably grow around their bodies cultivated, becoming the focal points for temples, through which the region's priests are said to communicate with the otherworlder's sires; the true deities of their culture. The city also forms a major stop along the NACRE ROAD, and is known for its many caravanserais where merchants can stop before the ascent of the Aranaulli plateau (Pop. c. 148,000).

ARANDARA: Rvr. River in the north west of PERGOST, flowing south for 660-miles from sources in the west of the DANTIS Mountains before emptying into the BAY OF BAEFIR.

ARANTHUR FARU: (B. 3951 RM) Pol. Current elected ruler of SAGITTARIA.

ARANTUDUR FARAUT: (B. 3949 RM) Sup. Pol. Present ONÉSIMUS-PRELATE – the highest rank amongst FIRMAMENTISTS in the free lands east of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, and ruler of the chief authority of the MINARET OF LIGHT.

ARANTUR, GENERAL: (D. -81 RM) Mil. General of the armies of the city-state of PRE-IMPERIAL KORACHAN between -114 and -81 RM. His victories against the people of western GERICIA led to the construction of the ARCH OF ARANTUR near SUEVRA, his birth town.

ARAQUI: Rnk. In GNOTH, a servant caste of GIGANRI afflicted with DWARFISM. They are around 6 – 8-ft. tall, and though are similar in appearance to humans they are differently-proportioned and easily identified. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

ARARAH: Rui. Abandoned region surrounding the mid-course of the river LOBKIR in the south west of NÁRTHEL. It was abandoned in c. 2100 RM following the death of the river to industrial pollution and the waning of resources in the area. Though still shunned to this day, the river has largely recovered, and the ruins of millennia-old manufactories still dot its banks to this day and small settlements have appeared atop their ruin.

The Ararah is famous amongst certain scholarly circles for being the resting place of the NARTHELI CODEX, which is one of the so-called EXEMPLAR TRIAD – a trio of particularly well-preserved examples of the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN, though which our understanding of canonical knowledge regarding Elyden's cosmogony is derived.

ARARDRIN: 1. Geo. Ridge in the south of CYHLAGHARR forming an extension of the NGHALLEAL Mountains reaching north into the wastes of ODULROA serving as a border between it and dry lands of YGRALLA.

- 2. Geo. Road linking the fortress of Arardrin in the south of CYHLAGHARR to the city of SCYNAGRA, via the wastes of ASCORYCA.
- 3. Mil. Fortress in the south of CYHLAGHARR, in the southern-most point of the Arardrin Ridge, where it meets the NGHALLEAL Mountains. It is built over an ancient offering pit to the Cyhlagharri deity ISHATA.

ARARIEL: Rvr. River in the south west of GNOTH, flowing south for 275-miles from sources in the ALKAHEST^(2,) region, before meeting its parent, the river PURUSA.

ARAROBY: Pol. Set. Capital city of METHUMN, in the south west of SAMMAEA. It became capital in 3452 RM after the secessionist GILDED UNION won a three-year war against the then-rulers, the VODARCHS, who turned it into a thriving centre of trade and commerce, and it grew in both size and prosperity under their rule.

The city would become more and more insular as paranoia and corruption gripped the Gilded Union, and today it has completely isolated itself from the outside world, only remaining open to merchants, the military and other authorised Methumni travellers. It also serves as the headquarters of its elite Orinsian Guard, who safeguard its streets and people from outside threats. The city's foundations are hewn from the surrounding bedrock and is hidden behind expansive unassailable concrete bastions with only two triple gates allowing access. Even the path of the river Sapparannti is blocked by sturdy portcullises that can be raised to allow merchant vessels to pass (Pop. unknown).

ARARURD: Set. Large city in the c-south east of the tribe of BBURUL in the south east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 64,000).

ARASH: Plr. 'Arashin'. Mil. Rnk. Semi-noble military caste in PARTHIS with the hereditary title of Bowbearer. Arashin are known to wear stylised scapulars representing the wings of a spirit, itself a metaphor for their freedom over others.

In the past they were elite archers, though now wield jezails in battle, though ornate bows are still used during ceremonial duties.

ARASHAN: Set. Coastal settlement in the south west of KHITAI. Originally founded in c. 2430 RM by KORACHANI colonists, it was later abandoned in 2793 RM, when the empire was driven out of Khitai. Following that, the city was destroyed by an earthquake in 2882 RM, and was later rebuilt closer to the coast due its coveted iron reserves. Though the iron has since been mined to exhaustion, it remains a major harbour where most of the salt cultivated in the nation is exported (Pop. c. 32,000).

ARAII: Dem. (Araijan). Eth. Early FIFTH AGE culture that emerged in the c of WESTERN LLACHATUL, whose descendants would spread, eventually going on to populate RAONGEN^(2.), alongside the people of AHDU ATAN blood. Little else is known of their early culture or history, for they did not keep written records and any trace they may have left was destroyed by subsequent Raongeni growth. Many extant Raongeni cities are built atop or close to ancient Araijan cities or market towns.

ARASS: Set. City in the west of BASSORAH^(2,), close to the border with SKAROS (Pop. c. 46,000).

ARASTA: 1. Rvr. River in the north of ATARAXIA flowing south for 600-miles from sources in the BLACK MOUNTAINS before meeting its parent, the river ASTAHKH at lake Arasta.

- 2. Lake in the c south of $\underline{ATARAXIA}$, at the confluence of the river Arasta and $\underline{ASTAHKH}$.
- 3. Geo. Canyon-system in the c of ATARAXIA.

ARASTAN: Rvr. River in the north east of SARASTRO, flowing for 350-miles from sources in the JAELA and KOROR Mountains before meeting its parent, the river SEMARAH, itself a tributary of the major river SOLONA.

ARASTARA: Sct. Major city in the north east of SARASTRO, 140-miles east of the capital in ARGEA. It is located within the ATRAMENTAL WASTELAND of LATHAKEGT. The city is rich and envied across the INNER SEA for its luxury, though it does not come without cost.

The city itself emerged in c. 3180 RM after prospectors discovered large alluvial deposits of gold along a ford in the river ARASTAN. The source was found, about 40-miles upstream and various mines and quarries were established in a 10-mile radius, growing rapidly in size by 3200 RM. The settlement of Arastara appeared between them as a centre of trading and processing, and itself grew rapidly in size, becoming one of the wealthiest metropolises in the region by 3400 RM. In 3479 RM it became an administrative centre of Sarastro, at the behest of SATHEP THE RISEN.

The Atramental taint of Lathakegt was first recorded in 3652 RM following many strange cases of rare diseases and increased mortality rates amongst the population of Arastara, forcing the erection of many SIPHON ENGINES, the maintenance of which is incredibly costly, to keep the city free of taint. Were it not for the immense wealth of the region's resources the city would have been abandoned decades ago.

People live good lives in Arastara, enjoying luxuries and exotic items that other similarly-sized metropolises can only dream of and following death, bodies that are deemed to be strong enough undergo an Atramental ritual restoring them to a hollow semblance of life, allowing them to work the mines or other forms of labour. This is possible due to the way that the Atramenta interacts with bodies in that region, and is not possible elsewhere, and the bodies would crumble and fall inert outside of a specified distance from the city. The bodies are covered in a hard but pliable tar-like substance and are clothed to make interacting with them as pleasant as possible and are enchanted with a traditional act of shaping that keeps them animate for anything between 50-100 years before they begin to break apart from use. These reborn act as servants and labourers, helping to keep the city prosperous, though their maintenance is somewhat costly in its own right

Euthanasia is an accepted form of death in Arastara and many choose to end their own lives before the taint of Lathakegt finally cripples them. This is so accepted that it has spread to other metropolitan areas of Sarastro and is rapidly becoming the accepted form of death there (Pop. c. 300,000).

ARATATH: Rui. Ancient stone city constructed in a cleft within a cliff in the wilderness in the north of DURCHAA^(1.). The city is abandoned, and is likely a remnant from ancient times when the climate was warmer, possibly the THIRD AGE.

ARATEISH: Set. Major city in the north east of BANT, in the north east of the CARCHEMISHI PENINSULA^(1.), in the east of SAMMAEA. It is amongst the more modern cities in Bant, eschewing the traditional nuclear families that are common within the kingroups, and is a centre of manufacture in the nation (Pop. c. 113,800).

ARATHAMMOS: Geo. Long mountainous region in the east of EASTERN MENISCEA, stretching for close to 1,000-miles from EASTERN LARISH into eastern OBLEVIS, dividing the two from the PARTHISAN colony of EZHIRAYA (2.) in the east.

ARÂTHUAHI ORDER: lit. 'against corruption. Org. One of the major SANCTIFIED ORDERS OF THE INQUISITION in the KORACHANI EMPIRE that works against aberrant physical and moral corruption; which extends also to corruption of power and that inflicted through the spread of ATRAMENTAL TAINT.

The Order was founded in the city of KHADON in 396 RM in response to rampant Atramental corruption and moral decay within the empire and remains there to this day. In its early years, the Order led a series of crusades within the borders of the empire. Now known as the PURIFICATION CRUSADES, the Order scoured imperial lands for signs of Atramental corruption within its people, often razing entire cities in its hunts, earning a grim reputation amongst the people of the empire that persists to this day.

Most Korachani cities now host small contingents of the Arâthuahi Order, who monitor Atramental activity. They are most common in areas where Atramental taint is well-established or where UMBRAL industries are predominant, where they oversee work, working to prevent Atramental accidents or to rapidly clean up in the event of such an accident taking place.

The order is organised in a strict hierarchy, with most of its members divided into the ranks of the SHADOW HUNTERS, PURIFIERS, and KNIGHT PURIFIERS, with more highly ranked individuals known as JUSTICIARS, HIGH INQUISITORS and DOCENTS⁽¹⁾. SUCCORATORS are most commonly found in this Order. CENOBITES form a sizeable part of the non-combative forces within the Order, often rising to influential positions.

The Order's sigil is the flaming sword on a shield, which dates to the time when its members regularly wielded swords and shields.

The Order's present Grandmaster is ABDASTARTUS ANAAH.

ARATI: Rvr. River in the c east of KORACHAN, flowing east for around 325-miles from sources in the FATUACH Mountains and PSALDA hills through the HERESIAN PLAINS, before meeting its parent, the river ICHORIA.

ARATIM: 1. Mil. Fortress in the c north east of CISNERIA, guarding its UMBRA pipelines south west into the capital of VELVERDA and east into ESSEVERA. The fortress is home to mounted rangers who patrol the length of the pipelines, north to the territories of SUDIVA.

2. Set. Major city in the c north east of CISNERIA (Pop. c. 160,000).

ARATOMA: Ind. Set. Sulphur mining settlement in the east of SAUA. It is also a major producer of food, much of which is consumed by DAIKORO (Pop. c. 8,000)

ARAX: Rvr. River in KHAMID, flowing 450-miles west into the SEA OF URAN. Many of its tributaries are seasonal.

ARAZEL: Ser. Small city in the c north west of AZAZEM, along the course of the river EPHANOSH. It is an important agricultural centre, and is surrounded by miles of fields, and also has a DROSS manufactory that is controlled by HOUSE TINANIA (Pop. c. 18,000).

ARBA: Lak. Small lake in the south of ARKOS^(1,). Historically, during the days of the Citadel Mounts, its southern shores were said to home to a secretive sect of oracles.

ARBITER, the Int. His. Arc. Ancient bronze statue in the east of MENISCEA, in the c of the PARTHISAN colony of EZHIRAYA (2.). The state depicts a blindfolded robed woman sitting cross-legged, holding an open book in each hand. It is some 80-ft. tall and is sits on a heavy stone base, beneath which narrow tunnels lead to deep vaulted rooms. It is thought to date to the late FOURTH AGE, though little of its history is presently known.

ARBITERS, ORDER OF: Org. In the judiciary system of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, judges of the living, often HALFBLOODS, or rarely, OTHERWORLDERS (making their role even more symbolic). They commonly wear ornate helmets that conceal all but their mouths (their eyes are covered in symbolism of their duties and supposed impartiality). They wear dark purple robes, often lavish, many of which are handed down the order from arbiter to arbiter.

The foundations of the Order lie in PRE-IMPERIAL Korachan, where every settlement had an ARBITRAR; a person to settle disputes (compare with the ANAX of PELASGOS). Drawn together into an Order in 21 RM, they were well-established by c. 50 RM, where they became an elite policing force across the empire, eschewing brute force for subterfuge and investigation (leaving mundane enforcement issues to the IRON GUARD).

ARBITRAR: Rnk. Old rank in PRE-IMPERIAL KORACHAN. Each settlement had an arbitrar who would help to settle disputes amongst individuals. This would later go on to become a ruling class, which would eventually give way to the PATRICIAN HOUSES.

ARBITRATORS: 1. Rnk. A caste of law-enforcers based in the ancient FOURTH AGE city-state of JURRAS⁽³⁾, which had become a powerful city between 200 – 400 RM, bringing the disparate tribal states that appeared after the fall of SAMARIA a century earlier.

The Arbitrators were eradicated following Jurrasi⁽²⁾ subjugation by KORACHAN in 403 RM.

2. Org. The order of Arbitrators was resurrected after JURRAS⁽²⁾ became an independent nation after its deposition of the INTERREGES in 3167 RM, following over 2-decades of their rule, and they remain the main lawenforcement in Jurras, even whilst under PARTHISAN rule.

ARCA: Lake in the east of LAASKHA, in the western hills of the ARCANTHEA Mountains along the course of the river PARRAN.

ARCANAPLASM: Int. Alc. Sup. Ele. Physical by-product of SHAPING. Arcanaplasm is produced in the MATERIA OMNA as a by-product of shaping, though it rarely materialises into the Material Plane, usually dispersing and being re-absorbed by the Materia Omna moments after being created.

However, it is sometimes known to fully materialise in the MATERIAL PLANE close to the target of an act of shaping, where it takes the form of an inert translucent slime. The more strain the conjuring shaper is under, or the more resistance from the target, the more chance there is of arcanaplasm manifesting. Sometimes Arcanaplasm takes the form of spark-like jelly, particularly when manifested as a result of one act of shaping countering another – for instance when two shapers are duelling.

Arcanaplasm typically dissolves within hours of being conjured, and is noted for its particular smell – which is said to be reminiscent of sparking metal or ozone.

The material has been known to mortals since the appearance of the first shapers, ages past, and ALCHEMISTS and arcanists have examined and researched it at length. It has no widespread uses, largely due to its ephemeral nature, though it is believed that some independent ateliers hae managed to secure arcanaplasm for use in some TECHNARCANE engines, including in HEART ENGINES, where it is used as a conducting amniotic fluid surrounding LARVAE or shapers interred within, though this is rare and reserved for use in the most powerful machines due to its cost. See Vol IV: the Materia Omna.

ARCANE ARCHIVE, the: Str. Repository of books and objects in the city of TEIRA in VENTHIR related to SHAPING and the MATERIA OMNA, be they histories, treatises, catalogues or instructions. The collection started from the private library of PATRICIAN HOUSE SUKKALMAD, which had been meticulously curated over hundreds of years. The declaration of Venthiri independence from KORACHAN in 3781 RM saw the collection, which contained many objects that had been condemned by the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, become available to the public by appointment. Over the years the collection attracted many curators and interested parties who helped increase its size, and it continues to grow today with books and objects added from across ELYDEN.

ARCANE CONDUIT: His. Sup. Tec. Obj. An ancient TECHNARCANE device capable of amplifying SHAPING abilities. It was discovered on the OBSIDIAN ISLES, in WESTERN SAMMAEA, in a 2984 RM expedition by the AIWAHAN and MORÉHAN ORDERS OF THE SANCTIFIED INQUISITION. It was studied for centuries, advancing the KORACHANI EMPIRE'S understanding of technarcana by leaps and bounds, and it is now held in the Order's VAULT OF VAURNOS.

ARCANE TEMPERS: Sup. The natural equilibrium of the MATERIA

OMNA in any given region. The term is best compared with climate – average arcane patterns in a given region over long periods of time. In addition to the Arcane Tempers are AETHER WINDS, which are similar but only affect specific SPHERES of SHAPING in any given region. See Vol
IV: the Materia Omna.

ARCANTHEA: Geo. Mountain in the south east of LAASHKA.

ARCAVEA: Rel. Str. Large reliquary in the north east of NÁRTHEL, where the incorruptible body of the OTHERWORLDER ST. SAMIHULA is kept, under the aegis of CHURCH-funded troops. The structure forms part of THE SHADOW MARCH.

ARCAVIUM OF MORULAURGO: His. Edu. Rui. Ancient FIFTH AGE stepped tower that was used to house even older books and treatises. It was famed for its old collections of natural histories and relics from the FOURTH AGE.

It was built during the days of the SAOSTANAN empire and was originally situated on a rocky island west of the city of MORULAURGO in western SARASTRO. The island eventually became part of the mainland as sea levels lowered and the mouth of the river MORUL expanded west.

The Arcavium was destroyed during the WAR OF SUNDERING by KORACHANI forces during the attack on Morulaurgo, and all its knowledge was subsequently lost.

ARCH OF ARANTUR: His Arc. An ancient marble triumphal arch in the north of KORACHAN, just outside the settlement of SUEVRA. It dates back to the 1st century BM and takes the form of two wide marble arches perched atop three bulky piers. It honours the victories of GENERAL ARANTUR against GERICIAN forces, and the soldiers who died securing new territories for the empire.

The arch that is visible today has steps that were added in the 9th century RM, though is badly weathered, with the many bass reliefs that adorn its entablature (the part above the arches) blackened and stained by rust and pollution, barely visible today.

ARCH OF THE BLESSED, the: Int. Arc. Monolithic triumphal arch in the c. of KHARKHARADONTIS, beneath which pass PETITIONERS OF THE MACHINE while travelling back home from the SEPULCHRAL PALACE during the SHADOW MARCH. KORACHANI legend maintains that those crossing beneath the arch are blessed by the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR and RACHANAEL on the road home.

The arch was constructed within the KINGDOM OF THE HOLY LAND OF KHARKHARADONTIS between 2904 and 3044 RM and is considered by many to be one of the MODERN WONDERS of ELYDEN.

ARCH OF CERUNEREA, the: Soc. Arc. Triumphal arch of exotic heritage located in the city of TETHRA, in PARTHIS, that was gifted it in 3892 RM by the MENISCEAN colony of EIKARTHYEA. The two nations were at the time close allies and the gesture was made as one of unity between the two peoples. It is of an exotic style and completely out of place against the native architecture of Tethra, but serves as a reminder of the close link once shared between these two places and their people. Indeed, many people living in this area of Tethra have Eikarthyean heritage, with some 5,000 – 6,000 people claiming Eikarthyean ancestry alive there today.

ARCH CHANCELLOR: Pol. Rnk. The ruling title of the socialist republic of ALMAGEST. Though officially serving as a speaker or chair presiding over the other chancellors and ministers, the Arch chancellor typically wields true power across the state. The present Arch Chancellor is AALISSA O ALMAGOTA, who has ruled since 3983 RM.

ARCH-PRAEFECT: Pol. Rnk. The chair of the ruling PRAEFECTURATE COUNCIL of TAAN AN, who is elected from the PRAEFECTS every seven years. The present Arch-praefect is TOMAR EMMER, who was elected in 4001 RM.

ARCH SARAKASHAR: Mil. War. Rnk. Supreme general of the combined armies of the REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO. The title is only used in times of all-out war and is bestowed upon a particularly competent SARAKASHAR (general) by the LICHKING SATHEP himself. The Arch Sarakashar is given command of all the empire's armies for the duration of the conflict.

The Sarakashar RAISHAZAR MELQART was the first Arch Sarakashar and was granted the title at the onset of the VENTHIRI/SARASTROAN WAR by the LICHKING SATHEP himself (who until then had assumed the role himself, without the title) remaining Arch Sarakashar until the signing of the SARASTROAN TREATY on the 23rd SATAVALEN 3705 RM.

ARCH OF VICTORY: Rui. Arc. Huge now-ruined triumphal arch in SARASTRO erected just west of the city of ARGEA after the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR'S victory over the nation in 339 RM following his return to life as an OTHERWORLDER. It took 77 years to erect, with construction completed in 416 RM, and stood proud for almost 3500 years, but it was destroyed by SATHEP THE RISEN after the SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE, and it remains now, as two gigantic crumbling mounds of granite, looming just outside the capital, with encroaching urban sprawl not far from them.

Bits of masonry from the gigantic arch have been plundered since then, used in disparate construction projects, their brown-red colour a tell-tale sign of their source.

ARCH OF VRADA: Rui. Ancient ruined triumphant arch in the south east of SKAROS, thought to date back to the FOURTH AGE. Little is known of its origins and its name, likely a more recent appellation, is probably anecdotal.

ARCHAEDON: 1. Geo. Island off the south eastern coast of BROR^(1.), just south of the TIAMOLDORAN CITY STATES.

A great FIRMAMENTAL calamity, known now as the CONFLAGRATION OF LIGHT, the on the north of the island occurred in 2802 RM, affecting the south of the Tiamoldoran City States as well as most of the north of the island. This left most FIRMAMENTISTS and SHAPERS, as well as those sensitive to the MATERIA OMNA, dead or mentally crippled. The event was documented by the explorer SUHRSIP, and remains one of the greatest calamities to ever take place in the region.

2. Dem. 'Archaedoni'. Edu. Ntn. Island-state in the SEA OF SAMMAIDU, located to the south of the south eastern coast of BROR occupying the islands of Archaedon^(1.) and ISTHMAI. It was founded in c. -500 by scholars of the FIRMAMENT who chose the island for its proximity to the NULLAMBIT – 3.6° into the FIRMAMENTAL HEMISPHERE – which was of benefit to the nature of their studies. Over time their citadel blossomed into a city that attracted SHAPERS from across ELYDEN. In 1076 RM the ESOTERIC COLLEGE OF RA ALATRÉ, an annex of the MINARET OF LIGHT, was established there, and remains operational to this day.

The CONFLAGRATION OF LIGHT (a FIRMAMENTAL calamity that took place in 2802 RM that left most shapers in the north of the island dead or in a vegetative state) left the region devastated, after which Archaedon suffered for a dark age that lasted two centuries before life returned to normal under a new government in 3013 RM in the city of SANSARA, which was renamed Archaedon^(3,) in 3113 RM.

Its people practice a form of arcanalatory known as DARESH.

It is ruled by Lady SORA VENKHÏR, who sits at the head of the CONCLAVE OF TEN – a secretive Magocratic council – and the people of the island-state can be divided into three broad classes known as providers, seekers and seers – commoners and merchants, scholars, priests and sages, and shapers – the latter of which is considered the upper classes, with most shapers belonging to established SEPTS, though shaper can emerged from any of the classes. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

3. Pol. Set. Originally known as SANSARA, Archaedon is the capital city of the Island-state of Archaedon⁽²⁾, located on the south western coast.

The majority of the island-states' population is concentrated in the city and the environs directly surrounding it.

It became capital in 3013 RM after the collapse of its old government in 2803 RM following the death of most SHAPERS due to the natural FIRMAMENTAL disaster now known as the CONFLAGRATION OF LIGHT. The old capital, TAREZIA, was left without leadership and control of the island faltered, leading to two centuries of conflict out of which would emerge (Pop. c. 230,000).

ARCHAEOLATOR: Tec. Rnk. A civilian rank within the AIWAHAN

ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION. Archaeolators lead expeditions with the intent of unearthing ARCHAEOTECH that the Order can study, in the hopes of bringing new technologies to the KORACHANI EMPIRE. Their travels often take them to distant or troubled lands, and they are usually accompanied by PROCURATORS and more militant member of the Order.

ARCHAEOLATRY: Rel. His. The worship of archaeological ruins and artifacts. The practice is strangely common in ELYDEN, resurfacing independently during various times across disparate eras in unlinked places, typically some centuries or millennia after the FADING that marks the passage between ages; where the ruins of past civilisations, their culture and histories forgotten by the remnant mortal tribes, are rediscovered by clueless survivors. It is the practice of archaeolatry that often draws people to construct settlements upon the ruin of ancient cities; the magnitude of their impression upon those who re-discovered them palpable in their actions in rebuilding there.

The practice takes on a more literal form in some places where the nomadic tribes of mortals that survive the Fading of ages unearth an ancient and powerful relic or monument and become so enthralled by it that they come to worship it. A powerful example of this is the AL AKHI of SKAROS, who have come to worship an antediluvian totemic figure, which has come to be known as MERKABH, the Speaker in Dreams.

ARCHAEOLOGY: His. The study of ancient cultures, and the ruins and artefacts they left behind. Given the many ages of mortal life in ELYDEN, archaeology is quite common, particularly within the KORACHANIEMPIRE. The practice is concentrated in areas where old ruins abound, such as around THE INNER SEA. Archaeologists take many forms, from erudite scholars, daredevil tomb-robbers, and TECHNARCANE researchers and everything in between. The Korachani empire, particularly around 2300 – 2500 RM became interested in the ancient world, sparking a craze that uncovered many ruins, many of which became the centres of new southerness.

ARCHAEOMANCY: His. In the KORACHANI EMPIRE, the study of ancient forms of SHAPING and other mystical arts. Archaeomancers are explorers and dare-devils, as often as scholars and academics.

ARCHAEOTECH: His. Tec. Ancient, sometimes forgotten or lost, technologies, that are commonly regarded as predating the modern age, usually dating to the FOURTH AGE or earlier, though categorisation varies from region to region. Due to the wax and wane of civilisations and the eventual fall of cultures (for instance, during the time of FADING that typically follows the collapse of a particular Age), many technologies, including TECHNARCANA, and methods of manufacture and agriculture, for instance, are lost as MORTAL cultures at first struggle to survive, and then slowly rebuild civilisation.

Later cultures may at first stumble upon technological relics of ancient times, though as new civilisations begin to flourish, they may begin to purposefully search for such objects. This may lead to ARCHAEOLATRY (the worship of ancient technologies, as is the case with some CANOPIC ENGINES, for instance). The AIWAHAN ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION is known for its expeditions to retrieve archaeotech, in the hopes of reverse engineering new technologies for use within the KORACHANI EMPIRE.

ARCHAEUS: 1. Sup. In the study of the FIRMAMENT, the Archaeus is the part of the OTHERWORLD closest to the MATERIAL PLANE and the easiest to be manipulated by SHAPERS. The Archaeus is named after the region in GNOTH where it was first coined. See Vol IV: the Materia Omna.

2. Sup. Geo. Mildly FIRMAMENTAL region in GNOTH to the north of the BHASMATHI PLAINS. It is home to a series of closely-linked settlements where study of the Firmament is common.

3. Set. Main settlement in the above region and home to FIRMAMENTAL research (Pop. c. 2,000).

ARCHBARON: Pol. Rak. The ruling title of the CORAL BARONIES. A new Archbaron is elected every five years by five Judges, each of whom rules a subdivision known as a dominion, and acts as chair of the council of barons in SPHYNIA just outside the capital in CYNCER. The present chair is Archbaroness ULIZAA II, who was elected for her second term in 4003 RM.

ARCHBISHOP: Rel. Rnk. Head of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE in a specific territory, usually an entire nation or vassal state, that is known as an ARCHDIOCESE. By default, the Archbishop is the head of all DIOCESES and their respective BISHOPS within their Archdiocese. They only have two superiors within the Church – the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR, who is the head of the Church; and the ARCHBISHOP MAGNUS, who rules on his behalf.

ARCHBISHOP MAGNUS: Rel. Rnk. Elected leader of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE in the absence of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR. The Archbishop Magnus is elected from the eligible ARCHBISHOPS from across all ARCHDIOCESES where the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE is observed.

The Archbishop Magnus is one of the titles that has a guaranteed seat on the COUNCIL OF SEVEN, and even when the Archpotentate is active, technically negating the need for an Archbishop Magnus, the Church will still elect a representative from the ranks of Archbishops to form a member within the Council.

ARCHBISHIP MAGNUS BELISARIUS OF CALDERA: also 'the Necromancer Bishop'. M. Mys. Rel. Per. (B. 1382 – D. 1521 RM) ARCHBISHOP of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE between 1419 and 1433 RM, and ARCHBISHOP MAGNUS from 1433 RM until his death in 1521 RM. Decades after his death, a secret room was found in his chambers containing a plethora of forbidden books, including treatises on the nature of the DEMIURGES, ancient manuscripts detailing the act of NECROMANCY, FIRMAMENTAL essays, astrological charts and OTHERWORLDLY theses, amongst others. He left behind copious notes on his own necromantic experiment, in which he communed through ANIMISM with the SPIRITS^(1.) of the dead and unborn to gain knowledge.

The full nature of his research was never made public and it is unknown what came of the many books and notes that were discovered, though it is thought that they were either destroyed or placed under lock and key in the ARCHIVES OF THE HOLY PRECINCT. His longevity, which in itself was not uncommon for a man of power to achieve through artificial means, is possibly a result of his shaping.

ARCHBISHOP MAGNUS EMULKHIL DUCAS: m. Rel. Per. (B. 3607 – D. 3704 RM) ARCHBISHOP of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE between 3657 and 3677 RM, and ARCHBISHOP MAGNUS from 3677 RM until his death in 3704 RM.

He was assassinated during a tumultuous time in the KORACHANI EMPIRE remembered now as the WAR OF SUNDERING and though it was later discovered that he had been targeted by the dissident group known as PATERNOVA, at the time his death was blamed on agents of the nascent SARASTROAN ORTHODOXY, which only served to more deeply entrench Korachani and SARASTROAN forces, effectively bringing to an end efforts at diplomacy.

ARCHBISHOP MAGNUS VAMAS MICHAELLOS DUCAS: m. Rel. Per. (B. 1507 – D. 1589 RM) ARCHBISHOP of the ARCHDIOCESE of KORACHAN between 1539 and 1561 RM and ARCHBISHOP MAGNUS of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE from 1561 RM until his death in 1589 RM. His tenure as Archbishop Magnus was characterised by his stance on the DEMIURGE RENAISSANCE, which he felt would lead to the moral decay of the KORACHANI EMPIRE and the eventual collapse of the empire itself.

He was responsible for investing funds into opposing the Renaissance, allowing Church and State forces to quash the massed gatherings across imperial cities and to execute the leaders and reversed figures (free thinkers, artists, and scientists) of the movement, which led to the Renaissance losing steam and dying out completely within a few decades of his eventual death.

He was canonised as a saint of the Three Churches of the Undying Machine in 1973 RM, and is now a patron saint to the clergy and those fighting terrorism. A large bronze statue dedicated to him now stands outside one of the seminaries of the Church of the Undying Machine in the Holy Precinct.

ARCHCLERIC MOSTOS: Rel. Rnk. Bearer of ALLIAH'S HOURGLASS in SYRTIS^(3,).

ARCHDUKE: Pol. Rnk. Hereditary rulers in SIMBARA, who serve above the BALLOT COUNTS and below only the emperor and empress.

ARCHEXPONENT: Pol. Rnk. Highest political and religious rank in THE VORANDINE. Originating within an order of monks who interpreted the DREAMS and visions experienced by the Vorandi people, the position was appropriated by the UNITED VORANDI COUNCIL when it usurped the ruling council of the region in 3996 RM. The present Archexponent is ZHANSHON BARAGON.

ARCHIDOXUS: Plr. 'Archidoxes'. Myt, Sup. Rnk. ARCHSHAPERS within the REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO. They originated as acolytes of the LICHKING SATHEP who studied ancient HESYCHASTIC teachings under his tutelage and grew to become accomplished and highly-regarded shapers in their own right, and were often made into ABBEYS (regional governors) or SARAKASHARS (generals), and during the WAR OF SUNDERING they were inducted into Sarastroan armies as powerful SHAPERS attached to regiments or acting as advisors or specialists to generals. They are known for their longevity and their esoteric ways and are regarded as aloof and strange by most laypeople, who (rightly) shun them.

ARCHIGENITOR: 1. His. Rnk. Originally a title bestowed upon the DEMIURGE URAKABARAMEEL amongst his tribe, the GIGANRI.

2. Pol. Rnk. Following the DEMIURGE URAKABARAMEEL'S forsaking of his divinity, the title was bestowed upon the consecutive leaders who took up his mantle as proxy leader. In the early FOURTH AGE the title of proxy was divided between three individuals known as tirumvirs, and the title of Archigenitor is given to them.

ARCHIGRAPHER: Pol. Rnk. Title used in the KORACHANI EMPIRE to denote the head of gubernatorial clerical offices in major cities.

ARCHITECTURE, N'RAKHI: Str. A form of architectural design that is common in N'RAKH, using pumice stone and the resinous silk that is secreted by female AANTHA.

ARCHIVE OF THE SIXTH WIND: see VAURNIR.

ARCHIVES OF THE HOLY PRECINCT: see HOLY PRECINCT, ARCHIVES OF THE.

ARCHIVIST: Pol. Rnk. Hereditary title and rank within the MINASTERIA
OF ANNALS in the KORACHANI EMPIRE.

ARCHLASCIVIST: Pol. Leaders of the CULT OF VOLUPIS.

ARCHLECTOR MAGNUS SÖVIREN, EIGHTH OF THE ELEVEN: m. Pol. Per. (B. 3933 RM) Eighth of the HENDECARCHS of MALAN and ruler of the HENDECARCHY of HATON. He is the archlector of the chief religion of Malan – the CULT OF THE LADY.

ARCHNEGUS: Pol. Rnk. The ruler of AETHIOS, drawn from the ranks of the $\underline{\text{NEGUS}}$ upper castes.

ARCHON: 1. Alc. Mys. Rnk. GIGANRI title granted to those who have achieved success in their study of GNOSTICISM and ALCHEMY.

2. Oth. OTHERWORLDER. First recorded sighting is 134 RM in KORACHAN. Was a major player in THE THRONE WARS and sat on the Korachani throne for three years, between 137-140 RM. He was deposed by the PATRICIAN-SET MALETH⁽⁴⁾.

ARCHPATRICIAN: Soc. Rnk. The head of each PATRICIAN HOUSE that dominate the upper-classes around THE INNER SEA.

ARCHPOTENTATE, CRADLE OF THE: Rel. Geo. Semispherical crater, around 100-ft. wide, in the north of the Kelloil Mountain-range in Kuligala. It was created by the rebirth of the Archpotentate Malichar as an Otherworlder in 231 RM. The earth around the crater is fused into a single mass of blackened glass, at the centre of which it is believed the otherworldly body of Malichar appeared millennia past, reports

A gigantic temple was constructed around the crater in c. 1050 RM during the days of the KORACHANI occupation of the CARCHEMISHI PENINSULA^(1.), and the area was an important site of pilgrimage to followers of the established CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, who were beset by cultists of the LIVING NIGHTMARE who roamed the routes of pilgrimage, slaying any they could.

The temple was destroyed in c. 1200 RM following the departure of the Korachani empire from the region, though the crater remains a goal to those intrepid enough to look for it.

ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR, RULER OF THE HIGH-EMPIRE OF KORACHAN AND DIVINE HAND OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, STEWARD OF THE SEVEN NATIONS OF THE INNER SEA, HEAD OF THE CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, GENERAL OF THE STEEL LEGIONS, HARBINGER OF THE SHADOW, WIELDER OF, AND BLESSED BY, THE UMBRA, the:

(B. -41 – D. 133 – rB 231 RM) Oth. Pol. Leg. Rel. OTHERWORLDER, SHAPER, ruler and founder of the KORACHANI EMPIRE and founder of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE.

Born a merchant's son in the city of KORACHAN in mid-RACHALEN, he discovered the SCRIPTURE OF SHADOW in a ruined temple of TALANTEHUT on the island of MALETH in the INNER SEA after being shipwrecked there in -23 RM. He was subsequently captured and sold as a slave and taken to VAALK, where he became a gladiator, killing a great beast in the ring in VORACHAN^(2.), and leading a slave rebellion that led to his release in -7 RM.

He found the sword Tartaruch in Vaalk during his return voyage to Korachan in -6 RM, where he began his unification of its Seven City-States. During this time, he was visited by the otherworlder Neaishia, who counselled him on a forthcoming war that would overtake his life. He admonished the merchant-lords of Korachan, and stormed the temple of the reigning religion in -2 RM, toppling the temple of the Cult of Life and Death, destroying the religion's heart in Korachan, paving the way for the rise of the Undying Machine there.

Following this began the rise of the Korachani empire, with various nations annexed and conquered before his disappearance in 84 RM, following his victory in NÁRTHEL. Though he was thought dead by most, Malichar in fact wandered the dune deserts of KHARKHARADONTIS with his consort REJHELLE OF RHODAN, finally dying through undisclosed means in MALICHALEN in 133 RM, when he was later raised to a semblance of life by shamen in the tribe of UBOTE. He later confronted and defeated the Otherworlder ABEZETHIBOU in 209 RM before finding the DEMIURGE RACHANAEL'S tomb in DAEKYN in 212 RM, where he was slain by the recumbent Demiurge and later reborn as an OTHERWORLDER in 231 RM in KULIGALA. His mortal body was taken north, and it rests now in the BASILICA OF THE HOLY RELIQUARY. Little is known of the century following his rebirth.

In 331 RM, following his rebirth as an otherworlder, Malichar travelled to PORPHYR, where he acquired great technarcane knowledge from the Demiurge NYARLOTH'S descendant TELEANYARA APEXEIDE, which he used to create the LEADEN THRONE in Daekyn. After constructing the Throne, he marched victorious into the SARASTROAN capital of ARGEA with an army or mercenaries and the lich SATHEP in 339 RM, successfully doing in one night, what Korachani forces had failed to do for years. He left Sathep in control of Sarastro as regent and marched on to Korachan, where he settled, having reclaimed his empire.

He Retreated into obscurity in 2503 RM following a long period of ennui. THE CONSULITE reigned in his place for some time though his opponents grew as Malichar's supporters begun to dwindle. In 2517 RM the Consulite spoke with THE DREAMER, who revealed the best thing was to let the rulers squabble, and a DESPOSYNI, TAKIYAH, was granted the right to rule. This began the period of the Korachani royalty under the DESPOSYNI LINE, which lasted successfully until 3012 RM – the year of Malichar's eventual return.

He has been largely inactive after visiting SARAGOS in 3703, though has been known to make infrequent appearances during the meetings of THE SEVEN – his ruling council.

He is commonly depicted in art as either carrying Tartaruch and the shield \underline{AEGIS} , or the $\underline{SCEPTRE\ OF\ INCHION}$, which was presented to him upon his return to \underline{KHADON} as an otherworlder.

ARCHPOTENTATE, RELIC OF: see MALICHAR, RELICS OF.

ARCHSHAPER: Sup. Voc. Rnk. Common title within SHAPING circles for SHAPERS who have achieved mastery in their field or chosen SPHERE. The term is not to be confused with

More specifically it can refer to a rank within the FIRMAMENTAL hierarchy of the BROKEN LANDS. It is attained by accomplished shapers only after years of study in esoteric teachings in multiple spheres.

ARCHZEALOT: Pol. Mil. Rnk. Seven high military rank within OSSIEL given to commanders of high social standing and who are favoured by the SOVEREIGN-MILITANT. They wield not inconsiderable political clout and power and together serve as the most trusted lieutenants of ILLATHUR. They are perhaps the most fanatical of opponents of shaping and magick in Ossiel, after Illathur.

They are all incredibly long-lived, with most having been alive at the dawn of the magickal crusades that started in c. 2400 RM. It is unknown how they have lived so long, particularly given their inimical hatred of magick and its users, and many believe them to be immortal.

ARCUL: Lak. Lake in the east of LAASKHA, in the east hills of the ARCANTHEA Mountain along the course of the river PARRAN.

ARCYRIA, TREE OF: Flo. Poi. Alien tree in the west of the tribe of DRAKAINA in the east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. It has a wide trunk from which emerge dozens of red stalks. At the end of each stalk is a large red bulbous fruit that is poisonous to the touch. There is only one such tree in all of ELYDEN, and its source is unknown. It may be corrupted by the ATRAMENTA, or the last specimen of an otherwise-extinct tree. The tree is shunned by all life, including mortals.

ARDA: Mil. Str. Major fortress on the island of OPONIS in the PARTHISAN colony of NISSA^(1.). It guards entrance into the BAY OF MADA, protecting the city of Nissa^(2.) from coastal attack.

ARDEN: Ind. Soc. Bus. PATRICIAN HOUSE and one half of the HARAKHAND

ARDEN POWDERGUN manufacturers based in PELASGOS. See Vol II:
Patrician Houses.

ARDFAEN: f. His. Pol. Per. (B. 2566 – D. 2639 RM) Queen of MOTTANIA^(2.), who ruled alongside her husband the tyrannical king FAEGRIN, until he was defeated and imprisoned in the SIEGE OF CAER SIDI. She was married to the warlord TORRVAN in 2588 RM following his successful attack of CAER SIDI^(2.) who had his previous wife, the maiden ELOEVREN locked up until her death in 2612 RM, after which Torrvan changed the constitution, making him king and Ardfaen his wive, becoming queen consort.

As consort of a newly-united region, she was keen on fostering cooperation and unity between the disparate people of the former territories of PRAETTANIA, and worked to secure peace throughout her rule. She sired seven children with king Torrvan before her death in 2639 RM.

ARDIKHALU: also 'Dream quest'. Soc. Dre. In N'RAKH, young AANTH champions are expected to undertake a DREAM QUEST before rising to the full rank of K'HAT. The young men are drugged by the tribes' ATTERKHAT and sent out on a DREAM quest into the wasteland of EPIRU, where they are expected to survive for months alone. Only after their return are the young aantha deemed strong enough to be called K'hat.

ARECHI: Set. Coastal city in HOAMM^(L), in the south east of the KORACHANI PENINSULA, with an influential naval tradition. Arechi was once a part of KORACHAN and was the starting point of many CRUSADES and expeditions south to SAMMAEA and the deeper KHARKHARADONTID desert

Today it is known for its large coal port, which imports most of the coal used by mainland Hoamm (Pop. c. 36,000).

ARECHI CODEX: see LHIBOR IKAL.

ARECLAN: Set. Settlement in the c of THE OLD FOREST, south of the EPITRACHON Mountains. The settlement is known for its granite mines that stretch for miles north, making use of the last remnants of natural resources in the region. Parts of the mines are located in gigantic boulders suspended within the aerial roots and branches of the RAM'ATHI forest (Pop. c. 8,000).

ARED: 1. Rvr. River in PARTHIS flowing for over 100-miles before meeting its parent, the river ESHMUN.

2. Geo. Valley in the c of PARTHIS, in the SIPYLANA Mountains.

AREDERU: Set. Fortified settlement in the north east of the tribe of ASSAGOS, in the east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 52.000).

AREDONTO: Cav. Caves in the KORACHANI colony of AMONDOR (1.) known for their expansive overhanging opening that splits into three distinct branching caves that reach far beneath the cliffs of SUMANDA.

AREDUINN: For. Forest deciduous (broadleaf) forest in the centre north of KOMMEA, to the south VAELDRAN and BRAT EDRAN Mountains. One of the last sizeable remnants of Fourth Age virginal forests, the Areduinn is known for its heavy undergrowth, dense cover and plentiful wildlife.

AREL: Set. City in the region of LURIUM in the west of TZALLRACH, in the delta of the river ARELLI. Though the region of Lurium is arid, the delta surrounding the annual deposits of the river BAELLI are extremely fertile and the city enjoys good agriculture thanks to trade that moves up- and down-stream.

In 3973 RM the city became the centre of plot to overthrow the government of Lurium, but it was thwarted by the DIARCH of BALBETH. Dozens of people were slain as a result and the city became shunned for a generation and its people have only recently become accepted across Tzallrach again (Pop. c. 26,000).

ARELLI: Rvr. River in TZALLRACH flowing south west for 1,140-miles, from sources in the ARGENT and MAULIMM highlands before emptying in the SEA OF VENTHA. It is one of the main rivers in Tzallrach and many industrial cities are located on its banks.

ARELLIA: Ser. City in the south of AZAZEM, overlooking the SEA OF BATHOS⁽¹⁾. It is a relatively new city, populated by those displaced by the retreat of the coastline in the last 1,000 – 500-years. Known early on as a settlement of tinkerers, it rapidly gained a reputation for fast working shipbreakers, and HOUSE AMBTOR now owns the city, which is guarded by armed private forces (Pop. c. 10,000).

ARELLUNO: See PATH OF THOUGHT.

AREMMI: 1. Ind. Large basalt quarry under the control of the below city^(2.) in the south east of IO. The quarry is famed for its black stones, and for their hexagonal cross-sections. The stones have been used in various architectural elements in Io and SARASTRO over the years, including many ancient structures.

2. Set. City in the east of IO. Its main industry is the quarrying of hexagonal basaltic stones for use in architecture across Io, which has made the city relatively wealthy and important to the vassal state's economy (Pop. c. 36,000).

AREMOD: Rel. Flo. A specific sacred tree located in TEMUJA, 10-miles north of the capital city DUARIAHAHN. Its expansive fanning branches are covered in red streamers, each of which is a prayer to the TUTELARY SPIRIT inside it for aid. The tree is guarded by an ancient militant monastic order, dating back some 1200 years.

AREN, RUNE OF: In PARAIYA, the RUNE of the HORNED CHARGER.

AREN: 1. Lak. Artificial lake in the c of PARAIYA, created when the river NOTHIYA was dammed in c. 3930 RM.

2. Mil. Rnk. Plr. 'Arenear'. Non-combative military rank within the KORACHANI EMPIRE'S armies. They are scribes, AMANUENSIS, and transcribers, chronicling the speeches, edicts, terms and other words of generals and important ranks. The first Aren was Arenos, a follower of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR, who recorded his speeches in Korachan in –3 RM, following his first major victory there. His son, Vanaren, followed Arenos' footsteps, and took his father's name as his own, beginning the tradition of the Arenear.

ARENA: 1. Geo. In PARAIYA, home of the tribe of AREN.

2. Set. Fortified coastal city in the far south west of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of EDICULE^(1.), along the border with TAMAR. It began life as a bridge linking TAMAR and HARÉ SHKA, though later evolved into a caravanserai serving the GREAT ROAD trade-route that ran between the settlement itself and the Tamaran city of ARAGOSH. The two names are thought to be etymologically linked, believed to be tied to a nearby ruin now known as AHVEG (Pop. c. 34,500).

ARENA OF TINAVORAS: Rui. Abandoned arena in the c north east of THE VORANDINE, to the north west of the KHABARDINE fens. An extensive network of half-buried ruins surrounds the arena, possibly dating back to the late FOURTH AGE, indicating that a city once stood on this place. Historians attribute the TINAVA dance that is still culturally-relevant amongst the present-day Vorandi people to this ancient city and specifically this arena, which would have seated around 30,000 people.

The arena is now ATRAMENTALLY-TAINTED, known for SHADOWISPS that appear in the surrounding air.

ARENKAR: Ser. Small city in the far south east of PHYRR. Originally coastal, it is now around half a mile from the coast following the waning of ELYDEN'S seas. It is around 6-miles west of the active warzone with MAENMIST and suffered under months of incessant bombardments in c. 3975 – 3980 RM, which left most of its eastern districts levelled. The city has started to rebuild, though remains greatly diminished, with most of its young men drafted into the war effort (Pop. c. 15,000).

ARERAQTH: Ntn. Dem. 'Areraqthi'. Expansive empire in the far north east of EASTERN MENISCEA, most of which lies to the north of the northern POLAR CIRCLE.

The collapse of the $\underline{XYRPHANI\, EMPIRE}$ in c. 3710 RM, allowed Areraqth to expand rapidly to the south, taking over many cities and regions in the resultant chaos. This period lasted until 3722 RM, when a treaty was signed between Areraqth and the remaining states of $\underline{XYRPHAAT}^{(3)}$, which stands to this day. Its western territories lie on the ruin of the $\underline{FOURTH\, AGE}$ empire of $\underline{JORINDHIA}$. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

ARERAQTHI PUZZLE BALLS: Soc. Obj. ARERAQTHI artisans are famed for the intricate puzzle balls that they make from solid pieces of MAMMOTH ivory that are meticulously carved into concentric detached hollow spheres that when moved into a particular configuration reveal a hidden object, often a small ivory sphere cared from the centre of the solid object.

ARESH: 1. Geo. Plains in the north east of AHRISHEN, stretching into eastern VIRAHAN.

2. Rvr. Large river flowing west from VIRAHAN (where it is known as the YELLOW RIVER), through the entirety of AHRISHEN for about 2,500-miles from sources in the A SAVI Mountain, the SALKHAN Massif, and the CANEM HALAT Mountains, before emptying into the SEA OF PYREA. The river is the life-blood of AHRISHEN, and is fed by a long rainy season and snowmelt from the above Mountains. Its main tributaries are the equally impressive river SAVEST, SARA, and PELADA, though it is known to have hundreds, if not thousands of smaller (and in some cases seasonal)

Much of the river course is dominated by wetlands, with explode in size with flooding throughout the year. This flooding also results in the growth of the dozens of lakes that can be found along the course of the river Aresh, the largest being lake NAIDA.

3. Rvr. Canal in the c of AHRISHEN, forming part of the AHRISHENI WATERWAYS, linking the river Aresh ⁽²⁾ and lake ACTAEA. It is 93-miles long and contains 43 major locks, including one stepped lock at the city of KALPIS.

ARESHI: 1. Ntn. Dem. 'Areshin'. Ancient late FOURTH AGE nation located in what are today thought to be RHAMIA, AHRISHEN and the east of the OLD FOREST. It fractured following the WAR OF SCOURGING, and its descendants would go on to found the nation of ARSHEESH.

2. Eth. People native to the plains of $\underline{ARESH}^{(1.)}$ in what is now $\underline{AHRISHEN}$. They were part of a vast empire that dominated the region in the \underline{FOURTH} \underline{AGE} , and their descendants would go on to mingle with the $\underline{LEVANTINE}^{(2.)}$ and $\underline{KHUDARI}$ people, from which the early Fifth Age nation of ARSHEESH would rise.

Most Ahrisheni people are considered Areshi to this day and are pale, with dark eyes and hair that ranges from ash, to golden, and brown hair. See Vol II: Peoples and Races of Elyden.

ARESHAN: His. Lan. Now-extinct language that was spoken by the late FOURTH AGE nation of ARESHI, that emerged from the earlier GOETHAN. The extant language of AHRISHENI evolved from it. See Vol II: Languages.

ARESHIS: Set. City in the c south of PARTHIS, along the widest part of the course of the river ESHMUN. The city is a major producer of fish (trench, perch and salmon) in Parthis (Pop. c. 17,500).

ARESTA: For. Boreal forest across the border between the east of DURCHAA^(1.) and the south of PERGOST.

ARESTAS EVERTAN, SCOURGE OF SHADOW: (B. 3978 RM) Tec. Sup. Unschooled TECHNOLOGIST and ATRAMENTAL SHAPER who rose from obscurity in late 4005 RM in the south of SKAROS, denouncing the rule of KORACHAN. She discovered latent abilities with the FIRMAMENT in 4005 RM, making her one of the rare few DYCHOTI able to shape both halves of the MATERIA OMNA.

ARETALOG: also 'the Bragging City'. Set. City in the c of THE SURRACH, in the region of CAESURA. It is known for its spectacular tombs carved into the cliffs of the HARASHI escarpment behind the city, and each has elaborately hewn relief vignettes and entrances that are 50-ft. up the cliff and inaccessible (Pop. c. 17,000).

ARETH: Geo. Valley in PARTHIS.

ARETH NEL: Set. fortified town in the north of the island of KHEMET in c southern KHAMID, with views of the SEA OF PHARANX to the east and the PHARESES to the west. Before the CATACLYSM OF KHAMID, the town was situated near an oasis, serving as an influential caravanserai to trade between kingdoms (Pop. c. 2,000).

AREVIK: His. Rel. Org. One of two sun-cults that rose in the KORACHANI EMPIRE c. 3000 RM. Arevik was a little-known SAINT of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, canonised in 1248 RM. In c. 3000 he became the figurehead of a new movement that started in the CITY OF ALMAGEST that bemoaned the diminishing sun and the death of ELYDEN and the empire's fault in its near-absolute use of the ATRAMENTA above the FIRMAMENT and the repercussions of such activities. The saint was excommunicated following the rapid spread of the cult, though after attempts to cull it were unsuccessful (the cult having already become ingrained in the populace's culture) re-canonised him in 3307 RM in a bid legalise the rise of the cult and proclaimed ST. AREVIK a prophet of the Machine.

ARGDUN: Mil. Rnk. Lit. 'fortress guardian'. Military title in NÁRTHEL, SARASTRO and VENTHIR (dating to the time of the VENATHI EMPIRE) bestowed upon military commanders in charge of fortresses. In Sarastro they were also of influence in the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE following the SECULAR DISSOLUTION in 1393 RM, where they became powerful provincial figures until c. 2750 RM following the EDICT OF NICAEA.

ARGEA: Pol. Set. Ancient city and present-day capital city of SARASTRO, known for its many narrow streets, and its great white domes. It is a sprawling metropolis with many government-run bakeries, which distribute bread daily to its population, and is of a storied history dating back to 339 RM, when its foundations were first laid on the EXCIAN HILL following the victory of the Archpotentate Malichar there. The LICHKING SATHEP THE RISEN was made regent of the nation and constructed a great citadel known as the LICHFORT, from which he and his government, known as the OVERCOUNCIL, rule to this day.

In 3703 RM it became the centre of the Sarastroan defence in the VENTHIRI/SARASTROAN WAR, which ultimately escalated into the WAR OF SUNDERING in which the KORACHANI EMPIRE reached as far as Argea, in what later became known as the SIEGE OF ARGEA, which encompassed two separate sieges. The city was mostly levelled following months of imperial bombardments and attacks, after which it was rebuilt. The LICHFORT – the home of the OVERCOUNCIL, Sathep's government – miraculously survived the bombardments.

The city now forms a vital part of the RED ROUTE, and is also the north eastern termination of the SALT ROAD. Its markets are filled with goods and produce from around the INNER SEA REGION and beyond (Pop. c. 4,200,000).

ARGEA, SIEGE OF: also 'the First Siege of Argea', and 'the Second Siege of Argea'. Not to be confused with the 339 RM Siege of Argea, that led to Sarastro becoming a child state of Korachan. Mil. His. Two connected sieges fought between KORACHAN and its allies and the dissident state of SARASTRO in the summer of 3705 RM in the final months of the WAR OF SUNDERING in the NORTHERN SARASTROAN CAMPAIGN.

The First Siege of Argea took place between the 5th and 15th of ASHTALEN, and it was a desperate gambit by the imperial forces following costly victories the previous month in NABASSAR and SOLONIA. From Solonia they marched south east onto ARGEA, throwing the full might their TECHNARCANE and mechanised divisions against its many concentric fortifications, bombarding the capital from afar. But Sarastroan SHAPER corps neutralised the threat, causing major casualties in the imperial ranks before they could even reach Argea.

Eventually, imperial forces made their way to the outskirts of the city where they scattered, taking cover as they consolidated in various strategic points outside Argea, from where they unleashed oghur and steel oghur shock troops. Mechanised legions disgorged legions of conscripts and fanatics that sowed discord amongst the Sarastroan defence. Most died, though their sacrifice allowed better trained and equipped forces to advance relatively untouched on the $11^{\rm th}$.

Eventually, TOMYRESS VILKA, the most infamous Korachani ARCHSHAPER taking part in the war, reached a small tower a few miles outside Argea. Clad in the revered IRON MANTLE AUSPICES OF SHADOW, and supported by 6 of the famed PROEDRIIN of LAASKHA, she began to penetrate dissident magickal defences, surveiling the surrounding area, passing on detailed intelligence to imperial army command before moving closer. On the 12th she was able to sneak into the city unseen thanks to the mantle, from where she was able to disrupt Sarastroan communications. Meanwhile the Proedriin permanently neutralised the city's magickal defences, allowing long range disruptions to recommence, giving imperial armies the opportunity to press the attack.

It was only through the efforts of the LICHKING SATHEP'S ARCHIDOXES – powerful Archshapers and acolytes of his HESYCHASTIC teachings – that the assailants were unable to utterly break down the Argean defences – both magickal and material.

Over the next three days the imperial armies continued to attack Argea, though the Sarastroan defence was dogged, leading to a stalemate in the outskirts of the city. Few, if any, Korachani troops make it into the centre of the city. But it was the FIRST RITUAL OF SEGARRA that levelled the VENTHIRI city of CORYBANT, killing 200,000 civilians that caused the attack to falter and imperial morale to plumet.

The Second Siege of Argea took place between the 19th and 30th NIHAVALEN, a month after the SECOND RITUAL OF SEGARRA devastated the city of TARATI⁽²⁾. Fresh conscripts recruited in the wake of the devastation wrought by the Rituals bolstered existing imperial forces in Sarastro, providing the backbone of a new army that assaulted the city following further bombardments from afar. The conscript assault was followed by elites, tanks, shaper corps and shock troops, including the indomitable IRON ANGEL and STEEL LEGIONNAIRES of the Korachani 1st Gryphonnes (numbering some 2,000-strong – the largest number of legionnaires seen in the war so far) stormed the city but found themselves in a minefield trapped between a specialists hiding in ruined manufactories, who slaughtered them.

The Iron Angel was attacked by three Archidoxes, who severely damaged her, forcing her to retreat. Without the inspiring presence of the Iron Angel and the Legionnaires, what remained of the Korachani army was cut down, its fresh recruits unprepared for the horrors of what they see. The remnants fled and scattered to the north in what later became known as the ROUT OF THE KORACHANI 1ST.

It was a blow the imperial army did not fully recover from and despite the stubbornness of THE COUNCIL OF SEVEN, it became clear then that Sarastro had gained the upper hand, though desperate fighting continued across Sarastroan cities, with cities and manufactories serving as the battlegrounds.

The Sarastroan Treaty was signed the next month, ending the war with a victory for the Sarastroan Coalition, leading to the Sundering of the Empire.

ARGEAN PIPELINE: Sup. Ind. UMBRA pipeline in the c of Sarastro going north, for over 400-miles to the CAPITAL from facilities in NEYSHABUR and the SHAMAL. Its main controller is PATRICIAN HOUSE MORISKER.

ARGENT: also 'the Silver Mountains'. Geo. Major mountain-chain that serves as a natural border between the nations of MALAN and TETHYSIA in the west and KREM, TETHYSIA and TISARA in the east. The mountain-chain stretches around 3,000-miles across LLACHATUL, from IAPETAN SEA in the south to the nation of Tisara in the north, and it serves as the common subcontinental division between CENTRAL LLACHATUL in the west and EASTERN LLACHATUL in the east.at the border between Llachatul and MENISCEA.

Named after the plentiful silver deposits that once were mined there, it is now less bountiful, and the hollows of ancient quarries and mines now dot its hills, particularly in the Malani $\underline{\text{HENDECARCHIES}}$ of $\underline{\text{DERAEIA}}$ and ATALLUA.

ARGENT CITADEL, the: Rui. Ancient tower in the eastern face of the ARGENT Mountains, in the far west of TETHYSIA. It is thought to be an ILLIDRAEN stronghold in the FOURTH AGE, though is believed to have been destroyed during the WAR OF SCOURGING. Today it lies ruined, reduced to parts of its foundations, with tarnished silvery boulders littering the slopes around it. Parts of its masonry – which are indeed made of a silvery alloy – have been looted over the years, but its relative isolation have left it largely undisturbed my mortals in the millennia since the FADING of FOURTH AGE.

ARGENT EAGLE: Fau. Large bird of prey native to the south of EASTERN LLACHATUL, east of the ARGENT Mountains, after which they are named. Their eggs are a prized delicacy to various communities, particularly KREM, and ridge runners spend months in the wilderness tracking the flight of the birds in the hopes of finding their well-hidden nests. The eggs sell for more than their weight in gold and are highly valued by gourmands for their particular taste. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

ARGENT PASSAGE: Geo. Ancient route across the ARGENT Mountains, linking the west of TETHYSIA with the east of TZALLRACH. Cultural and political changes over the past millennia have left it largely abandoned, its passes, which were once well-maintained, are now abandoned and untraversable.

ARGHA: His. Ntn. Human and predominantly MULL nation to the south and east of the BLACK MOUNTAINS that appeared in the FIFTH AGE OF MORTAL LIFE, and is descended from pastoral survivors of an earlier FOURTH AGE nation.

Even in this distant time, the soils east of the Black Mountains were fertile, encouraging grazing and the early cultivation of crops. By the time the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI EMPIRE}}$ appeared, the region was home to hundreds of small communities, most of which had integrated mull and human populations. Those in the north were famed for their rich volcanic soils and their produce, and those in the south were independently working iron soon after Korachan, becoming skilled metallurgists. It was during this time that colonists from $\underline{\text{LASCAR}}^{(3)}$ made landfall and settled what is today $\underline{\text{AHKA}}$, where they merged with the native populace.

By c. 1900 RM these people were overseen by the great city of ARGHAM, the surrounding lands of which were known as Argha. The city and its satellites were destroyed by Korachani forces in 2906 RM, following years of attacks. The city was taken and renamed ARKAM the next year, as the remnants of the scattered mull population were hunted down by invading Korachani troops, though many managed to scatter to surrounding lands.

The fall of Argha eventually gave rise to the nations of ATARAXIA in the north and AHKA in the south. See Vol III: Extinct States.

ARGHAAV: Pol. Soc. Bus. Influential KORACHANI PATRICIAN HOUSE based in the colony of TAVVADRA (1.) with a long history of service to the GRIGORIAN ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION. It is a mercantile power, and owns large numbers merchant vessels, that form a vital link between the heartland and the distant colony.

NUALLA INEN ARGHAAV, one of the present TRIUMVIRS of the Grigorian Order, is a direct member of the House, being the younger sister of the present PATRIARCH^(1.).

ARGHAM: His. Ntn. Extinct mull city-state south of the BLACK MOUNTAINS founded along the base of a large spire-like mesa known as GHULKULL. It appeared in c. 800 RM and soon became capital of the nation of ARGHA that comprised most of present-day ATARAXIA and AHKA.

By c. 1900 RM it had become famous for its great mortuary complexes, and the tunnels that made their way deep into the ground, many of which are still in use to this day by the city of ARKAM. It was also famed as the largest concentration of mulls in all of ELYDEN.

The city and neighbouring satellites were wiped out by KORACHANI forces in 2906 RM, following a savage campaign against it. Korachan would rechristen the city Arkam the next year.

ARGHAMISH: Lan. Language spoken by the people of ARGHAM. When the city-state was destroyed by KORACHANI forces in 2906 RM, refugees fled south, eventually founding the MULL CITY-STATES, whose people speak the tongue to this day. The language is similar to AHKAN, suggesting a common root, most likely a FOURTH AGE MULL language. See Vol II: Languages.

ARGIDER: Set. City in the north of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of ALAMUT. It was once a large and thriving centre of FIRMAMENTAL study (Pop. c. 22,000).

ARGIL CADRE, the: Rel. Str. Expansive hewn catacombs outside the settlement of GOIIDHU, in the c of PERGOST, in the north of LLACHATUL. The cadre is made up of thousands of life-size clay soldiers, divided into small groups of between 2 – 20 each. Each group guards a crypt in which a single mummified ORREX is interred.

The catacombs were added to throughout the reign of the Orrex dynasty, and upon the ascent of a new Orrex to the throne, the catacombs would be lengthened, with a new crypt added, ready for the death of the Orrex. Each tomb was dedicated at the behest of the individual Orrex. The largest and most recently-constructed crypt, dedicated to the LAST Orrex, lies empty – his body never interred in the chaos of the civil war that saw the end of the ELDRIAN empire.

The necropolis is largely ignored today and is heavily damaged, with many of the argil statues damaged and decayed. Many of the crypts have been broken into over the years, with any riches they once contained looted long ago.

ARGOLIA: 1. Lak. Artificial lake in the c north of VÂRR, created by the construction of the dam known as the STEEL CATARACT. The lake is amongst the largest man-made lakes in LLACHATUL and has an estimated volume of 7,500 squared-miles.

2. Ser. City in VÂRR. Following the withdrawal of the INTERREGES from Vârr in 3791 RM it remained under KORACHANI control, with overseers maintaining operations of the STEEL CATARACT, which still produces electricity used in eastern Korachan.

The city became a hub for refugees from dozens of other cities left defenceless and barren by the Interreges retreat from Vârr, and survives to this day as an example of what can be done with ingenuity and hard work. The city grew from its first years and is now one of the strongest and largest cities in the free Vârr (Pop. c. 125,000).

AGROTA: Ind. Set. Manufactory-city in the east of SARASTRO, forming one of the western-most settlements along the course of the NATHI ROAD trade-route (Pop. c. 16,000).

ARGYRA: Set. Settlement in the north of GNOTH, along the course of river IZARIEL. It is largely self-sufficient and the GIGANRI who live there spend a great deal of time meditating and contemplating the nature of life.

Their musings were collected and published by the giganri annalist Neburo in 3891 RM, eventually becoming popular amongst Gnothi people in more urban areas, beginning a new spiritualist movement that is observed to this day. His writings also made their way to the INNER SEA REGION, where they found their way into black-markets, becoming popular curios amongst the literate classes (Pop. c. 3,800).

ARGYROPOEIA: Alc. Mys. In ALCHEMY, the transmutation of lead to silver. Though a similar effect can be gleaned through TECHNARCANE application, the process is not cost-effective and is used, at best, as a novelty.

ARHA: Ser. Fortified city in the north east of RHAMIA. It lies along the course of the GREY ROAD (Pop. c. 35,500).

ARHAHANU: Geo. Arid valley in the c of THETIS, to the east of the RTHEI desert.

ARHALARMIS: Geo. Roughland region in the south east of the TURCAR desert in the c south west of TETHYSIA, known for glass-like mesas and labyrinthine slot canyons.

ARHARNAZHA I: (? – D. 3867 RM) Oth. OTHERWORLDER ruler of SUOR and the head of its Thaumaturgy. Came to power in 3496 RM following decades of uncertainty and chaos due to continuous KORACHANI attacks in the form of the EGRET CRUSADES that were particularly harsh in the region, leaving what is now the south east of Suor, around the BAY OF ORMA, in tatters, with entire cities emptied by its witch hunters and slavers.

ARHARNAZHA I, TOMB OF: Rel. Str. Temple to the east of lake MUDARI in the c of SUOR. It is the final resting place of the OTHERWORLDER ARHARNAZHA I, who founded Suor in 3496 RM and ruled the Theocratic council until his mysterious death in 3867 RM. His body is encased in a block of glass and is on display where he is venerated, almost as a religious figure by those who were loyal to him.

ARHARNAZHA VI: (B. 3991 RM) Pol. The current ruler of SUOR, and direct descendant of ARHARNAZHA I, he is a 5th generation HALFBLOOD of 16 years and has a reputation for pettiness. He surrounds himself with 4 CREANT bodyguards, whose origins are unknown. His rule over the Theocracy is harsh and unpredictable.

Arharnazha is the first figure of a dynasty that continues to this day, with its halfblooded offspring ruling the Thaumaturgy, with each generation taking on lesser roles within society.

Arharnazha died in 3867 RM, and was never replaced, and the nation. Is now ruled by the Theocratic council, based in the city of KIASH. His body is preserved in a glass block in a bombastic tomb-temple outside lake MUDARI. A small cult of character has emerged around him, and the tomb has become synonymous with his reign.

ARHBAH: 1. Sea. Bay off the north eastern coast of ABACARDAT, in the east of SAMMAEA, forming the southern-most part of the SEA OF LETHEA. Like most smaller bodies of water within the Lethea, the amnesic traits of the parent sea are not as pronounced here, but not unknown.

2. Rui. Ruined city that once boasted a major harbour and port, where trade from across the LETHEA and beyond was brought to ancient ABACARDAT. It was abandoned in c. 2200 RM following the retreat of the Sca. The present-day city of the same name^(3.) is named after it.

3. Set. Large coastal city in the north east of ABACARDAT. It maintains good relations with ANANTHUL, with which it trades across the SEA OF BIMARIA (Pop. c. 68,000).

ARHIR: Set. Small coastal city in the east of EZASUH^(2.). Its people are skilled foragers (Pop. c. 14,800).

ARHSH HAAS: Geo. Rocky valley in the c east of AHKA.

ARI, CHAMPION OF CHAR MÂTHI: f. Mil. Soc. Per. (B. 3981 RM) Female TZALLRACHI banneret.

ARIA: Str. Lower district of the city of ADAIA in SAUA. The district is noted for its many residential areas, scattered markets and many small temples, as well as hundreds of small industries and businesses.

ARIADNE THAMOS: f. Pol. Per. (B. 3961 RM) PATRICIAN of HOUSE THAMOS stationed in TETHRA as an ambassadorial attaché. She is infamous for her words during the republic council of PARTHIS of summer 4005 RM, where she spoke to Parthisan diplomats with disdain, telling them to 'Quit your snivelling, wretches. Your so-called empire has grown fat and weak, and were it up to me our fleet would be blockading your ports as I speak'. Her words led to a fracturing of relations between the two nations, a state of affairs that continues to this day, though she was hailed as a hero in KHADON and spurred many politicians into increased military spending after decades of conservatism.

ARIC VELOR: m. Per. (B. 3959 RM) High-ranking member of the GRIGORIAN ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION, where he serves as a Diviner-general. Velor's accurate predictions have aided the empire through numerous crises, guiding the Order to vanquish various threats.

ARID TRIPTYCH, the: Pol. Geo. Lan. Colloquial name in the KORACHANI EMPIRE for SARASTRO, IO and VENTHIR (though Io has, in recent years, been more popularly replaced with ANUBIA); in the dry peninsula to the east of SAMMAEA, just north east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER.

ARIDAN GULF: Sea. Sea forming a southern extension of the larger SEA OF ORRIDA, dividing the south east of Kazzar from the north of the BARRIER LANDS. It was originally much larger, extending some 80-miles to the south of its present shoreline, though decreased in size as the sea levels of ELYDEN slowly decreased.

ARIEH: 1. Set. Coastal island off the western coast of TZALLRACH, overlooking the cliffs of the BOILING SEA.

2. Set. Small city on the above island $^{(1)}$ in $\overline{\text{TZALLRACH}}$. It originated in c. -1000 RM as a land-locked caravanserai in the west of ancient mainland

Tzallrach. By -600 RM it was under the control of the $\underline{\text{NATHI KINGDOM}}$ and served as a fortress to its northern troops.

Following the LAVIID DISSOLUTION that saw NATH and Tzallrach sundered, the fortress was abandoned, falling into ruin until after the CATACLYSM OF KHAMID, where it remained, overlooking the newlyformed cliffs of the Boiling Sea. It was repopulated in c. 2000 RM, from where it has since overseen travel across the east of the sea (Pop. c. 19,000).

ARILLIEN: Rvr. River in the south of TEMUJA flowing east from the northern face of the BRAHAIN highlands for over 1,000-miles, before meeting its parent, the river LAKOSH in MALAN.

The river often breaks its banks following early summer snowmelt, which leads to the formation of the ephemeral lake SAH AUR, whose waters mix with those of the river AIHANE.

ARILLIEN, WATCHTOWER OF: Mil. Str. Major fort and wall in the c south west of TEMUJA, overlooking the trade-route with BAATAN south east of the DUJÁRHI foothills. It was built in c. 3000 RM during a time of political instability with SAUA. The HIGH-MARSHALL of the tower is called the BEHOLDER.

ARIMALKA: Leg. Fau. Heraldic creature common in KHAR NADUL, HANNAH, and QARALAM. Most commonly depicted as a lion with avian features, it is thought to have once been a real creature, possibly a GODSBORN of ARIMASPI that was wiped out in ages past.

ARIMASPI: also 'the Noble Beast'. m. Myt. His. Per. In the mythology and ancient history of ELYDEN, tenth of the Two-and-Twenty DEMIURGES, whose children were the VAPULIM.

Many of Elyden's wild beasts are said to be his creations, as are creatures as varied as AIKLAHS, EELYOUHNS and the rarer GRIFFINS and SPHINXES.

Arimaspi is commonly depicted as a centaur-like creature, with large wings that at times are either feathered, membranous or iridescent. His body is an amalgam of many of the creatures that are associated with him — his face has snake-like eyes, the snout of a hound, bat ears, bear teeth, deer horns and a wild feather-like mane. This chest is scaly and his four legs end in cloven feet, and he is often depicted in the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN as moulting with the seasons, his appearance changing accordingly.

His known SCIONS are: DENDYDRIS, ENNEI, ERES, HATO MEDICER^(2.), HURD, SHARAM, and THEREON. See Vol IV: the Two-and-Twenty Demiurges.

ARIMASPI, BEAST OF: also 'Haghor -l'Arimaspi', 'Azgalar', and 'Rahagor'.

Fau. Large beast native to the island of ISEA and also found in lesser numbers in surrounding lands, including the west of BROR (1.) and south eastern SAMMAEA (including ZHARIAH (2.), SHEZALIAH, and QARALAM.

The creature is somewhat smaller than an elephant, and is far less bulky, known for its powerful gallop and charge. Its appearance is distinctive, with thick short tail and a brown-grey hide that is visible along its hindquarters and hind legs, though which is obscured beneath a thick mane of purple and green pearlescent feathers. It has a thick, powerful nek and a wide mouth, all of which contribute to the mistaken belief that it is a carnivore. In truth, the creature is an omnivore, subsisting largely on roots, tubers, bark and nuts, though it is also known to scavenge on any carcasses it may find.

Beasts of Arimaspi are easily startled and of short temper, making them incredibly dangerous, though individuals have been tamed and they make for formidable mounts. Their distinctive appearance has made them a popular subject for artists, and various peoples and cultures have adopted the Beast of Arimaspi as an emblem or heraldic device, and most people are familiar with them through their depictions in art despite never having seen them in the flesh. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life

ARIMASPI'S FOOTPRINT: also 'D'haid Arimaspi'. Leg. Geo. Endorheic depression in the west of DHAT, on the north west of the island of ISEA. Local legends claim that it is one of the regions in ELYDEN that was directly shaped by the hands of a DEMIURGE, in this case ARIMASPI. Records detailing the region as a verdant paradise date back to the FOURTH AGE, when explorers noted it for its sheer unequalled beauty, and though Elyden's slow decay has led to its diminishing it is still prized as one of the most picturesque regions of Elyden.

Flanked by low mountains on all sides and covered in evergreen woodlands divided by shallow ravines, streams, and brushland, it is a haven to wildlife and is protected by an ancient order of guardians from across Isea who are granted freedom by the government of Dhat to operate in the peripheries of the footprint. These Guardians, known as the D'HAID MARAKA, which roughly translates to GUARDIANS OF THE FOOTPRINT, spend their lives in service to the region, making sure it is not defiled or otherwise damaged by outsiders.

ARINAMA: Str. Set. Bridge city in the c west of TZALLRACH, along the fork between the river BAELLI and IZIAMI. Given its location, it has become a hub of trade and travel in Tzallrach, forming a part of the GREAT ROAD. It is also noted for its numerous scholars and sages, amongst which the most noted are those of the LODGE OF THE FIRMAMENTIANS (Pop. c. 65,000).

ARINIEL: Geo. Expansive hills in the c east of KOLCHIS, serving as a divide between the VANDAHARI and DOERIAN watersheds.

ARINIX: Set. Small fortified city in the east of ALMAGEST (Pop. c. 12,000).
ARIOCH OF MOETIA: (B. 3971 RM) Pol. Born a NOMARCH in MOETIA, in TZALLRACH, Arioch would go on to become a DIARCH. He was one of two Nomarchs of the clan of Moetia who tamed the lion VALEFAR, who remained his companion until its death.

ARIQ SADR: 1. Sup. Mildly ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region in the east of Chaira, just west of the city of the same name. Little is known of the region, but it is avoided by locals and its peripheries are patrolled by skilled shaper rangers who keep surrounding lands free of tainted beings that have emerged from the region.

2. Set. City in the east of CHEIRA. It is base to a cadre of (Pop. unknown).

ARIRDA: Pol. Set. Capital of the HENDECARCHY of CHLORIS, in the c south east of the FOREST KINGDOM of MALAN. The city is ancient, built atop the ruins of a far older NAHORIAN city-state. Its large slanted sandstone walls are a dominating feature and the city beyond is built atop a mesa on a few different tiers, the highest of-which is home to most of its administrative districts. Today it is the largest industrial centre in Malan, and its factories and foundries are responsible for much of the steel and manufactured goods across the FOREST KINGDOMS (Pop. c. 2,100,000).

ARIROR: Set. City in the far north of the tribe of LINARIS, in the south of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. It is one of few emerging industrial centres in the region that processes adamantine from nearby mines in BERAK (Pop. c. 26,000).

ARIS: Geo. Crescent-shaped highland region 375-miles long in the c north of VAALK, and source of the river RIPARIS. The region takes its name from the KORACHANI word for blackness, after the dark nature of its rocks (though some have postulated it might be after its many regions of ATRAMENTAL dominance).

ARIS NU: Geo. Pass in the c north west of VAALK, mid-way across the ARIS Mountains.

ARIS TALMARA: m. Pol. Per. (B. 3750 – D. 3821 RM) KAPHAARI-born nobleman and son of a ruling plutocrat. Educated to the highest level attainable within Kaphaar, he grew up as a mentee of the notable philosopher ELENDI VARTHA, who for years secretly taught him of the corruption and inefficiency of the government.

He became disillusioned with the tarnished legacy of his birthright and under the urging of Elendi spearheaded a political movement that gained popularity among the emerging merchant class and the masses, slowly spreading across Kaphaar over a decade, finally reaching fruition in 3779 RM when the revolution hit the capital city Halagaa, eventually leading to the collapse of the government. He personally forced his father and his peers to abdicate their position, after which a new government, envisioned as a meritocracy, was established in 3780 RM following the penning of the PROCLAMATION OF MERIT. This led to the renaming of the region to KEPHUAAN.

ARISA: Set. Settlement in the south of OPHIUSSA, on the fertile XEIA delta of the river MARAGA. Its main industry is agriculture, and the growing of legumes (Pop. c. 4,800).

ARISOUL: Flo. Bulbous plant that is common in temperate climates across LLACHATUL. It is known for its large taproot that absorbs UMBRA from the surrounding area. It is cultivated and dried as a resin and used as a medicine (for use treating cancers and tumours) and, when diluted with herbs, is also used as a tobacco. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life

ARISTH: Sec. City in the south west of AETHIOS. It is known as the sole major city in which the SHAMANIC tradition once common to the RADNOR territories survive. The shamen form a ruling class within the region, and every season a shaman is sent to the capital in ETHAND to advise the council of the ABUNA (Pop. c. 30,000).

ARITEA: Geo. 780-mile-long peninsula in the south of THETIS. It is separated from the coast by the KAT ENNA inlet, and is characterised by dry garigue terrain in the north, sparse shrubland in the centre, and denser sub-tropical rainforest in the south.

ARITH: Set. Small city in the c north west of the TEMPLAR STATES. It is built besides an old TEMPLAR KNIGHT (2.) city that was quarantined during a local plague in c. 2900 RM, and the new city appeared outside its walls in c. 3100 RM, with the old city allowed to crumble. It is overgrown today, with most old structures reclaimed by nature (Pop. c. 14,000).

'ARISTOLOGY OF THE INNER SEA REGION: Vol. Cui. Expansive cookbook first published in 1006 RM detailing the cuisine and culinary costumes of the INNER SEA REGION (focusing on KORACHANI territories of the age).

It was written anonymously, though future volumes were edited and amended by a committee of editors, with the most recent edition being its 23rd, issued in 17 volumes, in 4001 RM. The later editions were much expanded and one can find cuisine and recipes from across ELYDEN, including many dishes and customs that have since died out, so it serves as a good repository of information and culture from across the ages.

ARITTA: Com. Ser. Major trade-city on the north western mainland of the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS (Pop. c. 150,000).

ARK: Cur. Common coinage in THE SURRACH, produced through punchmarking. The Ark is commonly valued at five SHIBS and 1/5th of a VALK. See Vol II: Currency and Coinage in Elyden.

ARKAB: Ast. Set. OBSERVATORY-CITY in the c north of AQUARIIA, at the foot of the NUNAKI MOUNTAINS. The city is situated atop a large mesa and is accessible via a single wide man-made bridge from the hills to the south (Pop. c. 72,000).

ARKAIM: Set. Major coastal city in the west of ALMAGEST. Its dry-docks are amongst the busiest along the Almagesti coast, after those of ALMAGEST itself. It is a part of the RED ROUTE, and its harbours are busy with merchants coming and going while navigating the trade-route. It is the northernmost major city to lie along the extent of the ALMAGESTI COASTAL BULWARK (Pop. c. 103,000).

ARKAINA: Geo. Savannahs in the north west of ARKOS (1.).

ARKALUH: Ser. Small fortified settlement in the north east of AQUARIIA. It controls the pass leading south to THE TEMPLE-CITY OF SUMMAR (Pop. c. 6,000).

ARKAM: 1. Set. KORACHANI city and colony founded in 2907 RM over the conquered mull city-state of ARGHAM, at the base of the spire of GHULKULL, 180-miles from the coast at the STRAIT OF SKAROS. For many years it was a productive city, supplying the Korachani empire's waning resources, though disorder due to political problems in SKAROS at the time left the place cut off from the capital, forced to fend for itself by 3305 RM.

The city and surrounding settlements later abdicated, becoming independent in 3311 RM following a short war against Korachan, in which it was aided by PARTHIS. The city's influence later spread and by c. 3449 RM it had grown to control the region east of the BLACK MOUNTAINS, becoming the nation of ATARAXIA.

2. Pol. Set. Capital of ATARAXIA since the nations' founding in 3449 RM. It has one of the largest concentrations of MULLS in Ataraxia and LLACHATUL and is a major link along the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 910,000).

ARKASHAN: 1. Sea. Bay in the far south of the SEA OF DAARKEN.

2. Rui. Once-capital of ARKOS^(1.), left ruined and abandoned following the retreat of the SEA OF ERIA. The city was once famed for its expansive vaulted harbours, which led to sea-caves, now landlocked and overgrown, almost 2-miles from the present coastline. To the west of city was a great colossus, overlooking the Bay of Arkashan. The city's riches were looted and taken east to $\underline{\text{DUN IACH}}$ and the present capital in $\underline{\text{DUN KHARR}}$. It is a common stop along the $\underline{\text{GRAND TOUR}}$, with students and artists stopping amid its ruined architecture to take $\underline{\text{HELIOGRAPHS}}$ or paint.

ARKH: Pol. Set. Major coastal city and capital of IDRIIS on the island of ISEA (Pop. c. 88,000).

ARKHATEN REBELLION: Pol His. A vote of no confidence led by the PATRICIAN-prince Arkhaten made within the LEAGUE OF PATRICIANS of KHADON, KORACHAN on the 22nd of KORAHALEN in 3704 RM, during the WAR OF SUNDERING. The act was a protest against the League's leadership, which many believed was in the pockets of warmongering patricians who were pushing for a more aggressive stance in the war. This saw the League collapse, leading to its temporary dissolution throughout the duration of the war. The effects of this were felt as far afield as the COUNCIL OF SEVEN, as well as manufactories and dross vaults across the empire.

ARKHIMYDES BELIN: m. Mil. His. Per. (B. – D. 3703 RM) Historical LIDEAN SARAKASHAR (general) who served in the SARASTROAN COALITION during the time of the WAR OF SUNDERING. He led the attack on the city of ENUK on the 15th MALICHALEN 3705 RM and was struck by shrapnel, later dying of his wounds 3-days later.

His death threw the Lidean army into disarray as his lieutenants quarrelled over who should replace him. It took the intervention of the LICHKING SATHEP himself, who appointed the Sarastroan ACHAXCE BENNALAB, a member of his OVERCOUNCIL, as his replacement.

ARKOS: 1. Dem. 'Arkosian'. Ntn. Nation that emerged from the doomed imperial colonies of EHBOT, to the south west of the DAARKEN GULF. The nation is known for its noble-caste of CUSTODES and ARKOS⁽³⁾, which are descended from the last STEEL LEGIONNAIRES left in the region by the KORACHANI EMPIRE before its withdrawal from Ehbot in 527 RM. These Legionnaires were of the earliest iteration and were capable of breeding true, unlike later iterations, and they maintained a dogma of strict incestuous breeding to maintain the traits of their founders: they are pale-skinned adonic figures, giants amongst the populace of Arkos.

Arkos itself lasted throughout the AGE OF STEEL, faltering only following a devastating SARASTROAN attack in 3522 RM, following which the last custode killed himself in 3822 RM, leaving the region in tatters, little more than disjointed cities and settlements that are no longer recognised as a nation by most present-day rivals. See Vol III: the Nations of Elyden.

2. Rui. Formerly the city of COLYIS, though renamed as Arkos, after the high-lords of the CUSTODES in 589 RM. The city grew under the patronage of the Custodes, becoming a hub of culture and trade in the nation of Arkos and was a city apart from the CITADEL MOUNTS to the east, maintaining a vibrant distinct character. By the time the COLOSSUS OF ARKOS was completed in 1462 RM, it had become a thriving metropolis; its vaulted tiered harbours crossing the isthmus of PHORI (2.) being the talk of its age. The city was experiencing the height of its golden age and a waning of Arkosian influence by c. 1500 RM, and boasted a population of c. 750,000. By c. 1850 RM the city's population had diminished to less than 400,000, until by c. 1900 RM it had become a ghost-town; its colossus rusted and pitted, its legendary harbour landlocked following the drying of ELYDENS' seas. By then its populace had largely migrated east to the Citadel Mounts, with the remnants being followers and sycophants of the few ARKOS(3.) and Custodes that remained there, unwilling to leave their ancestral home. The SARASTROAN attacks of Arkos in 3522 RM saw many refugees fleeing west to the abandoned city, seeing a renaissance of sorts, though it was not to last long, and the retreat of the Sarastroan slavers saw the city fragment once more.

3. Plr. 'arkosin'. Soc. Rnk. Pol. The noble caste of the nation of the same name. The Arkos are the descendants of the original STEEL LEGIONNARIES (prototypes of the Steel Legionnaires of today; who weren't VAT-BORN and could bear children) left in EHBOT in 527 RM and follow a strict dogma of inbreeding to keep their bloodline pure and their physical traits as close to those of their ancestors. Given this, they are renowned for their large frames (as much as 6'6"), bronze skin, dark eyes and largely hairless bodies and longevity (with an average lifespan of 180-200 years).

Intermarriage between Arkosi families is common and encouraged as much as possible to keep bloodlines pure, a practice that leads to some degree of birth defects which are not tolerated, with any signs of physical aberrancy extinguished as soon as possible. Many Arkosi are troubled by their imperial past and the rigours of their upbringing and dogma, with their dour character earning them a reputation for harshness that they used to their advantage in ruling Arkos.

The lords amongst the Arkos are granted the title of CUSTODE; an ancestral role that goes back to 547 RM that remains to this day. As the city of Arkos began to falter in c. 1900 RM, most of the Arkos migrated east to the CITADEL MOUNTS, though some (the eldest and most embittered) remain there, ensconced in their old villas and penthouses ruling over empty city. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life: Asicthain.

ARKOSIAN: Lan. Language spoken in ARKOS⁽¹⁾. It emerged from the earlier EHBOTIAN, and has taken adopted many KORACHANI traits over the centuries. See Vol II: Languages.

ARKOSIAN IDOLATRY: Rel. Polytheistic religion practiced in ARKOS^(1.), where the present-day denizens of the state venerate the idols and statues of the ancient CITADEL MOUNTS. It originated as a form ancestral worship in the days following the KORACHANI abandonment of EHBOT, where families paid their respects to ancient ancestors, though over time this turned to outright worship, with most families no longer being able to trace their lineage back to specific statues. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

ARKS OF PORPHYR: Phil. Obj. Gigantic ships built by near-ceaseless toil and slave-labour in PORPHYR. The purpose of such arks is steeped in mystery, though is believed to be rooted in a mix of religious and mystical roles that are not fully understood by outsiders. It is known that the arks were never built to be used on the sea – indeed in some cases they were constructed well over 100-miles from the coast, and used to be burnt as part of a religious ritual.

Though the practice is ancient, dating to the early FIFTH AGE, where it originated in the nation of \underline{ZOLOK} in c. 200 RM, and continues to this day in the east of $\underline{PORPHYR}$ and the north east of $\underline{SABAISA}$, and is most widespread in the city of $\underline{LEMEGETHAS}$ and the rest of the eastern coast of Porphyr, in the territories of $\underline{HIT\ PHATHARLOSS}$.

The practice is considered antiquated by the more progressive regions of Porphyr, and there is a growing divide between the west and the Arkbuilding culture in the east, which many believe will lead to a fracture of the nation before long.

ARLATH: Geo. Island 15-miles south off the southern coast of mainland HOAMM.

ARLEIE: f. Pol. His. Per. (B. 3155 – D. 3200 RM) the first queen of KOMMEA, who was the granddaughter of the exiled LOEGREAN king TRIDUAN.

She was raised on the ancient myths and legends of her Loegrean ancestors that made her truly believe she had a divine birthright and was destined to be a queen. For years she was moulded into the image of a queen – proud, strong, regal – and she was paraded across the once-disparate yet slowly consolidating territories of Kommea as a promised monarch. Sired by an exiled prince and the descendant of the DONAGERS, her bloodline as never in doubt. The people loved her from a young age and as her father ELDHUIN and grandfather toiled to solidify relations between the regions, it became clear that she would become an important character in the regions' politics.

Where many believed she would be betrothed to a local noble with an equally impressive genealogy, her father surprised many by pairing her with ABBARUD – a charismatic KHAMIDIAN exile of noble heritage – in 3172 RM, and the two were wed later that year. Her father died suddenly on a hunting trip in the HOLLOW COASTLINE a few months later, a personal tragedy she never fully recovered from, after which she traded her traditional green dress for black.

If the people loved her prior to becoming queen, her coronation only served to exacerbate these feelings. Wherever she went the people adored her, which irked her husband the royal consort. Her death of AEPATHY in 3177 RM after only a few months of illness came as a great tragedy, sending the entire kingdom into mourning. Some whispered that her husband – who, though a competent consort and shroud diplomat, was never well-liked by the Kommeans – but his displays of mourning and the monuments he had built in her honour put most such rumours to rest.

Despite this, he was quick to crown himself king rather than their young son.

ARM OF NEITH, the: Geo. An overgrown natural stone bridge spanning the river SIELL NA in the FOREST KINGDOM of STHAMAN in MALAN. In the myth of the people of ancient SEITHAL, was believed to be the arm of an ancient divinity, possibly the DEMIURGE NEITH(1.).

ARMAGH: 1. Lak. Lake in the west of AHRISHEN, along the course of the river HOLMA^(1.).

2. Set. City in the south west of AHRISHEN. It was taken by KORACHANI forces in 2431 RM, only to fall back into Ahrisheni hands in 2491 RM, where it remains now as a largely militarised border-town; its troops patrolling lands to the south west, along the border with LYRIDIA DHAI. The border south with LYRIDIA was recently opened and trade is slowly spreading across the two lands again, leading to a growth of the city (Pop. c. 42,000).

ARMATA: Set. Small city in the south of KHULL. It is known for its many small towers, which were first built by the KHULLAN INQUISITION in c. 2790 RM as a form of defence against the forces of the dreaded SORCERER-KINGS^(3,). Following the eradication of the Sorcerer-kings, the towers became part of the cultural identity of the region, with most family with the means to constructing towers, which became more a status symbol than a form of defence. The tradition of construction buildings as towers remains today, despite only a few of the original towers remaining intact today (Pop. c. 18,000).

ARMINA: Ind. Set. MANUFACTORY-settlement along the course of the river LOBKIR in NÁRTHEL (Pop. c. 8,000).

ARNAOT: Set. Small coastal city in the far north east of BANT, in the north east of the CARCHEMISHI PENINSULA^(1.), in the east of SAMMAEA. It has a sizeable harbour that is used to trade with nations to the north east, such as NOAVATUR (Pop. c. 18,000).

ARNAZZA: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the south east of CISNERIA, overlooking the border with SKAROS. It guards against possible KORACHANI incursion into its territories, and is heavily manned and well-defenced.

ARNYTH: Set. Small city in the c of KOMMEA, along the course of the river GOIRATH (Pop. c. 14,000).

ARNZA'S CHARTS AND GLOBES: Bus. Venerable boutique in the dockside district of the city of KORACHAN, known for its maps, nautical charts, books, atlases, and globes. It has existed for 1400 years and is considered one of the premiere purveyors of maps in all the KORACHANI EMPIRE, and is the best source for maps both ancient and modern, as well as oddities and curios from the colonial history of the empire.

ARNON: Rvr. River in the c of GYZHA flowing south for 185-miles from sources in the PARNASIAN and MUSSOR Mountains before reaching the coast at the SOUND OF SAPAH, at the SEA OF DURAHRAT.

ARODOCUS: (B. 3893 RM) ARCHPATRICIAN and governor of PELASGOS since 3987 RM. He was overthrown after the fall of the KORACHANI EMPIRE by the Pelasgosi PARABLISTS.

AROMUR: Geo. Arid plains in the south east of AETHIOS, crossing the TROPIC OF RAH, extending across the border with RHINOCOLOURA. The plains are notable for the major confluence where the river APENATI meets its parent, the river RASELETH, at lake EMAHOM.

ARONALL: Ind. Set. Major city in the c south west of the HENDECARCHY of DERAEIA in the c east of MALAN. Situated in the region of SARANTHIA, the city is warmer than should be the case, given its vicinity to FIRMAMENTAL LEY lines. Originating as a hub of LODELITH mines, the city later grew into a hub of trade in central eastern Malan, linking Deraeia and ATALLUA with AMILLAERE (1.) via the city of RUBRICA (Pop. c. 120,000).

ARONTUR: Set. City in the c south west of OPHIUSSA, just to the north of the FASTUNTIA hills (Pop. c. 38,000).

AROS: 1. Set. Settlement in the south of ALTHA (2.) (Pop. c. 7,000).

2. Ind. Set. Mining settlement in the south west of ARKOS⁽¹⁾, noted for its copper deposits (Pop. c. 4,000).

ARPAROH: 1. Geo. For. Dead forest in the far north east of LAASKHA, that in the latter part of the first millennium RM was over forested to supply the armies and expansion of the KORACHANI EMPIRE. This left the region a graveyard of tree-stumps, its soil dusty and lifeless, and it remains shunned to this day.

2. Pol. His. Ntn. Arparoh was once a politically-distinct region to the north eastern $\underline{LAASKHA}$, stretching from $\underline{IZAPOSAN}$ in the west to $\underline{ALAAS}^{(2.)}$ in the east. With little $\underline{LASCAR}^{(2.)}$ heritage, its people were of different roots, and were extremely resistant to the $\underline{KORACHANI}$ occupation of Laaskha, openly dissenting and laying waste to most forms of imperial administration.

This broke out into all out civil war in 34 RM, lasting until 41 RM, during which imperial administrators were expelled from various cities, forcing them to be reclaimed through costly sieges that dragged on for years. Countless thousands died, and eventually the imperial administration relented by granting full Korachani citizenship to every single person in Arparoh – an honour that was rarely bestowed. Through this act alone was the region placated, and in 43 RM regional distinction was dropped, and Arparoh was folded into the greater Laaskhan territories. See Vol III: Extinct States.

ARRABA: Set. Settlement in the region of KNAESS in the c west of THE SURRACH (Pop. c. 17,000).

ARRACH: 1. Plr. 'Arrachi'. Oth. Type of HALFBLOOD, usually pale, with wisdom close to what the traditional OTHERWORLDERS were considered to preach. They often target a specific location or individual to be the target of their wisdom. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

2. Leg. In LIDEA and MHAROKK, a spectre of native myth, from which the halfblood's name is derived. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

ARRACHI, SHRINE OF THE: Geo. A solitary butte in the cracked plains of VARSTA in the east of the DESOLATION OF ASTUDAN. The butte is covered in trinkets and baubles of every description, some mundane, other macabre. The place is guarded by no less than a dozen ARRACHI, who do not communicate with travellers other than to slay those who pass too close to the shrine. The remains of those slain litter the ground, painting the area in a landscape of death. It is unknown what the purpose of the guards is and who they consider friend or foe.

ARRAFINIAN RIDGE: Geo. Low coastal mountain in the north of GREST(1.) in the west of the island-continent of BROR(1.). A major earthquake in 2916 RM caused a large part of the ridge to collapse, letting water from the SEA OF RAETUMA flood the basin to its south, leading to the inland SEA OF RATASHAH to form.

ARRAGA: His. Rui. TAMARAN city destroyed in 864 RM. The city was a major trading centre, conducting sea-trade with HARA, the VENATHI EMPIRE, SAEDISH and the FOREST KINGDOM of LONAR by c. -100 RM, where exotic items were taken to Tamar to be traded west with more appreciative nations such as the PELASGOSI and KORACHANI city-states. Becoming powerful and influential, Arraga declared its independence from Tamar. Following many battles and skirmishes outside its walls, it became an independent city-state in 3 RM, declaring its alliance with VENATH in 7 RM, after which it became a colony inviting many Venathi traders and merchants to its streets. The KHAMIDIAN CATACLYSM of 101 RM temporarily crippled the Venathi empire, leaving Arraga without its benefactors by 122 RM, bringing an end to its exotic trades.

By c. 250 RM an immigrant family known as $\underline{\text{HOUSE ELYRIA}}^{(3)}$ appeared and established itself as a merchant-house. Subtly conducting trade and buying out its rivals, it rose throughout the years, reestablishing trade east and growing more influential, funding the city of $\underline{\text{ELYRIA}}^{(1)}$ in 345 RM. The rise of the $\underline{\text{CAZHANS}}$ in the 8th century RM brought pressure to the city, and in 862 RM they attacked House Elyria's strongholds, destroying Elyria, causing the remnants of the $\underline{\text{HOUSE}}$ exiled (many moving north, into the $\underline{\text{HARÉ SHKA}}$, with their wealth taken by the Cazhans, ending their rule. Arraga suffered in the "ext centuries and it diminished, becoming deserted by c. 1200 RM.

ARRAK: Bev. Milky unsweetened spirit made from anise that is grown in the south of THE SURRACH. See Vol II: Beverages.

ARRAKENA: see THE WEEPING FOREST.

ARRAKESH: 1. Flo. Carob-like tree native to arid regions around THE INNER SEA, where it is most commonly found in MHAROKK, VAALK and NÁRTHEL.

The tree is famed for its sap, which, when hardened into a resin, has been known to attract and absorb UMBRA from the surrounding area, having the adverse effect of reducing ATRAMENTAL TAINT in the immediate vicinity at the expense of becoming tainted itself. Blocks of resin are discarded when they become brittle and grey, which is an indication that they have absorbed enough atmospheric taint. The tree was heavily farmed by the KORACHANI EMPIRE and other nations for this property, and it the resin has become a ubiquitous sight in the houses and offices of freemen across the Inner Sca. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

2. Sup. Obj. ATRAMENTALLY-sensitive resin taken from the dioecious tree of the same name^(1.). Its ability to slowly sap UMBRA from the environment around it has made the resin important in many cultures, particularly those close to ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED regions.

ARRALIA: 1. Rvr. Wetlands in the c west of SARASTRO, forming the western-most part of lake SAEB, along the course of the river MALICHUL.
2. Set. Settlement in the above wetlands^(1.) in the c west of SARASTRO (Pop. c. 13,500).

ARRAM OZIO: (B. 909 – D. 1103 RM) Pol. Ancient governor of AZAZEM between 941 and his death in 1103 RM. He was known as a scholar and historian and was fascinated by OTHERWORLDERS and their HALFBLOOD offspring with mortals. He penned the treatise 'ISAWHANIM', which was adopted by the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, and is now thought to have been responsible for millennia of bigotry and hatred toward SCIONIC CREATURES around the INNER SEA REGION.

ARRAMUS: 1. Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTALLY-ACTIVE endorheic region in the south of the ANOMOFERROH in the south east of SKAROS. The land here is composed of layers of peeling oxidised rock, which are brittle and unstable. Travel in the area is discouraged due to the many sinkholes and DUSTSTONE caverns that lie beneath the surface. ATRAMENTAL reserves were discovered there in c. 2500 RM and SIPHON ENGINES erected there to extract the material.

2. Rvr. Endorheic river in the south west of CENTRAL LLACHATUL, in the west of IPANAH^(2.) and the south east of SKAROS. It is a seasonal river, with many tributaries only appearing for a few months each year, all flowing into the parent, which flows north west for around 400-miles from sources in the EKALSCA, FARRESH, EHRANDEA and APNUT Mountains. It crosses the basins of IPANAMERA, either tapering into nothing, or forming an endorheic basin of KIURRA, either tapering into nothing, or forming an endorheic lake that carries the same name as the river, depending on the amount of snowmelt or rainfall.

ARRAN SONNELSSON: (B. 3992 RM) Pol. Current CHILD-MONARCH of CISNERIA. At the age of 17 he will be expected to choose an aspect of the deity THEREON as a patron, under whose aegis Cisneria will fall under for the next 17-years. It is thought by many that he is already under the sway of CLAN HOMMAL, whose emblem is the fox.

ARRAPHA: Geo. Rocky hills in the north east of LYRIDIA, between the CANAM plains in the north and the SOLANDER valley in the south.

ARRASH: Set. City in the c north of NÁRTHEL. It is known for the white rocks to its north that in summer reflect harsh sunlight making travel in the region very difficult. Since the silting of the STRAIT OF NÁRTHEL, it has become a major link between SARASTRO and the city of PHENESH^(2.), which has become a major link for Sarastro to the eastern seas (Pop. c. 39,000).

ARRATE NIOR, SENTRY OF: Int. Mys. Rui. A gigantic stone-like humanoid body that stands guard over the impassable stone door of ARRATE NIOR, high in the southern face of the BLACK MOUNTAINS in ATARAXIA. The figure stands 9-ft. tall and is of grotesque form, bearing three pairs of arms, each long and ending in spidery hands of seven digits each – two thumbs and five fingers. Its skull is large, with a bulbous cranium that curves back behind two gaping eye sockets and a mouth filled with multiple rows of teeth. It is of unattributable source – whatever its ancestry or heritage remains (perhaps blissfully) unknown, though the most likely explanation is that it belonged to an otherworlder.

ARRATE NIOR: His. Mys. Arc. Ancient temple complex hewn into a deep vestibule high in the southern face of the BLACK MOUNTAINS in ATARAXIA. The complex itself is only known from ancient writings and anecdotes, including passages from the ENCYCLOPAEDIA ELYDEN, and is hidden behind a massive stone doorway that is sealed shut preventing mundane and magickal entry or scrying.

The vestibule is known for the so-called $\underline{\text{SENTRY}}$ – a giant grotesque body – that stands guard before it.

ARRATON: 1. Pol. Duchy in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of ALAMUT, famed for its livestock.

2. Geo. Fertile grasslands and fields in the north of ALAMUT, in the HARÉSHK. The region is renowned for its healthy crops and livestock.

ARREKAN THE BETRAYER: (B. 55 – 204 RM) His. Rel. Pol. Arch-cardinal of the Church of the Undying Machine, born in Nekoda. In 85 RM. He rose against the imperial administration and the Church of the Undying Machine, claiming that both were corrupt and the so-called prophet of the Undying Machine, the Archpotentate Malichar, was little more than a charlatan.

In the ensuing years he gained a sizeable following in the north east of KORACHAN, around the temple-city of CHANDURTERESH, and clashed with imperial forces there many times, leading to his excommunication from the church in 79 RM. In 108 RM he was apprehended by imperial forces and tried as a heretic, though his notoriety had grown to such levels that to execute him would make a martyr of him. Instead, he and his most powerful followers were exiled to the island of HOAMM (then used as a prison). Despite this, his actions led to the so-called SCHISM WARS that devastated the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE between 196 – 367 RM

In Hoamm, Arrekan became indirectly responsible for the rebirth of the CULT OF LIFE AND DEATH, which had reappeared by c. 110 RM. In 126 RM, a fracture in the leadership of Hoamm led to Arrekan seizing control of the fortress, becoming de-facto ruler of the fledgeling islandnation from which he began sending missionaries north in c. 160 RM. His death in 204 RM strengthened the Cult of Life and Death, which would grow in strength in the decades following his death.

ARRETOY: His. Nm. Ancient kingdom in the far south east of LLACHATUL, in what are now IACIO, RHEA and SURUTUR. Emerging in c. -200 RM, it became a stable region with well-connected cities by the time the kingdom of KARKAUTH made contact with it in 59 RM. The two became rapid allies, establishing a fruitful trade partnership, and by 110 RM the two had become so close that they were known as the Twin Kingdoms.

Their royal families would marry into each other, and in 232 RM they finally become one kingdom with the marriage of the high prince of Karkauth and the crown princess of Arretoy. The two took on the name of Karkauth, which was not received well by many Arretoyan nobility.

Laws passed in 247 RM made it divine right for the Karkauthi royal family to rule over what had once been Arretoy. This led to riots in which 3 members of the royal family were killed. These events escalated into civil war that ended in 253 RM, with two thirds of what was once Arretoy declaring secession and becoming independent.

Karkauth sent troops east to reclaim its lands, but this led to a drawnout war of attrition in which neither side gained any advantage and the fighting stopped by c. 342 RM, with Karkauth admitting defeat, making Arretoy an independent state once more.

The old monarchy was reinstated in Arretoy by royalist supporters and the next in line was granted power, with the old line of monarchs who had handed Arretoy to Karkauth expunged from records.

In c. 900 RM a new religion known as AURADIA began to spread across Arretoy and by c. 1000 it had become pervasive, worshipped by most if not all Arretoyans, including the monarchy, many of whom became fanatics, until by 1394 RM a new dynasty of the ruling family was founded, calling itself the AURADIAN DYNASTY. The name of Arretoy was dropped in favour of the modern name of Rhea, which exists to this day. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

ARRIA VETI, BEATA: f. (B. 3958 RM) Rel. Per. BEATA (living saint) of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. Born in ZEPHANICHAN to helots, rumours of her healing of manufactory work-slaves began circulating in c. 3970 RM when she would have been around 12 years old. Word reached the Church of her supposedly divine acts and by 3980 RM an investigation was begun into the nature of her acts, which were proven by ATRAMENTAL investigation to not be caused by shaping. Further investigation by the Church, completed in 3983 resulted in her being declared a beata.

She continued working in the manufactories of her home as she gained a large number of dedicated followers, but was soon forcibly recruited by the Church, where she now works visiting imperial cities to raise morale and drum up enthusiasm for the Shadow Marches. Some believe that she dislikes the work, but understands it is for the greater good of the empire and the Church.

ARRIARA: Geo. Island in the west of the CORAL BARONIES off the south western coast of SAMMAEA.

ARRIRAD: Rvr. River in the far west of TURCAR, flowing south for 1,500-miles from the southern-most reaches of the ARGENT Mountain through CUTH.

ARRKIN: Rel. Str. SZIKALIAN monastery in the c east of THE SURRACH, in the southern-face of the GAMIGAHUA massif.

ARRODIA: 1. Geo. Gigantic hill in the c of AHRISHEN.

2. Mil His. Huge ancient fort built on the eponymous hill in the c of AHRISHEN. The city of ERROLEA was built atop an ancient fort there.

ARROKAN: Pol. Geo. Triangular expanse of unclaimed territory in the south west of LLACHATUL, between the south east of OTINTH and the south west of SEDISIA. Following the expulsion of the KORACHANI colony of OHDURTAR, Otinth and Sedisia both laid claim to the expansive umbra mines left behind, though their claim could only be legitimised if they forsake the claim to Arrokan, which both now ignore. Due to this the otherwise hospitable area is abandoned and has been without mortal influence since 2671 RM. Its borders are patrolled by both nations, who ensure that no-one trespasses.

ARROTU: Set. Small fortified city in the region of AHEPPO in the c of THE SURRACH (Pop. c. 17,000).

ARROUNDING: Pol. Geo. The city of TETHRA, capital of PARTHIS, is divided into 22 Administrative districts known as arroundings. Each arrounding has its own administrative council, with heads also serving in the Tethran council itself.

ARS DEMIURGA: Myt. Vol. Ancient PELASGOSI codex, chronicling the times and lives of the DEMIURGES. Most of its writings have since been lost, the little that survives found in transcripts quoted or referenced in other works, many of which have become corrupted through copying and translations over the years. See Vol IV: the Ars Demiurga.

ARSACYN I: m. Per. (B. 2511 – D. 2602 RM) Pol. His. Beloved republican in PARTHIS who ousted the TWIN KINGS in 2546 RM, taking executive controls, becoming the first emperor of what would become the PARTHISAN EMPIRE.

ARSHEESH: His. Ntm. Now-extinct early FIFTH AGE nation that existed in what are today AHRISHEN, the north of LYRIDIA, and the far east of RHAMIA. It emerged from the ruin of the late FOURTH AGE nation of ARESHI.

The death of the autocrat Menevath II in -21 RM saw his son, Ahrishen I rise to power. His abolishment of slavery brought the people under his banner, and the nation was renamed AHRISHEN in his honour after his death in -3 RM. See Vol III: Extinct States.

ARIMOTHA: Set. Walled city in the c south east of XYRPHAAT^(3.), ruled by the VARHAI, commonly identified as the DEATHLESS LADY, who allows anyone to challenge her, though none have been successful since she assumed control of the city in 3939 RM. It is a stop along the course of the SOVEREIGNS' ROAD trade-route (Pop. c. 77,000).

ARSCAI: Com. Sct. Coastal trade-city in the south of LAASKHA. It is a major link between the continents of LLACHATUL and SAMMAEA and serves as a major port for pilgrims travelling along THE SHADOW MARCH (Pop. c. 515,000).

ARSH: Geo. Region of permafrost in the north of KASPIA.

ARSHAD: 1. Geo. 60-mile ridge along the border with the south of VAALK and northern MHAROKK. It is controlled by the independent city-state of Arshad.

2. Set. Nm. Independent city to the north of MHAROKK, known for its traditional warrior caste. Historically, it has links with VAALK and shares much of its culture with the nation. It has many small satellites, most of which are producers of fine tobacco.

It is ruled by a regent who to all intents and purposes is a monarch, but who tradition dictates must only rule as a regent of the UNDYING MACHINE, who would be given control of the realm should he seek the throne. The city forms a part of the RED ROUTE, which is vital in brining trade goods to the city (Pop. c. 82,000). See Vol III: the Nations of Elvden.

ARTA: 1. Sea. Strait between the southern-most point of the KORACHANI PENINSULA and the island of ARTALSCELLI, in THE INNER SEA. The strait is around 12-miles wide and sees much traffic between the HOAMMI city of ARAMOTHA and ARTALSCELLI.

2. Sea. Sea to the south of the KORACHANI PENINSULA, between HOAMM and ARTALSCELLI, around 30,000 square-miles in size. The sea was important to the development of trade and fishing in those areas early in the FIFTH AGE and was the site of a major naval engagement in 464 RM, between the Korachani and Hoammi navies.

Uncontrolled pollution and overfishing during the reign of the Korachani empire led to the death of its waters, with only small pockets remaining viable for fishing.

ARTA SCELLIA: Set. Fortress-city on the island of ARTALSCELLI and original name of its peoples (before it became known as Artalscelli in - 293 RM). Originally resettled in c. -700 RM, the fortress became a place of congregation to herders and nomads who by c. -450 RM had settled down, their descendants keeping contact with the KORACHANI citystates.

The city prospered under an Oligarchy, giving rise to a caste of philosopher rulers that studied the FIRMAMENT and the ATRAMENTA. In -96 RM the ALCHEMIST SAECHIN slayed the Lord-occultist Mailligr, and assumed rulership from the citadel until 4 RM, where he became a vassal to the Korachani empire until 165 RM, when it defected to HOAMM. The city and its Atramental colleges were destroyed by Korachan in 1283 RM and the last remnants of its populace left it in 1294 RM.

In 3372 RM the island of Artalscelli was returned to Hoamm, though by then its lands were mostly barren, the ruined citadel overlooking a polluted wasteland. In c. 3450 the ruins of Arta Scellia were explored and later rebuilt by the Hoammi people, after which it became known as ARTALSCELLIA, and in 3487 RM its colleges had once again become the pride of its people: a centre of Atramental studies in THE INNER SEA, its graduates rising to influential positions within martial and political institutions across the Inner Sea (Pop. c. 175,000).

ARTAB II: m. Per. (B. 3699 – D. 3837 RM). Pol. Posthumously known as 'the Immortal' after his unnatural longevity, Artab II became emperor of PARTHIS in 3733 RM after the death of his father Artab I. He is most famously remembered for being the emperor who helped abolish SLAVERY after the events of the COTIAN MUTINY, though he also reigned through the SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE, guiding Parthis through unstable times.

He was vilified by most Parthisan PATRICIANS and magnates following the abolition of slavery, though as the economy began to stabilise again in c. 3830 RM his rule was re-evaluated and he spent his last years being lauded as one of the better emperors of Parthis.

ARTAGNES: Leg. Myt. Common mythic figure from the legends of NORTHERN SAMMAEA, who is most remembered in PARTHIS, the TARAHID ANNEXES, and TRAKIA, and is thought to be a corruption of the earlier FOURTH AGE SAMMONISH cultural hero figure Eltennash.

She is a wielder of a divine flame through which she draws great strength and fortitude and is able to accomplish feats that lesser MORTALS could only dream of. There are many tales in which she is a protagonist, most of which detail a quest or great deed.

ARTAL: Ind. Set. Mining settlement in the north west of BA'AKH (Pop. c. 8,000).

ARTALSCELLI: 1. Geo. Island to the south of the KORACHANI PENINSULA and home to the nation of ARTALSCELLIA.

2. Pol. Set. Capital city of ARTALSCELLIA (Pop. c. 180,000).

ARTALSCELLIA: Dem. 'Artalscellian'. Ntn. An island-state of steep hills and a rocky landscape, and currently a vassal to HOAMM, located to the south of the KORACHANI PENINSULA. It is known for its ATRAMENTAL colleges and the aptitude of those who graduate there, many of whom go on to serve across the INNER SEA in embassies and offices of great renown, going on to achieve great importance.

Once under the control of KORACHAN (when it was known as ARTA SCELLIA), it became an independent state in the first millennium RM, though was later taken again in 1283, after which its colleges were disbanded and its agents, which were secreted in cities across the Inner Sea, slain. The island was eventually left to the Interreges and ignored.

Following the Korachani loss of Almagest during the War of the Artifexes, Artalscellia was handed over to Hoamm in 3372 RM as part of a trade agreement.

Under Hoammi rule, Atralscellia's Atramental traditions were restored and new colleges were built to train SHAPERS from across the Inner Sea in the art of war and diplomacy. Many of its graduates go on to act as advisors across the Inner Sea, particularly within Korachani offices. Rumours abound that Artalscellian shapers are secretly spies of Hoamm, selling their knowledge to the highest bidder. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

ARTERY, the: Arc. Set. Narrow wrought iron footbridge in the city of ALMAGEST that connects two districts that would otherwise be separated by a deep ditch that was once part of its old fortifications. It receives lots of foot traffic, particularly clerks and ambassadors.

ARTHAGNIA: Mil. Sup. Atr. Law. Str. Fortified prison on an island off the western coast of PELASGOS, dedicated to the incarceration of ATRAMENTAL SHAPERS. The prison has been operated by the VÁMAN ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION since its construction in c. 1260 RM, and it employs various countermeasures to ensure that shapers incarcerated there are not allowed to escape. This includes the use of passive methods such as DAMPING ENGINES and SARCOPHAGI, or more active means, such as using their own highly-skilled shapers for patrolling and monitoring the prison and its environs.

It is infamous within the shaping community of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, particularly amongst outlaw or fugitive shapers, who whisper of it as the worst possible fate that awaits their kind.

ARTHICE: Ast. Second of two satellites of the PLANET GNIHLAS. See Vol II: Planets and Satellites.

ARTHRODIRA: Fau. Large, armour-plated fish, common in warm waters.

See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

ARTIFEX: Pol. Soc. Name of a powerful industrial PATRICIAN HOUSE based in ALMAGEST. It rose in c. 700 RM from a family of powerful FERREARS, whose offspring naturally carried the same abilities. House Artifex became immensely powerful within the TECHNARCANE industries, their individual talents giving them an edge their opponents never had. Some have postulated that their PRIMOGENITOR was a powerful OTHERWORLDER, though there is little basis to this rumour.

By c. 2000 RM the House had branched out into manufacture and exploitation of resources, establishing many mines and quarries across Almagest and beyond, and manufacturing technarcane engines, machinery, and vehicles. Starting in c. 2750 RM House Artifex began lobbying for a push into the far north to search for new resources and in c. 2800 it was successful, spearheading various forays into the north, which would establish a large thriving colony that would become a major source of ores and lumber to Almagest.

The region was a boon to the Almagesti economy, though within a century of the start of operations, the climate of the far north began to worsen, rendering many regions inaccessible, and making the various industries the House had there untenable. This, coupled with tumult in the wake of the independence of Almagest in 3014 RM eventually led to the abandonment of the region by 3092 RM, after which it was invaded by the CALLOW HORDES, and came to be known as the LOST DEMESNE.

House Artifex was responsible for escalating events that led to the WAR OF THE ARTIFEXES, after which it became the ruling household of the SOCIALIST REPUBLIC OF ALMAGEST, where it ruled from the capital CITY OF ALMAGEST for many centuries after it was made to step down in $3488\,\mathrm{RM}$, though it remained incredibly influential following this. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

ARTIFEX GENERAL: Tec. Rnk. High-ranking members within the eponymous TECHNARCANIST PATRICIAN HOUSE that is based in the CITY OF ALMAGEST, from which it is the major ruling force of the REPUBLIC. Their bodies are often augmented if not outright replaced by a living metal that only they can SHAPE, the eldest of them becoming little more than ascetic metal-skinned beings housing brains and nerves, fed a constant supply of UMBRA.

They have close ties with the DEMIURNES, whose cult they are members of, and with whom they work very closely. To most they are seen as a symptom of its problems, and they are feared and distrusted.

ARTIFICE, TEMPLE OF: Soc. Str. Secular temple in SHAMAS, PARTHIS; and centre of the pragmatist movement in Parthis.

ARTISAN OF VORRO: His. Leg. Legend common in most of VÂRR as well as eastern KORACHAN and northern PELASGOS, dating back to PRE-IMPERIAL times.

The Artisan of Vorro is a mythic figure, equitable to many cultures' death-symbol. The artisan is a solitary figure, bitter and despairing, its footfalls causing the land around it to wither and die. It travels the land, seeking solitude, though is doomed to forever encounter others like it, its curse causing them to die. The Artisan of Vorro shapes the withered husks of the dead into grotesque artefacts that remain as relics to its legacy.

It is believed that the legend arose after nomads who populated the region following the FADING of the FOURTH AGE came across the misshapen and grotesque relics and monoliths now attributed to the DEMIURGE VORROPOHAIAH. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

ARTUL AKAEL: lit. 'Sallowfield': Geo. Wasteland dominating the c-south east of ALMAGEST, renowned for its plains of rust powder, dust dunes, and ruined buildings; all the result of the KORACHANI EMPIRE'S tradition of abandoning settlements whose natural resources have been spent.

Despite this conception, many of the ruins predate the Korachani empire's influence in the region and are thought to date back to the FOURTH AGE.

ARUBEAS: Set. Settlement in the c north east of TISARA. Its main industry is agriculture, with grain fields and pasture for sheep being most common (Pop. c. 8,000).

ARUFON, the: For. Dense woodlands dominating the north of the HENDECARCHY of MYEIN, in the west of MALAN. The forest is a refuge to wild life of all kinds and is amongst the favoured spots of the reclusive Hendecarch GALLATRIS EBUL who has deemed it a place of natural beauty worthy of protection.

ARUGUAN COMPLEX: Rui. A centuries-old power station outside the city of ZEPHANICHAN in KORACHAN that was abandoned in c. 3720 RM after the city suffered in the wake of the SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE. It was allowed to deteriorate and has since become a haven to squatter, the destitute and escaped SLAVES, and is close to a true settlement and community, with potentially thousands living there. Most of the city's electricity now comes from the hydroelectric plant at AGUEA.

ARULA: Geo. Plains in the far west of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of CARIA^(4,). They dip towards the sheer coast in a series of shallow tiered cliffs.

ARUT DAZ: Geo. Mountain in the south of VENTHIR, forming the southern part of the WORKNAH Mountains and the border with northern SARAGOS.

ARUTESH: also 'the Black Desert'. Geo. Desert in the west of the continent of BROR^(1.), along the TROPIC OF MAOCARHL, in the rain shadow of THE GREAT BROR Mountains. The desert is characterised by its dark sands and rocky features.

ARUTU: Geo. Cave system in the c of PNESSA, in the WAELMIGH rainforest, on the eastern face of the FEDEQAM Mountains.

ARVAYHA: Set. Settlement in TEMUJA, along the southern mid-span of the ILLIGARHI (Pop. c. 1,000).

ARYAT: Geo. Desert dominating the north east of SABAEA, formed by the rain shadow of the EGETAKH Mountains. The desert lies along the border between eastern Sabaea and the south west of SHAZGIN. ARZIDOUR: 1. Geo. Island in the south of the PANTHEON ISLES.

2. Set. Settlement city in the south of the PANTHEON ISLES (Pop. c. 7,800).

ASA: also 'the City of Life'. Set. City 150-miles south east of LYSITEAS in the east of TETHYSIA. It is a centre of learning in Tethysia, especially regarding medicine and pharmacopoeia (Pop. c. 88,000).

ASAB ARUH: Set. City in the c of ELAT (Pop. c. 40,000).

ASACHAA: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the far east of KOLCHIS, overlooking the border with ALMAGEST.

ASADAN: 1. Geo. Plains in the south west of KHAMID, destroyed by the CATACLYSM in 101 RM, leaving only a few sheer-sided island as testament to what had once been. Following the Cataclysm, the region became known as THE BOILING SEA, after the geologically active region below sea-level. The plains of Asadan were once fertile land, fought over in antiquity by the NATHI people and the AMADIANS, TZALLRACHI natives.

2. Geo. Following the CATACLYSM OF KHAMID, the name Asadan continued to be used to denote the island on which the fortress of BAOST was located.

ASADAUL: Dem. 'Asadauli'. Geo. Savannah region in the south of SAMMAEA, marking a boundary between the south east of MAENMIST, the north east of NORTHERN SIMBARA, and HOGGOTHA ISZ. It is also an area of cultural unity, with loosely-linked city-states and feudal states calling it home who do not strictly adhere to the political delineations of the aforementioned states.

Cities in this area share the same polytheistic religion, which some outsiders have claimed to have parallels to the DEMIURGES and their SCIONS.

ASADEA: Dem. 'Asadean'. His. Ntn. FOURTH AGE nation that populated what are now the north east of BA'AKH and the GARAPPAN peninsula in IO. The Asadeans were a star-gazing people that were ultimately destroyed during the WAR OF SCOURGING, their remnants becoming slaves of the LACER ENCLAVES that then dominated the SHIBOTHA Mountain and its environs around following the war, in c. -1600 RM. Their descendants would in c. -1500 RM populate the caverns beneath the LION'S MAW though by the time of the SVATHI migrations to the area in c. -1250 RM they had largely died out, their remnants eventually being absorbed by the emerging DHEAN culture. See Vol III: Extinct States.

ASADEAN MURALS, the: His. Art. Extensive bas-carvings located in the caverns beneath the LION'S MAW in the north east of BA'AKH, attributed to the descendants of LACER slaves taken from the remnants of ASADEAN culture following the WAR OF SCOURGING.

The so-called murals are intricately carved from the natural walls of the expansive caverns, and bear many common motifs including angelic beings (possibly due to links with the DEMIURGE ALLAISHADA), warfare (despite what is believed to be their pacifist nature) and an enthroned corpse-like king, which has been interpreted by those studying it as being the DEMIURGE RACHANAEL seated on the LEADEN THRONE, envisaged over a millennium before his interment upon said throne. The truth of the carvings was lost with the extinction of the Asadean culture in c. - 1250 RM, rediscovered millennia later in fragmented form.

ASAEL: Ind. Set. City in the west of AZAZEM and base for HOUSE MELANA. It is a major dross and moss MANUFACTORY city (Pop. c. 35,500).

ASAGHA: 1. Set. Settlement in the west of EZASUH^(2.) (Pop. c. 14,200). 2. Set. Major coastal city in the south of ELAT (Pop. c. 100,000).

ASAGSAONA: Sec. Small city in the c north east of TISARA. It is home to a FIRMAMENTAL academy – one of the few in the nation, where prospects from across the nation go to study the art. Most who graduate go on to work for the republic as advisors or adjuncts in various departments. The academy was founded in c. 3100 RM, and the city appeared around it over the next centuries becoming a thriving college town (Pop. c. 17,000).

ASAHAKAIR: 1. Geo. Island off the north eastern coast of ESHIR⁽²⁾. It is expected that the island will become part of the mainland within the next century if sea levels continue dwindling as they presently are.

2. Mil. Str. Major coastal fortress on the above island^(L) off the north eastern coast of $\underline{\text{ESHir}}^{(2)}$. It is a relatively recent construction, dating to

c. 3750 RM, and replaced a much older coastal fort on the same island that was left landlocked following the wane of the $\underline{GULFOFESHIRON}$ over previous centuries.

ASAHAUROKOR: For. Geo. Scrubland and sparse forest dominating the north of EZASUH⁽²⁾. To the west it gives way to the thicker forest of DORAKRAKOR.

ASAHUR: Set. City in the c north of LAASKHA, along the course of the river LLORTHA. The city is a centre of agriculture and livestock, and is situated in a steep valley that is terraced and covered in fields for miles around. The Red Route passes just outside the city in its circuit of the INNER SEA (Pop. c. 34,000).

ASAK: Set. Settlement in the north of BAATAN (Pop. c. 4,800).

ASAKA: Set. Small fortified coastal city in the south east of the MULL CITY-STATES. It forms a part of the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 17,400).

ASALE: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the north east of TZALLRACH, protecting the nearby border with MALAN.

ASALET: Sup. Rui. FIRMAMENTAL ruin in GHALLETHA, in the south west of VÂRR.

ASAMA: Set. Fortified city in the c west of the tribe of EBURUL in the south east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. The city is known to trade with ELEKHID (Pop. c. 22,500).

ASAMIS: Geo. Badlands in the far south of OPHAR, forming the north western-most reaches of the HOGHSOTHOMON.

ASAMURU: Lak. Lake in the south west of TAHALL, along the course of the river SUMRAMRU.

ASANA: 1. Geo. Basin in the south west of KARAKHAS between the HAIMOTH, KELACHOT and ASANATH Mountains.

2. Lak. Lake in the above basin in the south west of $\underline{\text{KARAKHAS}}$, in the region of $\underline{\text{LATERITIA}}$.

ASANATE DYNASTIES, the: Pol. His. In ancient VENTHIRI history, a dynasty of rulers rising c. 50 RM, forming the empire of VENATH over the ruins of the older NATHI KINGDOM that had perished in c. -190 RM. Their greatest king, LABAISINGH, brought wealth and victory to the Venathi empire, but his death in battle in 151 RM was echoed throughout the empire, with corruption and strife destroying what remained of Venath by 162 RM. Venthir and TZALLRACH would emerge from the failed empire.

ASANATH: (10,230-ft.) Geo. Peak in the south west of KARAKHAS, forming part of the KELACHOT Mountains. The region around the mountain is controlled by LATERITIAN marauders.

ASANTHIR: 1. Mil. Str. Iron fortress in the south east of SKAROS, overlooking the ANOMOFERROH. It is an ancient ruin, renovated by refugees and is thought to date back to the first centuries of KORACHANI dominance in the region.

2. Set. Relatively recent city that appeared in the south east of SKAROS, overlooking the ANOMOFERROH. The city appeared as a refugee settlement around the fortress following the increased corruption of the Anomoferroh. It is home to a prestigious ATRAMENTAL school (following ancient traditions in the region begun by CHEIROAHIN exiles), whose members work hard to keep the taint of the Anomoferroh at bay (Pop. c. 20,000).

ASAPHODELIA: Flo. Also 'Deathless Weed'. A notorious weed across the INNER SEA REGION with an intricate root network that survives culling and harsh weather alike. It is particularly pervasive in VENTHIR, MHAROKK, and LIDEA.

Since plants are connected through their deep labyrinth of roots, it is close to impossible to kill them, short of digging up and burning the roots and covering them with concrete. Asaphodelias have been known to encroach on settlements, reducing their foundations to rubble within a few years, if left unchecked. CHODENRIIN (SHAPERS) who can manipulate plants)

The plant has dark grey-green waxy leaves that sprout thickly around a central node, above which a purplish flower grows biennially. It is off little culinary or economic value, though some people have woven its fibres into ropes and other objects. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

ASAPHORACHAN: Geo. Expansive woodland region in the north east of JURRAS⁽²⁾, about 10,000 square-miles. It is known for the near-impenetrable tangle of ASAPHODELIA plants there.

ASAR: Soc. Obj. Traditionally a large TEMUJAN tent, normally used by the town elders. Today it is used as a generic term for governmental buildings, even if they are not tents.

ASARADIN: Ind. Set. Mining settlement in the c south of SARASTRO, south east of the SOKHA Mountains known for its tin and copper deposits (Pop. c. 16,200).

ASARRAF: Pol. Set. Capital of ACHRABAL, known for its many assassinations and politicking. The city is situated along a narrow isthmus between the mainland and then large hook-shaped peninsula of CATLAS, with canals linking it to both sides, across which much sea traffic passes (Pop. c. 168,000).

ASARET: Flo. Cui. A form of wild ginger that is common in the south east of EASTERN LLACHATUL that favours the shade. It is easy to grow, and is grown by most farms as natural pest control as its aroma is a deterrent to many pests. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

ASARLAI: Sup. Rel. Rnk. FIRMAMENTAL SHAPERS in KOLCHIS, who also service as a religious upper caste, deeply indoctrinated in the customs of the KIRIASTRIAN faith. They practice a traditional (some would say antiquated) form of SHAPING that they interpret as harnessing the energies that emanate from their metaphysical deities (known as the KIRI) that inhabit their natural world.

They once amassed a great deal of power in Kolchis, and were culled by the first LORD-CONSTELLAR LANAYASH I, who dissolved the Republic of the Kolchisi Commonwealth in 3164 RM and feared the power that the Asarlai wielded. He proposed reforms to the religion that saw the Lord-Constellar becoming the chief power within the mortal echelon of the church. The Asarlai refused, beginning a religious schism that saw the Kiriastrian church sundered in two, its members embroiled in a bloody war that ended in 3167 RM with the new orthodox sect triumphant. The Asarlai had been whittled down in numbers, and those who remained swore fealty to Lanayash I and all future Lord-Constellars, who from then on became the heads of the religion (making them both the head of church and state), keeping ultimate power from the Asarlai.

Today the Asarlai oversee rituals and masses and are also keepers of the regions' religious customs, use their SHAPING in rituals that pay homage to the works of their metaphysical deities, the KIRI.

ASARODON: Geo. Mountain range in the c west of SERROK.

ASARTHI: Geo. Dry hills in the far north of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of SYRTIS^(1.), forming the southern face of the KOKORO Mountains.

ASATTIR: Set. Harbour and city in the north west of EZASUH^(2.). The city is known to trade with GNOTH, and has a Gnothi district, with architecture to accommodate gigantic merchants and visitors (Pop. c. 32,500).

ASCELLIA: Set. Settlement in the north of AQUARIIA, known for its tin mines (Pop. c. 4,000).

ASCENSION ISLES: Geo. Rocky archipelago, numbering 24 major island and many smaller ones off the north western coast of BROR^(1,), to the west of the SEA OF BRAGUA. First 'discovered' in 1303 RM by the explorer VREGL, the isles take their name from the sight of them appearing over the horizon on the morning of their discovery, as though ascending from the Sea.

Only six of the islands in the archipelago are inhabited, by natives from Bror thought to have moved there early in the FIFTH AGE. They live in close-knit matriarchal tribal societies that are each centred around a large menhir (standing stone) commonly crafted from a rare soapy rock thought to induce vivid DREAMS in those who sleep nearby.

Though not extensively explored, there is little evidence to support a mortal presence on the islands prior to the Fifth Age, making them relatively virginal, as evidenced by their rugged almost antediluvian terrain

ASCENSION OF THE ARCHPOTENTATE IN G MINOR: Art. Incredibly popular concert by the KORACHANI composer TORASZMA, written between 2720 – 2721 RM. It was his last major composition before his death by AEPATHY in 2722 RM.

ASCETIC ORDER OF STYLITES: Rel. Org. Order of ascetic monks forming part of an extremist sect of the REFORMED CHURCH OF SARASTRO, based in the city of TARSUS in the north of SARASTRO. They starve themselves atop stop pillars, hoping that their austerities will bring them closer to enlightenment and their god.

ASCORYCA: Geo. Blasted region of badlands in the south east of CYHLAGHARR, to the east of the wastes of ODULROA. Like Odulroa, it is in the rain shadow of the NGHALLEAL Mountains and is dry, a wasteland of rock pillars from which wafts an ATRAMENTAL haze that hangs like a deathly pall over the earth.

The natives of Cyhlagharr shun the region, using it as a place of punishment for those transgressing its laws, and it is littered with the tattered remains of past exiles.

The south of the region is dominated by the Atramental Wasteland known as Hacha Nur, that was caused in 1178 RM, during the height of the war between Cyhlagharr and Chegrint, by a Shaper who could not control its powers, resulting in a massive Atramental explosion that devastated the region, killing all present there.

ASCUDA: Set. City in the south of ARTALSCELLI. The city was completely rebuilt following an earthquake and the ruination of its port in 2372 RM. It is now located on a hill that was once an island and is now 3–miles from the coast (Pop. c. 32,500).

ASDU: Sea. Large bay in the south of WESTERN SAMMAEA, dividing the nations of SYNCHTHONITHA and EPHATTA in the west from GRARNEÂST, HAÏRAMAL, MEHDRA, and ADHERA.

ASDULL: Set. City in the region of FURUD in THE SURRACH. It is known for its expansive low-yield collieries (Pop. c. 16,000).

ASEBE: fortress in the far south of TZALLRACH, overlooking the border with KREM.

ASEER: Sea. Equatorial sea, serving as a strait between MENISCEA and BROR^(1,). The sea is an important shipping route, linking the eastern and western hemispheres.

ASEMMA AMBARAS: (B. unknown) Present Chancellor of the FEDERAL
ASSEMBLY of ALAM BETHYL, elected in 4005 RM, who originates from the territory of BOTHUAR.

ASEPHET: Mil. His. Rui. Ancient PLAGI fortress in the western hills of the KHO HAGAR Mountain in the south of SARASTRO. The rusted ruin is a remnant of the plagi empire that arose in the region in the decades preceding the WAR OF SCOURGING that consumed ELYDEN and its peoples towards the end of the FOURTH AGE OF MORTAL LIFE, and is one of its most complete ruins, though its corroded metal walls and misshapen features have been largely ignored by sentient life since those dark days.

ASEREUSYM: Myt. His. Geo. The body of a gigantic SCION or MESOCHTHON buried to the chest in the permafrost of the WHITE SHEET, in the far north of LLACHATUL. The mummified body is many times larger than that of a mortal, its skin blackened and shrivelled, its mouth contorted in a grimace of pain. Attempts have been made to excavate it, though to no avail – the earth around it is too hard and few are those who would remain in its vicinity for long-enough to excavate.

An Almagesti Expedition mounted in 3221 RM from Valbar^(1.) utilised slaves and gave Acergene suits to its overseers while working. All contact was lost with the expedition after some months, its last communication mentioning the explorers suffering from severe headaches and nosebleeds. To this day it is not uncommon for expeditions to the White Sheet to encounter the bodies of mortals though to belong to his expedition, their eyes wide in fear, their bodies desiccated and petrified.

ASGAR: Set. Settlement in the north of the JAHADAT STATES, under the control of the city of ALAHAIM (Pop. c. 10,000).

ASH MADAEA: Set. City in the far north of LLACHATUL, overlooking the SEA OF SUDUNIR. The city forms part of a loosely allied people who populate the region around the arctic circle north of THE VORANDINE (Pop. c. 18,000).

ASHABANOR: Set. Settlement in the south of AETHIOS, near lake EMAHOM, along the course of the river RASELETH. It is known for its reed gathering (Pop. c. 6,000).

ASHABET: Art. Obj. Sup. KHAMIDIAN caryatids common in temples and tombs. In foreign lands they are regarded as mystical statues with the ability to animate in defence of their temples. Khamidians do little to deny this, enjoying the mysticism that surrounds the statues.

ASHADALAT: Geo. Dry basin in the east of XYRPHAAT^(3,) in MENISCEA, that was until c. 3300 RM a shallow Sea. The region is covered in salt flats and, in places, the half-buried remnants of merill cities remain and forms a part of the greater region known as the Wastes of Xyrphaat^(2,).

ASHAI LIII: (D. 3307 RM) Pol. Per. Last hereditary EMPEROR-FACTOTUM of RAONGEN^(2.). His death in 3307 RM left no legitimate heirs to claim the throne so, to avoid a civil war, the seven FACTOTUMS^(2.) of Raongen decided to elect a member from within their ranks to become the Emperor-Factotum, with the winning candidate bequeathing their title of Factotum to the next in line, in accordance with their INDUSTRY'S traditions.

ASHAIA: Set. Edu. City in the south west of AZAZEM, known for its ATRAMENTAL college (Pop. c. 15,500).

ASHAIJA: Set. Fortified city in the east of ABACARDAT (Pop. c. 38,000).

ASHAKHERR: Rui. Ancient metropolis in the south east of KHAMID, located south of the extant city of KHARR that was seen as a hub of the FIRMAMENTAL arts in pre-CATACLYSM Khamid. It was unfortunately shattered during the Cataclysm, forcing thousands of people to flee as its towers, minarets, and libraries tumbled into BOILING SEA.

The loss of the city was a blow that ancient Firmamentists could not recover from, and thousands of years of history, knowledge, and treasures were lost almost overnight. The loss of Ashakherr is believed to have been the single greatest contributor to the wane in Firmamentism in the west. The arrival of KORACHANI governors millennia later saw its ruins excavated and its contents destroyed. Nothing remains of it to this day, and were it not for the existence of old maps marking its location, we wouldn't know its extant location today.

ASHALA: Rvr. River in the c of AZAZEM, flowing east for 90-miles from the AAORA Mountains before joining with its parent, the river FALANEM.

ASHALAR: His. Str. Ancient fortress on the island of ALPHITOMATIA, off the eastern coast of SABAISA. It was constructed from large blocks of granite, and is thought to date back to the FOURTH AGE, if not earlier.

ASHALEL: Rui. Ancient ruins in the region of CAULAEM in the c of AZAZEM, thought to be etymologically-linked to the name Azazem. The ruins are well-preserved, though largely buried beneath the dunes of Caulaem. They belong to an early FIFTH AGE city that was culturally-advanced for the time. Its fate remains unknown, though the ruins are populated by AL GHUL.

ASHAM: Set. Once a prosperous city in SAGITTARIA, it broke away from the nation in c. 3712 RM following increased trade east with cities of KORACHANI cities, creating its own nation that became known as ALTHA, after its main river (Pop. c. 130,000).

ASHAR ICHALA: Geo. For. An expansive petrified forest in the south western DUNE SEA in KHARKHARADONTIS, SAMMAEA. Its full size not yet explored, the region is, like all of the Dune Sea, dominated by rolling dunes of dust and rust, beneath which lie the warped lands of Kharkharadontis.

The Ashar Ichala is a relic of ancient times, its trees deprived of life by the depravation that surrounds them. The trees are stone-like and cold, their twisted-sickly forms half-buried in dust, most of them shattered and crumbling to the slightest touch. It is a miracle any of them survive, though those which do are of monolithic scale, their perverse forms a mockery of any natural tree, an echo of the cyclopean forest that once dominated the region.

The fossilised remains of horrific fauna litter the region, drawing the thoughts of those few who have ventured here to the distant past where true abominations stalked the Ashar Ichala.

ASHARAS: Set. Major coastal city in the north west of LIDEA. It operates ferries across the STRAIT OF SHIBBOLETH and is a major industrial centre in the region (Pop. c. 138,000).

ASHARBA: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the c north east of the tribe of EATAN, in the c of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER, overlooking the border with SALARNA, The region surrounding the fortress is heavily patrolled by mounted troops.

ASHARTA: Mil. Str. Major coastal fortress in the south of AZAZEM, guarding the sea route into the SEA OF BATHOS^(1.).

ASHARUTH: 1. Lak. Saltwater endorheic lake in the west of LAASKHA.

The lake is all that remains of the Bay of Asharuth, that disappeared in c. 3400 – 3600 RM.

 Geo. Shallow basin in the west of LAASKHA that until c. 3400 – 3600 RM was a large bay surrounded by many coastal settlements that have since become landlocked and are now diminished or simply abandoned.

ASHASHIN: Pol. Rnk. Mar. Poi. Political assassins in SARASTRO and VENTHIR. Comparable to the LICTORS of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, they fulfilled a similar role both before and after the period of Imperial assimilation. They are noted for their expertise with venoms and hidden finger blades.

ASHDAR: Mil. Str. Fortress in the CAMMOREAN SHADOW in the north east of the Free Land of TRINITANIA^(1.). It is home of softsuit-equipped rangers who guard merchants while travelling the SALT ROAD. It is also the centre of a network of SIPHON ENGINES that protect a near-100-mile route that crosses the Cammorean Shadow.

ASHELLINE: Set. Fortified settlement in the south of the DESOLATION OF

ASTUDAN. It forms part of the GÂTHAN ROAD trade route linking the cities of GÂTHA in the north and STYGA in the south (Pop. c. 8,400).

ASHEMNA: Dre. Geo. Large DREAMSCAPE in the south eastern waters of the SEA OF MERCUVIA, to the north east of the SHIBBOTHA ISLES. It is around 6,500 square-miles in size and its waters are thick and jelly-like and solidify and liquefy in a rhythmless cycle, making the region particularly dangerous to mariners.

ASHER: 1. Geo. 300 mile-long mountain-chain dividing the LEVANTINE (1.) region of AHRISHEN from the west of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOMS, specifically EDICULE^(1.) and PALUS^(1.).

2. Plr. 'Asheri. Mor. 'mortal' peoples made by the DEMIURGE ARIMASPI before the true MORTAL PEOPLES were born. They are of sinewy build, standing some 7-ft. tall, with a slender yet powerful frame. They have prehensile tails and felid features. Their bodies are covered in a very fine fur with colours reminiscent of cheetahs.

They are natives of the island of \underline{IRUGNA} , where they can be found in \underline{DHAT} , \underline{IDRIIS} , and \underline{IRORA} in scattered tribes, though they are most numerous in $\underline{DATEPHA}$, in which they control a small enclave in the south west of the nation that is allowed to keep its independence. They are expert hunters and adept distance runners who hunt game with javelins, which they throw with powerful arms.

They worship a grotesque 4-armed idol that is located in the shadow of the natural monolith of ASÓN DILMINHU. In truth, this idol is the mummified body of a mythic figure from their history, so old it is near-calcified. Some PSYCHICALLY-SENSITIVE asher claim the idol speaks to them and they devote themselves fully to it, meditating, emptying their mind of their own thoughts, becoming vessels to its desires. They are considered champions of their tribes, prowling the land as near-deathless revenants, hunting great predators and protecting their people from outsiders.

They speak an ancient tongue, which dates back to before the sundering of the BRIDGE OF ETERNITIES, and which shares little roots with any of the mortal tongues – it was likely developed independently, and is a relic of this ancient pre-mortal time. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

ASHERAN: (B. 1689 – D. 1742 RM) Pol. DEOCHANI captain and explorer. He died when his ship, 'the Merills' Folly', hit what was then the REDDIN BANK off the north of KHULL.

ASHHAR: Pol. Set. Capital of TATAR, in the west of the nation, in the north west of SAMMAEA, overlooking the GULF OF ESHIRON. It is the western-most stretch of the IVORY ROAD and is a major mercantile centre, where goods begin a journey that can last 5,000-miles east. It was once a harbour, though is now landlocked and some miles from the coast, though maintains links to new ports that have appeared over the past centuries, including EDDISA.

The scrublands surrounding the city are famed for the endemic thymelike perennial, known as ASHHAR'S CROWN, that is known to prolong life (Pop. c. 231,000).

ASHHAR'S CROWN: Int. Flo. Bev. Dru. Thyme-like perennial, that is endemic to the scrublands surrounding the city of ASHHAR in TATAR, in the north of SAMMAEA. It is famed for its ability to prolong life in those who ingest it and has played a pivotal part in the regions' history for centuries.

Legend is that the first one grew from the body of a dead OTHERWORLDER in c. 2995 RM and all extant examples are cultivars of that one specimen. Cultivation of the plants takes place only with the utmost control and security, and individual plants and seeds receive more protection than gold shipments, and the movements and actions of those involved in their growth and breeding are closely-scrutinised.

The drug can only be effective if one consumes it regularly, usually in the form of dried leaves distilled in hot water as a form of tea. A cup every few weeks is the ideal amount though some have been known to take far more, which seems to have no noticeable benefits.

Dried specimens without seeds or roots are sold at auction to the highest bidder in a special market that attracts representatives from across ELYDEN, though the plants have been linked to the ruling classes of Tatar since their discovery – first becoming closely associated with the latter generations of the ALCHIARAN DYNASTY, and more recently, its upper classes and members of the senate. Many people pay huge sums for one dose thinking it will grant them immortality, and those selling them the drug know full well that it is useless unless one consumes it regularly. See Vol I: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

ASHIKARA: Set. city in the far north of RAHENG, overlooking the SEA OF, SAVAEN (Pop. c. 70,600).

ASHILIAN VIADUCT: Str. Large viaduct in the centre of the nation of MAENMIST. It runs along the edge of a long escarpment, known locally as the SPINE OF GERDRUN, distributing water from the SATAQ Mountains in the north to the capital city TYRACAS in the south, and various cities and regions between them. It is also known for the walkable path that stretches for most of the course of the viaduct.

ASHIQ: Set. City in the south east of ZAKRON. It was an important city during the period in the AKHSARAYAN empire now known as the SILENCING OF THE SONG, where SHAIWWALS were first executed during their persecution (Pop. c. 34,000).

ASHIZ: Lak. Endorheic lake in the south east of AHRISHEN, forming part of a small endorheic system alongside lake HIQOL, which is linked to lake MASTI through the artificial LAGOT canal^(2.).

ASHKERON: Rel. Deit. Deity worshipped by adherents of the CHURCH OF
ASHKERON within the HARÉSHK. Also known as the 'Self-devouring DRAKE', it represents the cyclical nature of life and light.

The religion appeared in c. 1421 RM and inherited aspects of elementalism from \underline{SAUAN} immigrants arriving into the area, as well as the older church of $\underline{BAPHEMA}$.

It espouses a contemplative outlook on life, and its adherents believe in reincarnation beyond the common scientifically-accepted cycle leading to the birth of OTHERWORLDERS – in that individuals may be reincarnated multiple times as mortals before the final transmigration of their soul as an otherworlder. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

ASHKERON, CHURCH OF: Rel. Primary religion observed in the HARÉSHK, that centres around the worship of the EPONYMOUS SELF-DEVOURING DRAKE.

A MYSTERY CULT known as TERAMAPHIANISM, based around the visions of an angelic OTHERWORLDER, emerged in 2295 RM, becoming popular amongst women. Though it is considered a separate religion to the Church of Ashkeron, the two have coexisted for so long that most locals consider them the same organisation. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

ASHKERON, MONASTERY OF: Rel. Org. Island-monastery in the SEA OF DERAEIA dedicated to the deity ASHKERON and the study of the FIRMAMENT, specifically, the LIGHT UNDYING.

ASHLYRAR: His. Arc. Int. Large fortified granite pylon in the north west of the PANTHALASSAN desert in the north of TETHYSIA. The pylon once served as a border-marker for the southern-most parts of the GALABRIAN nation, though was deserted in c. 1700 RM along with the decline of its people.

ASHOKA: 1. Pol. One of the FIVE-AND-SIXTY STATES in the c west of SAUA and once the largest of the FIVE THRONES of SA'WEH, before they were united in 3108 RM.

2. Set. City in the above region in the c west of SAUA. It was the largest city in SA'WEH before the FIVE THRONES were united in 3108 RM, though has since been superseded by the capital in ADAIA. Today it is the largest city in Saua dedicated to industry and is known for its large foundries and manufactories, and has taken on an -ill reputation as a would-be successor to the manufactories of KORACHAN (Pop. c. 1,980,000).

ASHOR: Lak. Lake in the west of AHRISHEN, along the course of the river ARESH^(2.), to the west of the much larger lake NAIDA.

ASHORA: Rui. Abandoned city in SAGITTARIA. Prior to the disappearance of the SEA OF TROJA^(1.), the city was a busy port and harbour.

ASHOSHOTH: Geo. Region of the DESOLATION OF ASTUDAN, about 135,000 square-miles, characterised by its dry canyons and nomadic groups known collectively as the NEMED.

ASHOSHOTH, TEMPLE OF: Rel. Rui. Ancient temple hewn from the walls of a canyon in the ASHOSHOTH region in the DESOLATION OF ASTUDAN, after which the temple is named. Nothing is known of its creators or the unnatural figures depicted in its carvings. The temple is little more than a ruin now and is ignored by the NEMED nomads.

ASHRA: 1. Rvr. The larger of two rivers on the island of ARCHAEDON^(1.), the other being the MURRAT. Both rivers flow south, emptying into the SEA OF SAMMAIDU in spectacular coastal waterfalls.

2. Mil. Str. Major fortress in the south of $\underline{\mathsf{ARCHAEDON}}^{(2)}$, perched atop a coastal cliff, where it guards the southern coast. It is rumoured by many foreign powers to guard a powerful $\underline{\mathsf{MAGICKAL}}$ or $\underline{\mathsf{TECHNARCANE}}$ artefact, but there is little proof of this other than the presence of the fortress itself in that specific area.

ASHRADAH: Geo. Expansive wind-polished canyons in the far east of KREM, extending into RTHEI. It is known for its glass-like sheen and layered appearance, displaying a myriad of different brilliant colours.

ASHRIM: Set. Settlement in the c of ESHIR^(2.). Its main industry is the quarrying of clay, most of which is exported or used in the manufacture of the pottery that the region is famous for (Pop. c. 8,000).

ASHTA: Geo. Island 48-miles off the eastern coast of VAALK.

ASHTALEN: Cal. In the KORACHANI CALENDAR, the eighth month of twelve, comprising 30-days. It is named after the DAWN STAR ASHTERATH and is considered the second of three months of summer. See vol II: Month and Lunar Cycle in Elyden.

ASHTELON: Set. Settlement in the c west of THE OLD FOREST, appearing in c. 3690 RM. The settlement features in many folk tales of the Old Forest, where it is described as being built atop the body of a dead dragon and is believed to trade in dragonhide (indeed, its name is thought to have at its root the name of the DEMIURGE ASHTERATH, who was considered a draconic figure. In truth it is more likely that the settlement trades in balaur hides.

The settlement is sacred to VALKAI nomads and forms part of their pilgrimage of the Old Forest. At its peak in early spring its population increases by some 20,000 as pilgrims sojourn there. The RITUAL OF BECOMING is held there when the nomads come together after the highest rains (Pop. varies).

ASHTERATH: 1. Also 'THE DAWN STAR'. Ast. Myt. The spirit of the DEMIURGE Ashterath^(2.), cursed to never return to life as an OTHERWORLDER, and to be the last star to disappear from the night sky following dawn. In antiquity it was considered a PLANET, due to its erratic orbit in relation to the fixed STARS, but this is now known to be incorrect.

Many eschatological beliefs across Elyden revolve around the Dawn Star, particularly in Kharkharadontis, where people believe it will fall to ELYDEN in a great inferno from which will emerge a great dragon (Ashterath reborn). With a sweep of its great tail, it will extinguish half the stars in the sky and a thrash of its wings will quench the sun, plunging $\underline{\text{MORTALKIND}}$ into eternal darkness, in which they will slowly perish under its iron yoke..

2. also 'the Lord of Scale' and 'Claw and The Lord Serapis'. m. Myt. His. Per. In the mythology and ancient history of ELYDEN, second of the Two-and-Twenty DEMIURGES, whose children were the SERAPIS.

Father to the mortal tribe of SERAPIS and their relatives, the DRAGONS, he was a sadistic tyrant who delighted in causing pain to the mortal people, who he blamed for the Demiurges' fall from divinity. He was the former servant of the Demiurge RACHANAEL and wore the DAWN CROWN, having stolen it from SYNCHTHONITH. He was a proficient SHAPER, having been taught by taught by Rachanael. He was tasked with hunting down and capturing his sister ACHAIAH, who was said to have discovered the secrets to immortality. The pursued her across Elyden in what is now remembered as the tale of ASHTERATH AND ACHAIAH, and to avoid him she was forever changed into a tree.

His later repented for his actions and withdrew from the world, building the labyrinthine fortress HINDESSEL, which he filled with dragons and other scaled abominations, and fell to bitter ennui. He allowed his failures and mistakes to warp into a burning hatred of Rachanael over many centuries and emerged to declare war on him in what is now remembered as the DRAGON WARS. The war ended with the Demiurge TALANTEHUT imprisoned him in the heavens, where his body would burn forevermore as the DAWN STAR. The serapis she cursed to be forevermore beholden to the sun and unable to build new empires with which to wage war.

Some KHARKHARADONTID myths believe that

His known \underline{SCIONS} are: $\underline{HERENSUEGE}$, \underline{REUS} , and \underline{SUHA} . See Vol IV: the Two-and-Twenty Demiurges.

ASHTERATH AND ACHAIAH: Leg. A tale from the MYTHOLOGIA
ELYDEN that has since found its way into many folk tales across LLACHATUL, though most of these extant tales have diverged from the original story. What follows is the most common variation of the tale:

Of all the DEMIURGES, ACHAIAH was the one who feared death the most, and following their fall from grace and incarceration upon ELYDEN, she was the first to truly covet and strive for the secrets of immortality. RACHANAEL learnt of her search and sent ASHTERATH to pry from her the secrets she had learnt. For years the Lord of Tooth and Claw pursued her throughout Elyden, shaping the land to better aid his search. Finally cornered under a night where neither moon shone, she pleaded with THE SHAPER to save her. Her prayers were answered and TALANTEHUT appeared before her, the twilight halo of equilibrium upon her brow, and Achaiah was changed into a tree, where her secrets would live on but without a mouth to voice them.

Ashterath finally caught her but, upon seeing her changed form, felt such pity for her that he stopped and asked for her forgiveness. She granted it and he fell in love with her, seeing the error of his ways. He returned to Rachanael, bearing news of her death and the loss of her secret.

It is said that she survives to this day, in the form of the great tree AGEN. See Vol IV: the Mythologia Elyden.

ASHTOREA: Ind. Set. MANUFACTORY-city in the far west of LIDEA, along the course of the river SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾. It is named after a symbol of fertility from ancient Lidean myth (Pop. c. 35,000).

ASHTRA: Rvr. River in the c of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES, flowing south for 290-ft. from sources in the MUHUPUR and HASHATH Mountains before meeting its parent, the river MEREN SIN.

ASHUJAL: For. Scrubland and sparse wooded area in the north west of THE OLD FOREST, close to the border with ALMAGEST. Between the years 2600 and 2810 RM, the region was site of many battles and sieges by Almagesti forces. It was, for many years thereafter, abused by victorious Almagesti industries, which had reduced it to from virgin forest to scrubland in under a century, and the region has started to slowly recover.

ASHUM: Rvr. River in the west of THUMAL flowing for 80-miles before emptying in the SEA OF VALARCH.

ASHUMAL: Set. Crabbing settlement in the west of THUMAL (Pop. c. 8 000)

ASHURA: 1. Myt. His. In antiquity, a common name used to group those amongst the DEMIURGES who strove to regain their lost strength following their imprisonment on ELYDEN and subsequently the diminishing of their powers. See Vol IV: the Mythologia Elyden.

2. Sol. Pol. In the KORACHANI EMPIRE, a noble VENTHIRI PATRICIAN HOUSE; one of the eldest and most influential such families in the Empire. Its roots can be traced to before the rise of the VENATHI EMPIRE and it is postulated that it goes farther back than that, making it the oldest recognised present-day Patrician House in ELYDEN. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

ASHURAD: also 'the Hammer of the North'. m. Myt. His. Per. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, a SCION and son of the DEMIURGE AVRAHAM, born to an ILLIDRAE priestess.

He was known as a fearless leader and a generous father, with no less than 12 children (born to 5 different women), each of whom became renowned leaders, champions and shamen, in their own rights. Late in his life he travelled to the WHITE SHEET, where he disappeared. His children and their descendants have various myths and legends revolving on his exploits in the north, many of which end in a heroic death, though his ultimate fate remains unknown. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

ASHURAN: Geo. Island in the south east of the PANTHEON, off the eastern coast of LLACHATUL. It was discovered and named by the VENTHIRI explorer BOHMIUS in 1532 RM.

ASHURHADDON: Set. Large city in the north east of OPHIUSSA, situated along the course of the river DIANU. Many of the city's larger and older buildings are made from materials plundered from the nearby ruin of TAE INORU, which was a gigantic FOURTH AGE tower that was a ruin by the time mortals had re-emerged in the FIFTH AGE. It forms a part of THE WAY trade-route and is known for its large markets (Pop. c. 190,000).

ASHURHADDONI: His. Lan. Now-extinct language in present-day OPHIUSSA, based in the city of ASHURHADDON. As the OPHIUSSAN LEAGUE began to consolidate the cities of the region, their many languages began to coalesce into what today is known as NALENI. See Vol II: Languages.

ASHYLESTE: Mil. Str. Subarctic stronghold belonging to Nizzum, located on a small island in the SEA OF SAMMAIDU, just north of the southern POLAR CIRCLE. The stronghold is built around an ancient black fortress.

ASIAL: Set. Rice-producing settlement in the region of HYRCANIA in the south of PARTHIA (Pop. c. 13,000).

ASIBA: Ser. City in the north west of AZAZEM, named after the extinct nation of ASIBAIA. The city was once part of the now-extinct nation of HRIDAN, though is one of few such cities to thrive following its fall in c. 2000 RM. It is a perennial part of the SHADOW MARCH (Pop. c. 15,500).

ASIBAIA: His. Ntn. Now-extinct nation that, at its height, was positioned between present-day AZAZEM and SKAROS, reaching as far north as the woods of HRIDAN.

It emerged in c. -100 following the fall of LASCAR^(3.) and thrived for millennia, though it began to decline in c. 2700 RM. It was crippled by extended sieges during the WAR OF THE ARTIFEXES, and it finally collapsed in c. 3020 RM, and its people displaced to the east.

Its lands were later re-settled by their descendants, who founded the nations of $\underline{IPANAH}^{(2)}$ and later $\underline{BASSORAH}$ atop its ruins. Similarly, refugees who fled to the north would later establish the nation of \underline{SHOTHA} , which later came under the aegis of the $\underline{DESOLATI}$. See Vol III: Extinct States.

ASIBAIAN: Lan. Language of the now-extinct CENTRAL LLACHATULI nation of ASIBAIA, though the language is still spoken in IPANAH^(2.) and SHOTHA by its descendants. See Vol II: Languages.

ASICTHAI: Plr. 'Asicthain'. Also 'godsborn'. Lit. 'not human'. Mor. KORACHANI word used in reference to the GODSBORN peoples – those who were born by the direct actions of the DEMIURGES, rather than gestating in two-and-twenty pods of seven seeds each sown by THE SHAPER.

Over time, the term has also come to encompass corruptions of the MORTAL PEOPLES (the SICTHAIN), such as MULLS or ETHERI. See Vol II: classification and Taxonomy of Life: Asicthain.

ASIEHIR: Rui. Ancient FIFTH AGE city in the west of KAZZAR⁽²⁾ in THE HAZABOS that originated in the time of the SETTARS, and thought to have been abandoned in c. 750 RM for unknown reasons.

ASIFAYA: Set. City in the south east of EIKARTHYEA, in the east of EASTERN MENISCEA (Pop. c. 48,000).

ASIKKA: Pol. Geo. Contested region in the east of NAARETH, covering some 8,00-square miles. The region is all that remains of ancestral TIKBALA lands, that were far larger in the FOURTH AGE, though whose numbers were whittled down by the WAR OF SCOURGING and other conflicts leading up the fading of the FOURTH AGE. They continued to dwindle in the FIFTH AGE, as the people of NAARTH (now NARTH) encroached on their lands, driving them to the eastern coast, overlooking the IAPETAN SEA.

It is unknown how many tikbala remain in the region, though it is thought to be as little as a few thousand. Though they once ventured beyond the region, the Naarethi military would persecute them back to Asikka, killing those they caught.

This persecution of tikbala is largely unwarranted as they are shy and skittish creatures, and it is possibly this disposition that makes them easy targets. They are insular and unwilling to allow outsiders into their lands and are not known to trade with the outside world, though it is thought that some contraband does make its way into their lands.

ASIMEL, VINDICATOR OF IO: m. (B.? – 212 RM) Mil. Pol. Per. Champion of Io, active in early 2nd century RM opposing the EXARCHS of MIRADOR and their actions in 212 RM that resulted in their handing over Io to the KORACHANI EMPIRE.

Emerging in the city of UR SITH in late 211 RM, he amassed a great number of followers and, following the official ceremony in which the Exarchs formally handed over Io to Korachan, marched against the city and soon-to-be capital of Io, ETHRA. The attack of the city was easily repelled and Asimel was killed outside the FIRAM GATE by the ARCHPATRICIAN-general Ecius Nemes.

His martyrdom did not go unnoticed by his followers and a cult arose around his name, with resistors of the imperial government in Io following his teachings, until the order was obliterated by imperial endocrines and censors in c. 340 RM, though in later centuries his name would re-emerge as that of an imperial saint, later patron of Io.

ASINI: Set. Settlement in the c-south east of CISNERIA. Is it located in a region known for its cattle-rearing (Pop. c. 3,000).

ASION: Sct. Small settlement in the north east of \underline{IO} , a few miles from the border with $\underline{SARASTRO}$ and the city of $\underline{HABBARO}$. Trade between the two is common (Pop. c. 6,000).

ASIPHYAL I: (B. 1091 – D. 1148 RM) Pol. Mil. Regional leader in INGHULL during a time of drought, Asiphyal was instrumental in rallying the starving people together to oppose mercenaries and outlaws who were stealing grain. He was supported by the AELORAN CHURCH, and was crowned the first king of Inghull in 1311 RM, founding a DYNASTY that lasted until 2136 RM, when it was dissolved by a caste of ATRAMENTISTS known as the SORCERER-KINGS⁽³⁾.

ASIYPHAL III: (B. 1241 – D. 1312 RM) Pol. War. The fifth king of INGHULL, crowned upon his mother's death in 1263 RM. He was responsible for restricting the power of the SUPHETS (advisors to the monarchy) and the ORDER OF EPISTEMIC ESOTERY in Inghull.

ASIREM: Geo. Ridge in the c north east of the DESOLATION OF ASTUDAN, close to the border east with SABIA.

ASISH: Set. City in the east of BA'AKH, overlooking the DAARKEN GULF.

Originally known by its Ba'akhi name of AASHA, the city receives pilgrims arriving from MORULAURGO along THE SHADOW MARCH, on their way west. It is one of the few cities in Ba'akh where the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE has a heavy influence. This dates back to the city's conquest by imperial troops in 469 RM and the corruption of its dervish religion KIHOTA into a militant branch of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, where its acolytes had become powerful exocrines and assassins that worked on behalf of the Church.

By c. 1200 RM the city had become an eOnclave of the religion, with seminaries and colleges proliferating in most districts and the seminal TEMPLE OF KIHOTA dominating its skyline. When Ba'akh was abandoned to the DOMNITORS in 2732 RM, Asish was one of the few cities to maintain close ties to the empire, with the Church presence there meaning that it continued to be a part of the Shadow March, even after the empire's full abandonment of the nation in 3097 RM.

The city was one of few that survived the increase in ATRAMENTAL TAINT following the empire's abandonment of the SIPHON ENGINES that dominated the nation, largely due to its eastern location. With the SARASTROAN SANCTION of 3103 RM, northern Ba'akh was given to SARASTRO. This included Aasha; though the regions' ruler, SATHEP THE RISEN, had little interest in the faltering nation, and left its cities to their own devices.

In 3176 RM Aasha sent a party of supplicants to ARGEA in Sarastro with gifts; a symbol of the city's loyalty. Sathep accepted the gifts and saw to it that the city was well-funded; a state that remains to this day, in return for his patronage, the city is expected to police Ba'akh, keeping it free of degenerates and DHAMATEANS, though the entirely of Ba'akh is too large a place for just one city to maintain, and most of the nation has since fallen into ruin and shadow, overrun by banditry.

With the SUNDERING OF THE KORACHANI EMPIRE, the city and its surrounding regions suffered some degree of religious strife, as the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE was supplanted by the newly-emerged Sarastroan offshoot- the REFORMED CHURCH OF SARASTRO, though it has since stabilised, becoming a part of the SALT ROAD, which has brought much-needed trade goods to the fledgeling nation via the capital (Pop. c. 183,000).

ASIUM: 1. Geo. Island in the north of ARKOS^(1.), dividing the SEA OF ERIA from the DAARKEN GULF. Like the city of DOLYST, it was named after the first KORACHANI governor in the CITADEL MOUNTS.

- 2. The first imperial governor of the city of DOLYST in the CITADEL MOUNTS. The city was renamed Asium in his honour in 398 RM.
- 3. His. Imperial bastion in EHBOT built over the older CITADEL MOUNT city of DOLYST. The city's harbours were rapidly refitted to accommodate the larger imperial vessels arriving carrying immigrants and supplies, and its walls were fortified by c. 400 RM alongside many municipal structures which were strengthened and renovated in imperial styles. The city, with its unopposed vistas of the south of the DAARKEN GULF and the SEA OF ERIA, was popular with imperial patricians arriving to Ehbot, and (despite the AUERENI wars that had gripped the south of the nation) it continued to attract their trade and business for some years, until a large earthquake struck the city in 519 RM, crippling its docks and levelling its larger structures, amongst them many patrician palaces and the governors palace.

Its main harbours destroyed by the act, Ehbot was effectively cut off from the empire, exacerbating its downfall. Korachan abandoned Ehbot to the INTERREGES in 527 RM, who let most of the regions' cities decay, including Asium, most of which slowly fell into the Sca. As the reign of the Interreges waned and the region became known as ARKOS^(1.), the old fortress was rebuilt in c. 675 RM, where it remained a powerful bastion overlooking the Daarken Gulf, though as the political climate changed and the region stabilised, the bastion slowly fell into disuse, until its abandonment in c. 1300 RM.

Following the SUNDERING OF THE KORACHANI EMPIRE in 3705 RM and the fragmentation of Arkos into warring city-states, the ruins of Asium found themselves resettled by political refugees who funded a new city there, known as RAIAA.

4. $\it{Mil. Atr.}$ Coastal fortress on the island of the same name, which along with the fortress of \underline{EREBU} , guards the main entrance into the \underline{SEA} OF \underline{ERIA} .

ASKARNA: Geo. Highland region in the c of PORPHYR, gaining elevation the farther west it gets until it drops in a cheer cliff some 375-miles long in the south of BETYL. The city of SARNAS is built into its western face.

ASKEFER: 1. Also 'the Tree'. Ast. Con. Constellation in the NORTHERN HEMISPHERE. It is named after the above tree sprits (1.). See Vol. Constellations.

- 2. Soc. Leg. In the superstitions of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, ancient forest tree spirits native to the OLD FOREST. It is possible that the legend is derived from ancient DERUWEID sightings, and that the memory has been corrupted over time. The legend is also likely related to the religion of the Old Forest⁽³⁾. See Vol II: Legends and Folktales.
- 3. Rel. Predominant religion within the OLD FOREST region of CENTRAL LLACHATUL. It is a nature religion that has at its centre an omniscient spirit-deity, which encompasses the SPIRITS^(1.) of all its worshippers, and is said to grow in power with the passing of each faithful VANEFANI.

Each settlement has at its centre a sacred tree in which is said to dwell Askefer, and all of these sacred trees are thought to form a network through which priests of the religion (most of whom are accomplished SHAPERS) can communicate. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

ASKER: Soc. Pol. Upper-class in the city-state of SIRIPHAGOS made up of merchant-lords and other influential families, many of whose members form the Plutocratic Council of Siriphagos. The class rose to prominence c. 3200 RM towards the end of a long period of war with SARASTRO, where it was partially responsible for an end to hostilities. Following that period, the class became the undisputed rulers of the city-state and surrounding lands, deposing its rulers in a bloody coup in 3219 RM which left them in full power of the state.

Today the Asker are subservient to the HALFBLOOD known as THE ALACRAN, though they still maintain a degree of power and influence, and oversee the day-to-day running of the republic. Most are now women, and many are taken by the Alacran as partners, with their children inheriting ranks of power across Siriphagos.

ASKIA: Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region in the c-south east of PNESSA, close to the border with CHEIRA, covering some 30,000 square-miles. The region is considered to be very close to the ATRAMENTA and acts as a lens of sorts, filtering the mortal plane, revealing the Atramenta below. The sky is unnaturally dark with only the horizons showing signs of light and openness. Strange UMBRAL creatures survive in the region, tethered to both worlds, unable to truly exist in either independently of the other.

The region is studied by Atramentists from the nearby settlement of KHIIG, and expeditions are often mounted into the heart of the region, which is categorised as a LEAST CONCERN by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

ASKLEPIA: Set. City in THE SURRACH, known to have one of the best hospitals in the entire region. It is situated along a powerful ATRAMENTAL leyline that helps with the binding of wounds, and is responsible for the growth of a plant that is used in the production of anaesthetics there.

It is around 60-miles from the IVORY ROAD & serves as a hospice to travellers and mercenaries moving through the region who are in need of medical aid (Pop. c. 22,800).

ASKLEPOS: Oth. HALFBLOODED guardian of the ASP PILLARS in SAGITTARIA. THE SURRACHI city of ASKLEPIA was settled by descendants of this halfblood.

ASLA: Cur. Main currency in Châr Mathi (TZALLRACH). It originated with the rule of the BOTUM⁽¹⁾ kings and the CHARATH CROWN, and remains in use today, albeit in a different more modern form. See Vol II: Currency of Elyden.

ASLANTIS: Int. Arc. Monolith with bas-carving of 2 lions fighting in the south of TZALLRACH. It was built between 131 – 149 RM by VENATHI forces as a show of the right that KING LABAISINGH THE STRONG had to rule over the people of CHARAMA (present-day CHÂR MATHI).

ASMARATH: Rui. Once a thriving centre of quarrying and mining in the region of LHANA in the c south west of TISARA, it boasted a population of around 15,000. In 3201 RM it and all its satellites and quarries were levelled by a great earthquake that would become known the SEISM OF ASMARATH.

The region was never rebuilt and surviving people fled to the north, where they resettled in less-affected areas.

ASMODEI: (8,240-ft.) Volcanic area covering some 1,000-square miles in the north of the DAENED SULRACH^(1.), in the c south west of KHALHAT. The entire area is unstable, with DUSTSTONE formations collapsing under new lava flows. The air is thick with UMBRA and sulphur, making it extremely dangerous to life. Indeed, the terrain is a blackened wasteland, and the sky above is little better, with the only colour coming from the occasional lava flows. Explorers who have penetrated the region claim that there are the tell-tale signs of ruins and ancient buildings here, but this remains unproven.

ASOA: Set. Fortified city in the south east of LIDEA built atop a giant flat-topped ziggurat that elevates it above the sands of the region. Two elevated thoroughfares emerge from the city (one to the east, another to the west, both of which form a part of THE SHADOW MARCH) supported on heavy metal girders that are constantly replaced due to the acrid sands that attack them. $\,$

The city originated as a gold mine in c 3000 RM and exploded in size in c. 3200 RM, around the time when the sands of the EKAIROBOS began to expand around them, necessitating the construction of the platforms and walls that remain to this day. The growth of the city necessitated a supply of constant water, leading to the construction of the Aqueduct of Asoa, leading 40-miles south east to the city from the river KISH Though the mines have since dwindled in size, they remain active, though their upkeep against the acrid sands of the Ekairobos is not costly (Pop. c. 36,000).

ASOAB: For. Ancient forest in the north east of SAMMAEA, that was exploited by the VENATHI EMPIRE. Today little is left of the forest, but what sparse woodlands that survive in VENTHIR are thought to be remnants of the Asoab.

ASOBETH: Set. Settlement in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of MEDES, known for its vineyards and popular rosé wines, which are commonly sold to merchants passing through while travelling along the GREAT ROAD (Pop. c. 7,000).

ASODRII: Set. Coastal city in the south west of PNESSA, overlooking the GULF OF SAURIAR (Pop. c. 38,800).

ASOEN: For. Shrublands in the south of VENTHIR, in the far south east of the SHARA PLAINS, to the north of the KAUIN Mountains. The region originated as woodlands though has largely been reduced to scrubland through the change in coastline and encroaching mortal activity throughout the FIFTH AGE caused it to dwindle.

In antiquity, the region was contested between the last sphinxes and the $\underline{\text{NATHI}}$ people over coal and $\underline{\text{UMBRA}}$. The wars ended with the effective extinction of the sphinxes, though it is believed that $\underline{\text{QUEEN}}$ $\underline{\text{HETEPHERES}}$, who would later rise to become queen of $\underline{\text{VENTHIR}}$, was born there during this time of conflict.

ASOKA: Pol. Ser. Capital of SKAROS until 23 RM, when it was razed after a four-month siege by KORACHAN. After the empire took over, the capital in Skaros was moved to CATOA (later renamed SKAROSIA). It remains as a part of THE SHADOW MARCH, where the site of the martyrdom of ST. EARTA is visited.

ASOKH RATER: Set. Settlement in the c north west of CHEIRA (Pop. c. 2,750).

ASÓN DILMINHU: Rel. Geo. Natural monolith in the far south west of DATEPHA, and is worshipped by the ASHERI that populate the region. The monolith looms over a partially-fossilised 4-armed idol that is the true object of their worship, and which they believe speaks to them in their DREAMS. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

ASONA: Plr. 'Asonas'. Soc. Lan. Set. Common word for city-state in the VESPERTINE LEAGUE.

ASOS: Ind. Set. Gold-mining settlement in the c south of VENTHIR, to the east of the WORKNAH Mountains (Pop. c. 7,500).

ASOUSH: Rvr. River in the c south of LIDEA, flowing for 900-miles south from sources in the ORIAN Mountains before meeting its parent the river SHIBBOLETH^(3.).

ASOUTAN: Geo. Rocky formation forming the north western border of AHRISHEN with the south east of THE OLD FOREST.

ASP GOD, the: Rel. Dei. Deity of ancient SAGITTARIA, first recorded in 567 RM by the explorer NAVAH BERDEN. It demands blood sacrifices from a revered priestly caste. Its main temple is known as the ASP PILLARS, over 450-miles west of the GATE OF EREBETH. It is thought to have evolved from the snake god that the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR outlawed early during his reign in KORACHAN that forced the SAGITTAARS into exile.

ASP PILLARS: His. Rel. Str. Ancient temple in the north of SAGITTARIA, overlooking the SEA OF SERPENTS. As recorded by the explorer NAVAH BERDEN in 567 RM, the region is populated by a priest-caste of HALFBLOODS whose ritual sacrifices are said to appease the ASP GOD of Sagittaria. At the centre of the temple is a large stone pillar shaped into a helix comprising two intertwined asps – the pillar was taken west by the KNIGHTS-EXILE in 33 RM following their expulsion from KORACHAN by the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR.

ASPAKIA: Set. Coastal settlement in the PARTHISAN colony of $\underline{\text{NISSA}}^{(1.)}$ (Pop. c. 6,000).

ASPAMITHIS: Set. Small coastal city in the far north of the PARTHISAN colony of ABDAKROS^(1.) on the island of IRUGNA^(1.) (Pop. c. 14,000).

ASPITH: also 'the Spine in the Sky'. Ast. Con. Constellation located along the equator. See Vol II: Constellations.

ASPRAVALTA: Geo. Mountain dominating the west of AKANTHRA, in the c of SOUTHERN SAMMAEA. It lies above a subterranean area of ATRAMENTAL TAINT, and its roots have been reduced to DUSTSTONE. As a result, it is prone to landslides and earthquakes, and it is riddled with winding tunnels and caverns that are believed to radiate from a large hollow in the centre of which is the epicentre of the ATRAMENTAL LACUNA responsible for the formations.

ASSAAC: Set. Small fortified city in the region of GENETHAANT in the c east of THE SURRACH, along the course of the river YELLRAKH. It is known for its grapes and other arable farming (Pop. c. 20,000).

ASSAB: Mys. Rel. Phil. One of the SEVENTY-SEVEN NAMES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE.

ASSAFF: Set. City in the north west of BASSORAH^(2.), along the trade-route north into ALMAGEST. It forms a part of the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 15,750).

ASSAFFI: Set. Fortified coastal city in the c-south east of NOAVATUR, along the eastern coast of the RED BAY. It is known for its harbours and shipyards, where many mercantile vessels moor (Pop. c. 43,000).

ASSAGOS: Pol. Geo. Tribe in the far east of MULCIBER, in the GROWING MOUNTAINS, in the north east of SAMMAEA, overlooking the SOLEYN TERRITORIES. Its people are recognised as ROC tamers and its proximity to the volcanic lands of HAMMAI are a cause of frequent earthquakes. Due to this there are few permanent settlements in the north of the region, where nomadic pastoral communities are common.

ASSAHKA: Geo. Region in the west of AHKA, of around 7,000-square miles, between the AGNOS and southern-most expanse of the TOLIASOR Mountains reaching as far north as the river AMALTHEA. It is known for its small tribal rural settlements that subsist in the fertile soils to the north west of MT. MALEHOTHEA. Though largely uncatalogued, it is thought that combined the settlements have a population of around 30,000.

ASSAM: 1. Geo. Island off the eastern coast of NAARETH.

2. Mil. Str. Coastal fortress on the above island guarding the sea-route into the city of $\underline{\text{TOMOR}}$.

ASSANAR: Mil. Str. Fortress in the north of TAMAR. The fortress appeared recently and its forces were responsible for the expansion of its territories north into the south east of LYRIDIA.

ASSAPONT: His. Rui. Rel. Ancient ruined temple, similar in style to KORACHANI cathedrals, only far older, located in the east of JURRAS^(2,). The base of the cathedral is hewn from the red stones of the land and remains intact, though the rest is weathered and destroyed, its once gigantic dome collapsed. Nothing is known of the culture that created it or the faith it once celebrated as the paintings that once adorned its walls have faded and peeled off.

ASSASSA: Set. Settlement in the far east of CHEIRA, close to the border with GIBEAH (Pop. c. 8,000).

ASSASRA: Set. Coastal city in the far east of SERROK. It is known for its natural harbour, which is accessible through a well-protected creek, 20-miles from the coast proper. Its main industries are its shipyards and harbours, which see much traffic from the MIROVEAN OCEAN (Pop. c. 50,000).

ASSASSIN-KING, the: see SAAT ANID.

ASSATRA: Set. Settlement in the south of AZAZEM. Its main industry is the production of AHAROR^(1,) CHEESE, which is used by ONEIROMANCERS across the KORACHANI EMPIRE and beyond (Pop. c. 2,800).

ASSAYER: Rvr. northern-most of ALMAGESTS' twin rivers, the other being the NUNCIUS.

ASSEER: Dem. 'Assecrian'. His. Ntn. Historical nation in the north of WESTERN SAMMAEA in what is now the c north east of ESHIR^(2.). The nation was founded in 712 RM by exiled Settars from the KAZZARAN^(I.) peninsula who settled the region east of ATENARA. There they secured various coastal areas, using their engineering skills to rapidly construct large fortresses from which they were able to overpower the bucolic natives. Over the ensuing decades they were able to exert their power further, spreading across the Atenaran peninsula, constructing many fortified harbours that became strongholds to their fleets of fishermen, merchants and navy. They continued worshipping the ASSEERI PANTHEON, and spread their beliefs across their conquered lands.

Its people eventually became famed for their pottery, which made use of a distinctive grey-blue clay that was common in the tidal flats in the south of the SEA OF SABRIYA^(1,). For centuries, containers used to for trade across the Sea of SEA OF ORRIDA originated in Asseer and its harbours were busy with the trade of pots and urns, some of them being taller than a man and incredibly tough. They continued to be used well into the 2nd millennium RM and many survive to this day.

The discovery of a GODSTONE in the mudflats of Sabriya brought chaos to the region in 1209 RM. It was rapidly taken to the stronghold of Sabriya^(2,), where it became a prized possession of the TARIMOR kindred, granting its nobles unrivalled power. This forced other kindreds into an uneasy alliance to claim the godstone, leading the region into a long period of war that lasted for centuries, with the godstone becoming known as the SABRIYAN STONE, changing hands multiple times and being moved from fortress to fortress, with the wielder of the godstone being considered a chosen avatar of the Pantheon as a whole.

In c. 1320 RM a group emerged that was vocal in its decrying of the godstone, believing that it was an object intended to test the followers of the Pantheon, separating the greedy and covetous from the loyal and godly. They became ostracised for their blasphemies, and eventually became considered as lower-class citizens, earning the nickname GODLESS, which they adopted as their own. They eventually became a servant caste to the priests of individual temples, which gave them immunity from any hostility from the wielders of the godstone.

The FARISÛN kindred gained control of the godstone in 1455 RM, and moved it to the legendary fortress of LIRIN, where it remained for many years, with the enemies of the Farisûn kindred failing to retake it. The godstone became an heirloom handed down from parent to child and the Farisûn kindred became a powerful dynasty.

Dreplatara Farisûn inherited the godstone from his father in c. 1600 RM, becoming undisputed overlord of Lirin and surrounding lands. He used his possession of the godstone to exert control over the region. By c. 1620 RM he had subjugated the other kindreds, forming the first united Asseerian nation.

Drerllatar was a ruthless leader, and rapidly fortified the coastline of his nation against external attack and linking the once-rival strongholds with a well-funded trade-route. The polytheistic beliefs of his people thrived under his rule, though this eventually earnt the ire of the GODSLAYERS whose crusaders clashed largely ineffectually against its fortresses. However, the power of the godstone is now said to have warped his judgement. He claimed to his confidantes that he was slowly becoming inured to sensations and emotions, causing him to seek more extreme forms of pleasure. Stories of grotesque deeds within his court abounded as his reign progressed. He became more insular and delegated work, while idolizing the godstone, allowing no-one else near it. He was last seen in public in 2096 RM, and spent the last century of his rule living in the treasure chamber where the godstone was kept, spending his days before the great shrine dedicated to it.

In 1923 RM Drerllatar Farisûn reformed the Asseeri Pantheon, elevating himself to the rank of chief deity whilst delegating the dozens of traditional deities to demigods under his rule. This allows him to finally rid Asseer of the Godless caste, who are rounded up and executed ruthlessly within a few days of the reforms taking effect. Few, if any, escape these actions and the religion suffers in the wake of their culling.

The doors leading to the shrine were found open one morning in 2175 RM, and the headless body of Drerllatar impaled on the blood-soaked shrine. His head was later found outside the gate leading to the palace. Of the Sabriyan Stone there was no trace. Efforts were made to cover up the loss of the godstone, but word travelled fast and Asseer became embroiled by chaos as soon as the vassal states learnt of Drerllatar's death. Some defected and others allied, marching against Lirin. War consumed the capital for two years, ending in 2177 RM with the destruction of the palace, and the fragmentation of Asseer. With the Sabriyan Stone gone, no one kindred or territory could gain the upper hand, and the region degenerated back into a series of small states and city-states from which emerged the Republic of Eshir in 2489 RM. See Vol III: Extinct States.

ASSEERI: His. Soc. Cultural group in ancient SETTAR in the KAZZARAN^(L) peninsula. They were persecuted for clinging to the ancient polytheistic beliefs of their CHIWENOOL ancestors. Forced into exile, they crossed the GULF OF ESHIRON, where they settled in the region of eastern ATENARA, eventually forming the nation of ASSEER in 712 RM.

ASSEERI PANTHEON: Rel. Dei. The ancient polytheistic deities of the ASSEERI culture in ancient SETTAR. They continued to be worshipped by their descendants after their persecution across the GULF OF ESHIRON, spreading to lands conquered by these new ASSEERIAN people.

They remained an important part of Asseerian culture throughout the tumultuous times following the discovery of the SABRIYAN STONE, though reforms made by DRERLLATAR FARISÛN in 1923 RM saw them delegated to demigods as he was elevated to the chief living divinity of the religion. His death in 2175 RM was interpreted as martyrdom and an act of sacrifice to allow the various demigods of the pantheon to attain similar levels of power.

Further reforms in 3174 RM saw more demigods added to the pantheon, bringing about a partisanship previously unheard of, with cities venerating their patron above other demigods, with rivalries with other cities becoming common. The term saint became common in this time, and became more popular amongst the laity than demigod.

They continue to be worshipped as patron saints today by the people of Eshir, though they have never enjoyed the level of divine status they once enjoyed. See Vol IV: Deities and Demigods.

ASSEL NASSA: Set. Small city in the c of TZALLRACH, along the fort where the river ADASIBA meets its parent, the river ARELLI (Pop. c. 19,000).

ASSESSOR: Pol. Rnk. Rank within the SANCTIFIED ORDERS OF THE INQUISITION, and one of the more common ranks above that of ACCENSOR. Populated by capable agents who have proven themselves within the ranks of the Accensors, Assessors are individuals who reply to requests for aid and arrive in settlements to conduct rapid assessments of the situation before reporting back to the Order before an INQUIRER or INQUISITOR is sent, depending on the report.

ASSESSOR-GENERAL: Pol. Rnk. Rank within the SANCTIFIED ORDERS
OF THE INQUISITION, denoting the highest rank amongst the ASSESSORS.
Assessor-generals command as many as seven HIGH-ASSESSORS, and are well informed and are amongst the most knowledgeable people regarding the happenings within their demesnes, which can cover a vast area up to the size a of a full nation.

ASSHAM: Set. Large temple-city in SAGITTARIA (Pop. unknown).

ASSIDA: Geo. Island off the south western coast of WESTERN SAMMAEA, in the COTRIAN ISLES, forming a part of the ISLAND STATES OF IRY.

ASSIR: Soc. Obj. Heady perfume manufactured in KARAKHAS from CENTURY PLANTS that are cultivated in the plains of SHAKEL ANU. The slow growth and reproduction of the century plants make the perfume expensive and an object of prestige in the region.

ASSITISI: also 'the Holy Waters. Rel. Str. Series of consecrated pools and natural springs in the hinterlands of north western KORACHAN, forming a part of the course of the river RHAE. It 3137 RM the pools were the site of a miracle by ST. JERUSH^(1.), who is said to have healed his followers of AEPATHY simply by washing them with the waters of the Rhae.

Today they are visited by many imperial pilgrims, who pay to drink from the holy spring waters and to pray at the SANCTUARY OF ASSITISI.

ASSITISI, SANCTUARY OF: Rel. Str. Church in the north west of KORACHAN close to the Holy Waters of ASSITISI. It was built in c. 3230 RM following the canonisation of ST. JERUSH, who performed the miracle of Assitisi there in 3137 RM.

ASSOGHAQUA: Geo. 375-miles long mountain forming the western border of the TARAHID ANNEXES with the nation of OPHAR.

ASSORA: Com. Set. Mercantile city in VAALK that controls much land-trade in and out of the nation along the RED ROUTE, which passed through its borders. The city is also renowned for its large well-defended hostels that cater primarily to pilgrims undergoing THE SHADOW MARCH.

Until c. 3400 RM the city was coastal and boasted large thriving harbours, though once it became land-locked it dwindled greatly to its present state. A smaller settlement, known as SATRA, appeared some miles to the north, and its port is now considered part of ASSORA (Pop. c. 90,000).

ASTA: Rvr. River to the south of the BAND Mountains flowing 150-miles south east into the SEA OF SEKHEM.

ASTAFRIN: Set. Settlement in the west of SARAGOS, in the eastern face of the LEONTA Mountains. It is known for its aluminium and sulphur mines (Pop. c. 6,000).

ASTAHAN: Rui. Abandoned city in the east of CUTH. It was once located along the banks of the great river YANN, which has since run dry. The city was wiped out in a great PLAGUE that struck in 3073 RM. Those who were not killed by the plague were walled in and starved to death, their bodies still lining the streets and their homes to this day. The city and its environs are seen as a cursed place and shunned by Cuth. Many claim that the ruins are inhabited by AL GHULS today.

ASTAHKH: Rvr. River in ATARAXIA, flowing south east for 785-miles from various sources in the southern-face of the BLACK MOUNTAINS before emptying into the BAY OF ATARIS in the STRAIT OF SKAROS.

ASTANA: Lak. Lake in KARAKHAS, forming part of the course of the river ASTON.

ASTAR: Lak. Oxbow lake in the c of the DESOLATION OF ASTUDAN, left over from the meander of the river ALLIA.

ASTAS: Mil. Str. Island-fortress in the north west of ALMAGEST, guarding the southern-most waters of the SEA OF SEKHEM.

ASTATI: 1. Set. City in the far west of GNOTH, forming part of the fortified line that guards its western border with RAONGEN^(2.) (Pop. c. 30,750).
2. Mil. Str. Fortress in the far west of GNOTH, forming part of the fortified line that guards its western border with RAONGEN^(2.). The fort also lends its name to the city that guards the west of Gnoth.

ASTENACHA: Pol. Set. Capital of the DOMAINS OF SHAUATAS, in the south east of BROR^(1.), situated between the courses of the twin rivers BITUAH and AMIZ in rocky area in the VAKAR WETLANDS. A series of canals and locks link the city with the two rivers, making it a hub of trade and travel. This has turned it into one of the larger cities in the Domains (Pop. c. 1,079,200).

ASTER: 1. Sea. Small narrow sea in the south west of AQUARIIA, forming part of the SEA OF LIAKARRA. It was once far larger, stretching north east as far as the present-day city of MIRA.

2. Mil. Str. Coastal fortress guarding the entrance into the SEA OF ASTER in the south west of AQUARIIA.

3. Set. Major city in the delta of the river ISARRA. It was the site of the first uprisings against the PARTHISAN occupiers late in 3021 RM, and is today home to a major harbour where most sea trade enters Aquariia (Pop. c. 1,034,000).

4. (10,200-ft.) Geo. Peak in the far east of the ZOIQUAGO Mountains in the c of GIBEAH, famed as the birthplace of the septuplet otherworlders collectively known as the ASTERI.

ASTERI: Oth. Septuplet OTHERWORLDERS reborn in MOUNT ASTER^(4,) in GIBEAH (then UALLA MIGHA) in 1384 RM. Believed to possess a hive mind making them greater than the sum of their parts, they rapidly became religious symbols in the region, leading to a cultural schism that would eventually take advantage of growing dissent overtaking Ualla Migha, allowing their region of Gibeah to become an independent nation in 1727 RM.

The Asteri were elevated to religious and political rulers, and remained so until a PLAGUE spread across Gibeah in c. 3860 RM, affecting otherworlders and halfbloods. The descendants of the Asteri were debilitated and eventually to too were the Asteri affected with some of their numbers dying by the end of 3860 RM, after which Gibeah descended into anarchy. In 3878 RM a single Aster emerged from their self-imposed prison in their citadel and kills a group of scavengers, its body erupting into a halo of brilliant light that convinced many that the figure is the god Arak made manifest.

However, the last of the Asteri was a broken being, its mind fractured by the death of its siblings. Once a hive mind, now only a fraction of their collective consciousness remained. It became a capricious and psychotic being, rapidly assuming the character of a tyrant to the people of Gibeah. It would give fickle and costly orders such as ordering the construction of a new mine and after years of backbreaking work, simply ordering its closure before even a fraction of its riches are extracted. It commissioned the construction of great self-aggrandising monuments, and the church became a monolithic entity, the sole governing body in Gibeah, its priests acting as censors and arbiters of what was and was not allowed. Very little was allowed.

The workforce became little more than slaves to its fickle vanity, which was it execute random people on a whim, leaving the populace living in terror, which it delighted in. If Gibeah was isolated before, it is now truly detached from the outside world during this time.

The sole remaining Aster is knowing as the God-king Aster today.

ASTH: Sec. Old settlement in the west of VAALK, situated along the course of THE SHADOW MARCH. An old temple is maintained by the REFORMED CHURCH OF SARASTRO, and is the resting place of ST. MELARHUR, whose skeletal form in full plate armour is a popular stop along THE SHADOW MARCH (Pop. c. 3,600).

ASTH KEN: Geo. Expansive stone desert in the south of KHARKHARADONTIS, along the TROPIC OF MAOCARHL. Its northernmost reaches are afflicted by ATRAMENTAL TAINT, and its mushroom-shaped rocks are coated in a viscid substance that is corrosive to flesh and which is sickly-sweet, attracting many insects and vermin to their deaths. Their rotting bodies in turn attract larger scavengers and predators who are more acclimated to life in the region, including PHYLACTERS.

ASTIDA: Obj. VENTHIRI vessel, which formed part of the explorer BOHMIUS'S voyage across SAMMAEA. It ran aground on a reef in 1525 RM, east of the island of BEKSHEGNI. The hull of the vessel can still be seen with the naked eye during low tide.

ASTON: Rvr. River in the south of KARAKHAS, flowing for over 100-miles before meeting with its tributary, the river NEGHIRREN, through lake LATER.

ASTRAGALA: Sec. City in the north west of RHAMIA, some 25-miles north of the VAERN Mountain (the natural mountain over which the artificial VARRACHON was constructed eons past). The city began life as a salt mine in c. 560 RM, though exploitation of its resources by the KORACHANIEMPIRE led to its abandonment in c. 800 RM, though a small population remained. The town would later be resettled by immigrant HIEROGOTHS from VÂRR in 924 RM, who brought with them superstitions of the Varrachon. The Hierogoths mingled with the remaining imperial populace and local slaves, and by the time of the Korachani abandonment of Rhamia in 1017 RM, it had become a sizeable town, continuing to grow throughout the next 500-years. No artificial lights were said to exist in the city, a practice believed to have originated in Hierogoth superstition; a means with which to ward off the DEMIURGE VORROPOHAIAH'S attentions.

As the physical corruption of Rhamia increased over the next thousand years, the settlement, once boasting a population of close to 10,000, began to dwindle, until it was abandoned in c. 3200 RM. The return of Korachan to the region in 3980 RM saw the settlement re-populated by the STEEL LEGIONS and their support-regiments, in anticipation of a coming conflict.

ASTRAL PROJECTION: Mys. Sup. Dre. State of being made possible through SHAPING whereby the shaper 'travels' to the OTHERWORLD. Whilst the physical body remains planted firmly in the MATERIAL PLANE, the consciousness of the person is projected into the otherworld, where they can 'travel' and communicate with the SPIRITS(1.) that dwell there, to a fashion.

Less commonly the process is made easier through the use of TECHNARCANE machinery, that works similar to an IRON MANTLE (2.). allowing a shaper to do more through less exertion. There are some examples of such engines that allow non-shapers to astrally project, though they are rare and highly valued objects. The most renowned such engine exists in the REPUBLIC INSTITUTE OF OTHERWORLDLY RESEARCH. A similar yet distinct state exists, where an SOMNIARII (ONEIROMANCER) can enter the DREAMWORLD, whereby they can physically infiltrate the DREAMS of others.

In the Korachani empire most shapers who are capable of Astral Projection are ether licensed SULRACHARII or occultists working beyond the purview of the law. See Vol IV: the Materia Omna.

ASTRAL SPECTRE: see EMPYREAN SPECTRE.

ASTRAL TRAVELLER: Sup. One who finds themselves in the act of ASTRAL PROJECTION. This could be the SHAPER who is making the travel possible, or a non-shaper who is being guided by a shaper.

ASTRAPUR: Set. City in ERET^(2.) in the north west of SAMMAEA along the course of the river EMPUSA^(1.). It trades north east with IZABAL^(1.) (Pop. c. 37,400).

ASTRETAS PROJECTION: Car. Cartographic PROJECTION originating in Io in c. 550 RM, created by the cartographer and explorer NAVAH BERDEN. The projection is designed to be an accurate representation of the globe and attempts to depict area accurately over shape and distance (it was used primarily in the use of global distributions, such as resources, area etc).

Though distortion is inevitable in the flattening of a spherical object, the use of rhumb lines and carefully denoted scales along the lines was invaluable to explorers of the period who utilised such maps. The projection method remained popular for some 300 years, until the VANGULI projection gained prominence in ALMAGEST c. 900 RM.

ASTROLOGY: Oth. The study of the stars and heavens, in relation to the OTHERWORLD and OTHERWORLDERS. Astrologers study the stars to predict the birth of otherworlders.

ASTROMANCY: Ast. A form of astronomy considered more elite than others. The process of astromancy originated in ALMAGEST, and was inherited by the stargazing culture that preceded the modern age in ALMAGEST.

ASTROMANCY, ORDER OF: Org. Council of master astronomers founded and based in ALMAGEST in c. 2250 RM. The Order oversees discoveries and developments in the field of astronomy, authorising the naming of new celestial bodies, constellations etc.

ASTUDAN: 1. Geo. Canyon system in the east of the DESOLATION OF ASTUDAN, forming the last 375-miles of the course of the river ALLIA, before it disappears beneath the city of GÂTHA. The canyon was created by the movements of the river across soft limestone, creating canyons as deep as 300-ft in areas.

2. His. Lan. Loose republic in the north of CENTRAL LLACHATUL, between ALMAGEST and TEMUJA. It is dominated by the wasteland known as the DESOLATION OF ASTUDAN, and is largely uninhabited. Its only major city and capital is the city of GÂTHA. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

ASTUR, LIGHTHOUSE of: Str. Lighthouse in the far east of VAALK, on the tip of the ARAKK peninsula. It commands unrivalled views of THE INNER SEA and the SEA OF NUTHEN, as far West as the island of VANADHA. There are rumours that it is built over an ancient fortified temple.

ASULIL: Set. Fortified settlement in the south east of the BARRIER LANDS, along the eastern periphery of HOGRI Geysers. It is a major producer of sulphur (Pop. c. 8,000).

ASURGAH: Geo. Mountain in the south of SUOR. The range is characterised by cliffs in the south west.

ASURIAH: Rvr. River in the east of the HENDECARCHY^(1.) of AMILLAERE^(1.), flowing west for 350-miles from sources in the and CARCAENT Mountains, before meeting its parent, the river LAUL EGLEA.

ASTURIAN: Soc. Rnk. Falconers in PARTHISAN cities who use birds of prey (particularly the ASTURYX) as pest control, keeping vermin populations in check. In TETHRA they are also found in low enforcement, where their birds are trained to hunt fugitives.

ASTURYX: Fau. Red-plumed birds of prey common in eastern PARTHIS.

They are relatively easily tamed and have been used as pest control in cities across PARTHIS for millennia. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

ASUS: Geo. Large mesa, around 50-miles long in the plains of northern MHAROKK, protruding from the south of the plains of NICASSA.

ASUWAN: His. Nm. Ancient FIFTH AGE territory once belonging to native YARAOMIC PEOPLE. It was situated in the north of SAMMAEA, forming the north of their ancestral lands to the south west of the BAY OF NUTHEN in what are today the far east of VAALK, northern MHAROKK, and eastern HARAPPA⁽³⁾. It is amongst the last Yaraomic territories to be taken by KORACHAN, and was slowly overrun between 750 – 900 RM, during which time native Yaraomic People were taken as slaves or driven out, forced into ever-dwindling territories.

Like most of Yaraomic history, very little remains of its people's culture today, and the caste of lorekeepers known as the IARAOM GRABBA travel across northern Sammaea searching for ancient artefacts to take to their fortress-library in IARSHUGGAH.

ASZINOR: Ind. Str. UMBRAL RIG in the far south west of Ophar that operates deep drills for the extraction of raw UMBRA.

AT SAAB: Rui. Ruins in the north of LAASKHA, thought to date back to the ALAASI nation. It is the most intact of the Alaasi ruins and has been extensively explored by adventurers, its vaults and catacombs looted of all valuables.

AT TAAN: Ruin. Ruins in the south east of SKAROS, thought to date back to the ALAASI nation. The ruins are expansive though largely crumbled and buried in the rust fields of the southern ANOMOFERROH.

ATA: Geo. Hills in the far west of ALAM BETHYL, along the border with the far east of RAONGEN^(2.). The region is noted for its many pillars, known collectively as the HAG ATA.

ATAARIB: Seb. Major coastal city in the north of KASIHAAL, in the north east of BROR⁽¹⁾ (Pop. c. 101,800).

ATAAYN: Set. Coastal settlement in the west of LAASHKA (Pop. c. 2,100).

ATABIRRUSH: Geo. Savannah in the south of SARASTRO, between the badlands of KRAONA to the north, and the stone desert of SOLACHAN to the south.

ATAGOBOU: Set. Settlement in the c south west of PARAIYA, in the c north of BELLN. Its main industry is agriculture, and it provides food and provisions to merchants travelling the SALT ROAD (Pop. c. 2,800).

ATAHOR: Geo. Postglacial plains in the north east of XYRPHAAT⁽³⁾. The region is expansive and covered in rounded boulders and smooth undulating grassy landscape.

ATAKHAS: Set. City in the north west of KARAKHAS, situated along the course of the river SARGOTH (Pop. c. 19,500).

ATALAN: Geo. Valley in the west of AHRISHEN, renowned for the many hewn monoliths that stand on their sides, some of gargantuan sizes, all apparently constructed from single blocks of granite. The creations are attributed to the DEMIURGE VORROPOHAIAH and his followers and ancient quarries nearby bear testament to the origin of the constructions – all of which were quarried as single stones, some of them hundreds of feet long to a side. The place, like many areas associated with the crazed Demiurge, is shunned by most.

ATALEA: Set. Settlement in the west of LYRIDIA DHAI, forming part of THE SHADOW MARCH as well as the RED ROUTE, and it is known for its many inns and hostels (Pop. c. 4,000).

ATALIA: Ser. Fortified settlement in the south east of SAGITTARIA (Pop. c. 6,000).

ATELIER: Tec. Workshops and laboratories dedicated to the experimentation and investigation of various fields such as ATRAMENTISM, TECHNARCANA, CLONING, and so-on. MHAROKK is famed for its cloning ateliers, for instance.

ATALLUA: Pol. Eleventh of the HENDECARCHIES of the FOREST KINGDOMS, located in the north east of MALAN. Its capital is the city of SOLEMNIA, and it is ruled by the HENDECARCH SVIZIA OF THE CARALL.

On average, it is the most mountainous and highest of the Hendecarchies, known for its spectacular rock formations and geography, which is dominated by the hidden cave system known as the THAENILLA. Above, its numerous fantastical rock-pillars dominate its eastern regions, which abut the ARGENT Mountains. At lower elevations, in the far south west of the kingdom, the terrain gives way to sparse woodlands that are dominated by lush river valleys amid which lie most of its settlements.

ATALON: Lake in the east of KORACHAN, along the course of the river CHANI.

ATAMAHIA: Sup. Ind. One of the earliest FIFTH AGE raw UMBRA mines recorded, attributed to the NATHI KINGDOM, in what is now VENTHIR. Believed to have been built in c. -230 RM, following the rise to power of the ALCHEMIST-lords of the city of MIDAL in Nath, the mines of Atamahia transported small amounts of crude umbra around 1,200-miles north east to Midal, where the substance was used as a reagent in their alchemical experiments (a factor many scholars attribute to their rapid move away from FIRMAMENTAL-based alchemy to ATRAMENTAL-based alchemy). The mines were abandoned following the LION HERESIES that led to the crumbling of the Nathi kingdom.

The VENATHI EMPIRE that rose in its place instead turned to the forest of ASOAB, where smaller veins of UMBRA were found, but the material extracted from the region was poor and the mines were abandoned in c. 135 RM. Scholars rediscovered manifestos pertaining to Atamahia and returned to re region in 140 RM and its mines were greatly expanded. Conflict with SARASTRO escalated into the so-called WAR OF THE TRIPTYCH, which engulfed the region between 161 and 183 RM, with Sarastro in control of the mine.

The return to power of QUEEN HETEPHERES in 194 RM and the KORACHANI EMPIRE'S eventual dominance in the region saw Atamahia return to VENTHIR by c. 250 RM, where it remained until its abandonment in 2893 RM, though Korachan granted mining rights to a few patrician families who maintain small operations there to this day.

ATAMAND: Set. Settlement on the island of TARRAS in lake C'DATA in the west of ARKOS^(1.). The settlement is famed for its diamond mines (Pop. c. 5,200).

ATANEEDUSH: also 'the Cloudlands' Int. Dre. Geo. Fantastical landscape famed across ELYDEN, particularly amongst ONEIROMANTIC circles, known for its cloud-like land formations. A DREAMSCAPE of notable permanence, the region is located in the plateau of LENG in SHAZGIN and has been known to MORTALS for many millennia. For tens of thousands of square miles, the land here looks like a solid cloudy landscape, as though one were walking on the tops of clouds. Though solid, they nevertheless have the soft texture and feel that one would expect, with one's feet sinking 1 – 2-ft. into the fluffy surface before feeling 'solid' ground, making travel difficult, but far from impossible.

The landscape is diverse, with level expanses peppered with cloudy mesas, pillars, and canyons, and rougher terrain with unstable ground prone to concealed sinkholes. In places, quicksilver-like streams and waterfalls cut a path through the cloudscape. Elsewhere, the brilliant white clouds make way for growling grey wastelands that are dangerous to traverse, with the threat of lightning storms ever-present.

The region has fascinated mortals for as long as they have known of it, though all attempts at settling the area or exploiting its resources have been met with failure. Oneiromancers travel here from across Elyden, lured by tales of its beauty.

ATANNAR: Set. Coastal city in the north of TATAR, in the north of SAMMAEA (Pop. c. 41,000).

ATAR: Flo. Tall trees with long thin red leaves and white scabrous bark that is continuously flaking off, allowing a characteristic thick red sap to ooze out. The sap is pungent and attracts small creatures – insects, lizards, small birds and mammals – to it. The sap has soporific qualities that, when ingested in large doses or by small creatures, can be lethal. Atar trees are characterised by the verminous corpses that carpet their roots, providing nutrients to the trees, which easily survive in shaded areas.

The trees have expansive root-systems, which take advantage of the soils around them. Due to this, Atar trees tend to kill other large flora in the vicinity, leading to them surviving in very sparse groves around which can be found the lifeless skeletons of trees killed by their voracious roots (which are shallow, and often protrude from the ground). As a result, Atar forests are extremely rare, with the only known expanse of them located on the island of DHAT.

The trees have been successfully cultivated in some areas, where their sap is used to make anaesthetics, narcotics and liquors, all of which utilise the trees' characteristic sap. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

ATARAN: Geo. Island off the north western coast of SAMMAEA, south of the KORACHANI colony of TAVVADRA. The island is largely unclaimed, though the natives of the Sammaean mainland claim it as their own, though few if any settlements exist there. Local legend names the island in many of its ancient creation legends and it is almost a mythical place.

ATARI: Mil. Str. Southern-most of two fortresses in the c of TARTAK, guarding the MAESAN ridge and the AIOS KATH pipeline that runs across it.

ATARAL: Sec. City in the south of DHAT, which gives its names to the ATAR trees common in the region. The city has, for centuries, specialised in the distilling of the Atar trees' sap, which is used in the manufacture of narcotics and liquors, which are both common in the region and exported west to BROR^(1.) (Pop. c. 14,000).

ATARASH: Set. City and major CERUSE producer in ATARAXIA (Pop. c. 29,500).

ATARAXIA: Dem. 'Ataraxian'. Ntn. Nation that appeared in the c. of LLACHATUL, west of the STRAIT OF SKAROS, south of the BLACK MOUNTAINS, in c. 3449 RM, following the independence of the city of ARKAM in 3311 RM, which would later became its capital.

The people of Ataraxia are largely descended from the remnants of an earlier nation known as ARGHA, which was destroyed by the KORACHANI EMPIRE in 2906 RM, which continues to plague the region with trade embargoes and piracy.

Ataraxia has suffered for much of its existence due to Korachani trade embargoes, though it became a ratified ally of PARTHIS in 3621 RM. The nation is known for its secular attitudes towards religion and more extreme renouncement of the DEMIURGES' supposed divinity and their work in Shaping ELYDEN, seeing them as a root of ELYDEN'S sin. At various stages throughout its history, Ataraxia has attempted to cull religious individuals from its territories. It is also known for its large number of MULLS, which are descended from the people of Argha. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

ATARAXIA, ORDER OF: Org. Ascetic order originating in ATARAXIA in c. 3650 RM, following the nations close alliance with PARTHIS. Its members were, from the order's inception, guardians of its people, protecting trade-routes and shipping lanes from KORACHANI corsairs and banditry. Their headquarters are in the city of ATARIS, where their fleet is based.

ATARGATIS: Int. Sup. Mys. Arc. A grotesque colossal statue in the middle of the deserted island of ICELELO in the west of SAMMAEA. Local legends claim that the statue is in fact possessed of an alien intellect and that it may be a living entity, possibly an ONERIC CREATURE or something else altogether unknown. Regardless, it exudes a sickening aura and those that venture too close become nauseated, plagued by perverse nightmarish visions.

The statue itself is of vaguely humanoid form, though is of grotesque interpretation, with dozens of arms, errant hands in places where they should not be, and a face that is reminiscent of both male and female genitals. Various attempts have been made to explore the region surrounding the statue, which is rumoured to hide ancient ruins beneath the thick vegetation, though these have all ended in failure.

ATARIS: 1. Sea. Bay off the eastern coast of ATARAXIA, in the STRAIT OF SKAROS.

2. Set. Fortified coastal city in the south east of ATARAXIA. It is the base of the ORDER OF ATARAXIA, and home to most of its fleet, that guards the STRAIT OF SKAROS from pirates (Pop. c. 96,000).

ATARA: Geo. Mountain in the north west of PARAIYA, forming part of the AGOUTRA range.

ATARAOCHIA: small city in the c south west of the tribe of EBURUL in the south east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. The city is a known logging region (Pop. c. 24,500).

ATAROS: 1. Sea. Island in the SEA OF ERIA in the c of ARKOS (1.).

2. Set. Coastal settlement on the above island. Over the past decades it has rapidly grown into a metropolitan city, filled with modern thinkers. Many outsiders believe that should it continue to grow both size and influence in this way it may become a major cultural and industrial centre in the region, propagating a renaissance of sorts in $\underline{ARKOS}^{(1.)}$ (Pop. c. 14.500).

ATARROK: Set. Small city in the far north east of SERROK. It is a major military centre, and also has a well-travelled trade-route linking it with CHEIRA (Pop. c. 20,000).

ATASSA: Set. Small city along the course of the river BAELLI in the c of TZALLRACH. It is a major link between its c cities, including the capital in LUCCITARIA, and its southern cities, including ARACHAI, BALBETH, and SIMHAPARRAN, via the city of MASANSU, 110-miles to the south. It also forms a part of the route of the GREAT ROAD (Pop. c. 19,000).

ATATU: Rvr. Lake in the far east of PARAIYA, serving as part of the border with the north west of N'RAKH.

ATAXIA: Pol. Set. Capital city of CREPISCULA. Most residents are slaves to its politicians, who rule in a mockery of true government, living like kings and queens while the commoner people slave away with little reward (Pop. c. 190.000).

ATAXIUM: Int. Sup. Ele. Supranatural material created under great pressure in the centre of an Atrahental explosion, and made up of a mix of all nearby matter — ore, mineral, flora, and fauna. In rare instances, organic matter caught in the explosion may remain 'alive', taking on traits of inorganic matter in the immediate vicinity. It is highly corrupting and is amongst the most dangerous Atramental substances known, with even the most advanced SOFTSUITS are of little help against prolonged exposure to it.

The most common source of Ataxium is in the epicentre of an ATRAMENTAL BOMB, which makes it one of the rarest materials in ELYDEN.

ATAZUL: Geo. Volcanically-active wasteland in the northern face of the RAHII Mountains in the north east of WESTERN SAMMAEA, to the south east of the BITAMMAN Desert, in the far east of VESPERTINE LEAGUE.

ATEIGHA: Rvr. Seasonal endorheic river in the far south west of ANUBIA, flowing north for 475-miles from sources in the GROWING MOUNTAINS, before emptying in the NAAIA basin. Together with the river KALAIAMA, seasonal snowmelt flows into the basin and collects into 1 or 2 temporary lakes that are collectively known as Naaia, after the basin. The lakes rarely last more than a few months before they dry up. It is on the banks of this river that the city of DRAUT is built.

ATEK: Set. Once-coastal city in the south of AHKA, now 20-miles from the coast. It was razed by KORACHANI troops in 3995 RM, and is now abandoned and forms the western-most extent of the contested territories between Korachan and Ahka and its allies.

ATELLO: Set. Major city in the c north of CISNERIA, and centre for clan HOMMAL, forming part of its internal trade-route. Between 3820 – 3841 RM it grew politically ambitious, opposing the well-established monarchy with talk of establishing a republic in which all clans, major and minor, would wield power. The movement gained traction in the city, though failed to gain support elsewhere. Today it has waned in power though its satellite towns remain at the centre of the tanning industry (Pop. c. 68,000).

ATENARA: Geo. Rocky hills dominating the c-south east of the ESHIR (2.).

 $\underline{\text{ATENORS}}$: 1. Geo. Pass in the north east of $\underline{\text{AETHIOS}}$, between the $\underline{\text{SESAM}}$ and $\underline{\text{ARAM}}$ Mountains.

2. Set. Small city in the north east of AETHIOS (Pop. c. 18,000).

ATEON: Ind. Set. SKAROSIAN ADAMANTINE mining settlement in the region of ADAMATI, north of the STRAIT OF SKAROS (Pop. c. 3,800).

ATEREMI: Set. Settlement in the south west of ATARAXIA. Its main industry is the mining of the rare ore PARADROSS (Pop. c. 5,400).

ATESIS: Str. Fortress in the south east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER, in the far north east of the tribe of NINIR. Its origins are unknown, and it had already fallen into ruin sometime in the mid-FIFTH AGE, where it lay for centuries until the ARCHSHAPER BALAISHIZZIAR made it his own in c. 3675 RM, SHAPING its crumbling concrete walls into a new bastion, imperceptible from the surrounding mountains. He moulded the surrounding badlands into a fortified labyrinth into which many adventurers and opportunists have died, trying desperately to escape corridors that the archshaper alters as he watches them slowly starve to death or succumb to desperation.

ATETH: 1. Sea. Sea off the south eastern coast of TETHYSIA.

2. son of AKH, and ruler of the south of SUMA'YA.

ATEVEGOS: Soc. Pol. Tribe in the c west of MULCIBER, in the GROWING MOUNTAINS, in the north east of SAMMAEA.

ATEX: Geo. Pass in c PARTHIS, between the SIPYLANA and BALAUR Mountains.

AKH. His. Atramentist and champion with the order of Telraas, whose actions in -30 RM and subsequent martyrdom to Atramental Disease the next year solidified the union of Dhea and Dhamatea under the banner of the new nation of Ba'akh. After his death, Ba'akh was divided amongst his 17 lieutenants, and remained so until 318 RM, when the Telraasi council began to wane. In 408 RM they were supplanted by the Merchant-Kings, who were in turn deposed in 634 RM, after which the Korachani empire's arrival in Ba'akh.

ATHA: Sup. His. FIRMAMENTAL cenotaph in the far west of KASPIA, in the eastern face of the ERESHKIGAL Mountains. Nothing is known of its origin or who the cenotaph was created to memorialise.

ATHACAXUR: Set. Fortified coastal city in the south east of the peninsula of BHALASSIA in the c east of the PANTHEON ISLES. It is the largest mainland city of the Pantheon Isles, and has a large harbour where ships from across the multitude of islands come to lay berth (Pop. c. 40,000).

ATHAH: Mil. Str. Fort in the far south of MOAH in northern SAMMAEA. The fort overlooks the wastelands of northern KHARKHARADONTIS and often sends parties south into the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED lands to destroy marauder tribes of corrupted men.

ATHAHKULA: Set. Settlement in the north of AHKA, along the course of the river AMALTHEA. It is known for its fields and reed cultivation (Pop. c. 6,000).

ATHALAR: 1. Geo. Rugged plains in the north west of PELASGOS. The region was once fertile, with many settlements lying nestled in its shallow valleys, though the coming of the KORACHANI EMPIRE saw the exploitation of its peat and coal, leaving the region barren by c. 1750 RM. A few industry-based settlements remain in the more hospitable areas, though for the most part, the entire region is now bare rock with very little life.

2. Rvr. River in the eponymous region in the north west of PELASGOS, flowing south west for 270-miles from sources in the CALDERAN Mountains before emptying in the north west of the SEA OF CYPRIA⁽¹⁾.

3. Lak. Lake along the course of the eponymous river.

4. Set. Largest of the settlements in the above region. Its main industry is coal mining, though its mines have dwindled over the past centuries are and most now lie abandoned. It was once a large metropolis, surrounded by scattered mines, but it's now mostly deserted, many of its vacant buildings destroyed in an earthquake in 3991 RM (Pop. c. 8,000).

ATHAMNI WATERS: Sea. Shallow sea in the west of the Sea of Lynnae, off the eastern coast of the Parthisan colony of Ezhiraya⁽²⁾. The sea is bordered by islands to the north and west and is dotted with reefs, making it difficult for deep-hulled vessels to pass through it.

ATHANASIA: Leg. Set. Fabled LODELITH city located in the TULURKRYPH⁽¹⁾ wastes in the south of WESTERN MENISCEA. It is said to be one of the last remaining cities of the IMMORTALS⁽²⁾, caretakers of the TRUE MENISCUS, and children of the DEMIURGE DURUTHILHOTEP. Few know of it and even fewer have been there. Its location in the sky above one of the most inimical deserts in Elyden makes it very difficult to get to.

ATHAXA: Set. Coastal city in the c south west of the mainland PANTHEON ISLES. Outside its extranet borders are extensive ruins of an ancient coastal city (Pop. c. 40,000).

ATHAZAGORA: also 'the Forgotten City'. Set. Largest independent city affiliated with the CALLOW HORDES that populate the north of LLACHATUL. It is coastal, overlooking the RYOGENI SEA and is a menace to the people of HEMAYANA in the far east of RAONGEN^(2.) (Pop. c. 82,000).

ATHANAMBRO, THE GREAT: (B. unknown) IFIRMIAN FIRMAMENTAL SHAPER from MENISCEA.

- ATHANIS: Geo. Mountain in the east of RHEA, around 375-miles long, just east of the SEA OF ERUTHEA.
- ATHAPEN: Geo. Expansive dry badlands region dominating the west of AETHIOS.
- ATHATI: Eth. Nomadic peoples of southern TETHYSIA and eastern THETIS. They journeyed north with KATHISIS, but never settled Tethysia with him, fracturing and maintaining their nomadic lives in the deserts and scrublands of TURCAR and RTHEI and the environs around them. See Vol II: the Nomads of Elyden.
- ATHELIAT: Pol. Set. City and capital in the c of the HENDECARCHY of STHAMAN in the c south of MALAN. It is one of the most populous cities in Malan, and is surrounded by a multitude of satellite settlements, forming the backbone of the region's agriculture. It is a major stop along the course of the GREAT ROAD as well as the Malani trade route known as the AEGISWAY. It is home to the trade commission that issues trade charters allowing merchants to sell their wares along the Aegisway (Pop. c. 1,200,000).
- ATHER: (4,333-ft.) Geo. Rocky expanse in the c south west of ALMAGEST, 65-miles from the CITY OF ALMAGEST.
- ATHETH: Set. High-walled city in the north of SABIA, built to withstand the thick snows that plague the region in winter. The city is interesting as it lies almost exactly along the NULLAMBIT (Pop. c. 17,000).
- ATHILIA II: (B. 2787 D. 2829 RM) His. Pol. Last queen of the LIMOTHAN DYNASTY, executed by Republican dissidents, who executed the entire line of succession and the direct royal family of LIMOTH^(1.). Her death precipitated the rise of the PLUTOCRATIC REPUBLIC OF LIMOTH.
- ATHILIEL: 1. Rel. An angel in the religion of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, often thought to be an unborn OTHERWORLDER, who chose to remain in the OTHERWORLD as a psychopomp to spirits, instead of being reborn on the material plane. It is seen as a guardian of the dead and the living, alike.
 - 2. Mil. Obj. Tec. One of three battleships (the others being the USOLAHON and the PALARAEL) that was constructed in NOAVATUR in 1303 RM, in preparation of war with KORACHAN following its declaration of independence. The Athiliel was the only one of the three battleships to be sunk, and its wreck remains now, 75-miles off the south eastern coast of November.
- ATHOLEITH: Geo. Steep valley region in the far west of TETHYSIA, along the eastern face of the ARGENT Mountains, crossing from the TURCAR Desert into the HENDECARCHY of ATALLUA in south eastern MALAN.
- ATHON: Set. City in the north east of MHAROKK, close to the border with VAALK. The city is known for its arenas, which are commonly frequented by nobility and commoners alike to watch beast fights. Most popular is the MARABAK arena (Pop. c. 32,500).
- ATHORNA: lit. 'the Glass Hills'. Geo. Region in the tribal territories of ORIM in the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER, known for its expansive crystalline rock formations. The crystals are mined and manipulated by a caste of shapers based in the city of OBAEGOR, where their creations are sold as object d'art along the SALT ROAD.
- ATHORHU: 1. Geo. Headland in the south of PARTHIS, overlooking the south of ORKA.
 - Geo. Large area in the south of PARTHIS, covering some 18,000-square miles, encompassing carrs (wooded marshes), bogs, grasslands, and marshes along border with the TARAHID ANNEXES.
- ATHOS: Lak. Endorheic lake in the west of PELASGOS, bordered by the THAUMAS and RHAECAS ridges.
- ATHOT: Set. Settlement on the island of PHARU in KHAMID (Pop. c. 15,000).
- ATHOT KHO: Set. Tribal settlement in the north of the UMBRA SOKHAR, around 80-miles south of the KARAKHASID city of KITHALOI. Its leaders are adept ATRAMENTISTS and they maintain lose contact with the KORACHANI enclave of TAGAGNACH (Pop. c. 3,000).
- ATHOTH: Rui. Ruins of a once great harbour in the west of TARTAK, north of the river KHARAD. It was, in c. 2800 RM, at the mouth of the river though is now some miles upstream. The ruins are now inhabited by

- a well-organised group of bandits that raid the surrounding area (Pop. c. 8,000).
- ATHOU: Sct. City on the c east of PARAIYA. It is known for its horse and camel breeding and forms an important stop along the course of the SALT ROAD, where pack animals can be bought or traded (Pop. c. 28,000).
- ATHU: Geo. Highland region in the north east of KREM, just south of the KARARTA Mountain forming a border with the TURCAR desert.
- ATHUIN: Lake in the c west of KOMMEA with an area of around 1850-miles, making it the largest lake in the nation. It serves as a confluence of dozens of streams and rivers, primarily the rivers GLAESWEN and LUGHBRAEN, which are all children of the primary river, the GOIRATH.
- ATHURAPH: Set. Main city in the island of HAR FARRASH, in the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT, 325-miles north east of the coast of mainland (Pop. c. 40,000).
- ATIAED: Sec. Independent settlement along the SHADOW MARCH in the c of KHARKHARADONTIS. It is located along a major ATRAMENTAL LACUNA, and as a result is a major extractor of UMBRA and is surrounded by dozens of towering siphon engines, which extract ATRAMENTAL TAINT from the surrounding atmosphere, processing it into umbra, which is piped to UROHOT, and other settlements and outposts in the area. Though small, it is well-guarded against attack, and is a vital stop along the shadow March, though it is ill-equipped to deal with large numbers of pilgrims (Pop. c. 300).
- ATI SEPRIA: (B. 3736 D. 3782 RM) Mil. Pol. One of the TRIPARTITE rulers of THE REPUBLIC OF ELAT^(2.) when it fractured into three in 3762 RM, for which she was partially to blame. After the signing of the first ELATIAN TREATY, ending war between Elat and various other nations, she fled the chaos of the capital with her followers to her ancestral home of ELATHRI, eventually claiming the north of Elat for her own, naming it AYAD, a corruption of the EZASUHI 'Aya Arad', meaning 'new home'. Elat, by then busy fighting a war with another seceding state, GYZHA, could not fight a war on two fronts and was forced into signing a peace settlement recognising the independence of the two new states.
- ATIL: Alc. Mys. Set. ALCHEMIST'S city in the west of KASIHAAL, in the north east of BROR^(1.), overlooking the SEA OF BRAGUA. The city was once an independent island-state protected by its steep sides, though became landlocked with the retreat of ELYDEN'S seas. Its ruins now crown a landlocked mesa, and are largely unassailable save for a single hewn winding passage that is largely ignored. The place is still populated by the wretched descendants of ancient DVERG alchemists, who somehow cling on to life while refusing contact with the outside world. Some claim that they have become followers of the DEMIURGE TALANTEHUT, though little can be known for sure (Pop. c. 123,000.
- ATILIPHO: Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region in the south west of LLACHATUL along the contested border between OTINTH and SEDISIA. It is partially responsible for the contested border as both nations lay claim to it, hoping to gain access to the wealth of umbra reserves that are said to lie beneath the surface. Each nation's claim to it requires that it relinquishes claim to a smaller triangular territory just to the south, known as ARROKAN (a corruption of the ancient Korachani name for the region).
- ATIM: Mil. Str. Island-fortress in the c of KHAMID, east of the PHARESES.
- ATINNIN: Set. City in the KHARANA woodlands of the north west of PARAIYA, along the western bank of lake ATATU. The settlement is relatively primitive, as is the norm for the entire region.
 - Its people possess a complex cultural hierarchy that involves cannibalism of those who die of natural causes (seen as a form of rebirth). Snakes make up a large part of the region's cultural motifs, possibly due to the cyclical or regenerative qualities attributed to them (Pop. c. 32,000).
- ATIPOEA: Geo. Island 350-miles off the eastern coast of ELEKHID, in the ROILING SEA. Though inhabited, there are few settlements of note on the island.
- ATIS: Geo. expansive highland region in the east and south east of Imeal, to the west of PTHOSTOTH and AUTH Mountains. Its undulating hills are rocky and difficult to traverse, though some settlements can be found in its reaches, drawing waters from deep aquifers.

ATLA: Set. Settlement in the c south east of VALBAR⁽²⁾ (Pop. c. 12,400).

ATLILLA: Set. Settlement in the south east of TAHALL (Pop. c. 9,000).

ATLAS OF ALMAGEST: Obj. Collective name for bronze manhole covers found across the CITY OF ALMAGEST, containing a relief street map of the immediate area to help with navigation. They are most common around the coastal areas, which are where most foreigners find themselves in the city.

They are prone to being stolen, and as a result they are locked in place through particular locks that can only be unlocked by city workers. They also serve as markers for criminals such as pickpockets and thieves, who can often be found looking for marks in the area. Some districts with many such manholes are patrolled by local law enforcement though this is not necessarily the case for all districts.

ATLAS OF THE OTHERWORLD, the: Mys. Vol. Mystical tome penned by the outcast FIRMAMENTAL SHAPER OTHRO OF HABBAR between 2731 – 2776 RM. It details the less mutable reaches of the OTHERWORLD and its denizens, and for many years was considered the authoritative directory on the subject. Since then, the validity of the scholar's claims has come into dispute, with many contradicting his writings. The mutable nature of the otherworld means it is possible that his writings were true at the time, though this is difficult to confirm or deny.

Regardless of any inconsistencies or fabrications, the volume is still prized amongst collectors and those studying the otherworld for its commentaries on the nature of Firmament and the otherworld and OTHERWORLDERS. See Vol II: Books of Elyden.

ATLAS ELYDEN, the: Vol. Car. Expansive cartographical treatise originating in KORACHAN in 3936 RM. The latest printing, published in ALGOLEN of 4007 RM in the OBSERVATORY OF DEOCHAN, is its 18th edition and is the most accurate and comprehensive edition yet, with much new information pertaining to previously obscure regions, such as BROR^(1,) and the far south west of SAMMAEA.

Working on the shoulders of greats such as BERDEN, DOTHIL, KHAEMWESED, and SIMOLEUS, the many cartographers and editors take years compiling and crafting each edition of the Atlas Elyden. Meticulous surveys are required to ensure that the information rendered into print is as up to date as possible, but the sheer amount of data that needs to be collected means that there are inevitable details that will be obsolete by the time the edition goes to print, and work on the next edition begins in earnest the moment the latest edition is published.

The Atlas was originally conceived by Archpatrician Melisenda ITHANI of THE SEVEN in 3928 RM as a work of propaganda to show its neighbours the strength of the empire.

The 1st edition was a major undertaking, with armies of cartographers, navigators, surveyors and explorers required to travel across ELYDEN, in many cases into previously uncharted or otherwise dangerous lands. The edition was an unmitigated success, and another expanded edition was ordered soon after its completion, with a greater emphasis on Korachani territories and, following the completion of the 2nd edition in 3941 RM, it was handed over to government officials who amended its contents for the purposes of propaganda, leading to a less accurate edition than its predecessor, but one which nonetheless sold well and served to further the political purposes of The Seven. Subsequent editions became more and more politicised until the disastrous 13th edition, whose publishing in 3979 RM was met with foreign ridicule. This prompted an overhaul of the process, and The Seven gave creative control to editor VALENS LASCAR, who had been a trusted professor in the Observatory of Deochan for many years.

Under his guidance the 14th edition of the Atlas Elyden was a return to the search for perfection and truth that the first edition had been celebrated for. He remains editor of the Atlas to this day, and the Atlas became a part of the larger ENCYCLOPAEDIA ELYDEN in 3992 RM, and work on the next edition of the two is already underway.

ATLAS OF THE GODS: Art. Geo. His. Carved relic in a plateau in the north of the EHRANDEAN Massif in LAASKHA. The feature is believed to be a directory, depicting the DEMIURGES and their exploits and is believed to be extremely ancient. ATLAS OF THE INNER SEA: Vol. Car. Atlas published by the cartographer SIMOLEUS between 1499 and 1501 RM, that popularised the positioning of the PRIME MERIDIAN on the site of the OBSERVATORY OF DEOCHAN, where he was tenured. Almost all maps published in LLACHATUL as well as the north of SAMMAEA continue this tradition to this day.

ATLEAS: Ser. City in KHARKHARADONTIS, in the c north of SAMMAEA, in the far north west of the DUNE SEA. The city is an oddity of nature, surviving in spite of, rather than because of, the terrain around it. Located in the heart of Kharkharadontis, the air itself is inimical, dividing its populace in half – those fortunate or opportunistic enough to possess ACERGENIC breathing apparati and those who suffer the debilitating effects of exposure to the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED air.

The city exists as the final place of solace along THE SHADOW MARCH before the 1,000-mile stretch to DAEKYN. Situated on the western-most foothills of the DURIAN ESCARPMENT that divides the FLAESCUS from the Dune Sea, the city is filled with religious fanatics whose bodies have betrayed them while undertaking the Shadow March, denying them the ability to complete the pilgrimage or retreat home.

Atleas was funded c. 2970 RM within the northern-most reaches of the KINGDOM OF THE HOLY LAND OF KHARKHARADONTIS by a HALFBLOODED prince of undisclosed origins, though who is thought to originate west of the ACHARKHARAN Mountain. Intrigued by the pilgrims it encountered in the area, it is said to have divined a spring in the Durain Escarpment atop which the settlement was founded. Following its eventual death, opportunists and traders desperate-enough to Set-up shop in Kharkharadontis settled the town, encouraged by the steady stream of pilgrims that made their way through it. Soon, religious fundamentalists followed, leading to a large procession of members of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE arriving there in 3384 RM, many of which remained there, enforcing their rule upon the others; effectively turning the town into a theocracy under the sway of the church. Since then, the place has been oppressive, taxing travellers in return for a degree of shelter.

No SIPHON ENGINES or TECHNARCANE aegis protects the people of Atleas, and the rate of ATRAMENTAL infection, CYCLOCEPHALY, hydrocephaly, AEPATHY, and other degenerative conditions are very common there, with many of its people contracting some form of ATRAMENTAL MALADY before their premature deaths. As a result, few born there live beyond the age of 30 (Pop. c. 1,000).

ATLORIS: Set. Small city in the c south east of VALBAR^(2.), along the course of the river ENGOROT (Pop. c. 12,000).

ATLOTHA: Set. Coastal settlement in the c of the island of ALETARA in the south of LIMOTH^(1.). Its main industry is fishing (Pop. c. 6,200).

ATOKA: Set: Settlement in the west of the tribe of DRAKAINA, in the east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c 3,000).

ATOLLA: Lake in the north east of ATON: Geo. Mountain in CUTH. Some ancient sources, including obscure passages from the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN, claim that the mountain is the final resting place of the DEMIURGE NERGAAL. Few in Cuth know of this, or believe the myths. See Vol IV: the Mythologia Elyden.

ATORRA: also 'the Monastery of Atorra'. Sup. Str. Grandiose isolated monastery in the far south east of MIRALUL, located in the highlands of the EGETAKH Mountains. It is famed for its great fortified FIRMAMENTAL library, which stood as a final bastion of Firmamentism against the CRUSADES of OSSIEL, which otherwise eradicated SHAPING from Miralul.

Little of the library's original collection survives to this day, though some tattered volumes made their way into the wider world, though Meniscean shapers claim that it has a hidden library that still contains rich material on Firmamental shaping and lore.

ATRAAGOH: Geo. Ind. Rui. Expansive open cast copper mines in the c north west of DURCHAA in the north of the region of ERIHAAS. Founded in 3503 RM, they operated for over 400-years and were amongst the largest copper producers in LLACHATUL. Today the region is silent, its dilapidated refineries and warehouses empty and echoing. Outside, the old mines are a deep scar of grey spreading south from the refinery, with thick tree cover covering the hills uphill to the north.

At its peak in c. 3800 RM the mines of Atraagoh employed thousands of slaves and operated great machinery to extract copper and the surrounding rock.

The mines were operated by the ATRAAGOH SYNDICATE – a cooperative of three PATRICIAN HOUSES – and the land is still leased to one of them to this day.

ATRAAGOH SYNDICATE, the: Ind. Org. Cooperative of three PATRICIAN HOUSES – CERINTH, DYRANTON, and TRIEMON – that together operated the copper mines in the ATRAAGOH region in the c north west of DURCHAA. The mines were founded after the primogenitor of house Triemon made a claim in the area in 3501 RM after discovering green rocks in the harsh terrain of the northern ERIHAAS in DURCHAA. He entered into a partnership with the more established houses of Cerinth and Dyranton and began mining operations there two years later.

A huge manufactory built along a steep wooded hill that was 20-storeys high and made use of 7 consecutive levels of crushing and sifting to reduce copper ore into a fine substrate that was then heat-blasted to extract copper. Landships were used extensively to transport the refined copper to manufactories and depos where it was exported to ALMAGEST, ASTUDAN, SABIA, and VALBAR.

Copper produced here was largely used to manufacture thin electrical wiring that is still used across the INNER SEA REGION.

ATRAAN: Rui. Remains of an ancient city in the north of LAASKHA, in the region of ALAAS, thought to date back to the days of the ancient Alaasi nation.

ATRACH: Set. Small settlement in the prefecture of BROTRIS, in the west of HOLOLACH^(1.) (Pop. c. 3,200).

ATRAMENTA, the: also 'the Shadow'. Sup. The dark half of the MATERIA OMNA (with the other half being the FIRMAMENT) that originates on the MATERIAL PLANE through the PRIME LACUNA located in the NEAR HEMISPHERE known commonly as the BLACK FOUNTAIN.

The Atramenta was partly used as material in the SHAPING OF CREATION at the hands of the DEMIURGES. Similarly, it can also be SHAPED by WELL-ATTUNED MORTALS, in the form of ATRAMENTISM and other mystical arts. The effects of the Atramenta upon the material plane and ELYDEN are subtle and its domains are that of the material and change, though its influence on Elyden usually takes the form of electricity, and mutation of living matter, both flora and fauna.

In the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN, it was created by the DREAMS of THE SHAPER, who churned the SEA OF CHAOS into the two halves of creation – the FIRMAMENT ABOVE AND THE ATRAMENTA BELOW. See Vol IV: the Materia Omna.

ATRAMENTAL AILMENT: Sup. Med. Disease that is ATRAMENTAL in origin. Examples of Atramental ailments include AEPATHY, CAGASTRIC FLU, GLANDULAR DISTEMPER, and ST. AGAR'S ROT, amongst others. See Vol II: Diseases and Illnesses.

ATRAMENTAL BOMB: Sup. Tec. Explosive device that uses ATRAMENTAL matter as part of its detonation. Such weapons are particularly devastating as not only do they cause damage through the release of energy, which is typical of any bomb, but also for the rapid release of Atramental forces that cause a more subtle yet no less pervasive damage, which can linger in the area for decades, rendering the affected region uninhabitable and crippling to natural life (be it flora or fauna).

MORTALS have been using the Atramenta in warfare for millennia, but the development of weapons or devices that use the Atramenta, but which can be used by anyone without the need to be a SHAPER has long been a goal of weapons manufacturers. Development of Atramental bombs began in c. 3600 RM by the KORACHANI EMPIRE, though other powers were quick to follow, and research continued for over a century before UMBRA-tipped artillery shells began to be used, which quickly came to wreak havoc on enemy defensive positions. They were employed in small numbers during the WAR OF SUNDERING to devastating effect, in particular the eradication of the city of NUNA.

Testing continued throughout the 38^{th} century until 3727 RM, when the largest ever Atramental bomb test conducted in the north of KHARKHARADONTIS left the now-legendary crater of SHAOJESEH. This, coupled to the Atramental disaster in UCINDIR that happened in the north west of the UMBRA SOKHAR a few years earlier led to a decline in such testing. After this, such bombs were refined, though only the smallest examples have been used in battle, as most powers are weary of the political impact use of larger examples may have.

Today there are five known nations that have access to Atramental bombs, which are: the HIGH-EMPIRE OF KORACHAN, the LOW-EMPIRE OF SARASTRO, the PARTHISAN REPUBLIC, the ALMAGESTI REPUBLIC and the KINGDOM OF VENTHIR, though it is thought that smaller powers may have access to unknown Atramental bombs.

ATRAMENTAL BUBOE: Sup. Relatively common phenomenon in ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED lands. The buboes take the form of a festering black ball of jelly-like consistency and a hard skin that can be torn relatively easily, that can range in size from a few inches to feet across. In the centre of each buboe is a hardened tumour-like growth that absorbs atmospheric UMBRA from the environment. They are sticky to the touch and can leave skin that contacts them itchy or covered in a harsh rash.

Very little is known about these phenomena, or how they appear and if they are inert or living at all and though attempts have been made at harvesting them, it is very difficult to propagate new examples. It is thought that the buboes are natural versions of the SIPHON ENGINES that proliferate tainted lands across ELYDEN.

It is rumoured that the city of TUGRANA in the REALM OF THE MARKED PALL is situated atop a gigantic Atramental Buboe. See Vol IV: Supranatural Features.

ATRAMENTAL FLORET: also 'Ezren's Aezoan'. Int. Sup. Fau. Exotic supranatural entity that is closely tied to the ATRAMENTA and ATRAMENTALLY CORRUPTED regions. It defies methods of categorisation and exists somewhere between flora and fauna, and is commonly described as exhibiting some traits of trees, jellyfish, octopi and flowers.

The Floret is an umbrella-like mass that is tethered to the ground by a nerve bundle that is often confused with the trunk of a tree, and which has gossamer-like tendrils hanging down from its armlets. It releases spores that break down the constituent elements of matter around it, slowly mutating the land in the vicinity of the floret into a contiguous black mulch, which both sustains the floret and becomes a part of it. The floret 'feeds' by absorbing nutrients (phosphates, nitrates, salts, silicates etc.) from this mulch, which is supplemented by organic matter from any fauna that dies within its reach.

Individual florets can grow to massive sizes, with the central umbrella-like mass sometimes reaching diameters of 20-ft. and similar heights, with their immediate zone of influence being hundreds of feet around. They can be found alone or in 'woods' of up to a few dozen individuals in mildly tainted regions, though the FOREST OF SARCOBELIZA remains as a region where Atramental Florets can be found in dense numbers.

The entity was described by the naturalist Ezren during an expedition into KHARKHARADONTIS in 990 RM, and is more commonly known as Ezren's Aezoan due to this.

ATRAMENTAL HEMISPHERE: Sup. Geo. The geographical hemisphere that lies between the BLACK FOUNTAIN and the NULLAMBIT, where the ATRAMENTA is typically believed to hold sway. It is often used synonymously with the term NEAR HEMISPHERE, though the two are not identical terms.

ATRAMENTAL PLAGUE: Sup. Med. An infectious epidemic of ATRAMENTAL origins. This could mean the rapid spread of TAINT, or more specifically, a literal disease that leads to Atramental ailments that spreads much the same as a traditional PLAGUE would. Such plagues are difficult to control, and if measures are not taken to stop it (such as quarantining afflicted individuals, or closing borders) they can spread across nations rapidly, leading to loss of live and negative effects on commerce.

Luckily, instances of Atramental plague are rare nowadays, thanks to increased understanding of how such plagues spread, though uncivilised regions without access to modern medicine may struggle even today.

ATRAMENTAL STEEL: Sup. Ele. Metal alloy (primarily composed of worked iron, with some UMBRA) that lends itself well to manipulation. Some ATRAMENTAL SHAPERS have a great degree control over the substance, and it is used in many different applications.

ATRAMENTAL TAINT: Sup. Geo. Regions of ELYDEN where the presence of the ATRAMENTA is strongly felt. This may be due to proximity to the BLACK FOUNTAIN or due to a powerful nearby LACUNA or LEY, or some other effect that may or may not be related to fluctuations the ARCANE TEMPERS.

Typically, regions of Atramental taint are shunned by most mortals due to their inimical effects on life and health, though they may be of interest to scholars and ATRAMENTA.

ATRAMENTISM: Sup. Mys. SUPRANATURAL act whereby an individual, known as a SHAPER, can manipulate the ATRAMENTA to achieve one of many varied results. The act is reliant on the shapers' distance relative to BLACK FOUNTAIN, as well as other local phenomena, known as ARCANE TEMPERS. See Vol IV: Shaping.

ATRAMENTIST: Sup. Mys. A SHAPER who uses the ATRAMENTA to perform acts of ATRAMENTISM, resulting in SUPRANATURAL acts. The act of Atramentism, much like its counterpart in the FAR HEMISPHERE, known as FIRMAMENTISM, has waned over time, and has been largely superseded by TECHNARCANA.

Atramentists are able to detect ATRAMENTAL TAINT in the surrounding area to a degree, but doing so will expose them to that taint at an accelerated rate, making what many laypeople consider to be a simple act rather difficult and likely dangerous. See Vol IV: Shaping.

ATRAMENTOLOGY: study of the ATRAMENTA.

ATRAMETA: Geo. Harsh sun-kissed land in the south of CAMAU, in the east of EASTERN MENISCEA. The region is under the influence of the FIRMAMENT, causing the air to be unnaturally close and warm, and the light intense and bleaching. More noticeably, it has the effect of calcifying organic matter. The process is very painful and takes perhaps five days to fully kill a human-sized creature, leaving it statue-like. Most die from organ failure before the process is complete, their extremities partially petrified, their skeletons twisted. The place is littered with the semi-petrified remains of all manner of creatures that have attempted to cross its lands.

Strangely, OTHERWORLDERS and early-generation HALFBLOODS seem to be unaffected by this, leading to the founding of an exclusive city, DRASS, which dominates the area.

Confusingly, the name Atrameta is often misunderstood as the facet of the MATERIA OMNA known as the ATRAMENTA, though the two have nothing in common, and the etymology of the name is unknown. Indeed, the region is noted for its Firmamental activity.

ATRAMENTAL RICTUS: Int. Sup. Geo. Grotesque labyrinthine pit in the c north west of KHARKHARADONTIS, said to lead to the Pismire Chamber in the PRISON CARCERI. It is believed to be the final resting place of the mesochthon RETTEN ONARAH, whose influence is said to be responsible for the gruesomeness of the region. It is a tar-like realm, where the rocks are soft and prolonged contact will leave anything stuck to them and eventually absorbed.

The Atramental Rictus is dominated by foul vermin that have been tainted by the ATRAMENTA and amongst them are infamous CESTOIDS – worm-like creatures with debased humanoid instincts that Set. them apart from the other inhabitants of the region.

It is one of the most blighted documented regions in ELYDEN and was studied only once, in a KORACHANI expedition in 3331 RM, and relatively little is known of it due to its relative proximity to the BLACK FOUNTAIN, which prohibits any long-term research there.

ATRAMENTAL ROT: Sup. Atramental-based wood-rot often found in forested regions, often compared with AEPATHY. VURD, THE ROTWOOD, in KORACHAN, is a noted example of this.

ATRAMENTAL TUBER: Flo. Geo. Large fungus-like growth native to temperate ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED regions of LLACHATUL. They can reach up to 40-ft. in height, and have a honeycomb-like texture, which oozes with a sickly-sweet ichor that attracts insects and small birds, which either get caught in it or which die from the concentrated ATRAMENTAL matter within, in both cases providing the tuber with sustenance.

ATRAMENTITE: Ele. Rare mineral and ore thought to be a remnant from the time before ELYDEN was created, when all matter was concentrated into only two elements – the FIRMAMENT and the ATRAMENTA. The substance is very dangerous and it largely unknown and ignored, though it has been known to be used in some archaic technarcane engines, though its instability and mutagenic properties made its use in such engineering rare and short-lived.

ATRAMENTOMETER: Sup. Tec. Obj. Device used to accurately detect and measure the degree of ambient umbra in any area, by showing counts of ATRAMENTAL 'events' per second (events in this case being Atramental activity that triggers the devices instruments, as detailed below). The device is typically small and handheld, with a rod-shaped receiver connected to the device by a wired coil. The receiver is pointed to the area or object to be measured and gives a dual reading – both audible and aural.

The principles through which the device works have been known to FIFTH AGE scholars for millennia, though it was only with the development of the GEKN-PRAQ SCALE that the Atramentometer could be used to accurately measure ambient UMBRA.

In its most basic form, the device uses strips of two materials - an Atramentally-sensitive metal on one side (usually specially treated tin) and an Atramentally-inert substance on the other side of the strip. The presence of umbra or Atramental 'events' in the vicinity causes the tin side of the sheet to expand, while the inert side remains unchanged, this causes the strip to curl upwards - the amount it curls upwards is directly related to the level of Atramental activity in the area, and the strip levels out again almost instantaneously once the activity subsides. The device contains many such strips of varying sensitivities which are rigged up to a clicker that makes the distinctive noise whenever an Atramental 'event' has been registered by the Atramentometer. The clicker is linked to a dial that moves as the device detects Atramental activity - the higher the dial moves, the more Atramental activity is detected. The dial shows 'events' in ranges per second, with the more 'events' registered per second being more dangerous. Atramentometers require DISCHARGERS or an electrical source to work.

Today the small device is ubiquitous in any area with ATRAMENTAL CORRUPTION or where Atramental corruption is expected to occur. SOFT and HARDSUITS often have Atramentometers built into them, for instance. Typical Atramentometers are handheld and relatively cheap and simple to produce, leading to their widespread use.

Larger versions also exist that are far more precise or accurate, and these are either fitted to CONVEYORS or take the form of doorways through which people pass prior to giving a readout. Regardless of their size, Atramentometers are known for their distinctive staccato clicking sounds that increase in volume and intensity as the amount of detected umbra increases.

ATRAMMAT: Sup. Med. ATRAMENTAL ailment that is spread through tainted water that leads to sloughing of skin and developing of lesions and tumours. The condition can be treated with WATER OF THE THRONE and surgery, though if left untreated can lead to debilitation and death.

ATRAXA: Fau. Giant spider native to N'RAKH, though also seen with less frequency in surrounding lands, particularly I'THANA and the east of PARAIYA. Individuals can grow to the size of a small pony, and are scavengers with an omnivorous diet, eating fungi, humus, as well as carcasses, the latter of which is their primary diet. They make resinous nests in hollows and caves, and are communal, with nests forming large 'hives' though they are not otherwise social creature, roaming the forest floors and canopies alone. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

ATREMIA: Set. Settlement in the c north of the PARTHISAN colony of SOTHRA. Its main industry is aluminium mining (Pop. c. 3,800).

ATRETON: Lake in the north of PELASGOS in the CALDERAN Mountains and along the course of the river ISSOS.

ATRICEP: also 'Blackhead mushrooms'. Flo. Bev. Expansive fungi endemic to the north west of NORTHERN SAMMAEA, in the north of THE SURRACH, and surrounding lands including the BAKHRAN STATES, the SIX CITIES region, MARACHA, IZABAL (1.), and the west of SAGITTARIA and EREBETH. The fungi grow in large clusters that are linked by the root systems of surrounding trees. They are characterised by their black heads and are commonly used to brew tea, particularly in the Surrach, where they are served in market side teahouses.

ATRIL: Set. Small city in the west of the territory of QRED^{(1.),} in the west of ALAM BETHYL (Pop. c. 14,200).

ATRIS TA: Set. City in the c north east of KHULL, along the course of the river UPINIS. It is known for its porcelain production and has kilns that are over two millennia old that have been in near-constant use. It produces the coloured tiles that are broken into tesserae for use in mosaic works across Khull (Pop. c. 83,650).

ATROPHY: Geo. Region covering 35,000 square-miles in the west of AZAZEM, ruined by over-farming between 1100 – 1500 RM. Its soil is now barren dust, unable to hold roots in place. What was once a highland paradise is now a scabrous land of inimical DUSTSTONE formations.

Scattered about the wasteland are the food manufactories for which Azazem is now renowned; great pipelines pumping DROSS to other regions in the KORACHANI EMPIRE. Despite its apparent lack of worth, these pipelines (often called UMBILICALS) are what keep major cities alive and are valuable military and civil resources; heavily guarded private forces, many of them privately owned by the BASILEIS and ATROPI of Azazemi and Korachani PATRICIANS.

ATROPOS: Plr. 'Atropi', also 'Atropi Houses'. Soc. Pol. Org. Co-operative of PATRICIAN HOUSES that controls most DROSS manufactories in AZAZEM, with a major presence in the region of ATROPHY.

The Atropi Houses oversee the flow of dross across thousands of miles of pipelines across the KORACHANI EMPIRE to various metropolitan areas, and as a result are extremely rich. Their headquarters are in the Azazemi capital of AGLAIA^(2,), and take the form of an ancient triangular stepped fortress known as the CAMASSIAN STRONGHOLD, after the oldest of the Atropi, House CAMASSIA. The other major Houses that comprise the Atropos are DOUN, HERTURI, ISAA-NEPHI, NETHAYA, SENET, STEFANIA and TINANIA.

Their counterparts in VENTHIR are the LASHESI. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

ATROPOCHIS: Geo. Arid coastal region in the c south of THETIS in which the FIRMAMENT is strong, affecting the terrain in ways similar to, yet intrinsically different from, the ATRAMENTA in KHARKHARADONTIS. Common to the region are naturally occurring CREANTS of varying forms, amongst them shambling things brought together from the ruins of ancient cultures.

ATROS: See. Small coastal settlement in the c of ARKOS^(1.), overlooking the SEA OF ERIA (Pop. c. 3,000).

ATROTHA: 1. Rvr. Major river in the nation of LIMOTH^(1.), flowing for around 1,020-miles to the south west through the VOTH Valley from various sources, mostly located in the KOTHA ICHOLLIGHA, PEREIDAS and DHEBI Mountains. The river is prone to flooding in later Summer and early Autumn following heavy seasonal rains. Due to this there are few large cities along its banks, but it is known for its vast seasonal fields that produce a great deal of crops and food, much of which is exported to the west.

2. Sea. Small bay off the southern coast of $\underline{\sf LIMOTH}^{(L)_i}$ south of the delta of the eponymous river $^{(L)_i}$

ATROUS MINARET: Int. Rui. Jet black monolith in the south east of MHAROKK, thought to date back to the FOURTH AGE. Little is known of its origins, though divination and limited exploration have revealed that it is hollow, riddled with tunnels and chambers, though most are yet to be penetrated. Today, the city of EBERUK lies at its base, having emerged from camps erected by ancient exploration parties.

ATSHA: Set. Settlement in the c north of TAHALL. Its main industry is the mining of agate and quartz (Pop. c. 5,400).

ATTAH: Rel. religion in the west of THE SURRACH, that emerged from the SAMMAEAN CULT OF RAHANA. The triple seven-pointed star is its symbol. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

ATTAK: Set. Settlement in the north of ATARAXIA (Pop. c. 2,000).

ATTANISH: Lan. Language spoken in J'THANA, and BARATHEA, which evolved from the pidgin tongue spoken by slaves of N'RAKH. It borrows many words from the AHEREN tongue spoken in nearby MULCIBER and SIRIPHAGOS, and also inherited other traits from the AANTHA tongue, including some of the click consonants that can be replicated by humans. See Vol II: Languages.

ATTAR: Soc. Pol. PATRICIAN HOUSE with a presence in LAASKHA, MHAROKK, and VAALK. It is one of the major Houses involved in the IMPERIAL DOMAIN BANK, and has been a part of the banks' operations since c. 2925 RM. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

ATTAR KOHIR: Set. Small city in the c of EZASUH^(2.), known for its seminaries (Pop. c. 18,000).

ATTAS: Sea. Narrow bay in the far south of TZALLRACH, between the HEBAT and KARARTA Mountains. The bay and its environs are known for their earthquakes and frequent landslides into the water.

ATTEHADAY: Set. Settlement in the south west of PORPHYR, in the region of CARIAISIUS (Pop. c. 3,750).

ATTERKHAT: Lan. Rnk. Catch-all word for many different castes of AANTH in N'RAKH. Most commonly they are a SHAMAN-caste, their bodies largely free of ATRAMENTAL CORRUPTION though displaying signs of favour of the aanth deity MAALKAT, such as errant arms and multiple eyes. The most revered have even sets of arms and eyes, the most ever recorded being four pairs of each on one individual who gave its name to the caste.

ATTESTOR: Soc. Rnk. Caste active in the early FIFTH AGE in the south west of the PORPHYRI PENINSULA. Originally shapers exiled from the ancient nation of ZOLOK, they fled to the south west, where they settled in lands inhabited by barbarians, who they tamed and came to rule as the small empire of SATTAR ISHA.

They grew to be a dynastic caste, each a powerful ATRAMENTAL seer, the greatest of which lived entombed within amplifying engines which granted them potent if obscure future-visions. They came to care little of the present, and became obsessed with learning more and more of the future.

Originally based in what is now the city of Andraphala, they saw it grow from a small cult-centre in c. -200 RM into a thriving metropolis by c. 800 RM, only to see it crumble into obscurity by c. 1200 RM, after which they too would wane.

In c. 2246 RM their descendants would take on the mantle of the Attestors in the city of, USRUT, just to the north of the capital in ANDRAPHALA, becoming advisors to the royal household.

ATTIL: Rvr. Large river flowing south east through the c of SHAZGIN through ETUL, where it empties into the SEA OF ALETA.

ATTIOS: 1. Lak. Lagoon in the south of the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS. The lagoon has been shrinking in size over the past centuries, and the narrow strait leading into it has grown narrower, from around 4-miles wide as recorded in c. 2800 RM, to under 1-mile today. It is thought that the lagoon will become a lake within a few decades, and the city of Attios^(2.) works tirelessly to keep the strait free of deposition.

2. Set. Major city in the south of the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS, overlooking the eponymous lagoon. It is known for its harbour and shipyards, as well as the large market that specialises in the large-scale trade of technarcana and machinery (Pop. c. 403,800).

ATTIR: Sca. Small inland sea in the north west of the SEA OF MARDEN.

The sea is flanked to the north and south by the settlements of ASATTIR and ATTRIMH. It is shallow and close to being completely cut off from the Marden if the sea level continues to retreat.

ATTON: Rvr. River in the south east of ZHARIAH^(2.), flowing south for around 130-miles from sources in the NIARNA Mountains before meeting its termination at the BAY OF BELKIN.

ATTOR: Dem. 'Attori'. Eth. People of the south east of the OLD FOREST. They live in KARKATAN, which is characterised by the taint of the empire's past presence there. A dour people, they understand the fragility of the world and respect nature in all its forms – fair and foul, paying their respect to spirits of life as well as death. The TREE OF KERAS is a sacred object to them.

ATTORA: Set. City in the c south west of THE OLD FOREST.

ATTRA: Set. Settlement in the region of ILLASAN, in the south of JURRAS^(2.), whose primary industry is the growing and spinning of cotton (Pop. c. 8,500).

ATTRAH: (B. 1290 – D. 1376 RM) Soc. Leg. Cultural hero in ABACARDAT.
He survived the UPHEAVAL OF LETHEA and was instrumental in uniting the fragmented states that emerged from the devastation wrought by the earthquake that toppled the UMMIDIAN EMPIRE. The work he accomplished continued after his death, when in 1401 RM the nation of Abacardat was born, and its capital named ATTRAHASISH in his honour.

He has since gone on to become a well-regarded historical figure, with many exploits (some of them fantastical or categorically false) attributed to him. Today most people know the name as a legendary figure and are unlikely to even know his historical significance in the nation. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

ATTRAHASISH: Pol. Set. Original capital city of ABACARDAT, named after the legendary hero ATTRAH upon its founding in 1401 RM. Once a coastal city, it overlooked the SEA OF UHBATAQ and had a thriving post where foreign trade was brought into the nation.

The emergence of FAHR'S PLAGUE in 2138 RM saw the city and most other settled areas around the sea strict, their populations devastated. Though it remained capital, this was in name only and it exerted little control over a nation that within a few decades of the plague striking had effectively collapsed – the west was in shambles and the east had blockaded itself away from contact with the west, which had been the nucleus of the plague outbreak. That, coupled with the waning of the Sea of Uhbataq, saw the city wane in power and size over the coming centuries.

The rise of the JAHINN SULTANATE in 2326 RM brought stability to the region and chose the city of ZAWABAH as its new capital, taking over from the ailing Attrahasish, which remains today as a city of little renown. At its peak in c. 1860 RM, it was famed for its splendid harbour overlooking the Sea of Uhbataq, and boasted a population of over 400,000 (Pop. c. 35,500).

ATTRAMA: Lan. Secretive language that is spoken across the INNER SEA. Its origins are unknown, though it was rediscovered in the early years of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, following the discovery of the SCRIPTURE OF SHADOW by the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR. Translation of the language was possible due to a single passage within the Scripture of Shadow that included the same passage in three different languages, one of which was known to the people of KORACHAN, which enabled the unravelling of the tongue.

The language was adopted by shapers and nascent Church of the Undying Machine, though eventually fell out of favour within the latter, and is today spoken almost exclusively by Atramental Shapers as a secret language. Within the Korachani empire it is officially taught in the various Minasteria of Shaping. Elsewhere, it is taught by masters to apprentices, though some exclusive institutions can be found where it is also taught, including within Parthis and Sarastro. In most cases, it is only taught to those who possess the ability to Focus of shape, through the level of secrecy with which its secrets are kept varies greatly from region to region.

Due to the disparate nature of the language's dissemination, individuals who speak it who hail from different nations or cultures may find differences in grammar, syntax, pronunciation, and accents, which means it is largely a written language. Indeed, many Atramental treatises and codices are written in Attrama, which has made the spread of certain Atramental knowledge difficult, as only trained Atramentists understand the language to any degree of competence.

Very few instances of the language have been found from its original context, and they are typically regarding Atramental studies. See Vol II: Languages.

ATTRIMH: Set. Coastal settlement in the north west of EZASUH^(2,) in the south of the inland SEA OF ATTIR.

ATTUNEMENT: Sup. Mys. In SHAPING, a state of mind once FOCUS^(1.) has been reached. Shaping of both the FIRMAMENT and ATRAMENTA are only possible once one is attuned. See Vol IV: Shaping.

ATTURYANG: also 'Scionscorpse'. Set. City in the east of CUTH built atop of and carved from the fossilised hill-like body of a gigantic SCION. It is called Ozhiro in KORACHANI (from ozha hiro; meaning high-child, or lofty child). The scion's origins and identity are unknown, though it has since become a patron of sorts to the city and its denizens. The stone used in the construction of the city is mined from the heart of the corpse and has strange properties that are unknown elsewhere.

The people of Atturyang also mine a resin-like substance, thought to be the marrow of the SCION, which is treated and smoked as a hallucinogenic. The drug, known as MARROW, is sold across the east of LLACHATUL (Pop. c. 62,000). See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

ATUGUR: also 'Atughur'. Geo. Plains and sparse forest in the north west of LIDEA. The region is known for the many HORSETAIL plants that live there, as well as the scattered mushroom-shaped caprocks that can be found closer to the ORIAN Mountains.

ATUL: Pol. Set. Capital city of AKACHA (Pop. c. 64,500).

ATULAUR: also 'The Hollow'. Geo. Large cavern that dives vertically beneath the badlands of TULRATUR, through a slot canyon. The cavecomplex is intricate and expansive, filled with waterfalls and spectacular chambers. The fossils and corpses of myriad different creatures (many now extinct) can be found here, possibly swept into the depths by seasonal floods. The ATRAMENTA has a strong presence here, tainting the water and affecting the corpses in grotesque ways, rendering their decaying flesh in a mimicry of life.

ATUM: 1. Alc. Set. Small city in the west of the UMBRA SOKHAR, and a protectorate of the city of KADOTA. It was once renowned for its ALCHEMISTS, who studied the effects of the ATRAMENTA on the MATERIAL PLANE, and whose shapers were manipulators of the tainted regions of the Umbra Sokhar. Today it continues its tradition of alchemical research, and its scholars are amongst the most knowledgeable with regards to the Umbra Sokhar (Pop. c. 15,000).

2. Rnk. In the above city^(1,), a rank of scholar that is held in high regard, many individuals of which become individuals of power.

ATUN GOTHATA: Rui. FOURTH AGE AIKLAH ruin in the west of the tribe of JACITTA in the west of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER.

ATUNÉ: Set. Small city in the south of SAUA known for its game. It is a common hunting retreat for nobility, who vacation there in autumn to hunt CHITER and deer (Pop. c. 20,000).

ATURALAM: (D. 2781 RM) The disgraced DOYEN-KNIGHT who funded the BROTHERS VENGENT in the ruins of KAND in the west of TARTAK in 2453 RM.

ATVAR: Mil. Set. Fortified MULL city in the MULL CITY-STATES, in the TOLIASOR Mountain-chain (Pop. c. 37,300).

ATYS: Rvr. Wetlands in the c of CISNERIA, along the midspan of the course of the river ATYSESH. Atys is a marsh in which is situated the stilt-city of TURIAN.

ATYSESH: Rvr. River in the south of CISNERIA, flowing east for around 500-miles from source in the BLACK MOUNTAINS, before meeting the coast at the SEA OF APHOTIS. At around the midspan of its course, in the lands of AUROREN, it slows to a crawl in flat water-logged lands, which are home to the marshes of ATYS, on which is situated the stilt-city of TURIAN.

AUALAR: Set. Series of small fortified settlements and homesteads in SYNCRASIA in the c north of THE SURRACH. Collectively they are known for their large cattle ranches (Pop. c. 13,000).

AUARCHAN: Ind. Manufactory and ATRAMENTAL BOMB research facility in the west of the UMBRA SOKHAR, not 30-miles south of the route of the SHADOW MARCH south west into KHARKHARADONTIS. The post was abandoned on 3804 after studies into Atramental bombs diminished, and remains now, a ruin, sprawling several square miles, with many more tunnels and fortifications.

AUBERGE: Org. Str. Large fortresses belonging to the WHITE LEAGUE that serve as inns, hostels, temples, banks, armouries, commissaries etc. open to League mercenaries in the area as well as customers of the WHITE BANK, who can use the services at a fee. These auberges can be found in most major cities across the INNER SEA REGION and beyond, particularly where the White Bank and/or the White League have a presence.

AUDHUMLA: Rvr. Winding river in TETHYSIA, flowing some 2,500-miles east from the PERIEDAS, through the HARITH wetlands, where it meets its parent, the river KALIMM before emptying in the MYMEREAN OCEAN, in four lagoons at its mouth, around which the conurbation of AZHDAHAK is located.

AUDIAN: Rel. Str. Org. Monastery in the north west of GNOTH, located on the western-face of the VAGNOSTAN Mountains. The monastery is one of the seven MONASTERIES OF THOUGHT.

AUEREN: Pol. Tribe in the far north of MULCIBER, in the GROWING MOUNTAINS, in the north east of SAMMAEA. It is characterised by highland massifs and verdant valleys and is populated by a belligerent people, commonly referred to as AUERENI barbarians. The barbarians are equipped by SARASTROAN weapon-dealers, whose intent is to keep the region, and the SALT ROAD that passes through it, unstable.

AUERENI: 1. Eth. A warrior-people native to the land of AUEREN, in what are today the roughlands of the far north of the GROWING MOUNTAINS in the north of MULCIBER and the east of SIRIPHAGOS. They were largely wiped out by KORACHANI offensives against them that culminated by c. 490 RM in the plains of BAULDOR, leaving the Imperial intruders without support where their citadels crumbled. A final attack in 529 RM was repelled by Imperial defenders, following which the Auereni were slowly whittled down to near-extinction by 543 RM, their only memory living on in the children of the female breeding-slaves the Korachani settlers kept, though their numbers have been allowed to slowly increase with imperial disinterest in the region.

Today, they are a warlike people whose actions make travel in the area dangerous. They live in familial groups that subsist in a semi-nomadic lifestyle, whose tents and yurts are ready to be taken apart to move on at a moment's notice. They value physical strength and buy cheap firearms from Sarastroan traders, which they use in their raids and attacks. In the past centuries, they have adopted a more sedentary lifestyle, with larger cities appearing in the north east of their territories, and they have become culturally more like the rest of Mulciber. See Vol II: Peoples and Races of Elyden: Ethnicities.

2. Sup. Pol. SHAPER-leaders of the AUERENI people; comparable to CELUREISTS. Historically, they led the Auereni people against the IMPERIAL encroachment between 352 – c. 490 RM, though were killed and driven out of Aueren by 543 RM, never to be replaced.

AUGRASH: Set. Small coastal city in the east of CHEIRA (Pop. c. 13,600).

AUGUE: Rvr. Major river in the south east of BROR^(1,) flowing south from various sources in the LAHAED Mountains, across the nations of GHROND and MOSTUE, before emptying at the GHAYATTAN Coast. Its mid-course is flat and known for its vast wetlands.

AUGUR: 1. Sup. General term used for SHAPERS who can see or predict future events in any manner or degree, often with varying degrees of success as their visions are often subject to biased interpretation. The ability is well-regarded and such shapers have been utilised by rulers and tyrants throughout history.

2. Pol. Sup. Since c. -50 RM, the ruling caste of seer-witches who dwell in the CLOUDY PEAK of VISSIL, in LYRIDIA. The augurs rose to prominence in around -100 RM, when their prophecies and visions caused the population to rally against its leaders in SOLEAS, leading ultimately to the augurs' ascension to power. Despite this, the augurs care little for the TROGLODYTES who dwell in the caves beneath them, choosing to worry themselves with more important things, leaving the leadership of the clans and villages in the hands of the TROGEIN and the BARRIMA.

Amongst the Augurs are nine augur-priestesses, each beholden to a portion of Lyridia, over which they are technically ruler. Though their main role and concern is the age-old ritual of the ABULIA. Each of these nine augurs is linked to one of the sleeping Abulia; the sacred NINE whose restless slumber feeds their visions. One augur is known as the SIBYL and is the uncontested ruler of Lyridia.

Though commonly seen as prophecy, the visions and divination of the augurs are little more than singular glimpses into the myriad potential futures, each of which stands a chance to come to pass following the completion of a path of actions, and it is only the visions of the Nine Abulia that are considered true prophecy, though that does not take away from the augurs' importance in Lyridian society.

AUHT TA': Set. City in the c north west of KHULL. The city is known for its foundries, the bowels of which are hewn within the roots of a butte at the foot of which the city itself is located. A large tower stands on the top of the butte, commanding an impressive view of the surrounding areas. It was once the base of a SORCERER-KING (3) though has since been repurposed into fort of the KHULLAN INQUISITION (Pop. c. 32,000).

AULEAQ: Set. Small city in the east of CHEIRA. Its main industry is silver mining (Pop. c. 12,000).

AULIN: Rvr. Originally a river tributary in the c of KORACHAN, terminating at the river KHAD in the city of KHADON. The river was slowly bricked over centuries ago and has now become a part of the city's sewer system. Few know of its history though the old river is still accessible from sewer grills and access hatches across Khadon, following its old course. In parts of the sewer the remnants of store fronts and old facades can still be seen flanking the old river.

AULTA: Set. Settlement in the c north west of LIDEA. Its main industry is quarrying for coal. It is situated along the route of both the SALT ROAD and the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 8,200).

AURA: Plr. 'Aurae'. Mor. Eth. Caste of GIGANRI common in GNOTH who serve as merchants. They trade with foreign merchants travelling along THE WAY trade-route, who are forced to stop in either OPUSCULA in the c south, or SYNCRETIA in the south east, selling their goods to the aurae, who in turn trade them across Gnoth, before heading to the opposing city to trade them back.

AURADIA: 1. Sea. Bay in the west of RHEA, leading to the eponymous city⁽³⁾.

2. Rel. Polytheistic pantheonic religion in RHEA that gained popularity in c. 900 RM, in what was then ARRETOY, becoming prevalent in the entire headland by 1200 RM. Those who worshipped the Auradian pantheon maintained a widespread belief in guardian auras, as well as a pantheon of 23 higher-beings, which were prayed to in times of need, based on their domains.

Auradian became a state-religion in 1392 RM, and gave rise to the so-called Auradian Dynasty, which saw Arretoy transition into the nation of Rhea in 1394 RM. The AURADIAN DYNASTY ruled for 18-centuries, keeping Auradian as its state-religion before being deposed by the HIEROMONARCHS, who brought with them worship of the sun-deity SAEWAL, which saw the Auradian pantheon wane in influence until it had all but disappeared by c. 3300 RM, remaining only as a few MYSTERY CULTS in major cities, particularly in Auradia⁽³⁾.

Its High-temple was the PALACE OF TRUTHS, in the city of Auradia, which is ruined to this day, though remains a major site in the city was a reminder to the region's past. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

3. Set. Major coastal city in the east of RHEA. It grew from a modest coastal settlement in c. 2300 RM after the discovery in aluminium in the south west of the DORLEIDON Mountains saw the region become and industrial centre.

The city was the heart of the Auradian polytheism^(1.), and the PALACE OF TRUTHS, the religions' High-temple, was located there. As the HIEROMONARCHS gained influence in the first century of the fourth millennium, the city of Auradia remained the sole outlier of the faith as it lost popularity across Rhea (Pop. c. 170,000).

AURADIAN DYNASTY: Pol. Monarchy that founded the nation of RHEA in 1394 RM atop the ancient monarchy of ARRETOY. The Dynasty ruled from the city of DHERBA in Rhea until 3192 RM, though for a period between c. 1510 – 1590 RM, it was a puppet of PORPHYR. In 3192 RM the Dynasty was deposed by the HIEROMONARCHS, ending 18-centuries of rule.

AURARA: Ind. Set. Settlement in the north of KHAMID. Its main industry is ruby mining, and many of its rubies are sold to merchants crossing its borders while travelling the GREAT ROAD trade-route (Pop. c. 13,600).

AUREATE FELLOWSHIP: also 'Mereg Rak eth'. Rel. Religion worshipped in the nation of METHUMN, as well as parts of ADHERA. It is a relic from the early FIFTH AGE and emerged in c. 820 RM in the MEDHAMANNI EMPIRE. Its people worship the sun deity RAKETH, which is depicted as a majestic figure of honey-like skin that radiates golden light.

The Fellowship was founded by TOMMAS OF SAGARIN, a merchant who experienced a profound spiritual awakening following a near-death experience. He dedicated the rest of his life bettering himself so that he could better others – a tenet that became one of the founding principles of the religion that holds true to this day. His egalitarian message resonated with many disenfranchised in a time when the disparity between classed was growing. Small temples were established in major cities that became centres of learning and refuge, much to the chagrin of the ruling imperial house, which for many years attempted to quash the spreading belief, leading to decades of conflict. In c. 895 RM the ascension of the emperor UMMALIN brought about a profound change to the beliefs of the imperial house, which became accepting of the religion, after which it spread across Medhamann unabated.

The Aureate Fellowship struggled in the wake of the Medhamanni empire's fragmentation in c. 1810 RM, and it failed as an organised religion in c. 1825 RM. However, its teachings remained strong, and its followers carried the faith throughout the subsequent MEDHAMANNI DARK AGE, emerging as a unifying force amid the founding of its child states, including RAMIS.

Today, the Fellowship remains a significant religious institution in Methumn, and its temples serve as schools and libraries where anyone can study, regardless of class and race. Its leaders are known as SOLAR HIEROPHANTS, continuing Tommas' legacy. The Fellowship's annual Festival of Light commemorates his contributions and renews the faithful's vows to live according to the principles of Rak eth. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

AURMAS: Pol. Set. Ruling city in the tribe of ALLAKAT, in the c of MULCIBER, in the region of HELIOT in the GROWING MOUNTAINS (Pop. c. 60,000).

AURNOLOM: Geo. Parched region in the western reaches of the SOLACHANI desert in SARASTRO, noted for the many buried colossi attributed to the DEFILER KINGS of the SAOSTANAN DYNASTIES.

AUROCHS: 1. Fau. Large grazing bovine creature, common across temperate LLACHATUL, famously used as war mounts in KASPIA. They have been domesticated in many regions, and many different varieties exist, some of which are quite different to untamed wild aurochs. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

also 'the Bull'. Ast. Con. Constellation in the NORTHERN HEMISPHERE. See Vol: Constellations.

AUROCHS' HEART, CURED: Cui. A delicacy in Western LLACHATUL, particularly AQUARIIA, parts of GNOTH, HOLOLACH, OPHIUSSA, OTINTH, RAONGEN, and SEDISIA. The heart of an AUROCHS is salted and pressed with tin weights over a long period of time to remove moisture. Once dried, it is used as a seasoning and is shaved onto other dishes.

AUROCHS RIDERS: Polk. Rnk. The aurochs of KASPIA are, through breeding and natural mutation, of a stronger build to those of other lands and have been used as mounts since the land was first occupied in this age, c. –1500 RM. By the time of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, the Aurochs Riders were synonymous with the Kaspian royalty, and had adopted the winged aurochs as their standard top and heraldic device; a form of association with TAHIRA, THE WHITE ANGEL.

AURORA AEHATIS: Sup. Phenomenon similar to the POLAR AURORAE, though ATRAMENTAL in origin. It is localised to within around 150-miles of the BLACK FOUNTAIN and other powerful Atramental LACUNAE around ELYDEN, though can often be seen much farther away than that, with strange curtain-like violet shimmering seen in the sky, growing more intense the closer to the lacuna one goes.

The Aurora Aehatis is known to cause AEPATHY and maddening the DREAMS to those nearby. See Vol IV: the Materia Omna.

AUROREN: For. Geo. Sparsely wooded hills to the east of the BLACK MOUNTAINS, separated from the western-coast of the SEA OF APHOTIS by the ESSEVERAN Plains. They serve as a border between the east of CISNERIA and the west of the ALMAGESTI colonies and were once populated by the so-called TREE-DWELLER culture that emerged in the area in the early FIFTH AGE, inhabiting the monolithic tree stumps of trees cut down during the WAR OF SCOURGING.

AURUM: 1. Sea. Sea to the north west of the SEA OF NARANOR, dividing the east of IMELKOT from the west of AHOPAH. It is relatively deep and is effectively a valley between the KHATAM Mountain and the Ahopahi peninsula.

2. Dem. 'Aurumi'. Ntn. Nation in the south east of MENISCEA, known for its jungles and gilded monuments. The merchant caste known as the UMMALLARIDS originated here between c. 2720 – 3100 RM and are now a powerful political and commercial presence in the south east of Meniscea, and wield supreme power in Aurum. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

AUSPEX: Plr. 'auspices'. Soc. Rnk. High-born caste and children of the AVENTORS of EHBOT who in 531 RM helped free the region from over a century of warfare. They rapidly came into power, the then ruler EBAEON becoming little more than a pupper to their whims, and whose FIR. Prowess helped maintain a sense of awe and mysticism around them even as they outlawed its use outside their caste to further enforce the illusion. In 622 RM they were instrumental in leading the CUSTODES into control of the region, which became known as ARKOS (1.), after their militocratic noble caste, which came to rule the region.

The Auspices remained as advisors and mystics, adopting the bird, whose flight allowed it to survey the totality of their lands, as their talisman and they became renowned for their heavy feather mantles and ROC-bone staffs.

The Arkos' rule became harsh and ritualised over time, and by c. 2000 most had become tyrannical figures that shunned public life. By 2134 RM the Auspices opposed the Arkos' harsh rule, rallying the majority of the people against their oppressors, though their actions were ultimately rebuked and by c. 2200 RM the vast majority of the Auspices were executed, with the remnants either seeking the solace of their kin the AVENTORS in the EHBOT Mountain, or fleeing into AETHIOS and SIRIPHAGOS.

AUSPICES OF SHADOW: His. Tec. Sup. Obj. Famed IRON MANTLE (complex TECHNARCANE equipment used by SHAPERS to enhance their abilities) wielded by various historic figures within the Korachani empire.

Built in c. 3500 RM, it became infamous amongst followers of imperial politics after being used to good effect in various conflicts with AHKA. It was later used during the reclamation of the colony of CRASSULA in c. 3680, begin used in various conflicts and in defence of imperial beachheads against ARERAQTHI natives.

It was wielded soon after by the ARCHSHAPER TOMYRESS VILKA during the WAR OF SUNDERING, and though Korachan was ultimately defeated in the war, losing its southern territories, her exploits were fondly remembered. Following her death in 3802 RM the mantle was passed down to a line of successive Archshapers, and it saw use in various theatres, including Madour in 3989 and Akina in 4000 RM, and it remains in the latter territory today, in the use of an undisclosed Archshaper.

AUT: Cui. VALUS SALMON that is salted and eaten frozen in thin slivers with salt and pepper. The food is common in western DURCHAA, particularly the city of DAALKATH.

AUTULGA: Set. Coastal city and tributary to the city of ZILION in the west of THE SURRACH, known for its man-made harbours and deep shipyards (Pop. c. 32,200).

AUTH: Geo. Mountain-range in the c of MENISCEA, to the south west of the PTHOSTOTH Mountains, serving as a natural border between the south east of IMEAL, the north west of LAOD, and the north of WESTERN LARISH.

AUTHENTATE: Soc. Pol. Title in PELASGOS and NARTHEL. Synonymous with the more colloquial; lord or master. Land owners, originally nobility though following imperial influence c. 100 RM, became closely linked with the PATRICIANS and COGNATENSIA of IMPERIAL society and as imperial nations became more metropolitan, the title becoming rare, though it has become more common as the empire has waned in strength.

AUTHORS, the: Rel. Dei. Ancient worker gods worshipped by the nomadic mystics of MENISCEA known as the KIOLTHA in SHAZGIN, the Wastes of VERMES, and parts of SABAEA. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

AUTHOT: Sec. City and surrounding farmsteads spread over a wide area in the central north of JURRAS^(2,). Its main industry is the cultivation of grapes for wine production and it is controlled by PATRICIAN HOUSE SYNOD^(2,) (Pop. c. 23,000).

AUTOCRACY OF ALTHA: see ALTHA.

AUTOCRAT OF SAGITTARIA: also 'the Autocrat of Modob' (B. 1531 RM)

His. Pol. Born in the city of MODOB in THE SURRACH, the son of a merchant-lord with influence in SAGITTARIA. He moved there early in his life with his father, who was amongst those who were manipulating the MEROVICHI DYNASTY. During this time, he was travelling across the Surrach and came across the $\underline{\text{CODEX OF THE TAL 'IBA}}$, through which he became a powerful $\underline{\text{SHAPER}}$ of both the $\underline{\text{FIRMAMENT}}$ and $\underline{\text{ATRAMENTA}}$.

He returned to Sagittaria in the dying days of the Merovichi Dynasty and used the chaos of this time to his own advantage, rising to power in 1567 RM, becoming known as the Autocrat of Sagittaria. He was destroyed in 2163 RM by a cadre of KNIGHTS-EXILES.

His body was interred within a technarcane engine in the settlement of SOGASSA, where he became a catatonic power known as the INTERMINABLE ONE, eventually worshipped by the people of Sagittaria as a deity.

In 3582 RM a deal was brokered with the LHAUS of KHALHAT and an ITERANT body was created to house his soul and he had a fortified palace built over the town of KESHEL. This secured the unbridled worship of the Sagittarian people until 3612 RM, when an earthquake destroyed the palace and his body, causing the people to question the divinity of their god.

His followers took the iterant body back to Sogassa and managed to inter the iterant body within the technarcane engine there, but the body was too damaged and the stress of the operation left him weak and maddened. His sorcerer-priests now rule the city, which remains independent from Sagittaria.

AUTOCRATIC PENTARCH AND DOMNUS KREIOS, the: m. Per. (B. 3817 RM) Pol. Ruler of the TARAHID ANNEXES in TADARIDA since 3852 RM. Assumed the title DOMNUS in 3862 RM after becoming leader of the religion there.

AUTOCRATIC PENTARCHY: Pol. Chief ruling council of the TARAHID ANNEXES, made up of the PENTARCH and regional representatives. Despite the name, which implies shared leadership between five individuals, there is one ruler, known as the Pentarch – the title being a relic from times when the region was still governed by five rulers.

AUTUMN DYNASTY: see KOMMEAN DYNASTIES.

AUTUMN REALM, the: Lan. Name used in reference to ELYDEN that grew in popularity towards the end of the FIFTH AGE and continued to do so following the fragmentation of the KORACHANI EMPIRE and throughout the SIXTH AGE. Other terms that also gained popularity include: the Twilight, and the Wasteland.

AUXITUS BARADAS: (B. 1576 – D. 1632 RM) Art. AGLAIAN⁽²⁾ sculptor and artist who is most famed for his sculpture, THE LAMENT OF ST. EARTA.

AVAA: Geo. Shale highlands in the south east of SUOR, covering some 6,000 square-miles of land.

AVABA: Set. Settlement in the south of SEDISIA. Its main industry is the production of plum wine (Pop. c. 8,300).

AVADHIR: Set. Small fortified city in the north of GYZHA. It is militarised and guards the border with ELAT (Pop. c. 20,000).

AVAKA: Set. Small city in the north east of KARAKHAS, built around a petrified ship, 175-miles from the coast. None know the true age of the ship, only that it is old, and that its texture is little different to the rocks around it. Despite the mystery that surrounds this artefact, or perhaps because of it, the place has always been one visited by esoteric itinerants, and it is the descendants of these people who now populate the Kasbah around which the city is built.

The city is a crossroads of travel trade and religion, as it lies along the route of the SHADOW MARCH, the SALT ROAD, as well as the TOSLETHI UMBRA PIPELINE and as a result it has steadily grown in size and influence over recent years. Recently, the location has served as a place for rituals dedicated to the deity KHAR'ILLAE following the persecution of its followers by THE KORACHANI EMPIRE.

Blood festivals were held there under full red light of ARAKHAMÉ as recently as c. 2000 RM. It was during such a ritual that a pilgrimage of the Shadow March in 2003 RM came across a large festival. Fanatics on both sides attacked each other, leading to a large battle that left most dead, though ultimately, the more numerous followers of the UNDYING MACHINE were victorious. The bodies of the worshippers of Khar'illae were piled into a pyramid outside the city and burnt as an example to others worshipping heathen gods. The city dwindled in size following this though slowly grew over the intervening years (Pop. $c.\ 17,000$).

AVAN: Sup. In the study FIRMAMENTAL SHAPING, the SPHERE of earth. Its followers have domain over the earth, though this strength can take many forms.

AVANNIAL: Set. City in the c north west of CEHOPHELA, to the north of the badlands of IMBRIA. It is known for its grain production and in particular, its large stone mills that are turned by giant beasts common to central MENISCEA (Pop. c. 15,000).

 $\underline{AVARA}\!:$ Set. Coastal settlement in the north west of \underline{VAALK} (Pop. c. 6,500).

AVARADA: Rvr. River in MADOUR flowing east for 110-miles from the AVRAN hills before emptying in the SEA OF ACHSHI.

AVARAN: Geo. Hills in VENTHIR.

AVARANOM, TOWERS OF: His. Ast. Str. Group of seven astronomical towers located along the northern face of the VASTAN MASSIF, in the c of SAMMAEA, north of the KARKARMIS Mountain. Dating back to c. 1200 RM, they are now deserted and in a decrepit state, long since abandoned by their nameless creators. At least one of the towers (known as the THOLOTH) is known to have a hemispherical chamber on which are carved the NORTHERN HEMISPHERE'S stars and constellations.

It is thought that there were originally thirteen towers, which were erected by the early FIFTH AGE KIAPHORAN people between c. -300 and -183 RM, though their purpose, if indeed they had any, is unknown

Though far from identical to one-another, all thirteen share certain traits, including the most obvious of which was the use of gigantic horns, each taken from remnants of ancient extinct beasts, which were used as signals, their sounds said to have reached miles all around, easily capable of alerting the region's armies to the presence of enemies.

Over the years most of the towers were toppled or otherwise ruined, and the positions of over half of them are now lost, though the others remain in various states of decomposition, though only one retains its horn.

AVARIGAME: Rvr. River in the c north of KAZZAR, flowing south for 220-miles from sources in the south of the ODU Mountains, before meeting the coast at the north of the BAY OF RIPAA.

AVARKA: Pol. Set. Capital of KHAR NADUL. It is home to the harsh theocratic council, known as THE CABAL, that rules over the nation (Pop. unknown).

AVASTI: Rvr. River in the north of AHRISHEN that flows south east for 375 miles from sources in the A SAVI Mountains before meeting with its parent, the river SAVEST.

AVATAR: Mys. Rel. Phil. In many religions and philosophies from across ELYDEN, avatars are a physical manifestation of a greater power, often a divinity. This could be the divinity assuming a material form and literally descending upon the material plane, or POSSESSING a mortal vessel. For instance, the rulers of many monarchies are considered to be avatars of a divinity.

AVATAR, the: 1. Mys. In eastern mysticism, one of four figures, alongside THE HERALD, THE SEER and THE SENTINEL, that form part of an eschatological myth that is said to bring about the end of the FIFTH AGE.

2. Mys. His. In the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN, two Avatars are said to emerge once every age as manifestations of the FIRMAMENT and ATRAMENTA. They are able to possess MORTALS, who becomes a vessel to their desires. In the past, the Demiurges ALLAISHADA and RACHANAEL were Avatars of the Firmament and Atramenta, in the guises of SILLAMÉ and UMBÁVGHAR, respectively.

AVATAR ENCARR, the: (B. 2500? – 3721 RM) Oth. Extremist HALFBLOOD FIR. SHAPER who became the ruler of TARATI⁽²⁾ in 3013 RM following a bloody coup performed by THE AVATARS against a corrupt Imperial government. His rule was harsh, though brought trade back to the city (most of which, ironically, was with KORACHAN) and relaxed laws regulating shaping, leaving Tarati one of the most liberal cities concerning the Firmament in the ARID TRIPTYCH. Encarr was assassinated in 3721 RM, though details of his death are unknown. Reports of sightings proliferated Tarati in the decades following his death, leading some to believe that the halfblood had not been slain.

AVATAR OF LIGHT, the: Mys. In eastern mysticism, one of four figures, alongside THE HERALD, THE SEER and THE SENTINEL, that form part of an eschatological myth that is said to bring about the end of the FIFTH AGE.

AVATARS, the: Org. Oth. A group of HALFBLOODED extremists in TARATI^(1.) who oppose the somewhat xenophobic edicts of the ruling TETRAN. In 1305 RM, the Avatars openly defied the Tetran, resulting in the KORACHANI EMPIRE (until then the ultimate power in Tarati) abandoning Tarati to the Tetran in 1308 RM.

The Tetran escalated the conflict with the Avatars who, through attacks and raids over the next centuries, crippled the city-state's trade. The group disintegrated over the next decades, though ancestors of its members came together in c. 3000 RM, opposing renewed diplomatic alliances with the Korachani empire. The Avatars executed the entirety of the Tetran in a bloody conflict in 3013 RM, after which they placed their leader – an extremist halfblooded Firmamentist calling himself THE AVATAR ENCARR – in power. Encarr appointed his four closest generals to positions of power in the city-state, and they became known as the Tetran in mirror of the government that had been executed. Encarr was assassinated in 3721 RM, leaving the Tetran in power; a position they maintain to this day.

AVED: 1. Geo. Island off the south western coast of THE SURRACH, south of the UBIQUA delta of the river HATHURAN.

 Mil. Str. Coastal fort on the above island^(1.), guarding the entrance into the UBIQUA delta.

AVEHANA: Set. Coastal city in the south of PERGOST, in the ETHOROST region (Pop. c. 33,000).

AVELLA: Set. Settlement in the c north of SKAROS. Its main industry is the mining of the rare ore PARADROSS (Pop. c. 11,750).

AVENADA: Set. Small fortified coastal settlement on the island of ARRIARA in the west of the CORAL BARONIES. Its people's main diet consists of soft-shelled shrimp that lives in the waters around the SHIBBOTHA and SHIELD ISLES. These are boiled and eaten whole, usually in stews or with legumes, and as a result locals are known for the slight orange-pink tint to their skin (Pop. c. 12,800).

AVENAR: Set. Major coastal city in the north of NORTHERN SIMBARA, forming an important stop along the NACRE ROAD (Pop. c. 320,000).

AVÉNETH, TREE OF: His. Flo. Tree in the east of VÂRR, where many WITCHES were hanged. It is close to the large harbour of MACHORA, where many CRUSADES east had their origins. Over the years these crusades were responsible for the capture of thousands of witches from AHRISHEN and beyond, most of which were brought back to Machora for sentencing, after which they would be hanged from the tree.

A charnel pit not far from the tree still bears the bones of the thousands of witches slain there, the most recent of which are from less than 2 centuries ago. It has a grim reputation, even amongst local Varrans, and people of a sensitive disposition who go there get a strange feeling and feel the need to leave. Many travellers passing close to the area surrounding the tree have disappeared over the years.

AVÉNETHACHAN: Set. Independent city in the north west of the DESOLATION OF ASTUDAN, east of the ALMAGESTI city of APOTEGA, funded by exiled members of the WITCHSLAYERS (Pop. c. 34,000).

AVÉNETHI ORDER: lit. 'Witch hater'. Pol. Org. One of the major SANCTIFIED ORDERS OF THE INQUISITION of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, dedicated to the rooting out of WITCHES and unregistered SHAPERS (specifically those who use the FIRMAMENT) both within and without the empire.

The Order was founded in the city of MULCIBER in NÁRTHEL in 458 RM, emerging from earlier witch hunting groups. It later moved to upper CARCERI beneath VÂRR in c. 1100 RM to be closer to the heathen threat in the north east. From here it launched many crusades east over the years, most notable amongst them the various WITCH CRUSADES, for which it became infamous. It once again moved in 2943 RM, this time to AVLONIA in ALMAGEST. The order evacuated Almagest late in the 3rd millennium during the early days of the WAR OF THE ARTIFEXES, moving to PELASGOS, where it remained until 3943 RM, when the with the location of its new headquarters never being disclosed to the public, though many believe it to be somewhere in north eastern PELASGOS.

The Order is strictly hierarchal and is organised into various ranks and stations, with the most common being known as WATCHERS^(1.) and SEEKERS, who typically work within and without the empire's borders, respectively. More elite ranks include SENTINELS, and the infamous INQUISITORS, HIGH INQUISITORS, and WITCHFINDER GENERALS, for which the Order is most closely associated. The order also makes use of many ONOCHIM – vat-grown wretches whose sole purpose is to search for specific targets with unerring accuracy.

The Order's emblem is an eye within a triangle – with the eye symbolising its members' watchful gaze of witches, and the triangle symbolising the $\underline{\text{TRIPTYCH}}^{(l.)}$ of the empire.

The Order's present Grandmistress is ADONICA ASTARTUS.

AVÉNETHI MARCH: Soc. Rel. In imperial religious customs, the AVÉNETHI Marches are smaller than the monolithic SHADOW MARCH that is organised by THE CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. Organised by the Avénethi Order, the Marches are small groups, usually led by a charismatic INQUISITOR, that wander the hinterlands of IMPERIAL society, venturing into heathen lands, attacking small settlements and capturing those they think are consorting with witches. The witches are either executed in ornate rituals (involving the THREE DEATHS when possible) or sold to slavers, or the Inquisitorial Order themselves, who experiment on them.

AVENTOR: 1. Mys. Org. A sect of ANUBIAN ascetics and mystics, whose influence lasted until c. 1000 RM, remaining near-constant in the city-state of RETHKA. In 531 RM three such mystics travelled to the CITADEL MOUNTS of EHBOT, offering their services to the ruling INTERREGNUM there.

As their influence in Anubia waned so did it grow in Ehbot, where they became advisors to its ruler EBAEON, who became little more than a puppet to them. The three Aventors of Ehbot seemed not to age and in their many years in power sired many bastards, some of which became potent FIR. SHAPERS known as AUSPICES. Their other children were exiled into the Mountains of Ehbot where they lived their lives as ascetics, taking their fathers' title of Aventor.

2. Mys. Org. In post-Imperial (after 551 RM) EHBOT, a caste of mystics, their customs evolving from the native ANUBIAN traditions of their Aventor fathers, who in 531 RM helped free the region from a century of war. They became commonplace in the mounts of Ehbot by c. 900 RM, remaining to this day in small numbers. Amongst the offspring of the three ruling ARKOSIAN^(1.) Aventors without FIRMAMENTAL aptitude were forced into exile in the mountain of Ehbot as Aventors; ascetics and mystics who live lives of solitary recluses, practicing the emancipation of life's cycles.

AVERNA: 1. Geo. Valley in the west of KASPIA. It is one of few regions in Kaspia where ATRAMENTAL TAINT is prevalent. The valley is dark, its demiboreal plants twisted by the ATRAMENTAL forces at work there. The many glens of this area are filled with ancient tombs and overgrown barrows, around which some claim the VALTHAS, the children of the DEMIURGE TALANTEHUT lie restlessly amid disintegrating ruins.

The region is categorised as a MODERATE THREAT by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

2. Rvr. River in the above region. Despite the ATRAMENTAL TAINT on the region around the river its waters are relatively clean, though the area surrounding it is still largely deserted, save for the city of RIMA.

AVHAOGGU: Int. Str. Unexplained subterranean temple in the far north of METHUMN, in the AMMASHI⁽¹⁾ peninsula. The temple is hewn from deep rock and is of intricate design, with many branching side temples and anterooms, all of which are linked to the surface via a single unnervingly long steep staircase that links to the surface.

It is believed to be incredibly ancient in origin, and the perfection of the structure (marred only by the decay of time), indicates that it might have been the work of a DEMIURGE or SCION. The lack of any cultural motifs in the structure belies who or what made it.

AVI HAT: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the north east of SARASTRO, guarding a pass across GOR'KHAN Mountains into the north of VENTHIR. Numbers of troops stationed at the fort have increased over the past months, and the fortification itself is undergoing expansion and reinforcement in anticipation of hostilities with Venthir.

AVIENUS HATEH: (B. 1139 – D. 1217 RM) Rel. Cardinal of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE and, from 1190 until his death in 1211 RM, pope, taking the name Aseliel III. His actions and prejudices were instrumental in the eventual appropriation of northern KORACHAN to DVERGAI and other FEY races, by his successor, pope ANGELUS IV, in the culmination of the time known as the PAPAL HERESY.

AVINITIAN: Rvr. Dre. River in the north of the VESPERTINE LEAGUE, flowing lazily north from sources in the DIVEIAN hills, before meeting the coast at the SEA OF ANIPTERRA. A large stretch of the river passes through a DREAMSCAPE, and the water that emerges from it is of an effervescent quality that has many traits shared with alcohol. The effects of the dreamscape wear off soon after leaving it, and attempts to bottle it or otherwise profit from it have been unsuccessful. Those who drink from the water experience a short sensation of giddiness, not unlike being inebriated, though the effects soon wear off.

AVIOSA: Set. Settlement in the c north west of OTINTH. Like most Otinthian settlements, little is known about it due to the nations' insular nature (Pop. unknown).

AVIRAR: Mil. Str. One of three fortresses in ESHIR^(2.) associated with the SABRIYAN STONE (the other two being AKROL and LAUK) restored and expanded by c. 3311 RM after the reacquisition of the Stone in 3203 RM following its rediscovery by the Atramentist Aliqur who used it subjugate part of the south east of Eshir.

The fort is located in the south east of Eshir, and once guarded the entrance in the BAY OF NISHRIR^(1.), though has since found itself some 10-miles from the coast. It was destroyed by a prolonged bombardment by GODSLAYER and KAZZARAN forces in 3514 RM, leading to the annihilation of the attacker's fleet by SHAPERS.

AVITU: Rvr. Major river in the south east of BROR^(1.) flowing east for over a thousand miles through the DOMAINS OF SHAUATAS from sources in the LAHAED and OROGEN Mountains before meeting the coast at the far east of the VAKAR Wetlands.

AVIYEA: Mil. Str. Fort in the far west of LIDEA, overlooking the river SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾, and far eastern MHAROKK.

AVLONIA: Set. City in ALMAGEST, home to a large AVÉNETHI base (Pop. c. 71,000).

AVNSHYL: Set. Small fortified city in the independent region of ANAGAR, west of RAONGEN^(2.) (Pop. c. 18,000).

AVOHAR: Set. Fortified city in the north of the tribe of DRAKAINA, in the east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 25,000).

AVRA: Set. Small city in the c south of SEDISIA. The surrounding lands have small seams of silver, which are mined for use across Sedisia (Pop. c. 20,000).

AVRAHAM: also 'the Alabaster King'. m. Myt. His. Per. In the mythology and ancient history of ELYDEN, eighteenth of the Two-and-Twenty DEMIURGES, whose children were the HUMANS.

Ancient legends and passages of the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN often describe him as bearing a 'threefold face', with four eyes, three noses and a large mouth. Some believe that this is symbolic of his changing devotion to different children throughout mythic history, followed by his eventual abandonment of humans.

He sired many SCIONS and had seven sons and three daughters – ASHURAD, IEHOVA, LLACHATRA, MELQART, MENILEK, SHAMATZAR, and TALMESH; and OPHRA, EIINA, and SUSHRA – and also created AZER^(2.), who was born through his sheer force of will, without a mother. See Vol IV: the Two-and-Twenty Demiurges.

AVRAHAM'S LAMENT: Int. Rel. Soc. Religious ritual of penitence undertaken by some members of the fanatical sect of LAZANISM knowns as the PENITENTS OF AVRAHAM. the ritual takes the form of individuals pushing large metal spheres with no goal other than that of causing toil and punishment. The practice originated as a test of endurance meant to show the capabilities of mortals, but rapidly degenerated into little more than acts of self-punishment. Adherents of Lazanism regard them as oddities at best and dangerous fanatics at worst. The hills outside the city of $\underline{\text{OIZYSH}}$ are filled with hundreds of self-exiles who spend their days toiling, pushing the spheres around.

AVRAN: Geo. Hills in the west of MADOUR, forming the eastern-most part of the VARRACHON Mountain.

AVVERENATI, the: Pol. Org. An intra-organisational council (often mistakenly identified as the ruling body of the CONCORDANTIST ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION), which convenes in an undisclosed location in KHADON.

The council typically consists of around half-a-dozen to a dozen members, of which the GRANDMASTER of the Concordantist Order (currently SIDION ROUYO, and possibly contributing to the misconception that the council is the ruling body of the Concordantist Order) and one of the members of the COUNCIL OF SEVEN (the government of the KORACHANI EMPIRE) hold permanent positions. Other positions change over time though are typically filled by high-ranking members from across the Sanctified Orders of the Inquisition and other high-ranking members of venerable imperial institutions.

These members present contrasting points of views which together determine the direction that imperial policies will take over the coming political season. The council is incredibly influential, though members rarely agree on a singular course of action.

AVVIRAM: Geo. Region of hilly plains in the north of the TEMPLAR STATES, to the north of lake DORRA – the remnant of an early FIFTH AGE bay that once dominated the region. The Avviram is noted for its terraced hills that have been used for agriculture for millennia, dating back to the FOURTH AGE, though the lowering sea levels have had an adverse effect on the climate, leaving the region more arid than it once was. Most fields here grow TSAMMA, which are a staple in the region.

AWA: Set. Settlement in the c north east of SARASTRO (Pop. c. 7,000).

AWA DELBAR: Mil. Str. Major fort in the west of TRAKIA, overlooking the border with THE SURRACH. Troops stationed in the fort patrol the region.

AWAN: Ind. Set. Major manufactory coastal city in the north east of VENTHIR, overlooking the KEMHAB COAST. (Pop. c. 83,000).

AWARAK: Set. Settlement in the c of the SULTANATE OF ABACARDAT, just west of the JAHADAT STATES (Pop. c. 3,000).

AWERBUR: Int. Geo. Region in the c east of the RTHEI desert, renowned for its LODESTONES, which are so bountiful that entire hills and, in some cases mountain break free from ELYDEN'S surface and drift in the still air, in the form of monolithic LODELITHS. The ruins of many fortifications dot the area, thought to date back to the FOURTH AGE.

AWESSU: Set. Small fortified city in the c south west of the BARRIER LANDS (Pop. c. 19,500).

AWTALL: Set. Settlement in the north of TAHALL (Pop. c. 8,000).

AXALA: Set. Small city in the c-south east of SABAISA. Its main industry is the mining of iron (Pop. c. 20,000).

AXEUR: Set. Fortified coastal city on the island of IREN BARA in the north of the CORAL BARONIES, off the south western coast of SAMMAEA (Pop. c. 37,800).

AXEX: Ast. Brightest star in the constellation OPHIUSUS, forming part of its head.

AXARAD: Set. Settlement in the c south of SERROK. It is situated in the region of BAULAUROCH and is noted for its diamond mines. The mines are government-owned and strict regulations and rules are in place safeguarding the welfare of workers, yet working conditions remain difficult for relatively little-pay (Pop. c. 2,000).

AXIA: 1. Set. City in the north of AETHIOS, west of the ARAM Mountains (Pop. c. 40,000).

2. Geo. Region in the north of AETHIOS, dominated by mesas and strange rock-formations.

AXIAL TILT: Ast. The angle between ELYDEN'S rotational axis and its orbital axis, being 22°52'23". Elyden's axial tilt determines the tropical and POLAR CIRCLES, and the length of days and seasons. See Vol II: Physical Characteristics.

AXIALLA: Set. City and major CERUSE producer in ATARAXIA. Its cosmetics are sold to merchants travelling the RED ROUTE, which passe through the city, finding their way on sale in distant markets around the INNER SEA REGION (Pop. c. 35,000).

AXIRDA: Set. Settlement in the c north east of SERROK, along the traderoute forming part of the ETURED PASS (Pop. c. 4,000).

AXOIHA: Rvr. River in the west of TISARA flowing north east for 290-miles from sources in the ARGENT Mountains before meeting its parent, the river TAIHA. It is known for its highland marshes, close to the settlement of ANUAES.

AXONIN: Sea. Sea in the south west of SAMMAEA, bordered by the nations of AEONAS, BELEGOR, LIEVTHRA, and MACELLARIA. It has a turbulent history of naval and coastal warfare throughout the first millennia of the FIFTH AGE, as city-states and small nations warred against each other for possession of its natural harbours and strategically-important islands.

As sea levels lowered throughout the late 3rd and early 4th millennia RM, this antagonistic culture waned, though the sea remained a hub of different, often conflicting cultures.

AXSUAH: 1. Geo. Region in the south east of AZAZEM. Once known for its lush coastal fields south of the TEKRACHT Mountains, it was leeched of most nutrients centuries ago and is largely abandoned today, its old fields untended and reclaimed by nature, be that what it may.

Shepherds continue a tradition started by their ancestors thousands of years ago and continue to rear their herds here, and its sheep are used to produce AHAROR^(1,) CHEESE.

The region became the centre of a localised civil war in which PATRICIANS declared their independence from KORACHAN, leading to the siege of its capital, Axsuah⁽²⁾.

2. Rui. Abandoned city in the above region in the south east of AZAZEM. In mid-3705 RM, during the height of the WAR OF SUNDERING, the city became the heart of an alliance of disaffected Azazemi PATRICIANS who pooled their resources and fortified their lands, trained their workers, and raised new armies before declaring their independence from KORACHAN. This escalated into a 6-month siege that drew in more Azazemi cities and led to the eventual defat of Axsuah on the 4th of AKORALEN. The city was razed and what remained of its people were repopulated across eastern Azazem.

Today, the region lies forgotten, a blight upon the collective memories of the Azazemi people.

AYA'KA: Sec. Fortified settlement in the c east of the tribe of SUUR'KA, in the north east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. The settlement is a producer of citrus (Pop. c. 5,500).

AYAD: 1. Dem. 'Ayadi'. Ntn. Kingdom in the south west of the continent of LLACHATUL, positioned north of the PARNASIAN Mountains, and south of the nation of RAONGEN^(2.). It is of relatively dry temperate climate, though cool air is drawn from the SEA OF DURAHRAT inland up the vast LIDURNIAN valley, leading to coastal mist and damp air that allows a vast range of flora to survive in the region.

It emerged in 3762 RM following years of civil strife, which eventually led to the collapse of the REPUBLIC OF ELAT (1.). One of its three elected monarchs, QUEEN ATI SEPRIA fled the chaos of the capital with her followers to her ancestral home of ELATHRI, eventually claiming the north of Elat for her own, naming it Ayad, a corruption of the EZASUHI 'Aya Arad', meaning 'new home'. Elat, by then busy fighting a war with another seceding state, GYZHA, could not afford to fight a war on two fronts, and was forced into signing a peace settlement recognising the independence of the two new states, leading to the birth of the PARNASIAN STATES.

Ayad is known in across the SEA OF ORRIDA and the INNER SEA for its matriarchal society, which emerged through contact and trade with Raongen and its much older matrilineal society since the first EZASUHI⁽²⁾ settlers arrived in the region in 3133 RM. Today, young girls who come of age have their pick of men to bed and take multiple partners. Should these relations lead to childbirth, the mother and her family take care of it. Fathers play no role in the upbringing of their direct offspring, but do help raise their relatives' children. Due to the nature of child rearing in Ayad, mothers are not burdened with the sole responsibility of raising children, allowing them to attain positions and ranks of importance in Ayadin culture. Indeed, the elected Monarch of Ayad is traditionally a queen. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

2. Set. Major coastal city in Ayad^(1.), at the east of the delta of the river DOROPHONOS with a proud naval history. (Pop. c. 119,000).

AYALA: Geo. Mountain in the west of NAARETH, forming a border with the nation of SUOR.

AYAMUR: Set. City in the c north west of JURRAS^(2.), which alongside its twin, AYAMUR, flank the eastern bank of the river EBULLANAS (Pop. c. 63,000).

AYANA: Geo. One of many small mountains forming a part of the expansive MENEFIR Mountain chain in the south east of WESTERN MENISCEA, dominating the north east of LANTUA, and serving as a border between it and south east AURUM⁽²⁾.

AYAQIAH: Set. Small city in the east of ZHARIAH(2.) (Pop. c. 16,800).

AYATRA: Rvr. River in the west of THE VORANDINE, flowing south west for 340-miles from sources in the IDREGAN Massif and ZYCHE badlands, before meeting the coast at the BAY OF NURCYA.

AYDA: 1. Sea. Bay in the south west of the SEA OF DANAEL, close to the border between SAGITTARIA and EREBETH.

2. Set. Small fortified city in the north of EREBETH, and main wine-producer in the region of NUCTEMERA. Its harbours trad wine across the west of THE INNER SEA (Pop. c. 16,500).

AYIRIT: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the north of the PARTHISAN colony of ABDAKROS^(1.) on the island of IRUGNA^(1.).

AYULA: Ser. Plains-settlement in the east of TETHYSIA. The region is renowned across EASTERN LLACHATUL for its herds of DHEEZAN (Pop. c. 14,500).

AZADAM: Set. eastern-most of ATARAXIA'S major cities, 95-miles from the border with SKAROSIAN territories south of the BLACK MOUNTAIN. The city is heavily fortified and forms a part of the RED ROUTE, and its troops patrol the routes' passage north, where it crosses the border into Skaros (Pop. c. 78,300).

AZAGH: Geo. Plains to the east of the river TENASAAR along the border with HOLOLACH^(I.) and the MULL CITY-STATES. The plains end in a shallow cliff that forms part of the low canyon that flanks the river for 120-miles.

AZAH: Set. Coastal settlement in the north east of HARITH, in the north east of EASTERN LLACHATUL, named after the OTHERWORLDER AZAHRIA on whose final tomb the settlement is said to have been built. It was one of the first settlements to be founded (in 3605 RM) following the region's independence, and became notable for its many iron mines and its STEELSAGES, though as the regions' mines gave less bounty, the city was allowed to dwindle in size (Pop. c. 1,200).

AZAHAR: His. Ntn. Ancient FOURTH AGE empire that dominated the region around the BAND Mountains. And the SEA OF ADUM in the north of LLACHATUL. See Vol III: Extinct States.

AZAHARI: Lan. Language spoken by people around the BAND Mountains and the SEA OF AZUM, including CISNERIA, MASSALAR, ALAM BETHYL and KOLCHIS.

Though it takes the name of the FOURTH AGE empire of AZAHAR, whose culture was pillaged by early FIFTH AGE nations of the region, the language itself has evolved enough from its roots (referred to as ANCIENT AZAHARI by scholars) so as to be considered a different language.

Azahari has found its way into many ALMAGESTI dialects, though these are considered regional colloquialisms. See Vol II: Languages.

AZAHARI, ANCIENT: Lan. Language spoken by the FOURTH AGE empire of AZAHAR, whose culture was later pillaged by early FIFTH AGE nations of the region, which would later become CISNERIA, MASSALAR, ALAM BETHYL and KOLCHIS. It is the root of modern AZAHARI. See Vol II: Languages.

AZAHATHAN: Rui. One of many ancient gigantic tree stumps, situated in the south east of CISNERIA. The stump has a circumference of some 300-ft. and once formed part of an ancient forest that is thought to have been cut down by ancient industries in the FOURTH AGE.

Early in the FIFTH AGE the stump was hollowed out, and dwellings were built within it, forming the basis of a short-lived culture that died out by around 400 RM. The culture left no written records so little is known of it but is thought to have ranged from the north of present-day ATARAXIA into $\underline{ALAM\ BETHYL}$ and is known amongst $\underline{KORACHANI}$ historians only as the $\underline{TREE-DWELLERS}.$

AZAHRIA: Oth. OTHERWORLDER whose final tomb is in the south of TETHYSIA, atop which the settlement of AZAH is situated.

AZAKKAL: 1. Geo. Massif in the north of LLACHATUL, forming the north eastern-most part of the NARAHASAPHAEL Mountains, and serving as the northern border of ALAM BETHYL and the north east of GNOTH. It is home to many lose tribes within the CALLOW HORDES.

2. Rui. Ruins to the north east of the NARAHASAPHAEL Mountains in the north of LLACHATUL, at the edge of the WHITE SHEET. The region was settled throughout ELYDEN'S history, and its most recent incarnation was as a fortress built over the ruins of a FOURTH AGE temple; which in turn stood over a THIRD AGE cairn and a SECOND AGE offering pit, which GNOTHI legends claim was originally the location where the DEMIURGE IALDABAOTH was injured in battle, its blood spilling on the ground.

On that spot was its creativity made manifest – the place has forevermore been a link between the material and Ialdabaoth's memories and DREAMS, and is sought by those SHAPERS who know of the region's lore, though the inhospitable climate and treacherous terrain has made it difficult to find its location.

AZAKETIST: Sct. Coastal settlement in the east of TETHYSIA, in the region of FERATORA, overlooking the SEA OF TRILLOR. Its present-day population is largely descended from the freed prisoners captured by vessels acting on behalf of the MYMEREAN ACCORDS between 2996 – 3523 RM, at which point Tethysia left the accords (Pop. c. 40,000).

AZALASH: Rvr. Seasonal river in the c of the DESOLATION OF ASTUDAN and the major source of the seasonal endorheic lake TOSEFA^(1,). It flows for over 700-miles from sources in the OREXTAR region in SHOTHA. In some years the river flow is not enough to create the lake and the river just peters out in the c of the Desolation.

AZALIOSH IYEDR III: (B. 3863 RM) Pol. Current ruler of MIHARAST, and, by default, the UMBRA SOKHAR. Like his predecessors he makes use of ATRAMENTAL elixirs and SHAPING to prolong his life.

AZAM: Sea. Sea forming the south western-most part of the SEA OF TARAMAR, dividing JURRAS^(2.) in the west from VAALK and ALLASAN in the east. The clean waters of the KARIBAT, LISSA and the RAANA flow into it, making its waters amongst the most affluent of THE INNER SEA.

AZARAOTA: also 'the Dragon'. Ast. Con. Constellation in the NORTHERN
HEMISPHERE. Its name is a corruption of the word Ashterath, which itself is synonymous with the DRACONIC DEMIURGE of ancient history See Vol II: Constellations.

AZARIA: Geo. Island off the north western coast of SAMMAEA, west of the KORACHANI colony of TAVVARDA.

AZAYEL: Lak. Lake in the c west of NÁRTHEL, along the course of the river LOBKIR

AZAZEM: Dem. 'Azazemi'. Ntn. A vassal nation located south of CENTRAL LLACHATUL, north of the INNER SEA in the coastal basin south of the CHACTHORNYS Mountains, in what was once a region of virgin woodland that was cut down during the FOURTH AGE to make way for farmland. It remains one of the major producers of food in the INNER SEA REGION, with this production geared towards DROSS manufacture.

Its people are descended from a mix of ancient LASCAR⁽²⁾ and Korachani bloodlines and today are known for their sallow skin and dark hair. Traditionally they burnt their dead and worshipped the land, like their neighbours to the north, and were ruled by sacrosanct monarchs from the BASILEID DYNASTY, whose descendants became the PATRICIAN HOUSES of Azazem.

Azazem was the first nation to be taken by the fledgeling KORACHANI EMPIRE, back in 11 RM, though it had been embroiled in Korachani politics for the past decade, allying itself with the rising giant in –1 RM. Imperial conflict with LAASKHA escalated into warfare in 7 RM. Trade pacts with the empire forced Azazem to join the war, which lasted for 8 years, ending with the defeat of Laaskha and its occupation. In 11 RM the Basileid Dynasty became vassals of Korachan, ruling as regents.

It was once a fertile place, soon becoming known as the GARDEN OF KORACHAN after its many productive farmlands. It grew wealthy from its food trade and the export of other resources, which allowed it to become a hub of art and culture and a centre for the so-called $\underline{DEMIURGE}$ RENAISSANCE between c. 1540 – 1620 RM.

The RENAISSANCE CRUSADES that dominated the Korachani empire between c. 1050-1100 RM against the growing art movement that had brought the DEMIURGES back into public consciousness affected many Azazemi cities, with many creators killed and priceless works of art destroyed.

The monarchy was abolished in 999 RM, replaced with Archpatrician governors with Korachani ancestry, many of which came from the powerful ATROPI HOUSES, who pioneered the cost-effective manufacture of dross, which is now used to keep the huge imperial population of the empire fed.

After many centuries of farming the soil of Azazem was leeched of its nutrients, and it was left a wasteland by c. 1500 RM, its once beautiful fields only capable of supporting withered crops that were of little use other than as fodder or in the dross industry.

In 2976 RM the nation was gripped by a brutal civil war in which a demagogic figure known as the Pariah-KING, turned half the populace of Azazem and regiments of the imperial army against Korachan, in a war that would grip the nation for three years that would shatter Azazem. Though Korachan emerged victorious, it was a pyrrhic victory that left the nation in ruins, its population and much of its eastern cities destroyed. After the war, Korachan secured trade and business in the area by giving away land to patricians, which ensured the slow yet steady repopulation of the nation. The nation now exists in as a feudal vassal of the greater empire, with lands divided amongst Patrician Houses, who in turn divide the land amongst vassals, who work them for them. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

AZAZEMI: His. Lan. Now-extinct language that was emerging from the earlier LASCAR⁽⁴⁾ tongue in what is now the west of AZAZEM around 4,000-years ago at a time when the KORACHANI EMPIRE was expanding and subjugating its neighbours. It was quelled by the Korachani advance, and was rapidly forgotten, replaced by KORACHANI.

Of interest is the language isolate that is found to the south west of AZAZEM, known as KARAFFARI, which survives to this day. See Vol II: Languages.

AZAZEMI UNDERWORLD: Geo. A vast network of caverns in central AZAZEM that have been invaded by imperial industry; manufactories and dross farms built within them to take advantage of the many fast-moving river that existed underground. Much of the underworld was industrialised, the few natural areas remaining cut off from the surface.

AZAZEMI WINE: see DROSS WINE.

AZAZEMICHAN: Rui. Ruined city in the far north east of OBLEVIS in the east of MENISCEA. It was founded in c. 980 RM during the rule of the DESPOSYNI DYNASTY and was named after the nation of AZAZEM. It was abandoned towards the end of the Dynasty's rule in c. 2900 RM as sea levels left it landlocked, and it was allowed to fall into ruin after that and it lies largely ignored today, its old dockyards lying rusted.

AZEKH: Set. City in the c north west of KARAKHAS (Pop. c. 17,500).z

AZER: 1. His. Ntn. Late THIRD AGE city-kingdom (near what is now ABIMOLOCH in PARTHIS) that was the centre of an urbane people; the most direct of HUMAN descendants of the tribe of the DEMIURGE AVRAHAM, untouched by contact with any other MORTAL PEOPLES. No record of its demise exists, though it is believed to have been destroyed by its own vices, with its people scattering across Elyden during the FADING following the Third Age and the early FOURTH AGE.

2. m. Mys. His. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, the divinely-born SCION of the DEMIURGE AVRAHAM, born through divine will with no mother. He was sent to the people of AZER^(1.) in the form of a divine stone, as a guide to steer them away from their self-destructive path. The stone was discarded by the people of Azer, who did not understand its meaning. Angered by their actions, Avraham cast his gaze upon the stone, evoking the great PILLAR OF FLAME (AZORA) from which his son was born complete in MORTAL form. The people of Azer named the messenger after their city and came to worship him above the Demiurge Avraham, leading to the Demiurge's decline. The ideals of Azer became corrupted by the later Fourth Age PHILOSOPHER-KINGS of the land, leading to their eventual demise.

Though some accounts claim he was chaste, others claim that he bore dozens of children with the AZERITES, whose own descendants would go on to populate the PARTHISAN PENINSULA.

He remains a cultural hero to this day, originally seen as the one who enlightened the ancestors of Parthis, allowing them to throw off shackles to the Demiurge Avraham, paving the way for the region's secularism. He is honoured today in the coming-of-age ritual known as the DITARTHA.

The MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN names him as one half of the divisive MOTHER AND FATHER OF CREATION prophecy, with the other being the scion HAVELRA, who he killed during a chance meeting. He later sought out DURUTHILHOTEP (her father) to whom he confessed his crime, asking for absolution. Duruthilhotep, distraught, told him that he could not. Azer killed himself in front of the Demiurge, initiating a war between the tribes of Duruthilhotep and Avraham, with the latter believing that Duruthilhotep had killed Azer. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

- AZERITES: 1. Also 'Celebrants of the Flame'. Mys. His. In the ancient history of what is now PARTHIS, the Azerites were the people of the THIRD AGE city-kingdom of AZER^(1,). They were gifted a divine stone by the DEMIURGE AVRAHAM in honour of their devotion to him, but they discarded the stone into a pit thinking it evil. Angered by this, Avraham cast his gaze upon the stone, evoking a great PILLAR OF FLAME (AZORA) from which his son AZER^(2,) was born. The people of Azer came to worship the SCION Azer in disregard of their rulers' commands, eventually forsaking Avraham in favour of Azer.
 - 2. O_{TZ} . In more recent times, the word is used in reference to the adherents to the DOCTRINES OF AVRAHAM.
- AZHAO: Geo. Ridge serving as a border between the south east of IZABAL^(1,) and the north west of EREBETH.
- AZHDA: Sea. Sea along the western coast of the MYMEREAN SEA, off the south eastern coast of HARITH. Beaches along this sea are home to many AZHDARCHS.
- AZHDAHAK: Set. Major coastal conurbation in the south of HARITH, built around the mouth of the river AUDHUMLA in the AZHDA SEA. It is very wealthy, and controls most trade crossing the SEA OF HASOTLEPH (Pop. c. 1.250.000).
- AZHDARCH: Fau. Large winged reptilian creature, similar in appearance and lifestyle to a stork. Though it spends much of its life on the ground as a quadruped, it can unfold its large forelimbs (wings) for flight, where it can glide under the force of strong costal winds. It is common along the MYMEREAN coast as well as the south eastern coast of SAMMAEA, and flocks of up to a few dozen of the creature can be seen seasonally crossing ELYDEN, chasing warm climates. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.
- AZGALAR: Fau. Native name for the BEAST OF ARIMASPI.
- AZGOR: Set. City in the c south of Tartak, noted for the noticeable White League presence there. Azgor is truly a city of the League, with many colleges and recruiting grounds; with many relatives and descendants of martyred knights living there. It forms part of the Salt Road, and its Free Companions are a common sight along the traderoute (Pop. c. 85,000).
- AZI'IA: Set. Settlement in the east of \underline{VAALK} , overlooking the \underline{SEA} OF \underline{NUTHEN} (Pop. c. 16,000).
- AZOR: 1. His. Ntn. Ancient FOURTH AGE city-state in the extant south east of PARTHIS, built on the ruins of the far more ancient city of AZER⁽¹⁾. It rose in c. –2900 RM and was ruled by a caste of philosophers (Known as PHILOSOPHER-KINGS) who rediscovered the old AZERITE religion and the PILLAR OF FLAME.
 - 2. His. Set. More recently, a FIFTH AGE city built on the ruins of the older FOURTH AGE ruin after which it is named. The city became prosperous and by 100 RM had become one of the most powerful trade-cities on the southern coast of THE INNER SEA. It was chief amongst PARTHISAN resistors to the expansion of the KORACHANI EMPIRE into its lands, but was besieged in 379 RM, and burnt to the ground the next year, its population killed or enslaved, and the earth salted.

The city was never rebuilt, but a monument, known today as the PEOPLE'S NEEDLE, was built atop its ruin to celebrate its bravery. What

- scattered pilgrims of the old AZERITE^(2.) religion remain still visit the place, which has become a place of religious importance to them.
- AZORA: 1. Also 'the Pillar of Flame'. Sup. Leg. A fiery pillar from which the scion AZER is said to have appeared fully-formed, burning for millennia, slowly solidifying into a crimson-tinted pillar of obsidian, standing on what is now the south east of PARTHIS.

As of 4003 RM the pillar has been observed to have rekindled, with its interior slowly glowing as though it has become molten, with parts of its surface spontaneously catching fire. The significance of this is unknown though mythographers are studying the object. See Vol IV: the Mythologia Elvden.

- 2. Reg. Org. In an ancient religion the name given to the PHILOSOPHER-KING'S cult that appeared in the aforementioned region, following the appearance of AZOR over the ruins of AZER.
- AZOSA: Set. City in the ancient state of NAAL, that would in c. 2391 RM become known as AZOSAOTH.
- AZOSAOTH: 1. His. Rel. Dei. Ancient FIFTH AGE pantheon of deities, worshipped in the south east of the present-day TARAHID ANNEXES, in the eponymous city-state⁽²⁾. The religions and its pantheon waned as PARTHISAN influence in the region increased.
 - 2. Dem 'Azosaothi'. Set. City-state in the south east of the present-day TARAHID ANNEXES that emerged from the settlement of AZOSA in 2391 RM. The region fragmented into various city-states that over the ensuing years were absorbed by PARTHIS. By c. 2900 RM the ruins of Azosaoth had been resettled, becoming the city of VULKA.

Its people were very religious and it was ruled by a priestly caste who worshipped the pantheon of gods that lent their name to the city-state^(1.).

- AZOTH: Set. Major city in the c south of GNOTH. It is a centre of all the major ascetic schools, and also forms a major stop along THE WAY traderoute (Pop. c. 95,000).
- AZOV: Set. Small fortified city in the north of LAASKHA, in control of five separate gold mines outside of its main walls, all of which are heavily guarded. The city rose in response to the mining and its sole purpose it to serve the many labourers and slaves in their work in the quarries. The city is also home to a large military academy, where Laaskhan military leaders are trained.
 - It forms part of the RED ROUTE, and maintains banks where merchants can trade goods for gold bullion (Pop. c. 16,000).
- AZRIAR: Rui. Petrified city in IAISHA, in the north of LLACHATUL. The once-thriving city, attributed to the DEMIURGE ALLAISHADA and her children, is subject to rumours that mummified ILLIDRAEN could be found in the ruins, though recent explorers have returned from the region empty-handed.
- AZZANA: Geo. Island 250-miles off the northern coast of the SULTANATE OF ABACARDAT. It is the largest island of the SUEZHUNI island-chain.
- AZZAR: Gam. Dice game common in nations surrounding the DARK SEA, though to have originated in the NATHI EMPIRE. It is most common in NARTHEL and VENTHIR See Vol II: Games and Pastimes of Elyden.
- AZZARA: f. Myt. His. Per. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, a 2nd generation SCION and daughter of the scion KHAR'ILLAE. One of triplets (the others being CHYLE and RESH), she is only mentioned in passing once in the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN, leading some mythographers to believe the birth was apocryphal or misattributed. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.
- AZZERIS: Set. Major coastal city in the north west of OBLEVIS and major stop along the BROKERS' ROAD trade route (Pop. c. 132,000).
- AZZI: Set. Major metropolitan area in the east of NAARETH, overlooking the Iapetan Sea. It is likely the Naarethi city with the most cultural differences between men and women most men are regarded as slaves, and perform manual labour in a feudal system where they are owned by their employers, with a chance of purchasing their freedom, not dissimilar to the WORK-SLAVES of KORACHAN (Pop. c. 1,408,000).
- AZZII: Set. southern-most of the three principalities of the CITY OF ALMAGEST. It was one of the three original city-states (the others being EPHEMERIS and Almagest itself) that would converge early in the FIFTH AGE, becoming the city of Almagest as we know it today.

B

BA'AKOB: Geo. Plains in the c of SUMA'YA, stretching into the far north east of N'RAKH. The plains are dry and home to much wildlife though parts of them suffer from mild ATRAMENTAL TAINT and have few resources of note, so are relatively undisturbed. The plains were once a hub of industry and civilisation though are today peppered with the ruins of spent mines and abandoned settlements, following the retreat of KORACHAN from the region centuries ago.

BA'ANTAL: 1. Geo. Mountain in the north east of BA'AKH, named after an ancient hero said to be buried there. The mountain is old and rounded and bears signs of ancient use though what resources it once held are long gone.

2. Geo. Hills north of the above region, and centre of KORACHANI industry in BA'AKH before the region was abandoned in 3097 RM. The ruins of many quarries, mills and mines can be found here, as well as disused SIPHON ENGINES that lie silent, their pipelines destroyed.

BA'AKH: Dem. 'Ba'akhi'. Ntm. Nation in the north of SAMMAEA to the west of the DAARKEN GULF, to the east of LIDEA and north of N'RAKH.

The nation emerged in -30 RM following the rise to power of Telraasi mystics – shapers who studied the Atramenta so that they could better oppose it – who united the predecessor nations of Dhea and Dhamatea (the latter of which had been devastated by the Atramenta), with the Atramentist champion Akh becoming their leader. His martyrdom the next year to Atramental taint solidified the new nation led to the unification of Dhea and Dhamatea into Ba'akh (named in his honour), though as his death brought a new semblance of government to the region, so would it eventually lead to its fragmentation. After his death, Ba'akh was divided amongst his 17 lieutenants, and remained so until 318 RM, when the Telraasi council began to wane. In 408 RM they were supplanted by the Merchant-Kings, who were in turn deposed in 634 RM, with the Korachani empire's arrival in Ba'akh.

Ba'akh was the birthplace of the SIPHON ENGINES that have become synonymous with the KORACHANI EMPIRE and during the first millennium of Korachani rule its cities, particularly ORESS and BAALBETH became incredibly wealthy, their TECHNARCANISTS and ATRAMENTISTS pioneers in the field. Though the death of ELYDEN led to the growing instability of the siphon engines and their increasing demands of sacrificial siphons and SOUL-PEARLS led to their downfall, and the diminishing of its cities.

The nation was left to the DOMNITORS in 2732 RM and finally abandoned in 3103 RM, during which much of its northern territories were taken by SARASTRO as part of the SARASTROAN SANCTION, with the south falling to the tyrants of SUMA'YA.

BA'AKH, still a vassal of Sarastro, saw the chaos of the escalating WAR OF SUNDERING (which started with Venthir declaring war on Sarastro), as an opportunity to throw off its shackles. After months of planning, it declared its intentions on the 5th of LIVIALEN 3704 RM, a move that contributed to the SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE, though it was later retaken by Sarastro on the 13th of SATAVALEN the same year, after which its parent state began pushing for new Atramental industries there. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

BA'AKH, RAPE OF: Mil. Pol. His. The massacre of the BA'AKHI people during the BA'AKHI WAR FOR INDEPENDENCE by the armies of IO. Ba'akh had declared its independence from SARASTRO on the 5th of LIVIALEN 3704 RM. KORACHAN and Sarastro responded by blockading its harbours on the 18th of LIVIALEN, with troops landing soon after to reinstate imperial law.

The INNER SEA REGION was thrown into disarray the next month with the destruction of THE INDEFATIGABLE, bringing Korachan and Sarastro to war with each other, causing them to forget about the chaos in Ba'akh. For the next five months, Ba'akh became a war-torn land, with battles fought between three sides — Sarastro and its allies, Korachan and its vassals, and between them, the Ba'akhi insurrectionists. Its ports were being bombarded and its limited armies were losing against its much more powerful enemies.

By Nihavalen, Sarastroan and Ionic had gained the upper hand, and were rampaging across Ba'akh, fending off Korachani attacks in the north as they swept across Ba'akh slaughtering its people and razing settlements. Tens of thousands were taken back to Sarastro as slaves and many more were put to death in great pyres, the smoke of which could be seen from miles away, leaving the beleaguered nation greatly depopulated and unable to defend itself.

Despite the death and destruction, Ba'akhi leaders refused to capitulate, and were eventually deposed by their own people on the 6th of SATAVALEN, after which Sarastroan Vassalage soon followed. This ended the war, after which Ba'akh would become little more than a fortress and staging post to Sarastro, the massacre of its people at the hands of Sarastroan soldiers ignored.

BA'AKHI: Lan. Language spoken in BA'AKH that emerged from the earlier SUTHI language. The language was corrupted by KORACHANI during over 2,000-years of colonialism and is now a mix of the two. See Vol II: Languages.

BA'AKHI RANGERS, ORDER OF: Int. Law. Org. Policing Force in BA'AKH founded in the city of ASISH in 3652 RM to stymy the growing lawlessness in the region. It is largely funded by donations, and rangers enter service voluntarily and earn citizenship after 7 years of service.

They are tasked with patrolling the hinterlands of Ba'akh against banditry and the protection rackets that gad become common, and also help to maintain the UMBRA pipelines and defend them against sabotage and theft. They remain operative today and have grown into a large institution with various branches, and individual rangers mounted atop MONITORS⁽²⁾ are a ubiquitous sight across the nation.

BA'AKHI WAR FOR INDEPENDENCE: Mil. His. A historical conflict that emerged from the earlier VENTHIRI/SARASTROAN WAR and which directly led to KORACHAN joining the conflict, beginning the WAR OF SUNDERING.

Seeing the chaos of the Venthiri/Sarastroan War, BA'AKH declared its independence from SARASTRO (which had been its parent state since the SARASTROAN SANCTION in 3103 RM) and began ejecting its politicians governors from its cities starting on the 5th of LIVIALEN 3704 RM. Korachan, until then forced into inaction during the Venthiri/Sarastroan War due to various defence treaties, was able to act, and began moving forces into Ba'akh alongside Sarastroan forces.

By the end of the month most Ba'akhi coastal cities were the targets of blockages and trade sanctions, which did little to dissuade the Ba'akhi uprisings, which led to Korachani and Sarastroan forces invading.

On the 8th of RACHALEN, Ba'akhi forces seized the Korachani ship THE INDOMITABLE, dragging Korachan into conflict with Sarastro and making Ba'akh an enemy of both. Diplomatic relations across the INNER SEA REGION collapsed, leading to the onset of the War of Sundering and Ba'akh becoming the site of a war on three sides.

By the 26th of NIHAVALEN, Sarastroan and IONIC armies were rampaging across Ba'akh, fending off Korachani attacks in the north and Ba'akhi resistance elsewhere. This time became known as the RAPE OF BA'AKH. Despite worsening public morale, Ba'akhi leaders refused to capitulate, and on the 6th of SATAVALEN were deposed and replaced with Sarastroan sympathisers, who spoke to Sarastroan leaders to begin the peace talks, knowing that vassalage will likely follow. Sarastro accepted the terms of vassalage on the 13th, ending the war, and began rebuilding fortifications there.

The nation had suffered greatly under the past months and its major cities had been reduced to ruins with little in the way of resources. Sarastro used it as a staging ground and a means of controlling the DAARKEN GULF.

BA'ATON: Set. Fortified city in the west of SUMA'YA, overlooking the east of N'RAKH. The city is home to a large military presence, which is responsible for patrolling the N'rakhi borders, and it forms a pivotal part of the SALT ROAD, leading into the lacer enclave of TENELOCH via trade agreements made with SIRIPHAGAN merchant-lords (Pop. c. 20,000).

BA-TO: Com. Set. Major coastal city in the south of TZALLRACH, in the BAY OF ATTAS. It's a major commercial area and has large ports, and is famed for its amphitheatre-like marketplace that predates the appearance of the city, and which was used for blood sports by NATHI colonists in the early FIFTH AGE (Pop. c. 62,000).

BAAGON: Set. Small fortified settlement in the c south of THE SURRACH, in the stone desert of THAMAAZ. Its main industry is the mining of borax, which is exported across NORTHERN SAMMAEA and beyond (Pop. c. 8.200).

BAAL: 1. Lak. Fresh-water lake in the c of BA'AKH that takes its name from the legends of ancient THYM. The waters undergo an ATRAMENTAL cycle, fluctuating between tainted and relatively clean every 10-years or so. This is attributed to the mild ATRAMENTAL CORRUPTION of the land of BAALIEL, just to the north.

- 2. Geo. Large natural sinkhole to the west of the lake of the same name. In the early days of BA'AKHI history the pit was used to dump waste UMBRA into following its extraction from the land and air by SIPHON ENGINES. Following the appearance of the KORACHANI EMPIRE in 633 RM ADUMBRAESKI loyal to the empire built extensive pipelines that pumped the umbra north to ORESS where it was processed and shipped north to other imperial cities.
- Mil. Str. Fortress in southern BA'AKH, protecting the city of BAALBETH, from SUMA'YAN attacks.
- 4. Leg. Mythological character from THYMI myth, believed to be a form of culture-hero. He was a tyrant and a perpetrator of atrocities against the foes of his people, though many of these aspects have since been forgotten.

Today he is remembered mostly in LIDEA and MHAROKK as a saviour and protector, and is often compared with the SOUTHERN PALADIN. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

BAAL DAGON: Geo. Badlands region covering around 30,000 square-miles of land in the west of BA'AKH.

BAALBEC: His. Set. Ancient name for the city of BAALBETH.

BAALBETH: Set. Large city founded in -73 RM on the ruins of the DHEAN fortress known as ALBA (when it was known as BAALBEC), in the north east of SAMMAEA, in what is now the south of BA'AKH.

Abandoned due to Atramental Corruption in c. -105 RM, a cleansing effort was begun by a secretive caste of Atramentists known as Adumbraeski in -92 RM, where the first primitive Siphon engines were constructed, leading to its purification within 2-decades and its resettlement as the city of Baalbeth in -73 RM. The many siphon engines that appeared there led to an accumulation of raw UMBRA, which began to collect outside the city. By c. 1 RM an enclosed aqueduct was constructed to allow the umbra to flow north, where it was poured into a great natural sinkhole known as Baal. By c. 100 RM pipes from other settlements, most notable BATELL were flowing into Baal also.

The city grew rapidly over the coming years, its old siphon engines replaced with more modern equivalents by the Adumbraeski, who in c. 320 RM had finally managed to reunite the 17 fractured states of BA'AKH into a whole, with Baalbeth as its capital. By the time of the KORACHANI EMPIRE'S arrival to Ba'akh in 568 RM, Baalbeth was a major influence in the region, a technologically-advanced metropolis, its Atramentists well-loved citizens whose efforts against the Atramenta marked them out as unique.

Following close to a century of war, Korachan finally conquered Ba'akh in 633 RM and appropriated Baalbeth as its own capital the next year. The Adumbraeski orders suffered a schism, with those corrupted by Korachan on one side and those persecuted by its ICONOCLASTS(2) for opposing the Atramenta on the other. Most of the latter fled the city, scattering to the hinterlands of Ba'akh and LIDEA.

Following decades of tension and small civil rebellions, Baalbeth eventually settled, with many imperial immigrants arriving there by c. 850 RM. This came before a period of Atramental instability, itself leading to the construction in 923 RM of a gigantic siphon engine known as a SIPHON MAGNA - the first of its kind in the empire and influencing no less than 50-miles in all directions, though its hunger for SOUL-PEARLS and sacrificial SIPHONS (a caste of Atramental shaper after which the siphon engines are named) lead to an insatiable hunger for those resources that characterised the city throughout its existence (eventually necessitating the use of the gigantic soul-pearl collected form the MESOCHTHON TASHATARAS that was slain in 714 RM in INTH). It rapidly become one of the cleanest and wealthiest cities in Ba'akh alongside ORESS, which led to yet more immigrants arriving there and by c. 1000 RM it was amongst the largest cities in SAMMAEA, numbering no less than a million bodies. The construction of a huge cathedral was commenced in 1103 RM, finishing finally in 1788 RM. This led to it becoming a centre of religious study as well as the hub of Atramental research it had become renowned for. The umbra collected from its siphon magna was pumped north to Oress, increasing the wealth of both cities, though its hunger of soul-pearls and siphons increased, with many expeditions and CRUSADES launched over the next centuries in the search for more.

The city diminished as the Korachani empire lost influence in the region, and as Ba'akh was abandoned to the DOMNITORS in 2732 RM the city lost its political power to RE'HAIZ, which became home to the imperial offices. Baalbeth itself was stewarded by the few remaining PATRICIAN HOUSES until the empire's complete abandonment of the region in 3097 RM. By then the empire has lost the wealth and resources to maintain the great Siphon engines of Baalbeth and the Atramenta began its encroachment of the city once more, leaving it crippled, its population greatly diminished; something that would continue well past the Domnitors abandonment of Ba'akh.

Baalbeth fell to the armies of SUMA'YA in 3311 RM, and though it managed to restore its great Siphon engine to working strength, it could not sustain the numbers of sacrificial siphons required to keep it working at full strength, denying Baalbeth the chance to grow again. The city was recaptured at great cost by the armies of Sarastro and remains in its hand, heavily guarded from Suma'yan attack. Its Siphon engines have been restored and it is a major producer of umbra, which is once-again pumped north to Oress. Throughout this it has remained a stop along the passage of the Shadow March as well as the Salt Road (Pop. c. 155,000).

BAALBETH, ORDER OF: Mil. Org. a knightly order founded in BA'AKH in 446 RM, following the fall of the Telraasi government there in 408 RM. The MERCHANT-KINGS that rose in their place placed little faith in Telraasi wisdom, which admonished use of ATRAMENTAL substances, and traded UMBRA and UMBRISKA with other nations, most notably HOAMM. The ORDER OF BAALBETH was created by the descendants of Telraasi members who were exiled by the Merchant-kings, and established a fortress in the ancient hold in the LION'S MAW in the far north east of Ba'akh, from where they harassed the flourishing umbra trade north. They survived for roughly 2-centuries, though were hunted by the ICONOCLASTS (2.) and other imperial groups following KORACHAN'S conquering of Ba'akh in 634 RM.

By c. 650 RM they had been largely culled, their fortress in the Lion's Maw destroyed, though the few who remained fled Ba'akh with the exiled members of the Telraas, where they settled a plateau in the northern SHIBOTHA Mountain, establishing the fortress of Telraasa in c. 675 RM. By c. 1100 RM the Order of Baalbeth had become an esoteric institution, its members waning to little more than a few dozen scholars who eschewed the study of the Atramenta in favour of Firmamental research, though they became the subject of LIDEAN attacks in c. 1300 RM, after which their fortress fell into disuse in c. 1450 RM.

BAALIEL: Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTALLY-CORRUPTED region along the border between BA'AKH and SUMA'YA. The region goes through a 10-year cycle, waning and waxing in corruption. The many siphon engines in the nearby city of BAALBETH helps keep this ATRAMENTAL cycle in check.

BAALSHEBETH: Rel. Dei. Common god in the east of THE SURRACH.
Little is known of it outside of the region as its worshippers are insular and do not share their cults' secrets freely. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

BAARHA: Set. Coastal settlement in the south east of LAASKHA. It originated as a roadside inn and the ancient milestone that it was built against remains there to this day; its old markers chiselled off centuries ago.

The earth surrounding the settlement is very salty and little vegetation grows there, restricting the diet of its people to seafood and aquatic vegetables such as samphire (Pop. c. 4,300).

BAARIN: Rui. Ruined city in the centre of LAASKHA. The city was prosperous, and was a crossroads of trade and culture, but it was abandoned in c. 3500 RM, following the spread of the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region of BETHAL. Its people fled to surrounding cities, largely the city of NATHHAL in the north, and the region of KAARAFFAR in the south.

BAASAKHYN: Geo. Cool plains in the north of LAASKHA, known for sparse tree-cover leading to the rocky terrain of the LAASATHEA.

BAATA: His. Set. Historical city in the c of BAATAN^(1.). It emerged as an independent state in 3119 RM after a plague devastated the north of Ahrishen, and eventually became the capital city of Baatan, with its name changing naturally in c. 3400 RM.

BAATAN: 1. Dem. 'Baatani'. Ntn. Nestled between the mountain ranges that divide the ARESHI^(L) Plains from the highlands of TEMUJA in the east of CENTRAL LLACHATUL, Bataan is of a cool temperate climate with relatively dry continental weather.

Baatan emerged from the city of BAATA during a time of plague that swept east across AHRISHEN between 3117 and 3120 RM, leaving the region devastated. The city, which had existed as an independent city-state in the far north of VIRAHAN since around 2700 RM, had grown insular during the time of the plague, and emerged only after Virahan had gained its independence from Ahrishen in 3119 RM, following decades of petitions to the capital in MAHSERTH. Baata had, through the efforts of Virahan, also gained independence, but rather than pool its resources with the larger entity, it chose to remain an independent entity. Over the next centuries it expanded north into the DUIARHI Mountains, founding new settlements and assimilating other small frontier settlements, while remaining an ally of Virahan and TEMUJA, the latter of which it has close cultural ties with.

Its people are largely insular and owe more culturally to Temuja than to Ahrishen, as evidenced by their main language, though most of its people are descended from a mix of Areshi natives, who once populated the region of extant Ahrishen in the early years of the FIFTH AGE; and KHUDARI migrants, who are the ancestors of Temujans.

Today Baatan acts as a vital link in the trade-route that is the GREAT ROAD and despite its small size, its merchants are well known in Central Llachatul. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

2. Pol. Set. Capital of the above nation^(1,) that emerged from the earlier city of BAATA. It controls trade between AHRISHEN and VIRAHAN, and TEMUJA, forming an important part of the GREAT ROAD trade-route, where it sees many traders and caravans from both nations crossing its borders. As a result, its mercantile district is well-developed and is very lively, with many taverns, inns and brothels remaining open all day (Pop. c. 708,000).

BAATANISH: Lan. Language spoken in BAATAN, which emerged from AHRISHENI, though which, following its independence in 3117 RM, adapted steadily more from its ancient KHUDARAN culture and language, and today it is more similar to extant TEMUJIN than its Ahrisheni roots.

It developed concurrently with VIRAHANI, though has diverged somewhat since then, taking on even from its neighbour to the north, TEMUJA. See Vol II: Languages.

BAATAR: Rnk. Title (synonymous with the BAGHATUR of AHRISHEN and SAUA, and likely etymologically-linked) bestowed upon prominent FIRMAMENTAL SHAPERS in TEMUJAN culture. The last Baatar was Roekh the Seer, and he was appointed in 3776 RM. As the ONÉSIMUS slowly departed Temuja in the decades following THE WITCH WARS, the title lost favour and fell into disuse.

BAATRA: Set. Farming settlement in the c south of LAASKHA, located in the region of KAARAFFAR. It is a relatively recent settlement, having been founded in c. 3310 RM by settlers and exiles from other settlements, who turned to agriculture centuries later, in c. 3680 RM, following the ecological wasting of farmlands elsewhere in Laaskha (Pop. c. 7,200).

BAAYN: Pol. Sct. Capital city of LAASKHA, known for its expansive artificial harbours and ports that serve the northern coast of THE INNER SEA. It is home to a large CHAPTER (2) of the WHITE LEAGUE and is also a major stop along the SHADOW MARCH and has many hostels, roadhouses, and shrines that cater to PETITIONERS OF THE MACHINE that cross its borders, with many opportunists and hucksters selling CATHADESMIN and false relics to gullible helots and pilgrims press-ganged into marching the holy road.

The region surrounding the city is peppered with expansive MERILL ruins exposed by waning sea levels, with the most impressive being the ancient city of VELQOOM (Pop. c. 2,950,000).

BAAYN, TREATY OF: Pol. His. Mutual defence treaty signed between the KORACHANI client nations of AZAZEM, LAASKHA and VAALTHA on the 18th of RACHALEN in response to Korachan joining the VENTHIRI/SARASTRO WAR following the BA'AKHI commandeering of THE INDEFATIGABLE, which ultimately started the WAR OF SUNDERING.

Though already tied together in a peace treaty under Korachani vassalage, the Treaty of Baayn (named after the city of BAAYN, where the treaty was signed) was a symbolic gesture of the cultural link the three nations shared, solidifying their loyalty towards the empire. Together the three nations appointed ARCHPATRICIAN-general OLYMARIUS FARGIA as supreme general of their armies.

The treaty outlived the War of Sundering, though was ultimately rendered null buy the SARASTROAN annexation of Vaaltha in 3737 RM.

BA-BILU: His. Rel. Dei. Ancient deity native to the c of SAMMAEA. Grotesque idols dedicated to the deity can be found in the WASTES OF SPHYRNIDONTIS and the west of HOGGOTHA ISZ to this day. Worship of the deity is thought to have been common in the region in the middle FOURTH AGE, when the DEMIURGES had diminished into obscurity.

BAB ABELA: Set. Settlement in far south of the territories of ETHISTONITH in RHINOCOLOURA, along the north eastern shore of lake AKASM. It has no land routes linking it to the rest of the nation though maintains a water route via SOLOM, across the river SHIBBOLETH^(3.), as well as the Pnessian settlement of SCORIO (Pop. c. 5,000).

BAB ARAKA: Sect. Small city in the c-south east of the territories of ETHISTONITH in RHINOCOLOURA. It is a major source of granite in the region (Pop. c. 14,000).

- BAB DETHABA: Set. Small city in the c south of the territories of ETHISTONITH in RHINOCOLOURA, to the west of the KADDRAS Mountains. It is a major breeder of camels that are used in trade caravans in the region (Pop. c. 16,500).
- BAB HEBIB: Set. City in the north west of the territories of ETHISTONITH in RHINOCOLOURA. Shepherds taking their flocks in the surrounding hills claim that SERAPIS are preying on their flocks, and the ruling council is trying to scour the lands to rid them of the elusive predators to little effect so far (Pop. c. 45,000).
- BAB SHEKH: Set. Settlement in the c-south east of the territories of ETHISTONITH in RHINOCOLOURA. It is a major source of granite in the region (Pop. c. 5,500).
- BABAEA: Set. Small city in the south east of RHINOCOLOURA, along the course of the river DAWWAN. It is an agricultural centre, exploiting the seasonal inundation of the river, growing crops as diverse as sesame and peanuts along the alluvial soils for miles north and south of its boundaries (Pop. c. 16,000).
- BABAEA, LIBRARY OF: Edu. Str. Fort-like mud-brick college in the far south of RHINOCOLOURA, in what was the state of HAZOR when it was constructed in c. 2640 RM. It is an antiquated building and were it not for yearly renovations that patch up weather damage to the mud-walls, it would disappear within decades. Inside, scholars are taught the old oral traditions of the region, as well as the ATRAMENTAL history of the area, particularly the UMBRA SOKHAR.
- BABAK: Set. City in the c of the VESPERTINE LEAGUE. It is famed for being the repository of the CITRINE MANUSCRIPTS, which are kept behind lock and key in its fortified library. The manuscripts are only available to view via appointment, though researchers hoping to examine them must agree to be accompanied by guards and curators at all times whilst working (Pop. c. 55,000).
- BABALAS: Set. Settlement in the west of the PARTHISAN colony of ABDAKROS^(1.) on the island of IRUGNA^(1.). Its main industry is copper mining, which has devastated the surrounding hills, bringing chemical overspill to the city, which has left many of its people sickened (Pop. c. 8,200).
- BABAR: Soc. Rnk. Elders in SARASTRO who are often found as court advisors in larger cities or ruling elders of smaller settlements.
- BABEKH: Set. Small city in the c of the territories of ETHISTONITH in RHINOCOLOURA, along the course of the river ABBEN. It is known for its peanut and chickpea cultivation (Pop. c. 13,000).
- BABI: Set. Rural settlement in the north east of the tribe of AUEREN in the far north of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. It is situated along a trade-route north into SARASTRO and is more open to foreigners than most other Mulcibian cities (Pop. c. 6,000).
- BABOUL: Set. Settlement in the north west of TZALLRACH, along the course of the river KEKET. It was founded by outcasts in c. 3430 RM and its people are hard workers, though suspicious of outsiders, particularly government officials, such as tax collectors (Pop. c. 5,000).
- BABULA: Int. Geo. Strange rise in the otherwise flat-expanse of SEDOS in the SHEDAMMA region of SOUTHERN SAMMAEA. The area is thought to be all that is left of the mythic BRIDGE OF ETERNITIES, built in prehistory by the DEMIURGES and MORTAL PEOPLES to try and reach a fabled 'creator'.
- BACALUSIA: 1. Geo. Region in the SHAAT LOTHA region in the c north of THE SURRACH, along the course of the IVORY ROAD. The region is named for the plains that slope to the north from the foothills of the VANNAKORDOR.
 - 2. Com. Set. Major trading city in the eponymous region in the c of THE SURRACH, along the IVORY ROAD. It is known for its large caravanserais, colosseum-like markets and many entertainment establishments to cater to the desires of all people passing through. Its markets are famed for their honeyed meats that are served year-round (Pop. c. 280,000).
- BACATRA: Set. City in the south of PARTHIS, abandoned in c. 3100 RM following centuries of retreating coastlines. At its peak it boasted a population no greater than 20,000. The ruin is largely shunned today, its buildings slowly crumbling beneath the elements. It is famed for the far older ruins that surround it, dating back to a late FOURTH AGE culture,

- many of which are in better condition than the more recently abandoned structures.
- The old ruins have been the focus of interest across millennia and are a popular destination to those undergoing the GRAND TOUR, amongst others, including scholars.
- BACCAL: Cur. Major currency in the north west of SAMMAEA, originating in the influential mercantile city of BACALUSIA. It rapidly spread through trade across the IVORY ROAD and spread as far West as the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT, and east to SAGITTARIA and is relatively common beyond that, with moneychangers dealing in the currency not unknown in the KORACHANI EMPIRE. See Vol II: Currency and Coinage in Elyden.
- BACHAN: Set. One of the original SEVEN CITY-STATES of KORACHAN, Bachan is now a city in the central-lower reaches of the Korachani peninsula, and once served as a link to Korachani territories in SAMMAEA. It is now renowned for its shipbreaking yards, though it was once a major military port and shipyard, including during the WAR OF SUNDERING, and it was targeted by the SARASTROAN navy throughout the conflict (Pop. c. 70,000). (Pop. c. 125,000).
- BACHANU: Geo. Pass in the south of KORACHAN across the south of the FATUACH Mountains.
- BACHESA: Pol. Queen of the bandit city of BEZONANT, in the west of the DAENED SULRACH.
- BACHRAD: Lak. Lake in the c of TARTAK, along the course of the river LLIRAD.
- BACKBREAKER: Ohj. Spear wielded by ARIOCH OF MOETIA; Diarch of MOETIA of TZALLRACH. Arioch earnt the right to bear the relic in ritual combat, where be bested competitors from across the nation. By the ancient laws tied to the weapon, he is now its rightful bearer and only someone who defeats him in martial combat can claim it in his place.
- BADAL: Set. City in the east of the territory of GELAH, in the south of ALAM BETHYL. It lies south of the northern POLAR CIRCLE and is one of the larger settlements in Alam Bethyl. It is said to lie atop the remnants of an ancient trade route (Pop. c. 47,200).
- BADAYAN: Ind. Set. Major copper mining area and conurbation in the c south west of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES. The area around the conurbation is known for its vast open-cast mines and deforested hills. It has a large SHIE ghetto, which is renowned for its brothels (Pop. c. 18,000).
- BADDER: Set. Major city in the east of NÁRTHEL along the banks of the river DAHAK. It is most known for its university and its ancient astronomical CLOCK overlooking lake DHUDATHA, and it also forms part of the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 83,000).
- BADDRA OSH: Rvr. Coastal marsh lands in the south east of SUOR. The region is affected by extreme tides and is largely uninhabited.
- BADH: 1. Dem. 'badhi'. Ser. City in the far south of the Tarahid Annexes, overlooking the Sea OF Byssos. It is known for its well-preserved ancient gate where a great god-king was said to have died. It is a place of pilgrimage to a group of Halfbloods, known as Badhi^(2.), who are said to be descended from the king. The city is known for its monitor whisperers. (Pop. c. 19,000).
- 2. Oth. HALFBLOODED house thought to be descended from an otherworlder king who once ruled a region occupied by the present-day TARAHID ANNEXES. Many of them undertake a pilgrimage to the city of Badh, said to be the place where the otherworlder king died.
- BADHUR: also 'the Warrior-hospitaller'. f. Myt. His. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, a SCION of the DEMIURGE NERGAAL. She is said to have travelled ELYDEN extensively, bringing remedies to distant people. Her fate remains unknown, though she is believed to have died sometime during the WAR OF SCOURGING. She is the mother of the scion CATHOLICON. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.
- BADLANDS: Geo. Specifically, a rocky desert of around 36,000 square-miles in the south of NÁRTHEL, midway along the SARASTROAN border. It is dominated by flat saltpans and scorched plains and jagged rocky pinnacles and is home to DEGENERATES, SERAPIS and sun-worshipping nomads amongst other, non-human life.

BADROL: 1. Rvr. River in the south east of ALAM BETHYL, flowing north west for 160-miles from source in the far south of the BAND⁽²⁾ Mountains and the HORSCH⁽²⁾ hills.

2. Set. Fortified coastal city in the far south east of ALAM BETHYL, along the course of the eponymous river^(1,). It is heavily fortified against attack and also houses a large corps of soldiers who patrol the south east of the DAZANI^(1,) headland from ALMAGESTI forces (Pop. c. 48,000).

BADTHIS: Pol. Ser. City and capital. Of the colony of EZHIRAYA⁽²⁾, located in the DEOBRASHIAN headland in the east of MENISCEA, overlooking the inland SEA OF BLAGLA. Though only founded in 4003 RM, it has grown rapidly, replacing the city Ezhiraya⁽³⁾ as capital in 4005 RM. The city is has become a political centre in the region and now has many embassies and diplomatic offices (Pop. c. 43,000).

BAEFIR: Sea. Narrow cold sea to the north east of DURCHAA^(1.), dividing the UTAGHAN Mountains in the west from the MAMMOTH Mountains in the east.

BAEG: Geo. Island off the northern coast of TISARA, between the SEA OF GEAUA and the GULF OF USEA.

BAEL: 1. Lak. Lake in the c west of TZALLRACH, along the course of the river BAELLI in the KRISHTUL wetlands.

2. See. Small city in the c west of TZALLRACH, along the course of the river BAELLI. It is a stop along the course of the GREAT ROAD (Pop. c. 18,300).

BAELLI: also 'the Blood River'. Rvr. Major river in TZALLRACH flowing south west for 1,425-miles, from sources in the MASIKA, USIARA, and USSIKA Mountains in the HENDECARCHY of CHLORIS in MALAN before meeting the wetlands of KRISHTUL and eventually emptying into the GULF OF LUSA. It is a major river and has been the centre of culture in Tzallrach for centuries. Its common name, the Blood River, is from the rich minerals found in the water, which give it a reddish tint.

BAELONAE: also 'the Eaters of Souls'. His. Org. Ancient sect native to the wastes just south of the BATEP plains in the south of the VESPERTINE LEAGUE, in the c west of SAMMAEA. They are descended from mortals (their original tribe unknown) who ate SOUL-PEARLS, grinding them up and making a form of flat unleavened bread that they ate in religious rituals. Over time the properties of the soul pearls were imparted to the mortals, changing them.

They grew taller, their spines protruding, their crania bulging. Likewise, their eyes grew large and dark. They ascended beyond the primal shape of their mortal ancestors and become something different.

Today they live tortured lives, the pain of their decrepit and sickly mortal forms outweighed only by the esoteric benefits, of which they share nothing with outsiders. The Baelonae were originally native to the orange wastes of ABAELLA, where they constructed FIRMAMENT-gathering towers atop flat-roofed mesas, though they have since moved away, where they were largely forgotten by mortals.

BAELRA: Set. Fortified coastal city in the south west of IACIO that guards the coastal trade-routes to the east, which lead all the way to KELTH in the far north of TETHYSIA (Pop. c. 32,000).

BAENEK: Lake in the c of AETHIOS, along the course of the river NARRATI. It is named after an ancient king of ETHAND.

BAENSEK: Set. Coastal city in the north of the VESPERTINE LEAGUE overlooking the south of the SEA OF ANIPTERRA. It is a major port and is famed for its deep harbours in which trade ships from across the SEA OF ORRIDA and beyond lay anchor with goods from distant lands (Pop. c. 107,000).

BAERN SPRINGS: Set. Settlement in the east of the HENDECARCHY of AMILLAERE^(1.) in the c of MALAN, in the rugged region of IUKUALL. It is renowned for its great springs, many of which well through the trunks of living trees (Pop. c. 2,200).

BAEROLOLLACH: Flo. Gigantic byzantine tree in the centre of THE OLD FOREST, its massive form visible from the NELCHA and UMBRALA Mountains towering above the already-considerable mass of the RAM'ATHI region of the forest. The tree is thought to be an ancient thing, dating back to the time of the DEMIURGES' first shaping of ELYDEN and is given great religious and philosophical importance in the Old Forest.

The bark of the Baerolollach tree is known to be iron-hard, and sloughed pieces of bark are highly prized for their durability and are used throughout the Old Forest. Its seeds, known as ghost seeds, have translucent skins and long cilia that are used to slow their descent from high branches, allowing them to spread farther, though they are barren and never take root. Some scholars maintain that the gigantic roots that penetrate through the ceilings of some of the PRISON CARCERI'S chambers belong to this tree, including those of the so-called Chamber of Roots.

BAESHA: Set. City in the c of IO, just north of the GHOLA Mountain, nestled on the banks of the river SHAMAR. The city appeared in c. -450 RM following the rise of the IONIC TALPA in the region, thriving under the rule of the IONIC HIERARCHS. The appearance of the VOID APOSTATES and the start in -192 RM of the 7-decade-long conflict known as the APOSTATE WAR left Io crippled, its cities sundered from one another. Baesha was one such city, though its position along the river SHAMAR and the strength of its armies allowed it to prosper as other city-states floundered. In -128 RM it attacked SALOROC, taking one of the Ionic GOLEMS from its hollow-temple and bringing a measure of stability to the region. Following its victories in Saloroc, many surrounding cities became its vassals and by c. -120 RM the region became a nation once more, with Baesha at its heart.

It was not to last long however, for in the wake of war appeared the mystics known as the EXARCHS OF MIRADOR, who in -111 RM managed to construct and animate a number of golems in the city of UR SITH. The Exarchs gained much prestige and rapidly rose to power, attacking and conquering Baesha in -47 RM, where they maintained a strong presence. Within a decade they had taken control of Io and Baesha became home to many hollow-temples to THE VOID.

By the time Io was surrendered to the KORACHANI EMPIRE by the Exarchs in 212 RM, Baesha had begun to show small amounts of ATRAMENTAL TAINT, its crystal-clear waters contrasting wildly with the darkening lands around it. Birth defects had become worryingly common within a century, though the construction of a SIPHON MAGNA there in 603 RM alleviated the problem. Interestingly the city and its environs became home to many CENOBITES, and a large monastery was constructed there in 721 RM. The SECULAR DISSOLUTION of 1393 RM brought more power to the Exarchs, who had largely remained there, and in 1409 they had almost completely relocated there from ETHRA (the capital since 212 RM).

The city saw an influx of immigrants around 2500 RM as the region began to show physical signs of $\underline{\text{ELYDEN'S}}$ inexorable death and various industries faltered, leading to many refugees following. $\underline{\text{PLAGUE}}$ in $\underline{\text{HABAKKUK}}$ in c. 3650 RM led to another influx of people fleeing disaster and the city continued to grow, the pure waters of the river Shamar becoming the centre of many industries that bottled or pumped the water and sold it to other settlements.

After SARASTRO took over Io in 3103 RM, and the region became largely neglected by the REFORMED EMPIRE, Baesha was one of the few cities that continued to thrive, indeed growing as people flocked to it from rapidly dwindling rural areas.

It was besieged by VENTHIRI forces in 3703 RM, and was bombarded at length before ground forces moved in. The fighting was bloody and ground to a prolonged battle of attrition within individual buildings and the rubble-filled streets, ending finally 7-months later on the 13th of AKORALEN with the expulsion of Venthiri forces and their destruction under artillery fire (Pop. c. 192,000).

BAESIN: Geo. Ridge, forming an eastern extension of the GROWING MOUNTAINS in MULCIBER, in the north east of SAMMAEA. The ridge is known for its treacherous terrain and jagged peaks and is known for the ancient AIKLAH rookeries dating back to the FOURTH AGE.

BAETETH: also 'the Black Altar. Rui. Ancient basaltic structure commonly identified as an altar in the north eastern face of the SASTAKAUR Massif in the c of the HOGGOTHA ISZ. Little is known of the structure or the culture that built it, but wild men from PHYRR claim that SERAPI can sometimes be found trekking to the site under the darkness of twin new moons to carry out mysterious rites, which, given their physiological vassalage to sunlight, is strange.

BAGALAT: 1. Rui. Gigantic sprawling MANUFACTORY and ATRAMENTAL refinery in the north east of BA'AKH. It was abandoned in c. 2900 RM.

2. Set. Following the abandonment of the above manufactory^(1.) it was later repopulated by people displaced by the SARASTROAN SANCTION in 3103 RM, its guts stripped for scrap and its furnaces reappropriated for use in its new industries. The city lacks centralised SARASTROAN leadership and is so-far seen as a rogue city, allowed to live-on as long as it does not destabilise the region too much (Pop. c. 32,000).

BAGARAM: also 'Rock of Memories'. Geo. Site of pilgrimage in the north east of THE OLD FOREST, where pilgrims leave messages written on the great boulder. The object is considered holy by locals and is covered in etchings and graffiti. Elsewhere it is worn smooth by the unnumbered hands that have rubbed against it.

BAGATIA: Ser. Caravanserai in the north west of NAARETH, forming part of the EAST ROAD. It exists primarily to serve caravans travelling the road, and its economy is reliant on the business brought to it by massing caravans (Pop. c. 8,000).

BAGASH: Set. Small city in the north east of the territories of ETHISTONITH in RHINOCOLOURA. It is a military centre in the region, and many Rhinocolouran troops are recruited and trained here (Pop. c. 20.000).

BAGHAN: Set. City in the east of SABAISA, overlooking the SEA OF ERENEA. It was once coastal though is now some 10-miles from the coast. It was founded in 3492 RM by the exiled JAHINN ALDEBARRA, who in 3526 RM would go on to conquer the disparate city-states that emerged following the collapse of Sabaisa in 2391 RM. Despite his actions the settlement of Baghan never became an important part of the reborn Sabaisa (Pop. c. 40,000).

BAGHATUR: Sup. Rnk. Title used in AHRISHEN and SAUA (synonymous with TEMUJAN BAATAR), bestowed upon FIRMAMENTAL SHAPERS who have served such place's rulers well.

BAGHKUK: Set. City and surrounding mining-settlements in the c of NAARETH. Its main industry is the mining of gold, which is done by male slaves (Pop. c. 10,000).

BAHA ATEL: Set. Fortified city in the c south west of $\underline{NARTHEL}$ (Pop. c. 38,000).

BAHAC: Set. Small city in the east of NOAVATUR (Pop. c. 62,000).

BAHAL: 1. Also, 'the Free City of Bahal. His. Rui. Ancient free city appearing just south of the SIPYLANA Mountain in c. 1290 RM along what was then the periphery between PARTHIA (now PARTHIS) and the KINGDOM OF OPHAM. Emerging in the wake of KORACHANI occupation of Parthis, it is first mentioned in records in c. 1050 RM, where it is noted as serving passing trade caravans as a caravanserai. It eventually became a sizeable producer of tannic acid as well as leather goods and appropriated many abandoned imperial quarries and open-cast mines to the west, along the wastes of PHYRIGIA. The settlement slowly grew over the coming decades, growing rich from its control of the trade-route that cut through the Sipylana Mountain and sale of ores and precious stones, eventually emerging as a true city in c. 1200 RM, though it would continue to expand, taking control of outlying villages near the Sipylana, becoming known as the Free City of Bahal by c. 1290 RM.

By the time Opham was sundered into two states in 1465 RM, Bahal had become a powerful force in the region, trading with both places, maintaining its independence, though by c. 1510 RM it had begun to diminish. OPHRAMI (previously known as HOLOTHANI) merchants had been present in the city for well over a century, and their influences had begun to take root, effectively tarnishing the ruling household in Bahal. Within a matter of decades many of the Ophrami merchant-houses had largely abandoned their operations in favour of pursuing political careers, becoming advisors to the Bahali household by 1534 RM. The corruption of Bahali ideals continued and in 1542 RM the Ophrami houses inherited Bahal, striking an alliance with Ophram the next year. The alliance would last for 9-years before Bahal willingly became a vassal to Ophram, in 1552 RM.

Its vassalage to Ophram lasted until 2391 RM, by which point it had continued to diminish, becoming little more than a small city administrating the surrounding lands, suffering greatly from the regime change. By the time the regions' power centre had moved to the great city of $\underline{\text{NAAL}}$ in 2417 RM, Bahal had diminished greatly, becoming little more than a ruin due to shifting trade-routes. Drought and the noticeable corruption of $\underline{\text{ELYDEN'S}}$ lands exacerbated this decline and by c. 2650 RM the city had been abandoned.

2. Set. Present-day city and direct descendant of the ancient city of Bahal, which was abandoned to the increasingly corrupted land in c. 2650 RM. Though under the control of the Parthisan empire, the Tarahid Annexes were growing in influence in the region in c. 3700 RM, and it became a modest caravanserai that re-established the old mountain pass. The caravanserai grew steadily, the old tradition of horse rearing reappearing there (Pop. c. 39,400).

3. Geo. Mountain pass in the SIPYLANA Mountain along the border between the TARAHID ANNEXES and PARTHIS.

BAHALALLA: f. His. Pol. Per. (B. 3917 – D. 3988 RM) Granddaughter of King HAALDOS and the third monarch of FALLAROUR, who acceded to the throne in 3949 RM, following the death of her father HAALDOS II. She was succeeded by her daughter HAALALIME in 3949 RM.

BAHANT: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the north east of the region of ZAFFRE in the c east of THE SURRACH. Apart from defending the region from CYHLAGHARRI incursions, it is also the centre of a soulstone mining operation, controlled by the rulers of Zaffre.

BAHARAK: Rvr. Subpolar marshlands in the east of VALBAR, forming the western bank of the river VARAGOD. The marshes lie along a region of discontinuous permafrost and, based on yearly changes in climate, often freeze

BAHARI: Set. Small fortified city in the region of TTARTALL in the north east of THE SURRACH (Pop. c. 16,300).

BAHARIYA: Set. City in the south of KHAR NADUL, situated at the tip of the KHU ENDAT, overlooking the west of the SEA OF ETAGIRIA (Pop. c. 47,200).

 $\underline{BAHATRA} : \mathit{Set.}$ Small city in the c south west of \underline{SUOR} (Pop. c. 15,750).

BAHATI: Sup. FIRMAMENTISTS in AHRISHEN, VIRAHAN, TEMUJA, KASPIA, and the west of SAUA, known for their conjuring abilities, where regional legends have them summoning spirits and other entities of the OTHERWORLD. Though traditionally thought of as charlatans by IMPERIAL Firmamentologists, it is possible that their skills are tied to the FIRMAMENT and the otherworld, making them potent SHAPERS.

BAHAUR: Fau. Sea-serpent common in the BATHASHAL OCEAN. Though given a singular name by most sea-farers, the creature is in fact thought by naturalists to be many; something the explained disparate features often found on individuals. Adults range in length between 30 and 150 yards, weighing in the region of 60 – 200-pounds. Some specimens bear vestigial forelimbs, though more commonly they are without limbs at all. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

BAHERG: Set. Settlement in the south east of AETHIOS, along the south eastern shore of lake NURA (Pop. c. 5,000).

BAHHAN: Set. southern-most city in the MULL CITY-STATES, known for its lobster fishing (Pop. c. 13,200).

BAHHAR: Set. Fortified city in the north of NÁRTHEL, close to the border with DACIA and LYRIDIA. The city has swollen over recent years with refugees from Nártheli lands lost to Lyridia, and its population has outgrown its old walls, with a large shanty-town now surrounding it.

BAHIYYA ABERRA: (B. unknown) introspective ascetic OTHERWORLDER that sits in THE TEMPLE OF LIGHT in TULURKRYPH^(2.) in MENISCEA. A dichotomous creature; a thing of both woe and splendour, hope of salvation, and precursor to destruction, she is an aloof being. No IMMORTAL, save perhaps ATHANAMBRO THE GREAT, knows her full purpose.

BAHOUN: Rvr. River in the c south of LIDEA, flowing for 170-miles south from sources in the ORIAN Mountains before meeting its parent the river CISERAN.

BAHMA TORA: Pol. Rel. See SLEEPING QUEEN, THE.

BAHR'S DISEASE: Med. Degenerative disease that is thought to be caused by the eating of infected DROSS. Symptoms include headaches, nausea, dizziness, shaking, and uncontrollable laughter.

It was first identified in 3826 RM by the physician Bahr, who found a link between patients aged 20-40 who showed similar symptoms. All were found to have eaten dross from a specific supply, though given the many different parts that make up dross, it was never found what the specific cause was.

The exact cause is still not known today though there have been various outbreaks of Bahr's Disease over the years, including one in as recent as 3974 RM in the city of DEOCHAN.

Consumption of contaminated food is known to slowly build up in the body over time and early symptoms – such as headaches and nausea – are often dismissed due to their common nature and by the time more unique symptoms are experienced, sometimes one or two decades after initial exposure, it is already too late, and only a matter of time until the worst of the symptoms are revealed, by which time death usually follows within months.

It has been recommended that those who died of Bahr's Disease are not reconstituted for use in Dross, though in many areas, food shortages have led to this recommendation being ignored. Many physicians believe that this propagates a vicious circle that will only lead to more outbreaks of the disease. See Vol II: Diseases and Illnesses.

BAHRAIA: Set. City and UMBRA refinery in the south east of TRAKIA. The city is the only major area of manufacturing in Trakia and uses the umbra refined from the region of TUKHRAGHON (Pop. c. 41,400).

BAHRAK: Str. Dam in the c of SARAGOS, constructed in 3623 RM, the dam was never truly completed and collapsed during construction, slaying hundreds and devastating settlements downstream till the coast at the BAY OF NADA. Construction was later abandoned, and the remnants of the building effort remain there, reclaimed by the wild.

BAIRNEA: Set. Settlement in the prefecture of ALITENEA (1.) in the c north of HOLOLACH (1.), known for its boar (Pop. c. 7,100).

BAIYAAR: Rvr. Expansive wetlands in the east of XYRPHAAT^(3,) in what, some 200 years ago was the mouth of the river VARAYA. The retreat of the SEA OF XYRPHAAT^(1,) has left the old mouth of the Varaya 300 miles from the present-day coast, where it has become a vast wetland region, marking the end of fertile lands in the nation, and the start of the so-called Wastes of Xyrphaat^(2,).

BAJULAN: Set. Small city in the east of PORPHYR (Pop. c. 18,000).

BAKARALL: Set. Small fortified city in the c south of TAHALL. It forms a part of THE WAY trade-rote and offers lodging to merchants and travellers passing through (Pop. c. 18,500).

BAKATAN: Set. Small city in the west of the JAHADAT STATES, in the east of SAMMAEA, and capital of one of the twelve States (Pop. c. 20,000).

BAKHA: Flo. Soc. Plant chewed by the people of AHRISHEN that freshens breath and is said to keep teeth clean. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

BAKHRA: 1. Geo. Mountain in the BAKHRAN STATES.2. Pol. Set. Capital of the BAKHRAN STATES (Pop. c. 1,010,300).

BAKHRAN: Lan. Language spoken in the north of SAMMAEA that developed in the century after the establishment of the coalition of 5 citystates that led to the formation of the BAKHRAN STATES in 3831 RM. It is a relatively modern language and is still changing. See Vol II: Languages.

BAKHRAN COLLEGE OF THE ART: Sup. Edu. ATRAMENTAL and FIRMAMENTAL college in the city of BAKHRAN, in the BAKHRAN STATES. Licences are awarded to those who pass a test in a controlled environment. Unlicensed use is punishable by lobotomization, enslavement or death.

BAKHRAN STATES, the: also, 'the Five States'. Ntn. Young nation in the north west of THE SURRACH, in the north west of SAMMAEA, just south of ERET^(2.). Originating as a coalition of 5 city-states around in c. 3831 RM. The cities prospered under a centralised leadership, quickly becoming powerful. The Bakhran States encompass a total of 180,625-square-miles, ranging from temperate plains and woodland in the north, to Mountainous regions in its c and temperate savannahs in the south, including the river ESSRA that flows west into the SEA OF ESCHATA.

In 4002 RM the Bakhran States became a kingdom following decades of arranged marriages and strategic changes to local laws. LORD KHAGAN became Lord Potentate of the Five States through the arranged marriage between his sons and princesses of the other four states. He stated the divinity of his appointment and through heavily enforced edicts no-one opposed him. Amongst his first political moves was the cessation of trade west with the SIX CITIES, in a move meant to weaken them before a planned invasion west that has not yet taken place. Following this he built the Five States' military and fortified many of its outer settlements, building fortresses across its western borders, which are largely contested with neighbouring states. See Vol III: the Nations of Elyden.

BAKHSAK: Set. City in the c-south east of TARTAK, abandoned in c. 3830 RM following the growth of the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region of HOTUTAER.

BAKHUR: Set. Independent enclave city-state within BELEGOR in the south west of SAMMAEA. Thought to have originally been part of the great CUPOLA-CITY, Bakhur splintered from the main city-state in c. 3600 RM, remaining as a separate entity (Pop. c. 54,200).

BAKI: Set. Settlement in the north of ZHARIAH^(2.) (Pop. c. 7,500).

BAKIR: Rel. Str. Rock-carved temple-complexes in IO, along the southern face of the GHOLA Mountain built at the behest of an exiled imperial knight-templar c. 50 RM (Pop. c. 1,500).

BAKKOR: See. Small fortified city in the c south of the tribe of GOROR, in the south east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. The city it a major source of aluminium in the region (Pop. c. 11,000).

BAKKOU: Rui. Abandoned city in the north west of PARAIYA, with a storied past. It was once the capital of Paraiya, though became a target to the more modern city of SOPORA, and by 3813 RM it had lost a centurieslong struggle with the southern city. It was subsequently sacked by the victorious SULTANATE and was allowed to crumble.

BAKORAN: His Lan. Now-extinct language that emerged amongst followers of the tyrant BAKORI LAUR in the remnants of Erasha in the FADING following the FOURTH AGE. The language died out as its homeland waned in power, though some words linger on in extant TARAHAN. See Vol II: Languages.

BAKORI LAUR: 1. Also, 'the Tyrant of Erasha'. Oth. OTHERWORLDER tyrant who, following the WAR OF SCOURGING at the end of the FOURTH AGE, rose to control the city-state of ERASHA (the only true remnant of the Erashan civilisation that fell during the war). The tyrant was a sadistic recluse, taking slaves into his labyrinthine palace never to be seen again. By c. -1310 RM the nation had been reduced to shambles, its economy broken, its people starving. His palace was stormed by slaves and administrators alike, though the tyrant was never found.

2. His. Arc. Corroded metallic stele about 100-miles south west of the city of HOLOTHAN, in the ROAHAN ROUGHLANDS. Believed to be erected by the tyrant Bakori Laur^(1.) following the fall of the ERASHAN civilisation in the wake of the WAR OF SCOURGING in the late FOURTH AGE.

BAKREA: Set. Settlement in the prefecture of HOLOLACH^(2.) in the c north of Hololach^(1.), along the course of the river HEMAVAR. It also forms a part of THE WAY trade route (Pop. c. 5,400).

BAKTHRAN: Set. Small coastal city in the north west of the KORACHANI colony of TAVVADRA, in the north west of SAMMAEA. Its main industry is fishing (Pop. c. 15,000).

BAKTRON: Fau. Miniscule organisms, first described in 3963 RM, that exist outside current taxonomical categorisation. They are of many shapes – including spheres, rods and spirals, and are so small that thousands can fit on a pinhead.

They are partially responsible for the preparation of fermented foods, including CHESE, vinegar and wine. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

BAL MORAH: Rel. Str. Basilica in the city of KORACHAN, named after the canonised tyrant Bal Morah, who terrorised the empire's eastern-most lands in c. 3000 RM, enslaving many heathens in the name of the church.

BALA: Lake in the south of SKAROS, south of the city of BALAAM. Though once fertile, over-industrialisation in the region left its waters chemically poisoned by c.2740 RM, causing many to flee the region.

BALA CTHAR: Set. City on the banks of the river CHIEN in the far south of the LURIUM plains in the south of TZALLRACH. It is characterised by its open-air caravanserais that were once the gateway into KREM, though have now been superseded by the city of HALEB RHOTHL in the south. Today the caravanserais have mostly been converted to orchards where LURIUM grapes are grown and used in the production of fine wines.

The town serves the $\underline{GREAT\ ROAD}$, linking Tzallrach with the east of $\underline{LLACHATUL}$, including western settlements in \underline{TURCAR} and \underline{CUTH} (Pop. c. 41,000).

BALAAM: Set. City in the south of SKAROS, bordering lake SAKAR. It was home of the TYRANT OF BALAAM, and served as the LAASKHAN capital during his governance of the vassal state, at which time the borders of Laaskha stretched farther north.

Due to its vicinity with the Laaskhan border, the city oversees land trade between the nations, with the vast storage yards of its northern districts catering to the caravans and land trains of THE RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 347,200).

BALAAM, TYRANT OF: m. His. Pol. Per. (B. -17 RM – D. 96 RM). Ancient KORACHANI ruler of LAASKHA, given control of the nation following its subjugation by KORACHAN in 15 RM. He made the city of BALAAM, then located in the far north of Laaskha, his capital, and ruled from there with an iron fist until his eventual assassination by a MANTIS^(1.) in 96 RM.

He was swift to deal civil unrest in the north eastern territory of ARPAROH⁽²⁾, by granting citizenship to its people and folding it into greater Laaskha. This was an uncharacteristically shrewd political move that has since been overshadowed by his later descent into sadism and a disregard for the value in the lives of his people.

BALAAMITE HERESIES, the: Int. Rel. His. In the KORACHANI EMPIRE, heresies that took place between 302 – 304 RM in the north of LAASKHA, west of AZAZEM and SKAROS, centred around the city of BALAAM.

Many people had grown insecure as to their futures in the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR'S absence and turned from the then-imperial church to the worship of SETHENYN, a pagan faith that had dominated the area prior to the rise of the empire. It was with much difficulty that the already-struggling empire was able to curtail the heresies, through the actions of its armies, church troops, and forces from the KYONI ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION.

BALAH: Set. Settlement in the east of TECHISUN in the south of ARKOS (1.), along the southern shore of lake ARBA (Pop. c. 9,000).

BALAISHIZZIAR: m. Int. Leg. Sup. Per. (B. unknown) legendary ARCHSHAPER active in south east the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. His name is whispered in the region of KATTIHAN with both reverence and fear. Emerging in the mid-37th century RM, he is said to have been a prodigy from an early age, mastering the art of ATRAMENTAL shaping at a relatively young age. His unique affinity lies in the manipulation of stone and earth, a SPHERE that aligns with the volatile mountains of his homeland.

His rise to power began when he single-handedly secured the abandoned fortress of ATESIS in c. 3675 RM, reshaping its crumbling concrete walls into an unrefined yet resilient bastion surrounded by a labyrinthine maze of jagged stone and treacherous cliffs designed to keep people out. This act of shaping earned him the allegiance of surrounding kindreds Mulcibian tribes, who fostered their belief that he was a physical embodiment of their god NEPHTHALONT.

He is a recluse, living in a cavern beneath Atesis, surrounded by stone CREANTS, all of his own creation. He occasionally leads raids into surrounding lands for food and other resources, though considering how long he has been alive has done little of note in the region. However, he fiercely defends his self-built domains, showing no quarter to those who venture too close. He makes sport of those who lose themselves in the labyrinth, shaping its passages on a whim, preventing escape.

His eyes are known to glow red when he shapes, instead of the typical blackening of the sclera when Atramentists FOCUS⁽¹⁾, which is a unique trait that various scholars of Atramentism have desired to study over the years. His followers use this to reinforce their belief that he is Nephthalont reincarnated, and there many amongst them now believe that he was reborn to reunite the disparate Mulcibian tribes.

BALAKH: Set. Settlement in the far north east of KARAKHAS, close to the border with HITTA^(1.). Its main industry is the cultivation of almonds, which is possible due the vast natural aquifers located beneath it (Pop. c. 4,200).

BALAKHAR: Geo. Mountain in the c west of PNESSA, forming the southern-most part of TATRASAN range.

BALANT: Set. Major city in the west of PARTHIS, in the north west of the region of ERUTO^(2.) (Pop. c. 96,000).

BALASA: Set. Coastal city in the north east of PELASGOS, home of the Grey Basilica, from which the ECCLESIARCH HALPHAS launched many campaigns. Within its walls is a major seminary of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. Its name is derived from LYRADEAN traders in ancient times, and it forms a part of the RED ROUTE to this day (Pop. c. 139,000).

BALASAKH: Set. Settlement in the west of Tartak (Pop. c. 8,200).

BALASIA: Set. Settlement in the south west of ZHARIAH^(2.), along the course of the river VENNON, in the region of KUIASH. Its main industry is the mining of iron (Pop. c. 6,200).

BALATA: Set. Settlement in the c north of GIBEAH (Pop. c. 7,300).

BALAUR: 1. Geo. Mountain in the north west of PARTHIS, some 400-miles long. It acts as a border between the east of ERUTO and northern Parthis.
2. Fau. Large terrestrial bird, often compared with dragons, and synonymous with DRAKES. Their chests, necks and tails are covered in iridescent feathers, ranging in colour from green, to blue, to purple, and the rest of their bodies are scaly. Males have a large feathered crest on their heads, with up to seven major feathers. Individuals have a large pygostyle on end of their tails, supporting a large fan of bright feathers that are used for balance and in possibly in mating rituals.

Once numerous in the west of LLACHATUL, the dwindling of their habitats have seen their numbers and range decrease to near-extinction, and they are now restricted to the south of the NARAHASAPHAEL Mountains and the east of the BLACK MOUNTAINS, and possibly dense areas of THE OLD FOREST (particularly in the region of THANT BALAUR). See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

3. also 'the Feathered Beast'. Ast. Con. Constellation in the NORTHERN HEMISPHERE. See Vol II: Constellations.

BALBAH: Set. Small mining conurbation in the south west of MOAH. Its primary exports are iron and quartz (Pop. c. 9,200).

BALBERITH: Fau. Songbird native to KHARKHARADONTIS and the north of SAMMAEA. Large, of bright plumage, its feathers are often used by tribesfolk who share its habitat in their ritual costumes. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

BALBETH: 1. Sea. Bay at the mouth of the river CHIEN, around 100-square-miles. The metropolis of Balbeth⁽²⁾ dominates the bay, at the end of which is a large lighthouse.

2. Set. Major fortified coastal city in the south west of TZALLRACH that overlooks the TORRENT OF KARROCK and controls the massive natural harbour that houses the Tzallrachi fleet, at the mouth of the river CHIEN. The city is home of the cult of ANATHA BAETYL and it the capital of the state of LURIUM⁽²⁾ (Pop. c. 1,200,500).

BALDACHIN: Set. Major city in the north west of AURUM^(2.). It is a centre of textile production and lends its name to a form of embroidery made with silk and gold thread (Pop. c. 108,000).

BALDRAD: Set. Small city in the c north of RHEA, just south of the CRYING CANYONS. (Pop. c. 38,000).

BALEGLEA: Rvr. River in the west of ELYDEN, in the HENDECARCHIES of MYEIN and STHAMAN. It is convoluted, and known for its many small lakes and tributaries, and flows north and east for over 300-miles from sources in the MEMNIDS, and the KARPAROS Mountains, before meeting its parent, the LAUL EGLEA river.

BALFA: Sea. Bay off the north eastern coast of VALBAR^(2,), to the south west of the SEA OF POLARIS, BALGED: Geo. Dry area encompassing most of the north of inland BA'AKH. Though dry, the region is far from barren with various types of flora managing to survive here, including ALOES and AGAVES. Such plant life is possible due to the many SIPHON ENGINES that exist in the area. The engines draw the ATRAMENTA towards them, alleviating its effects on surrounding areas, with the resultant slurry processed into UMBRA.

BALHIA: Ind. Set. Mining settlement in the c of PARTHIS, along the eastern face of the BALAUR Mountains (Pop. c. 8,800).

BALI: Lak. Lake in the west of MALAN, forming a border between the HENDECARCHIES of MYEIN, AMILLAERE^(1.). It lies along the course of the river BALEGLEA.

BALIMAN: Sea. Sea to the south of the IAPETAN SEA, forming the northern-most part of the MIROVEAN OCEAN. It is bordered to the south west by GIBEAH, to the north west by KHITAI, and to the east by CUTH and RHEA.

BALL LIGHTNING: see CORPOSANT.

BALLI: Rel. Set. Temple-city in north west of the CITIZENRY OF THALI, overlooking (Pop. c. 6,500).

BALLOT: Set. Settlement in the c of the tribe of DRAKAINA, in the east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER, known for its fire lizard riders (Pop. c. 2,200).

BALLOT COUNT: Pol. Rnk. County rulers in SIMBARA, who serve below the ARCHDUKES in the noble hierarchy of the empire. As their name suggests, they are elected from amongst their peers, a process which has no small amount of accusations of corruption and favouritism placed upon it. Every five years the winning candidates are sword in during a tie-honoured ceremony by their respective archdukes.

BALLOU: Set. City in the c-south east of PARAIYA. It forms a part of the SALT ROAD, and has offices of the SIRIPHAGAN ALLIANCE as well as most major merchant-houses that operate along the route. It is a major agricultural centre and food grown here is often sold along the Salt Road (Pop. c. 31,800).

BALOUT OBRA: Set. Settlement in the c of NOAVATUR. It is known for its large iron quarries, many of which are repurposed from old KORACHANI industries (Pop. c. 7,500).

BALSHADAL: Set. Coastal fortified city in the south of ZHARIAH⁽²⁾, overlooking the BAY OF MAELER. It has recently become a military centre, with trainers being taught here before being sent across Zhariah to train citizen militias.

BALSHAEL: Set. Major city in the c of ZHARIAH(2). It is an industrial centre, with many manufactured goods made there (Pop. c. 112,000).

BALTEA: Set. Settlement in the c of GIBEAH (Pop. c. 8,000).

BAMEGOR: Set. Fortified settlement in the north east of the region of YEPPO in the c east of THE SURRACH (Pop. c. 6,700).

BAMETE: Set. Major city in the c of TZALLRACH, along the course of the river ARELLI. It is the capital of the eastern-most state of NADAIRA⁽²⁾ (Pop. c. 89,300).

BAMOTH: Pol. Administrative district in the CITY OF ALMAGEST. First of the SEVEN-AND-FORTY principalities of the City.

BAMOUTH: Rui. Ancient ruin in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of SYRTIS^(1,). The ruin takes the form of a porcelain-like humanoid head, roughly 15-feet tall. Fragments of a similar substance lie scattered for miles around, leading scholars to believe the head may once have been part of a larger statue.

Little is known of the ruin, or the shape it once took, though it is thought to belong to ancient times and might have been an icon dedicated to a DEMIURGE or SCION.

BAMUSDA: Set. Major city in the c of the territories of ETHISTONITH in RHINOCOLOURA. It is a major industrial centre and one of the most urban cities in Ethistonith (Pop. c. 300,000).

BANAA: Geo. Highland pass south east of the city of DUN KHARR, along the border between the east of ARKOS^(1.) and the south west of SARASTRO, forming a pass between the MENATHI and HAAGEN Mountains in the north and the EHBOT Mountains in the south. The region is relatively flat, though strewn with rocks and boulders and is notable for its dry terrain.

In antiquity, during the first decades of the so-called DEGENERATE EXODUS, this region was one of the few places settled by those fleeing the SHADOW IN THE DESERT, though a stronger defence, mounted largely by the KNIGHTS OF SZAS, in the ARAAHT, saw most of the creatures fleeing from the south west quelled.

The Knights of Szas, supported by other forces, including the armies of Dun Kharr liberated the lands form the DEGENERATE taint, with the last of their kind finally slain in c. -300 RM, their bodies burnt on great pyres. Stone markers were erected throughout the region in warning to those passing that the land had been touched by the ATRAMENTA, and the region remains largely shunned to this day, though the ATRAMENTAL TAINT has since diminished, and remains largely in the area of SORIA KIEL.

BAND: 1. Geo. Large headland in the c north of Llachatul, forming an extension of the BLACK MOUNTAIN, serving to divide the northern reaches of the SEA OF APHOTIS into the ADUM and SEKHEM to the west and east of it, respectively. It is known as HORSCH to the people of ALAM BETHYL and KOLCHIS. The region is rocky and very dangerous with hardy flora that is resistant to the cold and wind.

Geo. Large mountain dominating the eponymous headland to the north east of the BLACK MOUNTAIN. Like the Black Mountain, it is relatively young, dark and very treacherous.

BANESH: Set. Coastal city in the west of OPHAR. It is heavily fortified against attack from CYHLAGHARR and is in control of many warships that patrol the waters of the GULF OF OPHAR^(1.) (Pop. c. 38,000).

BANI HAUL: Set. City in the east of CHEIRA, known for its airship docks, linking it with PORPHYR and SARAGOS. The city is heavily fortified and outsiders are kept on a short leash (Pop. c. 16,000).

BANIN: Mil. Geo. Fortress-isle in the SEA OF NUTHEN. The first records of the fortress go back to the early days of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, though it was rebuilt and replaced many times during its history. At its strongest the fortress encompassed the entirety of the island (then no more than 3-square-miles), though the retreat of THE INNER SEA has left the island several times larger now, and a port was constructed in 2854 RM to cater to Korachani ships travelling across the Sea.

BANIQ: Set. Settlement in the south east of CHEIRA (Pop. c. 6,000).

BANK: Set. Small city in the c south of ANANTHUL, at the southern shore of lake UNDIANT. It is a major source of coal in the region (Pop. c. 15,000).

BANK OF KORACHAN, the: Com. The largest of three official banks of the KORACHANIEMPIRE, and one of two entities authorised to mint coins and issue new bank notes on behalf of the empire. A controlling interest of the bank is held by the powerful HOUSE MONTANACH, whose PATERFAMILIAS is often a member of council of Archpatricians, if not THE SEVEN themselves.

BANK OF SACRAMAD: see SACRAMAD, BANK OF.

BANKHADAN: Set. Greattown in the east of Temuja (Pop. c. 40,000).

BANKHRII: Set. Settlement in the west of PNESSA (Pop. c. 6,000).

BANNI: m. Pol. His. Per. (D. 3175 RM) A METHUMNI MOUNTEBANK (Methumni diplomats known for their outlandish characters) who played an instrumental role in preventing the nation from fracturing during a period of conflict in c. 3130 RM.

His sharp intellect and charisma caught the attention of the order of Mountebanks, who plucked him from his family at a young age and trained him to become a diplomat. By the age of 18 he was travelling around the AMMASHI^(1,) peninsula on behalf of the VODARCHS, earning the kind of reputation expected from a Methumni Mountebank.

By c. 3125 RM the Vodarchs were struggling to maintain control over the more distant territories of Methumn. Unruly territories threatened to plunge Methumn into a civil war that the Vodarchs were not prepared for. The Mountebanks played a vital role during this period, using their words to placate cities that might have defected. Chief amongst them was Banni, who over the better part of a decade was able to rally many of the most disenfranchised regions and leaders under his banner, ensuring their loyalty to the Vodarchs.

By 3133 RM, Banni's efforts had brought a fragile peace to the nation, narrowly avoiding outright civil war. His success in stabilizing Methumn earned him great clout within the Vodarchs, becoming a trusted advisor to them, and on 3145 RM he was elevated to their ranks as one of their own, a position he held until his death.

BANT: Dem. 'Bantish'. Ntn. This emirate is located in the east of SAMMAEA, in subtropical lands at the base and south west of the CARCHEMISHI PENINSULA (1). An independent nation since 1305 RM, it emerged from the fracture of the larger Carchemishi nation (3) following the destruction wrought by the UPHEAVAL OF LETHEA, which left coastal cities destroyed and a generation afflicted by amnesia brought on by contact with its churning waters.

Its proximity to the Sea of Lethea has left its coastline relatively uninhabited, though some harbours and ports do exist, mostly safely tucked into estuaries and at the mouths of rivers, where their freshwater counteracts the supranatural traits of the Lethea.

It is ruled by EMIR ARABANT, a fourteen-year-old who inherited the dynasty throne when his father rendered a babbling wreck after being poisoned with waters from the Lethea. His mother rules as regent in his stead, until he comes of age at sixteen. Like all Emirs before him, his body was tattooed with the constitution of Bant when he ascended to the throne, leaving his body covered in barely legible words, the spirit of which he is said to embody.

Traditionally, Bantish settlements are known as kintowers, which are made up of 2-4 extended families that live in a single hollow tower that is surrounded by farmlands and pastures that are tended to by members of the so-called kingroup. When the kingroup outgrows its tower, young families are sent out to found a new tower, that will have the parent tower as a close ally. Today, many kintowers have become obsolete, becoming cities instead, though most rural areas retain the old social structure of the kintowers.

The crescent on its flag symbolises the veil between wakefulness and sleep – a gesture towards the CHURCH OF THE NEPHILIM, in which the spirit-like pantheon is said to communicate with MORTALS through DREAMS – and is representative of the close bonds between church and state. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

BANTED: Int. Set. Small city in the north of KHAMID. It is the centre of ruby mining in the region, and is known for its jewellers, who cut the rubies into presentable shape before being sold to merchants travelling along the GREAT ROAD trade-route, eventually finding their way in distant markets along the route (Pop. c. 15,200).

BANTELLEN: Rel. Str. Org. Citadel-monastery in the KARKALNA region of the eastern ERESHKIGAL in the west of KASPIA, belonging to a cadre of LITHISTS who study the FIRMAMENTAL effects of the region.

BANTISH: Lan. Language spoken in BANT. It is descended from CARCHEMISHI and bears many aspects of KORACHANI, which was spoken there by KORACHANI colonists for around a century before the regions' abandonment. Despite their divergence over the centuries, Bantish and KULIGALAN, which emerged in the peninsula at the same time, remain quite similar to this day and it is not difficult for a native speaker of one to understand the other, given time and patience. See Vol II: Languages.

BAOBAR: Flo. Large long-lived trees that live in the south west of SAMMAEA, north of the SEA OF MERCUVIA. They are known for their broad fluted trunks and can grow up to 100-ft tall. Their shape is due to their storage of water through deep-reaching roots, and as a result of this they individuals are spread apart from each other, making baobar forests very sparse. They can live for thousands of years (indeed, the oldest known example, outside the city of SUPRAVISA, is over 4,000 years old). Some varieties have a natural resistance to ATRAMENTAL CORRUPTION, and their sap is cultivated to make topical remedies to Atramental infection. They are known for the TUMOROUS GALLS that are collected and eaten by MORTALS. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

BAOST: His. Rui. Ancient KHAMIDIAN city in the plains of ASADAN. The city was conquered and resettled by NATHI forces in c. -1100 RM, though was abandoned following local uprisings in c. -400 RM. The fortress was repopulated by Nathi slavers following the rise to power of the ALCHEMY clans in c. -270 RM, though was again abandoned with the disintegration of Nath in the wake of the LION HERESIES.

Following the CATACLYSM OF KHAMID in 101 RM, the entire region was destroyed, leaving only a few sheer-sided island where once the plains of Asadan had been, though the fortress of Baost was miraculously spared on the island of Asadan, though it was never resettled. The resulting STRAIT OF SAOR remains a major shipping lane, linking the DARK SEA, the SEA OF HAUTIA, and the BOILING SEA together.

BAPHIEL: For. Forest in the north of EDICULE(1.), in the HARÉSHK.

BAPHEMA: His. Rel. Ancient chthonic religion in the HARÉSHK (and earlier, HARA and HARÉSHKA). It emerged in c. -1000, with worshippers who revered the earth as the source and termination of all life. The religion lost prominence in c. 150 RM to the PHYSI cults of TAMAR. Its priests were characterised by their masked visages and black-robes, as well as their dour nature.

The appearance of the ASHKERONI religion in c. 1410 RM saw Baphema lose favour and, it had largely disappeared by c. 1800 RM, replaced by Ashkeron (which itself borrowed many themes from the older faith). The last temple dedicated to Baphema was abandoned to the BLACK CUSTODES in 1781 RM, who later became a hereditary militant rank whose role was to guard the remaining temples to Baphema, maintaining silent vigil over the next centuries before the order died out in c. 2200RM.

BAPHOMET: x. Myt. His. In the mythology and ancient history of ELYDEN, ninth of the Two-and-Twenty DEMIURGES, whose children were THE FORGOTTEN.

The figure is recognised as a winged capriform with multiple arms and is commonly depicted as so in iconography. The being rose from the defiance of the Demiurge ABUFIHAMAT'S oppressed worshippers who corrupted their Demiurge and came to worship a corrupted IDOL known as Baphomet.

Following the Demiurge's fall from grace and the loss of their greater divine abilities, Abufihamat was so weakened that it allowed the Idol of Baphomet to usurp it, where it became the ninth Demiurge. Desperate for power, Baphomet sent exocrines and missionaries to foreign lands with idols of itself and great wealth, which it traded for piety. Despite its struggle for power, worshippers amongst its own tribe (now known only as THE FORGOTTEN) lessened over the years and they remain now only in scattered groups secreted in the larger of Elydens' cities, where they worship false idols in MYSTERY CULTS, each of which believed to be the true Idol of Baphomet.

Their only known SCION is: ROHINI. See Vol IV: the Two-and-Twenty Demiurges.

BAPHOMET, IDOL OF: His. Leg. Obj. An ancient and powerful religious artifact, crafted millennia ago by the by the tribe of ABUFIHAMAT. Oppressed to the point of desperation by their DEMIURGE-father, his children took to worshipping the Idol, which through cumulative events came to embody the Demiurge, which was reborn as BAPHOMET, leaving the true Demiurge, Abufihamat, forsaken. Though Baphomet's worship largely died out with the decline of the Demiurges, some small MYSTERY CULTS remain in various cities throughout ELYDEN, each claiming the idol at their heart to be the original Idol of Baphomet.

Though its age is immeasurable, the time of its creation is now part of the great cosmogony of Elyden, inseparable from the story of the Demiurges themselves. Little is known of the original years of mortal life, or the Age, let alone year, of its creation, though its history can be history back to sometime in the midspan of the FOURTH AGE, where it appears in ABERANNI accounts dated to c. -9,500 RM. The artifact was meticulously detailed by the accounts, leaving no doubts as to its authenticity (unless, of course, more than one such idol was constructed...).

It was discovered buried in the ruins of a sunken citadel on the north eastern-face of the AHSOVAA Mountain; better known today as the MOLOTH KHAMMOTHUL that borders the KHARKHARADONTID desert. Indeed, so long ago that present-day searches of the region have failed to locate any evidence of structures; perhaps they have been whittled down to dust in the ensuing millennia.

The idol remained in Aberan, moving over the years from city to city, with its last recorded mention in that nation c. -7200 RM, where it was moved to a safehold in the city of EDERA, close to the present TOWER OF ERETH. The idol next appears in KARTHAN, in an unnamed city along the banks of the river LURA in c. -1850 RM, where it appears in a text written by an outlawed ATRAMENTIST. Apparently confiscated, the idol later reappeared in the city-state of TIAMAT, north of present-day RHINOCOLOURA, in c. -1750 RM, where it remained as an important religious idol in a great cathedral that was destroyed during the WAR OF SCOURGING; the surrounding plains fused into a thick plane of blackened glass after a FIRMAMENTAL disaster. The Idol was somehow saved, as it resurfaced in c. -500 RM and was taken by Rhinocolouran nomads, where it became a coveted heirloom following the rise of the Rhinocolouran prefectures. In c. 750 RM, after imperial colonisation, the idol was stolen by a SHAPER and was taken to the city-state of PEONA (now MALICHARICHAN) in the north of PELASGOS, until its final recorded sighting in VÂRR, c. 890 RM. The last mention of the Idol in that time is attested to the demented PERIPATETIC shaper Nastanaur, who commented that in his seven-decades-long wanderings of the PRISON CARCERI he came across it, embedded in a great iron sphinx-temple, with a breed of tainted humanoids worshipping it.

No mention has been made of the Idol since that time, though if those final observations are true, it is likely that a vestige of the Demiurge Baphomet lingers on; attestation to the strength of worship.

BARA TOU: Set. Settlement in the c north of PARAIYA, to the west of the GARABA Mountains (Pop. c. 8,000).

BARAAN: Ind. Set. Major mining settlement in the far south east of TEMUJA, to the west of the SWORD HILLS. It is known for its copper production (Pop. c. 16,000).

BARADA: Set. Small city in the south west of TAHALL (Pop. c. 19,000).

BARAHA'YA: Sec. Small city in the c north of SUMA'YA, 20-miles west of lake BAAL (Pop. c. 14,400).

BARAHAD: Set. Settlement in the c of RHEA. It is a centre of logging (Pop. c. 5,500).

BARAK: 1. Geo. Island off the southern coast of LAASKHA.

2. Geo. Region in the south west of LAASKHA that is renowned for its acceptance of the ATRAMENTAL arts. It is the home of many academies devoted to the arts, and is home to the MINASTERIA⁽²⁾ of PENUMBRISTS.

3. Set. City-island in the region of the same name in LAASKHA, home to a great many ATRAMENTAL SHAPERS and technarcanists devoted to the study of the PENUMBRISM (Pop. c. 25,500).

BARAKAVRA: Sup. His. Dei. Ancient SCION, its heritage unknown. The scion's tomb was discovered in FOURTH AGE ruins in the rainforest of INZIVA by the woman BENA, who would go on to use the GODSTONE⁽¹⁾

PRONAOS TESSERA that she discovered in the tomb to unite the disparate people of the surrounding lands, which would go on to found the nation of IMELKA in 1191 RM. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

BARAKIEL: also 'Baraqiel'. (B. unknown) Oth. OTHERWORLDER of destruction. Though his name is recognised across many nations of ELYDEN, little else is known about it, with many believing the being to be apocryphal.

BARAKH: Set. Small city in the c west of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES. Its main industry is logging (Pop. c. 20,000).

BARAMON: Lak. Lake in the north west of KORACHAN, along the course of the river PHAIA.

BARAN OTT: Rvr. River in the c of BANT, flowing south for 215-miles from sources in the far west of the KELLOIL Mountains before reaching the CACOETHEA plains at the coast of the SEA OF LETHEA.

BARANDOS: Set. Trade-city in the north east of CHANDOS (3.), linking it with IPANAH (2.) (Pop. c. 37,400).

BARANT: Set. Settlement in the south east of BANT. Its main industry is the production of a stimulant drug known as CACOETH that is used to invoke rage and mania in those who consume it. The drug is produced from herbs grown along the peripheries of the corrupted region of CACOETHEA, and are sold across ELYDEN, and are commonly used as stimulants in battle and some forms of blood sports (Pop. c. 8,000).

BARAQ: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the east of ROMOREA^(2.), guarding its hinterlands from threats from the east. Patrols originating from the fort are mounted on MONITORS^(2.) and often spend days away on patrol.

BARAQ AQUEDUCT: Arc. Major enclosed aqueduct in the north east of ROMOREA^(2,), crossing the VACIVA desert from sources in the southern face of the $\underline{STRAMINEA}$ Mountains before reaching its destination, in the capital of Romorea – \underline{IONOL} – over 540-miles distant. It is guarded by various fortresses along the way, including the fortresses of \underline{URRED} and \underline{SUKA} in its two principal sources, as well as the settlement of \underline{RANE} and fort \underline{RODDUN} protecting its midspan.

BARASH KATAAR: Rui. Ancient abandoned metropolis in the wastes south of the CAMMOREAN Mountains to the west of DHOMAAL in the far north of KHARKHARADONTIS. Little is known of the ruin, though it is thought to date back to the FOURTH AGE, predating the WAR OF SCOURGING.

BARASS: Set. Farming settlement in the north west of BASSORAH⁽²⁾. The settlement is built around a half-buried colossus, its features worm by time into a grotesque facsimile of a human face (Pop. c. 7,200).

BARASTUN: Set. Small city in the south of the TARAHID ANNEXES. It was once coastal, though became landlocked in c. 3610 RM, and dwindled greatly in size, its fishing fleets now rusted and rotten, half-buried in the silt of its coast (Pop. c. 69,600).

BARAT: Set. Fortified settlement in the east of THE SURRACH, in the region of KEKHEMM (Pop. c. 6.000).

BARATALL: Set. Major coastal city in the south east of TAHALL. The city controls all trade west of the GATE OF EREBETH, and all merchant vessels seeking to go west need to pay a port-duty before they can do so. Taxation is then confirmed in the city of ALTAN, where vessels need to stop before continuing west. The city is located in a large natural harbour that is well-guarded and protected by the ORDER OF THE GATE (Pop. c. 1,890,000).

BARATHEA: 1. Dem. 'Barathean'. Ntn. Small independent nation in the north of SAMMAEA, between the nations of N'RAKH, SUMA'YA, ARKOS^(1.), J'THANA, and AETHIOS, largely descended from freed and escaped human slaves from N'rakh. and outcasts from BA'AKH and Arkos. It emerged from the same revolts in N'rakh that led to the creation of J'thana, though saw earlier, more frequent, contact with foreign humans than the latter, which likely explains its more cosmopolitan culture. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

2. Pol. Ser. Capital of the above region and original bearer of the name, to the east of N'RAKH, bordering the shores of lake C'DATA to the west and north east. It is one of few human cities that trades with silk weavers from nearby N'rakh and uses silk to produce fine clothing, which is sold across SAMMAEA and beyond via the SALT ROAD, making the city rich and powerful, a large trade centre in the region, and a crossroads of culture. It is one of the few human cities where AANTHA can be found, albeit uncommonly (Pop. c. 372,500).

BARATHEAN: Lan. Language of the people of BARATHEA that evolved (alongside ATTANISH) from N'RAKHI slave pidgin their ancestors once spoke. It uses some click consonants, which are largely unpronounceable to outsiders. See Vol II: Languages.

 $\label{eq:baraug} \underline{BARAUG} \hbox{: } \textit{Set.} \ \text{Settlement in the north west of } \underline{KASPIA}, \ close \ to \ the \ river \\ \underline{AVERNA} \ (Pop. \ c. \ 6,000).$

BARAUNA: Geo. Mountains serving as a border between HADDURATH and the north west of ABACARDAT.

BARAWADI: Set. Settlement in the north west of RHINOCOLOURA, along the course of river RASELETH. It is known for its cultivation of reeds and rice (Pop. c. 6,000).

BARBARIAN KING: KORACHANI name for ARIOCH OF MOETIA. The name is derogatory and intended to draw upon heathen prejudices prevalent in Korachan at the time.

BARBATOS: Pol. His. An ancient king and tyrant of CHEBELDA (present-day SAGITTARIA) who ruled in c. -90 RM, remembered for his ruthless and brutal war crimes against the people of surrounding regions, including the EMERATIANS.

He is known for his four lieutenants who executed his will without question and who it is now thought might have been beholden to him through MAGICKAL means. His eventual unrecorded downfall paved the way for the rise of the MEROVICHI household, which is believed to be descended from one of his four lieutenants.

BARBEA: Set. Major city in the north of the TARAHID ANNEXES (Pop. c. 126,000).

BARBEN: Set. Small city in the west of IO (Pop. c. 12,500).

BARBER: Voc. One whose job is to cut, groom, and style hair and beards, typically belonging to men. In classical times they also acted surgeons and dentists, but as medical science advanced, these roles rapidly became the sole domain of surgeons and dentists, respectively.

In many cultures, including the INNER SEA REGION, barbers are an important cultural link, telling tales and stories, as well as spreading news, particularly to the illiterate who do not consume newspapers. They are also amongst the best places for certain gossip.

BARCHAA: Set. Fortified city in the far south west of DURCHAA^(1.). The city is one of few to trade south with ALMAGEST (Pop. c. 39,800).

BARD ABULIA: His. Obj. Ancient gold-plated idols in the west of LYRIDIA DHAI, where the mouth of the river BINI once met with the SEA OF SPIRES. There were nine idols, each stood near 100-ft high depicted the ABULIA, heads turned towards the heavens, arms outstretched, indicative of the land of LYRIDIA that stood behind them. The idols were toppled by the KORACHANI EMPIRE in c 100 RM following its conquests in the region. Their materials were looted over the years, leaving the bare remains of stone plinths that once supporting them greeting travellers entering Lyridia Dhai from the river Bini.

BARDA: Mil. Str. Fortress in the far north of BARATHEA^(1.), guarding the SALT ROAD north into SUMA'YA.

BARGEIST: Fau. Large canid native to the temperate woodlands and scrublands of northern MALAN, particularly the HENDECARCHIES of NHORA, DERAEIA, and CYRENIA. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

BARGHEANN: Geo. Island off the north western coast of CYHLAGHARR, to the north of the BAY OF SCENEA. It is home to the coastal fortress of GHARAMALH, which is the base of the pirate lord HAYREDHOSS UYHAVEN.

BARGO: Lak. Lake in the far south west of CISNERIA, along the course of the river ARASTA.

BARHAD: Set. Settlement in the region of AHEPPO in the c of THE SURRACH. It is known for its honey production (Pop. c. 7,000).

BARHA'YA: Set. Small city in the north of SUMA'YA, forming part of the SALT ROAD. It is renowned for its hostels, where travellers can rest while on the road (Pop. c. 13,800).

BARIARDA HOZZA: f. (B. 3944 RM) Pol. Per. LADY OF THE CABINET of VALBAR^(2.), representing the state of KIGARAD.

BARIRUH: Set. Coastal city in the south west of ELAT (Pop. c. 40,000).

BARKOR: Sct. Coastal settlement in the west of TARTAK. Its primary industry is fishing (Pop. c. 6,800).

BARQEL: (B. unknown) Sup. SHAPER said to be the founder of PARAPEGMISM. Though widely considered to be a legendary figure, Barqel is said to embody the best traits and qualities of the Paragepmists.

BARRA: 1. Rvr. River in CISNERIA flowing east through CISNERIA for around 350-miles from sources in the east of the BLACK MOUNTAINS, before emptying in the SEA OF APHOTIS. For the most part its waters are tainted by the industry and Atramental taint of the area, though the city of MEHOTHATI, at its delta, has water treatment facilities that makes it drinkable, though fails to remove all impurities. Its native name is SAKHAOST and it is only referred to as Barra in ALMAGEST.

2. Set. City in the c north of BASSORAH^(2.) (Pop. c. 33,800).

BARRACEH: Geo. Depression in the c east of THE SURRACH. It is -120-ft. at its deepest. For most of the year it is dry, though following the wet season, rainwater from the surrounding highlands collects there, resulting in a series of endorheic lake that last a few months before slowly evaporating.

BARRAH: Rvr. River in the tribe of EBURUL, in the south east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. The river flows east for 228-miles from sources in the south east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS, before meeting the BRINE SEA. Its delta is dominated by mangroves.

BARRAIA: Alc. Sup. Edu. Set. Small city in the c north of AZAZEM, to the north east of the AISHAN Badlands. It is known for its ALCHEMICAL institutes and lies along the course of the RED ROUTE, and many of its alchemical products are bought by merchants during their travels, finding their way for sale around the INNER SEA REGION (Pop. c. 12,400).

BARRAK: Set. District in the south east of the city of ALMAGEST. It was known throughout most of its history as a hub of organised crime. The area was gentrified by c. 3940 RM following a long period of conflict with law enforcement, though the stigma of its previous iteration continues to haunt it.

BARRAK, WEAVER OF LIGHT: (B. c. 3950 – 4007 RM) Sup.

TEMPESTARII whose abilities are limited to the manipulation and creation of lightning, electricity and, unique amongst most ATRAMENTAL SHAPERS, light. Living most of his life in SARASTRO, he served as a registered SET for a decade before defecting and fleeing to TZALLRACH where he lived as a loner.

BARRAKH: Ohj. Ornate master-wrought gunblade carried by ARIOCH, THE DIARCH OF MOETIA.

BARRAN: Set. Settlement in the KORACHANI colony of AMONDOR. Its main industry it the mining of copper (Pop. c. 9,500).

BARRAT: Geo. Island-fortress in the IAPETAN SEA, off the eastern coast of SARAGOS.

BARATHIN: Soc. Ind. PATRICIAN HOUSE based in PELASGOS specialising in the manufacture of bespoke heavy industrial vehicles, such as mining vehicles, tractors, and LANDSHIPS. It was famed for constructing the THREE BEHEMOTHS – a series of gigantic open caste mining crawlers that characterised the excesses of industrial mining in CENTRAL LLACHATUL in the 4th millennium RM.

BARRATOR: Soc. Pol. Rnk. In the KORACHANI EMPIRE, a tier amongst the PATRICIAN and administrator classes responsible for the upkeep and maintenance of small settlements. Though traditionally, the barrator would live amongst his subjects, in the latter centuries of the empire's rule they tended to live in fortified citadels from where they would travel amongst the satellite-settlements under their control four times a year with extensive entourages of guards, nobles, tax collectors, sycophants, enforcers and QUAESTORS; where regional matters would be resolved, petitions answered, laws enforced and other matters of state carried out before leaving for the next settlement under their jurisdiction. Those who served under the barrators were called PROCTORS.

BARRENLANDS, the: Geo. Wastelands in the south west of VÂRR. The region was mined during the IMPERIAL occupation there (c. 1100 – 3412 RM), with iron, quartz and granite extensively exploited, but all but spent by the time the imperial DOMNITORS left there in 3412 RM. The area is now a wasteland of spent open-pit mines, immense swathes of tailings, and slag outcrops, the land barren and parched, the course of the river ICHORIA that winds through its lands tainted by chemicals and other waste.

BARRIA: Set. Harbour in the south of the MULL CITY-STATES, along the course of the river BATALL (Pop. c. 39,000).

BARRIER LANDS, the: Dem. 'Yaghukli'. Geo. Ntn. Sparsely-populated region in the north west of NORTHERN SAMMAEA, along the TROPIC OF RAH, to the south of the SEA OF ESCHATA.

Named after the harsh terrain and many mountains that border its territories, the Barrier Lands is not a unified state, but rather a collection of nomads and city-states who collectively call themselves the YAGHUKLI peoples. They claim direct ancestry from the servant caste of the ancient FIFTH AGE kingdom of CHIWENOOL, which collapsed in c. 500 RM, though have since mingled with various other people who emerged after this time, including 15th century KORACHANI colonists, merchants and traders from the EHRENISIAN COAST and THE SURRACH, and, most recently, exiles and itinerants from the deep south in HOGGOTHA ISZ.

With little resource and a climate that was detrimental to the coalescing of disparate cities into a unified nation, the people of the Barrier Lands remained divided, united by their common ancestry, their language, and the diverse family of deities, known as the YAGHUKLI PANTHEON, at the centre of which are three central deities — AHIT, HASHARAN, and SHERTAL— though most states and cities have their own favoured deities.

In c. 1100 RM the charismatic leader known as MMKORO rose to power in the city of HATYÉ, and managed to bring a series of cities in the north east of the extant Barrier Lands under his control. This growing influence led to the formation of the empire of Hatyé, which lasted into the reign of Mmkoro's son, who bore the same name. He saw the disparate pantheons of his inherited empire and saw in them the root of friction and discord in his people. In 1164 RM he made moves to unify the pantheon, so that all regions, including those outside of the influence of his empire, would come to revere the same deities. This left many people feeling disenfranchised as the gods they had prayed to for generations were suddenly gone, their names stricken from holy texts, their idols toppled, their temples destroyed. Public sentiment soured over the ensuing years until in 1169 RM he was apprehended by a force of religious zealots, and executed by quartering. Parts of his body were sent across the territories of Hatyé and the old deities were brought back to the fore.

This return to the old ways saw the empire fracture after just over 100 years. Though short-lied, Hatyé was pivotal in cementing the cultural heritage of the region, which remains strong to this day despite the myriad differences between the various city states. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

BARRIM: Plr. 'Barrima', lit. 'hound'. Also 'White-robes'. Mil. Law. The policing-force and soldiers of the AUGURS^(2.) in LYRIDIA, named after the ivory-white robes and bronze full-face masks they wear. Descended from the SVATHI people that once populated the area, the order rose in c. 100 RM in response to VEPARI actions against KORACHAN, which cost Lyridia a quarter of its territories, which were taken by Korachan in 85 RM, later becoming known as LYRIDIA DHAI. The barrima were responsible for keeping the PHYSI religion outside of Lyridian borders. The term 'white-robe' came into common usage around 1000 RM, following clashes between the aristocracy and the Barrima which marked the formers decline.

BARRMI: Soc. Str. Walled district and sanatorium for the mentally ill in the CITY OF ALMAGEST. The entire district is a slum of the lowest worth, for few will live or work there unless they have no other option. It is a major recruiting ground for the Almagesti army, as well as the ALMAGESTI TEMPLE, which seeks individuals to take part in the SHADOW MARCH.

BARROK: 1. Geo. Fertile region in the north west of JURRAS⁽²⁾, known for its perfumeries and flower-growing chateaus.

2. See. Coastal city in the north west of JURRAS^(2.), specialising in the production of perfumes (Pop. c. 18,000).

BARROW-FIEFS: His. Pol. Dating back at least to the dawn of the FIFTH AGE, possibly earlier, the Barrow-fiefs were historically the cultural centres of AHRISHEN. Based around the large familial barrows and stone circles found in the area known as the BARROW HEATHS in the south west of Ahrishen, the Barrow-fiefs evolved over time into city-states. United in the early 13th century of the Fifth Age (c. –200 RM) by the REGENT TAUAM, who was strong enough to claim the HOLLOW KINGDOM, uniting the fiefs, which remained the hubs of settled life in Ahrishen.

BARROW HEATHS: Geo. Expansive area in the south west of AHRISHEN, to the west of lake NAIDA. The region is filled with many barrows so ancient that they have taken on hill-like forms over time. They are sacred in traditional Ahrisheni mythology, though are shunned due to their age, with most thinking that the spirits of the dead who dwell there are likely tainted. Opportunists have periodically taken to looting the contents of these tombs when the original structures are revealed by the elements, though the contents are almost always decayed beyond value.

The Heaths were once an integral part of the BARROW-FIEFS of ancient Ahrishen.

BARSHEEN: Set. TROGLODYTE^(3,) settlement in the north east of SARASTRO, in the western foothills of the JAELA Mountains. It is thought to be the largest such settlement, and is largely ignored by the greater government, but young men are sometimes conscripted into Sarastroan armies, particularly in recent years when relations with VENTHIR have soured (Pop. c. 8,000).

BARUK: Set. Fortified settlement in the north east of THETIS, close to the border with Tethysia (Pop. c. 8,400).

BARUN: Set. Small coastal city in the south east of SABAISA. Its main industry is fishing (Pop. c. 12,000).

BARUR: Set. Fortified settlement in the c of NÁRTHEL, north of the UEFIR Highlands. It was once a centre of gold mining in the region though the mines have long-since fallen into disrepair (Pop. c. 6,200).

BASAAR: Set. Settlement in the north west of HARAPPA(3.), close to the border with the KORACHANI and HOAMMI(1.) territories of NUTHACHAN and SKEIN. Basaar was once a collection of small herding communities, though the region grew more important following the region's separation from MHAROKK in 3754 RM. Increasing tensions with Nuthachan and Skein led to a fortress being constructed in Basaar in c. 3800 RM, around which the settlement slowly grew into a fortified border town. Its population has swollen with merchants and travellers, all drawn by its unique position location (Pop. c. 8,800).

BASAL DEPTHS: Geo. Steep canyon, over 100-miles long, forming part of the larger NDEPHARA system. The Basal Depths are unnaturally deep and appear to have been formed long after the river SPICIA ran dry in the area. The cliff-faces are hewn into doorways and tunnels in which live DEGENERATE SERAPIS shunned even by their own kind, who normally worship the sun, from which they draw strength.

BASALT FORTRESS, the: Int. Mil. Str. Rui. Ancient fortress hewn from the basalt-fields of LIMIN in MECHABET^(1,1) in the north west of PARTHIS. The fortress is now abandoned, whatever existed in the region to necessitate its creation – be it resources, trade-routes or threats – now long gone.

BASHAUL: Rui. Ruined LHAUS ATELIER in the north of KHALHAT.

BASILEA: 1. Sea. Bay along the southern coast of AZAZEM, fed by the river EPHANOSH.

2. Rui. Ancient capital of AZAZEM prior to its vassalage to the KORACHANI EMPIRE. The city remained capital until 124 RM, at which point the city of AGLAIA^(2.) was made capital. Basilea remained an important harbour for the next centuries, though as ELYDEN'S seas diminished it found itself becoming permanently landlocked.

Originally situated at the mouth of the river EPHANOSH, the advancing coastline eventually found the city positioned along the course of the river, surrounded by previous tidal plains. Today it is around 35-miles from the coast, and through engineering works has been able to continue operating its docks, and its dry-docks and shipyards continue to be its main industries to this day, servicing merchant and military vessels as well as dross tankers (Pop. c. 53,000).

BASHA: Geo. Highland region in the c north east of the BARRIER LANDS. It is characterised by many fossils of ancient beasts.

BASHIAH: Set. City in the west of ZHARIAH^(2.), in the eastern foothills of the SHAROOK Highlands. Its people are insular, even with other Zharian cities, and are amongst the most fervent followers of the CULT OF THE DREAMING GOD (Pop. Unknown).

BASHINDA: Geo. Region in the far north of the nation of PORPHYR noted for its rich reserves of lead, copper and zinc.

BASHRAEN: Leg. Common figure of folklore and myth in the north east of EASTERN LLACHATUL, and the north east of MENISCEA, where the two continent's meet, particularly in the nations of ABATTUR, MEHITIEL, SATARIEL, and TISARA.

The Bashraen takes the form of a faceless hooded figure with four arms who is said to appear to people who are close to death, typically while despairing, alone, or in pain. Mythologists liken it to a psychopomp, serving as an usher to the otherworld, aiding the spirit in leaving the body, facilitating the process of death.

Most interpret the Bashraen as a benevolent force, aiding those who find themselves alone in their time of need, while other individuals or cultures, particularly in Tisara, believe that the Bashraen is a malevolent force that eats the spirit or brings death to those who were not yet ready for it. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

BASILEAN: Sup. Rnk. Common term used within the KORACHANI EMPIRE and the INNER SEA REGION in general for SHAPERS of incredible power. The term comes from an ancient line of pre-imperial AZAZEMI monarchs known as the BASILEIDS who were regarded as omnipotent, at least prior to their vassalage to Korachan. The name remained in the public unconscious as a symbol of power, which came to be used for shapers of great power.

Very few shapers could truly be considered basileans, and the term was usually sued for those shapers who not only had the power to level cities, but also a degree of control commensurate to that power. There are at most only a handful of baseileans alive every generation, and likely fewer than that.

The Parthisan term $\underline{\text{DOMINAR}}$ is roughly analogous with basilean. See Vol IV: the Materia Omna.

BASILEID DYNASTY: Also 'Basileids'. Pol. The Sacrosanct monarchic rulers of AZAZEM prior to its vassalage to the KORACHANI EMPIRE in 11 RM, after which the ruling family became governors of the slave-state.

A revolt by the newly-crowned BASILEUS HONORIA in 123 RM saw the capital moved to the city of AGLAIA^(2.) the next year, and much of the Dynasty was culled, with the survivors forced to swear their allegiance to Korachan under the supervision of the CONSULITE himself.

Following this the Dynasty waned in power, with its members held in check by an even heavier yoke. Kept only to act as familiar figureheads to the Azazemi people, they became puppets of the KORACHANI GOVERNMENT and sycophants to the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR.

They ruled until 999 RM, when they were replaced by Korachani-born governors (later to be replaced by archpatricians of the ATROPI HOUSES), though they had dwindled in prestige long before then, having become little-more than a PATRICIAN HOUSE by c. 500 RM.

BASILEUS: 1. Plr. 'Basileids' and 'Basileid Dynasties'. Pol. The heads of the BASILEID DYNASTY in AZAZEM throughout their rule of the nation – both prior to its vassalage to the KORACHANI EMPIRE and for centuries after. The seat of their power, BASILEA (2.), remained the capital of Azazem until 124 RM, though in that time they were relegated to puppets of the ruling state that was keen on placating a populace that might otherwise have become unruly.

When the capital was moved from Basilea to AGLAIA^(2.), the Basileis were allowed to remain in Basilea, where the title has since become synonymous with ARCHPATRICIAN, the original bloodline now diluted to nothingness by the imperial nobility.

2. Pol. Rnk. Noble title/rank in BISBUT. Characterised by their grey robes and bald pates. History of astrology. It is unknown if there is a link with the $\underline{AZAZEMI}$ title.

BASILICA: Rel. Str. In the Three Churches of the Undying Machine, a basilica is a church building distinguished by a particular purpose. In most cases this is ceremonial, with certain rituals unique to the site, or alternatively it may be shrine, with a particular relic housed there, making it a site of religious importance, often visited by pilgrims.

BASILIDIA: Sct. Small city in the west of GNOTH. It is known for its markets and forms a part of the GREAT ROAD. It is also a hub to the mercantile cast known as the AURAE (Pop. c. 12,000).

BASILISK, CHURCH OF THE: Rel. Str. Church in the west of ERUTO, facing the CAMARINAL SEA, named after the land of OPHIUSSA. It was constructed in 905 RM, though was abandoned c. 2950. The religion was based on ancient tribal traditions and was considered uncouth by most for its base practices and rituals. Today, it serves as a speaking hall and government offices.

BASLITH: See City in the far west of PARTHIS, and home to a large fishing fleet. Its harbour is built from ancient blocks of stone that were left exposed in c. 3300 RM by the receding coastline (Pop. c. 18,000).

BASSANDER: Sea. Sea dominating the northern VAALKAN coastline. The sea is a deep basin, forming an abyss in THE INNER SEA that is far deeper that the majority of the larger sea to its north.

BASSORAH: lit. 'hub of roads'. 1. Sol. Leg. Crossroads traditionally hold great power in IMPERIAL culture (possibly a remnant of PELASGOSI and VÂRRAN) paganism), and are respected. It is common for old settlements in the northern Imperial provinces to have shrines (in the form of chapels or iron idols) in their centre (the towns' crossroads). This custom persisted throughout the reign of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR, where large cities have such shrines at many intersections, each dedicated to a different aspect of Malichar, the UNDYING MACHINE, or regional saints (in many cases relics of past pagan cultures were imported to the imperial faith). Examples of specific usage include:

2. Dem. 'Bassoran'. Ntn. Located in the west of CENTRAL LLACHATUL, Bassorah is a small landlocked nation with a dry cold-temperate climate, nestled between the nations of SKAROS, ALMAGEST, THE OLD FOREST, and IPANAH⁽²⁾. It is noted for its pleasant terrain that includes sparse woodlands, plains and rocky hills. Of note is a vast network of ancient rock-cut ruts that dot the region without explanation.

It is a relatively recent addition to the nations of Llachatul, emerging from the newly independent Ipanah in the decades following the Dissolution of the KORACHANI EMPIRE that took place in 3705 RM. It spread to occupy disparate lands that have, amongst other things once been: part of the Old Forest, ancient battlefields of the WAR OF THE ARTIFEXES, industrial centres abandoned centuries ago by ailing industries, and occupied by the now-extinct nation of Asibaia, on whose ruins many of its cities have been built.

Like Ipanah, it is a land founded by immigrants and refugees that have resettled the ancient ruins and battlefields of ancient Asibaia, and they have made a name for themselves as traders and merchants, as befits the name of their home, acting as intermediaries between Almagest in the north, Skaros in the west, the Old Forest in the east, and the Korachani empire in the south.

The stereotype of the typical Bassoran amongst the people of Korachan is, at best, that of a moustache-twirling merchant or, at worst, a skulking thief. The truth is far more complex: Bassorah is at a crossroads of cultures, where different religions and beliefs mingle amongst the large markets and their many merchants, leaving its people wiser and somewhat jaded and more world-weary than the typical helot from the Korachani empire. See Vol III: the Lands of Elyden.

- 3. Set. City in the north west of \underline{AZAZEM} . The $\underline{RED\ ROUTE}$ passes through it, bringing trade goods from across the $\underline{INNER\ SEA\ REASON}$ (Pop. c. 32,000).
- 4. Set. Fortified settlement in the c south west of PELASGOS. Its main industry is the mining of antimony, and it forms a part of the RED ROUTE, and is known for its stables and mechanics where pack animals and AMBULANTS can be changed and traded (Pop. c. 2,050).
- 5. also 'the Crossroads'. Ast. Con. Constellation in the NORTHERN HEMISPHERE. See Vol. Constellations.

6. also 'the Angel of Crossroads'. Int. Leg. A near-mythical figure that features in legends across the INNER SEA REGION, particularly those whose histories feature subjugation or conquest by the KORACHANIEMPIRE. The angel is known to grant wishes to struggling artists that invoke its name along crossroads, sometimes making a deal, giving the petitioner talent and fame in exchange for control of their SOUL.

These MORTALS reap the rewards of their fame, and as they die, the angel visits them to weight their soul, to see if they truly made use of the gifts they were given. If yes, the soul is sent to the sky to gestate as normal. If not, the angel keeps the soul, which would go on to become a SOULSTONE in its control and possession. The Angel of Bassorah is often depicted as wearing a pearl necklace and having large pearls on its person. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

BASSORAN: 1. Rnk. Org. Law. Crossroad guards that are common in SUOR, and which originated from the KORACHANI superstition surrounding CROSSROADS⁽¹⁾ that was introduced there by Korachani explorers in the late 6th century.

2. Lan. Language spoken in $\underline{BASSORAH}$. It is a mixed language, that borrows heavily from many surrounding tongues, including $\underline{ALMAGESTI}$, and $\underline{KORACHANI}$, amongst others, though its main basis is $\underline{ASIBAIAN}$. See Vol II: Languages.

BAST: 1. Geo. Island off the south western coast of the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS, in the SHADOW SEA. It is named after a legendary character from PELASGOSI lore.

2. (1,829-ft.) Geo. Volcano on the above island.

3. $\it{Mil. Str.}$ Sea-fort on the above island. The fortress is a base for vessels that guard the sea trade-routes between the SEA OF SPIRES and the SHADOW SEA.

BASTAR: For. Sparse forest in the c of PARTHIS, to the east of the SIPYLANA Mountains.

BASTARNIS: Set. City in the c of PARTHIS, to the west of the SIPYLANA Mountains in the forest of BASTAR, known for its husbandry and wood production (Pop. c. 16,000).

BASTI: Geo. Dry plains in the north of MHAROKK. The plains are known for their many ancient THYMI ruins, most of which are unrecognizable and half-buried.

BASTION OF AHRISHEN, the: Soc. Nickname for the AHRISHENI general HAMADIN, who was pivotal in fending off KORACHANI attacks during the SCOURGE OF WITCHES. Many monuments, triumphal arches, and statues are now named after him, as are various streets, buildings, streets, and palaces.

BASTION OF SIN NASSIR: Mil. Str. Expansive fortifications that encircle much of the nation of MAENMIST, preventing contact with the outside world. The fortifications are sprawling, covering some 5,000 miles of land, particularly in the south east, along the border with SIMBARA, and the west, along the border with PHYRR. First envisaged in c. 3450 RM, they were constantly under construction for more than three centuries, ending after the outbreak of the WAR OF ECHOES, which partially started due to Phyrran unease at the construction of such a mighty fortress in its neighbouring state.

Most of the nations' workforce and economy shifted dedicated to the monumental feat during that time. The south eastern gate is gigantic and once saw much traffic pass beneath it along the NACRE ROAD, leading to a large vaulted market that is entirely contained within the fortress, with voluminous warehouses, auction halls, and copious quarters for visiting merchants. It was left deserted following the nation's complete abandonment of foreign trade and politics in c. 3930 RM.

Despite their impressive appearance, the fortifications are ill-maintained, with large stretches either close to ruin or effectively unprotected.

BASTION OF STEEL, the: Pol. Str. Monolithic palace of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR and seat of government within the city of KHADON, in KORACHAN.

The bastion is constructed over the pre-existing HIGH-CITADEL OF KHADON, which itself was constructed on a high bluff some miles outside the ancient city in -106 RM. A beautiful edifice of white marble and buttresses (an innovation of the day), it was a true monument to the strength of the city-state, which controlled trade across the central KORACHANI PENINSULA. It stood unchanged, until the rise of the KORACHANI EMPIRE starting in 1 RM, by which time the self-proclaimed Archpotentate Malichar had united the SEVEN CITY-STATES of the KORACHANI PENINSULA.

Following his absence in 84 RM his children and descendants continued adding to it, turning its interior into a lavish palace while their engineers ensured that the exterior remained well-defended.

The Archpotentate ordered an expansive reconstruction of the High-citadel; effectively burying the older edifice around a far-larger bombastic structure, which would eventually be rebuilt twice, with construction finally ending on the third and final version in 2005 RM, with the placing of the capstone on the ICON OF DOLRUTH, located on its highest cupola. Slaves, degenerates and farmers were used in its construction during different times of the year to ensure that work continued throughout the year.

The Bastion of Steel is immense and a credit to the arrogance and wealth of the Korachani empire of the day. Rivers were rerouted to accommodate its massive footprint (over 2,000,000-square-feet) which hosts a massive coffered dome with a diameter of over 900-ft. The building is fronted by a 22-columned portico flanked by two large towers at each corner, each topped with a large steel statue: one of Malichar, and another of the UNDYING MACHINE. Inside, the dome is dominated by three concentric tiers of seats in a circular area over 500-ft. in diameter, at the head of which is a massive podium at which would stand the Archpotentate and/or THE CONSULITE around which would be the imperial representatives from across the empire, as well as envoys from the major PATRICIAN HOUSES and members of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE and others.

Behind the dome is a semi-circular interior amphitheatre 400-ft. wide that is used when the Archpotentate is not present or for otherwise less important meetings. A gigantic tiered bell-tower was added to the complex in 2378 RM, and the largest bell of the Korachani empire, known as the BELL OF AGONEPHATOSH, is said to crown its belfry

The city of Khadon grew rapidly around the construction of Bastion of Steel. Each new conquest of Korachan led to increased administrational duties – taxes needed to be collected from the many new provinces and colonies and then processed; legions of administrators, clerks, bureaucrats, scribes, auditors, diplomats, notaries and envoys came to populate the Bastion of Steel, their toil becoming the bloodline of the empire. The city of Khadon grew in size to accommodate the influx of workers as well as the vast numbers of labourers that were contracted or enslaved to aid in its construction. Over the years Khadon itself would grow to such a size as to make it indistinguishable from the Bastion. It was one of the most heavily guarded and fortified structures in all of Elyden, though it was never attacked once in its history.

As the years passed and the Korachani empire grew into a burgeoning institution, corruption became inevitable, both through the complex bureaucracy of the Korachani government and through the politicking of its officials. Edicts and decrees took decades if not centuries to filter down the needlessly complex bureaucratical hierarchy until they reached distant cities, by which time other edicts might have passed. The matter of warfare was even worse: by the time commands reached the legions and they mobilised to counter a threat or move against an enemy's borders, the political situation might likely have changed - the target might have already come under imperial leadership, or might have disappeared years ago. ARCHPATRICIANS siphoned taxes and resources into their own projects, leaving the empire's coffers desperately wanting. This practice reached its apex c. 3000 RM, by which point the empire was overburdened - too many vassal states and colonies, their cities overtaxed and under-funded; its armies stretched to breaking point, unable to cover the thousands of miles its borders covered; its administration antiquated and hindered by an unfathomable hierarchy, weighed down by millennia of custom and stagnancy. The Bastion itself had become a living-ruin by that point, vast portions of its monolithic structure lying abandoned, crumbling, even as new portions were being built. This signalled a time of decline for the Korachani empire; with nations breaking away in the War of the Artifexes and struggles in distant colonies and nations.

Today the Bastion of Steel is ranked by many historians and scholars as one of the MODERN WONDERS of ELYDEN.

BASTION OF SUNS: 1. Sup. Geo. Region in MENISCEA, named after the fortifications found there, where strange supranatural phenomena make it look as though there are 3 suns in the sky. This is an ancient phenomenon first recorded in the THIRD AGE and is still observed to this day.

2. Mil. Str. Fortifications in the above region in MENISCEA. The fortifications are ancient, likely predating the naming of the above region. Little is known of their history, though they are thought to date to the THIRD AGE, if not earlier.

BASTRA: Ser. Small coastal city in the north of the KORACHANI colony of TAVVADRA. The settlement's main industry is fishing, with its exotic bounties being sent to the homeland in the INNER SEA, where they are enjoyed by discerning nobles (Pop. c. 12,000).

BASTROS: Set. Powerful militocratic city-state in the c south west of SAMMAEA, along the border between the south west of the HOGGOTHA ISZ and the north of PHYRR within the SASTAKAUR Massif. Located in a harsh highland region, the existence of city is only possible through the use of deep stepwells and cisterns, without which its people would perish in a matter of days.

The city-state is somewhat metropolitan, with KERATIN, HALF OGHURS, HUMANS, PLAGI, SHIE, VAPULIM, and amongst its inhabitants, with the former two dominating. A rigid caste-structure controls the city, and certain peoples are bound to specific castes and roles. Half oghurs, known as \underline{HUS} in Bastros, control the wells and by extension control the city and its roughly 6,500 square-mile territories.

Though of harsh laws and strict regimens, the region is well-protected and relatively wealthy with even its slaves (humans, and half-breeds, mostly) living relatively comfortable lives, compared with slaves in the KORACHANI EMPIRE. The city and its environs are considered by Phyrr to be a part of its own territories, but the Sastakaur Massif is so inhospitable that it has been ignored (Pop. c. 36,000).

BAT KING, the: Leg. Figure in VAALKAN folklore associated with the tower of MOLOSSUS. Depicted as a grotesque anthropomorphic bat, the creature is extremely territorial and ruthlessly attacks any who venture too close to its lands. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

BAT YAAD: Geo. Major valley in the c south of NAARETH with a tropical savannah climate. It is noted for its wildlife, with large herds of herbivores and the apex predators of the regions – TARRAGONS.

BATA: Lak. Coastal freshwater lake in the far south east of KAZZAR^(2.), close to the mouth of the river FONESA. It was once a bay of the SEA OF ESCHATA, though the retreat of sea levels across ELYDEN left the bay diminished, eventually turned into a lake.

BATADRA: Set. Settlement in the c of EREBETH (Pop. c. 8,000).

BATAGHAR: Set. Mercantile city in the east of the MULL CITY-STATES, close to the border with AHKA. It forms a part of the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 35,000).

BATAL: Set. Settlement in the south west of THUMAL (Pop. c. 5,200).

BATALL: Rvr. Major river in the south east of the MULL CITY-STATES, flowing south for 335-miles from sources in the SOTTHEA and EBUT SAT Mountains, before emptying into the BAY OF BOKKA.

BATANG UNG: Geo. Region of contiguous exposed dykes forming a natural wall, between 80 – 110-ft. high, in the east of CUTH, to the west of the DORLEIDON Mountains.

BATARAMON: Sup. Geo. Dre. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region of the NELCHA Mountains, in THE OLD FOREST, stretching south from its southern-face. Many of the rocks here have degenerated into DUSTSTONE, making the region dangerous to travel. In other parts, it has an adverse effect on DREAMS, intensifying their experience, to the point that they cause pain. In rare cases, dreams and nightmares have manifested in twisted but physical images of what was dreamt, as may happen in DREAMSCAPES.

Tales of this effect have travelled far and a few foolish explorers and MONEIROMANCERS have braved the terrain and xenophobic tribes of the Old Forest in search of their dreams, but few have returned to speak of it.

The region is seen by some as evidence of the rumour that a SCION of the DEMIURGE NELCHAEL is found there.

The region is categorised as a MODERATE THREAT by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

BATELL: Ser. City in the north of SUMA'YA, with roots dating back to -311 RM, when it was founded by the ancestor nations of DHEA and DHAMATEA to cement their alliance after a prolonged conflict with lacer in the area. The settlement grew rapidly, assuming the role lost when the caravanserai of ECHA was abandoned in -436 RM following the appearance there of ATRAMENTAL CORRUPTION. With the regions' renaming to BA'AKH after the appearance of the ADUMBRAESKI ATRAMENTISTS. In -29 RM, Batell became one of the first settlements to house a SIPHON ENGINE, which drew latent umbra from the air and ground and filtered it. Pipes were constructed leading around 40-miles north west in c. 100 RM, where they converged with similar pipes from $\underline{BAALBETH}$ in a great pit called \underline{BAAL} .

KORACHANI explorers coming across the region in c. 240 RM saw the UMBRA pit, recognising the value of the region and its siphon engines, which eventually led to the imperial conquest of the Ba'akh and its occupying of Batell. It was taken by Korachan in 573 RM, where it would later become an administrative centre for the mining and distribution of umbra to the north, a role it maintained until the departure of the DOMNITORS in 3097 RM.

Following that time, Batell diminished in size, which was elevated due its role, though in c. 3300 RM it became a vassal to Suma'ya, (Pop. c. 37,800).

BATEP: also 'the Lost Plains'. Geo. Sun-drenched plains in the south of the VESPERTINE LEAGUE, in the c west of SAMMAEA, thought to be tainted by FIRMAMENTAL forces, rendering navigation of the region nearimpossible. The air here shimmers with electricity, and the stench of ozone is rife, afflicting the entire area, which is noted for what can only be described as mutable geography and temporal anomalies, resulting in such oddities as a journey taking inordinately longer one way than another and noted features shifting unknowingly over time. People can wander for months without ever encountering sign of civilisation. Water here is a rare and valued commodity. Little exists in those bleached wastes, though ruined echoes of ancient towers remain, each topped by archaic refractive engines though to either be the cause of the temporal malady. Or perhaps a long-forgotten solution. Few who discover such ruins can pinpoint their location and, indeed, any form of cartography in these lands is impossible, with the various attempts at mapping the region making madmen of cartographers and they remain a misunderstood BATHA: Geo. Mountain pass in the north of PELASGOS, passing between the BULOPARRI and BATHAKOL Mountains.

BATHAKOL: Geo. Twin peaks in the north of PELASGOS. The entire chain, which goes by the same name, is 380-miles long and, along with the CALDERA highlands, forms the northern Pelasgosi border with VÂRR. Brakhia and Akholia are old names for the mounts.

BATHANAT: Rui. Abandoned crypt at the bottom of a 3-mile-long pit. Its waters are frigid and without purpose, and stretch deep beneath VÂRR into LYRIDIA. Believed to be one of the wonders built by the DEMIURGE VORROPOHAIAH, it is a place of whispered noises, and sepulchral waterways, its only source of light emanating from a single chamber, from which it is said that a decrepit being, possibly a MESOCHTHON, festers, imprisoned by some ancient power.

BATHAR EL: Geo. Region of contiguous exposed dykes forming in the far east of CUTH, not far from the border east with RHEA. The highest of these, close to the coast near the sea of HAMAN, form the base of various Rhean border towers, the largest of which is the SHAM LIMOTH.

BATHASHAL OCEAN: also 'the Great Far Sea'. Sea. Largest singular body of water in ELYDEN, and antipode to THE INNER SEA that divides the continents of LLACHATUL from SAMMAEA. It is bordered by the continents of BROR⁽¹⁾ to its west, MENISCEA to its north, and SAMMAEA to its east.

The Bathashal Ocean is also home to the deepest stretch of water in Elyden, known as the ABYSM OF SHIBBOLETH, and is largely empty, save for a few volcanic islands along its c ridges.

BATHASHALI GYRE: Sea. Sea gyre in the c of the BATHASHAL OCEAN, flowing in a counter-clockwise motion.

BATHIN, BARONESS OF ELIGIA: (B. unknown) Oth. Late-generation HALFBLOOD with human features, famed for her horned crown and herbal and geological knowledge; and ruler of the city of ELIGIA. It is rumoured that she is an ANIMIST or that she possesses some form of expertise that allows her to communicate with spirits. She is often seen in public in the regions surrounding Eligia in VENTHIR, on the back of a large pale horse; her royal mount.

BATHIN: Geo. Salt-wastes in the c north west of the VESPERTINE LEAGUE, in the north of SAMMAEA, south west of KHULL. The wastes were once an inland sea that shaped the economy and culture of early-to-middle FIFTH AGE dwellers of the area, including VESPER⁽²⁾ and UGHTEN⁽¹⁾, both of which eventually fell due to the devastation caused by the disappearance of the bay.

The dwindling of the bay left a large lake behind in 2251 RM, which disappeared completely in 2315 RM, leaving behind a salty basin, in which MERILL ruins were discovered in 2474 RM, bringing great riches to surrounding cities.

The deserts are most renowned amongst imperial scholars for the monolithic rusted gates known as SATARNICA, that lie half-buried in its sands.

BATHIR: Set. City in the c north of GREST^(1,) in the island-continent of BROR^(1,) (Pop. unknown).

BATHON II OF SUDHA: (B. 3943 RM) one of four ruling TETRARCHS of JURRAS⁽²⁾, based in the city of SUDHA.

BATHOS: 1. Sea. Body of water south of the southern coast of AZAZEM, forming a large inlet some 125-miles long in which were once found many coastal cities, most which now lie in ruins after the death of the sea and its bounty.

2. Rui. Veh. Set. KORACHANI POTENTATE⁽³⁾—class WARSHIP, that was sunk during action against the PARTHISAN navy in 3003 RM, in the south of the BAY OF NAASU, off the south western coast of LAASKHA. The ship was later revealed by waning sea levels, and became the centre of a new scav shanty town that eventually grew into the city of EDECHAN⁽¹⁾, that survives to this day.

BATHRA: 1. Set. Settlement in the north west of JURRAS⁽²⁾, overlooking the ATRAMENTAL REGION of ZOPISSA. The settlement specialises in the production of fabrics woven from threads created from the ATRAMENTAL material quarried in Zopissa (Pop. c. 9,000).

BATHUSH: Set. Settlement in the c north west of ROMOREA^(2,) to the south west of the VACIVA desert. It was founded in c. 3890 RM by outcasts and exiles from the capital IONOL. It became a boomtown in 3903 RM following the discovery of iron nearby, which attracted prospectors and agents of the monarchy's lords. This was short-lived, and the mines barely lasted 50-years before dying out. What remains is a diminished settlement, its people never truly recovered from the death of the iron boom (Pop. c. 2,000).

BATIK: 1. Nou. 'Batikear'. Plr. 'Batikin'. Sup. Org. Mil. Rnk. An order of SHAPERS in the KORACHANI EMPIRE, whose MINASTERIA has been based in the city of AGLAIA in AZAZEM since 3706 RM (It was originally founded in SOLONIA in 1272 RM, though was moved to Aglaia following the SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE). Its members are ATRAMENTAL shapers whose SPHERE of influence revolves, in various ways, around death.

They originated in the ARID TRIPTYCH in the early FIFTH AGE as the NECROMAGI, individuals whose close link with death allowed them to help individuals mourn the passing of their loved ones by communing with their SPIRITS⁽¹⁾ – either by anchoring the spirit to the body, allowing them to say their final goodbyes, or by cleansing the spirit before its final passing to the OTHERWORLD.

The arrival of the Korachani empire to the region saw the culture that surrounded the Necromagi slowly supplanted imperial culture. This continued until c. 900 RM when the Necromagi finally died out, to be replaced by the Batikin.

They are most famous as 'necromancers' and resurrectors of the dead, but to truth is far less fanciful than what legends have built them up to be. Only bodies that have been dead for a maximum of a few hours can be imbued with renewed life this way, and even then, the transformative act can leave the newly-restored body and mind altered and askew. The longer it takes a Batik to restore life to a body the greater the change of leaving it irreversible damaged – its brain impaired and its body flawed.

Despite this limitation, most Batikin are still capable of great feats. They can lengthen or shorten the time it takes a spirit to leave a body, which can in turn prolong or diminish one's life. Some can even indefinitely anchor a spirit to the body, and while this cannot indefinitely prevent death, it can allow the Batik to communicate with the spirit – an invaluable tool in various scenarios.

Less commonly, they can grant a semblance of life to a corpse by drawing its spirit from the otherworld back into its old body. This allows the shaper to more easily communicate with the spirit. Though the older the body the harder this is to do. Accomplished Batikin are able to control bodies that are not yet under the grip of rigor mortis, forcing the possessing spirit to move the body.

The Funerary Cults and the Church of the Undying Machine employ many Batikin, who are able to offer solace to grieving families, acting as intermediaries between them and the spirits of the dead. In this capacity they are also able to Exorcise the spirits of those lingering Int. their bodies beyond death. Conversely, they can also take such spirits and imprison them in inanimate objects, keeping them tied to the Material Plane.

Some Batikin are able to bring life back to necrotised tissue, which is probably their most important economic role today. These Batikin are employed by the DROSS industry, where they make sure that the flesh that is to be processed into dross is free of decay and safe to consume. They also work closely with MEDELIARIIN and doctors, cleaning wounds and freeing bodies of infection. They also work amongst law enforcement, questioning the recently dead, or using their skills in decomposition to pinpoint times of death or where certain injuries were suffered.

They are sometimes employed in military battles, bringing back soldiers that have been felled for a few minutes to bulk up the numbers for a final charge or push into enemy lines. This is considered deplorable by many however, as the resurrected bodies spend their last moments in agony, and their last thoughts are of confusion, terror and pain. Despite this, many militaries have made use of them – including Korachan, SARASTRO and ALMAGEST, amongst others. See Vol IV: Spheres and types of Shaping.

2. in NÁRTHEL, SARASTRO and IO, a sect of ATRAMENTAL SET. Their symbol is the hollow iron disk, which symbolises the cycle of life and death, and they commonly wear vestments resembling bandages and funerary wrappings in honour of those they serve. The Batiks of these regions form the upper echelons of the NAUTHANATIOS.

BATRA: Sec. Coastal settlement in the south west of the PARTHISAN colony of SOTHRA(1.) (Pop. c. 7,800).

BATROS: Ser. Fortified settlement in the far west of PELASGOS, along the south western coast of the BAY OF ABERIA. The settlement is built over the ruin of a major manufactory of the same name that was abandoned in c. 2800 RM after raw materials dwindled, forcing it to close.

The present settlement appeared a millennium after the abandonment of the old manufactory, by which time it had crumbled into decay. It is constructed from the recovered materials from the old manufactory. The present-day settlement makes a decent trade in scrap brought to it by vessels, and recovered from the ancient manufactory and (Pop. c. 8,000).

BATTAR: Set. Small city in the west of AYAD (Pop. c. 12,800).

BATTIVAH: Set. Small city in the c north east of the HENDECARCHY of AONIA in the north west of MALAN. It lies along the course of the river ARILLIEN and provides a welcome to stop to those travelling along the AEGISWAY (Pop. c. 18,000).

BATTRIS: Set. Farming settlement in the south of JURRAS^(2.), close to the border with TARTAK and the river KHARAD. It forms a part of the RED ROUTE and is known for its inns and hostels that cater to merchants and other travellers (Pop. c. 18,900).

BATTLE OF BRYNFAEL: see BRYNFAEL, BATTLE OF.

BATTLE FOR EBERUK: see EBERUK, BATTLE FOR.

BATTLE OF KARAFR, the: see KARAFR, BATTLE FOR.

BATTLE OF NATJAL, the: see NATJAL, BATTLE OF.

BATTLE OF THE RED CLIFFS: see RED CLIFFS, BATTLE OF THE.

BATTLE OF THE SHINAR RIVER: see SHINAR RIVER, BATTLE OF THE.

BATTLE FOR TAKUH: see TAKUH, BATTLE FOR.

BATTLE OF THREE GORGES: see THREE GORGES, BATTLE OF.

BATTLE OF TWO WORLDS: see TWO WORLDS, BATTLE OF.

BATTLE OF UTOR: see UTOR, BATTLE OF.

BATTLEWAGON: Tec. War. Veh. Primitive military vehicles that were prevalent in the late 2nd and 3rd millennia RM across the INNER SEA REGION. The originated as beast-crawn armoured carriages and were later developed in to steam-powered vehicles that were superseded by tractors and tanks in the 4th millennium RM.

BATTRA: 1. Rvr. Marshes in the south east of JURRAS⁽²⁾, along the course of the river EHATANAS.

2. Set. Settlement in the same region in the south east of JURRAS⁽²⁾ (Pop. c. 9,000).

BATTREAH: Sect. Small coastal city in the north east of GIBEAH (Pop. c. 14.000).

BATTUZ: (D. 1983 RM) Pol. His. King of a reunited KARGEMMA, who ascended the throne in 1972 RM upon the death of his cousin, queen ANOQUARIS, who died without an heir.

He was a power-hungry simpleton with a superiority complex, and during his short reign he squandered unthinkable sums on money on frivolous parties and expanding the palace in LERA to a ridiculous size, adding hundreds of lavishly decorated rooms that remained empty.

BATUDRL: Set. Fortified settlement in the c north of CYHLAGHARR, along the course of the river LYSINGR (Pop. c. 6,000).

BATUGHAN II: (B. 3971 RM) current khan of BAATAN.

BATUL: 1. Plr. 'Batui'. Mil. Rnk. Soc. In SAUA, vestal girl, often a direct relative of the ruling DIADON, trained since birth to be a warrior, a champion child; the virginal bearer of the RED BANNER. One Batul is chosen every generation, the old Batui becoming mentors to her, living with her in a secluded monastery in the PHANU Mountain. The Batul (who drops her birth name when she comes of age at 16) is a symbolic being of unity, living an ascetic life, and is regarded as an idol by the people of Saua. Without her much of the unity that exists in Saua would cease.

- 2. Mil. Str. Fortress in the east of SAUA.
- 3. Set. City in the east of SAUA (Pop. c. 14,200).

BATYAE: Sea. Body of water to the east of the SEA OF LYNNAE and south of the ERTHYDEAN SEA, flanking the western coast of the SEPAHAUNATI peninsula. Its waters are relatively shallow, which when coupled with the geological activity of the region, make sea travel in the area treacherous.

BAUATRI: Set. Settlement in the c of Tarati^(1.). Its main industry is agriculture, and it provides food and other provisions for those passing through it via the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 8,000).

BAUD: Set. City in the region of QATTISYSH in the west of THE SURRACH. It is a major producer of saffron that is used in cuisine across the Surrach and beyond (Pop. c. 45,000).

BAUG: Geo. Hills forming an offshoot to the south east of the BAND Mountains and running towards the western coast of the STRAIT OF ALMAGEST.

BAUGL: Set. OGHUR city in the north east of THE SURRACH. It originated as a CYHLAGHARRI colony, though broke away following years of strife in c. 3895 RM. It is relatively multicultural, with non-oghurs forming a large part of society, albeit a worker-class. It maintains trade with OPHAR as well as Cyhlagharr (Pop. c. 11,000).

BAULANT: Set. City in the c west of SERROK. It is located in the region of KRALVISSRA, and is known for its expansive coal-mines (Pop. c. 22,000).

BAULAUROCH: Geo. Rocky region in the c south of SERROK, noted for its large reserves of diamonds and the many mines that have appeared there to exploit them. The mines are government-owned and strict regulations and rules are in place safe-guarding the welfare of workers, yet working conditions remain difficult for relatively little-pay. Accidents are relatively common-place and though the miners' lives are short and harsh, they are well respected for the wealth that their work brings to Serrok.

BAULDOR: Geo. Plains dominating the east of SIRIPHAGOS, between the Citadel Mounts of EHBOT, MULCIBER and the HAAGEN Mountains. The volcanically-formed plains are around 22,000 square-miles in size and have been the site of many battles over the years and the place is littered with the ruin of war, both ancient and new.

BAULLAGORTH: Sup. Geo. Atramentally trainted region in the north east of Parthis, dominated by corroded metallic buttes and mesas, the largest of which, known as Entillia, bears the remains of an ancient fortress that appears to be hewn from the very ores of the mesa on which it rests. Little life flourishes here save RUST SLUGS and other adapted vermin and the sky is near-perpetually overcast.

The region is categorised as a MODERATE THREAT by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

BAURAB: Set. Settlement in the c south west of VENTHIR (Pop. c. 5,000).

BAURDA: Rvr. Waterfall in the c-south east of NAARETH, at the confluence of the river TULAR and river ABASHERA.

BAUSAN: Set. Settlement in the c west of KARAKHAS (Pop. c. 7,500).

BAUSTRON: Geo. Dry basin in the south east of ANANTHUL, stretching to the north west of SABAISA.

BAVVERA: Com. Set. Major coastal city in the far north west of NORTHERN SIMBARA, overlooking the SEA OF AMMASH⁽²⁾. Originally little more than a coastal outpost belonging to the NACRE LEAGUE, the sundering of the NACRE ROAD trade-route in c. 3960 RM after the nearby nation of MAENMIST closed its borders saw the Nacre League scrambling to find alternatives to keep trade flowing west and east across the south of SAMMAEA, and shifted part of the land trade to the SEA OF AMMASH⁽¹⁾, bypassing Maenmist and PHYRR, via the ports of CYNDARA in HABOT and Bavvera in Simbara, which became the lifeblood of the route, growing in size, wealth and in influence as a result.

Today, Bavvera is a thriving port city, and is a base to House GALADRAT, which is one of the GRAND HOUSES of the Nacre League, and has become known for its depots, stockrooms, merchant houses and bustling wholesale markets, where goods are sold and trade before being moved from land to sea and vice vera along the route of the Nacre Road (Pop. c. 280,400).

BAWEHEB: Rui. Ruined city in the south east of the PARTHISAN colony of VARTA^(1,). It was a major industrial centre in the SELAHIMI empire, though it was eventually deserted by c. 2700 RM, following the collapse of the empire, and remains so to this day. Anything of value was plundered by Varta and surrounding settlements.

BAY OF SNAKES: Sea. Prior to the waning of ELYDEN'S seas, a bay dominating the coastline of present-day OPHIUSSA, reaching around 475-miles inland, to what is today lake PHIO. It was named after the many eels and sea snakes that once lived there, which formed a vital part of early Ophiussan peoples' diets. It slowly waned over the past millennia, eventually disappearing by c. 3300 RM, with silt deposits from the lengthened river MARAGA creating the sizeable XEIAN delta, which remains to this day.

BAY OF SIRENS: Sea. Bay in TETHYSIA. Formidable natural harbours, home to the twin fortresses of MARAT and SALIS and part of its navy.

BAYAND: Set. Settlement in the c north west of Temuja. Its main industry is tanning (Pop. c. 4,100).

BAYARAT: Str. Library in the GREATTOWN of DUARIAHAHN in the south east of TEMUIA, made from the stump of a gigantic tree, measuring around 90-ft. In diameter. The wood has been carved into shelves two storeys high and is surrounded by a stone and stained-glass dome to shelter it from the elements. It is part of the PALACE OF LEARNING and serves to show students how greatness can come of small things, and how time can destroy anything.

BAZEAH: Set. Settlement in the c north west of GIBEAH. Its main industry is the mining of nickel (Pop. c. 8,000).

BAZID: Sca. Enclosed bay off the northern coast of ABACARDAT, forming an extension of the larger AMELEEN SEA. The bay is surrounded by the ENABEIN Mountains, which surround it like a large rim.

BAZRAK: Sct. Coastal settlement in the west of TARTAK. Its primary industry is fishing (Pop. c. 7,000).

BEACON OF EGYNKHOZZ: Sup. Str. Major landmark in the city of KHARAKHARA, in this beacon of ATRAMENTAL energy is controlled and maintained by a cadre of expert PENUMBRISTS. It serves as a navigational tool to travellers and can be seen from miles around, discounting adverse weather. It also acts as a siphon to the worst of Atramental forces in the area, protecting the plagi of Kharakhara from physical corruption. It is similar to the SIPHON ENGINES of the INNER SEA, but is far more sophisticated.

BEAR: Fau. Large therops common to various terrain and climates across all three subcontinents of Llachatul, primarily found in temperate regions. There are various different types of bears, ranging wildly in size and appearance. Evidence suggests that there was a gigantic breed that lived as recently as the early Fifth Age, known as dire bears, though they are now thought to be extinct. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

BEÁR: Sea. Sea in the east of NÁRTHEL, dividing its eastern coast from the isles of the LATHLOS CHA.

BEAMMIN: Flo. Rare tree that is famed for the remedial properties of its heart-shaped fruit, known as HEARTPOMES. Similar in appearance to OLIVE trees, though larger and more twisted, beammin were endemic to the region of the ARID TRIPTYCH, though are extremely rare today and are thought extinct by most scholars.

Their fruit was withheld from the masses to be enjoyed by nobles and monarchs of the ancient world, possibly serving to mythologise the properties of the fruit far beyond their true capabilities.

A few extant examples are known to remain, largely in private lands, including a grove within the grounds of the royal palace in HETEPHEROPOLIS, the fruit from which is enjoyed exclusively by Queen Hetepheres, though she has been known to gift some seedless variants to guests. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

BEANNAM: Set. Settlement in the c north of TAHALL. Its main industry is the mining of agate and quartz (Pop. c. 5,400).

BEAST OF ARIMASPI: see ARIMASPI, BEAST OF.

BEATIR: Set. Small city in the south west of KAZZAR^(2.), in KUELLA'S BASIN (Pop. c. 16,300).

BEATA ARRIA VETI: see ARRIA VETI, BEATA.

BEATUS: PIr. 'beati'. Rel. The beati are rare few individuals who have been canonised by one of the Three Churches of the Undying Machine, becoming saints whilst still alive. Such esteemed individuals are often at the epicentre of verified miracles, or are otherwise remarkable individuals that have left their mark on the culture, politics and/or religion of their homes.

Once they have been elevated to beati they become luminaries of the highest order, used by their respective church as figureheads of propaganda. Many are forced to travel with the SHADOW MARCHES, where they spend their days recruiting new PILGRIMS and inspiring existing ones to greater effort. Those with a more political personality may use their infamy to command positions of leadership within their church or government.

The most famous within the KORACHANI EMPIRE is perhaps beata is ARRIA VETI, who healed hundreds of sick people in the slums of ZEPHANICHAN through methods deemed to be divine by the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE between c. 3970 and 3990 RM, after which she was canonised, becoming a powerful symbol of the church.

BEAZAR: Set. Settlement in the south west of SARASTRO, known for its coal quarries (Pop. c. 8,000).

BEBAL AND LABEL: Myr. Leg. Twins that figure in MALANI creation myths, often equated with the IVORY and BLOOD MOONS, respectively. They are depicted as dichotomous figures that are in constant opposition of each other, though with Bebal ultimately destined to win. The figures are most popular in the HENDECARCHY of NHORA, where they often feature in art and caryatids. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

BEBALLIA: see BRIDGE OF ETERNITIES.

BEDA: Mil. Str. Coastal fortress in the south east of KHAMID, guarding the entrance into the uppermost waters of the RED ISLES.

BEDALOON: Set. Settlement in the south east of CUTH, on the eastern face of the peninsula of HAMMINGHENG (Pop. c. 15,000).

BEDEN: Set. Small fortified city in the north west of the tribe of USAR, in the west of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. It is known for its sulphur quarries (Pop. c. 12,000).

BEDKAN: Set. Settlement in the west of the tribe of EATAN, in the c of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 8,000).

BEDLAM: 1. Geo. Chamber in the PRISON CARCERI said to lie beneath the wastes of KHARKHARADONTIS, in the c of SAMMAEA.

2. Set. Purported city, said to be located in the eponymous chamber $^{(1)}$ in the deep reaches of the PRISON CARCERI (Pop. unknown).

BEDRAQR: Set. Settlement in the south west of AQUARIIA, along the course of the river ISARRAA. The settlement maintains a cadre of trained Atramentists whose work is to stop the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region of CUSHANUR, located to the south, from spreading (Pop. c. 4,000).

BEFORE MALICHAR: see RM.

BEGAPHILIA: Geo. Region of springs and geysers in the west of the HENDECARCHY of HATON in the north of MALAN.

BEGIA: Set. Fortified settlement in the c north west of the PARTHISAN colony of VARTA^(1,). Trade with LATUROLL is common, and it has several inns and caravanserais where travellers can rest (Pop. c. 6,000).

BEH ZAIDA: Set. Major coastal city in the north west of the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT in the north west of SAMMAEA. The city is infamous to outsiders due to the large golem-like construct that stands over the city. The golem, named ZAIDA, is regarded as a guardian of the city and it has become a mascot of sorts amongst its inhabitants, and can be seen from most parts of the city and for miles around. The city is largely isolated from the rest of Sepahaunat by the IQEKHABRA Mountains and it is the main city in the small headland west of the Mountains (Pop. c. 80,000).

BEHANTIR: Ind. Set. City in the south east of SKAROS, along the western shore of lake ONNAS. It is an industrial centre, specialising in TECHNARCANA and equipment related to the UMBRA industries (Pop. c. 48,500).

BEHBAT: Set. Fortified city in the east of TARTAK. It has grown steadily in size since the opening of the borders with KHURAUR in 3752 RM after both regions became vassals to Parthis (Pop. c. 29,000).

BEHE D'SARA: Arc. Bridge in the west of N'RAKH, some miles east of the city of M'HOTOK.

BEHE M'BATA: Arc. Bridge in the south west of N'RAKH, in the small city of K'TALFA.

BEHEMOTH: Mil. Veh. A form of AMBULANT used by imperial forces. Though no two behemoths are identical, most are large land crawlers and weapon mounts with transport capabilities.

BEHISHIA: Geo. Plains in the c of PARTHIS, dominating lands east of the BALAUR and SIPYLANA Mountains, covering 120,000 square-miles. The plains are naturally sparsely wooded though large parts have been tamed into fields and pasture, though areas of denser woodland remain common, particularly in the south east.

BEHLOHLON: His. Rel. Shrine and cenotaph in the region of KARKATAN in the south east of THE OLD FOREST dedicated to those killed in conflict with the KORACHANI EMPIRE there. It is a holy place to the VALKAI nomads who travel through the Old Forest, and the nomads pray to the spirts of the dead there.

BEHNEM: 1. Sea. Sea in the north of MENISCEA, to the north of CEHOPHELA, forming a south eastern part of the SEA OF INGALAT.

2. Set. Major coastal city in the north of CEHOPHELA (Pop. c. 90,000).

BEHOLDEN: Mys. It is not uncommon for mortals to find their thoughts or very spirits dominated through POSSESSION by foreign entities – most-commonly spirits from the OTHERWORLD. Though some remain shackled until death, others regain their freedom. It is not unheard of for those who regain their independence to maintain an imprint of the possessing entity's essence or memories. The effects of this differ from case to case, but often involve remnant memories of the dominating entity, or knowledge or some skill that cannot be explained, sometimes making them wise in odd subjects. They often feel alienated around untouched mortals and tend to gravitate towards one another, drawn by unseen links. The city of ROMMORHA, in south western SAMMAEA is such a place.

BEHOLDER: 1. Mil. Rnk. TEMUJAN rank, given to the KHANUM responsible for maintenance and defence of the WATCHTOWER OF ARILLIEN.

2. Soc. Pol. Caste in ALAM BETHYL with symbolic ties to sight and prophecy. Where SHAPERS exist in these communities they are almost invariably SEERS or AUGURS of some sort and the eye form a potent symbol in their culture, so much so that it appears on their national flag.

BEHRAAD KHASHAYAR: f. Mil. Pol. Per. (B. 3921 RM) GRANDMISTRESS of the MORÉHAN ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION since 3969 RM. She is the first ever female grandmaster of this order (other orders have had female grandmasters in the past), and has had to fight adversity to reach her present rank.

Called the 'living saint' by others in the order (though never within earshot), she is a devout follower of the Church of the Undying Machine and expects her lessers to follow suit. An ultra-orthodox, she abhors idolatry in all forms and works tirelessly to lessen the importance and reverence that many imperial saints and other idolatrous figures have attained over the years.

In an age when the Church of the Undying Machine is struggling to fill its pews and the ranks of the SHADOW MARCHES, her methods are seen as draconian and her personal aspirations of sitting at the COUNCIL OF SEVEN are unlikely to bear fruit given her beliefs and methods.

BEHRUZ: Set. City in the west of KASHAAL. It is known as being the site of ancient astrologer-hunts, where thousands of astrologers and warlocks were slain in a dark period of history. Many of their bones still adorn ancient structures to this day (Pop. c. 42,000).

BEISSAR: Set. Fortified city in the c north west of SABAISA. It forms part of a trade-route that links Sabaisa with ANANTHUL and has a large market (Pop. c. 50,000).

BEK: Geo. Coastal hilltop fortress in the south west of LYRIDIA DHAI, overlooking the STRAIT OF NÁRTHEL, guarding the bay leading to the city of KACHAN. It is said to have been built atop an ancient castle where an oracle once dwelt. Soldiers stationed in the fort claim to see strange things on nights when both moons are new, blaming the spirit of the oracle for them.

BEKAN: Set. Coastal city in the south east of ELEKHID, just west of the island of BHIOGGHOLLU. Its origins lie in the oppression of a persecute people who settled the region in c. 2700 RM (Pop. c. 50,000).

BEKANNUH: Set. Settlement in the north west of AYAD (Pop. c. 4,000).

BEKEAH: Set. Settlement in the c west of GIBEAH. It is known for its blacksmiths and tinkerers, whose traditions go back centuries (Pop. c. 6,000).

BEKEMIR: Rvr. Wetlands in the west of AHRISHEN, along the course of the river SARA, to the east of lake GALENDA.

BEKA: Obj. Cui. Amphora-like clay pots that are commonly used as cooking vessels in THE SURRACH. The Beka is taken to a market, where it is filled with meat and fat (or hard dross substitute), grains or legumes, spices, herbs, and seasoning, before being taken to the TARRUGO, where it is sealed and slow-cooked for half a day before being taken back home, where the food is served as a communal event. The Beka is never cleaned and anything left over is recooked with the next days' meal. As a result, most Beka are glossy on the inside from fats and other juices that have been soaked up by the clay from generations of use.

The potters' yards that make these vessels are large and characterised by hundreds of upturned Bekas drying in the sun. They are typically painted in bright patterns and colours, usually by the family itself, added to by younger generations as they become chipped.

BEKAPYR: Sea. Bay to the west of SOUTHERN SAMMAEA, forming an eastern extension of the far larger BATHASHAL OCEAN. Its northernmost volume is narrow and tapers over 400-miles, serving as a natural border to the nations of LHACCIDA⁽²⁾ in the west and the SYCHTAN PREFECTURES in the east. Its southern waters border the northernmost isles of the KALISANGELID archipelago.

BEKIAMFOR: Sup. Geo. Firmamental wasteland in the north of ENDUI. It is home to the TREE OF IAVALA.

BEKKI: Mil. Str. Fortress in the south east of SARASTRO, guarding the passage of the RED ROUTE as it heads east into ANUBIA.

BEKKONG: Ser. Fortified coastal city in the far north west of CUTH. It is known for its crabbing, specifically MOONS CRAB (Pop. c. 14,000).

BEKLEAL: Ind. Set. Lumber town in the c of AZAZEM, producing firewood for much of Azazem (Pop. c. 4,600).

BEKSHEGNI: Geo. Island in the south of the PANTHEON ISLES, off the eastern coast of LLACHATUL.

BEKWAAD: Ser. Small isolated city in the north of ZAKRON located in a deep ravine. It exists primarily in the dark along the sides of the ravine, with most structures existing as little more than a façade, with the actual rooms hewn in the bedrock. Bridges link the two sides of the city, and its base has been used as moss and fungi farms for centuries, dominating the terraced floor of the ravine for miles beyond the settlement (Pop. c. 14,000).

BEL AIAN: Set. City in the far north of LLACHATUL, overlooking the SEA OF SUDUNIR. The city forms part of a loosely allied people who populate the region around the POLAR CIRCLE north of THE VORANDINE (Pop. c. 13,000).

BEL QAMMAR: Soc. Org. One of the 17 GRAND HOUSES of the NACRE LEAGUE. The House is based in QARALAM and has a long and storied history, with individuals able to trace their ancestry back for thousands of years to a culture of astronomers. For many centuries the House was famed for the quality of its glass and mirrors, which were used in the manufacture of telescopes. Today the House has branched out into other areas and manufactures weapons and armour used by guards and mercenaries that travel along the NACRE ROAD.

BEL SHEBAL: Set. City in the far north of LLACHATUL, overlooking the SEA OF SUDUNIR. The city forms part of a loosely allied people who populate the region around the POLAR CIRCLE north of THE VORANDINE (Pop. c. 19,000).

 $\underline{BELAGRA}\!\!:$ 1. Sea. Island to the north of $\underline{KASHAAL}\!\!,$ in the north east of $\underline{BROR}^{(L)}$

2. Set. Settlement on the above island (Pop. unknown).

BELAISA: Set. City in the c east of TZALLRACH, west of the ARGENT Mountains. It is a source of good quality granite that is used in municipal structures throughout Tzallrach. The city is surrounded by ancient spent granite quarries, some of which are thought to date back to the THIRD AGE (Pop. c. 47,400).

BELAQ: Set. City in the c of CHEIRA (Pop. unknown).

BELASHAS: Geo. Major island in the BHALASSIAN ARCHIPELAGO⁽²⁾ in the PANTHEON ISLES off the eastern coast of LLACHATUL. It was discovered and named by the VENTHIRI explorer BOHMIUS in 1525 RM.

BELATUCADRA: Set. Major coastal city in the c east of LOEGRESS^(1.). Its western reaches overlook the river WYNDOUR, which continues north for a further 25 miles before meeting the coast, and its eastern reaches overlook the coast to the far south of the BAY OF VAULLA.

It is the largest city in Loegress and is its main industrial centre, with various manufactories, most of them situated along the banks of the river Wyndour (Pop. c. 1,180,000).

BELDAT: Rvr. River in the east of AQUARIIA, flowing west for 330-miles from sources in the BLACK MOUNTAIN, before joining its parent, the river ISARRA.

BELDCHA: Set. Settlement in the south east of AQUARIIA, known for its cotton production, much of which is sold to merchants passing by during their circuit of THE WAY trade-route (Pop. c. 7,000).

BELDUH: Set. Settlement in the c east of AQUARIIA, along the course of the river ALSHAT (Pop. c. 4,000).

BELEGOR: 1. Dem. 'Belegori'. Ntn. Nation and region in the south west of WESTERN SAMMAEA. Climate/terrain.

History. Knightly tradition to defend again historical CARNYNGAN incursions. Knightly tradition is now long gone, but the 70 noble houses that were born from its crusades against Carnyngan predecessor state are today still strong. The region is now known for its knight-industrialists.

It is ruled by a triarchic council which comprises three seats of power, which, in theory are occupied by representatives from the church, state, and nobility, but all three seats have been ruled by the same household since the rule of triplets (1st born who was a politician, 2nd born who was a general and 3rd born who was a priest. Seats became hereditary under their decree, falling to their direct ancestors over the years. Like many families, there have been periods of conflict and others of prosperity. We are presently in a time of uncertainty with one of the three rulers grasping as possibly fake history to make a claim for all 3 seats. Other two are forced into a loose alliance against the 3rd) in 3728 RM.

See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

2. also 'the Cupola City'. Set. City-state and capital of the Belegor region, thought by KORACHANI travellers to be gigantic and sprawling, the majority of which is subterranean. Its Korachani name is derived from the first sight that greeted imperial travellers when they discovered the region in c. 1630 RM – the many large defensive cupolas that also serve as the only entry into the city.

Belegor is thought by imperial scholars to occupy ancient GIGANRI catacombs, where it survives now as an oddity – a metropolis trade centre, acting as a crossroads of trade linking disparate surrounding regions. Other CUPOLA-CITIES exist in the surrounding region and though unproven, most are thought to link to Belegor, like rodent warrens. Constructed out of concrete and metal, these cupola-cities are extremely well-defended and served by various knightly castes and orders.

The region of Belegor is ruled by a militocratic plutarchy, where elder knights and merchant-lords reign over the many regimented castes that comprise its population. The region is noted for its dichotomous nature, with males fulfilling most roles, and women generally belonging to two castes — either breeders or as an ancient and powerful regulatory body, where they serve as Firmamental law-enforcers (Pop. unknown).

BELENUS: Sea. Bay in the far south of KOMMEA, serving as a partial border between it and CALBIA^(1.).

BELERA: Rvr. Lake in the south of KARGAMA, along the course of the river WOLMASH.

BELERBYRIA: Ser. Independent city in the south east of SOUTHERN SAMMAEA. It is one of few surviving cities that were once part of the nation of THYSHIA, that was destroyed by prolonged volcanic activity culminating in the eruption of the IMENAZZI caldera in 3876 RM. Though most of the nation was displaced, forced into neighbouring states as refugees and migrants, Belerbyria was one of few cities that stubbornly continued, defying the expanding borders of neighbouring nations to remain an independent state.

It has since grown greatly, attracting back many who had originally fled Thyshia, as well as their descendants as the original generation who witnessed the calamity of the eruption of the caldera first hand. It has remained a coastal city and has a thriving port today, that serves as an intermediary to the neighbouring states of YSACYITHAIA and GRAMMATER, who remain at odds over territorial claims along the border of where Thyshia once lied (Pop. c. 79,000).

BELESSA: Set. Settlement in the east of N'RAKH (Pop. unknown).

BELETH: Set. Settlement in the c north west of the VESPERTINE LEAGUE, to the south of the GATE OF SATARNICA (Pop. c. 13,500).

BELFRY OF KAUDOS, the: see KAUDOS, BELFRY OF.

BELFRY OF DHAL EGEDDA: Rui. Str. Ancient PHOL EGEDDAN citadel dating to c. 750 RM, now ruined and abandoned in the c of the emirate of UKOLIST^(1.) in the north east of LIMOTH^(1.). Most of the structure is now destroyed or buried in hard earth, but part of its dome remains visible, the remnants of its seven massive belltowers looming high above the plains. Parts of the buried structure remain accessible and have been partially explored, though large annexes of the structure are thought to remain undisturbed beneath the shallow slopes of the upper VOTH Valley.

BELFRY OF NASHATAGHA: His. Arc. Ancient granite belfry, towering some 200-ft. high, in the northern foothills of the KOTHA TYRAL Mountains in the west of THETIS. It is thought to date to the FOURTH AGE, and despite its age it is well preserved, with dozens of chambers leading up to an empty cupola – whatever gigantic bell that once hung there long-since gone.

BELHEN: Set. Small city in the c south of RAONGEN⁽²⁾. Its main industry is the mining of OMNATITE (Pop. c. 7,200).

BELICANT: Sec. Small city in the south east of BANT. Its main industry is the production of a stimulant drug known as CACOETH that is used to invoke rage and mania in those who consume it. The drug is produced from herbs grown along the peripheries of the corrupted region of CACOETHEA, and are sold across ELYDEN, and are commonly used as stimulants in battle and some forms of blood sports (Pop. c. 18,000).

BELISA: Set. Small coastal city in the north west of TISARA, overlooking the west of the GULF OF USEA (Pop. c. 14,700).

BELISARIUS, the: Veh. Gigantic bespoke ALMAGESTI landship, thought to be the limit of what present-day technologists are capable of creating. It is estimated to weigh around 20,000,000 lbs. and is around 500-ft. long, crawling on dozens of tracks that tear at the earth as it moves.

Built in 3711 RM by HOUSE ARTIFEX in its own yards to be a mobile mining vehicle in, it moved across Ahrishen, not only excavating brown coal but also transporting it to industrial centres where it was sold and moved directly to furnaces and manufactories by conveyor belt. Over the years as the House's businesses changed its role as excavator diminished and it became more of a status symbol. It was refitted and upgraded many times, and by c. 3800 RM it had become the permanents home to a large part of House Artifex, moving from city to city, or merely following good weather.

With a mechanical crew of seven, a permanent armed guard of 20 soldiers, and a household staff of dozens, it remains a marvel of the technologists' art, having inspired many lesser competitors, including various military vehicles that aspire to its grandness. Despite being a civilian vehicle, it was fitted with various artillery, ranging from batteries of 3.7" guns to smaller heavy rifles, and it possesses various firing decks that are accessible to its household guards.

Over the years it has become somewhat of an unofficial symbol of Almagest, though the government clashed with it at various times over ownership of the vehicle. In 3827 RM it was involved in a series of firefights with Almagesti forces using the excuse of trespassing to fire upon it, which ultimately injured many and killed a patrician. Fortunately, a change in government soon after saw the election of new governors who were more favourable to the House, and the landship has since been granted a free pass across Almagest.

BELISARIUS ARTIFEX: m. (B. 3452 – D. 3661 RM) Ind. Per. PATERFAMILIA and ARCHPATRICIAN of HOUSE ARTIFEX between 3781 RM and his death. He was a ruthless leader and lobbied hard for the return of House Artifex to its ancestral position of Chancellor of the Republic, though despite his wealth and influence he was unable to accomplish this. Regardless, he led House Artifex to greater prosperity within Almagest and beyond.

Like many in his place he prolonged his life through use of orthoses, ATRAMENTAL drugs and other means, and lived for over two centuries. His eventual death in 3661 RM left his daughter Sardis as MATERFAMILIA^(1,) of the House.

The INFAMOUS LANDSHIP commissioned by his son in 3711 RM was named after him.

BELISHA: Set. City in the c of CISNERIA (Pop. c. 40,000).

BELIT: Set settlement in the north east of VENTHIR. It is one of few major remaining areas in Venthir known for its OPIATE production, most of which is used in HETEPHEROPOLIS (Pop. c. 9,000).

BELKIN: Sea. Bay in the south east of ZHARIAH^(2.).

BELL: Soc. Rel. Cup-shaped percussion instrument that produces a single tone when struck. The study of bells and the practice of ringing them is known as CAMPANOLOGY.

Bells are important objects in KORACHANI (and, later, its vassal states) culture and folklore. This dates back to the before the rise of the empire itself, to the days when the KORACHANI PENINSULA was home to various disparate states, though historians do not know the exact origins of the significance behind the bells.

Bells were once common grave goods used throughout KORACHAN, PELASGOS and AZAZEM, though the tradition was slowly lost after the introduction of DROSS led to exponentially fewer burials taking place.

They carry great meaning within the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, and many saints are depicted carrying a bell, either in their hands or otherwise as an icon on jewellery. Cenotaphs and memorials often depict bells, and the SKULLS of the dead are engraved with symbols of bells. PETITIONERS OF THE MACHINE often carry bells with them, ringing them as they walk. Most religious festivals also have processions of bell ringers running through streets, and the ringing of church bells is an important part of the day serving to remind slaves and helots to go to mass.

In Korachan, most bells, including those used on government structures, as well as religious ones, are blessed and are considered to be tools of the UNDYING MACHINE, and are regarded with much respect. The sound of a bell is seen as something mystical and it is considered bad manners to speak while a peak is being rung, for instance. People learn at a young age to identify the sounds of different bells and by the time they are children most can differentiate the sounds of church bells, governmental bells, or peals used for special occasions such as weddings, EXECUTIONS or funerals, for instance.

In days before the widespread use of TELEGRAPHY and shaping for rapid dissemination of news, bells were used to spread news across cities. Different patterns of chimes meant different things, and bells could be used to quickly alert people of vague information. This is still used in some far-flung regions or rural areas.

It is believed that bells became synonymous with death following years of their use during funerals, with the chiming later becoming symbols of death. Their appearance in legends and folklore linked with death is also common, including the widespread myth of <a href="https://ghost.new.google.goo

Major producers of bells in the INNER SEA REGION are the cities of CARILLAR and GALETE.

BELL OF AGONEPHATOSH: see AGONEPHATOSH, BELL OF.

BELL CORVEN, the: Leg. Myr Legend in ALMAGEST and SKAROS. The Bell Corven is a hooded AL AKHI covered in bells, sometimes seen on foggy nights on moors and abandoned terrain shepherding the lost. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

BELL ENGINE, the: Int. Sup. Tec. Semi-mythical TECHNARCANE engine of immense power rumoured to exist in a great fort outside the city of MIHARAST in the UMBRA SOKHAR. Claims as to its purpose vary greatly, and include unfounded claims that it is used to move people through time and/or great distances, or that it acts as a great MAGICKAL amplifier, though the truth is simply unknown. Indeed, it is not even known that this supposed technarcane marvel really exists.

The common name for the engine stems from the supposed shape the engine has.

The rumours possibly stem from odd military activity surrounding the fort, with soldiers and attaches arriving and leaving at strange hours, as well as the many electrical cables that were laid between the city and the fort to provide the latter with a steady powerful power source. To what ends remain unknown.

BELL JELLYFISH: Fau. Amongst the largest known jellyfish, common to the colder waters of south western SAMMAEA and BROR^(1,). The largest-noted specimens have had bell (body) diameters of more than 20-ft. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy.

BELL OF MARTYRS: see MARTYRS, BELL OF.

BELL OF OMENS: see OMENS, BELL OF.

BELL OF ST. MALICHAR: see ST. MALICHAR, BELL OF.

BELL SAMU: Mil. Str. Fortress and UMBRA extraction facility in the c of SARASTRO. The fortress is built on the ruin of an ancient SAOSTANAN fort.

BELL SHALLATH: Leg. Geo. In many myths and legends across ELYDEN, Bell Shallath is the deepest pit of the PRISON CARCERI where antediluvian beings are imprisoned at the behest of THE SHAPER. Their true location is unknown, though they are thought to be far beneath the nation of PELASGOS.

BELL TOWER OF GERRA SHABOTT: Int. His. Rui. Leg. Str. Monolithic bell tower in the plains of eastern PARAIYA, believed to date to the middle FOURTH AGE. A large palace, thought to be a court of law, existed in the place at the time of the bell tower's construction, and the bell tower was likely added later. It survived the FADING, though was toppled by an earthquake in c. 1500 RM, and is now considered one of the WONDERS OF THE ANCIENT WORLD.

BELLAOU: Set. Settlement in the south of PARAIYA. It has little modern industries of note, and most of its people are herders or work in industries related to herding, such as tanning, preserving meat, or producing wool (Pop. c. 3,400).

BELLATOR: Mil. Rnk. Common soldiers of the SARASTROAN army. The term can be used for professional soldiers, who serve a 7-year minimum term before they can consider retiring, as well as slave and conscript troops.

BELLATRIX ANTE: f. Per. (B. 3963 RM) Pol. Present archminister of IPANAH^(2.).

BELLAUA: Geo. Shallow valley in the north east of PNESSA comprising a very slow-moving stretch of the river YAGNOTH PHTHAN, around 390miles long.

BELLAUAN RIDGE: Geo. Expansive rocky escarpment in the c north east of PNESSA. Its rocks are characterised by their bright colours – pink, peach, red, orange, cream and many others – in undulating strata that are clearly visible in eroded cliff-faces. The bones of strange and wondrous creatures are often found half-exposed or at the base of the cliffs.

BELLEN: Sup. Geo. FIRMAMENTAL WASTES in the east of EASTERN MENISCEA, along the border between EASTERN LARISH and the PARTHISAN colony of EZHIRAYA^(2.), where King URSUN had his body interred upon death. Found in a region known for its temporal anomalies, he had a great engine built there where inanimate objects (including deceased bodies) would lie in state, largely unaffected by the passage of time. Much of his nations' fortunes were spent researching and constructing the TECHNARCANE engine and it was finally used upon his death in 3002 RM, and it remains to this day, guarded by Krysan troops.

BELLEPHARA: Geo. Mountain-chain, some 900-miles long, that now serves as a border between the nations of SAGITTARIA and ALKHA. The mountain is very young, steep-sided and rough, its brown-grey colouration and wavy strata common throughout its length.

BELLN, RUNE OF: Sol. In PARAIYA, one of the three cultural runes, around which their culture is formed.

BELLN: 1. Geo. Plains dominating the south of PARAIYA, known mostly for its production of mutton and wool, and for the ruined GARRARUS that dot the area. It is a fertile region, and much of it has been converted to agriculture.

2. Soc. Pol. One of three major tribes that lives in the south of PARAIYA. Though traditionally nomadic, the belln have settled down in, largely in the city of TANADOU and NOCTOU, and in some cases have reclaimed the abandoned GARRARUS, hollowing their tiered sides into dwellings.

3. Soc. Str. Large multi-tiered GARRARU in the south of PARAIYA thought to be one of the original ones built by the belln nomads. It is now partially ruined and flooded, ignored by the nomads.

BELLOWS: see BILLIGUN.

BELLREAVA PROLGAPEA: f. Pol. His. Per. (B. 2762 – 2955 RM) the first PROLGAPEAN EMPRESS of SIMBARA, and wife of REXIMAND PROLGAPEA, who was declared emperor of Simbara in 2789 RM. She was beloved by the people and praised for her otherworldly good looks and philanthropic acts, which blinded many to her intelligence and political acumen. She was an avid reader, and founded the IMPERIAL ATHENAEUM AND REPOSITORY in 2823 RM, which remains an acclaimed institution of higher learning to this day. She was a modest SHAPER who used her abilities to create beautiful sculptural works of art, many of which still grace public and private edifices in Simbara to this day.

She ruled Simbara (jointly, with her husband in Simbaran tradition) with a benevolent hand, doing through the adulation of her subjects what other rulers had to resort to tyranny to achieve. Though even so long after her death, political historians continue to find evidence of her courtly manipulations, powers of persuasion, and diplomatic brilliance, which were only matched by her husband's.

The death of Reximand in 2904 RM left Bellreva widowed for the remainder of her days. She never remarried and until her own death 51 years later she wore a black shawl over her courtly clothes in reverence of her husband. She lost the lustre of her youth in this time, and made fewer public appearances, but this only served to reinforce the people's love for her. Upon her own death in 2955 RM a great mausoleum was built for them by their children, known now as the PROLICEUM, in which the two were interred together.

Together, she and Reximand led Simbara from the uncertain days of the SHERRIAN CIVIL WAR into an age of enlightenment, wealth and power that was only matched during their time by the KORACHANI EMPIRE far to the north. They are still remembered fondly today as the PROLGAPEAN HOST, and their lives and rule are celebrated every springtime, when Simbara is bedecked in white, gold and crimson pennants and banners – their dynastic colours.

BELLS, GHOST: Leg. Legends common throughout the nations of the KORACHANI EMPIRE that share a common motif in which people travelling across wastelands and hinterlands between civilised lands hear distant BELLS chiming eerily, usually presaging a mystical event of some sort. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

BELLS OF MALICHAR: Soc. Obj. Str. Famed bells in the city of KHADON that perform a peal of three bells, typically indicating some form of activity undertaken by the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR, such as taking important dignitaries, or leaving or arriving from the BASTION OF STEEL.

They have been famously silent for centuries, given the Archpotentate's reclusiveness, but have already pealed twice in recent memory – once on $2^{\rm nd}$ MURDAD 4006 RM, when it was reported that he had stirred from centuries odd ennui, and once again on the $7^{\rm th}$ KORAHALEN 4006 RM when he left Khadon for LYRIDIA to beseech the counsel of the Great SIBYL.

BELON: Set. City in the region of SYNCRASIA in the north of THE SURRACH. It is located 60-miles south of the IVORY ROAD, and trades many goods north with the city of JAZKIA (Pop. c. 31,400).

BELPHAS: 1. Pol. Duchy of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of SYRTIS^(1.).
 Geo. Peninsula between the sea of NOAS and the northern-most reaches of the SEA OF DERAEA.

BELPHEGORIA: Set. City in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of SYRTIS(1.), famed for its coastal citadels, though it is now about half-a-mile from the coast (Pop. c. 45,000).

BELPHETAR: m. Myt. His. Per. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, a SCION and offspring of the DEMIURGES SYBARIS^(1,) and KHARANI, currently imprisoned in the fortress of KABBARA in the nation of KARAKHAS. He was known as a warmonger and had hundreds of mortal banners at his disposal. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

BELRUD: Set. City in the c north of SUOR, along the course of the river LOTAN. Many of its buildings are caped with grotesque copper figures, which are now stained greed from oxidisation (Pop. c. 43,500).

BELTAAL: See Major city in the north of KASHAAL. It is known for its ancient stone structures that are though to date to the FOURTH AGE, many of which have been repurposed into municipal buildings(Pop. c. 74,000).

BELTEMAR: Leg. Per. Infamous OTHERWORLDER that is renowned in western BROR^(1,). The figure appears in the myths and legends of various regions, including GREST, CREPISCULA, and the western DOMAINS OF SHAUATAS, and it is likely that the otherworlder was active in the period during which the legends were first set down.

Despite its notoriety, stories surrounding Beltemar differ from region to region, with it taking the form of a wandering trickster in Shauatas, a shape-shifting 'demon in Grest, and an eerie curious observer in Crepiscula, where it acts a narrator to many other of its myths and legend. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

BELTI: Cur. Unique currency used in the PANTHEON ISLES. Taking the form of silver crosses of different sizes, all with a hole in the middle, through which coins are often tied onto a length of string. The currency is only recognised by neighbouring nations, and even many of the less urban isles of the Pantheon archipelago do not use the coins, using a barter system and dolphin teeth as currency, though this tradition is rapidly waning and remains only in the most isolated of island-settlements. See Vol II: Currency and Coinage in Elyden.

BELTSAR KOAN: x. Mil. Pol. Per. (B. 3944 RM) grandmaster of the KYONI

ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION since 4003 RM. They are a member of the influential mercantile PATRICIAN HOUSE ARRACH^(1.), though forsook their birthright and the riches that went with it for a life in the Order, where they had to fight adversity from other members to earn their promotions and recognition over the years. Beltsar earned respect through exceptional bravery and strategic brilliance in defending against the Siege of ESSOCHAN in 4000 RM.

Relatively new to the rank of grandmaster, many other members of the order have their reservations about their appointment, which controversially bypassed typical elections, leading to some believing that they were placed in power through nepotism via family connections. Despite this, they are charismatic and beloved by most of their lessors and the Order as a whole.

BELUAN: Ind. Set. Open-caste mine and city in the north of PARAIYA, flanking the river PARA. The mines were founded in 1343 RM, after rich slate deposits were found in the area. When KORACHAN became suzerain of the region it upped production of the slate, increasing the size and output of the mine greatly, until it became a major industrial and political power in northern Paraiaya. It prospered until around 2732 RM, when deposits began to dwindle, leading to its eventual diminishing, and its mines had been largely forgotten by c. 3000 RM.

The nation was left to the DOMNITORS in 2703 RM, who over generations mingled with the native upper-classes of Beluan, becoming known as tyrants. There, they created a new culture that became more removed from the Korachani heartland with each generation. By c. 2980 RM they had divided Paraiya into various territories and were calling themselves the KESHUGHALS (meaning king in PARAIYAN) with a single Keshughal ruling each territory as a sovereign.

The Domnitors were forgotten by KORACHAN and over generations they mingled with the upper-classes of Beluan, forming a ruling caste, which by c. 3800 RM had spread to the rest of Paraiya (giving rise to the SULTANATE in 3821 RM, centred in SOPORA).

The large man-made crater outside the city is now filled with icy water, stained blue from chemicals produced during the mining process. Antagonism exists between the people of Beluan and tribe of AREN, who adhere to strict traditions and laws and despise the dilution of their bloodline and the past industrialisation of Beluan (Pop. c. 71,000).

BEM DRASTAS: (B. 3942 RM). Pol. Present JURISPRUDENT of KARGAMA, elected in 4001 RM. He was a high ranked WITNESS in Kargaman society, and is highly-respected amongst both the laity and the ORDER OF WITNESSES.

BEMAH: Set. Major tiered city in the north west of ESHIR^(2.). It is known for its terraced public gardens and aqueducts that bring water to it from the hills of EDERIN (Pop. c. 105,200).

BEMMESH: Set. City in the c north west of TAAN AN, just over 25-miles south of the capital CUR APON. It is a major agricultural centre, and most of its population is made up of small rural communities around the main city, all of which receive their water from a nearby KIRATU and the AQUEDUCT OF CREPHITHISS (Pop. c. 40,000).

BENA: (D. 1216 RM) Rel. Prophet from the region of IKOTROD in present-day IMELKOT, who in c. 1180 RM returned from the dense highland rainforests of the INZIVA in possession of the GODSTONE^(1,) PRONAOS TESSERA recovered from the tomb of the SCION BARAKAVRA and her words echoing in her head. She became incredibly influential thanks to her newfound powers and rapidly united the surrounding peoples, becoming empress of the nation of IMELKA, which was founded in 1191 RM.

She died in 1216 RM, having established a powerful nation and a ruling DYNASTY that would go on to rule Imelka for centuries until its collapse in 1809 RM. In life she garnered a reputation for sadism that would become a trait of the dynasty she founded, whose possession of the Godstone turned them into gods amongst men.

Coastal city in the north west of the $\underline{KORACHANI}$ colony of $\underline{AMONDOR}^{(1.)}$. It forms part of the \underline{RED} ROUTE, and leads caravans north into the \underline{MULL} CITY-STATES (Pop. c. 12,000).

BENACHAN: Set. Small coastal city in the north west of the KORACHANI colony of AMONDOR^(1.) (Pop. c. 18,000).

BENALASH: 1. Geo. Rocky region in the west of ANUBIA, encompassing most of the NAAIA basin, and forming the south western-most part of the deserts of Anubia. The remnants of an ancient aqueduct points to the now-dead city of ODISHA that is hidden beneath the sands of the north eastern deserts.

2. Rui. Remnants of a large aqueduct litter the eponymous area of the ANUBIAN desert, its size staggering, believed to have drawn water from springs and river from the northern face of the HAAGEN Mountain to the north west. It is thought to have provided water to the now ruined city of ODISHA.

- BENARINA: Sct. Small fortified coastal city in the west of KAZZAR (2.), in the peninsula of UNARALOTT. It was once a stronghold of the GODSLAYERS, though they left the city in c. 3820 RM (Pop. c. 17,000).
- BENEN: Set. Settlement in the north of Ahrishen, in the region of $\underline{\text{NEAGARI}}^{(1,)}$. Its main industry is logging (Pop. c. 6,400).
- BENESH: Soc. Rnk. Merchant-caste in AHKA. When a young man comes of age, he is bestowed with the title of Benesh, meaning that he can now trade with other family-groups. The Benesh are traders and travellers, rarely staying in a settlement for long, and serve a vital role of spreading wealth and produce amongst the otherwise disparate people.
- BENET MUVA: Set. Major coastal city in the far north west of VALA. It is a major mercantile city and is the eastern terminus of the VALARI ROAD as well as the western-most city along the VAEVECTAN TRAIL, making it an important hub of trade (Pop. c. 103,000).
- BENGON: Set. Large city in the east of CUTH. It is a burgeoning industrial centre, with many metal foundries and manufactories (Pop. c. 18,000).
- BENHORAT: Set. City in the c west of GNOTH, along the course of the river ALKAHEST (Pop. c. 140,000).
- BENISH: Set. City in the c of ESHIR^(2,). Its main industry is the quarrying of clay from wetlands surrounding the confluence of the river GAPI with the GAMUS.
- BENNANI: Pol. Rnk. Rulers of pre-VENTHIRI independent NÁRTHEL who emerged from the DOMNITORS who were left to rule the land following KORACHANI abandonment of the region in 3699 RM following 8 centuries of rule under the Domnitors. The last decades of Domnitor tenure over the region were marked by a marked change in their habits. They had already begun to abandon imperial customs by c. 3500 RM, and were beginning to form traditions of their own. They married into local dynasties (most of which had waned to hollow lineages, spent by millennia of Korachani subjugation and wanton rape of their resources) to secure their power over the land. By the time Korachan abandoned their land, the Domnitors had not used that name outside of imperial politic for many decades, and had taken on the name of Bennani, which was KORACHA-SVATHI for 'noble'.
- The Bennani ruled until $3800\,\mathrm{RM}$, after which the nation changed to a Parliamentary republic.
- BENTHIC TRENCH: Sea. Geo. Deepest part of the BATHASHAL OCEAN, believed to be over 50,000-ft. deep and over 5,000-miles long. The waters above the Trench have been avoided by mariners for millennia, and various stories and legends have risen around disappearances and unresolved activity in the region.
- BEPHESH, TREE OF: Int. Flo. Large OLIVE tree outside the city of VELTHUR in the east of AYAD. It is claimed by locals to be the oldest living olive tree in ELYDEN. Sources claim it is close to 6,000 years old, dating it to the FOURTH AGE and possibly making it the oldest natural living organism in Elyden.
- BEQAA: Lak. Lake in the south of TZALLRACH, along the course of the river CHIEN.
- BERA: Rvr. Lake in the c west of KARGAMA, along the course of the river WOMASH. It has an area of around 1,750 miles, though was once much larger, however changing climate and mortal encroachment saw it dwindle, though there is currently no concern that it will dry up.
- $\underline{\textbf{BERAGOT}}\text{: }\textit{Geo.} \text{ Basin in the c of } \underline{\textbf{THE SURRACH}}\text{. It is dominated by the salty endorheic lake } \underline{\textbf{ZARAZESH}}\text{.}$
- BERAK: Set. Settlement in the c of the tribe of LINARIS, in the south of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. It is a major source of adamantine in the region (Pop. c. 4,000).
- BERASIEN: Flo. Tropical tree native to the south east of MENISCEA, in ACHAA^(2.), LANTUA, and TAES. It is known for its wood, which burns very slowly and with very little heat, giving off a dim for months or even years, given the quality and conditions. This makes the wood sought after, and berasien trees are cultivated specifically for this, grown in FIRMAMENTALLY-influenced groves, reaching maturity in around 5-years. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

- BERASEM: Ast. Second of three satellites of the PLANET GNIHLAS. See Vol II: Planets and Satellites.
- BERASSIM BASIN: Lak. Large endorheic basin dominating the north east of KREM, forming the northern-most part of the MO-ORASSIM Mountains. The relative depth of the region, and the seasonal rivers that allow water to flow into it, allow for a high water table that results in many springs and the easy construction of wells. This has allowed more settlements to appear in the region than might otherwise be expected, given the climate.
- BERAUT: Set. Settlement in the south of GIBEAH, situated along the course of the river EBBOARDI (Pop. unknown).
- BERDAIR: Set. Fortified coastal city in the c west of KAZZAR⁽²⁾, overlooking the BAY OF BERDAN (Pop. c. 45,000).
- BERDAN: Sca. Bay in the c west of KAZZAR^(2,), forming the eastern-most part of the IGUZZEN lagoon.
- BERDERA: For. Tropical forest dominating the coast of the north west of GIBEAH, named by the explorer NAVAH BERDEN in 609 RM. The region is renowned for its gigantic monoliths and granite rock formations that rise vertically from the forest canopy. The region is a source of various plants, medicines and chemicals, cultivated by the locals.
- BERDERAN: Geo. Highlands in the c of GIBEAH, forming part of the border with the east of CHEIRA. They are named after the explorer NAVAH BERDEN, though the name is only used in KORACHAN.
- BEREBONT: Rvr. River in the north of RHINOCOLOURA flowing north west for 275-miles from sources in the SIRI RAH Mountains before meeting its parent, the river SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾.
- BEREGAME: Rvr. River in the north of TATAR, flowing west for 280-miles from sources in the BOSPAR Mountains and the TAAREN Hills, before meeting the coast at the GULF OF ESHIRON.
- BEREK: 1. Geo. Island off the eastern coast of TAMAR, belonging to THE HARÉSHK.
- 2. Pol. Southern-most duchy and island of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of EDICULE^(1,). In 807 RM political insurgents were exiled there after the uniting of surrounding lands into HARÉSHKA. Their descendants became slavers and pirates, a tradition that characterises Edicule to this day. Sometimes preying on the Haréshk. In c. 2950 RM it became an ally to Tamar, though in 3563 RM it became part of the Haréshk, and within a few its harbours had grown, becoming famed for their slave markets and massive storage yards.
- 3. Set. Colony of EDICULE^(1.) on an island off the eastern coast of LYRIDIA. The settlement is heavily fortified and serves as a harbour for Edicule's ships (Pop. c. 46,000).
- BEREK, STRAIT OF: Sea. Narrow strait, about 15-miles at its narrowest, in the east of THE HARÉSHK, dividing the mainland from the island of BEREK.
- BEREK HAL: Set. Oas. Oasis settlement in the north west of ANUBIA. The settlement is home to a caste of scholars who study the writings of ancient historians and pass on their knowledge to the next generation. Their lore is well-regarded across the north east of EASTERN SAMMAEA and also parts of southern CENTRAL LLACHATUL, with historians travelling there from the TWIN EMPIRES and beyond to study within its mud fortresses (Pop. c. 2,400).
- BEREKODRA: Rvr. Major river in the south of SERROK, flowing west for 850-miles from sources in the south of the HAMAIADON Mountains before meeting the coast at the Sea of Lethea. Its waters swell seasonally from flood and meltwaters, causing it to spill over its banks, sometimes many miles-so, making it impossible to construct bridges across it.
- BERELIAH: Geo. Island off the south eastern coast of ZHARIAH⁽²⁾, enclosing the GULF OF URDILA.
- BERELLAN: Rvr. River in the north west of RHINOCOLOURA, flowing west from sources in the KARSIGHOR Mountains before meeting its parent, the river SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾.
- BEREMARA: Geo. Island in the c of the MAIDEN ISLES, off the south eastern coast of MENISCEA.
- BERENGEN ELNATH: (B. 3957 RM) Soc. Pol. Current Archpatrician of House Elnath and ruler of the microstate of Achera.

BERENIT: Set. Settlement in the far south of LIDEA, in the region of GILGAMAE. It forms part of the SALT ROAD and has hostels and inns that cater to travellers passing through (Pop. c. 7,200).

BERENTH, the: Int. Arc. Iron obelisk, close to a mile in height, in the south east of GIBEAH, in the BERDERAN plains. The obelisk is carved from a natural iron pillar, with odd designs carved into its surface, indicative of a past use that is ignored or forgotten by the natives. It is clearly of ancient origin, as its size and untarnished nature bear testament to, though little else is known of its history or purpose.

BEREPHASS: For. Rainforest in the east of SERROK. Over the past centuries it has been subjected to large-scale logging, which has led to the expansive desertification of the region and leeching of its soil.

BERESH: Set. Fortified settlement in the north of the tribe of JACITTA, in the c of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 4,000).

BERET: Sca. Bay in the south west of CHEIRA, overlooking the larger SEA OF KHURSA. Its southern-most waters are fouled by the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region of EXITUS. Despite its distance from the heart of the SEA OF LETHEA, its waters are heavily-afflicted by the amnesic qualities the region is known for, and there are some settlements along its northern shores where the water is refined into the drug known as LETHE, particularly in the city of BERETUGI.

BERETLIS: Sct. Settlement in the south east of AETHIOS, just south of lake EMAHOM (Pop. c. 5,000).

BERETRA: Set. City in the south of the SYNHODOS PLATEAU in the c JURRAS^(2.) (Pop. c. 17,500).

BERETTI: Rvr. River in the west of AETHIOS, flowing east for 430-miles from sources in the ANCHIAUS Mountains before meeting its parent, the river SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾. The river flows through the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region of the BLEEDING PLAINS, which turns the water to a thick ichor that does not flow, allowing only a trickle of largely untainted water to escape into the Shibboleth.

BERETUGI: Set. Small coastal city in the south west of CHEIRA. It is known as a manufacturer of the drug LETHE (Pop. c. 18,000).

BEREV: Sea. Bay in the south of the SEA OF ESCHATA, to the north of the BARRIER LANDS. Like most seas of ELYDEN it has shrunk over the past centuries, and was once much larger, reaching as far south as the GHARAD desert.

BEREVELINTEA: Sup. Str. Strange concrete structure in the heart KORACHAN. Built in 2222 RM, it is a brutalist structure, interpreted as a temple by some, or a monument by others.

Its purpose is unknown by most, though it is in fact a powerful ATRAMENTAL FOCUS^(2.) that has been used in experiments and research. Potent TECHNARCANE engines are hidden beneath the structure and house the CHOIRS of ATRAMENTISTS that sometimes gather there to work together. Many of these choirs dabble in energies they cannot hope to control, and often lose their lives or minds to their hubris.

BEREVOON: Set. Small coastal city in the north of the BARRIER LANDS in the north west of NORTHERN SAMMAEA. It controls the entrance into a nearby lagoon (Pop. c. 36,000).

BERGIMUS: Set. Settlement in the c south west of KOMMEA. Its main industry is copper mining (Pop. c. 6,500).

BERGIOA: Set. Settlement in the c south of TISARA, in the LHANA highlands. Its main industry is mining, specifically sulphur and gypsum, and three large pit mines surround the settlement (Pop. c. 7,20).

BERGAMUN: Set. Small city in the c north of VAALK, to the west of the river STORAGH, accessible across the natural Storagh bridge.

BERGUISE: Set. Settlement in the c north of TISARA. Its main industry is agricultural (Pop. c. 6,000).

BERIA: Set. Settlement and harbour in the north west of THUMAL. It forms a part of the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 32,600).

BERITH: Sca. Sea off the eastern coast of SABAISA, forming the northern-most part of the SEA OF ERENEA.

BERITH DRAGOON, INTIMIDATOR OF KAELRATH: (B. –92 RM)

Oth. HALFBLOOD prince of NÁRTHEL, later Dragoon of KAELRATH'S

KEFP.

BERIZ: Rui. Ruined farming conurbation in the region of ATROPHY in western AZAZEM. Prior to c. 3000 RM it was a major agricultural centre in the vassal state, controlling hundreds of square miles of surrounding fields and farmlands, with dozens of satellite villages and hundreds of fortified farmsteads, silos, and granaries. Though, like much of Azazem, these lands eventually abandoned due to mismanagement and changing climate. The region is famed for its voluminous GLASSHOUSES, in which various crops, mosses and algae were grown for the fledgeling dross industry.

BERIZ GLASSHOUSES: Rui. Abandoned arboretum in the region of BERIZ in western AZAZEM, comprising dozens of large wrought ironframed glasshouses and surrounding farmlands. Abandoned hundreds of years ago amid the collapse of the agricultural trade in Azazem following millennia of mismanagement and climate change, the glasshouses have been allowed to decay and have since been partially buried by floodwaters. Hints remain of surrounding settlements and manufactories, though for the most part the region has been reduced to rusted frames and shattered glass, and it is rumoured that there are miles of forgotten tunnels beneath the ruins, where archaic dross was once produced.

Travellers avoid the region, though those that pass from here hear noises coming from the ruins at night – possible signs of AL GHULS or DEGENERATES dwelling there.

BERKA: Set. Fortified coastal settlement in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of EDICULE^(1.), on the island of BEREK (Pop. c. 5,600).

BERLENE: (B. 2177 – D. 2219 RM) Art. LAASKHAN composer, famed for his light compositions.

BERMION: Soc. Pol. One of seven ruling CLANS in CISNERIA, whose emblem is the sabre-toothed deer, who embodies speed, and is a guardian to mothers. The others are DISLMA, GYSTAR, HOMMAL, KRAKYR, KRISLOR, SKULFUR.

BEROIDDA: Set. Major city in the c south of THE VORANDINE, in the south of the BOTH RATHO plains. It is noted for its agriculture, and it is surrounded by miles of farmlands and arable fields (Pop. c. 66,000).

BERRAN: Geo. Rugged highland area in the north east of JURRAS(2), and the south west of the BERRIAS Mountains.

BERREM: Rvr. Major river in BELEGOR in the south west of WESTERN SAMMAEA.

BERRIA: Set. Settlement in the c south west of JURRAS^(2.). Its main industry is agriculture, and it forms a part of the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 5,000).

BERRIAS: Geo. Mountain-range dominating the north east of JURRAS^(2.).

BERSERKER-MAGE: His. Sup. Soc. A caste of FIRMAMENTISTS that emerged in the now-extinct Sashellan⁽²⁾ culture of ancient Vesper, now in the north of the Vespertine League. The custom emerged from the earlier caste of Blood Champions, whose drug-fuelled duels served to settle disputes in neighbouring settlements. Extended use of the herbal drug Mullen eventually caused users (and their offspring) to display often uncontrollable bursts of Firmamental energy, which were slowly harnessed and used in ritual combats.

The berserker-mages proved pivotal in deterring the KNIGHTS OF ST. MALICHAR, who invaded the EHRENISIAN COAST in 1434 RM, though their sacrifice effectively ended their tradition, leading to a dwindling of this cultural milestone, which had to effectively start from scratch with the death of its practitioners during the war.

The Sashellan people were later absorbed by Vesper expansion in c. 2400 RM, and the berserker-mages were drafted into its armies, where they came to be used as terror troops, wreaking havoc amongst enemy forces. This incarnation of the berserker-mages was weaker than those seen in Sashell but they were more disciplined and better trained. They were used in battle against INGHULL, where once more, they were wiped out alongside the entirety of the Vesperi armies by the SORCERER-KINGS(3.) RASHAPH, who killed himself while shaping, causing the earth in a 25-miles to explode, causing untold devastation. This effectively ended the berserker-mage tradition. Though the herb can still be found in the north of the Vespertine League, it is no-longer consumed as it once was and it is unlikely that any now remain who inherited the Firmamental side-effects of its use.

BERUKETH: Set. Fortified settlement in the c of THETIS, in the ARHAHANU valley, to the east of the RTHEI desert (Pop. c. 3,800).

BERUSS: Rui. Abandoned tin mine in the north of present-day VENTHIR, though it part of KORACHANI-controlled NÁRTHEL when it was in use.

BERUTON: Set. Small fortified city in the north of SUMA'YA, along the north western shore of lake BAAL. A temple outside the city is only ever used during an important winter festival (Pop. c. 13,000).

BESALA: Set. Settlement in the c west of SEDISIA (Pop. c. 7,400).

BESAPHTO: His. Pol. SURUTURI colony in the west of the PANTHEON ISLES. It was abandoned in 2781 RM as Surutur left the archipelago.

BESESAAR: Geo. Island in the KORACHANI colony of UKOBACHAN. It's eastern-most point is home to half of the city of Ukobachan, with the other half across the 4-mile strait on the western-most part of the island of Ukobachan.

BESH Set. Major fortified city in the south west of SUOR, along the course of the river LOTAN. It is a major agricultural and industrial centre (Pop. c. 120,000).

BESHER AD: Set. City in the south east of SUOR, at the mouth of the river ISH EBBEN. It is known for its large shipyards (Pop. c. 40,000).

BESHIN: Set. Mining settlement in the east of KHULL. Its main industry is quarrying of hematite and azurite, which are used to make red and blue pigments, respectively. The industry has been working continuously since the time of the SORCERER-KINGS^(3.) (Pop. c. 5,800).

BESPAD: Rvr. River in the north east of AETHIOS, flowing east of 400-miles from sources in the SESAM and ARAM Mountains before meeting its parent, the river NARRATI.

BESPOKE BIRTHING: Int. Sup. Soc. A colloquialism used in states and territories where TRANSMORTALITY is common. It describes the act of parents engineering the traits of their children before they are born. The term is also used in a more industrial scale, where birthing ATELIERS and manufactories manipulate the bodies before birth to promote certain traits (strength, toughness, compliance, etc.).

The acceptance of bespoke birthing varies from state to state, and individual to individual. It is most common and accepted in PARTHIS, where fleshwrighting is relatively common, as well as MACELLARIA, in the far south west of SAMMAEA. It is commonly practiced in the ateliers and manufactories of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, and though its rich and powerful have access to bespoke birthing, it is not as common as in Parthis. The practice has waned in SARASTRO following the SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE, when its ruler, SATHEP THE RISEN, proclaimed it immoral and perverse to challenge the natural laws in such a manner. Though not outlawed, the memory of this proclamation runs deep and is more than enough to discourage bespoke birthing in Sarastro. People living in vassal states and dependencies of Sarastro might be more accepting of the practice, though it remains uncommon.

BESSIA: Set. Settlement in the c of AZAZEM, in the north of the AAORA Mountains that is responsible for the extraction of raw ALUMINIUM and beryl, as well as their refining, which produces bauxite tailings (Pop. c. 8,500).

BESSIA NU: Geo. Pass in the c of AZAZEM crossing the eastern reaches of the AAORA Mountains.

BESTCOHER: Sup. SPHERE of FIRMAMENTAL SHAPING, whose users can affect and alter the thoughts of animals. See Vol IV: Spheres and types of Shaping.

BESTIA: Com. Set. Major trade city in the south of SARAGOS, along the passage of the EAST ROAD. It is close to the border south with NAARETH (Pop. c. 45,000).

BESDIT: Ind. Set. Settlement in the north of KHAMID. Its main industry is the mining of rubies, many of which are sold to merchants travelling along the GREAT ROAD trade-route, eventually finding their way in distant markets along the route (Pop. c. 9,000).

BESYL: Rvr. Major river in the c north east of PNESSA. It flows for some 1,050-miles south from sources in the TATRASAN Mountains and LEKKUK Highlands before meeting the coast at GULF OF SAURIAR. It was once known for its expansive and fertile river delta, but this was left dry with the retreat of the \underline{SEA} OF \underline{SUPPA} , between 2500 – 3000 RM, which is now known for its salty plains.

BESTUM ATHO: Vol. PELASGOSI incunabulum dating to 132 RM, detailing many of the oddities that were beginning to appear as a result of imperial use of the ATRAMENTA. In its pages are detailed various TAINTED fauna, flora, and terrain.

BET SHARAZZUR: Set. Once great city in the north of TAES in the far south east of WESTERN MENISCEA. It has declined greatly over the past centuries in the wake of the nation falling under the yoke of the ONEIRODYNIC EMPRESS in 3675 RM, with its industry-based economy waning following a decline in the raw materials required for it to function. The heart of the city is dominated by a sprawling multi-annexed manufactory that supports the majority of the populace, which live, work and die beneath its prison-like walls. Chemical waste leeches from its base, polluting the city, as smoke belches from its gigantic pylon chimneys.

At its height in c. 3760 RM, it boasted a population of some 1,800,000 people, around half of them slaves, though today it is a fraction of that size, with its peripheries lying in ruin, populated by DEGENERATES and destitutes. Despite its diminished size, it remains one of the most industrious cities in Taes and is at the heart of its manufacturing centre. It was once coastal though is now situated along a large coastal flat that sees it become landlocked during low tides. A series of canals and tidal dams safeguard its ports, and it is a stopping point along the VAEVECTAN TRAIL (Pop. c. 129,000).

BETA: 1. Geo. Small mountain in the north of EREBETH, north east of the capital of BETENATH.

2. Geo. Pass in the north of EREBETH, between the Beta Mountain in the north and the KENUNIT range in the south.

BETAGHA: Geo. Mountain in the c of KEPHUAAN, between the GARDAGHIN and MAO SAGHI, to the west and east, respectively.

BETAHAL: Geo. Dry plains in the far north of THE SURRACH, east of the IAZKIAN plains.

BETALA: 1. Geo. Hills in the south west of LYRIDIA DHAI.

2. Set. Settlement in the south west of LYRIDIA DHAI that forms a link along the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 6,000).

BETEL: Ast. The shoulder of the constellation NEPHILIA.

BETENATH: Pol. Set. Capital of the nation of EREBETH (Pop. c. 858,000).

BETENATHI: Lan. Creole language spoken in FREBETH since the departure of the KORACHANI EMPIRE from its territories, becoming its most commonly-spoken language, above CALLISTEAN and KORACHANI

Though spoken in various places as differing dialects during the Korachani occupation of Erebeth, it was never an officially-recognised language, being secondary to Korachani, and discouraged by authorities.

With the departure of Korachan from Erebeth in 3698 RM the local populace was quick to reinstate Callistean, teaching it to children in schools, and with many older people willingly learning it also. This left the lower classes without a formal way of learning the language, and as a result the unofficial patois that had been previously been spoken became more prevalent, taking on more and more Callistean as time went on.

Today it is a mix of Korachani with an increasing Callistean influence. It is largely spoken in marketplaces, manufactories, and wherever the lower classes are predominant. See Vol II: Languages.

BETHAL: Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTAL desert in the c of LAASKHA, covering about 2,500 square-miles in a basin between the SUTTRA hills to the north, CAALUA to the west, and the ARCANTHEA Mountain to the south east. It is a region withered by the Atramenta, and is now of barren earth and lose dust-like soil. The area was, until c. 3490 RM, rolling grasslands.

The region is categorised as a LEAST CONCERN by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

BETHAR: also 'the Necropolis City'. Set. Major city and capital in the north of the HENDECARCHY of HATON, in the c north of MALAN. It is built along a flat plateau forming the northernmost part of the JHALOSS Highlands and is known for its expansive necropolises, many of which are millennia old and still in use by wealthy families (Pop. c. 241,000).

BETHER: Alc. Set. Small city in the c west of GNOTH, along the north western shore of lake IMAGA. It is a centre of medical and ALCHEMICAL research and is known for its hospitals and expeditionary doctors, who travel around Gnoth, offering their services in exchange for accommodation and food. They are a relatively well-known sight in nations neighbouring their homeland, and are recognised by the white staff they carry (Pop. c. 14,400).

BETHET: Geo. Small mountain in the north east of SAMMAEA, forming a natural border between the south of I'THANA and the north of AETHIOS.

BETHOL: Geo. Hills in the c east of TAHALL, forming part of the DHAKALL range.

BETHYLAN CIVIL WAR: Pol. His. Civil war in ALAM BETHYL that started in c. 3450 RM as a result of the increasingly tyrannical and self-serving rule of the SORCERER^(2,) dynasty that had ruled the region for centuries. Civil unrest and uprisings in SA RETH led to martial law being declared in 3453 RM, which ultimately only led to fighting in the streets between the downtrodden and the WARDERS and their forces.

The fighting continued for years, bringing chaos to the capital, allowing more distant territories to descend into lawlessness as the attention of the sorcerers turned to their own survival. This exacerbated the situation, and well-established cities far from the capital, such as BOTHUAR and DUATHAS, were able to break away from the waning grip of sorcerers, rallying the revolutionaries under a singular banner by 3473 RM, allowing them to march on Sa Reth, but what was thought to be a sure victory stretched into a protracted war that was only won through great sacrifice and the betrayal of a sorcerers by one of their own in 3482 RM.

The surviving sorcerers were ousted and the lands of Alam Bethyl divided into eight (later nine) territories, and the FEDERAL ASSEMBLY formed to rule over the land. The sorcerer caste was not eradicated, but laws were passed limiting the power they could wield, and they remain today in mostly rural areas, where their ritualistic traditions are more accepted. The warders caste, which once existed solely to protect the sorcerers, was allowed to die out but was reintroduced in 3562 RM as a policing force against sorcerers, after the introduction of laws designed to limit their power and influence.

BETRA: His. Arc. Limestone colossi in the c of LAASKHA, south of the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region of BETHAL. The colossi are half-buried in DUSTSTONE formations and are now damaged beyond recognition, though when they were first discovered by KORACHANI explorers in c. 450 RM, they were intact, their foundations not yet fractured.

BETRAOST: Rvr. River in the north east of CISNERIA, flowing for 380-miles from sources in the east of the BLACK MOUNTAINS, before emptying in the SEA OF APHOTIS.

BETTECHOT: Set. Small fortified city in the east of RHEA, known for its many honey-producing hamlets. The honey's properties are derived from rhododendron flowers, and was once used in religious rituals. Though this is no-longer the case, the honey remains a delicacy and is sold across ELYDEN to connoisseurs and gourmands (Pop. c. 6,000).

BETTYL: 1. Pol. Geo. Western province of PORPHYR.

2. Set. City in PORPHYR'S western province of the same name, which became capital in 1607 RM. It is known for its SKYSHIP ports, which are used to link the west of Porphyr with the east, via LEMEGETHAS and NYSHAB. It also maintains a route with SARAGOS (Pop. c. 2,809,000).

BETUL OLLA, TEMPLE OF: Rel. Str. Shrine in the south east of the RTHEI desert, visited by ATHATI nomads.

BETUR: Set. Conurbation in the c west of AZAZEM, originally comprising seven distinct settlements whose borders have now merged and are now different districts of one city. It is a major dross manufacturer and relies on offal and other biological waste from the city of VAULIAR to its east (Pop. c. 34,800).

BEUSTRIS: (D. 1762 RM) Pol. His. Queen of KARGEMMA, who acceded the throne in 1721 RM, ushering in an age of expansion that lasted until the end of her son's reign. The islands of ROHDIN and EDDÉ were settled under reign, and Kargemman armies marched west, south and east, on various campaigns to expand the kingdom's border.

BEVERESS: Sea. Bay off the eastern coast of SAMMAEA, bordering CHEIRA, SERROK and PORPHYR.

BEYOON: Set. Fortified city in the far north east of Krem. It is part of a trade-route east into the north west of THETIS (Pop. c. 38,000).

BEZOAR: Fau. Lumpy mass found in the stomachs of animals. Though largely worthless they are sometimes used in the creation of jewellery. In some cases, the bezoars of certain fauna may be valuable, particularly in the case of those found within DREAMSCAPES or in regions that are ATRAMENTALLY- or FIRMAMENTALLY-ACTIVE.

BEZONANT: Set. Bandit city in the far south east of the Surrach, in the west of ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region known as the DAENED SULRACH^(1.). Its raiders are known to penetrate as far West as the caravanserai of KALAI, as well as east into KHALHAT. It is ruled by QUEEN BACHESA, who is feared across her lands, and is known for its SOFTSUIT-wearing raiders (Pop. c. 42,000).

BEZZAYA: Set. City in the south east of the PRINCIPALITY OF
SEPAHAUNAT. It is known amongst the people of Sepahaunat as the site of an epic ancient pitched battle (Pop. c. 40,000).

BEZZIR: Com. Pol. Rnk. Powerful merchants in the REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO whose members control various stretches of the SALT ROAD and the RED ROUTE. They arose in ARGEA amid the chaos that followed the SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE, replacing the remnants of PATRICIAN HOUSES and trade consortiums that had lingered in the region by 3731 RM.

Since then, they have held a monopoly on trade in Sarastro and its vassals, working closely with the IMPERIAL DIWAN. Indeed, many high-ranking Bezzir find their way into the council of the Imperial Diwan, where they work to secure the future of their class.

BHAAD: Sea. Large bay off the western-coast of THE SURRACH, forming the eastern-most part of the SEA OF ESCHATA. Its waters are largely free of the ATRAMENTAL TAINT that plagues the larger Sea.

BHAADA: 1. Geo. Peninsula in the south west of THE SURRACH, to the south west of the UBIQUA delta.

2. Mil. Set. Militocratic city-state in the far west of THE SURRACH in the north west of SAMMAEA. The city-state controls the eponymous peninsula and surrounding archipelago overlooking the BAY OF BHAAD, its ships dominating trade around the sea (Pop. c. 130,000).

BHABHECH: Set. Small fortified city in the east of OTINTH. Like most Otinthian settlements, little is known about it due to the nations' insular nature (Pop. c. 12,750).

BHAEL: Set. City in the far north of LLACHATUL, overlooking the SEA OF SUDUNIR. The city forms part of a loosely allied people who populate the region around the arctic circle north of THE VORANDINE (Pop. c. 52,000).

BHAELPH AGH: Set. City in the far north of LLACHATUL, overlooking the SEA OF SUDUNIR. The city forms part of a loosely allied people who populate the region around the arctic circle north of THE VORANDINE (Pop. c. 7,000).

BHAER PHANULLURGH: Flo. For. Alien 'forest' of gigantic phallic fungus-like growths in the hinterlands of eastern ALTHEA in the continent of BROR (1.). Each of the growths stands around 20-ft. high with a diameter of around 4-ft., tapering at the tip. The 'forest' covers an area of around 12,000 square-miles, and though it sparsely-covered, there are still thousands of individual growths. The air surrounding the 'forest' is hot and humid, and the ground is covered in the ruin of ancient trees and plants, that lie unrotting despite the passage of time, their carcasses slowly feeding the extant 'forest'.

The area has not been studied by scholars from the Near Hemisphere, so little is known of it, other than third hand accounts from sea merchants and other travellers.

BHAKEMLIA: Sup. Geo. Expansive region of ATRAMENTAL TAINT in the far east of ADHERA, crossing the border into HOGGOTHA ISZ. It is known for its fleshy coral-like growths that spew SHADOWISPS into the air that float gently to the north west, rendering even lands unaffected by the taint uninhabitable.

The region is categorised as $\underline{\text{DANGEROUS}}$ by the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI}}$ $\underline{\text{INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES}}$.

BHAKK: Set. Farming settlement in the region of SYNCRASIA in the c north of THE SURRACH. Its main industry is cattle ranching (Pop. c. 10,000).

BHAL ATTON: Set. Major city in the south east of ZHARIAH⁽²⁾, along the course of the river ATTON, forming a part of the national trade route. It was founded as a coastal city, though the lowering of ELYDEN'S seas and the movement of the course of the river Atton have found it landlocked, some 15 miles from the coast. Its southern territories are prized arable farmlands situated in a fertile river delta (Pop. c. 380,000).

BHAL DURH: Set. Major city in the north of ZHARIAH^(2.). It was originally coastal, though waning sea levels have left it some 17-miles from the coast today. It is linked to the SEA OF ERENEA by a system of locks and canals that lead to the costal port of BHALABURR (Pop. c. 183,400).

BHAL FALKIAH: Set. Major city in the south west of SHEZALIAH, overlooking a salty lake. Its people are thought to be adept in BIOMECHANICS (Pop. unknown).

BHAL SEVAIAH: Set. Major city in the south east of Zhariah⁽²⁾, just upstream of the delta of the river SEVAIAH. It's an industrial city with many factories (Pop. c. 2750,000).

BHAL ZHARIAH: Pol. Ser. City and capital of ZHARIAH⁽²⁾, which takes its name from the city and region. The government collapsed in 3913 RM, following decades in instability in the wake of war with SIMBARA. It is situated along the banks of the river VENNON, and is known for its canals and locks, with different stretches of its waterways controlled by influential gangs that claim loyalty to the various political families and foes of warlord RHOZHADEN from across Zhariah. This has made the capital a dangerous place despite the efforts of law enforcement and agents of Rhozhaden at controlling the city (Pop. c. 371,000).

BHALABURR: Set. Coastal city in the north west of ZHARIAH^(2.), linked to the larger city of BHAL DURH by a 17-mile system of canals and locks (Pop. c. 18,000).

BHALASSIA: 1. Geo. Long peninsula forming part of the PANTHEON ISLES, attached to the mainland of EASTERN LLACHATUL via various isthmuses, most of which are controlled by settlements.

2. Geo. Archipelago in the PANTHEON ISLES, off the eastern coast of LLACHATUL, stretching south east for 900-miles from the eponymous peninsula. The largest and eastern-most of the isles in the Bhalassian Archipelago are MARAD and BELASHA.

BHALIRIN: Set. Major coastal city in the north east of ZHARIAH^(2.), overlooking the entrance into the SEA OF ISTHIS (Pop. c. 128,000).

BHALLURA: Set. City in the south east of ZHARIAH^(2.) (Pop. c. 77,000).

BHANAMAL: Geo. Large valley in the east of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES, leading south from lake PURRI to the coast and the mouth of the river MEREN SIN.

BHANAQ SADA: Set. Coastal city in the east of CHEIRA, overlooking the SEA OF MOSASA (Pop. c. 43,000).

BHANN: Geo. Mountain in the c-south east of AHRISHEN, forming an extension of the larger ASHER Mountain.

BHARAERACHI: also 'Transient'. Fau. ATRAMENTAL creature of lightning, born of the Atramenta. Very little is known of such. Creatures as they are rare and still considered mythical amongst many cultures.

BHAR: Rvr. River in TEMUJA flowing for 300-miles south east from the ILLIGARHI Mountains before meeting it tributary, the river AIHANE.

BHÄR-BOG: also 'Bhär-bog'. Geo. Expansive open land in central AHRISHEN, some 65,000 square-miles in size. The place is pastoral, with many scattered small settlements.

Prior to the retreat of the seas, it would have been a tidal plain, though is now a seasonal wetland (fed by melted snow in summer and rainfall in winter) and salt-grass meadows, where sheep are allowed to graze.

BHARR, THE LIZARD: Mys. In TEMUJAN SPIRITUALISM, the TUTELARY SPIRIT of the sun. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

BHARSHAET MAGOS, TEMPLE OF: Int. Sup. Str. Ornate floating structure in Western Tulurkryph, in Firmamentally tainted lands in the far west of ZOHAK. A constant stream of water (its source unknown) flows down into the waters of the OGYGIA.

BHASMATH: Geo. Plains in the c west of GNOTH. It is known for its chalky stone and interesting wind-worn rock formations.

BHATHAN: His. Rui. Ancient buried city in the north east of SKAROS, thought to predate even the old lascar⁽³⁾ ruins of the early FIFTH AGE. The city was a network of linked buildings that are now mostly buried and filled with hard sand, making excavation tedious, but not without its rewards.

BHATHAIA: Geo. Region in the south east of SAGITTARIA, including the north eastern-facing peninsula that divides it from ALTHA⁽²⁾. The region is heavily fortified against CYHLAGHARRI incursions and slave-raids. The region is largely unpopulated due to this threat. It was once the site of the small early FIFTH AGE kingdom of CHEBELDA.

BHATOYUN: Set. Settlement in the c of IACIO. Its main industry is rubber production (Pop. c. 10,000).

BHEID: Lak. Lake in the south of GREST^(1.), in the west of the island-continent of BROR^(1.). It forms part of the course of the river CONS.

BHEKRRAL: Set. Settlement in the east of NASTAL (2.) that emerged in c. 3750 RM to cater to the many expeditions and travellers that were arriving in the region to loot and explore the ruins of BRAXIA (Pop. c. 2,500).

BHEMAH: Mil. Tec. Class of Imperial warship. It is named after the patron saint of VENTHIR.

BHEMMAN OGNASH: (B. 3951 RM) Pol. Tithe-baron and present ruler of SKAROS.

BHEN: Set. City in the c of CHEIRA (Pop. unknown).

BHINIYAN: Set. Small city in the c west of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES. It is major producer of food in the area (Pop. c. 13,000).

BHIOGGHOLLU: Geo. Small rocky island off the eastern coast of ELEKHID, revealed in c.3882 RM. Early explorations of the island revealed rock-hewn catacombs covered in mysterious scripts that have thus far evaded translation. The island reeks of rotting fish, and few are those to have gone there since its discovery, though fishermen approaching it say that the retreat of the ROILING SEA has revealed more caverns and crypts, from which emanate even worse stenches and noises.

BHOR: Set. Small city in the of east of SEDISIA, overlooking the BAY OF TASHI (Pop. c. 13,000).

BHORGHAR: Com. Set. Major mercantile city in the south west of the MULL CITY-STATES, along the course of the river TRALL. It is a part of THE WAY trade-route (Pop. c. 82,000).

BHOTHALL: Geo. Barren dry region in the interior of SAMMAEA, to the west of KHARKHARADONTIS, in the far north of HOGGOTHA ISZ. Ruins of ancient settlements dot the region, including the remnants of a large settlement that is thought to have been an early FIFTH AGE trading hub. Today the area is largely deserted, and what few mortals live there are nomads that sometimes camp in the old ruins.

BHUMHODA: Set. Small fortified city

BHYATISH: Set. City in the c of CHTHYRID, and one of the oldest surviving DVERGAI cities in the region. It is the principal supplier of food to the city of BRMYIR, via subterranean vaults and passages (Pop. c. 36,000).

B'ITU: Soc. Str. Silken/woven tower in the east of PARAIYA, just west of lake ATATU, though originally part of north western N'RAKH. The tower and its troops were pivotal in keeping KORACHANI soldiers and explorers out of N'rakh between c. 1000 – 1200 RM. The tower is now shunned and it has since been abandoned and now finds itself in eastern Paraiya, its webs and organic architecture dead and fossilised.

BIANNA: Set. Fortified settlement in the north east of ARKOS^(1.), along the course of the river THANAUR. It was originally a religious site, though that significance has been lost over centuries as the settlement grew into a trade hub along the SALT ROAD, and it is now known for the many inns and hostels that serve merchants travelling the road (Pop. c. 8,000).

BIATAN: 1. Geo. Island off the north western coast of KORACHAN, south of the BAY OF LALLEH.

2. $\it{Mil.Str.}$ Fortress on the above island^(1.) in the north west of $\it{KORACHAN}$, guarding the $\it{BAYOFLALLEH}$.

BIBEA LASCIVEA: Rel. Vol. Religious textbook that is used by members of the Cult of Volupis. Though the hedonistic religion is largely contained to the far west of SAMMAEA, copies of the book have made their way as far north as the Inner Sea, where they have been condemned by the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE for their lewd depictions of pornographic and sadistic vignettes, which has, of course, made it highly sought after by collectors of the macabre.

BIDDEN: Set. Coastal settlement in the north west of KORACHAN. The settlement is noted for its many fish farms located less than a mile offshore (Pop. c. 11,000).

BIDEKIN: also 'birdman' or 'al akhi'. Lan. Mor. Common name in Korachan for the AL AKHI.

BIDIKE: Rel. Str. Temple in the c south of TZALLRACH, to the east of the region of ODONTWE. The temple is dedicated to ANATHA BAETYL.

BIELOST: also 'the White Sea'. Sea. Body of Water in the north of LLACHATUL, dividing SABIA from KASPIA.

BIGHESS: Geo. Island-chain in the middle of the SEA OF LISASSA, 110-miles west off the mainland of the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS.

BILA: Lagoon in the south of RHAMIA, connecting the SEA OF ACHSHI to the capital in FASCIA. The lagoon is shallow and generally only barges or flat-hulled vessels can reach the capital. The city of PECRA accepts sea trade and moves goods north to Fascia on barges across the lagoon.

BILBIR: Set. Fortified city in the south of KAZZAR, in the south east of the region of ADIMINIA. It is a military centre to the GODSLAYERS and many soldiers from here are sent to the fortress of ITRI in the south.

BILLAL OF VEPAR: (B. 3948 RM) Pol. Current ruler of the republic of COTHON, and one of three rulers of the TRIPARTATE UNION OF LYRIDIA DHAI, alongside SEMMARA OF TERARA and IHUMESH OF COTHON.

BILIAL: Set. Settlement in the south west of THE SURRACH, at the periphery of the KNAGHTA Salt Flats in the region of SÛR GHATH. Its main industry is the excavation of brine from wide pits that surround the settlement for miles around (Pop. c. 7,200).

BILLIGUN: also 'bellows'. Mus. Woodwind instrument with a bellows that is placed under one's arm and is operated by raising and lowering the arm, filling an air reservoir. The instrument itself is manipulated through two chanters – reed pipes that are played like flutes that change the flow of air, producing a distinct sound.

The instrument is ancient and accounts of it have been found in <a href="Months Entrangle-Entran BIMARIA: Sea. Strait off the eastern coast of Sammaea, linking the Sea of Lethea in the west with the Sea of Erenea in the east. It is bordered by the Porphyri peninsula to the north and the Uhbataqi headland to the south and is famed for the radically differing levels of its sea bed, with the north west being shallow, and noted for its many small islands and reefs; and the south east being much deeper. The shallow north western portion acts as a dam of sorts between the Sea of Erenea to the east and the Sea of Lethea to the west, effectively stopping the waters of the Lethea from mixing with those of the Erenea, containing its amnesiac traits to its relatively concealed basin.

BIMARID CROWN: Pol. The government system of SHEZALIAH, in which two regents rule. Typically, siblings, spouses, cousins, or other close relatives a new regent is chosen by the remaining regent following the death of the second. The tradition dates back to the birth of Shezaliah, when two brothers co-ruled to popular acclaim.

BINAN: Set. Settlement in the east of TRAKIA, just north of the harbour of KAMRIAN (Pop. c. 4,000).

BINI: Rvr. Major river in LYRIDIA and LYRIDIA DHAI, flowing west for 1,250-miles from sources in the CARTIGA, KYTHI, ETTHI, PYREA and PLALEPH Mountains before emptying in the SEA OF SPIRES. It deposits a lot of sediment, making the Sea of Spires rich in nutrients.

BINIAN: 1. Rvr. Fertile delta of the river BINI in the west of LYRIDIA DHAI.
2. Sec. Settlement in the above region that supplies TERARA with grain and barley (Pop. c. 2,200).

BIOMACHINERY: Sup. Secretive ATRAMENTAL art that manipulates flesh to create organs that function little like machinery, and which are used in marriage to TECHNARCANA in perverse engine. Little is known of this 'art' and even less is known of the people and cultures that practice it. Though it is said that individual scientists have dabbled in this grotesque art across ELYDEN, there are fewer whispers of it being practiced in the south east of the SAMMAEAN nation of SHEZALIAH.

BION: Geo. Large creek to the north of the central-most peninsula of the CITY OF ALMAGEST. Part of the creek is now vaulted, with the BRIDGE DISTRICT constructed over it.

BIONACHA: Plr. 'Bionachin', lit. 'flesh weaver'. Tec. Rnk. In the KORACHANI EMPIRE, LOCUMNI and TECHNARCANISTS (not necessarily SET) who specialise in the cosmetic and functional modification of the body.

BIOPSIST: Tec. Rnk. Specialists in the fields of CLONING, FLESHWRIGHTING, and BIOMACHINERY, who specialise in taking tissue samples and, more specifically, are trained in grafting of flesh and making formulas to facilitate such operations. They extract tissue samples for use in the labs by the LOCUMNI and others. Tissues and liquids gathered in this way are blended with processed refined UMBRA in exercises that are as much byzantine rituals as they are experiments in science. The concoctions thusly created are stored in glass/steel phials and used in various circumstances, most commonly restorative or temporarily enhancing tinctures, usually delivered intravenously or by imbibing.

Many biopsists make heavy use of these tinctures and after years of constant use, their bodies are no longer what they once were, corrupted beyond recognition. The more they use such drugs, the more dependant they become on them, creating a vicious cycle that requires them to search farther and farther afield for ways to keep their bodies working, their minds sane.

BIOUYISH: Geo. Expansive grasslands to the east of the SEA OF KRIHIEK, in the south of SAMMAEA. It is dominated by the GRASSLANDS FEDERATION.

BIRAMA'S NEEDLE: (3,050-ft.) Geo. Natural rocky pillar in the c of the territories of ETHISTONITH in RHINOCOLOURA, rising for over 1,000-ft from the south west of the NABERIN desert. At the base of the pillar is a ruined ancient HAZORIN fortress dating back to c. 700 RM, abandoned in c. 1080 RM.

BIRANTA: Geo. Massif in the far east of THE SURRACH, to the south of the GAMIGAHUA, and north of the ISKAHA Massifs.

BIRDMAN: Soc. Cliffside egg-hunters who rappel down cliffs or use flying machines to reach secretive birds' nests. Some eggs can fetch high prices at market auctions. They are common in many cliffy areas with diverse birdlife, especially in LIDEA.

BIRDUN: 1. Sea. Small bay in the far north of the SULTANATE OF ABACARDAT, forming a part of the SEA OF MORRAKH. Its waters are relatively clear and clean, and are not affected by the amnesic qualities of the larger SEA OF LETHEA.

2. Set small fortified coastal city in the far north of the $\underline{\text{SULTANATE OF}}$ $\underline{\text{ABACARDAT}}$ (Pop. c. 13,000).

 $\underline{\textbf{BIRDUR III}}\text{: (B. 3909 RM) } \textit{Pol.} \textit{Current } \underline{\textbf{VITYAZ-THANE}} \textit{ of } \underline{\textbf{SABIA}}\text{.}$

BIRIAN: Set. City in the c of HARAPPA (3.) (Pop. c. 24,000).

BIRIGAN CASTLE: Rui. Rel. Str. Ancient fortified catacomb built in the hinterlands of the eastern KORACHANI PENINSULA, over 25-miles north west of DAKHACAIA. It was constructed by a patrician over two millennia ago specifically to serve as a cemetery for members House MILIMORDA.

Hundreds of people have been buried there over the years, most of them in individual or familiar crypts. The fortress was updated and expanded over the years, though has been abandoned for centuries, following the dwindling of the family and its eventual moving to LAASKHA. Its courtyard is the crux of various tunnels, crypts, ossuaries and chapels, many of which remain locked and unexplored.

BIRINI: Set. Settlement in the north of CISNERIA, in the eastern foothills of the DIVUMMA Mountains (Pop. c. 3,600).

BIRKOD: Set. Settlement in the c south of the SULTANATE OF
ABACARDAT, west of the border with the JAHADAT STATES (Pop. c. 4,000).

BIRMAAD: Set. Coastal settlement in the east of HARAPPA⁽³⁾. It forms a part of the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 7,200).

BIRQA: Set. Small city in the east of the SULTANATE OF ABACARDAT, at the eastern foothills of the ZANBAURI Mountains. Its main industry is the quarrying of aluminium (Pop. c. 10,800).

BIRTH PRIEST: Rel. Rnk. Amongst the INTELLIGENTSIA and patrician classes of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, birth priests were representatives of the Church of the Undying Machine who would oversee births to ensure that the Undying Machine blessed and welcomed its new subjects to ELYDEN.

BIRUN: Set. Fortified dune-city in the region of ALMAGEST, known for its high walls and other protections against dust-dunes of the ARTUL AKAEL. The city is built around a productive diamond mine and is well-defended and fortified by PATRICIAN HOUSE SATINA (Pop. c. 32,000).

BIRUTH: Set. Small city in the west of ANDILUTH (Pop. c. 14,500).

BIS: Rui. Set. Ruined stone city in the frozen wastes of KHOLAMOR, c. 450-miles west of the RYOGENI SEA, in the far east of RAONGEN^(2.). The city is expansive, covering some 400 square miles and is built to a repetitive grid with narrow streets and identical square single roomed structures, each filled with rusted machinery, and vacuum chambers, most of which are broken or decayed beyond recognition. The rooms are linked in clusters of eight, each cluster of which is linked to the rest by a series of pipes, which lead to subterranean chambers that have thus far prove impossible to penetrate, though farsight has shown a cavernous chamber beneath the city with yet more machinery. Mummified remains of unnumbered thousands of humanoids litter the area, with the possibility for many more buried beneath the permafrost.

Some claim that a $\underline{\text{DEMIURGE}}$ was responsible for this, though there is little proof.

BISBUT: Dem. 'Bisbutian'. Ntn. A nation in the north of SAMMAEA, occupying the north eastern-most headland of the PARTHISAN peninsula, Bisbut has been a vassal of Parthis since 2861 RM. The land is dominated by mountains along its coast and southern border, between which are grasslands dominated by wild horses and other animals.

It emerged in the mis-6th century from a schism within the PENGARI monarchy, which culminated in its secession in c. 580 RM. A decade of war followed as Pengar attempted to reclaim it, but it remained independent until its eventual vassalage to Parthis.

Following this it enjoyed healthy sea trade centred around its then-capital, SUVAYA, which dominated the small yet busy inland SEA OF ABRAS. Like so many coastal cities, it was crippled by waning sea-levels that saw the inland sea reduced to a lake by 3000 RM, by which point the capital had been abandoned, moved to the industrial centre of AMUAR instead, which is now renowned across the Inner Sea as a place of architectural beauty, commonly known as 'the Silver City' after its brilliant white marble palaces.

Today it is a centre of farming in the PARTHISAN EMPIRE and is known for its livestock and horse rearing and its harbours remain busy, despite the continued withdrawal of ELYDEN'S seas. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

- BISELA: 1. Geo. Region of mud volcanoes along the western coast of ALMAGEST, to the south east of the SEA OF SEKHEM, just south of the border with KOLCHIS. The region covers an area of around 300-square miles and is largely ignored due to geological unpredictability.
 - 2. Set. Small fortified coastal city along the western coast of ALMAGEST, to the south east of the SEA OF SEKHEM, just south of the border with KOLCHIS (Pop. c. 11,600).
- BISHOP: 1. Rel. Rnl. Title and rank within both the Church of The Undying Machine as well as the Reformed Church of Sarastro. Bishops are in charge of a particular DIOCESE within a larger territory that is under the jurisdiction of an Archbishop.
 - Oth. Type of HALFBLOOD known to be of few words. They rarely speak, yet are consummate observers, and wardens of the highest degree. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

BISHOP ADEREN ON BASSORAN: also 'St. Aderen'. (B. 389 – D. 465 RM)

Rel. BISHOP of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE who between 421 and 437 RM wrote a series of religious texts that would go on to be called the LEADEN SCRIPTURES. They were ratified by the church in 511 RM after the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR himself cited them during a public address, though they later fell out of favour. He was canonised in 792 RM and is now more commonly known as St. Aderen.

BISHOP VIATIAN RHAGOBALE: (B. 3454 – D. 3612 RM?) Rel. BISHOP of the DIOCESE of RAALO in AZAZEM between 3501 and his disappearance under mysterious circumstances in 3612 RM. He was considered by many to be a scholar first and a priest second, and was later found to have embezzled Church funds to finance private expeditions to ancient libraries and ruins, with the intent of uncovering texts regarding the study of ALCHEMY, a subject with which he was obsessed.

He amassed a sizable private collection of artefacts and texts from the digs and expeditions that he funded over the years. Amongst them were ancient alchemical LHAUS texts that are now believed to have granted him prolonged life.

He disappeared under mysterious circumstances after having ruled the Diocese of Raalo in Azazem for 111 years – a long time by any measure. Though it is not uncommon for wealthy individuals to attain long life through various artificial means, this was still an uncharacteristically long time. Some claim that he was abducted by lhaus spies for using the secrets of KLADOS without their consent. Others claim that he fled from his religious obligations to begin a new life somewhere else, where he was unknown.

A popular legend in Azazem is that he continues to rule the church there, using different guises, though there is little proof of this and most learned people consider this fancy at best. Another rumour is that of secret repositories across Azazem where his treasures are located – a notion granted a modicum of plausibility, due to a cache of artefacts discovered in a family estate in 3708 RM related to the study of alchemy that was thought to have belonged to Viatian.

BISHOP NECROMANCER, the: see Archbishop Magnus Belisarius of Caldera.

BISKALLA: Set. Coastal city in the north of BISBUT (Pop. c. 102,000).

BISMUTH: Pol. Set. Capital city and Palace in GNOTH. The city, like most other major Gnothi cities, is characterised by white halls and wide circular towers topped by low bronze domes. (Pop. c. 432,000).

BISURA: Set. Settlement in the west of JURRAS⁽²⁾, to the east of the region of ISMERIA. The settlement's main industry is mining its bismuth-like rocks that are sold along the RED ROUTE, which passes through it (Pop. c. 4,500).

BISUS: Set. Small city in the north of ANDILUTH, near BYSSOS (Pop. c. 15.200).

BIT: Cur. Common coinage in the KORACHANI EMPIRE and the SOCIALIST REPUBLIC OF ALMAGEST, as well as other regions where the Korachani empire was once of influence, including many former colonies. The term was first used in ALMAGEST, and soon spread to the rest of the empire through trade along THE INNER SEA'S coasts, rapidly replacing the empire's iron-based currency.

The word and its usage are derived from the old Almagesti word bith, which meant 'wealth' (the word bith is sometimes still used by Almagesti patricians as a pet name for themselves). The word was in turn derived from a more primitive word, baet, 'to trade, or barter', as was the custom of the ancient Almagesti people.

Bits are ceramic-covered tin heptagonal coins, perforated and indented so they can be broken into quarters; which are used as smaller denominations. The ceramic on most bits is chipped and worn away, revealing in better detail the designs on the tin background – often incorporating icons and images of the Archpotentate or the UNDYING MACHINE on one side and angels, significant dates and architectural pieces on the other. Slang – common amongst the work-slaves – names bits as flies and quarter bits as fleas. See Vol II: Currency and Coinage in Elyden.

BIT, ALAMI: Cur. Currency used in ALAM BETHYL. It is of little value outside the land. See Vol II: Currency and Coinage in Elyden.

BIT, ALCHIARAN: Cur. Main currency, descended from the currency of the ALCHIARAN DYNASTY, which is used in KAZZAR and TATAR. See Vol II: Currency and Coinage in Elyden.

BIT, AMMASHI: Cur. Currency used in the AMMASHI⁽¹⁾ peninsula, specifically by the AMMASHI FREE-ISLES, AMMESH, HABOT, KEPHUAAN, and TAAN AN, and is recognised in METHUMN, some markets in PHYRR, as well as amongst various moneylenders along the NACRE ROAD. See Vol II: Currency and Coinage in Elyden.

BIT, CALBIAN: Cur. Main currency of CALBIA(1.). It was first minted in 3948 RM and emerged from the TETHYSIAN BIT that is used in KOMMEA. See Vol II: Currency and Coinage in Elyden.

BIT, IPANATHI: Cur. Main currency of IPANAH⁽²⁾, first minted in 3824 RM. See Vol II: Currency and Coinage in Elyden.

BIT KERRACHI: Cur. Currency of KERRAS PELLN, first minted in 3903 RM. See Vol II: Currency and Coinage in Elyden.

BIT, KOLCHISI: Cur. Currency used in KOLCHIS. See Vol II: Currency and Coinage in Elyden.

BIT, KORACHANI: Cur. Currency used throughout the nations, vassals and dependencies of the KORACHANI EMPIRE. Originating in the city of BITYN in ALMAGEST, from which the currency takes its name, it is possibly the most circulated currency in Elyden, having reached its peak in c. 3000 RM, when then empire was at its largest extent.

The Bit is divided into four different denominations – the Bit, which is the most valuable; the Hept; the Falk (commonly known as a Fly); and the SKUD (commonly known as a MAGGOT), which is the lowest value.

All coins bear the Sigil of the COUNCIL OF SEVEN on one side, and various images and profiles of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR on the other. In antiquity, many coins bore an image of the UNDYING MACHINE, but an edict passed in 2295 RM declared it unfit for the image of the imperial deity to appear on coinage, so all such images were removed. Such coins bearing the image of the Undying Machine are now valuable amongst collectors as most were destroyed following the edict. See Vol II: Currency and Coinage in Elyden.

BIT, OPHIUSSAN: Cur. Main currency of OPHIUSSA. See Vol II: Currency and Coinage in Elyden.

BIT, SALOROCIN: Cur. Main currency of SALOROC. See Vol II: Currency and Coinage in Elyden.

BIT, SARAGOSI: Cur. Currency of SARAGOS, first minted in 2132 RM. See Vol II: Currency and Coinage in Elyden.

BIT, TETHYSIAN: Cur. Currency of TETHYSIA and its vassals, including KOMMEA. See Vol II: Currency and Coinage in Elyden.

BIT, VESPEN: Cur. Main currency of the north of WESTERN SAMMAEA, prevalent across the EHRENISIAN COAST and neighbouring lands. It is the official currency of KHULL, TAL ZHAAN, KARGAMA, ESHIR, the TEMPLAR STATES, as well as most of the VESPERTINE LEAGUE, and is recognised far away, with coins even finding their way in the trade routes of the INNER SEA REGION.

The currency originated in the trade routes of inner VESPER^(2,) in c. 1800 RM and spread from there through the many merchant caravans that travelled the region. It became the main currency of KHULL in c. 2950 RM. See Vol II: Currency and Coinage in Elyden.

BIT, VORANDI: Cur. Currency in THE VORANDINE, introduced by the UNITED VORANDI COUNCIL in 3996 RM. Some distant regions continue to use older currency as the Council struggles to mint enough new money to distribute across the nation. See Vol II: Currency and Coinage in Elyden.

BITAMMA: Dem. 'Bitamman'. Geo. Desert in the west of SAMMAEA, crossing the TROPIC OF RAH. The desert is expansive, reaching over 650-miles west to east and varying between 200- and 100-miles high, north to south, tapering the closer to the GULF OF ARIDA it gets.

The desert is known for its gullies and desiccated UMBRA formations, which are remnants of ancient deposits brought to the surface through the erosion of soft DUSTONE in the region. The destruction of UMBRISKA processors in the nearby city of SABRIM in 3340 RM led to an exodus of refugees into Bitamma, the descendants of whom still populate the foothills of the RHAII Mountain to this day.

The region is categorised as a $\underline{\text{LEAST CONCERN}}$ by the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI}}$ $\underline{\text{INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES}}.$

BITAN: Sea. Bay in the north west of TARTAK, overlooking the SEA OF BYSSOS. The bay was formed following the retreat of the Sea's waters, lengthening the course of the river KHRAD by some 40-miles.

BITEOS: Ind. Set. SKAROSIAN ADAMANTINE mining settlement in the region of ADAMATI, north of the STRAIT OF SKAROS (Pop. c. 3,200).

BITH: Ind. Set. Lead mines in the c north west of ATARAXIA (Pop. c. 5,100).

 $\underline{BITHAAT} \hbox{: } \textit{Geo.} \ Island \ south \ of the island \ of \ \underline{KHEMET} \ in \ \underline{KHAMID}.$

 $\underline{BITHOA} : \mathit{Set.}$ Settlement in the north west of \underline{TISARA} (Pop. c. 8,000).

BITHYN: 1. Lak. Lake in the c west of ALMAGEST, fed by the river NAHMOL and NAHLA.

2. Set. Settlement in the west of ALMAGEST. (Pop. c. 3,800).

BITTER SEA, the: Lak. This chemically active and salty lake, of about 55,000 square-miles dominates the western-most expanse of the SULTANATE of ABACARDAT in the east of SAMMAEA, west of the SEA OF LETHEA, and is thought to be the lowest point on ELYDEN'S surface after explorers of the area noted the constant declination of the land dividing it from the SEA OF LETHEA.

The ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR wandered here before returning to the KORACHANI EMPIRE during his ITINERARY.

The Bitter Sea was once part of the Sea of Lethea, though it is postulated that the lowering of Elyden's coastlines over the past few millennia caused the coastline to retreat, leaving the Bitter Sea in its wake. This explains the high salinity of its waters. Further evidence of this is the ruined city of LAEKLA, 325-miles west of the lake, which has docks, ports and quays overlooking the shallow plains to its east – what was once the western-most extent of the Lethean coastline.

BITUAH: Rvr. Major river in the south east of BROR^(1.) flowing east for a thousand miles through the DOMAINS OF SHAUATAS from sources in the eastern face of the LAHAED Mountains before meeting the coast at the far east of the VAKAR Wetlands.

BIUMUABU: Geo. Hills in the north west of SAMMAEA, serving as a partial border between the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT and ENITH.

BIUN: Set. Small coastal city in the of SEDISIA, along the IANNARAN peninsula (Pop. c. 15,000).

BJIRAN: Set. Small city in the north east of the island of ARCHAEDON^(1.). It is one of the major harbours on the island and is known for its deep port (Pop. c. 13,900).

BLACK ALTAR, the: see BAETETH.

BLACK CATHEDRAL, the: Rui. Frozen abandoned cathedral in the deserted town of HACAT in the ARTUL AKAEL in ALMAGEST. It was abandoned with Hacat in c. 2700 RM, following a change in the route of THE SHADOW MARCH. Until then the cathedral was a popular destination to pilgrims, who flocked, despite the cold, to see the incorruptible body of ST. SAASTA, though following its sudden corruption in 2653 RM, the church lost credibility and was allowed to rot by the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, which ceased funding, allowing the cathedral and the town to decay.

BLACK CRAB: Med. Common term for cancer, very common in the KORACHANI EMPIRE which, when combined with the generally bad conditions of its settlements, is of great contribution to the Empire's high mortality rate.

BLACK CUSTODES: His. Rel. Rnk. Guardians of the temples of BAPHEMA. The last active temple closed in 1781 RM following the slow death of the faith, though the black custodes remained active, guarding the temples from looters. The Templars are thought to have died out in c. 2200 RM.

BLACK FAUN: Rnk. Bounty hunter of unknown origins operating across c. LLACHATUL, known to have ORTHOSES legs. He is large, thought to be altered, if not wholly INCEPTED, in a birthing vat. Though not part of any institution, he hunts persons of interest across the EMPIRE and beyond, bringing escaped fugitives to justice, rarely asking questions as long as he receives any bounties that he believes should rightfully be His.

BLACK FOUNTAIN, the: Sup. Geo. Wellspring and PRIME LACUNA of the ATRAMENTA, located in the wastes of DAEKYN, in the south of KHARKHARADONTIS, in SAMMAEA, pinpointed at: 8°57'33"S 27°56'20"W It is both counterpart and antipode to the TRUE MENISCUS of the FIRMAMENT in Meniscea.

The Inner-most part of the Black Fountain is an inimical hellscape known as the ABYSMAL MARROW. Farther out from the Abysmal Marrow is the lightning-wracked PENUMBRA^(1.), which stretches outwards for around 100-miles.

BLACK GARDEN, the: Int. Flo. Str. Poi. Botanical gardens in the city of ANUBIS that are tended to by the SHADOW DANCERS on behalf of the ABYSSAL TEMPLARS. The gardens are renowned for their many poisonous varieties of plants. Hemlock, Lily of the Valley, black lotus and drakeroot are all grown there and cultivated by the Dancers for use in their assassinations. The garden is well-guarded and entry is barred to all without the express permission of the Templars.

BLACK MOUNTAIN, the: also 'NORETANAS' Geo. Long mountain-chain over 2,000-miles long, forming the eastern-most reaches of WESTERN LLACHATUL. The mountains are named after their dark colour and their sheer ruggedness, which make them near-unassailable in most areas.

BLACK OBELISK, the: see MITA AGHRA.

BLACK POISONWOOD: Flo. Poi. Woody herb common across the INNER SEA REGION, whose flowers are deadly to those who ingest them. They are cultivated, and the flowers are made into a poison that is commonly found in market places, intended for pest control, though it has a reputation for being used for other, less savoury activities. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

BLACK REGENT, the: (B. 3957 RM). Pol. Real name Sareska, she is the ruler of the city-kingdom of EDICULE^(1,) in the HARÉSHK.

BLACK RIM, the: Geo. Common term within the KORACHANI EMPIRE for the MOLOTH KHAMMOTHUL Mountain.

BLACK RIVER, the: Rvr. River in the north west of SARASTRO, named after the battle of CARULA during the KORACHANI SIEGE OF SARASTRO, in which the LIBRARY OF CARULA was looted, its volumes drowned in the nearby river, which for months after ran black with the ink from their pages.

BLACK SNOW: Sup. Poi. Phenomenon relatively common in the KORACHANI EMPIRE, especially in areas of high industrialisation. Soot and smoke from manufactories mix with forming snowflakes, creating a polluted snow that is mildly poisonous. The ATRAMENTA is sometimes also to blame for such snows.

BLACK WALL, the: Geo. Coastal cliffs in the south of SAUA, around 100-miles long, overlooking the SEA OF URAN and the BAY OF GITHKA.

BLACKENED SUN, the: Int Leg. Myt. Sup. His. Various independent texts, many of them now codified in the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN, tell of a distant calamity in the early-to-mid FOURTH AGE, during which the sun darkened, becoming a black disk in the sky, plunging ELYDEN into an icy darkness for three days and nights.

Many died across Elyden amid the resultant chaos and suffering, though as people were losing hope amid rapidly dwindling temperatures, the sun flickered for three seconds and was rekindled. It took years for life to return to normal, but over centuries and millennia the event became immortalise in the myths and legends of disparate people, and can still be found in various legends from across Elyden today, with most people recounting them blissfully unaware of the true events that inspired them.

We do not know what caused it, though at the time many were griped by religious fervour, believing it to be a punishment or curse for some global sin. Others claim that it was the first death spasm of the sun, and many eschatological writers have predicted more frequent such occurrences over the years, though none have happened so far.

BLACKSILK SPIDER: Fau. Large arachnids, with a leg span of almost 3-ft. that live in Atramentally Tainted lands across Llachatul and the north of Sammaea. Their abdomens are large and misshapen with nodules that are thought to absorb Atramental taint, keeping them safe, and use them to spin silk that turns hard and shatters. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

BLADDER EEL: Fau. Large aerial eel-like DICHAGOR that glide through the air in wet and cliffy areas in the east of LLACHATUL and the western-coast of MENISCEA, where the effects of the Firmament are at the right balance for them to flourish. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

BLADE, the: also 'Chogornd'. (12,400-ft.) Geo. Peak in the REGHAN Mountain in the north west of STOLAS, known for its treacherous blade like rocks.

BLADED STAFF: Rel. Obj. Rank of station carried by priests of KATHISIS.

BLADED THRONE, the: Pol. The throne of the capital citadel in EDICULE⁽³⁾, in the HARÉSHK. Brought to Edicule with other spoils of war from the north of NÁRTHEL in 3265 RM. The then-regent was taken with the stark appearance of the metallic throne and took it as her own, where it became an heirloom of sorts, remaining in place to this day; the seat of power of an Imperial dynasty that has forsaken its crumbling empire, setting its own roots in the area.

BLAGLA: Sea. Small inland sea in the east of MENISCEA, in the north of the PARTHISAN colony of EZHIRAYA (2.). It has a narrow opening leading to the greater SEA OF LYNNAE, and has been steadily shrinking over the past millennia.

BLANESCHI WALLIA: (B. 1875 – D. 2928 RM) Art. AZAZEMI poet known for penning A CORONACH TO ELYDEN.

BLEACHED SHELF, the: Geo. Chalky steppes south of the city of RAS in the east of THE SURRACH. It is known for its chalky soils and salty wastes. A trade-route between KALAI and Ras passes through the Shelf, though it is not heavily-guarded.

BLEEDING PLAINS, the: Sup. Geo. Expansive ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region, around 60,000 square-miles in size, dominating a large swathe of land between the UMBRA SOKHAR and the river SHIBBOLETH (3.), in the west of AETHIOS. The region appeared in c. 1000 RM, in what is now known as the SLOECRUX, and has slowly expanded since then, its easternmost periphery getting dangerously close to the river Shibboleth.

What should be a fertile savannah is instead a barren, cracked wasteland, with ATRAMENTAL ichor seeping through to the surface, tainting the land. The region is entirely inhospitable to normal life, though has attracted WEIRDLINGS from the West as well as grotesques and degenerates. Other flora and fauna are either corrupted or adapted to such life. A single known structure, a FOURTH AGE fort known as the ADUMBRAESK, is known to exist on the eastern periphery of the plains, predating the tainted region's appearance.

There is some debate amongst scholars as to the effects on the river Shibboleth, should the expanse eventually reach it, and Its eastern-most reaches are protected by further expansion by an array of SIPHON ENGINES known as the SIPHON WALL.

The region is categorised as $\underline{\text{DANGEROUS}}$ by the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI}}$ $\underline{\text{INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES}}$.

BLIND FORTRESS, the: 1. Pol. Protectorate of around 5,200 square-miles off the south western coast of CUTH. The Fortress was known as IRKALLA in ages past, and lithographs found on subterranean monoliths tell of a race that lived and died there, who bore the same name as their homeland.

The Blind Fortress is recognised by Cuthi legend as a place of death, uninhabited until c. 100 RM, when Cuthi settlers landed on the rock when it was still an island Almost immediately, construction of a great citadel began, which over the years would go on to become a grand tiered fortress occupying a great hill the size of a city. Today it is a monolithic star fortress occupying seven levels, each of which holds hundreds of buildings, stores and businesses.

The island became part of the Cuthi mainland in c. 3300 RM, though this brought little change to life, other than a seasonal overland link to the mainland.

Despite the presence of the large fortress, the population of the island remained small and rural, and it is believed to have been left deserted at least three times to either disease or predation SUORI CHORSAIRS (most notably in 1404 RM, where the entire populace outside of the citadel was wiped-out or taken as slaves). Following slow repopulation, an agreement was made with Cuth, which offered the people of the Blind Fortress protection in return for certain trade-obligations and undisclosed religious commitments, which some occultists believed were related to the island history and suspected link with the DEMIURGE NERGAAL.

2. Mil. Set. Great city-citadel located some 20-miles inland on the peninsula (once island) of the same name (1.). Construction began c. 100 RM after CUTHI immigrants settled the then-deserted lands. Construction has continued, almost forcibly, over the island tumultuous history, its people rising from near extinction many times to continue building the citadel, which is now a star fortress, occupying seven levels, each of which contains hundreds of buildings, stores and businesses.

Its people are insular and make little contact with outsiders, and few know the true secrets of the citadel, with some scholars believing that unnatural rites to the dead DEMIURGE NERGAAL take place there (Pop. c. 280,000).

BLIND GOD, the: Rel. Dei. The deity of the ABACINIC religion, said to have been martyred in IDRIIS in c. 900 RM, and whose most devout of followers blind themselves to be able to view the world as the Blind God once did. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

BLIND KNIGHTS, ORDER OF THE: Rel. Rnk. In TETHYSIA, a caste of ritually blinded monks who travel from settlement to settlement, accepting alms and administering prayers and benedictions. They were excommunicated from the CHURCH OF KATHISIS in 3103 RM for their divergences from the faith, as it had become, though they were subsequently pardoned and allowed to continue operating.

BLOOD: Med. Sup. The blood of most MORTAL peoples is considered to have supranatural properties, the study and manipulation of which have led to various breakthroughs throughout history within the fields of ALCHYMY (the creation of the first HAEMONCULI), BLOOD MAGICK, and FLESHWRIGHTING (CLONING and PALINGENESIS). Indeed, many ancient people (as well as no small number of extant cultures) believe that blood is divine, and that it (alongside the SPIRIT(1.)) forms part of the link between the mortal people and their gods.

Large-enough quantities of blood (such as what might be shed during a battle or massacre) have been observed to have an almost- supernatural influence on the MATERIAL PLANE. For instance, there have been multiple independent observations made throughout history of CREANT-like beings spontaneously rising amid the wreckage of bloody battles where the blood of thousands of individuals coalesces into a gory scabrous being. Despite this, the phenomenon is disputed by many scholars, though others claim that the same principles that gave birth to the first haemonculi and clones can also be applied to these strange occurrences, though it is likely that such events can only take place in areas where the ARCANE TEMPERS are of a specific nature or flux. One can only guess at the unknown experiments that have been conducted through the ages of ELYDEN, which might have led to the discovery of blood magick and related practices.

The reason for these various traits of mortal blood is unknown. Some with access to deep knowledge and forgotten myths have postulated that the blood of mortals is gifted with a spark of divinity, possibly imparted by the DEMIURGES of old, but there is no way of knowing for sure.

Blood has been culturally important in various regions across the Ages, and remains so today in KARAKHAS and KHURAUR, where the SCION KHAR'ILLAE is revered as a saint or deity.

BLOOD PEW: Law. Soc. Torture devices once used to punish convicts within the BLOOD STATES. They have largely fallen out of favour today, and were banned in KARAKHAS in 3654 RM, but remain common in Khuraur and less metropolitan areas.

The pews were wedge-shaped and people were laid down on them heads down, feet up diagonally, which let the blood go to their heads. They would be left like this for many hours or days and in some cases were left to die.

The devices have their origins in ancient blood-rites, in which sacrificial victims were strapped to them before having their throats slit. The blood was collected and used in magickal rituals to KHAR'ILLAE and for FLESHWRIGHTING.

BLOOD STATES, the: Pol. Lan. Collective name for the nations of KARAKHAS, KHURAUR, HITTA, KERRAS PELLN, and sometimes UKHARTH.

BLOOD, TEMPLE OF: Rel. Str. In KARAKHAS, name given to the worshippers of the deity KHAR'ILLAE who escaped persecution by the ORDER OF ICONOCLASTS^(1.) during the SCOURGE OF ICONS by making secretive pacts with the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. As in all rituals involving Khar'illae, blood sacrifices are common.

BLIND TOWER, the: His. Rui. Old KORACHANI citadel in the c north of the UMBRA SOKHAR wastes in SAMMAEA. It is a relic of imperial colonialism from a time when the SHADOW IN THE DESERT was not as pronounced as it is today.

It was once used to guard the now-abandoned trade-route between KITHALOI in KARAKHAS, and NOAVATUR in the far south east of KHARKHARADONTIS. The tower was abandoned in c. 2100 RM following years of struggling with SIPHON FILTERS to keep it free of corruption. Its abandonment signalled the start of the waning of the trade-route linking Korachan with its colony in Noavatur, which by then had become an independent nation.

BLISSFUL REST, the: Rel. Mys. In the teachings of the THREE CHURCHES
OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, the Celestial Rest is a part of the RESTLESS

SLEEP. It is a place of peaceful repose reserved only for the SOULS of those who lived selfless lives of obedience to their masters and the MACHINE dwell.

In contrast to the Infernal Ret is the INFERNAL REST.

BLOOD CHAMPIONS: His. Soc. Ancient tradition amongst the people of SASHELL (2.) in the north west of SAMMAEA, (now a small part of the north of the VESPERTINE LEAGUE) where individuals would consume the herbal drug MULLEN in large quantities over a long period of time, which had the effect of increasing their aggression and inured them to pain. Emerging in c. 1250 RM, these individuals became famed champions of the disparate family groups, who fought each other to settle disputes in the place of larger conflicts, earning them the name blood champions.

It was later discovered that the drug had the side-effect of acting as a FIRMAMENTAL conduit, allowing those who consumed it in large amounts to harness powerful firmamental bursts, which eventually replaced the blood champions, forming a caste of BERSERKER-MAGES instead. This ability increased among the offspring of those who had consumed the drug in large quantities, which allowed for a caste to emerge within the Sashellan communities.

BLOOD HETERODOXIES, the: His. Period of uprising and civil strife in KARAKHAS that dominated the tenure of the DOMNITORS there, beginning in c. 2945 RM and ending in 3478 RM, with the signing of the COVENANT OF KHURAUR. Though word of the civil war known as the WAR OF THE ARTIFEXES that erupted the KORACHANI EMPIRE in 2947 RM was slow to reach SAMMAEA, the CENSORS could not completely stifle the spread of news. When news of the war arrived in Karakhas, a land already known for its dissent, the people rose against the imperial occupiers there, beginning what became known as the Blood Heterodoxies.

Though the empire's military might was concentrated in the north at the time, the escalating dissent in Karakhas necessitated the diversion of forces, and a single STEEL LEGION was moved there in 2973 RM to police the region alongside the beleaguered IRON GUARD corps. Martial law was declared in 2976 RM, after which public EXECUTIONS and torturing became common-place. Most opposition ceased at that point, though at the cost of the people's freedom.

This only caused further unrest, which culminated around Dekana in c. 3008 RM, reaching a crux in 3012 RM with guerillas storming the governor's fortress and overthrowing the imperial administration there. The subsequent years saw the guerillas instilling their own militocracy in Dekana and extending their influence to other cities in the nation, effectively pushing out most imperial resistance by c. 3020 RM. Thousands of imperial expats, Patrician houses, and immigrants were executed or exiled, with natives instated in their place.

The next decades were filled with fighting and civil war as the new regime clashed with imperial supporters and, eventually, imperial forces (now freed from the conflict in Almagest which had ended in 3014 RM), which were slowly able to retake the nation, finally reclaiming Dekana in 3043 RM, but the unrest never died down, particularly around Dekana, which became a hotbed of terrorist activity and near-constant fighting in the streets. In 3112 RM the nation was left to a combined force of Domnitors and imperial forces, who enacted martial law, but they still struggled to maintain control, eventually seeing the nation fragment into many small demesnes controlled by opportunistic warlords.

The single regiment of the Steel Legion, known as the 'Anvil of Steel', was stretched thin, its resources barely managing with containing the populaces emotions which were always close to boiling point. A large part of the regiment was based in LATERITIA, most of its troops in the city of KHURAUR, defected, burning its imperial banners and joining the masses. In a short and largely bloodless coup in 3203 RM, the defectors ceased and fortified Khuraur, subjugating the surrounding lands, gathering their people against the imperial might.

Korachan could not afford to displace many troops to the region for fear of uprisings elsewhere, so the defected region was allowed to fester, its MANUFACTORY producing more troops and equipment (the manufactory of Khuraur was one of the few in SAMMAEA with STEELWOMBS sophisticated-enough to produce new LEGIONNAIRES), where it rose to prominence, expanding west into TARTAK and east into Karakhas; the Lateritian barbarians joining their cause and repopulating the 'liberated' cities.

During this time, the BIOMECHANISTS and TECHNARCANISTS of Khuraur were ordered to alter the biologies of the new Legionnaires produced, to allow them to reproduce with humans. This process was largely discouraged elsewhere due to the difficulties in producing stable offspring, but Khuraur was partially successful, with around 15% of offspring born to a legionnaire parent being healthy simulacra of their male father, minus OCCLUSIONS. As the original generation of Legionnaires lessened in new-borns due to war, these new-born so-called 'freemen' were raised to be a noble caste who could breed true; their descendants the future rulers of Khuraur.

Khuraur prospered under the old Legionnaire's leadership, the fertile lands around it cultivated, one manufactory converted to the production of food; its people were well-fed and content, trading technology with Tartak and JURRAS⁽²⁾, which both prospered for a time.

In 3243 RM, Korachan dispatched three newly-created legions south with the sole purpose of securing Karakhas and Khuraur. All-out war had engulfed Karakhas by 3245 RM, with PARTHIS aiding Khuraur. The conflict was bloody, with territories changing hands many times, and Korachan withdrew with the signing of the Covenant of Khuraur in 3478 RM, leaving Karakhas smaller and fractured in three – two Korachani states and Khuraur: a free nation that would in 3752 RM become vassal to Parthis.

BLOOD MAGICK: Mys. An alternative form of MYSTICISM that exists wholly without the realms of SHAPING through the FIRMAMENT or ATRAMENTA. It is thought to be a more primal, carnal form of magick that echoes the birth of the first MORTAL PEOPLES, and has no links with the OTHERWORLD, and is thought to be entirely the product of the MATERIAL PLANE.

Blood magick falls into different categories, often known as houses, the most common of which are KATAMEK, UZRANA, and DEKISRAMEK, which represent poison, longevity, and transmutation, respectively.

The practice is believed to have links with the SCIONS and children of the DEMIURGE KHARANI. See Vol IV: Other Forms of Mysticism.

BLOOD MAGUS: Plr. 'Blood magi. Mys. One who practices BLOOD MAGICK.

BLOOD MOON, the: see ARAKHAMÉ.

BLOOD RAINS: Sup. Relatively recent phenomena documented in lands across ELYDEN, first recorded in KARAKHAS in 4001 RM. The phenomena are largely inexplicable to scholars and scientists, and can only be explained as rains of pure blood, likely a result of the DEMIURGES' torpid nightmares.

The blood is anathema to life, polluting the soil and affecting flora and fauna, sickening things and making them aggressive. In Karakhas the rains are collected and drunk in offerings to ARAKHAMÉ, despite the debilitating effects on their bodies. A particular caste, known as HURHEKH, has arisen from this practice.

BLOOD SCALES: Obj. Soc. Common symbol and within KARAKHAS and KHURAUR used to denote justice. An associated saying, paraphrased as 'weigh their blood on the scale', means two people, no matter their different social standing, wealth or notoriety, are fundamentally the same. As a result, scales are often seen in pewter necklaces or carvings on capstones across the aforementioned regions.

BLOOD OF MALICHAR, the: Leg. Belief common in the KORACHANI EMPIRE and its dependencies that the BLOOD of the mortal ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR, collected before his death and eventual rebirth as an OTHERWORLDER, possesses various miraculous abilities.

Many regions have their own version of the legend, though most share a similar root. The most universally-accepted version of the story is as follows:

Even before his rebirth as an otherworlder, the Archpotentate Malichar had garnered a reputation as a figure of divine importance, with his unearthing of the SCRIPTURE OF SHADOW and subsequent proselytising the lands of the INNER SEA the worship of the UNDYING MACHINE. As a result, many worshippers began attributing miraculous happenings to him outside of his suite of Atramental abilities. After an injury in battle in 63 RM, it is said that three vials of his blood were collected, becoming relics with no less than fourteen churches across the empire claiming to be in possession of one of them, with most claimed to be the source of miraculous events, including healing and resurrections.

Despite there being more churches that claim ownership of the relics than there are relics themselves, there are in fact many more claimants than that, including various apocryphal stories that people across the empire believe. The CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE does little to deny these claims for it strengthens the power of the Church amongst the laity.

There are other more extreme claims revolving around blood collected from Malichar following his rebirth as an otherworlder, including its use to make CLONES (with some believing that the STEEL LEGIONNAIRES via PALINGENESIS) were made though these are largely assumed to be false. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

BLOOD SPORT, the: also 'Yo-Hamavada'. Gam. Soc. Though the term blood sport can be used for any form of sporting activity that involves bloodshot, in this instance the term specifically refers to the KARAKHASID sport of yo-hamavada (literally, the blood sport). It involves two teams of 7-players each who score points by throwing a ball into a small target with their hands.

It is very much a contact sport and there are few rules, with players encouraged to punch, kick, and tackle opposing players to gain control of the ball. Injuries are common and fatalities are not unknown. Though use of weapons is prohibited, players find ways of circumventing this rule, using knuckledusters and other 'equipment' that they interpret as being essential to their work. It is incredibly popular in Karakhas, KHURAUR, and surrounding regions, where it is played on special occasions, including festival days where patron saints are celebrated. The fans of winning teams celebrate by parading a statue of their patron saint around the city, while denouncing the losers. See Vol II: Games and Pastimes of Elyden.

BLOOD SWORD, the: His. Obj. Famed KARAKHASID heirloom blade, crafted in 1233 RM by the tyrant NOMROS following his victories in quelling the SABISSILIAN REVOLTS. It is commonly believed to have been crafted from iron that was ATRAMENTALLY extracted from the blood of 1,000 subjugated rebel and dissidents, as a message to deter further revolts. It remains a very prominent and famed historical artefact, and is claimed to have been in the possession of PATRICIAN HOUSE SALAMIA, one of the more influential Houses in all of Karakhas, since the 34th century.

Over the years various unfounded qualities and traits have been attributed to the sword, including that it exsanguinates those hit by it, and that its wielder is granted unnaturally long life. More likely (though still unfounded) is the claim that it has become a powerful FOCUS^(2,) of (blood magic) in the years since its forging.

BLOOD TEMPLE: Rel. Str. Places of worship in KARAKHAS, KHURAUR, and to a lesser extent JURRAS^(2.) and HITTA. Dedicated to the CULT OF KHAR'ILLAE, each such temple is overseen by a HAEMAGOGUE and various acolytes and priests.

BLOOD OF VALA: Mys. Ele. The fifth element in GNOTHI MYSTICISM.

BLOODFINCH: Fau. Small bird (SUDEK) small birds common in arid to temperate regions of northern SAMMAEA, known for their parasitic lifestyles, where they feed off the blood of larger creatures by using their beaks to form a wound, from which they consume blood. They are typically solitary, but during droughts may form large flocks, terrorising herds. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

BLOODROOT: Flo. Cui. Root vegetable common in the south east of Sammaea, mostly found in KHAR NADUL, HANNAH, and QARALAM. It grows a large flesh-coloured tuber that is eaten in various forms, though which is most commonly boiled or sliced and fried. It is named after the deep red juice that it produces, which is also used as a dye.

BLOODSAP TREE: Flo. Tree from the acacia family native to the south east of BROR^(1.), most commonly in the TIAMOLDORAN CITY-STATES and the DOMAINS OF SHAUATAS, where they grow to great size and can be found in sparse yet expansive forests. It is known for its thick ichorous sap that was once used in ancient rituals, where it was dried and burnt, though these practices are largely forgotten today. In truth, the sap is mildly FIRMAMENTALLY-active and its smoke acted as a FOCUS^(2.) to SHAMEN and other shapers. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

BLOODSTONE: lit. 'blood moon stone'. Also 'hamalasch'. Ele. Rare ore thought to be extraterrestrial in origin, possibly remnants of meteorites from the moon ARAKHAMÉ, or possibly deposited there by the DEMIURGE KHARANI, or their daughter, the SCION KHAR'ILLAE (though these occurrences may not be mutually exclusive). The stones range from a deep brown to a rich red in colour and are commonly filled with iron oxides and other impurities, that add to their perceived value. The stones are either polished and used in jewellery and fine art, or otherwise refined through a lengthy and costly process. The resultant pure bloodstone is a powerful insulator and is used in manufactories and DISCHARGERS. In antiquity bloodstones were important in various supranatural rituals and were particularly coveted by KERATIN SHAMEN.

Legends common to lands where bloodstone is common contend that the stone, much like the BLOOD MOON, is known to alter the mood of anyone close by, though such claims have not been corroborated by scholars who list the ore's properties as purely mundane.

BLOODTHORN: Flo. Poi. Woody perennial found in THE OLD FOREST and in small numbers in VÂRR, RHAMIA and AZAZEM. Its sap is poisonous and the natives of the region of AMDUKA in the Old Forest ingest it, inuring themselves to it. It is commonly used to envenom weapons. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

BLOODY EXCOMMUNICATION, the: Pol. His. Period in PARTHIS between 3735 – 3792 RM. Normally secular, the nearby appearance of the scion KHAR'ILLAE in KARAKHAS, reborn as an OTHERWORLDER, caused a great religious revolution in the region, drawing people from all around the north of SAMMAEA. In Parthis, this revolution saw individuals born and raised in a strong secular region seeing first-hand the strength and charisma of a powerful religious ruler, causing them to forsake the ways and turn to her worship. Thousands of individuals gladly faced the penalty of exile in exchange for the change to worship the reborn scion.

The period lasted close to six decades and was only quelled through a vigorous 'witch hunt' buy the Parthisan authorities, that left much of the populace embittered and distrustful of its rulers, something that remains in many areas to this day.

BLOODY-HANDED ONE, the: Mys. His. Common epithet by which the DEMIURGE KHARANI was once known.

BLOODY HAND, ORDER OF THE: Pel. Mys. Org. In VAALK, group of mystics interested in the teachings of the SCION KHAR'ILLAE – specifically a pair of ancient clay stelae on which are etched the experiences of Khar'illae, as passed down through the Ages. The group was founded in 2921 RM by the halfblood SARAIA THE DERELICT. Acolytes of the Bloody Hand follow these guides to the letter, including methods of combat and execution directly attributed to the scion Khar'illae.

BLOODY STELAE, the: Rel. Obj. Mys. His. A pair of ancient clay stelae on which are etched the teachings and experiences of the SCION KHAR'ILLAE, as recorded by his followers over the Ages. The stelae and teachings were lost for centuries though following their rediscovery in 2917 RM in the VORAKAN HIGHLANDS in VAALK, their ideas were reborn, particularly in the studies of the ORDER OF THE BLOODY HAND, a sect that arose following the stelae's rediscovery by Saraia the Derelict.

BLUE EYE, the: Str. Lighthouse and once-coastal tower in the south of AQUARIIA, once guarding the entrance into the northern-most reaches of the SEA OF LIAKARRA and the lagoons of TABERNACEA. The tower was located on an island though the retreat of the Sea of Liakarra left it landlocked, and it is now 35-miles from the coast, abandoned and near-collapse.

The eye after which it is named was once used to reflect light across entrance into the sea of Tabernacea, and is long since-gone, taken by CYHLAGHARRI raiders in c. 3400 RM, and now crowns the PALACE OF TYRAGHON in CYHULIR.

BLUE HORSETAIL: Flo. These interesting plants are usually found in waterlogged soil, and are often seen in many waterlogged areas around ELYDEN. Blue horsetails are very primitive and reproduce via spores, similar to fungi. They are made up of conspicuously jointed rushes with spokes of short, soft blue-green pine-needle-like leaves radiating from each joint. Blue horsetails grow to heights of around 20 feet, and are often found in very dense patches, though, because of their shapes, even dense areas do not constrain line of sight very much.

Blue horsetails are very common in areas where they are found, though rarely seen elsewhere. They are particularly common in MALAN, the far east of EASTERN LLACHATUL, and the west of MENISCEA. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

BLUE MOUNTAIN, the: Geo. Mountain in the south east of SAUA, named after their dark rocks and the fog that covers their north eastern face. The mountain is seen as a spiritual haven and is a place of withdrawal for those on the PATH OF THOUGHT. The Blue Mountains are held to be the birthplace of many OTHERWORLDERS, and their plentiful meres are considered places of enlightenment.

BLUE TEA: Bev. Caffeinated drink that is popular in cafes and dockside eateries in central MENISCEA, particularly around the SEA OF LARISH^(1.). It is so-named after the colour it takes on after the tea leaves and petals are left to soak. See Vol II: Beverages.

BM: see RM.

BO AMMIEL: Pol. Set. Capital city of MEHITIEL (Pop. c. 780,000).

BOACHAN: Set. City in the north east of AZAZEM, just south of the ULLATAR region. It is famed for its AMBER MONKS – the bodies of ancient monks encased in AMBER-like resin (Pop. c. 37,400).

BOAHEN: Set. Fortified city in the far south east of MOAH. Little is known of the city and its people, though they do form a citizen ley to protect against possible incursions from KHARKHARADONTIS, to the south (Pop. c. 40,000).

BOAMUTT SARLA: (B. 3951 RM) Pol. Current PROLOCUTOR^(2,) of the TATARAN Republic Council.

BODARAGH: Rui. Ruined city in the south west of SABAISA, in the PORPHYRI PENINSULA. Founded by the ATTESTORS in c. 850 RM, it was once a great port, the city and much of the nation. Fell into ruin in c. 1300 – 1400 RM following the drying of the river ANDRAS. What remains of the once-proud city are now the decrepit descendants of its founders – a caste of ATRAMENTAL seers known as Attestors – who cling to the past even as they grasp to view the future. Local folklore maintains that they had full knowledge of the city's coming demise yet they did nothing, so engrossed by the more distant future were they.

BODHAMAL: See. Fortified coastal city in the far east of LOEGRESS^(1.). It is known for its large port (Pop. c. 42.000).

BODIILÉ: 1. Also 'Bodiilé crystals'. Ele. Tec. Crystalline material found in small volumes in EASTERN MENISCEA, particularly in the hills surrounding the LAODDANAN Mountains in the south west of XYRPHAAT⁽³⁾, eastern LAOD, and northern ENDUI.

Crystals are formed in high pressure under FIRMAMENTAL influence, and are valued electrical conductors. This property makes them useful in the manufacture of TECHNARCANE engines. Due to their fragile nature, they can only be worked by Firmamentist engineers^(2.), who are prized in the technarcane industries in the FAR HEMISPHERE.

2. Also 'Bodiilé engineers'. Sup. Tec. Voc. Firmamental engineers who are able to work the fragile bodiilé crystals (1.) that are found in EASTERN MENISCEA. They are able to manipulate the crystals, making them capable to withstand the rigours of demanded of them by the TECHNARCANE industries they are used in. This makes bodiilé engineers a vital part of many industries in Meniscea, and their services are highly valued. See Vol IV: Spheres and types of Shaping.

BODIILÉ ENGINEER: see BODILLÉ (2.).

BOG YOON: also 'the Alabaster Palace'. Int. Rui. Solitary structure in the middle of the CAUAT badlands area in CUTH. Bog Yoon is an alabaster structure dating back to the FOURTH AGE of Life, and is now ruined.

BOGGHUL: Lak. Lake in the c west of CHEIRA, forming a part of the flow of the river RGULLAUR, itself a tributary of the far larger YAHNOTH PHTHAN.

BOHAL AND TRISIMON: (B. 3493 – D. 3702 RM) Phil. Famed conjoined twin philosophers from GNOTH. Together they reformed the path of $\underline{\rm ESHUROD}$ and amassed a cult of followers who still study their tenets, over 300-years after their deaths.

BOHMIUS: (B. c. 1498 – 1561 RM) VENTHIRI explorer whose legendary voyage, amounting to some 40,000-miles, saw him travel around most of Elyden, becoming a cultural hero who is remembered across the Inner Sea to this day.

BOHMIUS ISLE: Geo. Island located roughly in the centre of the MAIDEN ISLES midway between the SEA OF NARANOR and the BATHASHAL OCEAN. It was documented by the explorer BOHMIUS in 1527 RM during his expedition of the GREAT FAR SEA.

In the years since its discovery, the slow withdrawal of ELYDEN'S seas, coupled with the active expansion of the volcanic rock have seen it expand greatly in size, though its surface remains of little value at present. It is now considered one of the more significant landmasses within the BOHMIUS ROCK: Geo. Small volcanic island forming a part of the MAIDEN ISLES documented by the explorer BOHMIUS during his expedition of the GREAT FAR SEA in 1527 RM. The island is situated midway between the SEA OF NARANOR and the BATHASHAL OCEAN and is now some 16-square miles in area.

BOIACHAN: Rui. Abandoned city in the DORUK region, in the east of AZAZEM. It was once a prosperous city, and centre of vast grazing lands where large herds of AUROCHS once dwelt, but the change of the plains into the dustbowl that is known today as the herds die off and the city falter by c. 1800 RM.

It was revitalised centuries later by government-funded TEMPESTARII SHAPERS, who worked to improve the climate in the region. Their actions resulted in the DORUK CALAMITY of 3088 RM, which sealed the fate of Boiachan, washing it away in unprecedented floods.

BOIL, TEMPLE OF THE: Rel. Str. Shrine in the wastes of KHARKHARADONTIS. It once formed part of the SHADOW MARCH though was abandoned in c. 3395 RM following the corruption of surrounding lands that led to the temple becoming infested with tumorous growths that gave it its present name.

Today, it is guarded by an exocrine who tends to the structure and makes potions and tinctures from the boils that plague the structure.

BOILING SEA, the: Sca. Eastern-most region of the DARK SEA, south of the BROKEN LANDS off the western-coast of TZALLRACH. Named after the devastation caused there following the CATACLYSM OF KHAMID in 101 RM, which wreaked havoc with the geology of most of KHAMID, causing parts of the coastline to ooze with molten rock that burst into steam when meeting the water. This caused the coastline to slowly expand. Though this growth has lessened over time, it is still observed to this day.

The Boiling Sea was the worst of these places, with lava flows continuing to this day. Many hydrothermal vents appeared on the sea floor following the Cataclysm, heating the waters, killing off most of its sea-life. It has cooled somewhat over the millennia though some regions of the sea are literally boiling hot, steaming to this day.

BOKA: Set. Settlement in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of EDICULE^(1.), known for its fine marble and sculptors. The hills outside the settlement are riddled with warren-like caves, which locals claim are infested with GRUAIMIN (Pop. c. 14,500).

BOKENAT: 1. Geo. Hills and roughlands forming the northern part of the eponymous duchy, in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM EDICULE^(1.).

2. Pol. Duchy of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of EDICULE^(1.). The duchy is situated south of the SACHAR highlands and is commonly recognised for its rolling hills and roughlands, often known as the Bokenat.

BOKHAR: Set. Major coastal city in the north west of KASPIA, in the lowlands of the TAGHAIRM, overlooking the SEA OF BIELOST (Pop. c. 60,000).

 $\underline{\underline{BOKHOK}}$: Geo. Island almost 200-miles off the south western coast of CUTH.

BOKKA: Sca. Bay, south of the mouth of the river TENESAAR, to the south east of HOLOLACH^(1.), and the south west of the MULL CITY-STATES. Its waters are largely sterile.

BOKKARIS: Gco. Mountains in the south east of LLACHATUL serving as a border between the east of IACIO and the south west of SURUTUR.

BOKKEA: Sea. Body of water in the north of the SEA OF URAN, dividing it from the SEA OF DERAEA. Its waters are deeper than those of the Deraea, and most vessels tend to navigate close to the eastern coast, along the shore of the CARIAN⁽²⁾ headland.

BOKKEA, STRAIT OF: Sea. Strait leading into the SEA OF BOKKEA, from the SEA OF URAN. The strait is around 25-miles long and controls traffic in and out of the seas.

BOKKORON: (D. c. -870 RM) Pol. Warlord who between c.-900 and the time of his death was able to unite the disparate TRIBES OF AD, managing to repel SERAPI attacks from the east. He was also instrumented the creation of the cob wall known as DAR CINNRA.

BOKSAR: Set. Coastal settlement in the far south west of TARTAK (Pop. c. 14,000).

BOLAN: Flo. Plr. 'Bolans'. Tree common to THE OLD FOREST. Bolans have an average height & circumference 300 ft., and little foliage; preferring open areas with plentiful sunlight. Their trunk is brittle (reproducing constantly, with dead bark falling to ground) and often filled with cavities, which are home to many different creatures, including birds, small mammals, reptiles and amphibians. The resources they offer (dead wood, cork, food [fruit and animals who depend on it] and water) draw humans to them, with the trunk of a hardy bolan commonly becoming the centre of a settlement. Religious structures are often built inside them. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

BOLECH: Set. City in the c south of SARAGOS (Pop. c. 40,000).

BOLET: Set. Settlement in the c of THE VORANDINE (Pop. c. 4,000).

BOLGIA: Sup. Geo. Major network of surface caves in the south west of SAMMAEA, along the border between southern MAENMIST and the north west of NORTHERN SIMBARA. It is famed for its deep ATRAMENTAL output, which led to weak formations which were likely responsible for the caverns' formation when duststone slowly eroded, leaving hollows and tunnels.

It is believed by many to lead into the far reaches of the PRISON CARCERI.

BOLILOT PEAKS: Geo. Sheer-sided central peaks of the GROWING MOUNTAINS in MULCIBER, stretching for around 350-miles from Suur'ka in the north, to the NECROPOLIS OF CHARYBDIS in the south. The Peaks are difficult to traverse, and act as a natural buffer between the tribes of SALARNA, EATAN, and JACITTA in the west, from INDAAR, and ALLAKAT in the east.

BOLL DA: Rvr. Coastal wetlands in the north west of HOLOLACH^(1.), in the prefecture of ALITENEA^(1.), at the mouth of the river VARASSAI. The wetlands cover some 350 square-miles, parts of which are mildly ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED. The large variety of wildlife either avoids such regions or are adapted to them.

BOLLARDS OF VOHN: Int. Str. Series of 4-ft. tall bollards of an indeterminate ore in the far south west of ABRAXA. There are tens of thousands of these bollards arranged in a long row that goes on for miles. They are pitted and corroded though are otherwise rooted to the spot, with attempts at excavating or extracting them all ending in failure, leading some to believe that they are deeply embedded or otherwise connected to each other underground.

It is unknown who erected them and how old they are, though the nature of their construction has led some scholars to indicate they are tens of thousands of years old, and possibly created by a DEMIURGE or SCION.

BOLTUH: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the north west of AQUARIIA, guarding THE WAY trade-route that crosses the border between Aquariia and GNOTH.

BOMAH: Rvr. River forming a border between southern SKAROS and northern LAASKHA, flowing for 250-miles before its confluence with the larger river LLORTHA.

BOMAS: Set. Coastal settlement in the east of CANNOS (Pop. c. 7,200).

BOMMER: Set. Small city in the east of KEPHUAAN, close to the border with AMMESH. It maintains a trade route with the Ammeshi city of AHEMMA (Pop. c. 18,200).

BOMOLOCHUS: 1. Soc. In many cultures across the KORACHANIEMPIRE, particularly the northern provinces within LLACHATUL, those who follow a school of thought that advocates contrarianism and comical (often acidic) satirism expressed through oratorical observationism and physical comedy in what became known as GRAND MASQUERADES. Outlawed by the Imperial administration and hunted down by the BUREAU OF CENSORS, they nonetheless operated in society's fringes. Though viewed by the masses of plebeians as a relief from everyday life, they were in fact drawing attention to the perceived injustices and inequities imposed by imperial life. Though destroyed as an organised group (often referred to as a guild or, less formally; a sodality) during the eradications of 3924 RM, not all individuals could be rooted out, and many remain as wanderers or 'wise-men' dwelling in cities' underbellies, where their presence can never be fully nullified. Many also invariably find their way to the CARNIVALS OF RUST that travel around the INNER SEA.

2. also 'the Jester'. Ast. Con. Constellation located along the equator. See Vol II: Constellations.

BON SHADDA: Set. Small city in the east of AHKA, positioned along the course of the river SASHAT. The city, like many in Ahka, has suffered under the war with KORACHAN. It is strategically important due to its steel mills and manufactories, which have been targeted by Korachani troops (Pop. c. 19,600).

BONACH: Set. Settlement in the east of GNOTH. It is known for its FIRMATITE mines (Pop. c. 5,000).

BONE MINER: also 'Boner'. Ind. Soc. Those who mine the supranatural bone-formations in the region of OSSIKEHONA in the c east of THE SURRACH.

BONEFIELDS, the: Geo. Desert region in the east of the DESOLATION OF ASTUDAN, to the west of TEMUJA, characterised by grey-blue pillars of stone, shards of bone and igneous black rock formations that resemble giant glass-like flowers. The area is dotted with the FOURTH AGE remnants of an expansive pitched battle.

BONE-PITS: Soc. Rel. Pits used in funerary rituals in PRE-IMPERIAL agnostic

VAALK, which require bodies to be burnt after death. The burning is said to release the personality of the individual, leaving the body an empty husk that is seen as useless, having performed its job of containing the personality in life. Bodies burnt this way are discarded into specificallybuilt pits (many of which link to deep caverns or, metaphorically, the underworld), that house the remains of thousands upon thousands of dead. When these pits are filled up, they are burnt from within to further cleanse the Material Plane from the taint of the physical bodies.

Though the bone-pit tradition is an old one, dating back to the early FIFTH AGE, it is one that has survived relatively intact. Where it originated as a way of separating the personality form the spent vessel, it became (following the rise of the Korachani empire in Vaalk c. 20 RM) an economical way of disposing of the dead in a post-paganistic society.

BONNGAS: Set. Small city in the far north of PNESSA, close to the border with MULCIBER and the tribe of DATHOA. It is a major mercantile city, trading goods between Pnessa and Mulciber (Pop. c. 20,000).

BOOK OF DEEDS: Rel. Vol. Book that is important across the various cults that worship the God-king NEPHTHALONT in the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. The book was penned by the Nephthalont between 600 – 650 RM and forms the basis of the cult of personality that they founded. The original copy of the book is kept in the shrine of ABRAS (3.) in the city of TIAL ESH in the south west of Mulciber, though copies, many of which are over a millennium old, are common across Mulciber.

Young men study the religious book and must recite a passage from it when they turn 15, during a COMING-OF-AGE RITUAL. The passage becomes a mantra that the individual abides by for the remainder of his life. If he is found to be in opposition of this mantra, certain statutes are taken away from him by the church.

BOOK OF GATES: Car. Vol. An atlas of ELYDEN, first published in 236 RM in PELASGOS, and reprinted many times following the rise of the printing press in c. 500 RM. The atlas was as accurate a description of Elyden as possible at the time, though its main purpose was in cataloguing the regions of the world that were affected by the ATRAMENTA and the FIRMAMENT, rendering them in detail and with as much information as possible. The Book of Gates has been updated sporadically throughout the ages; the most recent edition of which was published in ALMAGEST in 3701 RM.

BOOK OF KINGS: Pol. Vol. Royal ledger in the SOLEYN TERRITORIES. When a new MAHANTKHAI is sworn in he signs his name in the Book of Kings in SOLYENI CUNEIFORM, and pierces his palm with a pointed thimble, allowing his blood to drip onto the book. The book dates back to the 1328 RM, when the first Mahantkhaj, RAHANKHEN I, rose to power, and it is an expression of the KWEI philosophy that dominates the region.

BOOK OF LAMENTATIONS, the: Rel. Vol. One of many holy books within the religion of the CHURCH OF THE VOLUTE in NAARETH. It was written by ST. AMALINDA in 1134 RM scant days before her death from AEPATHY.

BOOK OF LOST SUNS, the: Rel. Vol. An ancient religious codex penned in CUTH, which is still observed by the followers of the TWIN CHURCHES OF CUTH to this day. See Vol II: Books of Elyden.

BOOK OF RACHANAEL, the: Rel. Vol. Holy book and religious scriptures of the Church of the Undying Machine. It is written in three parts:

The first is comprised of doctored excerpts from the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN and the SCRIPTURE OF SHADOW.

The second was penned by the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR prior to his death, as he disseminated the teachings of RACHANAEL and the Scripture of Shadow, leading to the solidifying of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE as the only true religion of the Korachani Empire.

The third part is known as the GOSPELS OF THE FOURTEEN, which were penned by the followers of Malichar following his mortal death and eventual rebirth as an OTHERWORLDER. The Book of Rachanael was updated and altered many times until 385 RM, at which point Malichar himself declared it complete and sacrosanct after making amendments to it.

BOOK OF TERATHA, the: Rel. Vol. Codex holy to the CULT OF THE WHITE MOON penned in -943 RM by the halfblood prophetess LARA. The codex was the result of seven visions experienced under the influence of the full IVORY MOON over the course of 3-years (between -946 and -944 RM) and was an attempt to unite the many disparate cults that had appeared in DHEA over the years, which had resulted in a diglossia of faith. Following the death of Lara in -831 RM, the Book of Teratha was considered a holy relic, and was housed in the HIGH-TEMPLE OF TERATHA in ORA⁽³⁾, until the settlements' plunder by CONTHIAN armies in -813 RM, at which point the book was lost, believed looted.

BOOK OF THE WARS OF THE ARCHPOTENTATE, the: His. Vol.

Large iron-bound tome originally penned during the ARCHPOTENTATE'S absence in 302 RM, in NICARIAH, SKAROS. At the time the notion that the Archpotentate might be dead was not unthought, and the Book of the Wars of the Archpotentate was created as a form of homily to the military genius that was Malichar, detailing his victories and tactics. Following his return in 339 RM, the tome became less popular though was still taught in military circles and following the widespread appearance of the printing press in c. 500 RM, was used in military academies at the behest of Malichar himself, who had the anonymous author of the Book canonised in 503 RM.

BOOL: Rui. Arc. Ruined KARKADANNI statue in the north west of ELEKHID. The statue, some 30-feet high before its destruction, once depicted a karkadanni warrior standing triumphant. The structure is now shattered, its scattered parts lying half-buried in the scrub of the area.

AUROCHS pass across here moving south into Saua for winter.

BRAHAN: 1. Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region in the north east of KORACHAN covering some 30,000 square-miles. The area is relatively flat, though rises slightly in the centre, allowing the river CHANI and ICHORIA to bypass it. The Atramental taint is slight, and allows short periods of sojourn, though there is little of value there save the strange root-system of KORZDA.

The region is categorised as a LEAST CONCERN by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

2. Set. Small city in the west of $\underline{DURCHAA}^{(1.)}$. Its main industry is the mining of $\underline{METEORE}$, and the snaking columns of $\underline{CONVEYORS}$ carrying raw ore out of the city are a common sight (Pop. c. 17,200).

BRAHIM: 1. Geo. Island off the western-coast of TZALLRACH.

2. Set. Settlement on the eponymous island off the western-coast of TZALLRACH. Prior to the CATACLYSM OF KHAMID the settlement was a great metropolis, known far and wide for its fine limestone and marble monuments and great palaces. It was known for its philosophers and warriors. Today it is a diminished city on the edge of 50-ft. cliffs overlooking the SEA OF VENTHA (Pop. c. 7,800).

BRAHMIN: 1. Plr. 'Brahma'. Pol. Rnk. Originally MALANI scholars devoted to the law, though the term now embodies a wider variety of roles, including bureaucracy and diplomacy, and they are relatively common in larger cities, though serve as political leaders and judges in smaller settlements. Those who can call themselves brahma are typically respected members of Malani society.

2. Sup. Rnk. The term is also used in TETHYSIA where it retains some of its original meaning. Such brahma are mostly academics; theologians and FIRMAMENTISTS. The Tethysian tradition of brahma likely stems from Malani diplomats visiting the region centuries ago.

BRAHTA: Soc. Rel. waypoint along THE SHADOW MARCH in the north of MHAROKK, passing through the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region of THAT, where many failed CENOBITES reside, which is overseen by a caste of UNTOUCHABLES. The waypoint is protected by a SIPHON ENGINE, and the tainted cenobites serve as a warning to those going to the holy land, urging pilgrims to renew their faith and the revere the Undying Machine, whose blessings are said to protect those undertaking the March. Many abandon the road and turn back north here when the horrors of what they can expect become apparent. Such pilgrims can expect to be rounded up by slavers and sold to manufactories as slaves.

BRAINNE: 1. Lak. One of seven major lakes in KOMMEA, collectively known as the SEVEN MAIDENS⁽¹⁾, situated in the c north east of the kingdom.

2. Dei. Rel. Myt. One of the SEVEN MAIDENS^(2.) of KOMMEAN myths. She is most commonly associated with autumn and death, and is an eschatological figure in Kommean myths, having been killed by AINE. She is the twin of RAEHIA and is self-reviving, being born in the warm embrace of Aine, only to be killed by her again. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

BRAK: Set. City in the west of TARTAK. It is home to the oldest tavern in Tartak, which is said to have been the site of the founding of the now defunct militant ORDER OF THE BROKEN CREST (Pop. c. 20,000).

BRALA: Set. Settlement in the north of CHTHYRID, leading north into the Old Forest (Pop. c. 7,400).

BRALOS: Ind. Rui. One of the first major manufactories in the KORACHANI EMPIRE, located in the west of PELASGOS, south of the BAY OF ABERIA. The manufactory was a mainstay of Korachani industry, and only closed down in c. 3400 RM, following the dwindling of local resources that once fed its massive foundries. It was once coastal, though it today landlocked, its rusted girders painting the surrounding land orange, poisoning fauna and flora. It is shunned by most.

BRAMIA: Set. Fortified settlement in the far north east of SEDISIA (Pop. c. 6.000).

BRAN: Bev. Alcoholic beverage, distilled from ALOE, common in GATHA and many nations across the north of SAMMAEA and south of LLACHATUL. The first primitive examples of the drink found in Korachan date to around 160 - 180 RM, though it thought to have been developed independently elsewhere before this. See Vol II: Beverages.

BRANAT: Geo. Island off the southern coast of GYZHA, forming part of the chain known as THE CAPRICORNS.

BRANCHBRAIDING: also 'Chimileen', and 'rootbraiding'. Arc. Fau. A once-common vocation in classical MALAN that was seen across its architecture, where individuals, known as CHIMILEEN in MALANI (which roughly translates to branch or root braider) manipulate the limbs of living trees (both roots and branches), particularly the CHIANIOR tree, into desired shapes and forms. Through branchbraiding, the Malani people have been able to create rigid structures such as bridges, pillars, towers, and even fortifications, all out of living trees that become stronger with age.

In antiquity, the art of Chimileen was the domain of skilled SHAPERS who were able to achieve miracles unimaginable today – entire buildings, edifices, and monuments, many of which still remain to this day. Over time, their skills were passed on to non-shapers, who were able to mimic many of their accomplishments through time and patience.

The original form of branchbraiding that was accomplished by skilled shapers was lost over the years due to the training needed, and only a few shapers live in Malan today who know the art, though there is a growing desire to revive the tradition. Most branchbraiders alive today are not shapers and they spend the majority of their time tending to extant structures rather than creating new ones.

BRANCHRABBIT: Fau. Small THEROPS, resembling a rabbit, that lives in low branches of tress, spending most of its life in the canopy. It is relatively common in SAUA, the east of AHRISHEN, MALAN, and the south of TEMUJA. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

BRANCHMAIDEN: see DIAORESS.

BRANT: Ser. Settlement in the c of BISBUT, known for its horses and breeders (Pop. c. 6,800).

BRANNON: Set. Settlement in the north of LOEGRESS^(1.), along the course of the river FYNDOUR. It is known for its sheep herding and mutton, and is surrounded by miles of bucolic farmlands (Pop. c. 5,000).

BRANWYLL: Rvr. River in the north of LOEGRESS^(1.), flowing east for over 250-miles from sources in the VOULLOR Mountains, before meeting its mouth at the SALDHUIN wetlands.

BRARELL: Set. City in the east of the HENDECARCHY of LONAR in the south west of MALAN. Its main industry is agriculture (Pop. c. 28,000).

BRAS: (D. 2809 RM) Pol. His. The last crowned king of KARGEMMA, before the abolition of the monarchy. He acceded in 2761 RM, during a time of war dominated by sporadic EHRENISIAN CRUSADES launched by KORACHAN against the region, as well as attacks launched by the KHULLAN INQUISITION. He was a competent military ruler, though was burdened by an increasingly unruly populace, who had grown weary of the conflict of their time. Like his predecessors, he delegated much of the day-to-day governing of the kingdom to the UNITED ASSEMBLY, though nevertheless grew weary of ruling, and died just two days before the signing of a peace treaty ending the war with Korachan. His son KARABRAS acceded him, but was assassinated on the day of the peace signing, symbolising the people's wishes to end the monarchy — a sentiment that was honoured with the abolition of the monarchy, allowing the United Assembly to become the official government.

BRASTAS: Set. City in the prefecture of $\underline{\text{TERECHANT}}^{(1.)}$ in the east of $\underline{\text{HOLOLACH}}^{(1.)}$ (Pop. c. 31,800).

BRAT EDRAN: Geo. Mountains in the north of KOMMEA, forming a part of the greater HOLLOW COASTLINE chain.

BRATH: Set. Settlement in the prefecture of HOLOLACH^(2.) in the west of Hololach^(1.). The settlement was once much larger though rebellion centuries ago saw it later diminish, and its people still carry the stigma of their ancestor's ancient actions (Pop. c. 3,500).

BRATOD: Rel. Str. Monastery of the CHURCH OF THE VOLUTE in the south of NAARETH. It is one of few producers of banana wine that is consumed by MATRIDULES across the nation.

BRATON: Soc. Ind. PATRICIAN HOUSE based in the city of LAAGROTH in the western-coast of LAASKHA, that specialises in heavy industries, manufacturing ships for the KORACHANI navy, as well as large merchant vessels. It owns shipyards and shipbreaking yards, across the western-coast of Laaskha and SKAROS, thus securing its influence on the full circle of life of a ship. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

BRATREA: Set. Settlement in the prefecture of HOMREA in the c south of HOLOLACH^(1.) (Pop. c. 4,500).

BRATTAN: Mil. Str. Fortress on the island of TORAL in the prefecture of SONTADRIS in the south east of HOLOLACH^(1.), guarding entrance into the SEA OF BOKKA from the south and west.

BRATTOY: Set. Fortified coastal city in the south of IACIO (Pop. c. 40,000).

BRATUIL: Geo. Mountain in the prefecture of ALITENEA in the north east of HOLOLACH^(1.), forming part of the TOLIASOR Mountain range.

BRAXIA: Rui. Ancient stone necropolis in the east of NASTAL⁽²⁾, in the c east of WESTERN SAMMAEA. It is thought to have been a place of repose to nobility and royalty attracting looters and explorers. The nearby settlement of BHEKRRAL emerged to cater to these expeditions.

BRAY: Sup. Mor. Ill-regarded bestial MORTALS with capriform features. They live in highland regions in the c of MENISCEA, particularly the UTULLTAR and SABARAAN Mountains. They are gifted with a rudimentary intellect and are quick to laugh, though can be unpredictable and ill-tempered. They prey on small groups of travellers and are reviled by most, though a few have been known to serve as adept mountain-guides across the Sabaraa — their knowledge of their surroundings and sure-feet making them well-suited to the role. The eerie chittering laughter that echoes across the Sabaraan mountains on nights when both moons are new is often attributed to bray. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

BREA: Sca. Bay dominating around 300-miles of the northern coast of JURRAS⁽²⁾.

BREAN EEL: Fau. Eels commonly found in the Bay of Brea and surrounding waters along the northern coast of JURRAS⁽²⁾, where they are a staple part of the diet, fetching high prices in markets farther away. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

BRECHA: Set. Fortified settlement in the region of NUCTEMERA in the north of EREBETH, known for its wines (Pop. c. 7,000).

BREDA: 1. Geo. Plains in the west of the KORACHANI PENINSULA. Ancient records show that they were once known for their terraced fields, where various grains and orchards produced food for a fledgling empire. Today they are bereft or mortal influence, and their fields have long since been reclaimed by nature, be that what it may.

2. Rvr. River in the west of the KORACHANI PENINSULA, flowing west from the FATUACH Mountains into the BAY OF TUUNA.

BREDACH: 1. Set. Settlement in the west of SEDISIA. It originated as a KORACHANI settlement forming part of the colony of OHDURTAR in c. 2400 RM. It spent close to a century abandoned following the empire's retreat from the region in 2671 RM (Pop. c. 8,000).

2. Mil. Str. Fortress in the west of SEDISIA, overlooking the region of ATILIPHO.

BREDOS: Mil. Str. Fort in the west of CHANDOS⁽³⁾. It was built by House Chandos⁽⁵⁾ during the WAR OF SUNDERING, though was never used. It is home to most of the state's armed forces today.

BREGA: Str. Lighthouse in the prefecture of HOLOLACH^(2.) in the west of Hololach^(1.). The lighthouse overlooks the entrance to the BAY OF AMATRRA.

 $\underline{BREKK}\!:$ Mil. Str. Large coastal fort in the north east of the $\underline{SAMMAEAN}$ nation of $\underline{ENITH}\!.$

BRES: Geo. Island in the c east of LOEGRESS (1.), south of the BAY OF SIDI.

BRESHUA: Set. City in the c north west of GIBEAH. Its main industry is logging (Pop. c. 30,000).

BRETRAN: Geo. Reef in the west of the CORAL BARONIES, in the south west of SAMMAEA, between the waters of the MANNAL ITRUSH in the west and the IHEDROUR ITRUSH in the east. It is particularly shallow and has claimed many vessels over the years, many of which remain, only half submerged today.

BRETTA: Geo. Headland in the west of HOLOLACH^(1.), west of the capital, overlooking the SEA OF MARDEN. The headland is 17-miles long from a fork in the river HEMAVAR to the river PROPOR. At its highest point the headland is 740 ft. from sea level and is home to fort ROTTAN, which guards the entrance into the river Hemavar.

BRIAR KNIGHT: also 'Bush Knight'. Leg. Mar. Org. Knights in TETHYSIA who swear loyalty to the GOD-KING and protect the hinterlands and outback regions of their vast nation, where the organised law enforcement found in more densely-populated areas is non-existent.

They emerged in c. 3100 RM as a series of itinerant monks who followed the God-king and began helping pilgrims and travellers. Over time their order grew more organised, and by c. 3300 RM they had established LANGUES^(2.) in various cities across Tethysia. It was not until c. 3480 RM that they became officially recognised by the church of KATHISIS^(1.). Until then they received funding through alms and donations from wealthy benefactors to whom they would serve as spies and mercenaries – practices that are rumoured to persist to this day.

They patrol outback roads and isolated pathways, protecting them from banditry and smuggling. They are named after the underbrush that is common where the radiation originated, in the c of Tethysia.

BRICOM: Set. City in the north east of CHEIRA (Pop. unknown).

BRIDESMAIDENS: 1. Geo. Large island chain off the northern coast of the PREPOTENCY OF THREPHO, south of the SEA OF CHHMAR.

2. Religious militant order of female spies/assassins who refer to themselves as acolytes, who live on the island of YIDRI in the larger Bridesmaidens chain^(I.) in the PREPOTENCY OF THREPHO. The order was established centuries ago by a legendary warrior-priestess who, after years serving as a headhunter in the city of TUGO, became a hermit on the island of Yidri. She attracted a slow stream of followers over the years who studied her teachings, becoming the first practitioners of the UERGGETIN martial art, which survives to this day.

There are only ever 14 acolytes in total, though most of them are typically away on assignment, which can take them across the WOLD rainforest or beyond, in the pursuit of their quarries, who can range from politicians to heretics and anything in between. They wear a distinctive large brass disc on their forehead, each of which bears unique bass relief work. They wear these proudly despite the subterfuge that is inherent in their work.

Despite their deplorable vocation, they are regarded with fear and respect by the people of Threpho. Their garb (long linen bandages wrapped around their bodies, dyed in various dark colours) and accoutrements make for distinctive figures and they relish in the effect their presence has on others who know of them.

BRIDGE OF ILNEVEJ: Str. Large bridge in the west of the HENDECARCHY of MYEIN in the south west of MALAN. It is an expansive root bridge spanning a deep canyon over the river DUR. The first mention of the bridge dates back to c. 2200 RM, making it one of the oldest continuously used BRANCHBRAIDED bridges in Malan. It is also one of the largest and most impressive examples of this fine art.

BRINE SEA, the: also 'Haidu Mort, yo'. Sea. North western-most tip of the ROILING SEA, forming a bay between the SOLEYN TERRITORIES and SUOR. It is characterised by its relatively shallow salty waters and is bordered by land from the west to the east, and shallows and reefs to the south, granting it few safe passages to the Roiling Sea beyond.

BRISTLECONE PINE: Flo. Pines that grow in subalpine terrain in the c north of WESTERN and CENTRAL LLACHATUL. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

BRIUSH: Ser. Coastal settlement in the north of JURRAS⁽²⁾ overlooking the BAY OF BREA. Its main industry is fishing, and its fishing fleets are known for their skill in navigating the treacherous currents and shallow seas of the region, bringing in hauls of fish, shellfish, and the prized BREAN EEL, which is sought after in markets across northern Jurras and farther away across the INNER SEA (Pop. c. 7,800).

BRIDES OF MALICHAR: Rel. Org. Religious sisterhood whose members devote their lives to the serving the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR. The order was founded by the ABBESS KIREA in HIALIA in 330 RM, a few years before the Archpotentate's return to KORACHAN, in the wake of her experiencing prophetic visions of his return.

Originally sceptical of her visions, she became a religious phenomenon almost overnight once work of the Archpotentate's rebirth and return to the empire reached Korachan. Her sisterhood was immediately funded by the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, and immediately became inundated with young women seeking to service in the order. It grew rapidly and by c. 350 RM had spread to most major cities in Korachan, spreading to other nations under its vassalage by c. 500 RM, gaining a large following in rural (north eastern) AZAZEM.

The order rapidly became more extreme in its outlook, with sisters coming to follow ascetic doctrines and leading lives of seclusion. Most monasteries located in cities were closed by c. 1130 RM, being relocated to more isolated areas away from densely settled areas. The canonisation of St. Kirea in 792 RM further cemented the legitimacy of the order, bringing it new wealth. The tradition of religious prophecies remains strong within the sisterhood, with many sisters claiming to have received visions throughout its history, garnering further attention and notoriety.

It was around this time that sisters began conducting ceremonies where they wedded themselves to the Archpotentate. Almost identical to traditional marriage ceremonies based on local customs, these became recognised by the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE as legally binding, making the sisters married in the eyes of both church and state.

The sisterhood survives through church funding and generous donations from wealthy benefactors, and over recent centuries has garnered a reputation for religious extremism, with rumours of flagellation and other self-punishment of an obscene nature becoming rampant amongst prophytes (sisters who have been within the order for at least five years), in the hopes of triggering visions. This has led to a decrease in new recruits, forcing the sisterhood to adopt new measures such as adopting foundlings and accepting abandoned girls.

BRIDGE OF DESPAIR: immense subterranean bridge in the Chamber of Sorrows in the PRISON CARCERI, beneath the northern coast of VAALK. The bridge is said to be close to 200-miles long, with the bottom of the chamber immeasurably deep.

BRIDGE DISTRICT: Geo. Set. Large district of the CITY OF ALMAGEST, known for its foundation of arches and deep vaults that span the BION creek. The first bridge over the creek was constructed in 842 RM and structures immediately began to be constructed along its length. Over the years more bridges were constructed, and by 2000 RM there were 11 bridges in all, most with some form of structure adorning them. One housed governmental offices, and another was a manufactory, with most others having disparate residential structures on them, most of which had been built without permits, leading to a ramshackle appearance.

New bridges were built linking one bridge to another and new structures appeared to fill in the gaps between then until by c. 2300 RM much of the creek had been largely covered, with narrow high-walled voids leading directly to the cold waters below. New structures continued to be built, some of them 'underground' in the shadow of the buildings above, clinging to the columns and arches that supported the district above, and others replacing entire blocks as old structures were demolished to make way for newer apartment blocks and high-rises.

In $3024\,RM$, less than a decade after gaining independence, a large part of the district collapsed into the Bion, leading to the deaths of thousands. The district was rebuilt from the ground up, with more sturdy foundations that were tailor-made to accommodate structures at all heights, from the sea level all the way to the street level hundreds of feet above.

Today the subterranean levels of the district have formed a labyrinthine expanse of official as well as illicit-built sub-bridges, walkways and gantries, with shanties and slums appearing between them. There has been little effort to police the area, and an illegal port and harbour have appeared there, becoming parts of every-day life in the region. Many of the people living in the subterranean parts of the Bridge District consider themselves to live outside of the laws of the City of Almagest, and refute the authority of city officials, even stealing electricity and water from the law-abiding citizens above.

BRIDGE OF ETERNITIES: also 'Beballia'. Myr. His. In the mythology and ancient history of ELYDEN, a major event detailed in the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN, and various corrupted and fragmentary forms in ancient histories and mythologies across Elyden.

The Bridge of Eternities was constructed by the DEMIURGES in the SECOND AGE to bring them closer to THE SHAPER following their chastisement after corrupting ELYDEN and the IMMORTAL PEOPLES⁽¹⁾ that ultimately gave birth to the MORTAL PEOPLES. The mortals serve as the workforce, toiling in their millions to bring about the great desires of the Demiurges.

ARIMASPI and TALANTEHUT secretly opposed this and with the help of The Shaper stopped the great ritual, dooming it to failure. In his anger The Shaper cursed the mortal peoples with DIFFERENT TONGUES to sow confusion and distrust – never again would the mortals be able to work together in such a manner.

Arimaspi was granted the epithet of KING OF KINGS in honour of his work in stopping the ritual. See Vol IV: the Mythologia Elyden.

BRIDGE OF KAELLARA: Str. Leg. Old FAE bridge in the woods of south western SKAPAR in the GAP OF ST. PRIMASA in the far east of SKAROS, positioned atop a FIRMAMENTAL LEY close to the border with BASSORAH^(2.), which brings it closer to the OTHERWORLD, and is also said to attract fae creatures to it. The region is shunned by the Skarosian people due to superstitions and fears related to the fae. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

BRIDGE OF VALAMIR: see VALAMIR^(1.).

BRIMSTONE: Ele. Sulfuric mineral with a greasy texture and a pungent odour. It is highly flammable, burning slowly with a blue flame, and dissolving as it burns. The substance is sticky when burning and was used in great quantities in battle, where projectiles covered in brimstone would be hurled at enemy forces and cities.

It was mined extensively in what is today KARGAMA along the EHRENISIAN COAST, making the region wealthy, though it is found in large quantities across ELYDEN.

BRINGER OF SUN AND ROT: Myt. His. Common epithet by which the DEMIURGE NERGAAL was once known.

BRIZEIU: Set. Settlement in the south west of RAONGEN^(2,). Its main industry is the mining of OMNATITE, which is processed in the city of SINVERU in the south east (Pop. c. 7,400).

BRMYIR: Set. Fortress-city and capital of the nation of CHTHYRID. Despite estimates, its true population numbers are unknown, and some political scholars believe it may harbour millions of dverg in deep catacomb-cities that may stretch down for miles (Pop. min. 260,000).

BRMYIRID: Geo. Mountain dominating the east of CHTHYRID. The mountain is old, and its peaks are worn down and crumbling. The capital city, BRMYIR, is named after the mountain.

BROCHITTER: Geo. Craggy mountain-range in the c south west of THE SURRACH, forming the south east border of SÛR GHATH.

BRODWYN: Set. Major city in the c west of LOEGRESS^(1.), along the course of the river TAHUDUN. It is a vital part of the main Loegrean trade-route (Pop. c. 280,000).

BROG KOHIR: Sct. City in the south east of AYAD. It is a major source of marble (Pop. c. 13,000).

BROGAR: Rui. Abandoned city in the prefecture of BROTRIS in the south east of HOLOLACH^(1.). The settlement was abandoned in c. 3400 RM as the retreat of the BAY OF TOLAR became too costly to maintain. The land around the ruin as a vast salt field from the bay's retreat.

BROKEN CREST, ORDER OF THE: His. Mil. Org. Historical militant order that emerged in the west of TARTAK^(1.) in c. 425 RM in response to the regions' subjugation by KORACHANI forces and the sacking of its namesake city^(2.).

The order takes its name from the great marble crest of the city of Tartak that was shattered by besieging Korachani forces, which was taken by the order's founder Beros, who spent his later years defying the Korachani occupation of his home, inspiring others to follow in his steps. The order grew in power and size, becoming a major disruption to Korachani subjugators until their eventual departure in 927 RM.

Following this the crest was restored and placed atop the ruin of Tartak, with a shrine built around it. The shrine remains to this day and is visited by those who seek to honour the hardships of their ancestors.

BROKEN LANDS, the: also 'the Broken Isles'. Geo. The western-most reaches of the devastation wrought by the CATACLYSM OF KHAMID, encompassing present-day north western TZALLRACH, though at the time the region was part of KHAMIDIAN lands.

Originally comprised of rolling plains, the region is now a series of sheer-sided island, the largest of which is 110-miles long, off the western-coast of Tzallrach.

The north western-most part of the Broken Lands is home to the AMBER MINARET, a college where the ATRAMENTAL and FIRMAMENTAL arts are studied and scrutinised.

- BROKEN ONE: 1. Common vernacular used to describe the corrupted offspring of clean parents. Most widespread in the cities of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, where such births are relatively common. They are more commonly referred to as DEGENERATES.
- 2. Myt. His. Common epithet by which the DEMIURGE VORROPOHAIAH was once known.
- BROKEN SEA, the: also 'the Sea of Pelasgos'. Sea. Named after the hundreds of isles that divide the waters west of the PELASGOSI mainland. To unseasoned mariners the Broken Sea is like a labyrinth of coves and deadends and twisted coastlines. Maps of the region are valuable, with accurate maps of the region even more-so.
- BROKERS' ROAD: Com. Geo. Major trade route dominating the south of EASTERN MENISCEA, beginning in the city of ALIBASDUR in LAOD and heading south across PHUT, EASTERN LARISH, EGINAZ, OBLEVIS(2), and DHA NAR, where it ends at the city of TAMREF. It was used by brokers of the OBLEVISH EMPIRE(1.), who travelled across the peninsula while working for the emperor, and retained the name even after the collapse of the empire.
- BROKEZS: Geo. Island off the eastern coast of NOAVATUR. It is the only place where the herb known colloquially as STEEL STAFF is found, and many people brave the island's cliffs to retrieve specimens.
- BROMAA: Fau. With traits common to boars and MONOCEROUSES, though far larger than both. They are native to the east of SAMMAEA, and range from ETHISTONITH to CHEIRA, and are dominant in the rainforests of WAELMIGH See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.
- BROMACHID: 1. Geo. Escarpment in the west of LYRIDIA DHAI, close to the coast with the SEA OF PROPONTIS.
 - 2. Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTAL WASTES dominating the eponymous region, rendering the rock into fragile DUSTSTONE. Rockslides and cave-ins are relatively common and the region is shunned by most.
- BROND: Rui. Abandoned settlement in the south of the region of QATTISYSH in the west of THE SURRACH. It was destroyed by BAKHRAN bombardments and taken by state troopers in 4004 RM. It was since retaken by Qattisyshi troops and later abandoned. Today it had been reduced to rubble, surrounded by abandoned trenches and the wrecked war machines of both sides. Opportunistic scavengers and looters brave the wastes, though it is otherwise ignored by both sides' armies.
- BRONEA: Geo. Island about 50-miles off the south eastern coast of SAMMAEA, in the SEA OF LERAMUGH.
- BRONTEA: Set. City in the TARAHID ANNEXES, along the course of the river TELILASH. It is a major mercantile power in the area and forms part of the PARTHISAN ROAD trade-route, and ships leave its harbours go around Parthis with trade goods (Pop. c. 1,068,000).
- BRONZE KING, the: Dei. Rel. God commonly worshipped in the region of DAAZ in THE SURRACH. Is thought to have links with the more ancient AZER. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.
- BROR: Dem. 'Brori'. 1. Geo. Wedge-shaped island-continent in the south of the FAR HEMISPHERE, notable for being the only island-continent in ELYDEN and the only major landmass to solely occupy the SOUTHERN HEMISPHERE. The name is an imperial transliteration of the native word for the people first encountered by IMPERIAL explorers there in 1303 RM. URAL is a major deity.
 - 2. Ntn. Nation in the eponymous continent, first encountered by the imperial explorer VREGL in 1303 RM. The nation widely known abroad for its trench and near-surface tunnel system. Nothing is known of the great architectural feature's origins, though it was likely built for defence in an ancient war.

Many of its cities connect to these tunnels, though there are also hundreds of isolated tunnels that have since ben repurposed. Others are

- stumbled upon during mining or construction works, with others being used by cults, criminals, AL GHULS, DEGENERATES, or the destitute. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.
- BROSZAN: Dem. 'Broszi'. Settlement in the far north of SABIA, known for its METEORE mines. Local legends claim that the meteore was placed there by one of the FROSTBLOOD as a prize to those who would dedicate their lies to hard work and toil. (Pop. c. 4,000).
- BROT: Dem. 'Brori'. Settlement in the region of KATURUSH, in the west of THE SURRACH. It is known for its pomegranate groves (Pop. c. 8,000).
- BROTARUH: Dem. 'Brori'. City in the east of ELAT. Its main industry is the mining of tin. It originated as a watering hole, and later developed into a caravanserai from which emerged the first mines in c. 3621 RM (Pop. c. 40 000)
- BROTHA: Set. Coastal city in the east of the emirate of $\underline{\text{LIMOTH}}^{(2.)}$ in the c of Limoth^(1.). It forms a part of the main internal trade-route of the EMIRATES and serves as a link between the capital of the emirate of $\underline{\text{NIMALO}}^{(1.)}$ and the seat of power of the $\underline{\text{SUPREME LEADER}}$ in $\underline{\text{LIMOTHEA}}^{(2.)}$ (Pop. c. 32,000).
- BROTHYS: Geo. Arc. Cavern located in a rocky scarp the south of the NEHNAXIAN Desert that is noted for its early MORTAL architecture. The cavern was hewn by ancient mortals who possibly used it for religious or burial purposes. The walls of its inner-most sancta are covered in thousands of skulls belonging to various mortal peoples, indicating a cosmopolitan culture surrounding the cavern. Little is known of the culture responsible for the caves.
- BROTHERHOOD OF THE VIRTUOUS WARD: Int. Pol. Org.

 Venerable order of foundling knights active in ABATTUR, TISARA, MEHITIEL, and SEDALLIA, founded in secrecy in 2399 RM in the city of VEKHMORRH in Mehitiel. Very little is known of the orders' founding, for its brothers operated in the shadows over their first centuries, and were only discovered in c. 2500 RM, but they are thought to have been sworn to guard over a deep secret that none outside their ranks know of.

They are recruited from orphans across the aforementioned nations at a young age and indoctrinated into the ways of the order, which is areligious and not tied to any known government or organisation. Its leaders, if it even has any, are unknown and its members are incredibly protective of their ways, going out of their way to assassinate anyone they believe to be in possession of knowledge of their inner workings.

Some believe that the Brotherhood controls the Tisaran government and that its current ruler, * is a puppet to the organisation.

BROTHERS VENGEANT, the: Org. Splinter CHAPTER^(2.) of the WHITE LEAGUE funded by the disgraced DOYEN-KNIGHT ATURALAM in the ruins of KAND in the west of TARTAK, 2453 RM. The Brothers Vengeant dedicated their short lives to opposing the KORACHANI EMPIRE, though they had distanced themselves from the rest of the White League.

The Brothers Vengeant were dissolved by the White League in a massive siege in Kand in 3913 RM. A few scattered chapters remain, wandering the north of SAMMAEA as warriors-for-hire, but they are no longer as feared as they once were.

- BROTRIS: 1. Rvr. Wetlands in the prefecture of Brotris in the c of HOLOLACH^(1.), along the course of the river RUAVAR, 10-miles west of ILLCHRIS.
 - 2. Pol. One of eight prefectures in $\underline{HOLOLACH}^{(1,)}$, controlling the c south west of Hololach, controlling the plains of $\underline{EDUMMAR}$ and lands to the east. Its controlling city is $\underline{ILLCHRIS}$.
- 3. Rui. Ruined city in the c West of HOLOLACH(1.) and once centre of the eponymous prefecture. The city was flooded in c 3600 RM, which led to disease wiping out most of the population, which never recovered. Within a few decades, the population had largely moved to upstream to LILCHRIS, which later became the prefecture's major city, or downstream to TOLIRANEA. The city slowly dwindled over the next centuries and was officially abandoned by 3950 RM, though remains populated by brigands and bandits who prey on ferries moving trade goods downstream to Toliranea.

BROUVID SUTT II: m. (B. 3928 RM) Pol. Per. LORD OF THE CABINET of VALBAR^(2.), representing the state of OLBRI^(1.).

BROVAAS: Sec. Coastal settlement in the west of VAALK, overlooking the SEA OF FOR. Its main industry is cheesemaking, and it is known for its soft CHEESES that are made using sheep rennet and milk, and which are cured in shallow caves that maintain constant temperatures (Pop. c. 4,200).

BROWN SEA, the: Sea. Sea along the central western-coast of PELASGOS, known for its contamination; the result of foul effluvium from the many MANUFACTORIES in the area. The sea is notable for its thick colour, the oily sheen of its surface and its general lack of life and, where that life exists, the corruption it takes.

BROWN WATERS, the: Sca. Part of the BROWN SEA, off the south western coast of the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS. This area of the sea is singled out for its discolouration caused by chemical runoff from manufactories. However, as most heavy industries in the region have waned, the waters have started to return to normal, though the name remains.

BROX: Oth. Type of HALFBLOOD, usually with bird-like features or attributes. They are known for their blood fetishes. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

BRSEA: 1. Geo. Island in the south of the SEA OF MIROVEA, just off the north western coast of BROR^(1.). The islands' western coast borders the SEA OF RAETUMA, an ATRAMENTALLY-ACTIVE sea with thick lifeless waters that have left much of its lands wasted, their rocks brittle and unable to support life.

2. Set. Main city-nation on the western coast of the eponymous island. Its inhabitants have been collecting the dried tidal remains of the ATRAMENTALLY-ACTIVE sea since before the first imperial explorers encountered the region, where they distil them into a crude fuel that has sustained the city and allowed it to prosper. Its people follow an ancient philosophy the name of which translates as THE ONE SOUL (Pop. c. 105,000).

BRUADA: Sup. Dre. Set. Settlement in the north west of NASTAL⁽²⁾ in WESTERN SAMMAEA that is famed for its ephemeral nature and supranatural flux between two states due to being located within a powerful DREAMSCAPE that waxes and wanes irregularly.

Normally the settlement is little different to any other of the region, with its people going about their business normally. However, the dreamscape that surrounds the settlement waxes and wanes in power in an uneven cycle that has thus far proved difficult to anticipate. When the influence of the dreamscape reaches a crux (perhaps once every 2 – 3 years, though shorter and longer intervals have been recorded), the settlement undergoes a drastic change, with its structures growing decrepit and corrupted, and the attitudes of those living within also changing, becoming less constrained by societal norms and laws. NIGHTMARE CREATURES spawned by the dreamscape prey on the MORTALS caught outside during this time of change, posing a very real and clear danger to society. These periods can last between hours and a few days and have been devastating in the past.

Like other dreamscapes, Bruada is believed to be linked to the DREAMS of a powerful being – possibly a SCION or DEMIURGE or some hitherto unknown being – whose sleep-cycle causes changes in the dreamscape, which spill over onto the MATERIAL PLANE and the settlement itself.

The people of Bruada continue to live there despite the danger due to the wealth they have accrued from mining DREAMSTONES, which are thought to have been created from the presence of the nearby dreamscape. To protect themselves, the people of Bruada have implemented a series of hand-cranked sirens that are operated by spotters drafted from citizens who work shifts looking out for signs of imminent changes from high towers. The siren call alerts all people who, by law, must drop what they are doing to seek shelter to protect themselves from the changes wrought by the dreamscape (Pop. c. 4,800).

BRUAN: Lake in the c west of AHKA, forming part of the course of the river GORIA.

BRUD: Rvr. River in the west of THE SURRACH flowing for 1,070-miles from sources in the STRAMINEA Mountains and emptying into the tainted waters of the NAMEGHA Mountains in the BAY OF BHAAD.

BRUI: (D. 1021 RM) Pol. Elected emperor of the KATOBRAGHAN REPUBLIC who refused to hand over powers back to the Republic at the end of his term, remaining emperor until his death in 1021 RM. His son Borui followed his father, beginning the Katobraghan monarchy, which remained until its ousting in c. 1320 RM, following a military coup.

BRUKKAR: Dei. Rel. God worshipped by the MULLS of the MULL CITY-STATES, in the c south of LLACHATUL. It is thought to be a corrupted form of the SCION BUKAVAH. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

BRUKKARISM: Rel. Religion of the MULL CITY-STATES, in which the god BRUKKAR is worshipped. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

BRUS: Rui. Abandoned iron mine in the south west of PELASGOS.

BRYNDUOR: Set. City in the c south west of KOMMEA (Pop. c. 31,600).

BRYNFAEL: Set. City in the c south west of KOMMEA. The fields just south of the city were the site of a great pitched battle, known as the BATTLE OF BRYNFAEL, where the warlord TORRVAN defeated the forces of CARADRON II in his conquest of LOEGRESS⁽¹⁾. Shifting borders since then saw Brynfael become a part of Kommea in c. 3920 RM (Pop. c. 45,000).

BRYNFAEL, BATTLE OF: His. War. Pitched battle that took place between invading forces from GLYNNED^(2.) and ENAELLON^(2.) defending against them, outside the city of BRYNFAEL in 2583 RM. It was a part of the conquest of unification led by the warlord TORRVAN, during which he made use of large units of well-trained arquebusiers that not only invalidated king CARADRON II'S mastodon shock troops, but decimated them, allowing Torrvan's knights and other mounted forces to gain the advantage, ending the battle.

Caradron II was killed during the battle, and his son, who was his second-in-command, was forced to swear fealty to Torrvan. Following this Enaellon was folded into the territories of Glynned, after which it was renamed LOEGRESS^(1.) in 2588 RM after the fabled land of Praettanian myths.

BUACHAN: Mil. Set. City in the far south west of KORACHAN. It is a military centre and base to a navy fleet and army transport ships, and is linked to the major fortress of AGOSTAN, 45-miles east. It is also a major stronghold of the KYONI ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION.

It is also home to the MINASTERIA^(2.) of PROVACTARIIN, an ill-regarded aspect of Korachani SHAPING that forcibly recruits SHAPERS who failed their studies in other Minasteria and brainwashes them into being suicidal shock troops for the Korachani military. Few people in Buachan know the full story of the Minasteria they host in their city (Pop. c. 42,000).

BUAPHOS: Law. Set. Small fortified coastal city in the west of SKAROS. It is home to a large prison that is carved into the hard rock of the peninsula it is built on (Pop. c. 1,200).

BUARA VIGRA: Set. Major city in the c-south east of CHEIRA (Pop. c. 110,000).

BUARKHA: Rui. Mil. Str. Ruined fortress in the east of NOAVATUR, dating back some 3,000-years to the time of the KORACHANI conquest of the region. It is abandoned and largely forgotten today.

BUARSA: Set. Small city in the region of HANNASTRA in the c east of THE SURRACH (Pop. c. 18,000).

BUCCELARIA: Set. Small fortified city in the north of the UMBRA SOKHRA. It maintains a tentative trade-route with the south of KARAKHAS. It dates back to around 1100 RM, and was once a major caravanserai along the NOAVATURI TRAIL (Pop. c. 18,000).

BUCESAAN: also 'Fane of Bucesaan'. Rel. Str. Ancient temple in the far south west of KEPHUAAN. It is famed for its large dome, which now lies ruined and abandoned, reclaimed by nature. Little is known of its roots, and opinion is divided as to whether it dates to the time of the FIFTH AGE AMMASHI^(3,) empire or an earlier culture.

BUDATTI: Rvr. River in the south west of the territories of ETHISTONITH in RHINOCOLOURA, flowing north west for 200-miles from sources in the SARASAN Mountains.

BUESRA: For. Boreal forest straddling the border between the south east of DURCHAA^(1,), the north of the DESOLATION OF ASTUDAN, and the north west of SABIA.

BUHUR: Set. Settlement in the north west of TEMUJA (Pop. c. 75,500). BUHUR: Pol. Rnk. Title amongst hereditary caste-leaders of the AANTH in N'RAKH. BUILL: Lake in the south west of LOEGRESS⁽¹⁾, serving as a partial border with the far north east of TETHYSIA. It is the main source of the river TUARVEN.

BUKAVAH: m. Myt. His. Per. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, a long-deceased SCION of the DEMIURGE SYNCHTHONITH. He is worshipped in a corrupted from by the MULLS of the MULL CITY-STATES, where he is known by the name BRUKKAR. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

BUKHARA: Set. Major city in the north west of SUOR, along the course of the river ISH RATA. It is a centre of trade west with the SOLEYN TERRITORIES (Pop. c. 42,500).

BULLAHRA: Set. Settlement in the region of $\underline{\text{TXEDEK}}$ in the far east of $\underline{\text{THE SURRACH}}$ (Pop. c. 83,000).

BULLATA: also 'the Blistered Desert'. Geo. Desert in the north east of ANUBIA, to the west of the AHSET Mountains known for its spherical dark rocks that protrude from the sands, giving rise to the name Blistered Desert. The region is known to be ATRAMENTALLY-ACTIVE and VENATHI legend claimed it to be a window into the underworld.

Until 2821 RM the region was kept under control by SIPHON ENGINES constructed and maintained by the city of $\underline{\text{URUM}}$, though an unfortunate accident left the city and most of the siphon engines destroyed, allowing the $\underline{\text{ATRAMENTA}}$ to reclaim Bullata.

Now hundreds of decrepit siphon engines dot the area, the ruins of settlements and processing plants surrounding them.

The region is categorised as $\underline{\text{HIGHLY DANGEROUS}}$ by the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI}}$ $\underline{\text{INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES}}$.

BULOPARRI: Geo. Massif in the c of PELASGOS, nestled between the larger CALDERA and BATHAKOL Mountains.

BULOS: Geo. Highland region in the c of PELASGOS, and natural continuation of the BULOPARRI MASSIF, extending to its east for some 110-miles.

BULUM: Set. Settlement in the c south of the SULTANATE OF
ABACARDAT. Its main industry is arable farming, and it is known for its carob groves, from which syrup and pulp that are used in cooking are produced (Pop. c. 5,000).

BUNBUYUNON: Set. Settlement in the north of KREM, just south of the OSAWEL arm of the ARGENT Mountains (Pop. c. 4,000).

BUNDA: Set. Settlement in the north east of AQUARIIA, along the course of the river BOS (Pop. c. 8,000).

BUNDI STAFF: Soc. Sup. Common accourtement of the SHAMANISTIC
SPHERE in the RADNOR region of AETHIOS, said to complement the shaman's abilities, like a FOCUS.

BUPHAGA: Set. Settlement in the west of LYRIDIA. Its primary industry is cattle rearing (Pop. c. 7,800).

BURAK: Rvr. River in the west of KORACHAN, flowing beneath the city of KHADON. The river once flowed west besides the city, though over the years construction and regrading of streets have resulted in most of the river being built over, and it now flows within vaulted cisterns beneath the city, now serving as part of its sewers.

BURASAFTA: Set. Settlement in the east of AETHIOS, to the south of the region of ACTANORS. It is known for its large cattle ranches (Pop. c. 8,000).

BURASSIA: Set. Small city in the north of ALTHA. It was once coastal, though the diminishing of THE INNER SEA left it landlocked by c. 2,000 RM. It has since become a major producer of honeycomb (Pop. c. 96,000).

BURDALANE HALL: Arc. Vestibule in the SEPULCHRAL PALACE in DAEKYN.

BUREBISTA: (B. 3953 RM) Mil. Pol. General and present ruler of DACIA.

BURENIANA: Set. City in the east of NOAVATUR that is controlled by its five largest guilds – the tanners, artisans, merchants, technologists, and agriculturalists (Pop. c. 40,000).

BUREN: Set. Settlement in the west of TAMAR, along the course of the river KORNA (Pop. c. 17,500).

BURKAN: Geo. Mountain-range in the north east of LIDEA. The region of AMANTHEA to its north west is said to be the origin of the Amantheans. BURKANNA: Set. City in the c east of KHURAUR. It is famed across THE INNER SEA for its FREESTONE mines and the industry that revolves around their finishing and exporting. It forms a part of the SALT ROAD and freestone ornaments and statues made there find their way across ELYDEN as a result (Pop. c. 328,000).

BURKHAN: Mil. Str. Fortress in the c west of KORACHAN, around 40-miles south west of the city of KHADON. It guards the trade-route south west to the city of KORACHAN.

BURLAK: Lan. Imperial slang for MANUFACTORY labourers with little or no skill.

BURNET DOLLS: Leg. Soc. Obj. Rustic dolls common in the east of ALMAGEST and SKAROS, the north of AZAZEM, and BASSORAH^(2.). as well as in IPANAH^(2.). They are made from twigs and mud and are fashioned in the vague form of a humanoid, often with offal hidden in their centre. The dolls were traditionally left as 'offerings' to the FAE beings and woodland spirits that dwell in the wooded regions to the east and north of the above areas, around the peripheries of the OLD FOREST, in the hope of satiating their appetites for mischief.

The practice is less common today than it once was, and has fallen into obscurity in most regions, though the more rural and isolated settlements that are closest to wooded lands, particularly along the FAEROAD, still practice the activity, though in most cases the dolls now remain as simple dolls, with their original purpose (and their offal centre) now forgotten. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

BURNING HEART, the: Rel. Religion practiced across various nations in BROR (1.), including GHROND, KRENN, and the south of KASIHAAL. The Burning Heart in the religions' name is a reference to the mummified heart of the OTHERWORLDER ZHAKELHAAB, which it sought out upon its rebirth in 2384 RM. Both the heart and its chest burst into flames as soon as the otherworlder picked it up, causing the HUMANS that looked upon it to cower in reverence and awe. Those humans became the otherworlders' first apostles, who spread word of religion across eastern Bror. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

BURNING SHADOW, the: Rel. Org. Sect of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE that rose around 4000 RM, centred in NÁRTHEL though also found in southern PELASGOS and parts of SARASTRO. The sect largely eschewed technarcane teachings in preference of pure ATRAMENTAL asceticism and more classical SHAPING.

BURNING SHADOW, CATHEDRAL OF THE: Rel. Arc. Cathedral and head of the sect of the BURNING SHADOW in the south of NÁRTHEL. It was constructed in 3725 RM, where it was intended to be a point of pilgrimage for worshippers of the Burning Shadow, though within a few decades a thriving community named UMBAR (a corruption of the IMPERIAL word for shadow) had grown around it, making it one of the largest settlements in NÁRTHEL. The church was consecrated in the name of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, and the followers of the Burning Shadow were expelled from the region.

BURRAK: Ind. Set. Small city in the east of SERROK, in the BEREPHASS rainforest. Its main industry is logging.

BUSEN: Mil. Str. Fort in the north of SAUA.

BUSH KNIGHT: See BRIAR KNIGHT.

BUSHDEAR: Set. City in the far north west of GIBEAH, at the mouth of the river KHEBOU. The city was once home to a large naval base, but the growth of the delta as the sea levels retreated led to its abandonment in c. 3820 RM (Pop. c. 40,000).

BUSINESS CHITS: Bus. Obj. Ind. Many self-employed FREEMEN and businesses make use of thin stamped tin discs, known as chits or cards, that they hand out to patrons or prospective customers. This includes an address and contact information for future reference, and also serve as free advertising. Each chit is usually only a few inches, and the writing is embossed on it. Many foundries in larger cities across ELYDEN exist solely to manufacture these tin discs in large numbers.

BUSTAN: Set. Settlement in the south west of AHKA, overlooking the pass south into the MULL CITY-STATES. It has a large MULL population and is known for its large open-caste iron-mines that are worked by slaves. It forms a part of the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 35,000).

- BUSTRA: His. Soc. One of many early FIFTH AGE cultures that emerged in the south of the PORPHYRI PENINSULA, in what are now the east of Ananthul and the west of Sabaisa, between c. -1000 100 RM. See Vol III: Extinct States.
- BUTA: R_{VT} . Small river in the north of PARAIYA, flowing north into its parent, the river SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾.
- BUTAR: Pol. Geo. Region in the c north of SARASTRO, comprising the central part of the DELOMIG plains. The region is known for its government-operated diamond mines and was a source of wealth to Sarastro for many years, though most of its mines had been abandoned by c. 3200 RM, their treasures fully-exploited.
- BUTEN: Set. Small fortified city in the far east of VIRAHAN, close to the border with BAATAN⁽¹⁾. It lies along the course of the GREAT ROAD, and is noted for the many merchant caravans that pass through its large gates (Pop. c. 16,000).
- BUTHARIS: also 'the City of a Thousand Names'. Set. City in the c of PARTHIS, with an ancient history. It is commonly known as Bukarish, Butarrhid, Turashik, Bhut Harria, and Bukharan within the KORACHANI EMPIRE, amongst many others. Today it is home to the REPUBLIC COLLEGE AND HOSPITAL OF PLASTIC SURGERY (Pop. c. 32,500).
- BUTIR: Set. Coastal settlement in the far south east of the region of KHURTAE in the OKKHAMI PENINSULA in the eponymous nation. It is known for its fishing (Pop. c. 7,000).
- BUTO: Pol. Set. Capital city of SURTUR, overlooking the SEA OF CHALDEA. The city is dominated by a large violet crystalline monument, whose origins and materials are unknown (Pop. c. 674,000).
- $\underline{BUTON}\!:$ Geo. Cave network in the southern-face of the \underline{RATAH} hills in the ESHAMIL Mountains in HOLOLACH $^{(1.)}\!.$
- BUTTRESS TREE: Flo. Tree with large buttress-like root structure, similar to the NEAGARI^(2.). See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.
- BUVITA: Set. Fortified city in the c south west of the tribe of ESSERIS in the c-south east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 25.000).
- BUYANA: Set. Small city in the north of KOLCHIS, in the region of SHUK RAZHA. Its main industry is the processing of raw meteore which is mined in the surrounding region. The city is located in the geothermal area of NOLKOSH, and as a result its climate is far warmer than would otherwise be the case, though it is still a frigid land, with well over a month of darkness in winter (Pop. c. 16,200).
- $\underline{BVAGHAR} : \textit{Set.} \ Settlement in the c of the $\underline{MULL\ CITY\text{-STATES}}$, known for its limestone quarries (Pop. c. 7,300).$
- BYLETH: 1. Rvr. Wetlands in the c of GNOTH, forming the south eastern shore of lake ALOGIA. It was once home to various settlements and workshops that were devoted to the study of ALCHEMY, many of which are now ruined.
 - 2. Alc. Mys. Tec. AlcHemical Atelier in the c of GNOTH in the above region. It was once a major centre of alchemical research, though was abandoned after it began sinking into the surrounding wetlands.

- BYRIS: 1. Sca. Coastal sea off the north western coast of LLACHATUL. The region known as THE VORANDINE overlooks the Sca. The sea is somewhat deep, which was left the coastline altered little in the wake of ELYDEN'S diminishing seas. It is very fertile and is famed for its EVOLAM kelp, which is extremely important in many ATRAMENTALLY-BASED procedures, including CLONING and FLESHWRIGHTING.
- Geo. Rocky rugged peninsula in far west of LLACHATUL, south of the sea of the same name, inhabited by a tribal culture known as the ANAGARI.
- BYSAGHIKON: Set. Small city in the c south west of NOAVATUR. It was founded by an exiled poet and its main industry is now logging (Pop. c. 12,000).
- BYSAMMA: Sea. Bay and south eastern-most part of the SEA OF BYSSOS.

 Despite its relatively narrow span it is relatively deep, like its parent Sea.
- BYSSAN GYRE: Sea. Sea gyre dominating the c of the SEA OF BYSSOS, in the north west of the INNER SEA. The gyre is partially responsible for the powerful winter surges and storms that wrack the northern coast of the ANDILUTHAN plains.
- BYSSIAN STATES, the: Lan. Ntn. Common name for a series of states that dominate the south western shores of the SEA OF BYSSOS, including ANDILUTH, KHALHAT, MOAH, and TRAKIA. Though the regions' histories are linked, there is little reason for this naming convention other than their respective locations and relatively small sizes.
- BYSSINA: For. Damp forest south of the CARCAENT Mountains in MALAN, across the north east of STHAMAN and the south of AMILLAERE. The forest is noted for its many hanging mosses and air roots that thrive in the damp air.
- BYSSOS: Sea. Large inland sea over 550,000-square-miles in area, dividing TARTAK from TRAKIA. The sea is accessible only from the 5-mile-wide STRAIT OF GATH, which leads into the SEA OF TARAMAR (itself forming a part of the far larger INNER SEA).

The sea is very deep for its size and has become increasingly salty over the years, due to the narrowing of the Strait of Gath, which will likely close off entirely in the future unless a remedy is engineered.

BYSTRA: Rvr. Major river and tributary of the river SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾, with its source in the tribal territories of CHRIL in the c of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. It passes through the territories of ATEVEGOS and ILLPHAGOS, before crossing the border west into RHINOCOLOURA, before meeting its parent, the river DAKHAN.

BYTHA: Mil. Str. Fortress in the c west of RHAMIA.

- BYTRA: 1. Sea. Bay in the far east of the STRAIT OF NÁRTHEL.
- Set. Coastal city in the far south west of LYRIDIA, in the far east of the present-day STRAIT OF NÁRTHEL. The city appeared in c. 3900 RM, taking advantage of the silting and final closure of the Strait of Nárthel in 3757 RM.

The city, and its twin ALYCTA in the south east of Lyridia, are the nations' main harbour and source of trade and form an important route along the RED ROUTE and it has grown incredibly fast since its founding. To maintain order the city employs a brutal method of EXECUTION, in which it exsanguinates those sentenced to death (Pop. c. 1,035,500).

C'KHAMAR: Lak. Large lake in the south of N'RAKH, bordering AETHIOS along the course of the river SHIBBOLETH^(3.).

CAALEA: Geo. Mountain in the c west of LAASKHA, and source of the river ASHARPAR to the north and SAMAPAR in the south. It is a relatively young formation, composed largely of limestone formations that have been carved by wind and water over time.

CAALUA: 1. Geo. Small mountain in the c west of LAASKHA, forming an eastern extension of the CAALEA Mountain Its foothills are known for their fine limestone, which has been carved through water erosion into interesting formations. Where the terrain levels off in the south, the limestone is mined in some quantity.

2. (10,240-ft.) Geo. Highest peak of the eponymous mountain range.

CAAME: Set. Settlement in the c north of LAASKHA, lying along both the course of the SHADOW MARCH and the RED ROUTE. Its main industry is agriculture, and it provides food to merchants and PETITIONERS OF THE MACHINE (Pop. c. 11,200).

CABAHA: Set. Small city in the c north of the BARRIER LANDS, noted for the beautiful natural stone arches and badlands that surround it. The city itself is built into the side of an escarpment, with citadels and minarets protruding from the spine of the escarpment (Pop. c. 17,000).

CABAL, the: Pol. Org. The government of the nation of HANNAH, based in the city of KORINT. It is a theocracy and rules as a council.

CABAS KASSAR: Set. City in the c south west of PORPHYR, along the main trade-route crossing the nation. It is a major recruiting city for the nation's military (Pop. c. 50,000).

CABBAIA: Pol. Set. Capital city of ABRAXA^(2.), located roughly in the centre of the nation. It is built around and atop the remnants of an ancient monolithic stone structure, which in many places now serves as the foundations of extant structures (Pop. c. 110,000).

CABIENA: Geo. Rugged highlands that serve as a border between the north east of ABATTUR and the west of MEHITIEL. It is of undulating form, with jagged peaks and spines of grey stone that grow increasingly jagged as the terrain slopes down to the east.

It is known for the many ancient rock-cut catacombs in it western reaches, which are believed to belong to an early FOURTH AGE non-human MORTAL culture.

CABINET, the: Pol. Org. The government of VALBAR^(2,) since 3943 RM, following the earlier dissolution of the previous government, known as the PLUTOCRATIC CABINET, after years of unease caused by ecological disaster following the massed eruptions of the geothermal vents of ESZALA years earlier.

It is made up of a coalition of five states that together bear the name of Valbar. The government is ruled by six cabinet members, known as the LORDS AND LADIES OF THE CABINET — one representative from each of the five states, and a sixth honorary representative from ALMAGEST, in honour of the close links the two states share, who serves as chairperson. To deter favouritism and corruption the capital is moved to a different city across the five states every seven years, during the same elections that determine the new Cabinet members. Those eligible to vote are lawmakers, industrialists, religious leaders, merchants, and important freemen from each of the five states.

CABOTESIA: Com. Set. Major trade city in the north west of SABAISA. The city originated around 1500 RM as a simple caravanserai serving trade linked PORPHYR and ANANTHUL with Sabaisa. It is known for its deep wells and semi-subterranean settlements, and most structures are built around a central courtyard. Even its vaulted markets are underground, to keep the air as cool as possible. Today it is a bustling city that forms the centre of a thriving trade-route that links the three nations. It is operated by the SULTANATE and is well-funded and protected (Pop. c. 130,000).

CABIA: His. Arc. Ancient monument in the c north of GNOTH, along the spine of the SOLUN HIGHLANDS.

CACEPHA: 1. Rvr. Shallow marshlands dominating the east of CHEIRA, where various rivers flowing south from the Zoiquago Mountains collect before flowing west and then east before emptying into the SEA OF MOSASA. Cacepha is covered in a thick fog that hugs the bases of the cypresses that are common in the region. The place is dark, and desolate and little in the form of civilisation can be found there, save a few small familiar tribes living in the branches of the great trees, or solitary occultists.

2. Rvr. River in the east of CHEIRA, fed by smaller tributaries with sources in the ZOIQUAGO Mountains. It flows for 430-miles to the coast, at the SEA OF MOSASA.

CACHARIA: Set. Eastern-most of the TETRARCHY cities in JURRAS⁽²⁾, situated along the course of the river EURRTOS. The region is rife with FIRMAMENTAL storms, which tear at the cliffs of the SYNHODOS. As a result, its walls are incredibly thick and it maintains a cadre of well-trained registered FIRMAMENTISTS who control the storms (Pop. c. 80,000).

CACOETH: Dru. Stimulant drug produced in small quantities in BANT from herbs cultivated in the corrupted lands of CACOETHEA. The region is waterlogged and has taken on the amnesic traits of the SEA OF LETHEA, resulting in feelings of rage and mania in those who eat flora or fauna from the region. A particular herb, similar to a HORSETAIL, is famed for the extreme effects it induces in those who consume it, and it is cultivated and dried into a drug that is sold across ELYDEN. Its main use is as a stimulant in battle, though it has other use, including in sports. See Vol II: Drugs and Addictions.

CACOETHEA: Rvr. Geo. Waterlogged coastal plains dominating the c coast of BANT, in the east of SAMMAEA, overlooking the SEA OF LETHEA. Its soft earth is ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED and infused with the amnesic traits of the waters of Lethea, making it inhospitable to mortals – mortals who consume flora and fauna from the region are gripped by a terrible mania. Some settlements on the peripheries of the plains cultivate herbs that are known to amplify these effects, and sell them as drugs.

Traditionally, Bantish warriors from this region could consume these herbs before charging into battle.

It is thought that the qualities inherent in its soils are a result of the UPHEAVAL OF LETHEA, which saw a massive tsunami move north east across the Sea of Lethea in 1303 RM. This tsunami found a bottle-neck in the north west of Lethea, and when it struck the south western shore of what was then the nation of CARCHEMISH⁽³⁾ it travelled miles inland, saturating the earth, leaving the entire region uninhabited to this day.

The region is categorised as $\underline{\text{LEAST CONCERN}}$ by the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI}}$ $\underline{\text{INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES}}.$

CACOFA: Rui. Mil. Str. Fortified pit in the south west of FRET⁽²⁾ in the north west of SAMMAEA. The fort is ancient and crumbling, with little left of substance. It is thought to guard the maw-like pit within it, which is said to lead into a solitary cavern of CARCERI. Others say that it was built to stop whatever was within the pit from getting out. Though not ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED, the region is shunned by most and those who venture close to it are said to get a great sense of unease.

CACOSADIA: Rel. Str. Hermitage in the c south of CISNERIA, located in the steep hills of the eastern BLACK MOUNTAINS. It is populated by a caste of monks who observe THEREON as singular deity, eschewing the seven aspects made popular by Cisnerian culture, returning instead to worship of a more primal being. Blood sacrifice and ritual cannibalism are common amongst these monks, who choose their sacrifices from nearby settlements. Such offerings are made seasonally during rituals of great religious significance.

The hermitage itself is fortified and its monks are well-regarded by the people of Cisneria as a link to their more primal past.

CADARIEL: Rvr. River in the c of GNOTH, flowing south west for 700-miles from sources in the SOLUN and SARKID Highlands.

CADDA: Set. Fortified settlement in the region of SURDA in the c east of THE SURRACH. It is a major place of learning for ATRAMENTISTS (Pop. c. 9,000).

CADDIS: Set. City outside GÂTHA in the south east of the DESOLATION
OF ASTUDAN. The city is located around 10-miles to the north west of the city of Gâtha, and its purpose is largely the manufacture of food for the larger city (Pop. c. 10,000).

CADERE: Sct. Metropolis-state in the far west of SAMMAEA, south of the SEA OF LYNNAE, overlooking the shallows of YMEA. The place was, even in the years before the decline of the natural realm, populated by a mongrel race descended from the interbreeding of HUMANS, KERATIN and PLAGI.

They are strong of body and unlike any other found elsewhere, considered by many to be paragons of the mortal condition. They are possessed of an androgynous beauty, their grey-white skin polished and without blemish, their eyes said to be without emotion, yet capable of drawing despair and sorrow out of those they look upon. But for all their physical mystery, it is their alien conscience that most characterises them amongst foreigners; for they are a sadistic people who delight in psychological torture and the belittling of other mortals, who they consider beneath them and hunt on a regular basis. They despise OTHERWORLDERS as aberrations and mistakes of the natural world and go out of their way to kill them, sometime journeying thousands of miles east of their home in search of a quarry, when captured, the otherworlders are taken to the arenas of their home, where they are publicly tortured and humiliated in increasingly decadent ways. Halfbloods are pitied for the sullying of their otherwise pure mortal blood, though otherwise receive treatment no different to others.

The city's natives are vastly outnumbered by slaves of every description and enjoy lives of hedonistic luxury, worshipping VOLUPIS in depraved public rituals. The city itself is, despite its depraved character, lavishly decorated and strictly partitioned with a myriad of overlapping districts based on station and wealth. Movement between wards is restricted, as is entry to non-natives. Few outsiders have visited the city as a result of this (Pop. unknown, believed to be upwards of 500,000).

CADI: Set. Major city in the north of the HENDECARCHY of STHAMAN in the c of MALAN. It is an integral part of the Malani trade route known as the AEGISWAY, and has many warehouse and inns where travellers can rest. It was once a centre of FIRMAMENTISM, though this slowly died out following the fall of LARAM^(I.) and the region's integration with the new Malani FOREST KINGDOMS after 2075 RM (Pop. c. 40,000).

CADMIA: Set. Small city in the c of GNOTH, along the course of the river NEPHOT (Pop. c. 13,800).

CADRIANT: 1. Geo. Pass in the north of THE SURRACH, crossing the NGHALLEAL Mountains.

Mil. Str. Major fort in the north of THE SURRACH, close to the border with CYHLAGHARR.

CADUCA: Set. City in the c of THE SURRACH. It is a major manufacturer of medicines in the Surrach, some of which are ATRAMENTAL in origin (Pop. c. 45,000).

CAE VEDTI: (C. 1687 RM) Art. KORACHANI composer famed for his DIRGE OF THE MARTYRS in D Minor. It was his last completed work before his death in 1687 RM.

CAE VERTHI: Mil. Str. Fortress in the west of the UMBRA SOKHAR. It once guarded trade caravans travelling between the KORACHANI EMPIRE and NOAVATUR. Though the route dwindled, the fort remained in use, patrolling the Umbra Sokhar, protecting it from bandits and other threats, preventing them from moving farther north.

CAEDRA: Set. Small fortified coastal city in the north west of OD MEGINNAS^(1.). Its main industry is fishing (Pop. c. 16,800).

CAEL: Set. Settlement in the far west of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of SYRTIS^(1.), overlooking lake ERDEN. Its main industry is fresh-water fishing, and salmon roe is a local delicacy, which is sold at great profit to merchants passing by during their circuit of the GREAT ROAD (Pop. c. 5.000).

CAELL EN WAYR: also 'Temple of the Throne'. Rel. Str. Temple in the north east of LOEGRESS^(1.), in the westernmost foothills of the HOLLOW COASTLINE Highlands. It was constructed on the site where the AETHERIAL THRONE was unearthed, to commemorate the discovery. An order of templars, known as the WAYR MORR, was founded in 3203 RM to guard the temple.

CAELMONT: Soc. Pol. Parthisan Patrician House that in c. 3480 RM colonised the island of Jiridun (now Od Meginnas⁽¹⁾) alongside Houses of Selvarshi, Taelis, Tendari, and Valtaris. Together, those Houses formed trade arrangements with the local government of Jiridun, marrying into each other and with local nobles to secure power. This allowed the Houses to settle the land, taking over overlooked industries that were of importance to Parthis.

In 3597 RM House Valtaris orchestrated a ruthless culling of its household, including House Caelmont, where many ancillary parts of the House were either sent to Parthis or other far-flung corners of Elyden, effectively castrating them of power and denying the House the privilege of inheriting any of the holdings of the family. This was a damning act that earned the PATERFAMILIA of House Valtaris the enmity of House Caelmont and the other Houses, and it is thought that he was responsible for many mysterious deaths and disappearances, but it ultimately paid off and by 3630 RM the family tree had been sheared down to size, consolidating the power amongst a handful of individuals, and ultimately serving a death knell to the House Caelmont and the other Houses with which it had once been allied. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

CAER DURN: Set. Small coastal fortified city in the far north of LOEGRESS^(1.), on the island of VELDAR. It is built around a 2,000-year old fortress that was once located on a small rocky island. Waning sea levels in the ensuing years saw the rock expand to the island of Veldar (Pop. c. 15,000).

 $\underline{\text{CAER LANAZ}}$: Rui. Ruined castle on the island of $\underline{\text{BRES}}$ in the north of $\underline{\text{LOEGRESS}}^{(1)}$.

CAER SIDI: 1. Myt. Pol. Set. Major city and capital of LOEGRESS^(1.) since 2612 RM, when the warlord TORRVAN united three disparate territories under his banner following close to two decades of war.

It grew naturally following the coronation of Torrvan, emerging from the pre-existing castle^(2.) that dates back to the FOURTH AGE. The city grew organically over the next centuries to cover most of the steep hill leading up to the eponymous castle, and today many structures hang precariously to the edge of the cliffs overlooking the BAY OF SIDI.

Many of the myths and legends that surround castle Caer Sidi have become corrupted over time and are now also associated with the city itself, despite it postdating the construction of the castle by at least 6-millennia.

With the rebirth of the OTHERWORLDER TAELLANNIR in 3139 RM the city became a more spiritual place, with large temples and open-roofed forums built with lines of sight to the pinnacle of the castle and the AETHERIAL THRONE beneath it, where people could congregate and practice rhetoric and revere their living deity (Pop. c. 231,000).

2. Mil. Pol. Str. More specifically, the FOURTH AGE castle around which the aforementioned city⁽¹⁾ later emerged. The castle was once a formidable sight, with three keeps nestled behind concentric thick high walls that made it impregnable to land attack. It stood on a mighty promontory overlooking the BAY OF SIDI, which takes its name from the castle itself.

By the FIFTH AGE the castle had already deteriorated following millennia of neglect, but it was appropriated by the GALABRIAN culture, and was used as a stronghold for centuries, becoming the centre of rule for its monarchs until the collapse of their kingdom in c. 250 RM. The castle was abandoned after this and soon fell into ruin once more, the more recent restoration and additions being of inferior quality and deteriorating more rapidly.

It was periodically inhabited by generals and would-be kings, including the tyrants of MOTTANIA⁽²⁾, between c. 1200 and c. 2588 RM, though they cared little for its upkeep and entire annexes of the structure were allowed to crumble throughout their tenure.

It was BESIEGED by the warlord TORRVAN in 2586 RM, following his conquest of neighbouring lands, and it was taken after two years of desperate fighting – the final territory to fall to Torrvan, signifying the success of near two-decades-long campaign. Torrvan set about restoring the castle, and held his coronation there in 2612 RM, after which it became the seat of power to the monarchy and, later, THE TAELLANNIR, whose AETHERIAL THRONE was moved there. A city rapidly appeared around the castle, growing into a large capital.

The castle is shrouded in legend, and is believed by many to have been purposely built atop an OVERLAY with the OTHERWORLD, where ancient SHAPERS and ANIMISTS could practice their art in halls deep beneath the castle. Some say that the overlay was more than just that, and that the castle was built to guard a gateway to realms beyond MORTAL PLANE.

CAER SIDI, SIEGE OF: His. War. Siege of castle CAER SIDI^(2.) in MOTTANIA^(2.) that took place between 2586 and 2588 RM. It served as the culmination of the war of conquest undertaken by warlord TORRVAN of GLYNNED^(2.), which had led to his prior securing of Glynned and ENAELLON^(2.).

The siege lasted for two years and ended with victory for the attacking forces, after which king FAEGRIN of Mottania was captured and imprisoned.

CAELMOR: Set. Small city in the north of LOEGRESS⁽¹⁾, along the course of the river NYNWAR. It is famed as the birthplace of TORRVAN, the first king of Loegress, and exact location of his birth – now little more than a hillock – is remembered as a national shrine (Pop. c. 17,600).

CAERAN III: (B. 3893 – D. 3975 RM) Pol. King of CARIA⁽⁴⁾, and the High-king of THE HARÉSHKI CITY KINGDOMS until his death in 3975 RM, after which his son, CAERAN IV was crowned High-king.

CAERAN IV, HIGH-KING OF CARIA: (B. 3951) Pol. King of CARIA^(4.), and the HIGH-KING of THE HARÉSHKI CITY KINGDOMS, of the house of SINISED. He became king in 3975 RM.

CAEROS: Mil. Str. A solitary coastal citadel in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of CARIA⁽⁴⁾, overseeing the GREAT ROAD and overlooking the MALAIKA, across from the mouth of the river SARA (Pop. c. 2,800).

CAESEPILIA: Set. Major mercantile city in the far south of CHAUTULA. It Is an important stop along the VAEVECTAN TRAIL (Pop. c. 231,000).

CAESURA: 1. Geo. Region in the c of THE SURRACH, east of the GHUZZ Mountains.

2. Set. Main city of the eponymous region in the c of THE SURRACH, it is located at the edge of a 15-ft high cliff, which in antiquity served to defend the city from attack (Pop. c. 42,000).

CAETHAZ: For. Forested area in MECHABET to the north west of PARTHIS, covering some 30,000 square-miles, the southern part of which is noted for its varied flora and fauna, which are often tainted by the SHADOWISPS that travel on the air in this region.

CAFFER: Set. Settlement in the north of SAGITTARIA, known for its salt gatherers. It lies along the course of the IVORY ROAD, close to its northern-most termination in CAMACA (Pop. c. 5,000).

CAGAMOSIA: Set. Fortified city in the north west of SABAISA, close to the border with the south east of PORPHYR, and it is a centre of trade with its neighbour (Pop. c. 50,000).

CAGASTRIA: Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTAL WASTES in the south west of THE SURRACH, in the region of THAMAAZ, north of the STRAMINEA Mountains. It is a disease-ridden place said to fall under the sway of the moons' cycles. It has existed since recorded memory began and is one of the oldest Atramental regions in the Surrach, if not beyond. Little of it has been explored but it is not believed to contain any ruins or locations or interest. Its western-most reaches have been exploited by EPHREK, which has six satellite settlements, each of which extracts raw umbra for its use in research and industry.

The region is categorised as a MODERATE THREAT by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

CAGASTRIC FLU: Med. Common ATRAMENTAL AILMENT that is contracted in humid areas of ATRAMENTAL CORRUPTION, resulting in the coughing up of a thick black phlegm. If left untreated it can lead to a deterioration and eventual collapse of the lungs. Continued exposure to the corrupted region will exacerbate symptoms and speed up the progress of the ailment. Cagastric flu is believed to be contagious through the phlegm and spit, as well as airborne droplets. See Vol II: Diseases and Illnesses.

CAGE: Soc. Lan. In the urban slang of KORACHAN and specifically the CITY OF ALMAGEST, a term denoting cities or large buildings. It often refers to the prison-like nature many apply to such places.

CAGERUNNING: also 'driving'. Soc. Physical activity common to dense urban areas, particularly large sprawling cities, such as MAKHARA and ALMAGEST. In its most general form, the practice involves getting from place to place using the quickest most direct way, while also using as little energy as possible.

The activity originated in c. 3200 RM in the imperial city of KHADON, within courier circles as a means of delivering objects as quickly as possible, and is now common amongst pick-pockets and spies.

CAGHARTIATH: Myt. His. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, a scion of the DEMIURGE NYARLOTH, thought to be buried in the north east of SARASTRO. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

CAGORER: Set. Major city in the west of CHEIRA, and capital city of the fifth prefecture of Cheira (Pop. c. 50,000).

 $\underline{\textbf{CAHETAN}} : \textit{Set.} \ Major \ city \ in \ the \ c \ north \ west \ of \ \underline{PNESSA}, \ along \ the \ course \\ of \ the \ river \ \underline{BESYL} \ (Pop. \ c. \ 60,000).$

CAHIANA: Set. Fortified city in the north of RHAMIA (Pop. c. 61,000).

CAHOMM: Set. Settlement in the west of ELEKHID, on the eastern bank of lake CIHURR (Pop. unknown).

CAIA: Soc. Noble house that emerged in the south of present-day PNESSA in c. 2860 RM. It rose in influence between c. 2905 – 2950 RM, becoming a ruling power by the end of that period, replacing the old order and establishing what became known as the early modern Age of Pnessian history as it dominated over the region.

House NEANDER, a ruling family whose members were exiled from RHINOCOLOURA and some of which settled the north of Pnessa in c. 3470 RM. Their descendants would\go on to challenge House Caia, with their efforts culminating in 3493 RM, with the relatively bloodless coup of the northern-most of Pnessian cities, where the HMMEN REGIME is established. Members of the House of Caia in the north were killed, their heads sent south. Pnessa was essentially sundered in two, with the north becoming known as the NEANDERINE CITIES. This severely weakened the rule of House Caia, though the two regions continued to live on together

CHEIRAN missionaries entering Pnessa between c. 3650-3700 RM brought with them word of the CHURCH OF THE PROPHET OF THE EMPYREAN, which slowly gained roots there and spread due to its popularity with the ruling House of Caia.

In 3959 RM the Hmmen Regime succeeded in toppling the house of Caia in an overnight revolution that was decades in the making. The monarchy was overthrown and members of House Caia were executed, ending the line.

CAIGG: (180-ft.) Rvr. Expansive waterfall in the south of AETHIOS, at the confluence of lake EMAHOM, where the river APENATI meets its parent, the river RASELETH. The waterfall is considered one of the most beautiful sights of the natural world and is a source of great pride to the people of Aethios.

CAILLIDAR: Set. Small city in the far east of ABATTUR. Its main industry is the breeding and training of mastodons, which are used across the nation as beast of burden and sometimes mounts for its EPONNAN mounted rangers. The city lies along the course of the EGETAKHAN ROAD trade-route

CAIM: Rvr. For. Expansive cypress wetlands in the c north west of GNOTH.

CAINEN: Geo. Large sandstone hill in the east of ANUBIA, along the TROPIC OF RAH, just north of the desert of SLAAN. The many natural caves at its base have been used by nomads as tombs for centuries, with crude mummified remains of tribal leaders still interred within the nichelike recesses. The feature is used by nomads of the area for navigation.

CAINIA: Set. Settlement in the c of GNOTH. It is known for its expansive coal quarries (Pop. c. 7,000).

CAIRN HILLS: Geo. Region in the c east of AHRISHEN noted for its hundreds of dense small hillocks, that are remnants of an ancient culture that possibly dates back to the middle of the FOURTH AGE. Over the years, some of the mounds have been destroyed or intentionally broken into, and some have revealed the buried bodies of ancient warriors, clad in rusted armour and weapons. Nothing is known of these people.

CAIRNS OF DALFUN: His. Arc. Ancient cairns outside the settlement of DALFUN, in the north of AHRISHEN, in the far east of the region of PELADA.

CAIRWYN: Rvr. River in the north east of EASTERN LLACHATUL, which flows east from sources in the DONN Mountains in the south of LOEGRESS^(1.), eventually serving as a border between Loegress and KOMMEA before meeting its parent, the river LYNNFAEL.

CAITARA: Set. City in the south east of ELEKHID, along the course of the river IUDIVRA. Its main industry is the manufacturer of the resin known as manna. Production of manna is shrouded in secrecy and outsiders are not allowed in the city (Pop. unknown).

CALACOM: Set. Small fortified city in the north east of the tribe of RAOSI, in the north of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 13,500).

CALASH: Set. Settlement in the c south west of ERET⁽²⁾, famed for its horse whisperers and trainers (Pop. c. 11,200).

CALBIA: 1. Dem. 'Calbian'. Ntm. Small independent kingdom to the south east of KOMMEA in the north east of EASTERN LLACHATUL. It was settled in 3921 RM by the so-called HOLLOW PRINCE RICFREID who first appeared in in Kommea in c. 3900 RM, claiming to be a prophesied SCION and possibly a descendant of the autocrat, CUNOMAGLIO, come to herald a new golden age.

Initially, he was welcomed with open arms made into a figurehead of the nation, enjoying great privilege and responsibility, despite remonstrations from the TETHYSIAN-backed monarchy, but when a string of specific events mentioned in the prophecy failed to come true, he was villainised and persecuted alongside his loyal followers, who fled to the city of Calbia⁽²⁾ in the south of Kommea in 3921 RM, where they were still welcomed.

He established a new government there and within 30-years the region had become largely self-sufficient, cutting ties with the rest of the nation. The people of Kommea had a strong cultural identity and the events that had led to Ricfreid being exiled remained as a stain on their identity and the people of Calbia⁽²⁾ became outcasts among their own kind, and in 3946 RM the city was finally excommunicated from the nation, allowing its people to establish an independent kingdom under the control of Ricfreid, who became monarch.

The kingdom remains today, its people outcasts amongst their own ancestors. Ricfreid is its autocratic ruler, and he lives in opulence amid the adulation of the people who have slowly been indoctrinated to believe his cult of lies, and they are fiercely loyal to him. He discourages travel out of the kingdom out of fear of people being exposed to the truth, but his followers are so blinded by propaganda that that is unlikely even if it were allowed to happen. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

2. Pol. Ser. City and capital of the small independent state of Calbia^(1.), in the north east of EASTERN LLACHATUL. The city itself dates to c. 2200 RM, though has been capital of new young kingdom since its founding in 3921 RM. It is perched atop a large steep hill, whose northern, western, and southern faces end in unassailable cliff.

It remains the seat of the Calbian monarchy to this day, and its name it thought to be derived from the ancient FIFTH AGE state of GALABRIA (Pop. c. 87,000).

CALCANTHIA: Set. City and region in the north of GNOTH, known for its fine limestone quarries (Pop. c. 17,500).

CALCATRICE: Fau. Animal (DICHAGOR) appearing like a winged snake, around 4-ft. long, found in wooded regions to the north east of the ARGENT Mountains in ABATTUR, TISARA, northern TETHYSIA, southern SATARIEL, and western MEHITIEL, as well as parts of eastern MALAN.

It is thought to be a creation of the DEMIURGE ASHTERATH, and is the emblem of the HENDECARCHY of NHORA, where it is most common. It often features in the heraldry of the aforementioned states, in particular Abattur, where it is a national animal and semi-domesticated, often seen accompanying SHAPERS. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

CALCHODON: Set. Fortified city-state located in the north west of ROMOREA^(2.) in the north SAMMAEA. Though located within Romorean territories it is considered an independent entity, with close political ties to the Romorean royal family, through which it is allowed to remain independent. Its wealth comes from taxing mercancy leaving the city, and it provides cheap accommodation and storage to merchants, as well as various entertainments and vices (Pop. c. 76,500).

CALDERA: Set. City in the north east of KORACHAN. One of the original SEVEN CITY-STATES, its manufactories, processing plants and trade yards were once the pride of KORACHAN, but they declined with the decay of VÂRRAN mines and quarries. The city is now mostly empty, its manufactories deserted and hollow. Crime is rife, with the only legitimate business coming from the taxation of trade that moves up and down the river ICHORIA, and east into Vârr. The remnants of the ORDER OF THE CIMMERIAN SANCTION remain in the city, where they have become a powerful force alongside the MORÉHAN SANCTIFIED ORDERS OF THE INQUISITION, which moved there from Nouvar in 2963 RM (Pop. c. 47,000).

CALDERAN: Geo. Rugged mountain about 325-miles long, acting as a border between the north west of PELASGOS and the east of KORACHAN.

CALDERAN NU: Geo. Pass through the CALDERAN Mountains linking the north east of KORACHAN with the north of PELASGOS.

CALEB DHUR: Int. Arc. Dog-faced colossus in the east of SIRIPHAGOS, possibly dating to the late FOURTH AGE or early FIFTH AGE. Little is known about the culture that created it, and it is used by merchants as a landmark to aid in navigation, and is often used as a base camp by caravans.

CALEBA: Rui. An immense now-toppled dog-headed colossus in the north east of SIRIPHAGOS. An immense concrete plinth bears an inscription in a time-faded, alien script.

CALEGLAAS: Dem. 'Caleglaasi'. Region in the west of VAALK, between the BELL OF OMENS and EGORA, home in c. 2700 – 2900 to tribal 'barbarians' who rose against civilisation in the region, moving slowly north, and were fought off by ST. MELARHUR in 2877 RM. They were finally quelled in 2902 RM. The region remains, relatively empty, its few settlements populated by their descendants.

CALENDAR, AHRISHENI: Cal. Complex non-linear calendar system in AHRISHEN, originating in 1305 RM. The culmination of a period and the subsequent commencement of a new one is not a regular thing, and is overseen by a rigid caste called the KELEDAGAZ who control the marking of years and holidays. Changes in periods are typically the deaths and ascensions of new rulers and/or great political or natural events.

Ahrishen is currently in the 29th year of its 73rd period. See Vol II: Different Calendar Eras.

CALENDAR, KORACHANI: see MACCABEAN CALENDAR.

CALENDAR, PARTHISAN: Cal. Main calendar observed in PARTHIS and most of its colonies and foreign territories. Currently in the year 1461 RP, it was founded in 2546 RM following ARSACYN I'S accession to position of emperor. See Vol II: Different Calendar Eras.

CALENDAR, TEMUJAN: Cal. The TEMUJAN calendar is relatively simple, and is divided into 4 'months' of 90 days each. Between each month is a festival, marking the solstices and equinoxes, three of which are 1-day long, and one, the SOLSTICETIDE FESTIVAL, is 2-days long. A leap year occurs every 7-years, adding an extra day to the Solsticetide Festival, making it 3-days long. See Vol II: Different Calendar Eras.

- CALENDAR OF SAINTS: also 'Menologion'. Cal. The many saints of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE and the REFORMED CHURCH OF SARASTRO are each assigned a day of the year (due to the number of saints many days are assigned more than one saint). Such days are traditionally important feast days with more famous or important saints assigned to them, and are celebrated those who share that saint as their patron.
- CALETOS: Set. Small city in the c north west of KOMMEA, along the eastern bank of the river LUGHBRAEN. Directly opposite it on the other side of the river is the city of LERO. Together, they are known as the TWIN CITIES (Pop. c. 13,300).
- CALIGA: Rvr. River in the west of the UMBRA SOKHAR wastes, flowing for 275-miles from sources in the SAHODOM Mountains before meeting its parent, the river SPICIA, at lake KADOTA.
- CALIGO MARSHES: Rvr. Fetid marshes along the course of the river CALIGA in the west of the UMBRA SOKHAR wastes.
- CALISIN: Set. Settlement in the north west of GYZHA (Pop. c. 8,000).
- CALIX: 1. Geo. Crater in the north east of SALOROC, measuring 2-miles in
- 2. Set. Settlement on the edge of the above crater, known for its meteoric iron mines (Pop. c. 7,200).
- CALIX HODARA: Rui. Arc. Ancient ruined cenotaph in the wilderness in the c of SABAISA, east of the HERE Mountains. It is thought to date back to the FOURTH AGE, though it heavily weathered and overgrown.
- CALIXARAN: Geo. Hills and sloping plains dominating the north of SALOROC. The region is dry in summer, though explodes with life in winter as heavy rains water the region, increasing the scope of the river SCYTHEA.
- CALLA: 1. Also the Unknown Tomb. Rel. An ancient tomb in the c west of VAALK, that various scholars attribute to differing sources. Before the KORACHANI EMPIRE'S arrival in Vaalk (then VALKA) it was thought to be the tomb of a great warrior, though exocrines bringing the imperial faith into Vaalk later claimed that an imperial OTHERWORLDLY saint died there, bringing the venerated location into the fold of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. The area is now a favourite amongst pilgrims on THE SHADOW MARCH returning from KHARKHARADONTIS.
- 2. Set. Settlement in the c north west of GNOTH, close to the westernmost reaches of the AEARN WETLANDS (Pop. c. 3,000).
- CALLANDRA: 1. Geo. Mountain pass in the south west of CISNERIA, crossing the BLACK MOUNTAINS, linking the valley of LIENE with the main territories of Cisneria. The pass crosses a valley dividing the mountain which is known for its curious stifling of sounds.
 - 2. Set. Settlement in the south west of $\underline{\text{CISNERIA}}$, guarding the eponymous mountain pass across the $\underline{\text{BLACK MOUNTAINS}}$ (Pop. c. 1,000).
- CALLER: Soc. Rak. In GNOTH, a caste of GIGANRI who sing the emotions of the natural world they herald the dawn, lament the coming of night, celebrate solstices and so on.
- CALLIS: Cur. Currency in EREBETH, first minted in 3704 RM, after the abandonment of the region by the KORACHANI EMPIRE 6-years before. See Vol II: Currency and Coinage in Elyden.
- CALLISTEA: Lan. Native name of EREBETH.
- CALLISTEAN: Lan. Native language of EREBETH. Though originally suppressed by its KORACHANI subjugators, it remained in use in black-markets and by those who opposed the occupation. In its place the use of KORACHANI was enforced, remaining in use throughout Korachani subjugation of the region.

The retreat of Korachan from the nation in 3698 RM, saw a concentrated effort at reintroducing the language as a symbol of the regions' independence. It was taught to children in schools, with many elderly people willingly learning it in their homes, until by c. 3840 RM it was in common usage, though Korachani begrudgingly remains a common language, particularly amongst the common folk who are unable to formally learn Callistean.

As a result, a simplified creole of Callistean and Korachani, known as BETENATHI, has developed, becoming the common form of communication, dominating marketplaces and the slums of Erebethian cities. See Vol II: Languages.

CALLOW HORDES, the: also 'the Lost Demesne'. Eth. Ntn. Technobarbarians that inherited the old ALMAGESTI colonies of AGNERIST in the far east of RAONGEN^(2.) in the north of LLACHATUL, north of the NARAHASAPHAEL Mountains. Outside Raongen, particularly in Almagest, the Callow hordes are more popularly known as the LOST DEMESNE.

The hordes are belligerent and constantly harassing the borders of the above regions, including Valbar, though are as likely to war amongst themselves. It is thought by various nations that they are equipped and funded by Almagest, Korachan, or even Sarastro, to cause dissent amongst their own territories, though no nation has openly admitted this.

They are mostly nomadic, concentrated around the AZAKKALIN Massif, though they do have a few cities which are in a tenuous alliance, though internecine war between regions is not uncommon. Largest of these is the city of ATHAZAGORA, along the RYOGENI coast.

They worship false deities whose roots lie in the colonisation of the area by HOUSE ARTIFEX around a millennium ago, and they revere technology as holy, having lost all knowledge of its functionality. A caste known as MACHINE-MONKS who 'maintain' the rusted machinery that the people of the Callow Hordes worship.

- CALLOVIA: Rel. Rui. Ancient near-obliterated temple-system in the SYNHODOS PLATEAU^(2,) in the c of JURRAS^(2,). Metal tablets unearthed there in 3121 RM led to the rise of the Jurrasi Synhod caste, which was partially responsible for the over a few decades before the departure of KORACHAN from the region.
- CALMAN: Wea. Heavy cleaver-like sword that is common amongst many nihilistic groups across the INNER SEA REGION, including the DESOLATI and ABYSSAL TEMPLARS, and others. Largely symbolic of their Tenets, the blades are intentionally left crude and unfinished and are ground to a sharp edge on a grinder. When actually used in combat they can be terrifying weapons, as much used to defeat the enemy psychologically as they are to cause physical harm.
- CALODIA: Ast. Star that is worshipped by the people of ZINGE.
- CALOG: Geo. Highland badlands in the territories of the tribe of RAOSI in the north east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER.
- CALPURNIA: 1. Lak: Lake in the c south west of RAONGEN^{(2.),} forming a part of the TAHONG drainage basin. It lies along the path of the river SOSHALL
- 2. Set. City in the c south west of RAONGEN^(2.), on a peninsula protruding north into the eponymous lake (Pop. c. 37,700).
- CALU: also 'the Tower'. Ast. Con. Constellation along the equator. See Vol II: Constellations.
- CALUN: Set. Settlement in the c south of HOLOLACH^(1.), 8-miles west of LO SAVAN. The people of Calun collect salt from the l. in expansive saltpans that surround the settlement (Pop. c. 5,000).
- CALYX: Set. Settlement in the south of ARKOS⁽¹⁾, close to the PASS OF CATAS. The settlement is known for its mercenaries who have been fighting in the south for generations and are experts at mountainous warfare against the people of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 6,000).
- CAMACA: 1. Geo. Region in the north east of SAGITTARIA, and home to the current government.
- 2. Set. City and, since 3751 RM, capital of SAGITTARIA. The city has grown tremendously since that time, and is rapidly becoming the largest city in the region as people migrate there from other cities within Sagittaria. It was originally known for its silk production, and though the industry remains, it has diminished since growing into a metropolitan area. It is the northern-most major stop along the IVORY ROAD, and receives trade from as far away as TARTAK, over 3,500-miles south west (Pop. c. 1,009,800).
- CAMARA: Geo. Island in the north east of the CORAL BARONIES, in the south east of SAMMAEA, in the BAY OF LEPHET. It is the largest island of the Coral Baronies, and is home to most of its people. Between c. 3500 3700 RM the island increased greatly in size as atolls and sandbars merged to form the coastal plains of CAMOROUR and the SAESPITOSE spit
- CAMARIAN: Geo. Reef in the CORAL BARONIES, off the south western coast of SAMMAEA, in the north eastern waters of the IHEDROURITRUSH.

CAMARINAL: 1. Sea. Sea in the south west of the INNER SEA, dividing the CYHLAGHARRI PENINSULA^(1.) from the PARTHISAN HEADLAND. It is named after an ancient THRACIAN tyrant^(2.).

2. (B. c. 1050 - 1175 RM) His. Pol. Ancient tyrant from the west of THRACE.

CAMASSIA: Soc. Pol. Major PATRICIAN HOUSE around the INNER SEA
REGION, with a major presence in AZAZEM, and in particular the capital city, AGLAIA^(2.).

House Camassia emerged in c. 1720 RM from one bloodline of an emeritus ARCHPATRICIAN-governor of Azazem and went on control many waning farmlands, which by then had become unproductive and which were being sold off for cheap. The House made shrewd agricultural decisions that saw it using what would have otherwise been considered waste matter, allowing it to not only maintain control of its lands, but also expanding them. In c. 2110 RM it constructed the first iteration of the CAMASSIAN STRONGHOLD outside Aglaia.

In c. 2400 RM it independently developed a primitive form of DROSS that revolutionised the manufacture of animal feed, making it incredibly wealthy. It rebuilt and expanded its stronghold over the following centuries, from where it developed one of the first forms of modern dross in c. 2578 RM. This kicked off a new revolution in food production for MORTALS, saving an empire from starvation and disease and growing unimaginably rich in the process. Though House Camassia originally used strongarm tactics to dissuade rivals from copying what it believed to be its own invention, by c. 2610 RM it instead formed an alliance of other dross manufacturers – now known as the ATROPI HOUSES – to capitalise on their innovations, using arranged marriages and business acquisitions to legally gain control of other dross-manufacturing houses, securing its position as chief manufacturer of dross to the KORACHANI EMPIRE.

As befits such a storied House, its members have garnered a reputation for eccentricity (with various legends and myths emerging around them, including immortality and reprehensible activities) and spending on a level even most other patricians can only dream of. Over the past centuries, many members of the House have become increasingly reclusive, with some younger members never having left the confines of their ancestral home, the CAMASSIAN STRONGHOLD, which also serves as the headquarters of the Atropi Houses.

CAMASSIAN STRONGHOLD, the: Soc. Pol. Str. Major fortress in the city of AGLAIA^(2,) in AZAZEM. It is the ancestral home of HOUSE CAMASSIA and also serves as the headquarters of the ATROPI.

The structure is monolithic, measuring almost a mile-long, though it is technically various separate bastions and forts connected as one. It originated as a simple citadel built in c. 2110 RM, which has been reconstructed and renovated various times over the years, though it is rumoured to still remain intact and solitary, buried deep within the vaulted interior of the extant structure.

Much of the present structure is dedicated to the administration of the Atropi Houses, though various annexes remain in use exclusively by house Camassia, whose members have become increasingly reclusive, their near-endless wealth allowing them to do as they please.

CAMAU: Dem. 'Camauan'. Ntn. Nation in the south east of EASTERN MENISCEA. It is known for its animalistic pantheon of deities, which is thought to have originated in the strange animal corpses found in lake VASSAGO.

The nation was formed in 3821 RM following the arbitrary partition of the larger parent state of SHUTIAZ by the retreating OBLEVISH EMPIRE into two – Camau and EGINAZ. In the year 4005 RM its government committed mass suicide during a session of parliament in an event that remains unresolved and which has become the centre of various conspiracy theories in the UZAGANDAR. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

CAMBER: For. Coastal forest in the north west of EZASUH^(2.), to the east of the city of ASATTIR.

CAMBIA: Rui. Mid FIFTH AGE ruin in the north west of PARAIYA, in the KAURCAN region. It was, as recently as two centuries ago, a major industrial city, though following the change in regime in 3813 RM and the moving of the capital to SOPORA, it began to wane, with many people moving to the south east. It was eventually abandoned in c. 3200 RM.

CAMBIUM: Sup. For. Sparse ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED forest in the c-south east of KHARKHARADONTIS, forming the western-most part of the WAELMIGH rainforest. Its trees are unique to the region and their wood is soft and pale, and their leaves fleshy and maroon in colour, giving them the appearance of giant branching fungi. Their pulp is poisonous and absorbs ambient UMBRA, allowing them to survive in the region.

They are thought to be a relatively recent addition to the area, and explorations of western Waelmigh in 2831 RM made no mention of such flora. They reproduce through sporogenesis, and their spores can travel vast distances on prevailing winds, and saplings have been recorded in regions as far away as NOAVATUR and RHINOCOLOURA.

CAMEHAN: 1. Lak. Lake in the south east of KHITAI. It was once a large bay, used by KORACHANI invaders as a harbour. The lowering of ELYDEN'S sea levels saw the bay changed into a lake in c. 3100 RM, leaving many coastal settlements in the region cut-off from the Sea.

2. Ser. City in the east of KHITAI. Originally founded as a KORACHANI colony in c. 2430 RM to mine iron, it was once known as Camechan. The Korachani rulers were forced out of the city in 2789 RM, becoming the first region of Khitai to govern itself, as the rest of the nation was fighting its Korachani oppressors.

Korachani architects designed the city to be coastal, but it was left landlocked by c, 3100 RM, and the surrounding bay became a lake that is today linked to the sea with a series of canals. Its main industry is logging (Pop. c. 45,000).

CAMENHI: Set. Settlement in the c west of PORPHYR, along the main national trade-route (Pop. c. 7,000).

CAMERANIA: Geo. Expansive cave-system in the c south west of THE SURRACH, south of the MISHANOS Mountains and south west of the GHUZZ Mountains that leads to the vast CHAMBER OF CHAINS in the PRISON CARCERI.

CAMERANIA: Geo. Expansive cave-system in the c south west of THE SURRACH, south of the MISHANOS Mountains and south west of the GHUZZ Mountains.

CAMION: Tec. Veh. Large vehicle, usually used for transporting goods and supplies.

CAMMEA: also 'Kommea'. Lan. KORACHANI name for KOMMEA.

CAMMOREA: 1. Geo. Large mountain-chain in the north of SAMMAEA, some 2,500-miles long, forming the northern border of the KHARKHARADONTID desert, where it flanks the south of the ANDILUTHAN SHELF and TARTAK, where it serves to keep the worst ATRAMENTAL CORRUPTION out of the settled lands of Sammaea. Earthquakes and landslides are common, particularly along the southern face of the mountain, leaving the plains directly south of it, shattered and strewn with treacherous boulders.

2. Eth. Ethnic group in the north of SAMMAEA, south of the SEA OF BYSSOS, who emerged in the early FIFTH AGE around the Cammorean^(1.) Mountains, after which they are named. They spread to the north and in c. -1000 RM, settling lands west of the Byssos, where their descendants would go on to found the nations of ANDILUTH, TRAKIA and MOAH.

CAMMOREAN PARABLES, the: Soc. Leg. Series of legends found by IMPERIAL explorers along the northern face of the CAMMOREAN Mountain in the early days of KHARKHARADONTID exploration c. 80 RM. The parables are etched in various disparately-found ten-foot-high granite slabs in an ancient yet easily decipherable script, each of them speaking of a hellish place where nightmarish beings torture the guilty. Some say the tales are parables of morality, though other scholars claim they speak of a time in ELYDEN when such creatures roamed the deserts of KHARKHARADONTIS. The first such tablet was found at the base of mount Cammorea in the north of Kharkharadontis; from which the parables' names as a whole are derived. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

CAMMOREAN SHADOW, the: Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region dominating the c and north western-reaches of the CAMMOREAN Mountains, to the east of the SEA OF UGOLOTH, in the far north of KHARKHARADONTIS, occupying the north eastern-most reaches of the Free Land of TRINITANIA (1.), stretching as far north into the south of TARTAK. The corruption is moderate to faint, and is only of danger to those who remain there for a prolonged period of time. Caravans undertaking the western-most stretch of the SALT ROAD cross here, through established routes that are protected by SIPHON ENGINES and other technarcane devices.

The taint is believed to date back to ATRAMENTAL attacks against the empire of KARTHAN during the final days of the WAR OF SCOURGING.

The region is categorised as a MODERATE THREAT by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

CAMMORI: Lan. Native tongue of the nomads who live in the northern foothills of the CAMMOREAN mountains, dating to the middle FIFITH AGE, and descended from OLD CAMMORI.

The present-day language of CARDAMATHIAN is descended from it. See Vol II: Languages.

CAMMORI, OLD: His. Lan. Early FIFTH AGE language from the CAMMOREAN region of northern SAMMAEA, that originated from the late FOURTH AGE EXAHARIAN tongue. It has been replaced today by CAMMORI. See Vol II: Languages.

CAMBAR: For. Jungles in the south west of WESTERN SAMMAEA, straddling the border between the south east of ABRAXA⁽²⁾ and the north west of CARNYNGA.

CAMBION: also 'the Cambion'. Leg. Myr. Rel. In the religion and myth across LLACHATUL in contemporary times, a deity loosely recognised by many HALFBLOODS as a patron. The halfblood Cambion was martyred during the last of the ANTHROPEIDOS CRUSADES in the BATTLE OF TWO WORLDS in 151 RM in the name of fellow Halfbloods persecuted in the early days of the EMPIRE, before they were assimilated into its echelons. Since then, many halfbloods the world-over have paid tribute to the memory of the halfblood at the point of its death in the north west of NÁRTHEL, near the STRAIT OF NÁRTHEL, elevating it to godhood. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

CAMELOPARD: also 'Ghazal' in PARAIYA. Fau. Herbivorous ungulate, slightly smaller than a horse, with a longer neck, common in many wild areas throughout the drier climates in LLACHATUL, and the north of SAMMAEA. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

CAMEROCH: Geo. Area of wooded badlands in the north west of THE OLD FOREST, known as the region in which the TREE OF AGEN is located. The region covers around 27,500 square-miles and is characterised by tall crumbling stacks covered in a tangle of vines, fleshy creepers and banyans, which in many cases keep the stacks in place. The valleys between the stacks are thick with vegetation and plant litter making the region very difficult to navigate.

Growth of flora and fauna in the region is directly influenced by the Tree of Agen, growing faster and more aggressively, though many creatures that spend their lives in the area find their lifespans shortened by the vigour of life there.

It is shunned by most in the Old Forest due to its infamy as the home to the Tree of Agen, and is guarded by the \underline{SIDHE} – a caste of $\underline{DERUWEIDS}$ who mutilate their bodies to more resemble the Tree of Agen.

CAMOROUR: Geo. Coastal plains in the south east of the island of CAMARA in the north east of the CORAL BARONIES. It was formed between c. 3500 – 3700 RM due to the lowering of sea levels and remains largely barred due to the salinity of its soil, though it has become a haven to wildlife.

CAMORRA: also 'the Hidden City'. Set. City in SARASTRO, on the southern-face of the OTINDHAR Mountain; a sanctuary to those still faithful to HAGE, where the deity is worshipped in its true incarnation and not the corrupted deity that the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE fashioned it into (Pop. c. 3,200).

CAMOTHUR: Geo. Expansive river basin in the west of the AMMASHI^(1.) peninsula through which flows the river TAMANTI. The basin is characterised by savannahs and sparse woodlands and is largely unpopulated and is a refuge to wildlife. The largest city in the basin is EHBREDA, which lies at a sharp bend where the river VERTANDI meets the Tamanti.

CAMPANOLOGY: Soc. The study, art and craft of BELL-ringing. Bell-ringing is a common pursuit across the INNER SEA REGION, and particularly within the KORACHANI EMPIRE and its dependencies and independent states that were once part of Korachan, so-much-so that even then travelling in the wilderness one may hear the sounds of bells carried on the wind, from solitary towers, crossroad chapels, and other isolated structures.

Hand bells are used extensively on the SHADOW MARCH by priests to rally PETITIONERS OF THE MACHINE, and the sound of bells across cities where the UNDYING MACHINE holds sway has become ubiquitous, calling people from all walks of life to prayer.

Many superstitions have emerged surrounding campanology, including the belief that they can be rung by spirits in times of turmoil, and that they can be used to keep evil spirits at bay.

CAMWAÉH: Set. Settlement in the south east of KOMMEA, in the south east of the HOLLOW COASTLINE (Pop. c. 7,200).

CANAM: Geo. Grass and scrubland in the north west of LYRIDIA, west of the hills of ARRAPHA and ESTIA. The region is home to wild horse herds, and many surrounding small settlements train and breed them for various needs.

CANAPHRAN: Mil. Org. Plr. 'Canaphrani'. Caste of itinerant 'knights' in the INNER SEA REGION, common to both the HIGH- and LOW-EMPIRES, as well as the PARTHISAN REPUBLIC, and, less commonly, the ALMAGESTI REPUBLIC and the KINGDOM OF VENTHIR. They are warriors, often veterans of state service or retired mercenaries, who have taken a vow to whatever authority they see fit (commonly a god, sovereign, or state, or even an individual) to uphold said authorities' laws and morals, though the manner in which they do this is largely unregulated.

Typically, they are sponsored by or under the patronage of a powerful benefactor — a PATRICIAN, prince, high-ranking government or church official, for instance. These patrons equip, feed and house the canaphran, who furthers their reputation through his deeds. This motive usually serves to regulate the actions of canaphrani, who will lose their patronage should their deeds be contrary to the objectives of their patrons.

The canaphrani travel across their appointed lands, be they local or more far-ranging, looking to further the cause of their chosen authority and patron, and challenging those who would oppose them. Due to this they are perceived by many as being similar to the knights-errant of classical tales, though the analogy is often overly simplified. In many cases they can be little more than enforcers and bullies of their patron, though notable paragons of the Canaphrani ideal have emerged in various regions, particularly LAASKHA and SKAROS, where a tradition of honourbound Canaphrani has led to them becoming highly respected there.

There exists little to unify individual Canaphrani and even those devoted to the same cause will differ wildly in appearance and character. Some hark back to the classical image of knights and may refuse to use firearms or other ranged weaponry, though others will have no such compunctions, equipping themselves with the best technology their patrons can afford.

People's perception on them varies by region and individual, and some regard them as exemplars of honour, where others denounce them as little more than vigilantes at best to state-sponsored bandits at worst. Laws regarding Canaphrani also differ from place-to-place, with the KORACHANI EMPIRE having no laws specific to them, but being cautious of their actions – it is not unknown for an infamous Canaphran to be hunted down and brought to justice, for instance.

The name is derived from an ancient caste of nomadic mercenaries common in \underline{VAALK} in the early Fifth Age. Due to this 'ancestry' Canaphrani are largely distrusted in Vaalk.

CANATA: Set. Settlement in the c-south east of TAMAR, just east of the BAY OF CANATAUR (Pop. c. 8,000).

CANATAUR: Sca. Deep bay in southern TAMAR, along the HARMACHIS coast. Its shore has changed little over the years due to its deep waters and the settlements there are amongst the oldest coastal settlements in Tamar.

CANATH: Set. Fortified coastal city in the north east of SKAROS, close to the border with ALMAGEST. Its main industry is watchmaking, and it is a major stronghold of the KYONI ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION, and forces based in the city patrol the border (Pop. c. 40,000).

CANATON VALLALAR: (B. unknown). Pol. Present speaker of the Republic Council of GNOTH. Very little is known of him as what little dealings the council has with foreign nations is through envoys and diplomats.

CANCELLARII: sing. 'Cancellarear'. Soc. Rnk. In the KORACHANI EMPIRE; administrative rank held in most imperial settlements of sizeable population (normally 10,000 or more). They are law-givers and maintainers of edicts, and oversee the local militias and law-enforcements that act beneath the IRON GUARD. They are often members of the SANCTIFIED ORDERS OF THE INQUISITION.

CANCRINE COAST: Geo. Largely uninhabited coastal region in the east of PORPHYR.

CANDAN: Pol. Influential PATRICIAN HOUSE with a large influence in the city of ALMAGEST. The current governor of the city of Almagest is VAHANDAR CANDAN.

CANDAULUM: Set. City in the south east of the TARAHID ANNEXES, close to the coast of the SEA OF ORKA (Pop. c. 15,000).

CANDRON: 1. Tec. Series of SIPHON ENGINES located along the northern border of the tainted region of HOTUTAER in TARTAK.

2. Sup. Tec. $\underline{\text{UMBRA}}$ pipeline in the c of $\underline{\text{TARTAK}}$ that runs for 375-miles to the city of $\underline{\text{SAHIM}}^{(2)}$ in the north.

CANEM HALAT: Geo. Small mountain acting as a border between AHRISHEN and LYRIDIA.

CANESCA: Sup. Geo. Expansive FIRMAMENTAL WASTELAND in the north east of SAMMAEA, covering some 17,000 square-miles across the border between the far north west of ELEKHID and the tribe of ESSERIS in the east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. One of few Firmamental wastes in the region, Canesca is renowned for its bleached landscape and arid climate.

CANI: 1. Geo. Mountain pass between the mountains of BETHET in the south west and NAKARRA in the north east, connecting the east of J'THANA with the west of SIRIPHAGOS.

2. Ser. Mining settlement to the south west of the $\underline{NAKARRAN}$ Mountains in the north west of $\underline{SIRIPHAGOS}$. Its main industry is the mining of tin (Pop. c. 6,000).

CANIOS: Set. Settlement in the north west of the tribe of ATEVEGOS, in the west of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 2,000).

CANKERBLOOM: Flo. Large plant with fleshy leaves that produces a single large red flower that drips tar-like ichor. The plants grow up to around 3-ft. in height and are common in the south east of SAMMAEA, being most common in ZHARIAH^(2.), SHEZALIAH, and QARALAM, and they thrive in regions of FAINT ATRAMENTAL CORRUPTION.

The tar that drips from the flower is actually a form of nectar that is rich in UMBRA that it filters from the soil and air around it that has a sickly-sweet stench, not unlike that of a corpse, that is used to attract pollinators.

This tar is collected and is used to make a concentrated poison that has been used since antiquity to taint large volumes of water, particularly during sieges. When dried and turned into a powder the tar burns with a thick dark smoke, which when inhaled is debilitating in the short term (coughing, fits, seizures) and leads to ATRAMENTAL AILMENTS in the long term, with the most infamous symptoms being the liquefication of eyes and persistent thickening of saliva that makes swallowing next to impossible. The poison is commonly used against pests and vermin, though its use against MORTALS is not unheard of. See Vol II: Poisons and Venoms.

CANNOS: Nm. Nation in the north east of Bror^(1.). The region was originally thought to be uninhabited due to the noticeably-absent signs of civilisation on the surface. The dry climate and FIRMAMENTAL activity reinforced this theory. Its south easternmost lands lie in the rainshadow of the LAHAED Mountains and are inhospitable to MORTALS. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

CANON LAW: Law. Form of punishment introduced to ASSEER by DRERLLATAR FARISÛN in 1677 RM that takes an avenging form, with punishments taking a similar form to the crime. It remains in effect to this day and is effective with little enforcement, so long as punishments remain harsh and there remains the threat of apprehension and sentencing.

CANOPIA: also 'the Mausoleum City'. Set. Once mortuary-city in the c north west of ANUBIA where the LOST ONES prepared their dead for inhumation. The place is now a ruin, swallowed by the white sands of the MOLACHARI DESERT, only its black spires and archaic arches protruding from the sand in memory of what once was.

Some remains exhumed from the ruin indicate that the city may have had a small IROTHANI population.

CANOPIC ENGINE: His. Soc. Tec. In ancient history, the great mechanical repositories used by the IROTHANI, into which their spirits were interred once their fleshy mortal bodies were deemed too weak to carry on the task. They are similar to the SOUL-ENGINE^(1.) created by the DEMIURGE NYARLOTH, but of far cruder design. In many cases they came to be worshipped by lesser MORTAL peoples that inherited their lands, in a form of ARCHAEOLATORY.

CANOPUS: Geo. Ore desert to the west of the SABARAAN Mountains in the south east of SHAZGIN. The region is known for its brilliant bronzebrown rocks and large gold deposits, and its northern part has been mined by Shazgin for years.

CANOTHA: Rui. Picturesque deserted city in TETHYSIA, on the banks of a now-dry branch of the river AUDUHMLA.

CANOTO: Set. City in the c north west of ALMAGEST, along the course of the river DANUR (Pop. c. 43,000).

CANTHUS: Set. Fortified settlement in the south of QATTISYSH in the west of THE SURRACH. It was once a thriving city with a healthy metallurgical industry, but it was heavily bombarded during the BAKHRAN STATES' first attacks against the area in 4003 RM (Pop. c. 9,200).

CANTICATONA: Geo. Low mountains in the c of LOEGRESS^(1.), stretching from the eastern face of the VOULLOR Mountains to the coast west of the BAY OF ERMAE^(1.). The mountains are ancient, possibly even more-so than the Voullor and are shattered and well-worn, smooth from untold hundreds of millennia of exposure to the elements.

CANTICLE OF WORMS: Mys. Vol. Ancient mystic texts unearthed in the ruined TEMPLE OF TALLAS in the RAOGON forests in central CUTH early in the FIFTH AGE. The texts detail the conquests and plagues of the SCION TALLAS^(2.) and are likely copies of an original written by one of his followers of lieutenants. It details the forms of plagues and diseases and their symptoms and the number of people killed by them and in what places. It also chronicles the passage of the sun across the skies, including the times of sunrises and sunsets, and uncommon solar activity across a specific period of the THIRD AGE, as well as noting events of agricultural importance, such as droughts and blights.

Ironically, what was intended to be a celebration of the exploits of a sadistic demigod eventually spread across $\underline{\text{ELYDEN}}$, becoming the basis for many cures and ways how to deal with a variety of diseases and plagues. It is unknown where the original texts are situated, but copies and transcriptions have found their way across Elyden, with versions kept in libraries in $\underline{\text{KHADON}}$ and $\underline{\text{TETHRA}}$, amongst others.

CANTICLES OF STEEL AND SHADOW: Rel. Set of seven hymns that are sung during masses of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE in KORACHANI cities.

CANTIFORA: also 'the Tree Bastion'. Mil. Str. Major coastal bastion in the south west of LANTUA, in the south east of MENISCEA made from FIRMAMENTALLY hardened roots that have been SHAPED in situ. It is the paragon example of this form of architecture, and one of few military examples employed by the Lantuan people. The natural pliability of the roots, coupled with the Firmamental hardening make for structures that are as tough if not more so than traditional fortifications.

CANTILLA: Ind. Set. Manufactory-city in the east of SARAGOS, along the course of the river TAARFA. It is known for its caste of chanting TECHNOLOGISTS (Pop. c. 38,000).

CANYON, the: Soc. Geo. Slang term for a narrow street in the CITY OF ALMAGEST, accessible to the docks of the central peninsula by steep steps. It was once known for its noble palaces, though these have since been converted to inns, hotels, taverns, cabarets, concert halls, brothels etc. Many echoes of its previous incarnation still exist in the arched doorways, niches with statues, plaques, and architecture of the area.

- CAPHAE: Set. Major coastal city in the east of KASPIA. It is one of the largest cities in Kaspia, and is also a major industrial centre and has a large harbour (Pop. c. 632,000).
- CAPITONA: Set Settlement in the north of CISNERIA, in the southern foothills of the DIVUMMA Mountains. It is one of few places in the region that continues to extract and process umbra, under the aegis of the city of SUDIVA (Pop. c. 8,000).
- CAPPAGANA: Mil. Str. Fortress in the south of EREBETH in the region of THANATOS that scours the region for SOULSTONES.
- CAPRICORNS, the: Geo. Island-chain off the south western-most coast of GYZHA, in the west of LLACHATUL.
- CAPRIOTE: Rel. Clo. Conical pointed hat that is commonly worn by various ranks within the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. It is common amongst more fanatical VOTARIES and SECTARIANS, who often wear them while undergoing the SHADOW MARCH. Various ranks of clergy also wear them with their faces entirely covered, particularly during holy day processions.
- CAPRIZANT: 1. For. Forest dominating 400-miles of coastline in the north west of the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT, west of the IQEKHABRA Mountains. It is known for many earthquakes and geysers, as well as a few volcanoes, mostly dormant.
- 2. (9,040-ft.) Geo. Active caldera in the c north west of the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT. It has been studied by volcanologists, but little is known of its patterns. The hollow is near-constantly filled with magma, which at times is known to erupt. Its last major eruption was in 3642 RM, when it levelled miles of forest all around it.
- CAQDA: Set. Coastal settlement in the far south east of CHEIRA (Pop. c. 4,000).
- CARACAL, the: Geo. Region of savannah dominating the c east of VECTIS.
 It is the eastern-most region of the vast plains that dominate that area of WESTERN MENISCEA and is a popular spot for LANDSKIFFS.
- CARADAR: Set. Settlement in the far east of ABATTUR, in the region of VRESSELA. Its main industry is the mining of SUNSTONE, which are highly FIRMAMENTALLY-active, making their extraction extremely dangerous. The sunstones are refined in the manufactories of AINE⁽³⁾, to the west (Pop. c. 5,000).
- CARADAS: 1. Sea. Bay in the west of TATAR, to the east of the GULF OF ESHIRON Its waters are heavily polluted from the many manufactories of the nearby city of Caradas^(2,).
 - 2. Set. Major coastal city in the west of TATAR, overlooking the Bay of Caradas⁽¹⁾. It is a major industrial city and its coastline is dominated by manufactories (Pop. c. 178,000).
- CARADRON II: m. His. Pol. Mil. Per. (B. 2532 D. 2583 RM) king of the historic kingdom of ENAELLON⁽²⁾ who was killed by the warlord TORRVAN during his unification campaign in the region that led to the founding of the kingdom of LOEGRESS⁽¹⁾ in 2588 RM. He was killed in the Battle of Brynfael, in which Torrvan forced his son, who was acting as his second-in-command, to surrender Enaellon.
- CARALAR: Set. Settlement in the c north west of KULIGALA, in the c of the CARCHEMISHI PENINSULA^(1.), in the east of SAMMAEA. It is a major source of onyx gems, for which the region is well-known (Pop. c. 8,000).
- CARAMILO: Cui. A pastry sweet consumed by the people of ABACARDAT, the JAHADAT STATES, KHAR NADUL, HANNAH, and QARALAM. It is made from carob syrup and the pastry is laced with carob flesh.
 - It originated in Abacardat as a food reserved for religious festivals related to the JAHINNID FAITH, and was taken south by merchants travelling the NACRE ROAD.
- CARANARA: Geo. Soc. Region in the south east of SARASTRO. It has a reputation for its dour, unwelcoming people, whose ancestors were criminals and undesirables that were exiled here from cities and civilised areas across Sarastro. Without aid or recognition from the empire they were forced to make their own existence in the uncompromising region, and their descendants carry the bitterness of these founders to this day.
- CARANARA, PILLAR OF: Arc. Large granite pillar in the south east of SARASTRO, erected in 2937 RM to mark the north western-most extent of the region of CARANARA, where criminals, heretics and other

- undesirables were exiled to for many centuries, between c. 2850 3300 RM.
- CARAYAN: Set. Settlement in the c west of RAONGEN^(2.) in the southern face of the ERIVOINE Mountains. Its min industry is UMBRA extraction, which is reached by drilling deep beneath the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region of ALVELM, some 70-miles west (Pop. c. 5,200).
- CARCAENT: Geo. Sharp-ridged mountain-chain forming a part of the border between the HENDECARCHIES of STHAMAN and AMILLAERE^(1.) in MALAN. It forms one of the westernmost extensions of the ARGENT Mountains and covers some 85,000 square-miles, including surrounding foothills.
- CARCANET: Set. Major city in the south of PORPHYR, dominating a 15-miles stretch of lake MEHMAS (Pop. c. 100,000).
- CARCASS, the: Sca. Common name for the waters of the far south east of the DARK SEA, around the denser ruins of ancient KHAMID. These waters are treacherous, covered in shallow reefs and the wrecks of ships that wandered into the area. Rocks and ruins fill these waters, most of them lurking just beneath the surface, waiting to destroy passing ships.
- CARCERI: see PRISON CARCERI, THE.
- CARCHEMA PASS: Geo. Pass in the east of BANT, cutting across the east of the CARCHEMISH MOUNTAINS⁽²⁾, linking the north and south east of Bant.
- CARCHEMISH: 1. Also 'Karkhemisti'. Geo. Peninsula in the west of the SEA
 OF LETHEA, separating the main body of water from the smaller FLAMING SEA.
- 2. Geo. More specifically, a 700-mile plug that forms the backbone of the same landmass serving as a border of sorts between the lands of KULIGALA and BANT.
- 3. His. Ntn. Early- to mid-FIFTH AGE nation dominating what is today known eponymously as the Carchemishi peninsula^(1.), in territories now made by the nations of BANT and KULIGALA.

The nation emerged in c. 1220 RM, after the KORACHANI colony that had occupied the peninsula for the previous centuries departed in c. 1150 RM, after decades of troubles with natives and the sheer distance from the central empire became untenable. Cultists worshipping the so-called LIVING NIGHTMARE proved to be troublesome to pilgrims travelling to the famed CRADLE OF THE ARCHPOTENTATE, with their attacks often leading to bloodshed and outright conflict.

A garrison was maintained around the Cradle, though the rest of the nation was abandoned, without handing over administrative duties to the INTERREGES or PRECEPTORS, as was usually the case when Korachan departed a region. Many native slaves were freed, and the last Korachani ships left the peninsula in 1153 RM.

The native populace slowly reclaimed its lands, overpowering the garrison that held the Cradle of the Archpotentate and toppling the TEMPLE that had been built around it in c. 1200 RM, and within a few decades the nucleus of a singular nation had emerged, centred around the city of ONOMA BANT. These people called themselves Carchemishi.

The nation was short-lived, however, and internal corruption, coupled with the return of Korachani fanatics intent on reclaiming the peninsula, and the devastation caused by the UPHEAVAL OF LETHEA in 1303 RM, led to its government's fragmentation and an eventual schism into two distinct cultural centres – BANT in the west and KULIGALA in the east – in 1305 RM. See Vol III: Extinct States.

- CARCHEMISHI: His. Lan. Language of the CARCHEMISHI people that inherited the KORACHANI colonies of Carchemish following their abandonment in c. 1150 RM. The language divided in two by c. 1500 RM into BANTISH and KULIGALAN. See Vol II: Languages.
- CARCNI: Set. Major coastal city in the far north east of IMEAL, close to the border with western ARERAQTH. It lies just south of the northern POLAR CIRCLE and is a major port known for its ambergris and perfume production (Pop. c. 120,000).
- CARCOSA: His. Rui. Expansive ancient ruins buried in the plains of ESTIA in the east of LYRIDIA. The ruins are thought to date back to the THIRD AGE, possibly earlier. As expected from their age, the ruins are badly decayed, though frequent landslides in the region have been known to expose well-preserved ruins that have been buried for millennia.

Local legends claim that a mythical figure, known as the GERENT OF AMBRA, inhabits these ruins, cursed to wander them for eternity.

CARCUS: Set. Settlement in the north of SKAROS. Its main industry is aluminium mining (Pop. c. 5,000).

CARDAMATHIA: Set. Major city in ANDILUTH. During the storm season, when the ANDILUTHAN SHELF is wracked by massive waves that make travel across it close to impossible, people flock behind its walls, doubling its population (Pop. c. 48,000 summer, c. 165,000 winter).

CARDAMATHIAN: Lan. Predominant language in the BYSSOS region of northern SAMMAEA, to the north of the CAMMOREAN Mountains. It is descended from the earlier FIFTH AGE CAMMORI tongue and emerged in the plains around the city of CARDAMATHIA.

It is spoken by the people of ANDILUTH, TRAKIA and MOAH. See Vol II: Languages.

CARDILAGA: 1. Sea. Bay in the far north east of PORPHYR.

2. See. Small coastal city in the far north of PORPHYR, in contested lands claimed by UTIMAN. It is a major link to SERROK, and part of the traderoute north, where gold mined in Utiman is traded north for much-needed food and supplies (Pop. c. 17,000).

CARDINAL WASTES: Geo. Region of expansive rocky terrain in the c of ELEKHID. It is thought that the region was a badlands about a millennium ago, but changing climate saw it covered in the WAELMIGHI rainforest, its buttes and canyons and mesas hidden beneath a carpet of foliage and epiphytes. The few IMPERIAL explorers who have seen it report a place of primal beauty unknown to the denizens of the empire.

CARET: Set. Small city in the east of SABAISA. In 3601 RM the city was destroyed in an ATRAMENTAL explosion of undisclosed origin. It was later rebuilt, though some of the original ruins remain to this day, and the scattered remains of black fused sand serve as reminders to the tragedy. Its main industry was and remains pyrite mining, which is largely why the city was rebuilt (Pop. c. 17,400).

CARIA: 1. Sea. Bay in the north of the SEA OF URAN, forming a border between the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOMS of Caria^(4,) and MEDES.

2. Geo. Mountain and peninsula around 180-miles long in the south of the HARÉSHK, dominating the main peninsula of the City-kingdom of Caria^(4,).

- 3. Rvr. River in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of Caria⁽⁴⁾, flowing south east for around 70-miles, before meeting the BAY OF VALD.
- 4. Pol. One of the 8 HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOMS, and home to the HIGH-MONARCH ruler of all of the Haréshk. Its coastline is longer than those of the other seven Haréshki states combined, and has a powerful navy that operates from the city and its satellite harbours.
- 5. Pol. Main duchy of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of Caria^(4.). Its shield bears a stylised mountain and the devouring DRAKE; in reference to its mountainous namesake^(2.) and the dragon depicted by the ASHKERONI religion.

6. also 'the Silent City' and 'the High-city'. Pol. Set. Capital city of the CITY KINGDOMS OF THE HARÉSHK. Notable for its large walled capital, it is the southern-most of the eight Haréshki City-kingdoms and home to HIGH-KING CAERAN IV and the royal house.

Situated along the river Caria⁽³⁾, just south east of the foothills of the Carian Mountain⁽²⁾, the city began life as an unassuming settlement in c. 300 RM, taking its name from the mountain. By the turn of the first Millennium RM the region had become a famed artisan centre, the village giving birth to as many a dozen small satellites, which became known as the conurbation of Caria. Khamidian traders in Lanneas saw an increased demand in their object d'art, and the region quickly became wealthy, with Caria itself growing greatly in size, becoming a large town by c. 1200 RM. Today it is a major stop along the Great Road traderoute, with large markets lying in the shadow of its great citadel, where goods from across the Inner Sea Region are traded.

The city's crest as an angel, fashioned after the OTHERWORLDER ANAHERA, who is considered a patron saint, and features heavily in its heraldry and architecture (Pop. c. 1,806,000).

CARIAISIUS: For. Jungles dominating the south of RHEA, between the DORLEIDON and BOKKARIS Mountains the jungles are not thought to be virginal, and instead grew following clearing of much of the rainforests that previously dominated the area. Only the c-most part of the region is dense-enough and to be considered a rainforest, and it is largely uncivilised.

CARIELA: Rui. Ruined city in the c south of OSSIEL. It seceded from Ossiel in 2850 RM during the height of the nation's crusades against shapers and their allies. It was destroyed, levelled, and the earth salted as a message to other settlements that were disillusioned. It remains a ruin to this day.

CARILLAR: Mus. Ind. Set. City in the north west of VÂRR. While Vârr was still under KORACHANI control, the city was a major producer of BELLS and home to many celebrated CAMPANOLOGISTS, and though that industry has dwindled to only a few family businesses, its foundries remain operational, constructing machinery parts which are now traded west into Korachan and north west into CHTHYRID (Pop. c. 81,000).

CARIOUNS, the: Soc. Mountain-men, trappers and hunters common in the BLACK MOUNTAINS in the west of CISNERIA. They exist largely outside the cultural and political structures of the civilised parts of the Kingdom, living off the land, using their skills to navigate the wilderness, hunting and trapping, selling pelts and meat at the settlements they encounter.

CARIOUS WASTES: Geo. Harsh highland region in the c west of CISNERIA. It is sparsely populated, with few large cities, though is home to a loose caste of mountain-men, trappers and hunters, collectively known as CARIOUNS.

CARMAR: Geo. Highland ridge in the north of AZAZEM, forming an extension of the southern CHACTHORNYS Mountains.

CARMATHAN: Pol. Geo. Political region crossing the border between the HENDECARCHIES of NHORA and DERAEIA in the north east of MALAN. It dates back to a time before the unification of Malan by the LADY AEGIS, and even before the rise of the Hendecarchies as we know them today, and is named after an ancient FIFTH AGE ethnicity that was known for its pale skin and occasional birthmarks that looked like the scars people who have been struck by lightning bear. These people were slowly absorbed by more numerous people amid the growth of the first FOREST KINGDOMS, and are now lost amid the homogenised population of Malan. Individuals are still born in this region and surrounding areas displaying the tell-tale signs of this ancestry, though few know enough of history to identify them.

CARMILI: Rvr. Major river in the c south west of RAONGEN⁽²⁾, flooring north east for almost 1,000-miles from sources in the ZEHINE and ERIVOINE Mountains in the north and the URAHASH Massif in the south.

CARNASSADON: Fau. Large bulky carnivore native to the east of WESTERN LLACHATUL, particularly in lands east of the BLACK MOUNTAINS, such as ATARAXIA and AHKA. They are known for their undiscerning eating of the entire body of their prey, including bones and fur. They are powerful and belligerent, measuring some 12-ft. long and weighing up to 2,400 lbs. though primarily predators, they are not averse to scavenging when the opportunity arises.

Their aggressive character has put them at odds with mortals for many years though they are today largely restricted to rural and wilderness areas, living in sparsely wooded hills and rocky areas, not far from water sources. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

CARNASUS: 1. Geo. Massif in the west of AHKA, forming an eastern part of the SOTTHEA Mountains. It is known for its jagged deep karst formations that make its northern face near untraversable.

2. Ind. Set. Iron mines in the west of AHKA (Pop. c. 4,200).

CARNAT: Geo. Low coastal region in the north east of the BARRIER LANDS, in the north west of NORTHERN SAMMAEA. Ancient lava flows have turned the coast into a dark dust that dominates the region.

CARNETABAEL: Geo. Expansive desert to the north of the STRAMINEA Mountains in the south of THE SURRACH. The region is rocky, dry and receives little if any rainfall in a year. It is largely uninhabited.

CARNATHA: Set. Metropolis in the north east of ABATTUR, to the west of the CABIENAN Highlands. It is known for its labyrinthine streets, which in many cases stand on the roofs of lower structures along hillside. It is a stop along the EGETAKHAN ROAD (Pop. c. 800,000).

CARNIFEX: Rnk. In the KORACHANI EMPIRE, a class of executioner that is governed by the ORDER OF THE CARNIFEXES. Their typical method of EXECUTION is by an oversized cleaver-like sword and due to the weight of the weapon most carnifexes are hulking figures, with SKAROSIAN GIANTS being favoured for the role.

CARNIFEXES, ORDER OF: Org. Order of EXECUTIONERS in the KORACHANI EMPIRE. The order appeared following the creation of the IRON ANGEL in 1241 RM and is similar to the ORDER OF LICTORS, though differs in one important aspect – it is answerable only to the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR. The order has stood continuously since its inception some decades after the creation of the Iron Angel and maintains only seven members at any time, the leader of which is the IRON ANGEL itself.

Members are drawn from the various imperial institutions and beyond, and can be of any race, including HALFBLOODS, OTHERWORLDERS or manufactured beings such as SICTHAINEN TECHNA. (It is even rumoured that a SCION once served as a CARNIFEX). Little else is known of the order, including its base of operations.

CARNIR: Soc. Str. Private fort, owned by HOUSE LLANA, maintained on condition that it also patrol the entire region of north eastern PELASGOS.

CARNIRII: Plr. 'Carniriin'. Also BIONACHA. Sup. Rnk. ATRAMENTISTS who are adept at manipulating flesh. The associated MINASTERIA⁽²⁾ is located outside the region of NICASSA⁽¹⁾ in MHAROKK, the land of its original founding, in the KRANDAC: a fortress whose sprawling dungeons and ATELIERS are filled with the tortured braying and howling of its experiments. See Vol IV: Spheres and types of Shaping.

CARNIVALS OF RUST: Int. Ent. Art. Org. Troupes of actors and performers that travel around cities of CENTRAL LLACHATUL. They were at their peak between c. 3000 – 3500 RM, though can be found travelling from settlement to settlement today.

Their satirical shows emerged in the city of ALMAGEST in c. 2830 RM. They rapidly escalated into sensationalist and grotesque parodies of the rituals of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE and imperial culture, though they went largely unpunished until their shows began to take on a more satirical aspect, acting as scathing commendatory of the moral decay of the city's government and the overall corruption and decay of the natural world. The informal Order of the Carnival of Rust (which held some degree of power in many districts of the city) was eradicated in a systematic campaign that lasted for two decades from 3503 – 3524 RM, culminating in a street-battle in LOWER ALMAGEST, which left thousands dead, and the order leaderless, its few remaining troupes scattered.

The carnivals slowly spread south east to the south of Central Llachatul, where they carefully travelled from town-to-town in rural and isolated regions where they could leave their mark on more impressionable people far from the attentions of the IRON GUARD and the SANCTIFIED ORDERS OF THE INQUISITION. They remain today, though never reached the perverse heights that led to their persecution.

Perhaps the most famed of the extant troupes if the CARNIVALE OF SORROWS, which has distanced itself from the tenets of its founding order, though which remains infamous for its shows.

CARNIVALE OF SORROWS: Int. Ent. Art. Org. Founded in 3964 RM by the sinister yet charismatic SHAPER Bethelal, the Carnivale of Sorrows is a single troupe within the larger CARNIVALS OF RUST that travels in an erratic loop across AZAZEM, putting on performances that culminate in ludicrous violence involving unwilling audience participation.

Performances appear friendly and joyous on first impressions, but spectators may soon realise that things are amiss. The nature of the performances becomes more sinister and uneasy as time goes by, and some displays may turn out to be downright frightening or harassing to those watching, who become unwitting victims of increasingly violent japes and pranks. Accidents are not uncommon and savage animals may 'escape' during performances and maul spectators – all intentionally, of course.

The troupe often abducts people it encounters on the road – particularly solitary travellers – and uses them in their next performance, where audience members believe them to be members of the troupe. These unfortunate individuals are often killed on stage in farcical performances that are satirical in nature, making fun of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, THE SEVEN or the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR himself, drawing nervous laughs from the audience.

CARNIVALE TECHNARCANE: Tec. Org. Loose cadre of rogue TECHNOLOGISTS and TECHNARCANISTS in PARTHIS, who construct large automatons and travel across Parthis showing their creations. This is likely a form of countercultural movement that is against the FLESHWRIGHTING industries that have become so prevalent of late, trying to show the simplicity of technarcana.

CARNIVEAN: Soc. Holiday celebrated in KARAKHAS and KHURAUR, on the date of the spring equinox. The two nations observe different rituals in relation to the feast, though rituals in which blood is venerated are common. The feat originated as a more macabre festival, when a child (typically the offspring of someone politically important, and often conceived specifically for the purpose of the ritual) would have been sacrificed, with the blood drunk by the congregation. Today, the blood is symbolic (or so priests tell foreigners...), and is usually dyed water or wine.

CARNOSE CLIFFS, the: Geo. Expansive region of cliffs in the south of CISNERIA, along the southern-face of the BLACK MOUNTAINS. The cliffs are known for their flesh-colour, from which the name is derived.

CARNOSE WASTES: Int. Sup. Geo. flesh fields in the east of KHARKHARADONTIS that are infested with giant maggots and flies that subsist on the putrefying flesh. Their main carnivore in the area is the KHARKHARADONTID AUK.

CARNYNGA: Dem. 'Carnyngian'. Ntn. Nation in the south west of WESTERN SAMMAEA. Climate/terrain.

It emerged from the predecessor state of EMON KARYN that was itself founded by cultists, who were the sole survivors of a persecuted people. Their descendants were a war-like people who raided north across the SEA OF ABRAXA^(1.) and attacked east and south into BELEGOR and AFONAS.

Today it is known for its steam technology, which is amongst the most 'advanced' of the region – though still centuries behind the INNER SEA REGION. Its people are fiercely independent have resisted outside interference, particularly from colonialist powers from the Inner Sea Region, for many centuries. See Vol II: Extant Realms and Nations.

CAROAH: Set. Settlement in the c east of BANT, in the c of the CARCHEMISHI PENINSULA^(1.) in the east of SAMMAEA (Pop. c. 6,800).

CAROR: Set. Coastal settlement in the south east of TERION (Pop. c. 7,200).

CARORIN: Flo. Cui. Large melon-like fruit that grows in warm temperate regions of south-western SAMMAEA, including AMMESH, HABOT, MAENMIST, NORTHERN SIMBARA, and PHYRR. Individual fruit can grow to around 3-ft. long and are oval in shape, with a scabrous brown/red skin. When broken these fruit reveal fibrous flesh that can be teased out and dried to be turned into incredibly durable rope or fabric. They are cultivated in large numbers for the textile industry and their fibres are traded along the NACRE ROAD, though are of little use as food. See vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

CARPHIS: Set. City in the east of RHINOCOLOURA, which originated from the abandoned KORACHANI colony of MARCHOSIA. Historically, it was renowned for its gold quarries, which were heavily guarded by imperial forces. Over time the gold yields have dwindled, and it now specialises in producing jewellery and object d'art, much of which is traded east across the SALT ROAD with MULCIBER, specifically the tribe of ILLPHAGOS (Pop. c. 38,000).

CARPHONIAN HOLLOWS: Geo. Major vertical cave system in the far south west of OPHIUSSA. The region is dangerous to travel and is largely uninhabited.

CARPUNDIA: Rvr. River in the west of TISARA, flowing north for 490-miles from sources in the north western face of the ARGENT Mountaiins, before meeting the coast at the BAY OF ADEL.

CARRION FAIR, the: Org. An entrepreneuring land-ship that moves across the KORACHANI EMPIRE and beyond, generally within the continent of LLACHATUL. The fair takes the form of a carnival that collects bodies donated to it, whether it's humans, livestock or otherwise, and creates dross from them, which is used to create exotic recipes, often with ingredients from distant regions.

CARTH: Rui. Ruined city in the south west of KAZZAR, dating to the early FIFTH AGE CHIWENOOL civilisation.

CARTIGA: Geo. Craggy mountain-range across the border between the east of LYRIDIA and the south of AHRISHEN, for around 300-miles. It is old and crumbling, with landslides common during winter months, making travel across the range treacherous. It is home to scattered TIKBALANG tribes, which live largely in its western-face, in the region known as IPPARAN.

CARULA: Set. City in the c north west of SARASTRO, built over the ruins of an ancient city-state, where the SARASTROAN DYNASTIES were born. It was the site of a large pitched battle and, later siege during the KORACHANI SIEGE OF SARASTRO in 231 RM, where it was captured by the empire and the contents of its famous library destroyed, earning the BLACK RIVER its name.

In c. 1400 RM it became a major UMBRA processing centre, receiving raw umbra from the plants in ACATEA. The city is also home to PATRICIAN HOUSE ZAFEED, whose main manufactory is located there (Pop. c. 79,000).

CARULA, LIBRARY OF: Edu. Str. Library in CARULA, in the north west of SARASTRO, known from ancient times to be a repository of knowledge. The library was razed by the KORACHANI EMPIRE in 231 RM during the SIEGE OF SARASTRO, leading to millennia of history and knowledge being destroyed.

CARY: His. Rel. Ancient mountain-top temple, in the RULA-CHACL peak in the HAMAIADON Mountains in SERROK, overlooking the border with CHEIRA and the WAELMIGH rainforest beyond. It is home to a monastery where ascetics of various faiths live together, learning from each other and seeking enlightenment. Though in most cases those of differing faiths are at odds with one-another, the norm here is collaboration and harmony, echoing the ideals that many in Serrok would strive for.

The monastery is remote and near-inaccessible, and few are those who would go there willingly.

CASARA TA': Set. Coastal settlement in the north of KHULL, at the mouth of the river DHARNAR, overlooking the BAY OF KALLAR. Its main industry is fishing, and, like many coastal cities in Khull, it is famed for its fish sauce (Pop. c. 6,300).

CASATRA: Sct. Coastal settlement in the far north west of the KORACHANI colony of TAVVADRA, in the north west of SAMMAEA. Its main industry is fishing (Pop. c. 8,000).

CASHAN: Set. Coastal settlement in the south west of KHITAI. It is known for its stilt-architecture, designed to protect its people from the extreme tides in the area. Its main industry is salt panning, which is collected in gigantic pans outside the settlement (Pop. c. 6,000).

CASSAI: 1. His. Str. An ancient tower erected on the south eastern shore of lake C'DATA in ARKOS^(1.), where it flows into the river FALX. Built in c. 850 RM to guard against AANTH attacks that were growing increasingly common, the tower began to attract refugees and other people from the surrounding areas, so much so that by c. 950 RM a small settlement had appeared around the base of the tower. As the conflict with N'RAKH waned, the tower fell into disuse and was later adopted by the city's government as a political structure, where its government was located.

2. Set. City in ARKOS^(1.) that emerged from a tower built there to defend against increasing AANTH attacks in the region^(1.). The city grew prosperous from trade south with GELHANA and later I'THANA. In 1237 RM ancient PLAGI ruins were found buried not far from the walls of the city, which scholars attributed to an ancient FOURTH AGE empire that is said to have dominated the area around the DAARKEN GULF. The remains of thousands of human bodies were found there, many of them with decayed iron manacles – the remnants of executed LOMATHAAN slaves; the ancestors of the Arkosian people. The site was consecrated by the AUSPEXES and a great temple built over the area, which became a place of pilgrimage to many.

Trade remained healthy over the years, particularly as human dominance in N'rakh increased, with a close link forged with its people. After the aanth were deposed in c. 2100 RM, Cassai found itself under the dominance of its merchant lords, abdicating from Arkos in 2300 RM, scant years before SARASTROAN attacks devastated the region. Its western position saw Cassai spared direct effects of the attacks though trade suffered and it diminished over the years. Political uprisings in N'rakh in c 2900 RM saw Cassai return to Arkosian control, though by then it had become little more than a small settlement, a waypoint along the trade-route of the river FALX.

The fragmentation of Arkos following the collapse of Korachan saw the settlement grow, with taxation of travel along the FALX bringing much needed money into its coffers (Pop. c. 32,000).

CASSIA: 1. Geo. Headland in the south of AZAZEM, west of the SEA OF BATHOS^(1.).

2. Geo. Plains in the south of LAASKHA.

3. Set. Small conurbation in the c south of AZAZEM, known for its fruit production and berry wine (Pop. c. 3,200).

4. f. Myt. His. Daughter of the SCION DENDYDRIS, herself daughter of the DEMIURGES ACHAIAH and ARIMASPI. Cassia is one of three known siblings (the others being OKSHANA and IPOMEA), who inherited their mother's divine affinity for trees, which granted them great strength and long-life so long as the sun shone on them and they were in the presence of trees.

Cassia was the most outgoing of her siblings, and appears in the most passages in the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN, and sired no less than four children of her own, who are believed to have been the main source of most descendants of the bloodline alive today. She passed away in CENTRAL LLACHATUL in the mid THIRD AGE as a queen of a small demesne from whose ruins the later NAHORIAN empire. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

CASSIA, THE HOLLOW ONE: (B. 1720 RM) Sup. A NULL born in the VÂRRAN city of DAHUT some years before it was flooded by the breaking of the STEEL CATARACT. She is a solitary being, itinerant and incredibly sad. Despite her social distance and aloofness, she enjoys the vibrance of city life, and has spent her life travelling from city to city both within and without KORACHAN, writing about her experiences. Spent many decades c. 3200 RM in ALMAGEST with the pansophic Dhaia, who catalogued her writings in the seven-volume epic 'My Travels; or the Unending Life of an Itinerant Null. Following her stint in Almagest she disappeared for some centuries, which biographers and scholars say she spent in solitude in KHARKHARADONTIS, her hollow body immune to its corruption. Next sighted in 3721 RM in TEIRA, where she spent years with the REGENT HETEPHERES as her guest and personal fablist. Her stories enjoyed great success with the queen, who had her elevated to the rank of vizier until 3812 RM where her restless nature forced her to quit the VENTHIRI court, leaving behind a legend of magnificent stories. Though still believed to be alive, Cassia has not been seen since 3915 RM in the vicinity of the MARMARA Massif in AHRISHEN, where she was living as an ascetic.

CASSIAN MALACHUS: m. (B. 3321 – D. 3418 RM) Art. Per. Famed PELASGOSI composer who wrote music while under influence of SALARAN – a drug that induces LUCID DREAMING.

His works were noted for their haunting dreamlike natures, and his later compositions were notorious for their truly ominous and disquieting natures. He died by a self-inflicted gunshot wound while lucid DREAMING.

CASSINA: Set. City in the north of the TARAHID ANNEXES, in the region of SADIATTHA (Pop. c. 38,000).

CASSIRA: Set. Settlement in the c north west of THE VORANDINE, along the course of the river CASSIRADA (Pop. c. 8,000).

CASSIRADA: Rvr. River in the west of THE VORANDINE, flowing west for 270-miles from sources in the IAPEGRAN Massif before meeting the coast at the SEA OF BYRIS.

CASSIS: For. Sparsely wooded region in the south west of LAASKHA. It is one of the few expansive woodlands that remain in Laaskha. FIRMAMENTAL influence in the region leaves the wood brittle once cut, though it burns with a harsh strong light, making it useful in some industries.

CASSITUL: Set. Small fortified city in the north east of CISNERIA, overlooking the border with the western-most ALMAGESTI territories (Pop. c. 17,000).

CASSOMYARA: (B. 3862 RM) Pol. Current Arch Matriarch of NAARETH, based in KAURNAKAR.

CASTAAL: Soc. Series of prisons in the south of KHITAI constructed within LODELITHS, most of which are large-enough for one or two cells and no more than a few people on them at any time (more than this and they will descend to ground level due to the weight).

The lodeliths – perhaps numbering a hundred, scattered over several dozen square-miles – are heavily vegetated and chained to the HOTHAGHOL region, and are protected by male guards stationed on the ground. The prisons are home to SHAPERS who were sentenced to life imprisonment by the judges of Khitai.

CASTAFAR: Set. Major city in the north of ABATTUR. It lies along the passage of the EGETAKHAN ROAD trade-route (Pop. c. 62,000).

CASTAR: Set. Farming settlement in the south of KETESH (Pop. c. 1,200).
CASTELLANIA, the: Pol. Str. Old hilltop keep in the centre of DEOCHAN in KORACHAN, dating back to c. 1100 RM. Today it is home to a regiment of the IRON GUARD.

CASTINUS OORYPHAS: (B. 3943 RM) Pol. Current ruler and emperor of HOAMM.

CASTLE DONPAL: Rui. Ruined castle in the far south west of AZAZEM, overlooking the SEA OF TYRSIS. It appears to be ancient, though is in fact only 500 years old, and was constructed by an eccentric PATRICIAN who was enamoured with ancient romantic fiction. Following his death, the HOUSE'S assets were sold on and the castle was allowed to fall into ruin, where it is now a popular holiday destination to Patricians doing their GRAND TOUR.

CASTRA MARI: Mil. Str. Island fortress in the south west of the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS, to the south east of the RUSTED ISLES. Originally a simple sea fort built on a spit of rock in the south of the rusted Waters built by late GERICIANS, it was appropriated by the KORACHANI navy in c. 800 RM, after which it became a stronghold, with a small port where ships could resupply.

Lowering sea levels saw the fort lose its strategic importance but the fort was added to over the years, as the island it was built on grew. It became one of the largest modern naval forts in the INNER SEA, and it remains in use to this day, home to the Free-isles' main navy.

CATACHI: PIr. 'catachis'. Mor. Myr. His. One of the original Two-and-twenty MORTAL PEOPLES, and the children of the DEMIURGE DOPELLANICH. They are thought by most to now be functionally extinct, though memories of them live on in the rare congenital defect that results in GEMINATES. Indeed, it is only through corroborated records, including various sources of the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN that they are even known about today.

The ancient histories of ELYDEN describe them, much like their Demiurge parent, as dualistic beings. Twin births were the norm, somuch-so that their culture revolved around the sacred bond between siblings, who in many respects were regarded as a single person sundered between two bodies. Pair bonding – both platonic and sexual – between siblings was common. Conjoined births were less common, yet celebrated. Such siblings were considered to have been chosen by Dopellanich, an honour that bestowed a measure of prestige upon their families, which allowed them to be inducted into a prestigious priestly-caste if they sowished.

Conjoined twins usually took the form of a symmetrical four-armed body (one pair smaller than the other, below it, often considered vestigial and bedecked in jewels amongst the wealthy) and a single head with two faces, one facing left, the other right.

Contrary to twin births, single births were pitied and considered as weak. Such unfortunates tended to live hollow lives of ridicule, and were often forced into self-imposed exile, which often saw them travelling to human lands, where they could easily blend in due to their physical similarity. There were slight differences though – their craniums were slightly larger, their fingers long and delicate.

Little is known of their history, but they are considered to be extinct today, though the geminates of VARU are thought to be descended from unions between ancient catachis and humans. They are remembered now as expert artisans of mirrors and practitioners of a forgotten form of shaping, known as SPECULOMANCY, that used mirrors to trap a person' essence. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life: Sicthain.

CATACHIS: Set. Major city in the south of ARKOS^(1.) along the banks of the river THAUR. The city emerged from a tower there in c 3520 RM, following massed slave raids against the region, takin in refugees. It established close relations with SIRIPHAGOS in return for its rich platinum reserves, which ensured its continue growth.

Today has grown into a major political centre and has overtaken in the capital of DUN KHARR in importance, with many offices having been moved there. It is likely only a matter of time before the capital is moved to Catachis permanently. The presence of the SALT ROAD trade route through the city is brining trade and culture to the city, further cementing its position as the hub of life in Arkos (Pop. c. 192,000).

CATACHTHON: Lan. Myt. Leg. Ntn. Common name in NORTHERN SAMMAEA for the legendary buried city that is known in KORACHANI lands as SEPELITIA.

CATACLYSM, the: Sup. His. A historical calamity that occurred c 101 RM (or 91 RM by some accounts) in ancient KHAMID, destroying the majority of its southern Kingdom, most notably the rocky region known as the PHARANX. Known for its many sinkholes and large limestone caverns and subterranean lakes, which are believed to have collapsed in the event, leading to a major influx of water, flooding the regions now known as the BROKEN LANDS, the CARCASS, Pharanx, and the BOILING SEA in the process.

The resultant coastlines were reduced to molten rock in places, oozing into the newly-formed seas. The region known as the Boiling Sea became known for the hydrothermal vents that appeared in rents along the sea floor, giving it its name.

Though there is little proof, a powerful FIRMAMENTAL ritual is believed to be the cause of the disaster, and the HIERONÉSIMUS MARDUK the man behind it, though the details are unknown.

CATACLYSM OF KHAMID: see CATACLYSM, THE.

CATACOMBS OF COSTANTIA, the: Int. His. Rui. Leg. Ancient catacombs in the eastern wilderness of THE SURRACH, thought to date to the FOURTH AGE. They are expansive and rival most present-day metropolises in size, and many scholars believe they may have once supported a population in the hundreds of thousands.

The catacombs are split across multiple levels, each of which has its own ventilation shafts, flood pits, communal living quarters, private chambers, places of worship, and massive granaries and stores. Nothing is known of their history or what culture was responsible for their construction.

Today the catacombs are largely collapsed, with large portions walled up by CHEGRINTISH soldiers in the early FIFTH AGE, possibly to dissuade their use by bandits and outlaws. They are now considered one of the WONDERS OF THE ANCIENT WORLD.

CATACOMBS OF GHAUC: Rui. His. Str. Ancient catacombs in the south west of ROMOREA^(2.). The catacombs are ancient and dominated by a large vestibule in which stands an alabaster statue of a SPHINX. Little else is known about the structure, though it is believed that it was intended as the final repose of sphinxes.

CATADROMA: Set. City in the north of AHRISHEN, along the course of the river AVASTI. Its main industry is logging, though its people are also known as expert hunters and trappers (Pop. c. 14,800).

CATAFLAQUE: Ind. Set. Major city in the north of the UMBRA SOKHAR wastes, in the north of SAMMAEA. Like most cities in the Umbra Sokhar, it has a metropolitan populace, with HUMANS, ETHERI, PLAGI, and SHIE all calling it home. Despite this, it is known for its distrust of outsiders and xenophobia of foreigners. It operates numerous zinc and lead mines in the surrounding lands, which it trades with other regions, through official trade chargers that allow foreign merchants within its walls (Pop. c. 150,000).

CATAN: Mil. Str. Coastal fortress in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of CARIA^(4,), overlooking and guarding trade across the SEA OF BOKKEA.

CATARCH: Pol. Rulers of the city-state of ABBATOS in the east of SAMMAEA.

CATALLAST: Ind. Set. Settlement in the c of PARTHIS, to the east of the woodlands of BASTAR. Its main industry is purifying the waters of the river DEDEIMUN, and making mineral water (Pop. c. 8,100).

CATALLOR: Set. Small city in the prefecture of HOMREA in the c south of HOLOLACH^(1.). The city is known for its frequent expeditions into the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region of CATOTANAEL, with men wearing asbestos and lead-lined SOFTSUITS suits journeying into the tainted lands in search of Atramentally-adapted creatures known as PSILKA. The psilka are killed for their musk glands, which are used in a fragrance that's common to the area and exported across THE INNER SEA, where it is a famed perfume amongst nobility (Pop. c. 14,100).

CATAMA: Rvr. River in the c of TAMAR, and tributary of the river Mesisa.
CATAS: Geo. Mountain pass along the NAKARRA Mountains linking SIRIPHAGOS and the ARKOSIAN^(1.) trade-capital of CATACHIS. It sees a lot of traffic, most of it heading south and north along the SALT ROAD.

CATAZZ: Set. Settlement in the north east of ELEKHID. Its main industry is the mining of lapis (Pop. c. 4,000).

CATECHISM OF SHADOWS: Soc. Rel. Religious ritual practiced by faithful of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE whilst undergoing THE SHADOW MARCH, in a plaza outside the city of DACIA. The ritual takes place once a year in winter, and attracts many pilgrims.

CATECHUMEN: Soc. Rel. In the KORACHANI EMPIRE, those work-slaves and child-labourers who buy their freedom and seek a life within the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE and begin their studies of the imperial faith.

CATEPHAN Pol. Rnk. Politicians of HOAMM⁽¹⁾, who rule over a distinct tract of land throughout their 7-year tenure, after which they are given a modest farmstead and land to work themselves.

CATHA: Set. Small city in the far north east of PELASGOS, though it was considered part of VÂRR until the KORACHANI EMPIRE'S abandonment of the region. The city exists primarily as a stop along both the SHADOW MARCH, ferrying pilgrims across the SEA OF SPIRES from the river GORGELAN into LYRIDIA DHAI, as well as forming a stop along the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 11,000).

CATHAB: Set. Coastal city in the east of SURUTUR. It is home to a large military academy where unwanted children of the YALOLIAC REGIME are sent for training before being recruited by the BOTHA NTIGHA (Pop. c. 42,000).

CATHADEMACH: Plr. 'Cathademachi'. Ind. Rel. Church-owned workshops in nations that revere one of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, that sell fetishes, icons, idols and other church-sanctioned services, such as CATHADESMIN, EXECRATIONS, and saintly STAMPS to the faithful.

CATHADESM: Plr. 'Cathadesmin'. Soc. Rel. Thin lead sheets used in the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE in the KORACHANI EMPIRE on which protective prayers and curses are inscribed by GRAPHOMISSAS and which are sold in Church-owned workshops known as CATHADEMACHI and are a lucrative business in larger imperial cities.

The sheets are made of lead and the ink is derived from the tree galls of tainted trees that grow in the FOREST OF PSALMS.

Following the SUNDERING OF THE KORACHANI EMPIRE in 3705 RM and the subsequent emergence of the HIGH- and LOW-EMPIRES, cathadesmin lost popularity in the latter, while becoming more central to the Church in the north, where they were attached to the skin of sinners with hot wax.

CATHAGO: Pol. Set. Capital-city of LIDEA. Founded in 978 RM after the original capital, MENIAASOS was abandoned to the INTERREGES, it was constructed over the ruins of an ancient settlement, the weathered remains of a stepped pyramid at its centre, levelled, its crumbling sunbaked bricks recycled and used in the creation of the new city, which eschewed classical architecture in favour of its occupying KORACHANI designs, which required granite and metal to be imported from the north.

Throughout imperial rule Cathago saw a heavy IRON GUARD presence, something which became common throughout Lidea, with martial patricians and other military commanders (particularly LIACHANI natives) trained in its prestigious military academy and rising through the ranks and achieving important ranks in the city's administration, which eventually led to the kratocratic structure that still dominates its politics, even after the fall of the Korachani empire.

Today it forms a vital part in land trade in the north of SAMMAEA, and both the SALT ROAD and RED ROUTE pass through it, and it sees trade from across the INNER SEA REGION and beyond (Pop. c. 829,700 RM).

CATHANIS: Set. City in the c south of KARAKHAS, just outside the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region of TESCORA. Though it possesses a heavy DEMIURNE presence, who are responsible for the large DISCHARGER batteries that receive electricity from the many stations situated around Tescora, the city is more renowned for the large archaic SIPHON ENGINE at its centre and the vast numbers of pilgrims that travel there along THE SHADOW MARCH. The engine serves to maintain a semblance of normalcy to residents within the city walls, even as the more fervent of pilgrims (many of them CENOBITES) travel south to test their worthiness within the region of Tescora. It also forms a part of the SALT ROAD (Pop. c. 83,000).

CATHAVAND: Geo. Active volcano in the north west of NOAVATUR, along the eastern face of the OEIKITH Mountain.

CATHEDRAL, the: Int. Str. Bev. Cui. Famous tavern in the upper trade district of the city of KORACHAN. It is named after its spectacular baroque furnishings and architecture, which are akin to an ornate cathedral. Indeed, it was constructed in 2933 RM by the same craftsmen who were responsible for the creation of many churches and shrines that are scattered around the city. It is famous across the KORACHANI EMPIRE and is considered by many to be a shrine to good food and drink, and it is frequented by the nobility and FREEMEN alike. It has a large common area downstairs, and has private rooms in the two stories above, which are rented out for all types of functions and events.

CATHEDRAL OF ASHKERON: Rel. Str. Largest of the many holy buildings dedicated to ASHKERON in the CITY KINGDOMS OF THE HARÉSHK. Rebuilt in c. 3220 RM from the ruins of a castle felled almost three centuries earlier in civil uprising, it stands on a crest along the HRYG RIMS, where a small settlement grew at its feet by c. 3400 RM, catering mostly to pilgrims and the monks and clergy who reside in the cathedral and its many crypts and mountain chapels.

CATHEDRAL OF HATALA: Rel. Str. Major cathedral in the city of SATHA, in the south of ALMAGEST. It is home to the relic known as the HAMMER OF HERESIES.

CATHEDRAL OF IRON AND SHADOW: Rel. Str. Large cathedral located within the BASTION OF STEEL in KHADON, KORACHAN.

CATHEDRAL SHIP: Int. Rel. Veh. Large slave ships employed by the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE that ply the waters of ELYDEN'S seas.

The ships are named after the cathedrals that crown their backs, which are filled with EXOCRINES, missionaries and VOTARIES who proselytise to any they encounter, and who search for people to convert, taking those who don't as slaves for their churches. Many of these slaves are press ganged into service within the SHADOW MARCHES to fill out their ranks, with most eventually dying as PETITIONERS OF THE MACHINE.

CATHEDRAL OF ST. AALISSA OF THE MARTYRED: Rel. Str. Large cathedral in the city of KORACHAN, in KORACHAN. Construction began in 1983 RM and ended 231 years later in 2214 RM, based on designs by imperial architect VITHIMRIS HUNACH. It is famed for its brick dome of heptagonal cross-section. The dome is 490-ft. high and 210-ft. wide and is notable for its double shell, between which are staircases and secret rooms leading upwards to the uppermost cupola. In 2758 RM it was discovered that an Org. was meeting in secret within the dome and was apprehended by the iron guard, who guards it to this day.

CATHEDRAL OF ST. MALICHAR: see St. MALICHAR, CATHEDRAL

CATHEDRAL OF THE WOMB: Rel. Str. A large structure in the city of DASK in the south east of MHAROKK, which is as much a MANUFACTORY of the BIOMECHANISTS' art as it is a place of worship, particularly amongst the BIOPSISTS, PALINGENETISTS, and FLESHWRIGHTS that populate Mharokk

Above, it is dominated by a large dome, around which are situated dozens of smaller chapel-ATELIERS and crypt-workshops. Beneath it is a network of ancient laboratories, that form a labyrinthine network of niches, each of which is home to birthing vats and STEEL WOMBS of preserved examples of the CLONER'S and fleshwright's art. Local legend persists that the mysterious IRON ANGEL was constructed within the now-lost manufactories beneath the present-day cathedral.

CATHOLICON: m. Myt. His. Per. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, a feather-maned SCION of the DEMIURGE ARIMASPI, whose mother is the scion BADHUR. He is the half-brother of the scion DENDYDRIS.

He learnt at an early age that the natural world hid antidotes and panaceas that were of value to mortals, and he spent his days travelling through the fecund lands created by his father and beyond, searching for natural elements that had curative properties. He became a custodian of an ANCIENT LIBRARY that served as a repository of cures and panaceas that was later named after him, and which survived well into the FOURTH AGE, continuing his legacy.

He disappeared in the THIRD AGE while travelling in distant lands and was never heard of again. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

CATHOLICON, LIBRARY OF: Int. Leg. Rui. Ancient MORTAL—built repository of cures and antidotes collected from across ELYDEN over millennia of explorations.

Ancient legends maintained that the DEMIURGE ARIMASPI was responsible for creating a cure to every affliction, poison, or venom imaginable, hiding it somewhere in Elyden where mortals might be able to find it. These cures were often difficult to find, lying hidden in the blood of unassuming creatures, or the leaves of rare plants in distant lands.

Ancient mortals understood the value of these cures and established repositories where they could be stored, even if the associated ailments had not yet manifested. A notable example of such a repository was the Library of Catholicon, which was built by early mortals with the guidance of the SCION CATHOLICON, and which remains today in the far south east of HOGGOTHA ISZ, in the badlands of OGGDU, though it is ruined and few, if any, of its treasures remain of use to mortals. It is also surrounded by SERAPI settlements.

Contemporary accounts state that the Library was in use well into the FOURTH AGE, though is no longer mentioned after c. -400 RM, indicating that something happened to it before then.

CATHOSS: Set. City in the c of LIMOTH^(1,) to the south of the river ATROTHA^(1,). Like many cities in the region, it receives a large influx of people late in Summer, as farmers and other agriculturalists from around the river Atrotha move south to escape the flooding of the VOTH Valley. They spend the Autumn there before returning north.

The city was once a major source of iron in the days of the early years of Limothan culture in c. 1500 RM, though were spent by c. 1700 RM (Pop. c. 42,000).

CATHULSO: Geo. Region of geothermal activity in the c north west of ALMAGEST, surrounding the environs of the capital city ALMAGEST, south east of the SEA OF SEKHEM, and the north east of the STRAIT OF SAECULA. The region is known for its many bubbling mud springs and geysers.

CATLAS: Geo. large hook-shaped peninsula in the south of ACHRABAL, in the south west of SOUTHERN SAMMAEA. It is linked to the mainland by a narrow isthmus, along which the capital city ASARRAF is located.

CATOA: Lan. Pol. Set. Original name for the city of SKAROSIA, present-day capital of SKAROS.

CATON: Geo. Mountain-range in the c north west of the UMBRA SOKHAR wastes. It has been a source of lead and zinc for many centuries, and most such mines are operated by the city of CATAFLAQUE.

CATOPTRA: Set. Settlement in the c south west of AHRISHEN, along the southern shore of lake NAIDA (Pop. c. 7,400).

CATOPTROMANCY: Mys. A form of mysticism and occultism, where the practitioner is said to divine the unknown through the use of mirrors. For the most part such claims are thought to be the boasts of charlatans.

CATOTANAEL: Geo. Region of ATRAMENTAL TAINT in the prefecture of HOMREA in the c south of HOLOLACH^(1.). The region covers 2,500 square-miles and is populated by many small creatures that are relatively resistant to the taint, including PSILKAS: small fauna that are captured by the people of Hololach for their musk glands.

The region is categorised as a LEAST CONCERN by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

CATOUA: Sca. Equatorial sea in the south east of MENISCEA, just north east of the SEA OF ASEER. The sea is notable for its shallow shores and extreme tides. The sea was far larger in c. 1000 RM, reaching over 100-miles inland of its present coastline, though has since rapidly diminished due to ELYDEN'S waning sea levels. It is thought that if this trend continues, the sea may well disappear within a few hundred years.

CATOUH: Sea. Rui. Sunken ruins off the south eastern coast of ACHAA, in the SEA OF CATOUA. The remnants of the structures were first revealed by the retreat of the sea of Catoua's coastline between c. 1200 – 1700 RM are clearly very ancient, with faded, coral-encrusted cuneiform script that is indecipherable today. Their architecture is strange and their rocks, from which the structures are hewn, possessing a strange soapy texture.

CATRACHI: 1. Mys. Rnk. A caste of mystics emerging from SOLACHAN in c. 3600 RM. They were most widespread around the ruin known as the ALTAR OF HAAGENTI, establishing a ramshackle settlement there in c. 3680 RM, though traders arriving there in 3722 RM found the place deserted, all trace of the settlement gone. The Catrachi spread to outlying regions over the next decades, and records show the extent of their travels to include FARAVAR, DUNKHARR, RETHKA and SIRIPHAGOS, the latter of which saw them become permanent fixtures there in 3814 RM. They became most influential in eastern ARKOS⁽¹⁾, and by c. 3840 RM had re-settled the ruins of DUN SVARR, renaming the resultant citadel Catrachi.

The Catrachi are fervent worshippers of the SCION S'HITH, claiming to be his descendants, and they are not quiet in their goal of restoring life to its withered husk, though they reveal little secrets to outsiders, such as the location of the scions' body, if even they know such things.

2. Set. City-state appearing over the ruin of DUN SVARR in 3840 RM. The settlement was founded by immigrants from the region of SOLACHAN in southern SARASTRO. These immigrants are open in their claims of birthright; that they are direct descendants of the SCION S'HITH. By 3960 RM the city-state had become one of the most influential in the region, rising above the remnants of the old ARKOSIAN^(1.) nation (Pop. c. 11,200).

CATTLE PLAGUE, the: Med. Debilitating plague that struck CENTRAL LLACHATUL in c. 3750 RM that killed immense numbers of cattle and weakened many slaves and labourers (mostly those that lived in close contact with such fauna). The disease included massed haemorrhaging of infected blood.

The Cattle Plague is thought to be one of the main contributing factors to the longevity of the so-called Dark Age of the Korachani empire.

CAUAT: Geo. Badlands in the c of CUTH. They were once known for their limestone mines, but the region is now largely abandoned.

CAULAEM: Geo. Ash-dunes in the c of AZAZEM.

CAURTULL: Set. Small city in the c north of JURRAS^(2,) and home to a HARBINGER stronghold (Pop. c. 18,000).

CAUST: Set. Settlement in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of ALAMUT, known for its tanning and skilled leatherworkers (Pop. c. 6,700).

CAVAKHANA: Set. Small city in the south of KARAKHAS, where the elite JANISSARIES known as CAVAKHI are trained (Pop. c. 19,000).

CAVAKHI: Soc. Slave caste in KARAKHAS that serve a major part in the region's military, forming an elite cadre of IANISSARIES. They are trained in the city of CAVAKHANA.

CAVE OF CRYSTALS: see THAENILLA.

CAVE OF DREAMS: also 'Do Ssala id. Geo. Large cavern in the HARÉSHK, known for its spectacular floating menhir. The menhir actually a powerful LODESTONE that is held in place with heavy chains that are calcified solid. It is around 150-ft tall and is ancient, likely placed there by a FOURTH AGE culture. It is covered in FIRMAMENTAL runes that glow and shimmer with warmth and is situated above a powerful FIRMAMENTAL LEY marker.

Part of the cavern above the menhir collapsed, acting as a skylight that allows the rising sun of the summer solstice to strike the tip of the menhir.

Though its origins and purpose are unknown, it is venerated by a sect of local druids who understand its power.

CAVE OF WHISPERS: also 'Mima'. Geo. Small cave in the south west of IACIO, on the southern coast with the MYMEREAN SEA.

CAVERN-EPIC: Art. A form of AL AKHI literature common throughout the region of STOLAS. Hundreds upon hundreds of verses of the al akhi runic script are carved on hewn-cavern walls in a continuous dialogue, describing vignettes and parables from their myth and worship of MERKABH.

CAVERN OF SUSURRUS: Geo. Tec. Vast cavern in the east of CHEIRA.

There is only one passage that leads to the innermost depths of the cavern and it is long, winding and narrow, and many have died trying to reach the fabled inner chamber, which is alive with mechanical rumblings. The passage was widened in c. 3260 RM with explosives, allowing entry to the inner chamber, which is vast and filled with archaic TECHNARCANE machinery, still alive, still clicking and whirring, its purpose and source of power unknown.

So many have died trying to access the chamber and since its discovery that locals have come to regard the place as evil, cursed, or the MATERIAL manifestation of hell, and it is given a wide berth by most.

Since the passage was widened reports of disappearances and mysterious deaths in the wilderness surrounding the cavern have greatly increased, leading to speculation that there was life of some kind trapped in the depths.

CAVERNS OF REDEMPTION: Soc. In the PRISON CARCERI, a place of self-chastisement amongst the tribe of VORROPOHAIAH. Those who feel themselves unworthy of their DEMIURGE father chain themselves within the great arches of this chthonic prison, where they wait for 21 beats of the UNSEEN DRUMS. If they are still alive after that point, they are let free, considered redeemed in the eyes of their father. They go on to be influential advisors in their communities.

The caverns are thought to be located within the same chamber as the capital city of PANDAEMONIA, about 200-miles north of the city.

CAVIAR: Fau. Cui. The roe of certain fish. This is eaten by many cultures, though it is most common in the north of MENISCEA, particularly along its great rivers of CEHOPHELA, IMEAL and THANO, where it is a common food, and exported across ELYDEN as a delicacy at great profit.

CAVII: Set. City in the ZOHELETHI BASIN in the c south of PARTHIS. It is one of the largest centres of ENGINE RACING in Partis, with a large arena where FREEMEN from across the EMPIRE travel to see the top races compete (Pop. c. 41,500).

CAVIR: Set. Settlement in the west of TARTAK. Its main industry is the cultivation of cotton (Pop. c. 4,500).

CAVROT: 1. Pol. Geo. One of the nine kingdoms of ELALLIA, located in the south east of the nation.

2. Pol. Ser. Large city and capital of the kingdom of Cavrot⁽¹⁾ in the south west of ELALLIA (Pop. c. 124,200).

CAYIYTH: also 'ANCESTRAL TOKENS'. Arc. Soc. Monuments erected to mark the passing of the dead in MALAN. The tradition dates back to the precursor kingdom of AMILLAERE⁽²⁾ and is now found across all of Malan.

CAYIYTH NELACHALLA: Arc. Pol. A pair of colossal ANCESTRAL
TOKENS in the south east of the MEMNIDS, marking the far south western border of the HENDECARCHY of MYEIN with LONAR in western MALAN. The statues take the form of caryatids, their once MORTAL-like features weather-worn and discoloured.

CAZHA: Set. TAMARAN city with a bloody and rich FIRMAMENTAL history. By -350 RM the city rose near the mouth of the river KORNA, rapidly becoming ambitious, conducting much trade with LYRADEA and other foreign nations, which led to its suzerainty of Lyradea in -303 RM. It was destroyed in 102 RM following the CATACLYSM OF KHAMID though was repopulated by Tamarans 100-years later after the region was devastated by PLAGUE. In 811 RM the city became home to a caste of Firmamentists known as the CAZHANS, which came to rule Tamar, subjugating its people until their ousting in 1319 RM.

The city remained outgoing, becoming a centre of trade in Tamar rivalling ARRAGA (later ARAGOSH) in the north, avoiding ties with the KORACHANI EMPIRE where possible, though in c. 1525 RM the AVÉNETHI SANCTIFIED ORDERS OF THE INQUISITION marched into the city, confiscating what remained of its Firmamental lore. Though the diminishing of ELYDEN'S seas left it some miles from the coast, though thanks to its position along the river KORNA, remained a centre of trade in the region.

Following the SUNDERING OF THE SHADOW, Cazha subjugated satellite towns, becoming an autocratic city-state, extremely protective of its lands, opposing of its Tamaran and LYRIDIAN neighbours (Pop. c. 41,000).

CAZHANS: Sup. Rnk. FIRMAMENTAL caste that originated in THAMAR with the discovery of ancient Firmamental texts in c. 750 RM. They returned to the city of CAZHA, the texts and artefacts were examined by the scholars of the city, leading to the rise of the Cazhans in 810 RM.

They implemented their knowledge in agriculture, though records do exist of them using the Firmament to aid them in battle. They first served as advisors to the Thamaran government in 811 RM and it is believed that over the coming decades they become the true power of the nation, controlling the nation in the form of the LORD-AGRICULTURALISTS. In 843 RM they deposed the Thamaran meritocrats, who openly came to serve them and they became ruthless leaders. In c. 900 RM they began sending emissaries west and north, where select individuals were taught their Firmamental secrets in return for wealth and political rights.

Their stronghold in the city of Cazha was attacked by LYRIDIA in 1103 RM. This led to the populace rising against them in 1108 RM. The following centuries were dominated by civil strife and unease with outlawed partisan groups dedicated to destroying the Cazhans; a feat they finally managed in 1319 RM, when the last of the Cazhans was killed (though rumours abound that some survived after that time, fleeing to the west and north). This was the dawn of a new age, after which the region became known as TAMAR.

CAZLA: Set. Coastal city in the c south of IAISHA (Pop. c. 80,000).

C'DATA: lit. 'the Womb of Life'. Lak. Lake in the east of N'RAKH. The lake is positioned at the crossroads of four nations (N'rakh, BARATHEA^(1.), J'THANA, and ARKOS^(1.)), and as such, it sees much traffic, particularly across the lake to the river FALX, which ultimately leads it to the INNER SEA.

C'DRANA: Mil. Str. N'RAKHI coastal fortress on a peninsula in lake C'DATA, south east of THE QUEEN'S CITY.

CECROPIA: Geo. Region in the PRISON CARCERI, beneath thought to lie beneath the north west of AHRISHEN. The region is known for its UNSEEN DRUMS, which can sometimes be heard in the surface world on otherwise-silent nights.

CEDANTUQ: 1. Rui. Abandoned caravanserai in the far south east of KHARKHARADONTIS, close to the border with ABACARDAT

2. Rui. Fortified settlement just outside the eponymous ruined caravanserai, in the far south east of KHARKHARADONTIS. The settlement is insular and not as open to trade as the old caravanserai war, and it is thought that the caravanserai was destroyed by forces sent forth from the settlement and its environs, who now prey on trade between the region of FURAKISH and ABACARDAT.

CEDAR GATE, the: Arc. Gateway leading into the GREATTOWN of DUARIAHAHN, in the c east of TEMUJA. The gate is gilded in bas-carved bronze reliefs detailing this history of the region.

CEEROPIA: 1. His. Ntn. FOURTH AGE nation in the north of LLACHATUL, in what are now SABIA, the north east of the DESOLATION OF ASTUDAN, the south west of PERGOST, and parts of KASPIA. Its ruins dot the wilderness of those areas, particularly the area of the Desolation known as the BONEFIELDS, and many cities and fortresses have been built over their ruins, in many cases, using the remaining masonry in their construction – such as the Pergosti fortress of DHAMA IKH.

The later FOURTH AGE nations of ELDRIA and SAKKHRIA rose from its ashes, eventually giving way to Kaspia and Sabia.

2. Rui. Expansive ruins covering the northern reaches of the DESOLATION OF ASTUDAN. The ruins are half-buried in the permafrost north of the canyons of IGGSOTHOS, with only the crumbling peaks and minarets of the largest structures still visible.

CEEROPIAN: His. Lan. Now-extinct language spoken by the people of the early FOURTH AGE nation of CEEROPIA. See Vol II: Languages. CEGANE: also 'the Sanctuary States'. Dem. 'Ceganan'. Ntn. Nation in the south west of SAMMAEA, to the west of the SEA OF ADAMASTOR^(1.). It is of a temperate, cool climate, and is humid in the north, with rainy winters and mild summers. Its northernmost territories are rocky and its southern lands are forested, known for their diversity of life.

Its common name, the Sanctuary States, dated back the aftermath of the fragmentation of the NEPHINE empire (that occupied the north and centre of the extant SYCHTAN PREFECTURES and most of Cegane) in c. 3180 RM. The result of a brutal civil war that followed the assassination of its ruling household, it saw many ethnic groups that had been protected by the old imperial house persecuted and slaughtered. Those who could fled to the rocky north, where they established allied polities that were able to defend themselves against the chaos of the war, later solidifying into the so-called Sanctuary States in c. 3300 RM, which would themselves form the united union of Cegane in 3485 RM.

It is known for its honey and superstitious people. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

CEHOPHELA: Dem. 'Cehophelan'. Ntn. Expansive inland empire dominating the c and west of the continent of MENISCEA. It is ruled by the OTHERWORLDER SAPHAHAKH who in c. 2845 RM completed their century-long unification of the nine nations of Cehophela, which had emerged in c. 1900 RM following the death of the TAQUELLANE EMPEROR and the resultant collapse of his earlier empire. A long period of war followed within the region of JOAPHASAR, which ended in 2921 RM with its destruction during a botched attempt at HEXCRAFT against Cehophela, which would eventually absorb its ruined territories, which now make up its south western-most extent.

The nation was once considered a major world superpower, though the past centuries have seen its power wane, with its grip on many of its far territories loosening in recent decades. The south west of the nation maintains a strong traditional FIRMAMENTAL tradition, which was brought there by MIRALULI refugees fleeing persecution from OSSIEL. Today, its eastern territories lie on the ruin of the FOURTH AGE empire of JORINDHIA.

Its people follow the AQQARADIAN religion, which was introduced by Saphahakh in c. 2500 RM and which supplanted the older animistic religion of SEPU, which survives to this day amongst scattered rural communities largely within the LOWER CITIES. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

CEHOPHELAN PLATEAU: Geo. Major geographical feature dominating the c south of CEHOPHELA and the north of SEDALLIA, known for its highland and rocky regions. It is sparsely inhabited though is believed to be rich in mineral resources so small industries can be found peppered across its yest expanse.

CELAENA: 1. Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region in c north west of CYHLAGHARR, covering some 2,600-square-miles. Any mortal, even the hardy OGHURS of Cyhlagharr, that wanders within the region grows sick over a period of a few hours, its body growing weak and rapidly degenerating, withering and dying if exposed for less than a day.

The land in this region is riddled with hollows; the rock reduced to brittle duststone beneath which are reserves of UMBRA that seep out, further tainting the region. The skies above Celaena are dark and peppered by violet lightning that poisons the air.

The region is categorised as $\underline{\text{EXTREMELY DANGEROUS}}$ by the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES}}.$

2. Rvr. River just south of the above $region^{(1.)}$ in the c north west of $\underline{CYHLAGHARR}$, flowing for 400-miles north west from sources in the $\underline{GRCAUTHAIRM}$ massif, emptying into the north east of the \underline{SEA} OF $\underline{IMERRIL}$.

CELEBI: (tfelebi) Soc. Rnk. Noble title in TETHYSIA, roughly equivalent to that of PATRICIAN in the west. The rank has religious and royal connotations, and most Celebi families gained their rank by appointment of the Sovereign, with their descendants allowed by ancient dictate to bear the title. This can be stripped at the discretion of the sovereign or by the OFFICE OF THE PRIME MINISTER, though such measures are usually taken in extreme circumstances.

CELEBRANTS OF THE FLAME: see AZERITES.

CELEBRANTS OF THE THRONES: Rel. Org. A sect of fanatics within the KORACHANI EMPIRE obsessed with the twofold Thrones of the Empire, bordering on idolatry. While the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE rarely admonished idolatrous beliefs, those who put more faith in the Thrones than those who sat upon them were excommunicated from the Church in 3812 RM, those who remained losing favour and influence.

CELEHAOS: Set. Small city in the c west of GNOTH, along the eastern shore of lake IAMTI. GIGANRI merchants travelling along the GNOTHI ROAD pass through the city during their circuit of Gnoth (Pop. c. 14,000).

CELESTIAL ANCIENTS: Myt. His. In the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN, the first OTHERWORLDERS observed during the early years of the FOURTH AGE. Almost all tales and recordings of the Celestial Ancients describe them as the: 'night sky given form, their skins shimmering with starlight'. See Vol IV: The Afterlife and the Spirit.

CELESTIAL HEARTH: Myr. His. Astral location where the DEMIURGES are said to have forged their creations before ELYDEN was created. This is thought to be within the constellation of NEPHILIA. See Vol IV: the Mythologia Elyden.

CELESTIAL WRAITH: see EMPYREAN SPECTRE.

CELICEA: Set. City in the c of EREBETH known for its OLIVE oil production (Pop. c. 45,500).

CELICIA: Rui. Ancient ruined temple in the forests of northern CHLORIS in the south west of MALAN, thought to date back to the ancient SEITHALAN empire. It was dedicated to Siella, and once formed an important part of Seithalan culture, though is now crumbled and largely overgrown, ignored by the people of Chloris.

CELUREA: Lake in the east of the HENDECARCHY of AMILLAERE^(1.) in MALAN, forming a part of the course of the Laul Eglea river. It has hundreds of sources from around the NIYAN, FATHMMA, and CARCAENT Mountains, which account for its size.

CELUREISM: Sup. A SPHERE of FIRMAMENTISM, whose SHAPERS are able to manipulate weather I various ways. It is roughly analogous with the ATRAMENTAL TEMPESTARII. See Vol IV: The Materia Omna: Spheres and Types of Shaping.

CENAYO: Set. Major city in the c of IMEAL. It is a popular stop along the SOVEREIGNS' ROAD trade route (Pop. c. 75,000).

CENGUISSE: Dem. 'Cenguissan'. Ntn. Nation in the south west of SAMMAEA, overlooking the SEA OF KRIHIEK. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

CENLIS: Set. Settlement in the nation of IRUGNA^(2.). Its main industry is the mining of rare fire agates, many of which are turned into jewellery in the city of ITORATRA, to the north (Pop. c. 7,200).

CENOBITE: Rel. Org. Rnk. In the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, a caste of devoted acolytes who seek out ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED lands to test their devotion to the UNDYING MACHINE. Most cenobites become corrupted by such exposure, and are deemed unclean by the church, sentenced to a life of solitude in crossroad chapels across the empire as a form of castigation. These chapels are known as Cenobite NICHE CHAPELS

Those who survive the corrupting experiences unharmed become known as MINCORRUPTIBLES, and are believed to be blessed by the Undying Machine with a power over the ATRAMENTA that few could match. Such individuals hold political strength quite different to anything else in the Korachani empire and many become powerful demagogues to the masses or influential members of the ARÂTHUAHI SANCTIFIED ORDERS OF THE INQUISITION. Others choose to volunteer in the DIACONIA, CENOTAPH TO THE DIASPORA: Mil. Arc. Monument in c. Sarastro, just north of lake Ahi Eh. It commemorates those slain and exiled during the DIASPORA OF EXIS that took place between 2783 – 2974 RM following the cities of HAGRADEA and MORULAURGO separated from Sarastro, forming the HOLY STATE OF HAGRADEA.

CENOTAPH TO ELYDEN: Int. Str. Massive domed structure a few miles north east of DEOCHAN in KORACHAN. Its exterior is brutalist and dominates the skyline for miles around and is visible from the city of Deochan, and is dominated by gigantic steep steps that lead to a copperclad hemisphere, now stained green from verdigris. Its interior is more impressive, being a perfect hollow sphere, the surface of which is painted in an accurate depiction of ELYDEN'S surface. The globe is painted with ATRAMENTALLY-sensitive pigments that allow SHAPERS to leave marks on it, which is useful for tracking the movements of armies, or tracking relations between nations. A large stepped platform rises from a small tunnel at the base of the sphere, leading to the centre of sphere, affording a perfect viewpoint of the structure's interior.

Designed by the HALFBLOOD architect SHADRACH OF ALBEGNO, the cenotaph was intended to show people the slow degeneration of ELYDEN over time, though was appropriated by the government upon its completion in 698 RM for use in council meetings where it is often visited by THE SEVEN. It is otherwise open to the public by appointment against a donation, where it has become a popular destination to PATRICIANS and FREEMEN.

CENOTAPH OF THE LAST SPHINX: Mil. Arc. Memorial and tomb in c southern VENTHIR, in the scrub forest of ASEON. It dates back to the FOURTH AGE and was erected by surviving allies of the fallen SPHINXES at whose side they fought. The monument takes the form of a stylised sphinx, though it is now damaged and weathered, its features indistinct and covered in vines and mosses.

CENOTAPH OF SO-SKAR: Arc. Large triumphal arch in the north of VAALK overlooking the BAY OF SALTRA. It is named for a venerated general whose exploits are commemorated in bronze inscriptions on the arch.

CENSORS, BUREAU OF: Pol. Org. Large agency in the KORACHANI EMPIRE, the purpose of which is to seek out dissenters, outlawed cults and other heretical groups that might be of danger to the stability of the empire, and to censor material that may be considered sensitive to the imperial cause. Originating in c. 940 RM, one of its first major tasks was to quell the distribution of the book known as THANICA'S GUIDE TO HORRORS, which described various ONEIRIC CREATURES encountered in ber travels

Towards the latter days of the fourth millennium RM, the organisation became embroiled with the many heretical groups that came to plague imperial cities, most notably the Church of the Discordant Deity, and it now works closely with the Moréhan and Arâthuahi Orders of the Sanctified Inquisition who are called in to deal with matters of a more martial nature.

CENTRAL BOTANICAL GARDENS: Flo. Str. Large rooftop glasshouse dominating the penthouses of the CENTRAL REPUBLIC HOUSE on the central peninsula in the CITY OF ALMAGEST. The gardens are world-famous, and are known for their SOCIETY of revered botanist-explorers who secure flora and fauna from across ELYDEN in the name of the Gardens.

Portions of the glasshouse where tropical flora are displayed are warmed through an intricate system of geothermal piping.

CENTRAL HEMISHPERE: Car. Term common around INNER SEA REGION, representative of the classical hub of civilisation, around the Inner Sea and surrounding regions. Though it uses the term hemisphere, the region denoted by the term does not translate to a full hemisphere. Conversely, in this context, the remainder of ELYDEN, known as the FAR HEMISPHERE constitutes well over half of Elydens' territories.

CENTRAL LLACHATUL: see LLACHATUL, CENTRAL.

CENTRAL LLACHATULI ALLIANCE, the: Pol. Org. Intergovernmental alliance made up of some free CENTRAL LLACHATULI nations, mostly intended as a means of countering the predations of KORACHANI states that bordered them to the west, along the INNER SEA. The Alliance was created in 3804 RM in response to religious CRUSADES against so-called free nations in central LLACHATUL, including the devastating SCOURGE OF WITCHES, which between 3714 – 3811 RM led to the deaths of thousands of FIRMAMENTISTS and many more innocents.

The Alliance was first proposed by AHRISHENI politicians decades before the Scourge of Witches prompted its eventual creation, but due to inaction and lack of a uniting event, nothing came of it immediately. The Alliance was formed during a meeting of diplomats from Ahrishen, THE HARÉSHK, and SAUA, who met in the city of MAHSERTH in 3804 RM, to discuss how the incessant KORACHANI attacks could be quelled. They agreed on enacting defence treaties, trade relations and other political gestures that serves to empower them against attentions from the west. Other nations would join and leave over the years and the present Alliance is made up of the Ahrishen, MALAN, Saua, TEMUJA, VIRAHAN, with the recent abandonment of the alliance by the Haréshk causing concern across the remaining members.

CENTRAL SAMMAEA: see NORTHERN SAMMAEA.

CENTURY PLANT: Flo. These strange plants are an extremely rare variety of AGAVE native to the dry plains of HAMSHEN and HALOLAN in the north west of VENTHIR, though which have over the past millennia found their way across THE INNER SEA to other lands with similar terrains and climates, most notably KARAKHAS (where a heady perfume called ASSIR is made from them) and lands to the north west of the SEA OF BYSSOS. Like all agaves, the century plant has large, thick and fleshy leaves, which are good for storing considerable quantities of water. They are spiked, particularly at the tips, and grow to a mass of about 10 feet in a large cluster around the base of the plant. The century plant flowers once every 70 – 90 years (despite its name). Before it flowers, a large thin stalk grows upwards, often reaching heights of 50-ft. The flower, which contains male and female reproductive organs grows on the top of this stalk and is usually a brilliant fiery red, tipped with yellow.

Due to their relative rarity and slow speed of reproduction, century plant flowers can fetch very high prices. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

CENTRAL REPUBLIC HOUSE: Str. A major structure on the central peninsula in the CITY OF ALMAGEST.

CEPHANIA: See. Small city in the c. of AQUARIIA, along the course of the river ISARRA. It is known for its rice production (Pop. c. 18,000).

CEPHAS: Geo. Mountain-chain in the east of NAARETH, forming an extension of the IROTHA Mountains.

CEPHYLIA: Soc. Set. Tribal 'conurbation' in the west of PNESSA. Its people practice a form of facial scarification and employ trepanning to release their spirits, which are then said to accompany then as guardian spirits, akin to FAMILIARS. The city once formed part of the NOAVATURI TRAIL, a major trade-route that once linked the nation of NOAVATUR with KARAKHAS, though by c. 1800 RM growing ATRAMENTAL TAINT in the UMBRA SOKHAR led to the, which until then had relied on passing trade, to wane in size (Pop. unknown).

CERATOA: Geo. Region in the far southern coast of SAMMAEA, located within the SYCHTAN PREFECTURES. It is wracked by harsh coastal winds blown in from the SEA OF SAMMAIDU. The region's bare metamorphic rock has been hewn by the winds over many centuries into a polished landscape of seamless shards and ledges. No significant flora or fauna exist here

CEREN SIBALLA: (B. 3928) Pol. Current queen of MHAROKK to whom the 49 PREFECTS are answerable to.

CERINTH: Soc. Pol. PATRICIAN HOUSE with holdings in DURCHAA and VALBAR. It was once a part of the ATRAAGOH SYNDICATE, which operated extensive mines in the region of ERIHAAS. The mines fell silent in c. 3945 RM after copper in the area reserves dwindled. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

CERMAIT: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the far south west of Tisara, guarding the valley leading into northern TETHYSIA. It is home to a legion of TUATHA HADRI, who patrol the long border shared between the two nations.

CERUSE: Soc. Skin-whitening cosmetic primarily made up of water, vinegar and lead. It is in demand amongst the nobility around the INNER SEA. ATARAXIA is a major producer.

CERULEA: Lak. Major lake dominating the east of the HENDECARCHY of AMILLAERE^(1.) in the c of MALAN. It is surrounded by the NORABOSK, and is said to be ancestral home of the SPHINXES. Ancient sphinx bones are often dredged up from its depths, and it is not uncommon for municipal structures to display them proudly. The lake features heavily in the myths and folklore of the ancient kingdom of Amillaere^(2.) and is well-known in the rest of Malan.

CERUNEREA: Mys. Sca. Forking sea in the east of EASTERN MENISCEA, bordered to the south by EASTERN LARISH, the west by ENDUI, and the north by TAHOMIA. It is known for its quicksilver-like sheen and faint FIRMAMENTAL properties, and it is distilled for use in Firmamental industries, particularly in Tahomia.

CERVILL: Str. Bastion along the northern walls of UCHRON, in the city-kingdom of DANILAT, in the HARÉSHK.

CERYNIAN DYNASTY: see KOMMEAN DYNASTIES.

CESASHIB: Rvr. River in the west of AETHIOS, flowing east for 190-miles from the east of the ANCHIAUS Mountains before meeting its parent, the river SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾.

CESSILA: Set. Settlement in the north of THE SURRACH, close to the border with EREBETH (Pop. c. 6,000).

CESTOID: Fau. Foul worm-like beings that inhabit and 'rule' the tainted region known as the ATRAMENTAL RICTUS in the c north west of KHARKHARADONTIS. Cestoids take the form of large flat-worms, around 5 – 8-ft. long, with gaping mouths and spindly arms that end in serrated bifurcated digits, comparably to the forefinger and thumb of most mortals. Little is known of them, and our only present-day knowledge comes from a single KORACHANI-led expedition into the Atramental Rictus that took place in 3331 RM, which documented them and their 'city', VERMICULA, at a distance. It is unknown if they can truly be considered to be mortals, or if they have any discernible culture.

CESTUS: Set. Coastal city in the south west of THE SURRACH. It is known for its beloved SHIE queen, who was once an acclaimed gladiator from the city of DAYLAM, who won her freedom and united outcasts who followed her, eventually funding the city of Cestus in c. 3820 RM. It has grown steadily since then and, though the queen has lain down her weapons, she still commands great respect from her followers (Pop. c. 35,900).

CESURA: Set. Coastal settlement in the north of VENTHIR, overlooking the BAY OF SURAR, in the DARK SEA. The settlement is relatively small and recent, funded by missionaries of the CULT OF THE SPHINX, in c. 3850 RM, which maintains a large shrine in the region (Pop. c. 5,200).

CETECIA: Geo. Headland in the north east of PARTHIS, and its eastern-most point. The region is covered in terraced fields, frequent sparse copses, and rocky terrain.

CETECIS: Set. Metropolitan city in the north east of PARTHIS. The city was the site of the fall of an old dynasty, cultural parts of which remain alive to this day, setting it apart from much of Parthisan culture (Pop. c. 28,000).

CETHLEN: Set. Coastal settlement in the south east of CALBIA^(1.) (Pop. c. 4,800).

CH'TASSA: Set. Settlement in the north of N'RAKH, along the course of the river SICERAN in the marshes of N'KHOSSA. It is one of the few outgoing N'rakhi cities and, alongside DANFUSA, allows foreign trade into LIDEA via the SALT ROAD, even guarding many caravans across the north east as they head to and from the border with Lidea and the city of PERESIA (Pop. c. 17,500).

CHA HO: Mil. Str. Fortress in the c south of SAUA overlooking the mouth of the river TAKRE and the border with the HENDECARCHY of LONAR, in MALAN.

CHAALIAL: Set. Settlement in the west of LAASKHA, appearing there in c. 3650 RM following the disappearance of the bay of ASHARUTH. It became a prominent city with the slow migration of THE SHADOW MARCH west towards the new coastline and remains now as a city that supports the hundreds of thousands of pilgrims that pass through it every year, and its harbours receive all manner of goods that they might need (Pop. c. 15,000).

CHACAKOT: Set. Settlement in the south east of RHEA. It is known for its cotton production (Pop. c. 4,000).

CHACEZASH: f. Mys. Per. (B. 3958 RM) KHURAURI esotericist born into old wealth who spent her days curating a personal library of esoteric and mystical writings, which culminated in c. 3990 RM with her acquisition of the writings of the mystic ORCI NARAIMAN who over two centuries earlier had founded the ANAGOGIC ORDER OF ZABRASSANA. She studied his writings and learnt of a building Naraiman had designed in the city of TUALAR. She moved into the expansive penthouse suite, relocating her library there. She would disappear into obscurity over the next few years buying what fragments of his writings she could from collectors across the INNER SEA REGION, which she meticulously reassembled, studying them at length. Little is known of her fate, and some now believe that she is dead.

CHACTHORNYS: Geo. Rough, inhospitable mountain-range around 500-miles long that acts as a natural border between AZAZEM and THE OLD FOREST.

CHADARATI: (B. 3938 RM) Pol. Present MAHANTKHAJ of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES.

CHADBHARR: Mil. Str. Major fort in the far south of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES and centre of the nations' southern military forces.

CHAHACH: Rui. Ind. Massive ruined open-cast mine in the c of PERGOST. It is abandoned and now reclaimed by nature; its half-mile deep pit filled with brilliant blue water.

CHAHINAN: Set. Settlement in the c east of NOAVATUR (Pop. c. 4,800).

CHAI IM: Set. Settlement in the c north of LIDEA. Its main industry is the cultivation and exportation of spices (Pop. c. 5,600).

CHAIN OF CASSIS, the: Str. Monolithic ADAMANTINE chain, each link 30-ft wide, south of CASSIS in the south of LAASKHA, running across the peninsula of RAAHEN for some 70-miles. The rusted chain dates back as far as any records mention, and is likely a relic from the times of the DEMIURGES, its purpose unknown.

CHAIN MASK, the: Soc. Rel. Veils made of delicate chainmail worn by the priests of the MACHINEHEAD in DURCHAA^(1.).

CHAINED GOD, the: Rel. Religion prevalent in the nation of SEDISIA in the south west of WESTERN LLACHATUL, though which throughout history has been worshipped by various people, including VETHRANDA (present OTINTH), amongst others.

The deity is thought to be a corruption of the UNDYING MACHINE, that came to be worshipped by mercenaries in the south west of Llachatul in c. 1500. Originating as the TEMPLARS OF THE MACHINE, they were the army of the HOLY LAND OF RACHANAEL – a colony established by the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE in what is today Otinth in 777 RM – and following the expulsion of the Holy Land of Rachanael from the region in 1241 RM some of the templars remained behind, becoming mercenaries, selling their services in the west of Llachatul. A particular sect amongst them turned to the worship of a corrupted depiction of the Undying Machine in their desperation. By c. 1500 this corrupted idol, which they carried with them in their travels, became known as the Chained God, and its worship slowly spread via trade to Vethranda, gaining a foothold as a mystery cult in various areas.

Belief in the Chained God became the state religion of Vethranda after three years of religious turmoil that ended only in 1645 RM. The Church of the Chained God brought a power shift, and the monarchy of Vethranda became puppets of the religious leaders, who in 1662 RM took full control, leading to the death of the royal family and the rise of the theocracy. In 1911 the city state of HAII deposed the ruling theocracy in the east of Vethranda and would go on to found the nation of Sedisia some decades later. Though the Theocracy of the Chained God was no longer in control of Sedisia, the religion remained strong, and while it was eradicated from Vethranda (later Otinth), it continues to be worshipped in Sedisia.

The dogma of the Church of the Chained God is nihilistic and maintains an entropic view of materialism, which is shunned. Its worshippers have a bleak outlook on life and are seen as sour by outsiders. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

CHAIRMAN: Soc. Rnk. Name given to bearers of sedan chairs and litters in the region of northern SAMMAEA to the south of the SEA OF ORRIDA, including the VESPERTINE LEAGUE, KHULL, the TEMPLAR STATES, KARGAMA, ESHIR^(2.), and parts of the TATAR, KAZZAR^(2.), and the BARRIER LANDS.

Members form a singular caste that is recognised across all the above states, and though they are looked down upon by most that use their services, they are considered a respected part of their societies and are not considered part of the lower classes. They maintain links with each - other across all these territories, making them very knowledgeable on the region in which they operate.

- CHAKAT: Set. Small city in the west of TARTAK (Pop. c. 14,000).
- CHAKIN OTT: Rvr. River in the west of BANT, flowing south for 280-miles from sources in the western CARCHEMISHI MOUNTAINS^(2.), before meeting the coast at the FLAMING SEA.
- CHALARAD: Set. Major coastal city in the south east of AKACHA, overlooking the BAY OF LAIKHE, in SOUTHERN SAMMAEA. It is known for its large port and drydocks (Pop. c. 120,000).
- CHALCEDIZ: Set. Major city in the nation of IRUGNA⁽²⁾, along the course of the river MAIOSHAR (Pop. c. 92,000).
- GHALTEANS: Mys. Rnk. BRORI^(1,1) itinerant mystics, who inherited an ancient tradition of mysticism and MAGICKAL teachings from ancient ancestors. They call no one land home and instead wander across their island-continent, never truly welcomed by anyone, who begrudgingly use their services during funereal rituals and in upkeeping various other traditions.
 - Some scholars believe that their ancestral lands were in what is now SABOMOR, as many Ghalteans stop there in ancient ruins to lay wreaths of baubles they collect in their travels.
- CHALDEA, GATES OF: His. Str. Pylon-gate supposedly liberated from the AMANTHEANS by the HERO OF A THOUSAND BATTLES, built in the western cliffs of the CARTIGA Mountain, overlooking the plains of ESTIA in LYRIDIA.
- CHALICATA: Geo. Low ancient mountains in the south of WESTERN SAMMAEA, serving as a border between LIEVTHRA in the north, and MACELLARIA and EPHATTA in the south. The southern-face of the mountains are entangled by a complex and ancient region of ATRAMENTAL CORRUPTION known as the GERASHEND WEBS.
- CHAMAR: Set. Small isolated city in the west of VÂRR, in the hills in the northern face of the ADALLA Mountains. Were it not for its bountiful subterranean aquifers, the settlement would not exist, though it has become one of the major producers of quality limestone in Vârr. The stone blocks are moved south along the river ADARIA (Pop. c. 10,400).
- CHAMBER OF AGONIES: Geo. Expansive hollow in the PRISON CARCERI, beneath the western-coast of HOLOLACH^(1.) in LLACHATUL. The chamber is noted in 'AN ABRIDGED LEXICON OF THE DEPTHS: BEING IN PART A GUIDE TO THE MADDENING ABYSS as being a place where ROPOHAII inquisitors would torture dissenters and heretics, their flayed skins hung up from stalactites and root-frames, fluttering in the sourceless winds of Carceri.
- CHAMBER OF CHAINS: Geo. Large cavern in the PRISON CARCERI, believed to lie beneath THE SURRACH, in the north west of SAMMAEA. It is known for its multitude of chains, some gigantic, each link the size of a house; and others minute, barely indistinguishable from thread. They hang down from the hidden ceiling and sway gently in a sourceless breeze.
- CHAMBER OF DIRGES: Mus. Geo. Expansive hollow in the upper reaches of the PRISON CARCERI, beneath the north of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. Within are large choirs of dirgists who sing constantly. Their singing echoes throughout the chamber, causing it to reverberate loudly. The sound carries for hundreds of miles across the tunnels, and is used as a navigational tool by ropohaii merchants and travellers.
- CHAMBER OF LAMENTS: Geo. Expanse in the far south west of the PRISON CARCERI, and one of its southern-most recorded reaches. The chamber is home to the LIBRARY OF HADHUR NEB.
- CHAMBER OF OFFERINGS: Geo. Expanse within the PRISON CARCERI, located beneath the northern-most reaches of the UMBRA SOKHAR, in the north of SAMMAEA. The cave is noted for its large number of temples, where offerings to VORROPOHAIAH and various scions and saints of the ROPOHAII religion are made by pilgrims.
- CHAMBER OF THE PLAINSLEAGUE: Pol. Str. Main structure of the governing body in TEMUJA, in the GREATTOWN of DUARIAHAHN. It is - known as the tomb of $\underline{\text{MAGHORA}}$, the uniter of the Temujan tribes from c. 600 RM.

- CHAMBER OF ROOTS: Geo. Large chamber in the PRISON CARCERI, said to reach from the north west of KORACHAN all the way through the OLD FOREST, close to the border with ALMAGEST. The chamber is famed for accounts of those who have travelled within it, where gigantic roots, larger than the trunks of most trees are said to hang down from a ceiling that is beyond sight.
- CHAMBER OF SOL ERRAMI: Geo. Ancient labyrinthine burial chamber located in the c east of TULURKRYPH^(2.), in the south of WESTERN MENISCEA. Ancient accounts described it as a veritable treasure-trove of riches, though by the time of its rediscovery in c. 2234 RM it had been emptied, with only the sole preserved body of the IMPERATOR TIZOPHON remaining.
- CHAMBER OF SOLITUDE: Geo. Major hollow in the far north east of the PRISON CARCERI, beneath the region of PERGOST. Many caverns are said to lead into this region of Carceri, which is very close to the surface.
- CHAMBER OF SORROWS: Geo. Immense chamber in the PRISON CARCERI, beneath the INNER SEA and the north of VAALK. It is home to the monolithic BRIDGE OF DESPAIR, which is said to be 200-miles long, spanning a near bottomless depth.
- CHAMBER OF STARS: Geo. Expansive hollow in the PRISON CARCERI, beneath the region of HATHAMOTH, in the far north of KHARKHARADONTIS, south of the border with the UMBRA SOKHAR. The cavern is relatively close to the surface, and is noted for its many shafts and tunnels that lead to it the surface, from which it gets its name.
- CHAMBER OF TEARS: Geo. Large expanse in the PRISON CARCERI, said to lie beneath the caverns of AKER in the far east of RAONGEN^(2.), close to the border with GNOTH. It is purported to be home to one of the largest underground seas of Carceri, which it believed to be fed by the waters of the river PISHONA.
- CHAMBERS OF THE DISHONOURED: Rui. Arc. Large vestibule hewn into the western foothills of the BAND^(2.) Mountains in the east of KOLCHIS. It is magnificently scaled, making some scholars question if it was made by humans. It is flanked by two columns of SPHINX-like statues, most of them weathered and broken beyond recognition, and leads to three steep hewn tunnels that lead to chthonic temples, each illuminated by a single narrow shaft that only lets in direct sunlight one day of the year thought to have been the summer solstice when it was built, but which has since changed due to the passing of time.
 - The structure was once claimed by an insurgent general during a time of political uncertainty in c. 3420 RM, but has since been abandoned, and wealth it may once have contained looted long ago.
- CHAMUEL: Set. Fortified coastal city in the south west of the HENDECARCHY of CHLORIS in the south of MALAN. It forms a part of the GREAT ROAD trade-route and has close links with KHAMID, with which it frequently trades (Pop. c. 32,500).
- CHANAGATH: Set. Small city in the south west of IACIO (Pop. c. 14,000).
- CHANANEL: Set. Edu. Settlement in the c north of SARASTRO. It is isolated and known for its cool dry subterranean libraries and scholars who transcribe ancient texts. Though appointed by the court of SATHEP to keep records, it is thought that the bibliosophs and curators of its libraries also maintain their own repositories of books that have been outlawed by its ruler (Pop. c. 3,200).
- CHANAOSATI: Geo. Inimical volcanic region in the north of TAAN AN, within the ACCA HOAL Basin. It is known for its wretched sulphuric air, fumaroles, geysers and hot pools, all of which contribute to a hellish environment, where the temperature is too hot for MORTALS to comfortably withstand. The terrain is undulating and rocky, and known for its stone arches and deep gullies, all of which are treacherous, and the entire region is ignored by mortal peoples.
- CHANASAAR: Geo. Island in the KORACHANI colony of MELHUMBRA off the north western coast of SAMMAEA.
- CHANDAN TODR: m. Per. (B. 3955 RM) Mar. Rnk. Current GRAND KNIGHT UNSHACKLED of the ORDER OF THE SUNDERED SHACKLE. Born to indentured servitude on a fishing trawler, he rose through the ranks, becoming a first mate by the age of 18, and captaining a ship by the age of 21. He was singled out by knights of the Order off the western coast of the CAMARINAL SEA, and a case was made to buy his freedom so that he could be trained in the ways of the Order. He initially refused, but less than a year later his ship ran aground and some members of the crew were killed as a result. He lost his vessel and was demoted, after which he began to drink, leading to his owner selling him on.

He was bought by the Order and immediately freed on condition that he train amongst them for a year. He did, and rapidly regained his confidence, becoming a KNIGHT UNSHACKLED in 3979 RM, taking command of a frigate that plied the waters of the INNER SEA, hunting slaver ships. He was voted to the council of the Order in 3988 RM and became Grand Knight Unshackled 8-years later in 3996, which he remains to this day.

His tenure has been marked by an increase in martial action, particularly against slavers and pirates around the Inner Sea, clashing more than once with CYHLAGHARRI pirate fleets and the pirate lord HAYREDHOSS UYHAVEN.

CHANDATOY: Set. Coastal settlement in the south of IACIO. It is known for its mahouts and MASTODON trainers. Its mahouts are held in high regards and are employed across the south east of LLACHATUL (Pop. c. 10,000).

CHANDOS: 1. Rvr. River in the small nation of Chandos⁽³⁾, in LLACHATUL, flowing for 242-miles from sources in the EHRANDEAN Massif, before meeting its parent, the river LLORTHA.

Lak. Lake forming part of the course of the above river^(1.) in Chandos^(3.).
 Pol. Geo. Small state in the c of LLACHATUL, occupying a 15,000 square-miles area along the border between the northern border of LAASKHA and the southern border of SKAROS.

A citadel was founded by the eponymous (5.) PATRICIAN HOUSE in around 3035 RM amid the aftermath of the WAR OF THE ARTIFEXES. Though a scattering of villages had existed in the area for millennia, home to shepherds and pious prospectors, the appearance of house Chandos changed the area, bringing new trade-routes through the mountain pass, linking Laaskha and Skaros. This led to the formation of a city that soon grew prosperous by trading and mining granite.

House Chandos refused to pledge to the KORACHANI EMPIRE during the WAR OF SUNDERING, silently retreating within its citadel. The bureaucracy of war meant that Korachan did not learn of this inaction until after the SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE, whereupon it cut ties with the house, leading to the eventual independence of the region, which was formally recognised in 3718 RM. It would later become a vassal-state of the empire in 3872 RM, and controls the surrounding lands to this day. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

- 4. Set. Large citadel and surrounding fortified city that controls the surrounding area, between $\underline{LAASKHA}$ and $\underline{SKAROS}.$ It is famed for its large crypt and ostentatious sepulchres, which have grown to rival the city in size, and are well-guarded from looters, though parts of it are collapsed and rumoured to be home to \underline{ALGHUL} (Pop. c. 373,000).
- 5. Soc. Pol. PATRICIAN HOUSE based in the south of SKAROS and LAASKHA, with long-lasting ties to the mortuary cults of the KORACHANI EMPIRE. It controls the vassal-state of Chandos^(3,) between Laaskha and Skaros, which took on its name, though has been a vassal to Korachan since 3872 RM. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

CHANDURTERESH: Rui. Rel. Ancient temple-city in the north east of KORACHAN. Funded in c. 5 RM, after the rise to power of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR, it rapidly became a religious centre with a large steel-clad temple to the UNDYING MACHINE appearing there in c. 50 RM. It was home to the traitor ARREKAN, who in c. 75 RM, having grown disillusioned with the tenets of the imperial faith, had gathered a following about him and opposed the materialism that Korachan came to embody. His actions would ultimately lead to his exile on the isle of Hoamm and, later have an influence upon the SCHISM WARS that afflicted the imperial church until 367 RM.

Following the end of the Schism Wars and the reaffirmation of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, the town of Chandurteresh was destroyed, an idol to the Undying Machine erected on the same spot from the smelted remains of its once-great temple. The idol remained a place of pilgrimage to the end of the Korachani empire.

CHANI: Rvr. River in the north of Korachan flowing east from various sources in the AKAGHA and ADALLA Mountains for 580-miles before meetings its parent, the river Ichoria. Its natural course has been interrupted at many points by dams, leading to the creation of two major artificial lakes – ATALON and VRUON.

CHANIKHOR: lit. 'place of the shelf'. Myt. Geo. His. Artificially-constructed region, covering an area of around 1,000-square-miles in the north east of KORACHAN, south of the ADELLA Mountains, and north of the river CHANI. Though Korachan is filled with wastelands and barren regions aplenty, Chanikhor is noted for the strangeness of its design; obviously hewn from the foothills of the Adalla Mountains, the region is a marvel of design, with massive steps and shelves leading inexorably upwards to the peak, 13,990-ft high. In effect the entire region appears as though cubes have been extracted from the surface of the mountain, rendering the appearance of random steps, their grey-brown edges smooth. Though the decay of aeons is easily apparent, they are relatively unmarked by the elements or life in general, though the region is replete with lichen and mosses.

Little knowledge exists of the place, with no first-hand accounts existing of its creation. Most records date back to the early FIFTH AGE, when settlers arrived to the region, seeing it for the first time. A Single stella was found inside the PRISON CARCERI by imperial explorers in c 1500 RM, detailing the region, indicating that the DEMIURGE VORROPOHAIAH may have been responsible for its creation; though its purpose (if indeed purpose it has) is unknown.

CHANNEA: Set. Settlement in the c north of LIDEA, known for its mining of brown coal (Pop. c. 5,800).

CHANRAT: 1. Myr. A great behemoth in the myths of ancient GERICIA.
2. Tec. Veh. Ind. His. One of the so-called THREE BEHEMOTHS – gigantic crawling vehicles designed for industrial scale open caste mining. Chanrat was the first to be manufactured, which was built in 2960 RM and sent to the VHALOID plains of in ALMAGEST prior to the outbreak of the WAR OF THE ARTIFEXES.

It remained in use for centuries after, but was destroyed in c. 3680 RM by persistent $\underline{\text{SCAVEN}}$ attacks, who reappropriated it as a mobile fortress, though rumours say it broke down in c. 3994 RM and was later looted for parts.

CHANTING PRISON, the: see KABBARA.

CHAOS, SEA OF: also 'the Ananth'. Myt. The primordial matter from which all of creation; the FIRMAMENT, the ATRAMENTA, the MATERIAL PLANE, all mortal life and all else, was created, either through the DREAMS of THE SHAPER or later SHAPING by the Two-and-Twenty DEMIURGES.

Little is Known of the Sea of Chaos, but it is still thought to exist outside of the influence of the Firmament and the Atramenta and is thought to be an utterly alien realm, where chaos holds sway. See Vol IV: the Mythologia Elyden.

CHAOTIAN RIFT, the: major FIRMAMENTAL LACUNA in the c north west of CEHOPHELA, in MENISCEA. It is the second-most potent Firmamental Lacuna, after the TRUE MENISCUS, and has a range of influence of around 500-miles, within which mortal life is incapable of unaided survival and which endemic flora and fauna are highly adapted to the harsh conditions.

Cursory explorations of its peripheries late in the 3rd millennium RM have revealed expansive stone ruins, indicating that it is a relatively recent phenomenon.

CHAPEL OF DACHAAS: Rel. Str. Chapel in the MANUFACTORY city of HUARANAT in SKAROS, notable for its stained cartwheel windows. Following the abandonment of the manufactory and its subsequent ruination and later re-emergence as a settlement, the chapel remained a thriving place of worship for the region's survivors.

CHAPEL OF THE PACT: Rel. Str. The oldest extant chapel dedicated to the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE in AZAZEM, in the city of AGLAIA^(2,). It replaced an older temple to a long-forgotten entity in 13 RM, just 2-years after the nation's vassalage to the KORACHANI EMPIRE.

The Chapel is small and is now used for private worship by PATRICIANS and freemen, and it forms the unofficial centre of the Old City, which, despite the city's development in the ensuing millennia, remains as a reminder of what ancient Aglaia looked like.

CHAPEL OF THE SHROUD: Rel. Str. Chapel within the ALMAGESTI TEMPLE (2.) in the CITY OF ALMAGEST, where the relic known as the EBON SHROUD is kept in a lavish gold and ebony reliquary, which attracts members of the Almagesti Temple (1.), who undertake a pilgrimage there to venerate it. An order of ascetic monks and nuns, known as the ORDER OF THE EBON SHROUD, dwell in a monastery besides the Chapel, devoting their lives to prayer and veneration of the artefact.

CHAPEL OF ST. MALICHAR OF KULIGALA: Rel. Str. Chapel of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE situated in an area of the HOLY PRECINCT that is dense with places of worship. It is home to a relic of the empire's history – a shawl that was used to cover the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR'S otherworldly body by his followers when he was newly reborn in KULIGALA. It is located in a glass-fronted reliquary, within the altar stone of the chapel, and masses continue to be celebrated daily.

CHAPEL OF ST. REEDRA, CHAINED: Rel. Str. Chapel in the west of KHADON, in the nation of ELYDEN. It is dedicated to ST. REEDRA, who was martyred by chaining very early in the history of the KORACHANI EMPIRE. The chain, now over 4,000-years old, is brittle and rusted solid, and is kept now as a relic above the ossuary where St. Reedra's bones are kept. The chapel is not as famous as others in the capital or indeed the empire itself, but it remains a place of pilgrimage to many, who come to revere the remains.

There are claims that those who pray over the chains seven times a day for seven days in a row will have those prayers answered, and though many across KORACHAN believe that their prayers were answered in this way, most remain sceptical.

CHAPEL OF KALHUR: solitary chapel in the north east of SKAROS. The chapel stands in the apex of a mile-wide crater in the middle of the SKAROSIAN PLAINS, just outside the reach of the ANOMOFERROH. The chapel forms part of THE SHADOW MARCH and is renowned for the vast reliquaries it has, in which are displayed ORTHOSES and BIOMECHANA of martyrs and the departed faithful. One corridor, seventy-seven paces long, contains the prosthetic limbs of those faithful to the church who have died or been killed by the EMPIRE'S adversaries, and hang in their hundreds like a grotesque trophy-wall, a streaming parchment attached to each by a sanctified wax seal; the story of their bearer scrawled upon them. Those who have died on previous Shadow Marches with ORTHOSES or biomechanical implants or augmentations have such remnants brough here in future Marches; where their story can be read by others.

CHAPEL OF NIBBIA: Rel. Str. Chapel 3-miles south east of the city of NIBBIA, in the south of AHRISHEN. It is notable for its use of humanoid bones in its architecture and is one of the larger examples of its kind in LLACHATUL.

CHAPEL OF THE UNDYING MACHINE FREED: Rel. Str. The first church erected in the name of the UNDYING MACHINE in the nation of KORACHAN following his freeing by the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR in 338 RM. It is no great cathedral, but rather a simple chapel built on the site of the present-day BASTION OF STEEL. Though other more lavish, prestigious, and larger churches would later be erected in KHADON alone, this one remained important to Malichar and though officially it remains a public chapel dedicated to the Undying Machine Freed, unofficially it is frequented by no-one, lest Malichar decide to pray here, which he is want to do from time to time.

It has since been completely surrounded by the monolithic Bastion, though remains in its original form, hidden out of sight, beneath the monolithic edifice, almost forgotten.

CHAPTER: 1. Soc. Rnk. In KARAKHAS, the common name used for PATRICIAN HOUSES, particularly those with roots in other nations.

- 2. Org. Within the WHITE LEAGUE, the word used to describe an area of jurisdiction and its associated armies.
- 3. Com. Org. Branches and the zone of economical jurisdiction of the WHITE BANK, across the INNER SEA REGION and beyond.

CHÂR MATHI: native name for TZALLRACH. The name was chosen by KING HIKARE, the first ANARCH of a union of the four states of CHARAMA.

CHARA: 1. Geo. Only major route cutting across the south of the ARGENT Mountains between TZALLRACH and the TURCAR desert, leading eventually into TETHYSIA.

2. Mil. Str. Fortress in the east of TZALLRACH, protecting the above pass^(1.) across the ARGENT Mountains.

CHARAKIN: Fau. Giant lamprey-like fish, once common to the coastal waters of the Seas of SUDUNIR, ERTHYDEA, ANIPTERRA and ORRIDA. Though reduced in numbers due to the death of ELYDEN'S seas, it is an adaptable creature and voracious predator. Its round mouth is ringed in hundreds of needle-like teeth, and once it grabs a hold of a creature it will not let go, even in death. Those bitten generally die from blood loss. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

CHARAMA: Dem. 'Charaman'. His. Ntn. Early FIFTH AGE culture that emerged in the south east of CENTRAL LLACHATUL, in the east of present-day KHAMID and coastal TZALLRACH. It was populated by a group of people known as the AMADIANS – descendants of FOURTH AGE cultures that had been obliterated by the WAR OF SCOURGING. They would go on to form the Charama culture, whose people became expert fishermen, and whose settlements spread from present-day KHAMID to the HEBAT mountains. To the south, the KINGDOM OF NATH was emerging as a major power in what is today the region of the ARID TRIPTYCH and by around -600 RM had established colonies along the Charaman coast, with conflicts ensuing between Amadian natives and colonists. Nath would falter during the LION HERESIES that saw major slave revolts in its Charaman territories. This led to its collapse in around -190 RM, by which time most of its Charaman colonies had been abandoned, allowing the Charaman people to expand.

By around 50 RM the ASANATE DYNASTIES has grown to fill in the void left by Nath, eventually forming the VENATHI EMPIRE, and by 132 RM it was in control of present-day SARASTRO, NÁRTHEL, TARATI^(1.) and NAARETH, and when the so-called Lion King LABAISINGH came into power he had in his sights the lands of Charama, which he wanted to reclaim, to restore the ancient Nathi kingdom's territories. He spent his reign in war against Charama, squandering the riches of Venath in a war of attrition that cost him his life in 151 RM. His death at the hands of the 'Barbarian' king FICHIM propagated the collapse of Venath, allowing the people of Charama to evolve.

As Queen Hetepheres built the kingdom of Venthir from the ruin of Venath, a new power rose in the north, and a line of Botum⁽¹⁾ kings emerged in Charama in c. 320 RM, which by then had become known as the Charath Crown. See Vol III: Extinct States.

CHARAMANI: Lan. Native language spoken in Châr MATHI (TZALLRACH). It shares an alphabet with VENATHI, and though the two languages share a common root (NATHI), they have since evolved into two distinct tongues with little in common today save a shared script. Charamani has since taken on many traits of the native AMADIAN language. See Vol II: Languages.

CHARATH: also 'the Charath Crown'. Dem. 'Charathi. His. Ntm. Extinct kingdom in the south east of CENTRAL LLACHATUL that by c. 320 RM had inherited the lands of CHARAMA following decades of war with the VENATHIEMPIRE. The death of the Venathi king LABAISINGH in 151 RM by the Charaman champion FICHIM propagated the collapse of Venath, allowing the people of Charama to evolve, allowing the BOTUM(1.) kings to emerge as the dominant force, giving rise to the Charath Crown, which expanded both north and south, assimilating most AMADIAN culture, including the cultural motif of the lion, which remains a powerful TZALLRACHI symbol to this day.

The line of Botum rulers ended in 779 RM, and the region went into decline after that. By around 1100 RM it had stabilised into four states — MOETIA (1.) in the west, NADAIRA (2.) in the east, KHUN (2.) in the north, and LURIUM (2.) in the south. The kingdom of CHÂR MATHI would emerge in 2101 RM, with the NOMARCH HIKARE'S successful union of the four states though political manipulation. See Vol III: Extinct States.

CHARINA: Set. City in the south west of OPHIUSSA, a few miles from the coast (Pop. c. 38,000).

CHARNEL HILL: also 'Vysiach'. Geo. Hill in the c north of ETUA in the north west of NORTHERN SAMMAEA. It bears remnants of ancient sacrificial practices and is littered in the sun-bleached bones of animals and mortals.

CHARTERIST: Soc. Rnk. A social class in PARTHIS roughly equivalent to a merchant middle class. So-named after the charter they are granted by the republic to trade and operate businesses, Charterists are an essential part of life in Parthis, operating its many markets, harbours, trade routes and houses, and as well as small businesses across the empire.

CHARYBDIS: Sup. Rui. Large necropolis in the c of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER, just south of the BOLILOT PEAKS, in the north east of the tribal territories of ITTRA. It is thought to be one of the longest active necropoli in ELYDEN, with recorded use dating back to the early FOURTH AGE, around 19,000-years ago, when they were used to house exsanguinated mummies embalmed by keratin tribes. Some of these original bodies are thought to remain.

Few make their home in the region, and it is today known to be mildly ATRAMENTALLY ACTIVE. The cycles of death are not always as they should be here, and bodies thought without life are not always so. Otherworlders are known to congregate here, blind to any mortal life that may stand before them.

CHASMA DRACONA: Arc. Bridge spanning the narrowest part of the STRAIT OF NÁRTHEL, around half-a-mile wide, originally connecting LYRIDIA in the north with NÁRTHEL in the south. Before the Strait of Nárthel silted up this was the only way across the waters.

Though the bridge dates back to the FOURTH AGE, both sides were heavily fortified and manned at various times throughout the FIFTH AGE, taxing those wishing to cross it and defending it against attack, though with the drying up of the strait and the appearance of multiple permanent natural crossing points, including the land beneath the bridge itself, by c. 3500 RM, the importance of the bridge lessened, until it was abandoned by both sides.

CHATASH: Rui. ancient ruin to the west of the BLACK MOUNTAIN. The ruin takes the form of a four-form face, carved into the bare rock of a natural granite pinnacle.

CHATERESTRE: Pol. Rnk. Administrative speaker in the KORACHANI EMPIRE.

CHATHADHAA: Geo. Region of discontinuous permafrost in the north of DURCHAA^(1,), to the west of the UTAGHAN Mountains.

CHATHAIA: Set. A city and fortress belonging to the WHITE LEAGUE in the north of the ATHORHU delta in the south east of PARTHIS (Pop. c. 120,000).

CHATHO: (9,800-ft.) Geo. Volcano in the tribal territories of INDAAR, in the east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. It is active, though eruptions are rarely of an impact on life in the region.

CHATOYANT: 1. Geo. Coastal region in the far west of THE SURRACH, in the north west of SAMMAEA, along the coast of the SEA OF ESCHATA.
2. also 'the Iridescent City'. Set. Coastal city in far west of THE SURRACH, in the north west of SAMMAEA, along the mouth of the river ESSRA. The main industry in Chatoyant is pearl diving, and the creation of object d'art made of nacre, which is also used in architecture across the region. It is also known for its misanthropic nobility and the elaborate costumes they wear that feature large pearl-covered headdresses (Pop. c. 130,000).

CHATTELSERF: Sup. Tec. In the KORACHANI EMPIRE, a form of HAEMONCULUS common in MANUFACTORIES. They are primitive CLONES with TECHNARCANE grafts and ORTHOSES used to aid in their duties. They are often part of the machinery of the MANUFACTORY, without any form of locomotion; never sleeping, and receiving sustenance by catheter. Countless specialist forms exist and no two are alike.

CHAUTULA: Dem. 'Chautulan'. Ntn. Nation in the east of MENISCEA, south of the BAY OF PANOTIA. Its climate ranges from tropical inland to the south to subtropical savannah in the north, and is divided into two general regions – the level plains of the north and the rocky inland wooded region in the south.

The nation's economy revolves around the mining of BLOODSTONES. It emerged in c. 2204 RM following decades of strife following the disintegration of its precursor state, VAEVECTA^(1,1) in c. 2140 RM. It has been ruled by a line of ONEIROMANCERS since 3489 RM, who act as regents to the catatonic CHIMAERA, interpreting its DREAMS. Over time the regents have ruled as though they were the true line, putting less importance in the dreams and visions of Chimaera. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

CHAYAN: Mil. Str. Major coastal fortress in the north east of THE VORANDINE, overlooking lake TAHONG, guarding it from possible incursions from the north.

CHAZANASH: also 'the Corpse Chazanash'. Int. Ancient petrified skeletal remains of an unidentified beast in the savannah of SKERETT in the west of NASTAL⁽²⁾. The bones are blackened and worn smooth by the elements, and are thought to date back to the earliest days of life in ELYDEN, when the DEMIURGES yet shaped the MATERIA OMNA to create lifeforms of their own choosing. Local legends claim that the bones are sentient, watching over the night sky surrounding them.

CHEBELDA: now-extinct early FIFTH AGE kingdom that was ruled by king BARBATOS, whose capital was close to the extant city of ENTIOIA. Between c. -100 - -90 RM he marched against what is now the region of BHATHAIA, subjugating its people under his rule. The kingdom was relatively short-lived though, and it crumbled following Barbatos' death, with the descendants of one of his lieutenants eventually forming the MEROVICHI DYNASTY which would rule the region from 129 RM.

CHEEDARAN: also 'the Wastes of Cheedaran' Geo. Flo. Badlands in the c of the DESOLATION OF ASTUDAN, dominated by steep-sided mesas and plateaus. Though a cursory glance would show the region as little more than a dark badlands, close examination will reveal that the mesas are in fact the petrified stumps of gigantic trees – a grim reminder of a sprawling monolithic forest that once existed here, though to date back to the FIRST AGE, and which are thought to have been created by the DEMIURGE ARIMASPI.

CHEESE: Cui. A dairy product made from the milk of various animals, including AUROCHS, buffalos, cows, goats, and sheep, amongst others. It can be found across ELYDEN and most nations and regions have their own varieties, made in particular ways or with specific ingredients.

Of note is the ONEIRIC ability that some cheeses, particularly creamy blue varieties, possess. For millennia MORTALS have known that these cheeses induce vivid DREAMS in those that consume them in large volumes, allowing ONEIROMANCERS to more easily work with them. Some can even act as FOCI⁽²⁾ to oneiromancers that consume them. It is believed that the moulds and BAKTRONS that grow on such cheeses may themselves be responsible for the effects. AHAROR^(1,1) cheese, produced in the south east of AZAZEM, is the most famous of these oneiric cheeses, and it is produced there in large quantities for distribution across the KORACHANI EMPIRE.

CHEGOL: Geo. Large pit in the north east of the tribe of SUUR'KA in the north east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. It originated as a KORACHANI FREESTONE mine in c. 420 RM, but was vacated soon after, with imperial abandonment of the region. In c. 800 RM a gigantic SOULSTONE was found there. The fate of the soulstone is unknown, though legend of its discovery remains common to this day, and the pit, now overgrown and largely reclaimed by nature, has seen many opportunists attempt to find soulstones, with little success. The pit is thought to be the final resting place of a scion, possibly descended from the DEMIURGE TALANTEHUT, which adds further mystique to the otherwise uninhabited area.

CHEGRINT: Dem. 'Chegrintish'. His. Ntn. Early FIFTH-AGE empire in the north west of SAMMAEA, occupying what is today THE SURRACH and built largely on LAETIAN ruins. The empire appeared in c. -1000 RM. It was unified by the so-called POTENTATE HAABHUS, whose descendants ruled Chegrint until c. 900 RM, before its eventual collapse and fracture into five different regions in c. 980 RM.

Its rulers were known as the PAUPER KINGS, though such accounts all come from after the collapse of the empire, and the name was most likely bestowed in a derogatory manner, used by those who followed it to diminish their accomplishments.

Today it is little more than scattered ruins, either reclaimed by the Surrach, or rebuilt as the foundations for present-day cities. See Vol III: Extinct States.

CHEGRINTISH: Lan. Language spoken by the early FIFTH AGE empire of CHEGRINT. It eventually gave way to SELAHIMI, which in turn evolved into $\underline{SAVIUDI}$, which remains the dominant language in the region today. See Vol II: Languages.

CHEIANA: Geo. Island in the south west of the MAIDEN ISLES, off the south eastern coast of MENISCEA.

CHEIRA: 1. Dem. 'Cheiran'. Ntn. Nation in the east of SAMMAEA, south east of PNESSA, west of GIBEAH, and north of SERROK. It is one of the largest nations in ELYDEN, in terms of the area it encompasses and is dominated by the WAELMIGHI rainforest, which covers the far east of Sammaea, at the base of the PORPHYRI PENINSULA in the south to the GROWING MOUNTAINS OF MULCIBER in the north. It has coastlines overlooking three distinct bodies of water – the SEA OF KHURSA in the south west, the ROILING SEA in the north east, and the MIROVEAN OCEAN in the east. Its busiest harbours are those overlooking Mirovea.

Cheira became an independent nation after millennia under the ironclad rule of the Waelmighi Dynasties. Their fall in 3337 RM, led to the rise of the so-called Sorcerer-Kings, who would go on to rule for over three centuries, until they were deposed in 3702 RM by the Church OF THE Prophet OF THE Empyrean, which then became the ruling power in Cheira until 3798 RM, when great religious upheaval brought chaos to the entire region. This ended in 3803 RM, when a new secular government, made up of representatives from the various unions and guilds across Cheira, took over. It rules to this day.

Cheirans are hard-workers and experts at cultivating crops, and they are renowned for their terraced gardens and their exotic flowers. They are also skilled mariners and adept at navigating and fishing its coastal waters, which they do in larger catamarans. Traditionally, Cheirans would live in larger family groups or up to 20-30 individuals who would live on such a boat, returning to land only to sell their catches and resupply. This lifestyle has dwindled over the years, though remains a way of life in many settlements.

It is divided into twelve prefectures, each of which is overseen by a prefect elected from the dominant unions and guilds in the particular area. Each of the Prefectures has its own government, which acts in relevant autonomy from the capital, though representatives are sent to the People's Hall in MENITAB to sit at the council. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

2. Geo. Region to the east of WAELMIGH, just north of the equatorial line, well-known as the seat of power of the historical ruling caste of SORCERER-KINGS who ruled over the WAELMIGHI DYNASTIES. Overlooking the SEA OF MOSASA, most of its coastal people fish its waters with large catamarans on which extended families live, only touching ground to sell their catches, all the way south to the peninsula of XENIA.

The region is covered in the ruins of ziggurat-like structures from which the Sorcerer-kings once ruled until c. 3700 RM, when they were ousted and replaced by the present-day republic.

3. Pol. Set. Major city in the east of the eponymous nation, and capital city of the second prefecture of Cheira. The city was once is coastal, though is now some miles from the sea, though it remains along the course of the river CACEPHA and maintains large docks where catamarans that ply their trade in the waters of the SEA OF MOSASA can lay anchor (Pop. c. 49,000).

CHEIROAH: lit. 'power unknown'. Plr. 'Cheiroahin'. Sup. Rnk. Sorcerer-caste prevalent in PRE-IMPERIAL KORACHAN and VÂRR, enjoying their crux in the KORACHANI PENINSULA around the time of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR'S ascension to power, between -20 and 1 RM.

The Cheiroahin were augurs of unscrupulous natures who emerged in c. –300 RM as immigrants from the south east who settled the area in north eastern Korachan, around what would later become the city-state of CALDERA. Distrusted by the Korachani people, they revelled in the unease their sorcerous ways elicited and they grew around the river ICHORIA as a small state. By c. –200 RM their notoriety and powers of augury allowed them to gain entry into the then-forming city-states, where they offered their services to those who would talk with them. Over the years their power increased and by the time the SEVEN CITY-STATES of Korachan were established, individual cheiroahin held the ears of most rulers. Their corruption was an open secret and most distrusted them, suspecting a hidden agenda, though none opposed them, for those in power only grew more powerful under their auspices. By the time of Malichar's birth in -41 RM, the Cheiroahin were rulers of Korachan in all but name, their lands in Caldera abandoned, their homes now in the cities' noble quarters and courts.

In –7 RM, the Cheiroahin were challenged by the merchant-prince Malichar, who condemned their treachery and corruption. He was sentenced to death by their court, but challenged them and won. Walking free, he united the seven city-states against the Cheiroahin and deposed them in –2 RM, executing their leaders and sending their relatives to the hinterlands of the north west, where they travelled until settling SKAROS and ALMAGEST.

Little is known of their fates in those lands, for records of their existence are sparse, largely lost in the tumult of the rise of the Korachani empire in Skaros and Almagest. Though chroniclers agree that their banishment from Korachan in -2 RM corresponds with a rise in the Atramental arts in Skaros and Almagest c. 50 - 100 RM.

CHEIROPTER: Fau. Horse-sized reptile notable for the vestigial membranes between its forelimbs and legs and the sail running down its back. The skin membranes are useless (though some scholars believe they are used to regulate temperature), and tend to be coloured in males. Though omnivorous, the creatures are sluggish and spend most of their days in the sun, largely immobile, though they exert large amounts of energy in small bursts. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

CHEMISTER: also 'chymister'. Sup. Edu. A scholar who is skilled in chemistry, and who studies the properties and composition of matter, as well their reactions with each other. The field emerged from the earlier study of ALCHYMY, which diverged in c. 900 RM leading to modern CLONING and FLESHWRIGHTING on one hand, and chemistry on the other.

CHEMISTERS, ORDER OF: Ind. Edu. Org. KORACHANI guild that oversees the operation and trade of all CHEMISTERS and ALCHYMISTS within the Korachani empire. It emerged in c. 950 RM in the PELASGOSI city of OCTIRA, following the lifting of the 100-year licence monopoly that the IMPERIAL COLLEGE OF FABRICATED INCEPTION had on the inception of HAEMONCULI and other CLONES following the outcome of the CHEMISTERS' WAR that ended in 823 RM.

In 1567 RM it absorbed the ailing KORACHANI GUILD OF CHYMYSTERS, taking over its guildhalls and ATELIERS, and becoming responsible for the issuing of chemisters licences, and the exclusive importation of ingredients and equipment used by those in the field.

It remains active today, and is one of the largest businesses and institutes in Octira, contributing much to the region's economy.

CHEMISTERS' WAR, the: Int. Sup. His. Historical period within the KORACHANI EMPIRE that is considered to have taken place between 786 and 823 RM. The conflict has its origins in the rapid spread across the INNER SEA REGION of the techniques behind the creation of HAEMONCULI, which were first produced on an industrial scale by the IMPERIAL COLLEGE OF FABRICATED INCEPTION in the MHAROKKIN city of EBERUK in c. 740 RM.

Different ATELIERS and guilds across the empire and beyond were quick to reverse-engineer and replicate the method, then claimed ownership and proprietorship of the newly-developed techniques and processes, causing the Imperial College to retaliate, sending agents and spies to rival ateliers to stop production and destroy their equipment if possible. This escalated into what became known as the Chemisters' War.

Various competing factions and schools of thought (including ALCHYMISTS, ATRAMENTISTS and FLESHWRIGHTS) found themselves at odds with each other, and by c. 823 RM, events had escalated, and the largest factions – Including the KORACHANI GUILD OF CHYMYSTERS, the CONFRATERNITY OF NATURAL TRANSMUTATION, and the Imperial College o Fabricated Inception, amongst others – were employing gangs to sabotage their rivals' work, with events slowly escalating over the years.

Originally, the conflicts were restricted to the manufactories and ateliers of the rival forces, though over the years these activities became more extreme, with gang fights often spilling over into public spaces of Korachani cities, particularly in Eberuk and surrounding ateliers in Mharokk, and other cities north of the INNER SEA, where nascent cloning industries had appeared. A brawl in Eberuk in 818 RM caused the IRON GUARD to become involved, leading to THE COUNCIL OF SEVEN increasing security in the cities involved, which helped to curtail the spread of hostilities until the groups were forced into an armistice of sorts in 823 RM, with the Imperial College of Fabricated Inception winning the exclusive right to issue licences to ateliers across the empire to manufacture haemonculi for 100-years, after which other guilds and factions would also be allowed to do the same.

CHENAT: Set. Settlement in the west of TARTAK along the course of the river KHARAD. The settlement appeared around a series of SIPHON ENGINES and manages to survive on water filtered through their use. (Pop. c. 8.000).

CHEODAI: Set. Settlement in the c of KASPIA. Its main industry is trapping and hunting, and furs made here make their way across Kaspia, as well as west, where they are sold to GÁTHAN merchants, eventually making their way far south in the INNER SEA REGION (Pop. c. 3,300).

CHEOPS: Set. Settlement on the island of PHARU in KHAMID (Pop. c. 7,200).

CHERMADIA: also 'City of the Stone'. Ind. Set. Independent mining-city in the c south of WESTERN SAMMAEA, east of the TALENTARI Mountains, in the hinterlands of SYNCHTHONITHA.

The city is situated on a gigantic free-standing rock that is believed to have once been a meteorite. Were it not for the valuable iron ore deposits beneath the stone the city would never have been founded, as there are few other resources in the region and it survives only through deep wells that are accessed through pumps that work constantly to provide the populace of the city with enough water to survive. Its people are allies of Synchthonitha (Pop. c. 37,400).

CHESTUS: Mil. Str. ALMAGESTI garrison in the far north of the VALBARAN PENINSULA, overlooking the SEA OF POLARIS. Almagest has controlled the garrison since 3977 RM, three years after the signing of the VALBARAN DEFENCE PACT.

CHETHA: 1. Geo. Cliffs in MECHABET, to the north east of PARTHIS, overlooking the SEA OF ERUISA.

2. Rvr. Narrow wetlands in MECHABET, to the north east of PARTHIS. It covers some 6,000 square-miles, and is noted for its large buttressed cypresses and mangroves.

CHEVETINE CITY, the: Pol. Set. Royal city serving as the nucleus of the capital city NABERIZ, in the south of AKHELIZ. It is home to the royal palace and grounds, as well as various governmental buildings and municipal structures and major temples. The city is surrounded by a large stone wall, and is famed for the two gigantic fig trees that serve as the GATEWAY into it.

CHHMAR: Sea. Sea off the western-coast of WESTERN SAMMAEA, primarily the nation of RAHENG.

CHIANIOR: Flo. Large trees endemic to rocky areas of central and north eastern MALAN. They are known both for their malleable yet strong roots, which are adapted for clinging to and seeking water in rocky areas, as well as their twisting branches and expansive canopies and needle-like leaves. The Chianior has been at the centre of the art of CHIMILEEN (branchbraiding) for millennia, where living trees are manipulated into various shapes and forms, becoming integral to the regions' architecture and culture. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

CHIARO: Rui. Abandoned settlement and manufactory in the north west of PELASGOS. The manufactory was abandoned following centuries of productive use, following the silting of the river AESOPA which fed its industry, and its landlocking following the retreat of the GULF OF LEMAS, in c. 3300 RM.

CHIAVALLE: Geo. Mountains in the c south west of RAONGEN⁽²⁾, forming a northern extension of the expansive URAHASH Massif.

CHICORY: Fau. Plant that grows wild across temperate-warm regions of MENISCEA. It forms an important part of cuisine in many regions, perhaps most important of which is its use in CHICORY TEA, which is made from the roots.

CHICORY TEA: Bev. Beverage common in the south east of MENISCEA made from CHICORY root. Crops for the beverage are mostly cultivated in PHUT, EASTERN LARISH, CAMAU and EGINAZ, and it is mostly enjoyed around the Seas of LARISH^(1.) and SIPARIA.

CHIEF HUNTSMAN: Pol. Rnk. Administrative rank in XYRPHAAT, in EASTERN MENISCEA. The Chief Huntsman is in charge of granting hunting licences (including personal hunting and industrial scale hunting, such as whaling and game culling). The title is ancient, dating back to c. 2600 RM, when the role was known as the chief falconer, who served as a trusted lieutenant to the MAHIR in charge of messaging and providing meals and protection to the Mahir.

CHIEN: Rvr. River in the south of TZALLRACH, flowing for 625-miles, from sources in the LITANI and HEBAT Mountains before emptying into the TORRENT OF KARROCK.

CHIEN DA, the: Rel. Dei. In the polytheistic religion of ANATHA

BAETYL (1.) in TZALLRACH, a sun deity worshipped by many. His tenets are strength and power over darkness. Chien Da, also embodies a cyclical nature of life and entropy – the material is not forever; life decays, gives way to new life. Similarly, Chien Da as the sun is a cyclical deity – night gives way to day, but over the longer span of time, it too is a decaying power that will be extinguished by death, after which a new form of life will rise. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

CHIEN DA, TEMPLE OF THE: Rel. Str. Largest of the TZALLRACHI Ziggurat temples dedicated to their sun deity CHIEN DA, located within the city of BALBETH.

CHIEN RAPIDS: Rvr. Course of the river CHIEN that goes on for some 65-miles, known for its rapids and waterfalls, making it impossible to navigate.

CHIGOTER: Sup. Geo. Region of ATRAMENTAL TAINT in the c south west of ELEKHID, in a basin at the meeting point between the YANAVASH and NARAVASH Mountains. The corruption stunts growth of flora and fauna, and also leads to mutations.

The region is categorised as a $\underline{\text{MODERATE THREAT}}$ by the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI}}$ $\underline{\text{INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES}}.$

CHILA: Rui. Ruined city in the far south of DURCHAA^(1.), west of the extant city of BARCHAA. Once a THYTHIAN settlement, it was destroyed in c. 1460 in a prolonged war with KORACHAN that eventually saw Thythia dissolved, its territories divided between ALMAGEST and Korachan. Little remains of the city to this day, and it is littered with the bones of the dead.

CHILAGRIA: Mil. Str. Org. Fortress of the SENTINELS OF ARIMASPI, located in the north west of IDRIIS on the island of ISEA, built around the TREE OF SHARHAM. It is a stone and concrete star fort covered in vines, whose bastions have been converted to gardens and apiaries.

The fortress is a place of repose to agents, who can sleep and eat there, as well as train and rearm themselves before lengthy stays in the field, which can last for up to a year in some cases.

All members of the Sentinels of Arimaspi must report to the fortress at least once a year to be debriefed by the seven members of the assembly.

CHILD EMPEROR: (B. Unknown) Pol. The ruler of OPHAR since 3119 RM.
Following millennia of awaiting the prophecy laid down by the OTHERWORLDER known as the STEWARD in accordance with the tenets of the CHILD'S ADVENTISM after the fulfilment of an ancient prophecy.

Prior to the Prophecy's fulfilment over 1,000 prospective children were elected to the rank of Emperor, with each being deposed upon its 8th birthday when the criteria of the prophecy remained unfulfilled. These so-called false emperors were buried in the NECROPOLIS OF THE FALSE EMPERORS, a few miles north west of the capital city of OPRET⁽³⁾.

CHILD-MONARCH: Soc. Pol. Title of the ruler of the Kingdom of CISNERIA. Each of the noble CLANS of Cisneria has a representative member in the ruling council that watches over the Child-monarch, trying to sway their choice of an aspect of the deity THEREON that the Monarch must make upon reaching the age of 17. The Child-monarch is then baptised under the aegis of this aspect, and appoints a successor from children who turned one that spring, who will rule for the next 17-years.

The clan associated with the chosen aspect will ascend in importance over the next child-monarch's tenure, becomes the ruling clan, as it were, until he next Child-monarch chooses a new patron and appoints their successor at the age of 17.

Once the Child-monarch appoints a successor, they will disappear into the BLACK MOUNTAINS to seek enlightenment, becoming a saint of the pantheon. As a result of this, most pregnancies are planned, so that the birth takes place as close to the Spring equinox as possible. Though it is not strictly the case, most monarchs are chosen from healthy children – male or female – who are born on the equinox itself.

The current child-Monarch is ARRAN SONNELSSON, and he is 15, rapidly approaching the age when he is expected to choose an aspect of Thereon.

CHILD-PRINCE, the: (B. Unknown) Pol. Ruler and god of AHRISHEN, appearing there in 3752 RM, rising to power in 3763 RM. Lake EIONIA is a holy place to the Child-prince. It is thought that the Child-Prince is an OTHERWORLDER.

CHILD'S ADVENTISM: Rel. A prophetic religion whose origins lie in the early centuries of the FIFTH AGE, when an OTHERWORLDER known as the STEWARD brought word of 'the Child' to OPHAM in c. 608 RM, which was then under KORACHANI control. Originally little more than parables and retelling of old ERASHAN tales and myths, the religion truly formed in c. 800 RM with the story of the child emperor forming its core. The legend spoke thusly:

'A child shall arise who, on the passing of its 7th year, will unite Opham and all surrounding lands into a glorious enlightened empire, ending wars and bringing prosperity and joy to its people'.

As a result, followers of the Child's Adventism scoured the land for children who were elected to emperor. If, by their 8th birthday, the prophecy had not been fulfilled, they were deposed and the next candidate elected in their place, starting the process from scratch.

The Steward became a powerful figure as the religion took hold, its closest followers rising to positions of influence within the institution, with many amongst them finding their way into the ruling council of Opham. By 835 RM all councillors were members of the church and the Steward became its head. The council was disbanded and the Steward elected regent to an empty throne that awaited the arrival of the prophesised child emperor, while seekers brought potential children to Opham.

The Kingdom of Opham ended in 1465 RM, after the neighbouring states of $\underline{\text{OLNNAD}}^{(1.)}$ and $\underline{\text{HOLOTHAN}}^{(1.)}$ usurped its trade-routes. What was once Opham became known as the $\underline{\text{CHILD'S REALM OF OPHRAM}}$, and the traditions of the Child's Adventism continued to be honoured throughout tumultuous times and the rise and fall of surrounding city-states.

Finally, in 3119 RM, all conditions of the prophecy were finally fulfilled. Word of this spread across the land, reaching as far east as the SEA OF BYSSOS. There was much rejoicing, and the Steward oversaw a great ceremony in which it took the child into an ancient temple that had been constructed millennia past just for this day. Though two entered, only one emerged – the CHILD EMPEROR, its body bearing traits of the Steward, its eyes filled with all the wisdom and experience of the otherworlder. None know fully what happened in the temple, but since that day, the Child Emperor has ruled a united Ophram, which is now known as the CHILD'S REALM OF OPHAR. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

CHILD'S COURT: Pol. The government of OPHAR since 3119 RM, following the ritual performed by the OTHERWORLDER known as the STEWARD in accordance with the tenets of the CHILD'S ADVENTISM after the fulfilment of an ancient prophecy.

The government is made up of a bipartisan system, with a priestly upper-caste ruling alongside an elected meritocracy, above which rules the CHILD EMPEROR as a divine being. The Child Emperor's is considered law, though is unconcerned with the mundane matters of state, which are delegated to the Child's Court.

CHILD'S ESTUARY, the: Pol. Str. Palace in the A SAVI Mountains, in AHRISHEN, where the CHILD-PRINCE was baptised at the point where the FOUR WINDS are said to exist at once. The main source of the river SAVEST lies beneath the palace.

CHILD'S REALM OF OPHRAM: see OPHRAM.

CHILDREN OF KHAR'ILLAE: Mys. MYSTERY CULT common in many cities across the INNER SEA where its presence can pass unnoticed. Its members worship KHAR'ILLAE as a deity above the UNDYING MACHINE and advocate the use of force (literal and otherwise) and passion. Nights when the BLOOD MOON is full are sacred, and those coinciding with new IVORY MOON doubly so. The ORDER OF THE BLOODY HAND is often linked with its activities and has been cited as an originator of the cult.

CHILDREN OF MALICHAR, the: Soc. Rnk. Colloquial name given to those recruited by the ORDER OF PROSELYTISERS. Not to be confused with the true children of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR, the DESPOSYNI.

CHILDREN OF RACHANAEL, the: Rel. Org. Radical religious cult of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, centred in the AMBER FORT, in the independent city of RARADCHAN. It evolved from exocrines and those faithful to the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE that chose to remain in THE SURRACH following the KORACHANI empire's retreat from the region in c. 2400 RM. Their views became more extreme as they became cut-off from the HEARTLAND. Hey maintain their rule of the region surrounding Raradchan to this day and are xenophobic, allowing few outsiders (mostly merchants, out of necessity) to enter their city. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

CHILDREN OF THE SEVEN-EYED GOAT: see SEVEN-EYED GOAT, CHILDREN OF THE.

CHILDREN OF THE SHADOW: Lan. Sup. Med. Common term around the INNER SEA for those afflicted by AEPATHY. Specifically in reference to those who survive its debilitating effects.

CHILDREN'S WAR, the: Myt. His. Ancient mythic war that took place between the SEEDBORN (ASICTHAIN) and GODSBORN (SICTHAIN) peoples of ancient ELYDEN, mentioned in passing in various passages of the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN.

Though referred to as a war this is likely conflated, and probably existed as various isolated pockets of conflict as the mortals spread, encroaching on the well-established lands of the godsborn peoples, leading to friction and eventually conflict.

Already inferior in numbers, most of the godsborn involved in these conflicts likely suffered great losses, leading to their eventual diminishing across Elyden. See Vol IV: the Mythologia Elyden.

CHILIARCH: Mil. Rnk. Generals of the SURUTURI military once known as generals of one-thousand.

CHIMAERA: Rel. Dei. Antediluvian being worshipped by the people of CHAUTULA, VAEVECTA^(2.), and VECTIS (and, to a lesser extent, AHOPAH, whose people now largely worship ISTAR^(1.)). It was originally worshipped by the heretic prophet GHASSERAN in ancient VAEVECTA^(1.) during a time when its founder and ruler Istar was worshipped as a godking.

Ghasseran was tried for his crimes and sentenced to being drawn and quartered. Belief in Chimaera slowly spread after this, with various mystery cults appearing across Vaevecta. These cults found a new lease of life amid the chaos that followed the death of Istar, uniter and ruler of Vaevecta, with many of the various petty kingdoms that emerged from its fall following their own version of the deity, leading to dozens of conflicted cults that remain so to this day despite the coalescing of the petty states into the nations of Chautula, Vectis, and Ahopah, as well as a small successor state to Vaevecta, whose worship of Chimaera remained strongest.

Chimaera is regarded as an unknowable ancient being, who was present during the rise of the MORTAL PEOPLES aeons ago, which is why the various cults impart different traits to it in a bid to make it more relatable, though priests are careful not to anthropomorphise the deity too much. It is a bearer of deep knowledge and harbours secrets great and small and accepts new secrets as part of prayers, through which it increases its wisdom.

It is kept alive through archaic TECHNARCANA that marries its desiccated body with ancient machinery that is tended to by an army of technarcanists. Little is known of its history or its whereabouts during the trial of Ghasseran. Some believe that the deity is an OTHERWORLDER that whispered secrets to Ghasseran before its rebirth, paving the way for its return to the MATERIAL PLANE, though there are no records of it prior to its internment within the engine that now sustains it. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

CHIMAERA SOCIETY, the: Int. Org. Organisation that seeks to create the perfect MORTAL, with various traits drawn from other mortal beings whilst maintaining a 'normal' HUMAN appearance. It is believed that various experiments have already been carried out by the Chimaera Society over the years, though their success or failure is unknown due to its secretive nature.

The society maintains a clubhouse in the city of ALMAGEST, though it is thought to have lodges in other major cities across the INNER SEA REGION, as well as access to various laboratories and ATELIERS where it carries out experiments, also. Members greet each other with a particular handshake that is unknown to outsiders (with false handshakes sometimes used to weed out impostors).

CHIMERAE, the: Org. Eunuch assassins based in the city of LATHAKSE in EGINAZ, in the south east of MENISCEA. The assassins operate in lands surrounding the seas of SEA OF LARISH^(1.) and SIPARIA, where no target is too small or large of renown. They are famed for their ritualistic cannibalism, during which they cook and consume the livers of their targets, through which they believe to absorb part of their memories and skills. Some people also claim that they possess shape-shifting abilities gained from their particular diet, though this is disputed.

CHIMILEEN: see BRANCHBRAIDING.

CHIMON: Lak. Large lake in the east of PELASGOS, in the highlands east of the BATHAKOL Mountains. It is largely fed by the river ACHTHOS and leads into the river ELISSANAS.

CHIRA: Lak. Salty endorheic lake in the south of LYRIDIA, and a remnant of the now dry STRAIT OF NÁRTHEL.

CHIREA: 1. Geo. Hills in the west of PELASGOS, along the southern-face of the CALDERAN Mountains and the western-face of the BULOPARRI MASSIF.

2. Rvr. River in the west of PELASGOS, flowing for 166-miles from the THAUMAS ridge, before joining with its parent river TRIKHOLL.

CHIRONA: Mil. Str. Fortress in the north of OPHIUSSA, situated atop a rise in the ANNEAMAL forest, overlooking the border with GNOTH.

CHIRURGEON: Med. Voc. Rnk. In the KORACHANI EMPIRE, surgeons, often adept at flesh-manipulation and BIOMACHINERY. They are typically higher-ranked FLESHWRIGHTS.

CHIT: Cur. Common name for currency, including:

1. currency in the KORACHANI EMPIRE. See Vol II: Currency and Coinage in Elyden.

2. currency in the state of $\overline{\text{TRAKIA}}$. See Vol II: Currency and Coinage in Elvden.

CHITERA: Fau. Plr. 'Chiter'. Large quadrupedal omnivorous THEROPS, with powerful mastiff-like forelimbs and a branching calcified crest protruding from their head. They have flat bear-like faces with snub noses and wide mouths filled with sharp teeth that are used for eating nuts, tubers and bark, though which are also adept at eating meat. They are most common in AHRISHEN and MALAN, though are also indigenous to LYRIDIA, the HARÉSHK and the north of SAUA. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

CHITI: also 'the Red Pillar'. Int. Geo. A natural needle-like stone formation, rising over a mile in the middle of the RTHEI desert. The needle serves as a navigational tool to the ATHATI nomads of the area. Its base is jagged and tiered, home to an ancient red marble altar around which lie birch bark inscriptions; always fresh, unmoving.

CHITLAME: Fau. FIRMAMENTALLY-TOUCHED felid native to the savannahs in the south east of WESTERN MENISCEA – primarily VALA, CHAUTULA, VECTIS, and the south east of SHAZGIN. They have long gangly limbs and a hunched back that tapers down to their hips. Their faces are akin to those of cheetahs though their backs, necks and shoulders are covered in calcified plates and thick skin. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

CHIVAYOON: Geo. Geothermal region in the c south of DURCHAA^(1.), within which its capital city^(2.) is built.

CHIWENOOL: Dem. 'Chiwenan'. His. Ntn. Early FIFTH AGE kingdom that existed between c. -350 – c. 500 RM along the TROPIC OF RAH, in the KAZZARAN⁽¹⁾ peninsula in the north of WESTERN SAMMAEA. Little records exist of this culture, though the people of TATAR and Kazzar⁽²⁾, who inherited its lands, consider its people as careless and overly-concerned with the dealings of their deities. Most of what we know of the latter days of Chiwenool come from a series of lead plates found in the ruins of $\underline{\text{TADEROOKH}}$, that depict rampant abuse of slaves and the lower classes by shapers and their sycophants. It also detailed the practice of making $\underline{\text{FLOROANAN}}$ $\underline{\text{BODIES}}$ – a form of $\underline{\text{CREANT}}$ – through $\underline{\text{ATRAMENTAL}}$ mean.

The fragmentation of Chiwenool led to the formation of the more pragmatic SETTARS, who were famed stonemasons and engineers.

Today all that remains of Chiwenool are scattered ruins and disparate cultures that are descended from it. The nations of Kazzar^(2,) and Tatar both emerged from Chiwenool and the north west of BARRIER LANDS lies in territories that it once controlled. See Vol III: Extinct States.

CHIWEN: His. Lan. Now-extinct language spoken in the CHIWENOOL empire. The language of YAGHUK, spoken by the people of the BARRIER LANDS, is based on its alphabet and retains many words and etymologies. See Vol II: Languages.

CHLORIS: Pol. Third of the HENDECARCHIES of the FOREST KINGDOMS, located in the south of MALAN. Its capital is the city of ARIRDA, and it is ruled by the HENDECARCH ANARGUL XYLIA.

The kingdom is of a temperate-hot climate, with its southern regions made up of grasslands, which give way to sparse woodlands and the steppes of EGEAHAR in the north, and eventually mountains in the north east (including the MASIKA, USIARA, and USSIKA) in the north (near the border with STHAMAN) to thick forest, whilst in the east, it is dominated by rough terrain that forms the c western reaches of the ARGENT Mountains known as USIARA.

CHMEL: Set. Small fortified city in the region of SABURRA in the c of THE SURRACH (Pop. c. 12,400).

CHODAH: 1. Geo. western-most peninsula in the nation of EZASUH^(2.).
 Ceo. 320-mile-long mountain-chain dominating the west of EZASUH^(2.).

CHODENRII: Nou. 'Chodenrear'. Plr. 'Chodenriin'. Sup. Org. Rnk. An order of SHAPERS in the KORACHANI EMPIRE whose MINASTERIA(2.) has been based in the city of CLOTHO in KORACHAN since 3308 RM. Its members are ATRAMENTAL shapers whose SPHERE of influence involves plant matter.

Chodenriin tend to be more subtle than other imperial shapers. They are not as a flashy as INCENDIARIIN or as ubiquitous as TECHNARCANIIN, and it is likely that, given the Korachani empire's lack of regard for the natural world, they are simply not given the same degree of importance that the shapers of other Minasteria are awarded. However, they remain an important part of imperial life, and without their intervention most large imperial cities would simply starve.

Their most important role lies within institutions such as the MINASTERIA OF AGRICULTURE and the ATROPI HOUSES, where they work to improve crops to make them easier to maintain, more resistant extreme weather, shorten growing times, and perhaps most importantly, produce greater yields. They also work in the DROSS industry in a similar role. Apart from this they also take a hand-on approach, often working with TEMPESTARIIN overseeing the growth of crops.

They also work as arborists in places of wilderness as well as city gardens and parks, nurturing the green spaces, weaving nature into the very fabric of cities. They often work as curators and landscapers of private stately gardens, shaping trees and bushes into wondrous shapes and forms. They also work hard to keep weeds and other dangerous or invasive plants (such as the dreaded ASAPHODELIA) from encroaching on settled lands, destroying roots and spores so that they cannot regrow.

Chodenriin are not as widespread in the military as some other shapers, but they are vital for clearing dense woodlands and underbrush, helping armies march more quickly. Some Chodenriin can tap into vast subterranean networks of fungi, using them as a means of rapid communication eschewing the use of more intrusive TECHNARCANA-based machinery that is more delicate and more easily intercepted by enemies.

They can manufacture various objects and goods from living plantmatter. Anything from woven shields or armour to river-spanning bridges, all imbued with greater hardness.

They are adept at identifying, extracting and manipulating chemicals (including poisons) derived from plants, and many Chodenriin have an innate ability to correctly measure and detect such chemicals, making them important in the pharmaceutical industry (As well as potentially cunning manufacturers of poisons. Similarly, they can detect such substances in an individual and using their powers to extract them, nullifying their effects.

There are many other roles that a Chodenrii can accomplish, but the empire's disinterest in matters of the natural world prevent them from excelling in these roles. Indeed, it is likely that their equivalents in foreign lands who remain more connected with the natural world have a far vaster repertoire of skills at their disposal. See Vol IV: Spheres and types of Shaping.

CHOIL: Geo. Cave-system in the south east of GNOTH, along the north eastern-face of the HARKONNA Mountains and the north western-face of the HAKKA Mountains.

TAHALLI legends claim the caverns are rich in diamonds, though this cannot be proved due to two major Gnothi fortresses in the region, which only reinforces the belief amongst foreigners.

CHOIR: Sup. In the art of both FIRMAMENTAL and ATRAMENTAL and SHAPING common vernacular used to describe grand acts that commonly require multiple shapers to maintain concentration for a long time. Choirs usually take place in large groups and over extended periods of time, often at a detrimental effect to those involved. These grand rituals require many participants due to their great desired effects. See Vol IV: Shaping.

CHOIR UNSEEN: Lan. Oth. Vernacular common within the KORACHANI
EMPIRE for the OTHERLIFE, specifically the host of spirits that dwell within the OTHERWORLD.

CHOLE: Ele. Poi. Coke-like substance that is derived from sooty deposits made in regions that are dominated by MANUFACTORIES. Over millennia the soot and ash released from these structures has deposited and compacted into chole, which has various uses, including being turned into a poison and, in small quantities, as a soil-additive.

CHONENO: also 'the Crater Plains'. Geo. Savannah in the south east of MACELLARIA in the south of WESTERN SAMMAEA. The region is named after the thousands of large ant mounds that dominate it. Measuring some 10 – 20-ft. Wide, the craters are each home do hundreds of giant ants that grow to around 6" long. The surrounding plains are busy with ANTS gathering plant matter, and clashes between ants from different mounds are not uncommon, with soldier ants guarding their home mound from invasions.

CHONENO ANT: Fau. Giant ants, measuring some 6" long, that populate the CHONENO savannah in the south east of MACELLARIA. The bites of these ants are a known irritant, and the jaws of their soldier ants carry a particularly devastating pinch. While individual bites are merely irritating, dozens can lead to swelling and temporary paralysis, which massed bites sometimes leading to death. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

CHONUM: Geo. Large hillock in the plains of ARAAHT in the north west of ARKOS⁽¹⁾. The hillock is a remnant of a darker time in the regions' history where, under the rule of the LORDS OF THE MOUNTS, the city of SZAS opposed the influx of refugees fleeing the waxing of the so-called SHADOW IN THE DESERT that was engulfing KHARKHARADONTIS. By c. -400 RM the corruption of those beings fleeing north east into the CITADEL MOUNTS had grown to the extent that they were no longer recognisable as humans. Carrying ATRAMENTAL MALADIES with them, they became a threat to the Citadel Mounts, and Szas began to hunt them down across the ARAAHT, burning their bodies in great mounds – the largest of which became Chonum.

It is estimated that the mound saw no less than 20,000 bodies burnt on it. Forsaken following the end of the KHARKHARADONTID EXODUS, nature was allowed to reclaim it and now it remains as little more than a hillock, its dark history unknown to most.

CHORHYST: Sup. Geo. FIRMAMENTALLY ACTIVE region dominating the west of ACHAA^(2.), in the south of MENISCEA. The region is the largest known deposit of LODELITHS, causing the landmass to actually rise upwards, as though ripping away from ELYDEN'S surface. This known as the CHORHYST PHENOMENON.

CHORHYST PHENOMENON: Sup. Geo. Massive Firmamental effect in the south of WESTERN MENISCEA, dominating the western regions of ACHAA^(2.), though it extends north, affecting the south of $\underline{\text{TULURKRYPH}}^{(1)}$. The phenomenon is thought to affect a combined land area of around 405,000 square-miles.

The phenomenon has the consequence of lifting affected territories skyward, effectively peeling entire geological formations upwards from the water's surface. This has left a gigantic overhang in the west of Achaa with an area of around 300,000 square-miles overlooking the SEA OF IPERIA. The waters beneath this overhang are dangerous as unaffected boulders sometimes crash down into the Sea. Also, the constant influence of the Firmament has the effect of making the waters of the seas of Iperia and the ASEER churn, making navigation there difficult, and technarcane devices unreliable to use.

The regions affected by the phenomenon are notable for the high-concentration of LODESTONES found within their mass: a likely explanation for the phenomenon.

CHORISTER: Sup. Rnk. Specifically, a name given to SHAPERS who take part in acts of shaping that require a group. Choristers are usually accomplished shapers, who join forces with similarly-talented individuals to achieve results that would be out of their grasp otherwise.

They are common in ABACARDAT, where they are Atramentists, often working with technarcane engines to keep the worst of the amnesic effects of the SEA OF LETHEA at bay.

CHORSAIR: Soc. Rnk. In SUOR and other lawless coastal regions outside of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, bandits and pirates that have preyed on the people of NAARETH, the SOLEYN TERRITORIES and eastern MULCIBER.

CHOSEN OF MALICHAR, the: Soc. Mil. The SEVEN CHAMPIONS; the FOURTEEN APOSTLES and SEVEN-AND-FORTY DISCIPLES chosen by the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR following his rise to power between 7 – 14 RM, during the conquests of AZAZEM and LAASKHA.

CHOTLI: Rvr. River in the west of KORACHAN and tributary of the river PHAIA. It flows for 70-miles from the south eastern foothills of the OTHACHA Mountains.

CHOUNAL: Geo. 1. Peninsula in the south west of NÁRTHEL.

2. Mountains in the far south west of the above peninsula $^{(1.)}$, in NÁRTHEL.

CHRANDA: 1. (91-ft.) Rvr. Waterfall in the west of CHANDOS⁽³⁾, close to the eponymous city⁽²⁾.

2. Set. City in the west of CHANDOS⁽³⁾, linking the region with the city of ASAHUR in LAASKHA (Pop. c. 35,500).

CHRESTA: Lake in the c west of GNOTH, along the course of the river MARAGA.

CHRIL: Pol. Geo. Tribe in the c of MULCIBER, in the GROWING MOUNTAINS, in the north east of SAMMAEA. It is amongst the more rocky and uneven regions of the GROWING MOUNTAINS, with the spine of the Mountains forming its eastern-most border, beyond which are volcanic lands. It is most known to outsiders for the ATRAMENTAL WASTELAND of ULESSMAL that dominates its eastern-most expanse, and the undying beings that litter the scree-filled foothills of the Growing Mountains.

CHRISM: Set. Settlement in the region of SHAAT LOTHA in the c north of THE SURRACH. It is situated atop a region of concentrated ATRAMENTAL TAINT, and it extracts the ATRAMENTA for use in industry throughout the region (Pop. c. 8,000).

CHRITHA: Set. Small settlement in the south west of the TEMPLAR STATES, close to the border with TALZHAAN^(1.). It is known to trade with the small state and has close relations with its SORCERER rulers (Pop. c. 15.500).

CHRNITACHAGRS: Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED mud-marsh in the c south west of CYHLAGHARR, dominated by fumaroles. The region, consisting of some 10,000-square-miles, is inhospitable to mortal life and is shunned by the oghurs of Cyhlagharr.

CHROMATIC REEF, the: Geo. Reef off the eastern coast of LLACHATUL, to the north west of the BHALASSIAN ARCHIPELAGO (^{2,1}) in the PANTHEON ISLES. It is named for the brightly coloured corals and fish that dwell there.

CHRONICLERS OF EPOCHS: Org. Sages of the ORDER OF LORE, who originated in KHAMID, and who now live on a few isles in the BROKEN LANDS. They chronicle the passing of ages, and their knowledge spans the entirety of mortal life on ELYDEN, though few outside the order know of them

CHRONICLES OF THE OLD EMPIRE: Vol. Seven-volume historical treatise exploring the early centuries of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, penned by the KYONI historian ALERON MOREN. First published in Khadon in 3951 RM, it has never been out of print and has been translated into many languages. It is considered the definitive work on early imperial history, though has its detractors who claim he ignores some less illustrious facets of the wars of conquest, focusing instead on triumphs and propaganda.

CHRYSALIA: Geo. Expansive cave system in the west of the tribe of DATHOA, in the west of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. The caves are old and were home to ancient mortal communities, who took shelter in them in the FADING following the FOURTH AGE. Their descendants would go on to found the nation of ALLUCITA.

CHRYSAPHIUS' PATRICIANS: Vol. A reference work published every 5-years, describing, in detail, all of the established PATRICIAN HOUSES and their genealogies, heraldries, and relations, as well as business holdings and lands, and any changes that may have taken place since the last edition was published.

CHRYSELEPHANTOS, TEMPLE OF: Int. Rui. Ancient FOURTH AGE colossus in the east of PELASGOS, depicting a seated SHIE in finery. The statue is large – almost 100-ft.tall and is thought to have been housed in a temple that was destroyed long ago. The statue is black and gold, with its skin made of sheets of ivory that have blackened with age and golden drapery and jewellery, most of which has been stolen, revealing bare stonework underneath. Little is known of the shie that is depicted in the colossus, though it is likely that it was a ruler of some kind.

CHRYSE: Leg. Geo. Fabled island of gold off the eastern coast of TETHYSIA.
See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

CHTHACHI: lit. 'earth creature'. Myr. Fau. Chthonic creatures common in many myths and legends around the KORACHANI EMPIRE and the INNER SEA, some of which involve creatures and beings that were worshipped as deities during the FADING of the FOURTH AGE before the coming of the UNDYING MACHINE. The term originated in ancient PELASGOS, where the word chthon meant dead spirit.

CHTHAEITICATH: 1. Myt. Geo. Mythical underworld of N'RAKHI myth. Some scholars link the myth with the legends of the DEMIURGE SYNCHTHONITH, citing the myth as evidence for the existence of the Demiurge and its SCIONS, the so-called CHTHONIC CREATURES.

2. Geo. Large mesa in the c north of N'RAKH. Its base is peppered with shallow caves and neolithic designs.

CHTHONAUT: Lan. Rnk. Voc. KORACHANI word for spelunkers and chthonic explorers who are obsessed and/or fascinated by the subterranean world and who seek out caves and hollows, and often spend months if not years underground. They are largely self-sufficient and are adept at living off the deep land. They are also experts at navigating ELYDEN'S 'shallow' cave systems (so-named not because they do not link with the PRISON CARCERI), though others may be drawn by the dark chthonic realm of VORROPOHAIAH.

They are most common around VÂRR and CENTRAL LLACHATUL (which have the most entrances to the Prison Carceri), and in SYNCHTHONITHA and GRARNEÂST (which lie above the IRON MAZE OF DHARGUSHAN).

CHTHONIC: Geo. Pertaining to the deep places of ELYDEN, especially in relation to mythology and cosmogony. To those cultures that know of its existence, CARCERI is often seen as the epitome of the chthonic ideal.

CHTHONIC CREATURES: Myt. His. The scions and offspring of the DEMIURGE SYNCHTHONITH. The term is used collectively, to refer to the scions physically born to Synchthonith, as well as the chthonic creatures she shaped into existence during the FIRST AGE OF SHAPING. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

CHTHONIC GATE, the: Myr. His. Str. Ancient mythical monolithic gateway that is believed to be in the far south of the SAMMAEAN continent, beyond the ACHARKHARAN, though its true location remains disputed to this day.

It is said to be carved into the entirety of a mountain-face, believed to be the work of the DEMIURGE SYNCHTHONITH. The place is known only from the words and visions of OTHERWORLDERS and seers and none are confirmed to have ever seen it.

It is considered to be one of the NINE WONDERS OF THE ANCIENT WORLD by most historians.

CHTHONIC TEMPLE: His. Rel. Str. A temple in the north of KHARKHARADONTIS, carved out of a peak in the mountains of KUL, which is now mostly buried beneath the DUNE SEA. Explorations of the area have revealed little of the innermost chambers and corridors. Some believe that it was constructed by DVERGAI in the THIRD AGE, and that its design may be attributable to the DEMIURGE SYNCHTHONITH.

CHTHONITHON: 1. His. Ntn. Ancient state in the east of present-day PARTHIS.

2. also 'the Predecessor'. Ast. Con. Constellation located in the SOUTHERN HEMISPHERE. The sky around the constellation is known for its many shooting stars. See Vol II: Constellations.

CHTHYRID: Dem. 'Chthyrid'. Ntn. DVERG realm to the north of the nation of KORACHAN. The region is of a cool-temperate climate, with cold misty winters and mild dry summers. The entire nation is situated atop the highland plateau of THRAL, to the north of the RHAECHA Mountains, and it is known for its rocky terrain.

The people of Chthyrid are known for their catacomb-like structures and cities that are known as HYPOGEUM. Though many in Korachan believe that they live deep underground, they in fact live close to the surface, with skylights providing light for their abodes and greenhouses. The Chthyridi are very insular and xenophobic, though maintain relatively modern <a href="https://doi.org/10.1007/jec.2007/jec

The nation is old, dating back to 1217 RM, when it was granted to imperial-dwelling expatriated dverg and other FAE creatures following the PAPAL HERESY. The act was a political move to rid the empire of what was considered at the time to be undesirable peoples, and was largely successful with many thousands of dverg and other MORTALS abandoning Korachan and settling in the highland region around the BRMYIRID Mountains between c. 1217 and 1300 RM.

Its territories slowly expanded north into the south of the OLD FOREST over the ensuing centuries, attracting more disenfranchised peoples throughout this time, with many integrating with the dvergai hypogea as other founded new surface settlements, though over time these too would adopt the dverg tradition of digging down. Between these settlements the Chthyridi constructed various subsurface fortresses (collectively known as the UNDERHALLS), beneath which they linked their cities with great tunnels. They found veins of ore and gems, and dug deep shafts and mines that made little impact on the surface, keeping their industries secret from the watchful eye of Korachan. Tailings and waste material were deposited in voluminous hollows they encountered in their chthonic explorations, which are believed to be linked to the PRISON CARCERI.

As its industries increased, so did its population and Chthyridi ambassadors fostered tentative relations with their neighbours, including Korachan to the south, and they began trading ore for food and other needed resources. Korachan saw the wealth of assets that Chthyrid had available and early in the 33rd century moved its armies against it, leading to a protracted conflict now remembered as the NINETY-NINEYEAR WAR or, less commonly, the CHTHYRIDI WAR.

For decades Korachani armies struggled against the dogged Chthyridi defences, whose subsurface fortresses offered unparalleled protection against artillery and afforded their own troops various hidden exits through which they were able to harass imperial army camps and movements. The war ended in Korachani defeat in 3307 RM, which allowed Chthyrid to rebuild its lands.

The next centuries were marked with tentative growth and trade with surrounding lands, with positive relations made with the Old Forest, $\underline{\text{IPANAH}}^{(2)}$, and $\underline{\text{VARR}}$ following its abandonment by Korachan to the INTERREGES.

The nation grew confident in its wealth and prosperity, giving rise in c. 3450 RM to a succession of belligerent tyrants that are now remembered as the THRYION DYNASTIES. By c. 3600 RM they had started orchestrating anonymous slave raids into their old allies' territories. The SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE left Korachan in a state of chaos and its military decimated, enticing the tyrants into aggression that escalated into various periods of strife between the two nations, between c. 3710 – 3750 RM, in which slave raids were turned almost exclusively towards Korachan.

The period ended with the deposing of the Thryion Dynasties in 3766 RM and a peace treaty was signed with Korachan the next year, not only ending hostilities between the two nations but also Chthyridi slavery altogether. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

CHTHYRIAN: Lan. Language spoken in CHTHYRID. It emerged following the PAPAL HERESY from a mix of KORACHANI, UMMUSH loanwords, and the DVERGR tongue that had become common in Korachan. Over the years it has leaned more heavily towards it dverg roots, and today has largely left its human imperial roots behind. See Vol II: Languages.

CHTHYRIDI WAR: see NINETY-NINE YEAR WAR.

CHUACYLL: See. Small city in the far north west of SERROK (Pop. c. 12.800).

CHUADA: Set. City in the east of CHEIRA (Pop. unknown).

CHUCALA: Rvr. River in the c south west of CHEIRA, flowing for some 270-miles from various sources, before emptying into its parent, the river YAHNOTH PHTHAN.

CHUDAHUL: Lak. Lake in the north east of CHEIRA, forming a part of the flow of the river METAGHALA.

CHULAT: Geo. Badlands in the south east of THE SURRACH, to the south of the region known as the BLEACHED SHELF, just north of the caravanserai of KALAI.

CHULLIA: Rel. Dei. Primitive nature deity that is worshipped in households across the CITIZENRY OF THALI. Though worshipped as a collective entity that embodies the totality of nature (where it is written with a capitalised C), the name is also given to individual nature SPIRITS (3.) that make their home around nature and natural places and objects, such as trees, rocks, mountains, rivers, pools, and so on (in which case it is written with a lowercase c). Following the spread of industrialisation in Thali, chullias are now also attributed to places such as water refineries, quarries, mines and so on. It is commonly accepted that there are millions of chullias dwelling under each rock, tree, pool, etc. but there are also considered to be different facets of the same singular chullia – the many are the one and the one is the many.

This belief system is a very provincial practice that dates back to the early days of the FIFTH AGE following the FADING, and though more formalised and modern religions have since risen, the widespread collective belief in chullias is unlikely to ever be eradicated.

Many scholars and theosophists from the INNER SEA REGION have equated chullias with FAE, though there are notable differences, chief amongst them being the widespread belief that all chullias are in fact different aspects of the one true chullia. See Vol IV: Religions and Pantheons.

CHUMBRAIA: Rui. Current name for the once-fortified city in the north west of the UMBRA SOKHAR. It was once a fortified outpost of the empire, though due to the encroachment of the SHADOW IN THE DESERT, it was abandoned in c. 2840 RM after decades of trying to abide the advance with SIPHON ENGINES.

The SHADOW MARCH once passed through the city, which served as hostelry to pilgrims, though the route has since moved away from the ruin, which is said to be haunted by WEIRDLINGS and degenerates and other creatures of the ATRAMENTA, which skitter across empty streets and lurk behind concrete buttresses. Chumbraia is the name given to it by ETHERI nomads, who shun the place. Its original name as now lost to time.

2. Mil. Str. Coastal fortress in the south east of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES, named after the island it overlooks.

CHURCH: Rel. Str. 1. Religious structure common across most religions in Elyden, though they may go by different names.

2. KORACHANI churches (including cathedrals and chapels) point to the SEPULCHRAL PALACE. Because of this, most churches tend to point to the south, south west and south east, depending on their location relative to the Sepulchral Palace.

CHURCH CONFRATERNITIES: Int. Rel. Soc. Org. Laity clubs in nations that worship the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, whose members organise saintly festivals, and aid parishioners in rituals such as marriages and funerals. Each confraternity has a CONFRATERNAL HALL where members gather and socialise.

The Confraternities form an important part of the social life and culture of the settlements in which they are found, and larger cities may have multiple confraternities, each dedicated to a different saint or aspect of the UNDYING MACHINE, with members of rival Confraternities commonly competing against each other. These rivalries may escalate into generational feuds and gang culture that become pervasive across the settlement.

In the KORACHANI EMPIRE most members of the Church Confraternities are VOTARIES, and they take on leadership roles within the organisation, filling roles such as chairs, treasurer,

CHUROTH: 1. Int. Geo. Glass plains in the south east of KHARKHARADONTIS, to the north west of HADDURATH. The plains are renowned for their beauty and were first encountered by a NOAVATURI expedition in 1183 RM, and were fully documented by KORACHANI explorers in the KHARKHARADONTID UNDERTAKING of 1261 RM, and was painted by the artist SHERTUR PECE in 1268 RM, becoming famous across the empire and it is today one of the most well-known regions of Kharkharadontis, if only through his accounts and depictions. However, common knowledge of the region fails to mention that the plains are deadly to flying creatures, that crash into it, and a great many scavengers and predators make their homes there. During the wet season when nearby rivers break their banks, the plains glimmer for miles around, and are said to be quite beautiful.

2. Rui. Now-abandoned KORACHANI outpost, established in 1268 RM following the arrival to Churoth^(1,) of the KHARKHARADONTID UNDERTAKING. A settlement appeared around it, and it became notorious for its executions. Following its abandonment in c. 1499 RM due to increased ATRAMENTAL activity in the area, all that remained of it were its many gibbets and the barely decayed bodies of its last victims, which are said to haunt the region to this day.

CHURRALEI: Set. Caravanserai in the south of KREM. A trade-route leads south into the CUTHI city of GIRAYA (Pop. c. 7,200).

CHURTASH: Set. Settlement in the east of the tribe of ATEVEGOS, in the west of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. It is known for its daredevil paragliders who jump off the cliffs of the SATATLEG ridge (Pop. c. 4,000).

CHUSSA: (B. 3963 RM) Present chairwoman of the URTAN LEAGUE.

CHUTA: Set. Small fortified city in the west of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES, and part of a trade-route linking Soleyn with MULCIBER. It is known for its small SHIE ghetto (Pop. c. 8,350).

CHUTTUR: Set. coastal city in the KARAXHANES region in the south eastern mainland of the PANTHEON ISLES (Pop. c. 48,000).

CHYLE: f. Myt. His. Per. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, a 2nd generation SCION and daughter of the scion KHAR'ILLAE. One of triplets (the others being AZZARA and RESH), she is only mentioned in passing once in the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN, leading some mythographers to believe the birth was apocryphal or misattributed. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

CHYMRA: Ind. Ser. City in the far south west of GNOTH. It is an industrial centre and has many foundries where raw ore is worked into ingots ready for use or export (Pop. c. 36,300).

CHYPRE: 1. Geo. Small coastal region in the west of THE SURRACH, known for its orange cultivation.

2. Set. Major city in the eponymous region in the west of THE SURRACH. It is known for the vast orange groves outside its walls and its busy harbour (Pop. c. 50,000).

CHYRS: 1. Sea. Reef off the western coast of THE VORANDINE, west of the island of KEYUSH^(1,). It is known for its many eels and sea otters.

2. Mil. Str. Coastal fortress on the western coast of the island of KEYUSH^(L) in the west of THE VORANDINE, overlooking the eponymous reef. It dates back to c. 1560 RM, and was constructed on an atoll by KORACHANI colonisers. The atoll eventually became part of the mainland following retreating sea levels, and it was appropriated by the Vorandi people and expanded Today it serves as a lookout, keeping an eye on the western horizon.

CIAN: Set. Settlement in the c north west of TISARA, in the north eastern foothills of the ARGENT Mountains (Pop. c. 5,800).

CIDASUS: scholar who studied neolithic ruins in c. 2330 – 2360 RM. And found mention of the DEMITHO SHOSHATHANI.

CIEMBAS: also 'the Wretchlands'. Sup. Geo. FIRMAMENTALLY TAINTED region in the south east of LOEGRESS, just north east of the ENAELLON badlands. The region is noted for its strange appearance and grotesque terrain, in which large grey boulders, some of them hundreds of feet wide, are suspended in the air and held together by a thick tangle of green fleshy vines. The vines are pliable but immeasurably strong, and the entire region sways and undulates in a strange pulsing rhythm, seemingly in defiance of the combined weight of the boulders and of the vines themselves.

The entire area of the Wretchlands is around 1000 square-miles and is some 300-ft deep at its deepest spot, completely obscuring the natural terrain beneath. It is shunned by mortal life, though various creatures make the place home.

It is unknown what led to the region taking on this appearance and though some have postulated that it might be influenced by the <a href="https://docs.nctappear.com

CIHURR: Lak. Lake in the west of ELEKHID, forming part of the course of the river YAGNOTH PHTHAN.

CIRCUS ARCANE, the: Org. Travelling performing group that operates around THE INNER SEA. It is much like a normal circus though is famed for its performers, many of whom are shapers, as well as the supranatural creatures that travel with them.

The circus first appeared in c. 2800 RM and remains in operation to this day. There are no less than 12 different troupes travelling across the Inner Sea at any time, and all are owned and operated by the PATRICIAN HOUSE of SAMAR.

CIRRAN: Set. Fortified settlement in the south west of TRAKIA, known for its lemon groves (Pop. c. 7,200).

CIMMERIA: 1. Lak. Underground lake in the PRISON CARCERI, beneath and east of the BULOPARRI MASSIF in the c of PELASGOS.

2. Set. City, forming part of the PRISON CARCERI, close to the above lake. Though largely subterranean, the city has an exit to the surface world, east of the BULOPARRI MASSIF in the c of PELASGOS (Pop. unknown).

CIMMERIAN PALACE: Int. His. Str. Ancient basalt palace in the south east of SAMMAEA, over 2,000-miles west of the SEA OF LETHEA, close to the ephemeral shores of lake IBRAOBAL.

CIMMERIAN PALL: Sup. Geo. Region of Atramental Corruption in the north east of Pelasgos, close to the entrance to city of CIMMERIA (2.).

The region is riddled with DUSTSTONE formations and SHADOWISPS, and is shunned by most.

The region is categorised as a $\underline{\text{MODERATE THREAT}}$ by the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI}}$ Institute of Atramental Studies.

CIMMERIAN SANCTION, ORDER OF THE: Pol. His. Order in PELASGOS founded in 87 RM by an unidentified DESPOSYNI, following the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR'S disappearance. They were self-appointed defenders of the ATRAMENTA during the REIGN OF THE EMPTY THRONE, ensuring that it remained a power in the KORACHANI EMPIRE. The order became a powerful entity, akin to the VÁMAN SANCTIFIED ORDER OF THE INQUISITION, in upholding the strength and sanctity of the Atramenta. Their members despised SHAPERS, often seeking them out in single combat to slay them.

The order voluntarily disbanded itself following Malichar's return to power in 339 RM, though its members maintained the orders' ethos (possibly at Malichar's own behest), passing it on to their descendants, where the order supposedly returned to life as a MYSTERY CULT in c. 720 RM in the west of KORACHAN, centred around the city of CALDERA.

CINDATH: Geo. Mountain in the north east of EASTERN LLACHATUL, in the east of LOEGRESS⁽¹⁾, crossing the border into western KOMMEA. It is known for its vast yet shallow crisscrossing cave system that dominates its north eastern face, known as the BORAGH.

CINERIA: 1. Lak. Lake in the far north west of THE SURRACH, in the BAKHRAN STATES. The lake is notable for its dull waters, which reflect the grey peaks of the surrounding Mountains, most notably the CINERIOUS Mountains.

2. Set. City in the far north west of THE SURRACH, on the southern shore of lake Cineria^(1.). It is known for its sizeable LODESTONE mines, about 2-miles west of the city limits, and they are amongst some of the largest outside MENISCEA (Pop. c. 20,000).

3. Geo. Pass to the west of lake Cineria^(1.), between the Cinerious Mountains to the north and the BAKHRAN Mountains^(2.) to the south.

CINERIOUS: Geo. Small mountain-range in the far north west of THE SURRACH, forming an extension to the north of the BAKHRAN Mountains the range is known for its grey peaks.

CINNABAR WASTES, the: Sup. Geo. Unattributed supranatural wastelands in the far north east of Krem, along the border with RTHEI, that features heavily in certain passages of the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN. The region is known for its odd properties.

It is said that the Cinnabar Wastes was once home to an edifice of singular beauty and purpose, crafted by a DEMIURGE aeons before the FIRST AGE OF MORTAL LIFE, from a substance that is as yet unclassified. Over unnumbered millennia this great edifice fell victim to the ceaseless battering of the elements and the inevitable crawl of continents, and it crumbled, becoming buried and forgotten, but the deep red ore from which it was made seeped into the earth, changing not only the colour of the soil there, lending the region its name, but also changing its properties. The dust of the Wastes imbues those who consume it a closeness to the MATERIA OMNA that is unmatched across Elyden. The effects are intense and taxing on the body, often leading to seizures, comas, and even death.

Attempts have been made over the ages to capitalise on this phenomenon, and the city-state of ACACINNATH came close, by breeding herbs that grew in the dust, ultimately inheriting its properties, but the venture failed, with the effects just too unstable and powerful to harness. A few rare individuals survived ingesting the resin of such plants, and their descendants went on to fund the nation of CUTH, and they remain in power to this day as the powerful ACACINNATHI DYNASTY.

The region is categorised as HIGHLY DANGEROUS by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

CINNAMOLOGUS: Fau. Bright bird common to the SPICE ISLES and often seen along the costs of SURUTUR and IACIO. The bird is closely linked with the cinnamon tree, eating its fruit, and making nests from shards of bark that they strip off the trees themselves. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

CINORROUS: For. Small man-made forest outside the STEEL PALACE in ALMAGEST, and is used as hunting grounds by the city's nobility.

CIRCASTRA: Set. Small city in the c of THE VORANDINE, in the north of the IDREGAN Massif. It is a stronghold of the GODSMEN (Pop. c. 13,000).

CIRCLE, the: Str. Org. A private club in the city of ALMAGEST that is exclusive to PATRICIANS.

Many influential people are members, including politicians, magnates, industrialists, scholars, and theologists. Membership is by invitation, and new members must be sponsored by three existing members who must vouch for them, maintaining the exclusivity of the club. It is believed that many important deals of a political, economic, and personal nature and struck here.

CIRCLE OF THE SAN: Soc. Obj. Culturally-important location to the SAN nomads of the EHRENISIAN COAST. It is located in the south west of KHULL, and an artificially formed basin, shaped like a small crater, at the centre of which was once a large statue, which has since been destroyed.

The circle is visited by thousands of San in late winter, where they congregate in time for the Spring equinox, which they celebrate together before going their separate ways.

Though located in Khull, the Circle and lands immediately surrounding it are considered San territory, following an accord reached between the two people centuries ago.

CIRCLE SQUIRES, the: Org. Militant order in TZALLRACH with roots dating to the days of the VENATHI EMPIRE, and the circle of lieutenants of LABAISINGH. Its members can be found in ranking positions within the Tzallrachi military and amongst its elite soldiers.

CIRCLET OF THE LADY: Rel. Obj. Circlet awarded to the prophetess LADY MAELARTA in 1342 RM, which she wore until her death along the SHADOW MARCH in KHARKHARADONTIS in 1361 RM. She was canonised in 1522 RM and is now a patron to those undertaking the Shadow March, and the circlet was passed down to EXOCRINES who followed in her footsteps. Its last bearer was GROMORA OF KORACHAN.

CISNERIA: Dem. 'Cisnerian'. Ntn. A near-landlocked kingdom in the far east of WESTERN LLACHATUL, to the west of the SEA OF APHOTIS, next to a politically unstable region that is contested between the SOCIALIST REPUBLIC OF ALMAGEST, independent PATRICIAN HOUSES, ESSEVERA, bandits, and Cisneria itself, over rich UMBRA reserves.

A relic of FOURTH AGE tribal social structures only now embracing industrialisation, Cisneria is a land wholly under the sway of its monarchy and elective system, which are major aspects of everyday life. The seven Clans clamour to curry favour with the CHILD-MONARCH, influencing their decisions. This is all in the hope of swaying the Child-Monarch's appointment of a 7-year-old successor who will rule for the next decade when the current rules steps down at the age of 17. Their successors' Clan will gain great influence, and will directly shape the culture and economy over the next 10-years.

The Clans worship different aspects of the bestial deity THEREON, and are ruled by SHAPERS (traditionally SHAMEN and ANIMISTS) who claim lineage to this god, said to be a SCION of the DEMIURGE ARIMASPI. Their religion is maligned amongst outsiders for its practice of sacramental cannibalism, which is thought to be symbolic of their deity's deeds. On feast days willing volunteers are sacrificed, and their bodies consumed raw. Their skeletons are clad in elaborate jewelled armour which are placed in open crypts within their Clans' territories, where their families, honoured by the sacrifice, may commune with them.

Traditionally, miscarried children are also consumed by the parents, and upon death, the elderly are also eaten by family members. Eating the vessel is said to bring one closer to the spirit of the deceased, forming a connection. Despite this deep-rooted custom, many are now moving away from the practice as the Kingdom and its merchants encounter foreign customs. The people of Cisneria seek no acceptance from outsiders, and propagate myths and misinformation, including spreading the belief that their rulers are skinshapers able to shift into bestial forms, which remains a commonly-held belief outside Cisneria.

These practices and Cisneria's slow acceptance of industrialisation paint it in a negative light internationally. The turn towards industrialisation is a contentious issue amongst the elder Clan rulers, who use the example of Almagest and KORACHAN as what can happen when people turn to the natural world as a means of exploitation.

The capital, in VELVERDA, is rife with politicking, as the Clans devote great time and resources in the hopes of swaying the decisions of the monarch – both in the choice of successor, as well as the aspect under whose auspices the kingdom will be ruled. Due to its insular nature, very little is known of its history.

It became a target of Korachani colonisation in c. 1750 RM, most of which was conducted by its child states of ALMAGEST and SKAROS. The incursions were centred around region of ESSEVERA^(1.), which was rich in umbra reserves. This led to a long period of conflict that ended in c. 1800 RM with Almagest gaining control of the region, which has since become an independent demesne that remains contested by the three cultures today. Though Korachan was unsuccessful in spreading its culture in the region, its language, did gain a foothold, leading to the n corruption of the Azahari tongue into CISNERIAN, which to this day has many Korachani loanwords and corruptions. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

CISNERIAN: Lan. Language spoken by the people of Cisneria. It emerged from the earlier AZAHARI, though was corrupted by imported ALMAGESTI and KORACHANI languages following years of conflict and contact with imperial colonisers in c. 1800 RM. See Vol II: Languages.

CISSONAR: See. Small city in the c west of ABATTUR. It is situated along the main internal trade route of the nation and is a crossroads of trade and culture, famed for its large circular market (Pop. c. 18,200).

CISTERN OF KACHALILLA: Rui. Ancient abandoned cistern in the c west of KORACHAN, predating the rise of the KORACHANI EMPIRE. It was discovered during the laying of a dross pipeline in 3288 RM and was extensively excavated in the centuries following this, with various FOURTH AGE artefacts being recovered. It is sprawling in size, stretching for some 10 square miles and is divided into various sections which are linked by multiple levels of tunnels and viaducts, with roots dangling down from their roofs, some of them centuries old. There are hundreds of wells and shafts that link the cistern to the surface, though most are now destroyed, built over or ruined, and few people know of the structure that lies beneath their feet.

CISTERN OF MÉAT PUDON, the: Int. Str. Ancient subterranean aqueduct crossing the OKKHAMI Mountains^(1.) in the east of SAMMAEA, linking the cities of DA ARAE and OROAEGH, in Okkham and Pnessa, respectively.

The cistern itself is a wondrous feat of engineering and dates back to the early FOURTH AGE OF LIFE. It extends beneath the mountain at a perfectly level plane for 235-miles, and has thus far survived major damage, despite its age. The waterway is illuminated by shafts hewn through the natural rock that allow a degree of sunlight to penetrate the darkness, though the c-most part of the cistern, for a distance of some 50-miles is utterly dark and ships need their own source of illumination.

The cistern is well-travelled, with trade moving up and down its length, linking the disparate nations together.

CISTERN OF NERGAAL: Arc. Monolithic ancient sewers in the north west of KREM, thought to date back to the FOURTH AGE and an unnamed metropolis. The once-sprawling stone city above it is now ruined, overgrown and reclaimed in nature, and barely recognisable for the vast metropolis it once was.

Beneath, however, the cistern is largely intact, sprawling for miles like an underground labyrinth. Large chambers are still filled with water, travelling west from unnamed sources. Elsewhere, dry chambers lead to collapsed tunnels, vaults and other architecture. Only parts of the edifice have been explored, and it is thought to be infested by AL GHULS and other degenerates. Some believe that it may be linked to the depths of the PRISON CARCERI.

Despite the name attributing the construction to the DEMIURGE NERGAAL, there is little evidence supporting this and its origins are unknown, likely predating the ACACINNATHI EMPIRE that dominated the region in the end of the FOURTH AGE.

Many historians contend that the Cistern should be included in a revised list of WONDERS OF THE ANCIENT WORLD.

CISTERNS OF CONSANIS: His. Arc. Rui. Ancient cisterns, likely made by MORTALS over a prolonged timespan in the late THIRD AGE. The cisterns are gigantic, their walls and columns hewn to geometric perfection, with deep aqueducts that travel for miles upon miles, and intricate pneumatic pumps that lifted water from its deep reservoirs effortlessly. The cisterns were regarded as a feat of mortal engineering, and were likened by many to be cathedrals of the deep earth.

They were at the centre of a great Third Age metropolis that had faltered by the end of the FOURTH AGE, the ruins of which were repopulated by humans in the FIFTH AGE, and renamed LLAT. The Cisterns were destroyed by a careless act of rage in 3923 RM when the SHAPER KALLAIR PHAER levelled the city in a single monumental explosion of FIRMAMENTAL energy that resulted from an uncontrolled display of the LIGHT UNDYING. Today the city of Llat is cratered, its buildings collapsed into the destroyed hollows of the Cisterns beneath.

The site is considered by those who know about it to be worthy of inclusion amongst the WONDERS OF THE ANCIENT WORLD, though few know of it and its present state makes it difficult to appraise.

CITADEL MOUNTS, the: 1. His. Ntn. (c. -1190 – 352 RM). Early Fifth Age nation that once existed around the AMRAOT, to the south of the DAARKEN GULF. At its peak, the Citadel Mounts' territories encompassed all lands around the SEA OF ERIA, stretching around 200-miles inland. Descended from the UHLSAATI people who faltered against the predations of MULCIBER and its marauders, the people of the Citadel Mounts developed their own distinct culture, with their main cities (the native word for which was Dun; roughly interpreted as 'fort hall') hewn from and built around the large mesa-like formations of the KOHOD Mountain that dominated their eastern territories. The nation faltered under the gaze of the KORACHANIEMPIRE, which began its slow blockade of its lands in 264 RM, forcing the LORDS OF THE MOUNTS to surrender under the threat of starvation in 352 RM, after which point it became known a Korachani colony known as EHBOT – the imperial name for the Kohod Mountains. See Vol III: Extinct States.

2. Geo. ancient name for what are today the AMRAOT, TIPHEROT, and EHBOT Mountains in the north east of Sammaea, surrounding the SEA OF ERIA to the south of the DAARKEN GULF.

CITADEL OF DUSK: Mil. Str. Eastern-most citadel in TEMUJA, looking out over the SWORD HILLS to the HENDECARCHY of CYRENIA, in MALAN.

CITADEL OF DUST: also 'Higmih Surbeil'. Mil. Str. Walled citadel in the dust-plains of the south west of AZAZEM, after which it is named. The citadel was originally constructed in 902 RM, and repaired in 1720 RM, where it was linked to a MANUFACTORY below ground, becoming its main access point. Food pipelines lead out of the citadel, going mostly west, towards the city of BAAYN. Its great portcullis is busy with the passage of transport AMBULANTS.

CITADEL OF THE WANING MOON: Mil. Str. Large fort on a small sickle-shaped island (from which it gets its name) some 30-miles off the SARASTROAN coast, in the SEA OF TIAMA. CITADEL OF RUIN: Mil. Str. Fortress in the south west of NÁRTHEL, dating back to the times of the ancient AMNATHI KINGDOM, though heavily renovated by KORACHAN during the time of tensions with the VENATHI EMPIRE. At the time of the Venathi king LABAISINGH THE STRONG'S death in 151 RM, the Citadel of Ruin was the western-most of the line of fortifications known as the JAELAN REDOUBT.

Its original name now forgotten, the place was abandoned c. 1000 RM and was allowed to rot, the slow cankerous decay of its skin into rust rendering the land around it dead, its flora and fauna stunted and decrepit.

CITADEL OF THE SEVEN: Pol. Arc. Large minaret within the BASTION OF STEEL in KHADON, KORACHAN, that is the seat of power of the COUNCIL OF SEVEN, and home to the hall where they convene amongst themselves, away from the larger Parliament Chambers where representatives from the LEAGUE OF PATRICIANS petition them.

The citadel is home to personal quarters of the Seven, where they may retreat in lieu of leaving the Bastion for their personal abodes; as well as communal areas, a kitchen, guard rooms, and its own power generator. The citadel also has personal guards that accompany The Seven, as well as standing guards that form a part of the Bastion Army.

CITIZEN LEVY: Mil. Pol. Military practice in KOLCHIS, where those who reach the age of 16 must serve a minimum of 3-years in the military, typically serving as patrols along the border with ALMAGEST and assisting the full-time navy and armies. Those who serve the full 3-years are granted citizenship, which in turn bestows various rights and privileges. Many serve for longer than the 3-year minimum or go on to join the navy or army full-time.

CITIZENRY: 1. Soc. In the KORACHANI EMPIRE, the middle-classes. Though not exactly synonymous with FREEMEN, the terms are often used interchangeably.

2. Soc. Common term used in the CITIZENRY OF THALI to describe its people.

CITIZENRY OF THALI: Dem. 'Thalian'. Ntn. Large democratic empire in the south west of SAMMAEA, rivalling the empire of KORACHAN at its height. Its name is derived by the relatively just laws and political system that has ruled unchanged for centuries, and it has been described by the few imperial explorers to travel there as the closest thing to a utopia ELYDEN can hope to possess.

At its heart is the mythic City Undying, THALI, a relic of the first mortal days that not only survives to these dark days, but remains untarnished, one of the largest and healthiest populations in Elyden.

The Citizenry of Thali is well-known amongst scholars for its polytheistic belief-system (though other belief systems abound, including AELORANISM in the north), with all deities forming part of a greater pantheon, known as the Disc (though each enjoys dominion in differing regions). It is a powerful democracy with harsh, well-implemented laws used to maintain order and its cities are truly metropolitan, being home to not only humans but GIGANRI, halfbloods, and dverg, amongst other races. Slavery exists and is common, though in a heightened form that puts to shame the free lower-classes of many nations around the INNER SEA.

In many ways, Thali is an antiquated place that still practices ancient customs and maintains outdated beliefs. Its people tend to shun contact with distant realms (amongst which it classifies the lands around the Inner Sea), though land trade through middle-men is not unheard of, especially through NASTAL⁽²⁾.

It was not affected by the lowering of sea-levels as badly as other regions, which helped Thali solidify into the Citizenry of Thali in c. 2400 – 2600 RM. The region is now famed for its community kitchens, which form a vital part of its culture and religion, feeding those who are unable to fend for themselves. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

CITHAERON, KING OF SYRTIS: (B. 3957 RM) Pol. Present ruler of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of SYRTIS^(1.).

CITHARA: Set. Small city in the c of SABAISA. It is known for its production of harps and other stringed instruments (Pop. c. 12,000).

CITRINE MANUSCRIPTS, the: His. Rel. Vol. Ancient FOURTH AGE religious texts discovered in a cave in the CITRINE PLAINS in the west of the VESPERTINE LEAGUE, thought to have been written before the WAR

OF SCOURGING. They were sealed in pots with wax and buried in sand in the caves, leading historians to believe they were hidden there and never recovered.

Their discovery in 1175 RM played a large role in expanding our knowledge about ancient history. The Manuscripts contained meticulous timelines going back to the middle THIRD AGE, including kings lists and other details that are now considered paramount to our understanding of the ancient world.

The texts were translated over hundreds of years and are now housed in the library of BABAK.

CITRINE PLAINS: Geo. Expansive dry plains in the c of WESTERN SAMMAEA, to the north of the OTHALANT Massif, stretching across the border between the east of the CITIZENRY OF THALI and the west of the VESPERTINE LEAGUE.

The plains are arid, though farther to the north they become more fertile, with sparse scrub and grasslands dominating the east of the Citizenry of Thali and the c of the Vespertine League. The plains are home to the entity known as GATHANOTHA.

CITY KINGDOMS: See HARÉSHK, CITY KINGDOMS OF THE.

CITY-ENGINE OF UNNYARHIAL, the: Int. Tec. Geo. Ancient machinery in the deepest bowels of the ABYSM OF BARATHRUM, in the PRISON CARCERI, far beneath the far north of KHARKHARADONTIS. The machinery is expansive, covering several square miles, and is fused with the stone, covered in layers calcified growths and stalagmites from eons of water dripping onto it. Thousands of rows of vacuum tubes and binary cogitators are linked together into an archaic engine, the purpose of which is unknown to modem mortals whose minds cannot fathom the scale of the machinery in its entirety.

It is now considered one of the NINE WONDERS OF THE ANCIENT WORLD, though it remains one of the least explored of the wonders due to its exotic location.

CITY OF THE BLUE MOON: Set. Fabled lamasery believed to exist in the west of the OKKHAMI MOUNTAIN range in the eponymous nation, in the east of SAMMAEA. Mentioned in ancient FIFTH AGE accounts and myths from the region, it has since passed on to legends common across most cultures across ELYDEN, with fact becoming indistinguishable from myth.

In most accounts, it is a place of wise loremasters, who drink from a FIRMAMENTAL font that grants them long life and great wisdom, though they have removed themselves from the affairs of ELYDEN.

Its exact location is unknown, and if the Okkhami people know of it they seem to do their best to keep such knowledge away from outsiders (Population unknown).

CITY OF BRASS: see DAAZ.

CITY OF BRIDGES: see NASTHONO CITY OF COLUMNS: See DALATH.

CITY OF THE DEAD: Int. Rui. Necropolis in the north of the HOGGOTHA ISZ, in a level plateau in the eastern foothills of the KARKARMIS Mountains. It was buried beneath sand for millennia, and was revealed in c. 1500 RM, after which it was examined by explorers from the north. The city was expansive, probably with a population in the hundreds of thousands, all of which died suddenly without explanation. It is possible that a natural disaster or a magickal calamity or ritual were to blame for the deaths. Their skeletons remain in situ today, in the places where they were killed millennia ago.

CIVAT: Set. Small fortified city in the region of YTTRIA in the c of THE SURRACH. It is positioned along the course of seasonal rivers that appear in the region, feeding water to lake ZARAZESH for a few months every year. It is known for its gigantic twin cannons, weighing 20-tonnes and measuring 19-ft. Long. They remain operational and in-use to this day (Pop. c. 19,000).

CIXO: Set. Settlement and surrounding plantations in the far south of SURUTUR known for its cultivation and preparation of cinnamon (Pop. c. 8,200).

CLADE: Soc. Extended family groups amongst the DVERGAI. Large clades are comparable to towns or even cities, in the case of extended groups. A clade is usually led by the eldest surviving ancestor, with an inner cadre made up of their most direct descendants.

CLADE LORD: also 'Maharal'. Pol. In the latter days of LHAUS culture in the north of SAMMAEA, the scattered rulers of the lhaus race. The Clade Lords were creatures who, much like their DEMIURGE father IALDABAOTH, were obsessed with achieving immortality through constructs known as ITERANTS and KLADA.

CLAIRAUDIANT: Sup. Rnk. A SHAPER who performs acts of CLAIRAUDIENCE. In the KORACHANI EMPIRE they are known as PROCULIN.

CLAIRAUDIENCE: Sup. Rnk. SPHERE of SHAPING where the SHAPER is able to hear and speak at a great distance. The act is made easier if the target is also a shaper, in which case, a two-way channel may be established. This ability may be amplified through the use of TECHNARCANA, including IRON MANTLES⁽²⁾ and HEART ENGINES. Many shapers capable of clairaudience are also capable of CLAIRVOYANCE, though this is not necessarily the case.

CLAIRSENTIENCE: Sup. Rnk. SPHERE of SHAPING where the SHAPER is able to sense emotions and feelings at a great distance. This ability may be amplified through the use of TECHNARCANA, including IRON MANTLES⁽²⁾ and HEART ENGINES.

Some clairsentients are unable to detect emotions and feelings at a distance, but are instead able to pick up remnant auras, emotions and memories from touching objects or people. This is also known as PSYCHOMETRY.

CLAIRSENTIENT: Sup. Rnk. A SHAPER who performs acts of CLAIRSENTIENCE. In the KORACHANI EMPIRE they are known as PROCULIN.

CLAIRVOYANCE: Sup. Rak. SPHERE of SHAPING where the SHAPER is able to see at a great distance. This ability may be amplified through the use of TECHNARCANA, including IRON MANTLES⁽²⁾ and HEART ENGINES. Many shapers capable of clairvoyance are also capable of CLAIRAUDIENCE, though this is not necessarily the case.

CLAIRVOYANT: Sup. Rnk. A SHAPER who performs acts of CLAIRVOYANCE. In the KORACHANI EMPIRE they are known as PROCULIN.

CLAMANT: Set. City in the c north of the UMBRA SOKHAR, in untainted lands between the MARASMUS and the ABCESS WASTES. It is known for its caste of military SHAPERS, who make up an elite force in its armies. It once formed part of the trade-route linking KITHALOI with NOAVATUR (Pop. c. 42,500).

CLAN: 1. Pol. Rnk. Ruling noble houses in the Kingdom of CISNERIA. There are many such clans, but seven amongst them are considered to be the high-clans, whose influence extends to the rule of the CHILD-MONARCH. The seven High-clans are BERMION, DISLMA, GYSTAR, HOMMAL, KRAKYR, KRISLOR, SKULFUR.

CLAND: Soc. Set. OGHUR settlements, formed of extended family groups. Leadership is by kratocracy, with duels and brawls common to resolve rulership dispute. A matriarchal culture pervades clands (with the worship of a semi-divine fertility goddess, ISHATA), and is thought to be a throwback to ancient fertility cults that existed in the early centuries of the FIFTH AGE on the KORACHANI PENINSULA, before the rise of the EMPIRE.

CLAR: Alc. Set. Fortified settlement in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of MEDES. Its people are known as misanthropes, and its ALCHEMICAL libraries are noted throughout the Haréshk, though viewing is forbidden to most. The alchemical products are sold to merchants passing through the settlement during their route of the GREAT ROAD, with many finding their way across the INNER SEA REGION (Pop. c. 6,800).

CLARISARAEN: Set. Major city in the c south west of RAONGEN^(2.), and the second-largest city in the INDUSTRY (territory) of TAERIN^(1.). It is situated along the southern shore of lake QILI (Pop. c. 1,204,000).

CLASSICAL PLANET: see PLANET, CLASSICAL.

CLASSICAL AMMASHIN: Lan. See AMMASHIN, CLASSICAL.

CLASSIS OF KORACHAN, the: Soc. Pol. Group of elders (commonly PATERFAMILI) within the hierarchy of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, following the church's fracturing in two after the SUNDERING OF THE KORACHANI EMPIRE in 3705 RM.

CLAVESIGNATI: Int. Rel. Mar. Org. Fanatical troops of the KHULLAN INQUISITION. Using the key as their icon, they symbolically protect the tenets of the inquisition and act against its enemies, also serving to spread KHULLAN propaganda.

They first appeared in c. 2775 RM, when they were used as elite troops in the Khullan Inquisition's campaign of extermination against the SORCERER-KINGS (3.) and worshippers of pagan deities, and they have remained in use since then. The slow spread of the CHURCH OF THE SHADOW TRIUMPHANT across KHULL during the early 4th millennium RM, saw the Khullan Inquisition officially convert in c. 3575 RM. Following this time, the Clavesignati (most of whom had already been fervent members of the Church of the Shadow Triumphant for some time) became increasingly fanatical in their religious fervour.

They are recognised by their baroque antiquated armour, which they favour over more modern military garb, as well as the golden key iconography that adorns their tabards and banners.

CLAVIS: Oth. Form of OTHERWORLDER that commonly serves as guides, filling the conventional role of otherworlders in imperial culture. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

CLAY LEGION, the: Int. His. Rui. Archaeological site beyond the north of the NEHNAXIAN Desert in the c of TETHYSIA. Traces of life size clay statues were found relatively often throughout the FIFTH AGE, mostly by shepherds, some of whom would come across shards while walking with their animals. More rarely, merchants would bring a near-complete clay statue depicting a warrior or servant to the crossroads city of TANITH with words of many more fragments on the edge of the Nehnaxian Desert.

The CELEBI Till al Sar heard of these rumours in 3999 RM and decided to mount an expedition to the desert in the hope of unearthing more. It took him years to gather more information and to collect the funds and resources to do so, but finally a great archaeological party Set. off from Tanith in 4002 RM to excavate the region known as MESSIA.

After three years, excavations struck the foundations of what turned out to be a massive funerary complex in which are thought to have been buried tens of thousands of life size clay statues depicting soldiers of various rank, station and armament, as well as servants. Furniture, objects and weapons of myriad description, as well as scroll with a complex script, were all found buried with them, many in secret chambers that were initially missed. Hundreds of largely intact statues were extracted from the site and moved to Lysiteas where they were studied. Attempts were made to unravel the script that covered many of the objects, but to no success. Most of these initial statues were sold by Till al Sar to collectors across ELYDEN, until this was forbidden by the OFFICE OF THE PRIME MINISTER, with an edict stating that the statues were a part of Tethysian history and belonged in Tethysia in a museum where all could view them. The MUSEUM OF MESSIAN ANTIQUITIES was inaugurated early in 4007 RM, and it is filled with lavish displays, showing the restored objects and statues.

Excavations are ongoing to this day, with archaeologists noting that no living remains have been found – no skeletons or bone fragments or shards, and the nature of the culture that constructed the vast temple and created the thousands of statues remains a mystery. The site is constantly guarded against theft by military personnel, and anyone caught looting is sentenced to death.

CLEANSER: Sup. Rnk. Beak-masked ATRAMENTAL SHAPERS in OPHRAM that emerged to deal with the growing ATRAMENTAL TAINT in surrounding regions, such as the HOGHSOTHAMON.

CLEANSING, CHURCH OF: Rel. Religion appearing in c. -300 RM in the CITADEL MOUNT of DUN SZAS following the appearance of the KNIGHTS OF SZAS in response to the increasing numbers of DEGENERATES and ATRAMENTALLY-DISEASED moving through the ARAAHT from the south west. The church was a direct result of the growing distrust of the ATRAMENTA and the misanthropy of the Citadel Mount of Dun Szas, and was actively encouraged by the Knights of Szas, which by then had grown quite influential in the city, to the point that by 55 RM the lords of the Knights of Szas had come to rule city and religion alike, and sundered the city from the rest of the Citadel Mounts.

Fanaticism was rife amongst its members, with self-harm encouraged by some radical sects as way to maintain faith and strength against the Atramenta. Though popular in Dun Szas the religion never spread far, gaining a small following in the region of GELHANA. Though it was recognised by the other Citadel Mounts, it never held much weight in the regions' other cities.

The Church was eventually destroyed by KORACHANI ICONOCLASTS^(1.) in the decades following imperial arrival to the Citadel Mounts in 352 RM, though it was resurrected millennia later in a corrupted form in c. 2,500 RM by a plutocratic FIRMAMENTAL caste that supplanted the ousted merchant lords following the drying up of trade in the region. The resurgence did not survive SARASTROAN attacks on the city in c. 2800 RM. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

CLEDDORA: Rui. Veh. Wrecked PARTHISAN ship in the deep waters of the MAIDEN ISLES in the BATHASHAL OCEAN. It sank during a storm in c. 2200 RM and is believed to have been carrying a great treasure at the time.

CLERIA: Set. Settlement in the north west of Pelasgos, famed for its CLEROMANCERS, which form a large part of its cultural heritage. It lies along the SHADOW MARCH, where its many cleromancers do their best to attract the attentions of impressionable pilgrims (Pop. c. 2,850).

CLEROMANCY: Mys. Form of divination through casting of lots or bones. Typically, this is a seen as charlatanism, but some individuals use supranatural talents or SHAPING to achieve positive results. The practice remains common in various communities, with many settlements having an occultist who practices such forms of divination. It is most common in Pelasgos, Vârr, Lyridia Dhai and Lyridia, and was named after the PELASGOSI settlement of CLERIA, which was a traditional example where the practice was popular.

CLÍDNA: Set. Settlement in the west of LOEGRESS^(L), along the south eastern shore of lake RUWETH (Pop. c. 6,200).

CLIFFWARDEN: Mil. Rnk. Military title and rank in KASPIA.

CLIFFS OF BERDEN: also 'Beren'. Geo. Expansive cliffs in the east of SAMMAEA, to the north west of the SEA OF LETHEA. Named after their discoverer, NAVAH BERDEN.

CLIMATE: a way of measuring the average pattern of temperature, rain, humidity, atmospheric pressure, wind and other meteorological variables in a given region over long periods of time.

The theory of climate was first proposed in 3992 RM by PHIRUN KAMERATHIS, a PELASGOSI scientist who noted that certain regions across ELYDEN share similar conditions, which were coined climate.

CLIVHASS: Set. Coastal settlement in the west of the PANTHEON ISLES, in the region of KARAXHANES (Pop. c. 4,000).

CLOAK OF MYKRAS: Myt. His. Obj. The DEMIURGE ACHAIAH was commonly depicted in the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN as wearing a robe or cloak of fungi, vines and thorns, which was said to change appearance with the seasons, as well as her mood. Though depicted as an item of clothing, it is thought to have been part of her; inseparable from her body, at least until her persecution by ASHTERATH led to her being changed into the TREE OF AGEN. See Vol IV: the Mythologia Elyden.

CLOCKWORK WARDEN: Tec. Clockwork constructs commonly crafted in PELASGOS to serve as guardians of cities and other locations. Deep within each such clockwork warden is a LARVA, which is capable of observing the world around it through the ATRAMENTA. A caste if SHAPERS works with these clockwork wardens, and are able to view the world through them at a distance, allowing them to rapidly switch views between different wardens from the comfort of their precinct barracks.

CLOEAS: Set. Small city in the north west of TISARA (Pop. c. 12,500).

CLONE: also 'Umbran'. Sup. Tec. Artificially-born creature created through use of TECHNARCANA, made by various nations and organisations across ELYDEN, most notably the KORACHANI EMPIRE and PARTHIS, though they are far from being the only ones. By far the most common clones were the STEEL LEGIONNAIRES of the Imperial army, though various other varieties of clones, such as HAEMONCULI and HAGHOUERS, have existed throughout the ages.

The first true clones were INCEPTED in imperial ATELIERS in the north of KHARKHARADONTIS in c. 2290 RM following centuries of study and experimentation following the creation of the first LARVAE in 2123 RM.

Clones are made from ESSENTIAL SALTS derived from donor bodies that are used to grow germ organs and bespoke bodies at an accelerated rate, which are sutured together before gestating in a VAT prior to their eventual INCEPTION.

A clone's purpose in life is paramount to its design both before and during gestation, and its body and mind are meticulously engineered by LOCUMNI, BIOMECHANISTS, and TECHNOLOGISTS to maximise relevant strengths and minimise (where possible) weaknesses. For instance, clones intended for use in battle were designed primarily as warriors, so had powerful and tough bodies, and simple minds intended to accept and carry out orders with minimal problems.

The one common trait with most clones is that they degrade quickly, which is one of the disadvantages over PALINGENESIS, another similar process, that produces more durable specimens that are less prone to rapid decay. While they may be strong, their bodies generally age at an alarmingly fast rate, giving rise to all manner of biological complications and deformities. They are born adults, their bodies having undergone an accelerated growth in artificial vat-like wombs, fed with amniotic fluids and ATRAMENTAL substances as they gestate. The degradation usually happens between 7 – 12 years after the clone is born, and euthanasia is the most common form of action once symptoms begin (Steel Legionnaires are a notable exception to this, and they are known to live for centuries, if they do not perish in battle first).

It is not unheard of for the elite and wealthy (royalty, ARCHPATRICIANS, ARCHSHAPERS, etc) to have clones of themselves made. These are kept for emergencies, and are used for organ and blood donations if needed. Such clones are kept in stasis in vats until needed, and are a lucrative, if a niche, business across the Inner Sea. This means that some of ELYDEN'S most powerful aristocracy are extremely old.

Clones are distrusted due to cultural stigma that has been allowed to fester for many generations. The Church of the Undying Machine and the government fears them for reasons that are unknown to the general populace, and after centuries of this bigotry pervading imperial culture, it has become endemic to most of its people whose attitudes may range from indifference at best, to distrust, hatred, or sheer loathing at worst. Those of more stable dispositions may simply ignore them, though others may spit on them, or actively try to cause them harm. A rare few may pity them, though most will simply regard them warily.

CLONE'S CENOTAPH, the: Arc. Cenotaph outside the city of KHADON in KORACHAN, dedicated to all the STEEL LEGIONNAIRES and CLONES that gave their lives for the KORACHANI EMPIRE throughout its history. It was erected in 3274 RM following the death of many clones against PARTHISAN forces during the liberation of TARTAK over a century earlier.

The cenotaph is the largest and most famous of many such memorials scattered across the empire, many of which are now decrepit or covered in graffiti. The Clone's Cenotaph is in better condition and is tended to by volunteer, and it is a site of pilgrimage to many MANUMITTED CLONES.

CLOTANNA: Rvr. River in the south of TISARA, flowing south from sources in the Rotten Mountains of VOULLOR into the north of TETHYSIA.

CLOUD SCULPTING: Fir. Mys. FIRMAMENTAL-based art form mostly practiced in MENISCEA, where clouds of vapour are solidified and used in art and sculpture. These forms are not permanent, though when expertly crafted can still last years. The nations of LANTUA and AURUM^(2.) are famed for this, with the city of LAHUL, which is high in the MENEFIR Mountains.

CLOUDLANDS, the: see ATANEEDUSH.

CLOUDY COAST, the: 1. Geo. southern coast of HOLOLACH^(1,), comprising the entirety of the coastal HOLIASOR Mountain-range. The clouds in the name actually refer to the mist that forms when cool water-filled air descends from the mountain to meet warm air carried north from SAMMAEA and is very common occurrence.

2. common name in the KORACHANI EMPIRE for HOLOLACH (1.).

CLOTHO: Set. City in the north west of KORACHAN (originally the south east of AZAZEM), renowned for its larvae VIVARIA and DROSS processingplants.

It traces its history back to c. 150 RM, where it quickly became an agricultural hub for many centuries. As Azazemi productivity was killed by over-harvesting and increased use of the ATRAMENTA, Clotho was abandoned in 930 RM. The newly-risen PATRICIAN-lord In Clotho bought large tracts of land in the area in 2406 RM, transforming the place into the largest MANUFACTORY-vivarium in the north of the INNER SEA, after which it became absorbed by western Korachan.

It has been the base of the $\underline{\text{MINASTERIA}}$ of $\underline{\text{CHODENRIIN}}$ since 3706 RM (Pop. c. 372,000).

CLOVEN TOR: also 'Thotath'. Geo. Prominent geological feature in AHRISHEN. Local legend has it that this uniquely-shaped natural monolith came in the path of a belligerent giant who struck it with a great axe, cleaving it in two – a story from which the present-day name is derived.

CLYDDOR: Set. Coastal settlement in the east of LOEGRESS^(1.), overlooking the BAY OF ERMAE^(1.). It is famed for its heavy winds that blow in from the north east (Pop. c. 7,300).

CLYNEM: Set. Small fortified city in the south west of CHRIL in the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 3,500).

CLYRTH: Rvr. River in the north west of KOMMEA, flowing south east for 150-miles from sources in the CINDATH and THUILOR Mountains before meeting its parent, the river LUGHBRAEN.

CLYSIS: Set. Conurbation in the c east of PELASGOS, famed for its asphalt 'quarries', which scrape seep asphalt from the surface of the nearby AENAN OIL SANDS (Pop. c. 6,500).

CNASSENIA, CRUCIBLE OF: Geo. Large shallow crater in the north east of KHULL, in the north west of SAMMAEA. It is around 30-miles wide and has existed for longer than any records from the region, and likely dated back to the SECOND AGE. There are traces of ancient mining works, possibly dating to the FOURTH AGE, though there are no extant industries in the region, which is considered to be of little value by the Khullan people.

COALAHIR: Set. coastal settlement in the far north of ELAT (Pop. c. 6.000).

COCHELON: Fau. Giant snail native to lake ELRI and other temperate freshwater lakes in the NORTHERN HEMISPHERE. It is amphibious and is around 6 – 8-ft long with a large hard shell. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

CODEX OF ASHKERON: Art. Vol. A great allegorical epic penned by various HARÉSHKI prophets between c. 1400 – 1800 RM. The codex and the tenets it espoused are likely contributing factors to the cultural strength of early Haréshki immigrants.

CODEX OF THE TAL 'BA: Sup. Vol. ATRAMENTAL and FIRMAMENTAL treatise on the nature of ELYDEN, and the MATERIA OMNA, originally penned in the LIGHTHOUSE OF ALTAN in TAHALL in c. 700 RM. Its author unknown, the codex is likely a collection of observations made by skilled DICHORA. It has spawned many an imitator, some cursed by the tome to overreach themselves, others becoming powerful Dichori themselves. It is thought that ARESTAS EVERTAN is in possession of such a copy.

CODEX ARCANUM: Alc. Mys. Sup. His. Vol. One of the six EUDALEON

CODICES, and perhaps the most infamous, detailing subjects of a more esoteric nature. It goes into detail regarding the nature of the MATERIA OMNA, the PRIME LACUNAE, and the natures of the ATRAMENTA and the FIRMAMENT. Of interest is perhaps the most comprehensive early FIFTH AGE treatise on the fundamentals of SHAPING, and SPHERES, with various essays and postulations regarding the reasons why MORTALS are able to manipulate the Atramenta and the Firmament the way they do. There is much discourse regarding ALCHEMY and the philosophical and material quest for transmutation, with past works in the field by other alchemists all catalogued and either praised or criticised.

Most of the sheets, which were only compiled after Eudaleon's disappearance in 1438 RM, were written in mirrored text in cyphers that changed from page to page, using various inks that were only visible under certain spectra of light, with different inks used randomly on different words, which altogether made the act of compiling of a reliable transcript incredibly difficult. Indeed, the fractious history of the volume, which changed ownership many times over the years, during which it was moved from library to library, meant that the first unified attempts at public translations were only made many centuries later.

It was unbound sometime in the 24th century and the contents were eventually divided, which is where a reliable history falls apart. The separate parts likely spread across the INNER SEA REGION following this, though in c. 3300 RM sheets began to be tracked down by members of HOUSE USHAR at great cost. This feat purportedly took centuries and untold money to complete, though rumour in literary circles claims the Codex Arcanum had been procured in its entirety by c. 3600 RM.

The estate where it was housed was destroyed in 3697 RM, and there is no mention of the Codex following this time, and many literary historians believe that the Codex was either destroyed or lost during this time. Copies and facsimiles occasionally appear for sale, though their authenticity is sketchy at best.

There are many rumours about other less well-known contents of the volume, including dark magicks, demonic summoning, animism, necromancy and early PALINGENESIS, amongst other more vile and obscure subjects.

CODEX DEOCHAN: Mys. Sup. His. Vol. One of the six EUDALEON

CODICES, focused on subjects such as mechanics, engineering and geometry, with many designs for inventions that were far ahead of their time.

The codex is now in the possession of the MUSEUM OF ANCIENT ARTEFACTS in TETHRA, PARTHIS, where it is held under lock and key, away from public scrutiny.

CODEX ELDORIA: Pol. His. Vol. KOMMEAN records chronicling all its rulers since the founding of the ABBARUDIAN DYNASTY in 3172 RM.

CODEX LIORNIS: Mys. Sup. His. Vol. One of the six EUDALEON CODICES, detailing the geography and physics of the MATERIAL PLANE. It is divided into three sections, the first being a comprehensive world atlas, showing the extent of mortalkind's knowledge of the ELYDEN'S lands and waters during the early 2nd Millennium RM. The second section details theories and phenomena related to geography, including the motion of rivers, the growth and decay of mountains, amongst many others, as well as the first FIFTH AGE mention of the possibility of lowering sea levels. The third section details a comprehensive index for all the locations depicted in the first section.

The Codex is named after its most longstanding owner – PATRICIAN HOUSE LIORNIS, though has since changed hands many times over the years, and it is now believed to be in private ownership.

CODEX MISHUR: Mys. Sup. His. Vol. One of the six EUDALEON CODICES, focused on the study of ONEIROMANCY, DREAMS and the DREAMWORLD. It was instrumental in standardising various practices related to the field of Oneiromancy in the KORACHANI EMPIRE and the MINASTERIA (2.) of SOMNIARII still makes use of some of its teachings to this day.

The Codex is named after one of its more infamous owners, though its present whereabouts are unknown. Good quality reproductions can be found in institutions of higher learning across the INNER SEA REGION.

CODEX RATHANASA: Mys. Sup. His. Vol. One of the six EUDALEON
CODICES, focusing on religion and theological teachings. Little is known of its true contents as the codex was destroyed by the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE in 1443 RM for its heretical and blasphemous contents. Various reproductions have surfaced over the years, though the authenticity of their contents remain doubtful.

CODEX TECHNARANA, the: Tec. Vol. A comprehensive collection of technarcane treatises, histories and blueprints crafted and compiled by the techno-historians of the AIWAHAN ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION. It is kept within the main library of its LANGUE⁽¹⁾ in MALICHARICHAN and it is forbidden for outsiders to view it.

CODEX VAERDEN: also 'the Vaerden Codices'. Mys. Sup. His. Vol. The largest of the six EUDALEON CODICES, split into two volumes, the Codex Vaerden details the natural history of the INNER SEA REGION in the first volume, and the rest of the known world of the day in the second. Despite its many inaccuracies, it serves as a relic of what our understanding of the natural world was three millennia past and how much has changed since then, particularly the flora and fauna that have died out.

The Codex has been housed in the Khadon Museum of Natural HISTORY since 3189 RM thoughts not available for public viewing.

CODUS CEVIR: Int. Sup. Dre. Str. Oneiric fortress-palace in TAES. It is part of a blasted marsh-like DREAMSCAPE that plays host to a single living creature – the ONEIRODYNIC EMPRESS, ruler of Taes. Though this is his residence, the true administrative centre of the nation is the city of SWEVEN.

COELA: (16,084-ft.) Geo. Highest peak of the COELIS Mountains in THE OLD FOREST.

COELIS: also 'the Tainted Peaks'. Geo. Mountain-chain in the west of THE OLD FOREST. The Mountains are dark, and seem to attract storm clouds which haunt its peaks all year-round, lightning making glass of its highest peaks. The place is shunned despite the legends and history that are said to surround it. Its highest peak, which glints sinisterly under the full light of day, is called COELA.

COELLA: Set Settlement in the region of YTTRIA, in the c of THE SURRACH (Pop. c. 8,000).

COELRA: Set. Major coastal city in the south west of LIEVTHRA. Many districts of the city are built atop high vaults which were originally designed to negate coastal flooding (Pop. c. 520,000).

COGENT: Pol. Rnk. Rank within the SANCTIFIED ORDERS OF THE INQUISITION, specialised in apprehending the guilty for questioning by the INTERROGATORS. Cogents are typically recruited from ACCENSORS who have proven themselves in the field, and many go on to become Interrogators in their own right, or even INQUISITORS.

COGNATE: 1. Dem. 'Cognatensia'. Soc. Pol. In the KORACHANIEMPIRE, elite PATRICIAN HOUSES that can trace their roots back to a common ancestry in Korachan, making the family line at least 4,000 years old. Influential and of great power, there are no more than twenty base families, though over time and dilution of blood, many more family names (not all of which are officially recognised) now exist. The most respected cognates still reside in Korachan.

2. Soc. Formerly, a name given to those of relatively high station in the KORACHANI EMPIRE who forsook the cities for life on the road, where they lived as pilgrims of the Machine. Recognised by their rust-red robes and often metal accourtements, such cognates usually group together in small parties, travelling a never-ending circle across THE SHADOW MARCH, visiting holy sites and preaching to the 'unknowing' (those of lesser station who have not fully devoted themselves to the UNDYING MACHINE).

The SUNDERING OF THE KORACHANI EMPIRE in 3705 RM left the cognates sundered, with most remaining in the HIGH-EMPIRE.

COGNATENSIA: see COGNATE 1.

COGNIGRAPH: also 'thought recorder'. Tec. Obj. Sophisticated TECHNARCANE engine that is capable of transcribing the thoughts of anyone linked to it onto hard wax cylinders, which can then be played back on PHONOGRAPHS. The machine is in truth a HEART ENGINE in which is interred a larva with TELEPATHIC abilities, who is able to view the thoughts of those linked to the engine, whispering what it sees into a phonograph recorder, that preserves the transcript on wax cylinders.

COGNITARII: Nou. 'Cognitarear'. Plr. 'Cognitariin'. Also 'psychonaur', 'thought jockey', and 'telepath'. Sup. Org. Mil. Rnk. Order of SHAPERS in the KORACHANI EMPIRE, whose MINASTERIA⁽²⁾ has been based in the city of HESHIACHAN in southern LAASKHA since 3177 RM. Members of the order are ATRAMENTAL TELEPATHS whose SPHERE allows them to interact with and manipulate the thoughts of MORTALS, rendering them an indispensable part of society.

Despite their importance across society, such shapers are not as common as others, and therefore they are highly prized, with recruiters from the ORDER OF PROSELYTISERS as well as directly from the Minasteria travelling across the empire, working closely with the SANCTIFIED ORDERS OF THE INQUISITION, searching for individuals who show promise in this SPHERE. Due to the power and influence such a shaper may bring to their surroundings, Cognitariin can be found in various roles across the Korachani empire.

Of note is the important distinction between memory and thought, and though most laypeople think that the two are linked and that a Cognitarii can interact with both, though the truth is that they are distinct facets of the mortal brain. Typically, it is the LETHEIIN who can manipulate memories. Also, those who have mastery over the thoughts of animals are typically classified as MYGALURGEN instead.

Most commonly, they are encountered as telecommunications officers working in areas that are not yet connected to the TELEGRAPHY network – so they might be found in distant cities or in military outposts, where they work by relaying messages to a Cognitarii stationed in another post, and so on, until the message reaches a telegraphy office, where it can then be sent to the intended recipient. Some Cognitariin are also gifted with a form of telepathy that allows them to communicate with people with whom they do not share a language. This communication is rudimentary at best, but simple concepts and emotions can be conveyed, making them valued diplomats and ambassadors who are able to transcend even the most alien of cultures and languages.

They are also found as mental healers and therapists, offering solace to troubled mortals. They also make for incredibly effective teachers, using their abilities to plant concepts and theorems directly into the minds of their students, enriching the learning experience considerably.

They are also invaluable assets in the world of politics and commerce, where they can easily discern the true intentions of diplomats and negotiators, ensuring that alliances and trade agreements are founded upon genuine trust. This talent is also of great use in the realm of law enforcement, where they can be found as specialised roles within the IRON GUARD and Inquisition, where they serve as interrogators and torturers. Due to this pervasive role, many have come up with various tactics to combat the intrusive nature of Cognitariin. Some people train themselves to fortify their thoughts for external influence, while others have designed TECHNARCANE defences that anyone can use to protect themselves.

Cognitariin sometimes disguise themselves as OCCULTISTS or PROGNOSTICARIIN and use their abilities to read the thoughts of their clients to falsify predictions. This use of their abilities is widely condemned, with Minasterial agents hunting down those abusing their powers in this way. They can also be enchanters, making people believe that they are seeing or otherwise experiencing something that is categorically unreal. This considered a specifical sphere by many and not all Cognitariin are capable of enchanting people in this way.

In the theatre of warfare, Cognitariin serve as psychic spies, infiltrating enemy ranks by extracting vital information through their telepathic abilities, often making use of IRON MANTLES or HEART ENGINES to work at a long range. They can be of great use in a leadership role, where they boost the morale of soldiers by allaying their fears and doubts, guiding them with inspiring words crafted for each mind. Conversely, they can sow confusion in the minds of their enemies, creating diversions that can turn the tide of battle. Even without the appropriate time to study the thoughts of their enemies, a cursory look at their auras can reveal much about their intentions, which is useful in uncovering hidden motives. See Vol IV: Spheres and types of Shaping.

COGRO: Geo. Region of dense silt in the c-south east of the TEMPLAR STATES, in the far east of the SIDIRION hills⁽²⁾. It is all that remains today of an ancient river that once flowed north through the VIMBRA canyon.

COHEAS: Set. Fortified city in the far south west of TISARA, along the course of the river *. It is the main administrative and cultural centre of the entire region and (Pop. c. 45,000).

COHENTA: Ser. Small coastal city in the far north east of SABAISA, overlooking the SEA OF ANDAFAR. Its main industry is fishing (Pop. c. 13,000).

COHORT: also 'gunknight'. Marshals of the CORAL BARONIES. They are deputised by their respective baron and are entrusted to protect their barony. Many of them are skilled mariners, working catamarans; where others are skilled rider.

The nickname gunknight stems in their time-honoured use of firearms, with many favouring paired revolvers, which often hae highly decorated grips – ivory, mahogany, scrimshawed bones, and other materials are all common. The term was once used pejoratively, though has since become a mark of honour and the cohorts have referred to themselves as gunknights for many years now.

COJI: Geo. Island off the far south western coast of RAONGEN⁽²⁾. The waters surrounding it are filled with EVOLAM KELP.

COL OSSA: Com. Set. Mercantile city in TZALLRACH, situated along the river LIATHAR. It is a major source of trade with settlement in the north and east of Tzallrach, and forms a part of the GREAT ROAD (Pop. c. 47,300).

COL: Lak. Lake in the south west of AMMESH.

COLDOR: Rvr. River in the south west of AMMESH that flows south east before emptying into the BAY OF TIRIL.

COLDPEAK, the: (8,200-ft.) Mil. Str. Citadel in the far north of SABIA, 200-miles north of the POLAR CIRCLE. The fortress guards against incursions from DURCHAA^(1.) and its troops patrol the region of TOPORAN DOR.

COLES: Rvr. River in the c south of AHRISHEN, in the Levantine region, flowing north west for 100-miles from sources in the BHANN Mountains, before meeting lake AMATIDA.

COLESONIA: Com. Mil. Ser. Large city in the c south of AHRISHEN, overlooking lake AMATIDA, and forming part of a land trade-route south with THE HARÉSHK. It has a large harbour, where trade goods are placed on barges and sent north across the expansive canals and waterways of Ahrishen, primarily via the PANOIDAN canal⁽²⁾.

It originated as a fortress that one guarded lake Amatida, though grew as trade with the Haréshk increased, though it maintains a heavy military presence, which is tasked with guarding the LEVANTINE region (Pop. c. 82,000).

COLLECTIVE UNKNOWN, the: Int. MORTAL history that is so ancient that it has been forgotten. Some scholars include the events of the FIRST to FOURTH AGES in this designation, reasoning that the vast majority of if intelligent life on ELYDEN is unaware of and unconcerned with such ancient history.

It is postulated that most of mortal history now lies in the Collective Unknown, and that the vast majority of mortalkinds' history now lies forgotten and buried. If one were to gather all of recorded history and knowledge from all known cultures and civilisations, it would represent a miniscule fraction of the totality of mortal history. Put more simply, mortals are believed to have been created hundreds of thousands of years ago and we only have reliable records going back the past 5,000-6,000-years. The events and people of the other 350,000-years have since been forgotten – these unremembered deeds and histories are what makes up the Collective Unknown.

Some scholars believe that mortals can tap into the Collective Unknown via the act of DREAMING or some acts of SHAPING such as ONEIROMANCY and TELEPATHY.

COLLEGE OF ANATOMY: Edu. Str. Major medical college in the city of KORACHAN, in the west of KORACHAN. It is famed for its museum of anatomical oddities, and many of the bodies on exhibit bear signs of ATRAMENTAL and FIRMAMENTAL corruption.

COLLEGE OF CONSTELLARS: Edu. Ast. Mys. Major school in the c south of KOLCHIS, in the eastern fringes of the MARINVYAAL forest, where many CONSTELLARS are trained. The college is well-guarded and fortified and maintains its own private forces that patrol the campus and grounds, which are extensive and well-maintained.

COLLOARA: Sup. Sea. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED sea within the north east of the BATHASHAL OCEAN, some 300-miles south east of the CORAL BARONIES. The waters within its reaches are tinted black and is of a jelly-like substance that is inimical to most life, though some aquatic fauna has adapted to life within its unique expanse. It remains unknown how the water of the Colloara remains in place and does not drift along the WESTERN KALISANGELID CURRENT, though Atramentists continue to study it.

The region is categorised as a LEAST CONCERN by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

COLLOSSA: Sec. Small city in the west of EASTERN LARISH, known for its odd layout and architecture – for the entire settlement is built on a steep rocky hill that is strewn with gigantic boulders. Structures have been built around and over these boulders over many years, with many tunnelling into the rocks themselves. In many places streets pass beneath the boulders, which can be hundreds of feet long. In other areas, boulders may have been hewn into bridges (Pop. c. 17,000).

COLLYBISCA: Fau. Sluggish amphibian common to shallow aquatic and wetland regions in humid warm regions of north western SAMMAEA and are most common in RAHENG, ABRAXA, the MAUNURIN TRIBES, and wetlands in the CITIZENRY OF THALI, SATHAII, and the VESPERTINE LEAGUE.

They are related to SALAMANDERS and are known for their very wide and flat bodies and half-moon-shaped heads with wide mouths that are typically used to eat insects and small fish. They are famed for their bright colours, which vary greatly by regions and which always stand out against their surroundings. Many also have poisonous hides, some of which are extremely deadly to some mortals. Interestingly, keratin and shie are largely immune to this poison. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

COLOSSI OF KHARON: Art. Arc. Two triumphant statues built in c. 400 RM by the PHAROANTS in success of their campaigns, celebrating the eastern-most reaches of the ancient KHAMIDIAN territories. Following the CATACLYSM in c. 100 RM, the colossi were buried by sand, stranded on a sheer-sided island 30-miles west of the TZALLRACHI coast.

A small trading settlement known as KHARON exists at their feet, most structures built from marble recovered from area, and a single cliff-port links it to other settlements in the BROKEN LANDS.

COLOSSI OF ROMOREA: Arc. Impressive stone colossi commissioned by king MALIHAE IO SGIROUT of ROMOREA^(2.), celebrating both his and his ancestors' accomplishments. The tradition was passed on to his descendants and continues to this day.

COLOSSI OF SHADHPAR: Leg. Rui. Ancient sandstone colossi in the c west of the SASTAKAUR Massif in the north of PHYRR. Little is known about them other than unreliable third hand accounts and scholars from the INNER SEA REGION have never studied them in detail. Most were destroyed by previous cultures and what remains of them are largely ignored under the regime of the IMPERIARCH.

One of the more persistent legends in Phyrr speaks of a lone traveller who, trapped by a dust storm in a deep canyon saw ruined statues shift positions under the cover of darkness. Few have linked the legend with the very real colossi in the Sastakaur region, which is now used to scare children not to venture out at night.

COLOSSUS: Art. Arc. A gigantic bass carving and fortress located in SABIA, carved into the eastern face of the NATTRANEN Mountains believed to be the work the DEMIURGES of antiquity.

COLOSUS OF ABUSIBOR: Rui. Ancient colossus in the c north west of DURCHAA^(1,), just south of the continuous permafrost line. It is around 20-ft. high and depicts a grotesque faceless being with three pairs of arms a gaping vaginal maw in its chest and membranous wings, seated on a throne, all made from a single monolithic black stone, of possibly cosmic origin.

Whatever culture was responsible for its creation is unknown, and it cannot be dated, though some explorers who have studied them believe that they are not as ancient as some believe, dating them to after the rise of the KORACHANI EMPIRE.

MORTAL bones (possibly HUMAN), many of which bear marks of cutting, litter the base of the colossus, indicating that sacrificial rituals of some sort took place here.

COLOSSUS OF ARAN: Rui. Art. Arc. Ruined colossus in IACIO, in the far east of the region of SAPARY. It was once an island guarding the coastal temple of Aran, though the temple was destroyed by an earthquake in 1293 RM. The lowering of Elyden's sea levels found the colossus become part of the mainland in c. 1900 RM, and it is now around 60-miles from the coast.

COLOSSUS OF ARKOS: Rui. Art. Arc. Large iron colossus built over what would later become the city of ARKOS(2). Constructed in honour and in image of the INTERREGNUM EBAEON whose tenure saw a century-long war with MULCIBER ended, construction on the monument was begun in 953 RM, finished finally in 1462 RM, by which point the city of Arkos had become capital of the region and a thriving metropolis. Though as the city dwindled in power and population, so too did the colossus fall into disrepair, becoming tarnished and pitted by the time of the city's eventual desertion in c. 1900 RM.

COLOSSUS OF DHAS: Rui. Art. Arc. Large SPHINX-like colossus in the AKET HARASH NIL in KHEMET, KHAMID. The colossus is ancient, though its age is undeterminable – likely dating back to the late FOURTH AGE. It was abandoned following the CATACLYSM OF KHAMID in 101 RM, where it was allowed to fall into ruin, eaten by the harsh winds of the area.

COLOSSUS OF FALLDRG: Rui. Art. Arc. Ancient OGHUR colossus in the c west of CYHLAGHARR. It depicts the oghur brothers DUGRN and MALGRA, who are said to have founded the FOURTH AGE oghur nation of FALLDRG from which Cyhlagharr is descended. The statues are some 100-ft. high and are made of a dull metal that is oxidised with time. It is largely ignored by the people of Cyhlagharr, who have little thought for their ancestry, and its base is overgrown.

COLOSSUS OF GIS: Rui. Art. Arc. Gigantic colossus in the Wastes of VERMES in the south of SHAZGIN, in the c south of MENISCEA. Half-buried, this rusted structure is the last remnant of an ancient culture and is surrounded by millions of fossilised mortals preserved in mid-veneration amid the rust Wastes of Vermes.

COLOSSUS OF HERESH: Art. Arc. Large golden colossus in the north east of KHULL overlooking the BAY OF TIR^(1.) and the entrance to the city of KUDUR TA'. It was erected in c. 130 RM by the THERASHIAN EMPIRE following its conquest of the land of LIN GOOL, symbolising the westernmost extent of its expansion at the time. Made from heavy granite blocks, it stands some 200-ft; high and takes a stylised form, representing emperor SONI-VAPHRA. It is weathered today, though is otherwise in good condition

COLOSSUS OF KERADUH: Rui. Art Arc. Ancient pitted metal colossus in the c of CUTH, thought to date back the FOURTH AGE. Once located on a rocky island it guarded the entrance into the harbours of the city of KARKAUTH, and is now 7-miles from the coast.

COLOSSUS OF OSRIS: Art. Arc. Rel. Major colossus on an island in lake NETH, in the tribal territories of the OSRIS in the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. The colossus is the largest of many such ancient relics found in the region and is now the focus of the \underline{OSRA} religion that is common in the region.

COLOSSUS OF RESHAB, the: Rui. Arr. Arc. Monolithic colossus erected by the DEFILER KING RESHAB in the west of SARASTRO, c. -400 RM.

The colossus is stands 200-ft. tall and is still a dominant feature to this day and can be seen from the SEA OF TIAMA for some miles off the coast by ships approaching LONIA. It was once perched on the edge of the cliffs of the region, overlooking the sea, though the lowering of sea-levels in the ensuing millennia have revealed what was once the upper coastal shelf at its feet, and it now lies about half-a mile from the water's edge, a monument to the recklessness of the DEFILER KINGS of SAOSTANA.

It is commonly recognised as being one of the NINE WONDERS OF THE ANCIENT WORLD.

COLOSSUS OF THE STARS: Rui. Art. Arc. Ancient colossus on a rocky promontory in the delta of the river MALAKAH in the far east of ATARAXIA, overlooking the entrance into the BAY OF ABRASHYAH.

The colossus takes the form of a gigantic SPHINX, its wings outstretched and damaged. Its face is a gaping hole, through which can be seen a night sky with glittering lights. None know the culture responsible for its creation and most who have studied it have concluded that it dates back to the FIRST AGE OF MORTAL LIFE, and that it may be the work of a DEMIURGE or SCION.

COLOSSUS OF URAMEKH: Rui. Ancient half-buried colossus in the hills of BOTH RATHO in the c of THE VORANDINE. It is made from an orange-red stone and is thought to date back to the FOURTH AGE, though little is otherwise known about it.

COLOSSUS OF UTRA: Rui. Art. Arc. Ancient ALUMINIUM colossus erected by the kingdom of ARRETORY in celebration of the union of its royal family with that of KARKAUTH in 232 RM. It was around 90-ft. tall and guarded what was then the delta of the river EHIBEL, though was toppled in a massive earthquake in 1293 RM. Its oxidized and tarnished ruin can be seen, half buried in the earth to the south of the present-day city of EHITUR.

COLOSSUS OF ZANZI: ancient toppled colossus in the wastes of western SKAROS. It's face was chiselled away centuries ago, disfiguring whatever entity it was dedicated to.

COLLECTED HISTORIES, the: Vol. First known FIFTH AGE encyclopaedia, written by the philosopher MORLHAR THE ELDER in 142 RM.

COLLECTIVE MIND, the: Int. Sup. Org. Group of SHAPERS within the KORACHANI EMPIRE, whose members' thoughts and DREAMS are linked through their internment within HEART ENGINES. This renders them immobile and catatonic, though they are able to communicate with each other, forming a network of sorts, linking the various cities in which they are located as a result of the powerful TECHNARCANE machinery that they are grafted to.

It is believed that around 20 individual heart engines comprise the collective, whose constituent parts are scattered across the Korachani empire and beyond, though full details are kept under wraps by the MINASTERIA OF COMMUNICATIONS, which uses the network to communicate across vast distances near instantaneously. Such communication is restricted to the uppermost echelons of the government and is largely used in times of war and political urgency, since it is faster than other means of communications, such as telegraph, though is expensive to operate.

The shapers involved lose all aspect of individuality, and the stress of being constantly linked to so many other heart engines leaves their bodies and minds spent after around 10-years, after which they are euthanized and replaced with younger shapers.

COLLEGIA: Mil. Edu. Str. In the KORACHANI EMPIRE, military academies, privately funded, for the recruitment and teaching of LICTORS under the guise of gymnasia.

COLLEGIATE OF LICTORS: Edu. Str. Windowless, doorless structure in CATHAGO noted for its gothic, skull encrusted buttresses and gargoyle-topped spires. The structure is small, with the majority of the edifice existing beneath the ground. The collegiate was the largest training ground for the ORDER OF LICTORS though was officially abandoned following the disbanding of the order in 3707 RM following the Orders' involvement in the SUNDERING OF THE KORACHANI EMPIRE. It was later re-opened north east of the city of CLOTHO, in KORACHAN, in 3792 RM.

COLOURS DIVINE, the: Int. Myt. Dre. In the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN, the DREAMS of THE SHAPER made manifest, prior to the churning of the SEA OF CHAOS into the FIRMAMENT ABOVE AND THE ATRAMENTA BELOW.

There are some who maintain that should a mortal be able to tap into the powers of the Colours Divine, they would become more powerful than The Shaper themselves. See Vol IV: the Mythologia Elyden.

COLYIS: His. Set. Originally an UHLSAATI settlement, appearing in c. - 1650 RM, the initial purpose of which was to cross the narrow isthmus of land between the PHORI peninsula and the Uhlsaati mainland, allowing their small coastal skiffs ease of passage between north and west. Growing wealthy on levies charged on passage, the small settlement rapidly grew, becoming a fortified stronghold by c. -1500 and the regions' central city within another 100-years. Relations with the AUERENI tribes encountered decades earlier soured in c. -1210 MR, leading to the rise of a new charismatic leader who led his allies north west across the river THAUR, bringing about an age of war. Colyis withstood many barbarian assaults, and became a refuge to refugees in the decades of war that followed, though it was taken in -1201 RM following 7-years of siege.

The barbarians continued north, effectively ending the nation of Uhlsaat, and were defeated only with the death of their leader in -1193 RM. Without a fulcrum, the barbarian armies scattered, most returning south and others settling the region, slowly mingling with the remnants of Uhlsaat, from which would emerge the so-called CITADEL MOUNTS. Colyis was rebuilt over the next centuries, remaining an independent city-state, controlling the waters around the Phori, though never did regain its wealth of old. The appearance of HAAGENI immigrants from the north in c. -1000 RM saw Colyis growing in size again as they too flocked to the old Uhlsaati lands. The city slowly grew into a new power in the SEA OF ERIA and remained an independent entity, closely linked with the Citadel Mounts and, in c. -300 RM, with the DHAMATEAN caravanserai of THRAYA, with which it became a steady trade-partner.

The rise of KORACHAN to the north disrupted trade moving south into the DAARKEN GULF and by c. 200 RM the seas of the area were rife with tension. In 264 RM this escalated into an exchange of fire between fleets, an act that would lead to the KORACHANI occupation of the Citadel Mounts in 352 RM following months of blockades and starvation. Colyis (alongside KYAL) was chosen as the site for the imperial administration in the area and welcomed its first patricians and governors in 353 RM, following the erection of garish imperial offices and palaces there in the previous year. The city prospered under Korachani rule, receiving much trade from other imperial nations, though growing Auereni hostilities against the region would lead to a lengthy war that would last over a century. Colyis was heavily fortified in this time, and imperial reinforcements landed there in 511 RM, decades after the request had been made. By then it was too late, and in 527 RM Korachan left the region in the hands of the INTERREGES. Colyis was further reinforced and garrisoned with the last of the STEEL LEGIONS, ready to weather the coming storm, though the arrival of imperial reinforcements in 531 RM saw the region to victory.

Colyis remained a major port following this time, and saw the change of regimes from the imperial caretakers to the descendants of the Steel Legionaries who became the nobility and guardians of the region. They took the city Colyis as their home, which was renamed ARKOS^(1.) in 589 RM, after their high-lords.

COLYRON: Set. Fortified city in the far south of THE VORANDINE, along the course of the river YIMAVALRA, forming part of the nations' main land trade-route. It is close to the border with RAONGEN^(2.) and hosts many diplomats from the larger nation, with which it maintains close trade relations (Pop. c. 46,200).

COMANDANT: Mil. Rnk. Common term for military leaders in the PARTHISAN army.

COMING-OF-AGE RITUAL: Soc. Across ELYDEN, different cultures celebrate the passage of childhood into adulthood in different ways. Even the age when one is considered to have crossed the threshold into adulthood differs from culture to culture. In some it is as young as 11, or when a girl has menstruated the first time, whereas in others it can be as old as 21, or when a man first takes up arms to fight for his nation. In other regions, this can differ between classes, with SLAVES or HELOTS not even factoring into such traditions at all (such as the KORACHANI EMPIRE).

Below are some interesting coming-of-age rituals or practices from across Elyden, though the list is not inexhaustive:

- 1. Cehophela: the ritual of GRAIAIN ANOINTING is an ancient tradition that remains common in regions surrounding the river MISED, in which children aged between 12 and 13 years old are submerged in the river by an elder of the SEPU religion. Whilst in the waters they are said to be blessed by water spirits known as WINII, after which they are regarded as having become adults.
- 2. Grest: At the age of 17 individuals in GREST craft a personalised version of the HE'ELAN WRITINGS^(2.). Often hand-made, though usually written on blank booklets sold by the church itself, people copy passages of personal significance, parables, and litanies from the He'elan Writings into their pages, adding personalisations, annotations, marginalia, and soon. The crafting of the book is judged by members of the clergy a year later, upon their 18th birthday, though most people continue adding to the books throughout their lives, making them incredibly personal objects.
- 3. the Inner Sea Region: at the height of its power, the Korachani empire controlled all lands around the INNER SEA REGION, and though today its shores are fractured, divided amongst rival empires and independent states, this shared heritage has led to many cultural similarities. This includes various coming-of-age rituals:

Most common and widespread is the religious ritual of FINAL COMMUNION OF SHADOW, which is celebrated throughout lands where the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE are the major religions. Though exact details differ from church to church, in its most simple form, the ritual sees children study passages from the third part of the BOOK OF RACHANAEL, choosing one in particular from which they will recite during mass upon reaching the age of 13, after which they can be anointed by the HOLY SHADOW for the first time, marking them as adults in the eyes of the Church.

Another common ritual is the CULMINATION BALL, where young members from noble families take part in elaborate social celebrations, where boys and girls from PATRICIAN HOUSES and affluent freeman families who have turned 16 are presented to others of high society, where a symbolic dance marks them as having become adults. These balls are major yearly events in high society and also serve the purpose of forging and strengthening powerful interfamily alliances across the Inner Sea Region.

Another common coming-of-age passage amongst the upper classes is the GRAND TOUR, in which many young noblemen (And, increasingly, also women) spend a year going to cultural sites across the Inner Sea Region with a tutor, who teaches thing things they would otherwise not learn in school.

- 4. Karakhas & Khuraur: the TORATAP HALKHIR is an important cultural touchstone in KARAKHAS and surrounding lands, where an aurochs is sacrificed in an ancient ritual that dates back to pre-imperial times, and possibly ancient keratin practices. The blood and milk of the aurochs is drunk by girls of 15 and boys of 16 years prior to its body being cooked on an open flame and its heart shared amongst the children, after which they rise as adults. It is not as popular today as it once was, though it is still celebrated in rural areas and larger cities. In KHURAUR it is being pushed out by PARTHISAN governors.
- 5. Laaskha: coming-of-age rituals are a deeply-rooted part of life and culture in LAASKHA, and date back millennia to pre-imperial days, when there were two different types of temples one for men and another for women effectively segregating its religion.

This custom survives in the form of present-day churches of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, where on the first spring day those who turned 21 in the past year are allowed into an antechamber, where they sleep with a votive priest or priestess, emerging as adults. Despite the tradition, common Korachani law takes precedence and despite this cultural coming-of-age, individuals would have already been considered adults since turning 16.

6. Malan: the HENDECARCHIES of MALAN have a rich history of coming-of-age rituals, many of which that involve hunting, which teaches various skills. This is less common today, though it is still observed in more rural areas. In more urban communities this tradition has been largely forgotten, replaced with more intimate traditions, such as a family dinner on a child's 16th birthday during which they are made to speak a toast in which they speak of what they have learnt in their last year and how that has made them an adult.

In high society, groups of men may still take part in elaborate hunts, meant to teach camaraderie and self-sufficiency more than hunting skills, while women take part in ritualised debates to test their intelligence and rhetoric (though not matriarchal, Malani politics does skew that way).

- 7. Mulciber: upon reaching the age of 15, young men in $\underline{\text{MULCIBER}}$ study a religious text known as the $\underline{\text{BOOK OF DEEDS}}$, reciting a passage from it during a communal ritual. The passage becomes a mantra that the individual abides by for the remainder of his life. If he is found to be in opposition of this mantra, certain statutes are taken away from him by the church.
- 8. Naareth: the RITE OF THE VOLUTE a pervasive ritual undertaken by the female offspring of household MATRIARCHS⁽²⁾ who have reached 16 years of age (males are assigned to lesser positions at the same age). Willing virgins are assembled before the Matriarch and ritually raped by the household temple's HIERODULE. Those deemed weak become slaves to the VOLUTE⁽²⁾, and their children sacrificed to it. Those who show their strength and pass the test become MATRIDULES (citizens of NAARETH), or KNAVES, serving Naareth as holy warriors. In turn, their children become eligible to undertake the Rite of the Volute.
- 9. Parthis: beginning at the age of 12, all children in PARTHIS and many of its vassal territories begin a long process known as the DITARTHA. Over the next three years, individuals will begin undertaking various rituals and traditions, many of which differ from region to region. Universal rituals include mentorship from an older person of the same sex and sexual orientation, which teaches the individual important skills and values, often leading to them following in the same vocation later in life. The final ritual, celebrated with others who have reached the age of 15, includes a celebration of the accomplishments of the scion AZER⁽²⁾, who is regarded as a cultural hero in Parthis, and a symbol of the region's secularism.
- 10. Rhea: a ritual known as the TELA takes place in RHEA on the summer solstice and all youths who are at least 17 years of age are eligible to take part, and they undertake three tasks. The first is a task of thanksgiving, where the individual speaks before their family and community leaders, showing gratitude for what they may otherwise take for granted. The second task is one of fortitude and self-sufficiency, where individuals are taken to the wilderness no closer than 50-miles from their home at dusk, and left there to make their own way home. The third task is one of aptitude, with individuals asked to interpret a passage from the holy book of SAEWAL in a manner that is true to their character.

Upon completion of all three tasks, that year's prospects are invited to a feast where they eat mastodon meat for the first time, signifying their ascent to adulthood.

The three tasks are not contests and there is no measure of 'best' or 'worst' – all participants are invited to the feast, even if they do not complete all three tasks, though many do find their futures shaped by exemplary performances. Those who do well in the task or fortitude are invited to train to become MENHITA, elite border guards.

- 11. The River Shibboleth: in perhaps one of the most difficult and instinctive such rituals, MERILLS from across Elyden's seas swim up the river SHIBBOLETH for hundreds of miles to its main source, where they immerse themselves in its waters. This somehow causes them to reach sexual maturity, though the proliferation of humans around the river sees fewer and fewer merills complete this arduous ritual.
- 12. Sabia & Pergost: the celebration of IRUIIN is held during the winter solstice in SABIA and PERGOST, where boys aged between 13 and 16 hunt for a SERPENTFISH, eating its frozen flesh with cooked whale fat and salt. Once everyone eats a slice they stand in a circle and bump heads with each other and their elders, becoming 'family'.

- 13. Sarastro: the VEDDERA is a traditional coming-of-age ritual in SARASTRO, where those who turn 17 are allowed to sit at the head of a table for the first time. They also cook seven flatbreads which they present to personally influential figures, including family members, and ancestors. Following the meal and the giving of the bread, the child is considered an adult.
- 14. Sepahaunat: the city of JOK HALLAR is home to seven IDOLONS. Children who reach the age of 13 choose one of the idolons as a patron, whose dogma they follow throughout their lives.
- 15. Shazgin: in SHAZGIN, children who have experienced their first menarche or spermarche are anointed by priests in communal granary forts (known as SHER DHIA), after which they are considered adults, and their heads are shaved, a tradition that lasts for the rest of their lives.
- 16. The Soleyn Territories: individuals who have turned 18 must undertake a ritual that forms a part of the philosophy of KWEI, that takes place in a PAINHOUSE in which needles are pierced into their flesh. It is only when seven needles have penetrated their skin that the children are said to have become adults, granting them certain freedoms and duties.
- 17. Sychtan Prefectures: a common coming-of-age ritual in the south of the SYCHTAN PREFECTURES, around the DREGLANDS, where ancient idols are commonly dredged out of the sea by fishermen in large numbers. At the age of 16 an individual chooses such an idol, which is claimed as a guardian totem until death, after which it becomes a headstone bearing an epithet. The Idols are thought to date to the THIRD AGE, and are latently psychoactive, amplifying the desires and emotions of their bearers. Their origins are unknown, and worship of them has been discouraged by the greater government of the Sychtan Prefectures, though such warnings have been unheeded, and are spreading farther north.
- 18. Tethysia: the EMBRACE OF KATHISIS is a religious ritual performed by priests of the KATHISIS^(1,) on those who have reached the age of 16. The children kneel in a ceremony in which they must choose one of the gods of the KATHIAN pantheon which will forever more serve as a patron to them. The ritual ends with the priest dubbing them with the BLADED STAFF of Kathisis, after which they rise as adults. After this, men typically grow bears and women grow their hair long, both of which are forbidden to those who have not yet received the Embrace.
- 19. Tzallrach: a traditional ritual known as the LIONHUNT was once prevalent amongst young noblemen, though has since fallen out of favour as wild lions have dwindled in number. In the ritual a group of young men would spend a week in the wild, hunting a lion to prove that they can work together and serve their tribe. Today, the ritual consists of a longer trek that teaches self-sufficiency and cooperation, and ends with the hunt of a large herbivore, which will feed them for the return home, after which they are considered to have become men. Despite this change, the ritual remains known as the Lionhunt.
- 20. Umbra Sokhar: young men in the UMBRA SOKHAR undertake wandering upon reaching their 15th year, in which they leave their communities for the hinterlands of the Umbra Sokhar, sometimes living in the wilderness for months. Many die during their wandering, and should their bodies be recovered, they will be honoured by a full burial, and they will be remembered as fearless, having given their lives for their culture. Those who do not die receive a vision that guides them back to their homes, after which they are considered to be men. Some may fake this, but if they are ever found out they will be branded and exiled, forever shunned and ridiculed by their peers.
- 21. Venthir: the ritual of the SPHINXES GAZE is common in VENTHIR, where children who turn 16 prostrate themselves before a statue of QUEEN HETEPHERES, which is said to bestow upon them the wisdom to become adults. This marks their ascent to adulthood in the eyes of the law, and they are treated as such afterwards.
- 22. Ethistonith: the DREAMWALK of ETHISTONITH is a common ritual where a group of young people about to turn 17 undertake a DREAM QUEST together. This forms an unbreakable bond between them, and as a result, the people of Ethistonith share a cultural link that few other nations have.
- COMMAGANA: Major trade-city in the north of Erebeth. Though not part of the IVORY ROAD, the city remains a major part of trade between Erebeth and SAGITTARIA (Pop. c. 700,000).

- COMMAGENE: His. Nm. Ancient FIFTH AGE state in what is now the region of GHALLETHA^(1.) along the border between the north east of PELASGOS and the south of VÂRR. It was in the twilight of its days during the expansion of KORACHAN and it was absorbed by Korachanicontrolled Pelasgos between c. 75 150 RM.
 - Little is now remembered about its people, though people from northern Pelasgos still drive large stakes through the bodies of their dead, probably in echo of ancient Commagene traditions that saw saplings planted above the bodies of their dead. See Vol III: Extinct States.
- COMMARA: Set. Small coastal city in the c of the AMMASHI FREE-ISLES, on the island of VIMIAN. Its main industry is the cultivation of cotton (Pop. c. 13,400).
- COMMISSARY: Com. A general store for provisions which is commonly part of a greater entity, such as a mine, mill, foundry or manufactory. Such commissaries are most common within large city-manufactories, where the 'factory WORK-SLAVES spend their meagre wages on food, drink and 'exotic' wares outside of the simple meals they receive at work. The commissaries offer various goods with the intention of distracting workslaves and parting them with their money, making it more difficult for them to buy their FREEDOM, and many may also incorporate gambling dens, bars, or brothels to further tempt the helots away from their hard-earned money.
- COMMISSION OF INTERCESSORS: see INTERCESSORS, COMMISSION OF.
- COMMARA: 1. Sca. Bay in the south of KEPHUAAN, forming the northern most part of the BAY OF LEPHET. It is known for its many inlets and natural harbours, and it is home to many coastal settlements.
 - 2. Set. Small city in the c of KEPHUAAN. It controls a pass between the BETAGHA and MAO SAGHI Mountains (Pop. c. 12,400).
- COMMORANCY: Soc. Str. Orphanages in the KORACHANI EMPIRE, popular in the larger cities, where orphans are rounded up and placed in crowded cells, where they are sold to MANUFACTORIES at auction.
- COMMOS: Mil. Str. Island fort in the far north of LIDEA, guarding the entrance to the river SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾. It became a major SARASTROAN stronghold during the WAR OF SUNDERING, serving as the base for its fleet in the Shibboleth.
- COMPEER OF KETESH: Soc. Title given to citizens of KETESH⁽¹⁾.

 Anyone born in Ketesh who is not a SLAVE bears the title, as can foreigners who complete five years of service within the MOST HUMBLE ORDER OF KETESH.
- COMPTER: also 'the Prison'. Ast. Con. Constellation in the SOUTHERN HEMISPHERE. See Vol II: Constellations.
- COMPURGATION: also 'Oath of Belief'. Law. Soc. A ritual in the KORACHANI EMPIRE, in which a person accused of a crime must argue their case and pledge an oath of innocence before a jury of seven COMPURGISTS, who vote on the outcome. A majority vote will condemn or exonerate the accused.
- COMPURGIST: Pol. Law. Rnk. Rank within the SANCTIFIED ORDERS OF THE INQUISITION, whose members serve as jurors for the ritual of COMPURGATION. Compurgists can be found within most of the Sanctified Orders, and juries are made up of seven such individuals who may be drawn from across different Orders, at random, regardless of the nature of the accused's crime.
- COMPUTER: Pol. Rnk. Voc. Civil rank in the KORACHANI EMPIRE. Members are trained from a young age to be able to perform complex calculation and computation without the need of external aid, such as ANALYTICAL ENGINES. They can be found across most imperial organisations, including the SANCTIFIED ORDERS OF THE INQUISITION.
- CON: Geo. Peninsula roughly 50-miles long in the north east of LIDEA, forming a boundary of sorts between THE INNER SEA and the SHADOW SEA. The fertile valley to the east of the peninsula was home to the short-lived nation of CONTH.
- CONCLAVE OF CITIES, the: Pol. His. Meeting held in 2679 RM in the city of AMAT in the VESPERTINE LEAGUE^(2.), in which representatives from hundreds of states and cities ratified an alliance between most of the represented regions, resulting in the creation of the Vespertine League as it is known today.

The Conclave stipulates that the seat of power of the League should change every 6 years, moving to a different city that has not held power in 50-years, giving different regions the opportunity to have their say. There is no Set. list of cities where the seat of power can move to and typically the last year of any regions' leadership is characterised by petitions for where the seat should move to after. Accusations of corruption and bribery are common, though for the most part the system is considered to work.

The various laws and agreements between the cities are also known as the Conclave of Cities (commonly shortened to the Conclave), and its upholding is considered a sacred pact between cities, not to be altered or ignored. As a result, a policing force, known as the KEEPERS OF THE CITIES, was formed to ensure that the word of the Conclave was being observed across the expansive territories of the League, and they remain a powerful political presence across the League to this day.

CONCLAVE OF KHADON: Rel. His. An assembly of high-ranking members of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE that convened on the 21st of ALGOLEN in 3704 RM following the violent rise in the beliefs of the splinter sect of the church known as the SARASTROAN ORTHODOXY. The conclave followed months of escalating fighting between fundamentalist followers of the UNDYING MACHINE and the new believers of the splinter cult and their leaders. After three days of deliberation a decision was made to create a schism within the church, formally recognising the Sarastroan Orthodoxy as a new sect of the church.

These events are intertwined with the WAR OF SUNDERING and the resultant SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE, after which the Sarastroan Orthodoxy was restructured into the REFORMED CHURCH OF SARASTRO.

CONCLAVE OF PRESBYTERS, the: Org. Social club common in PARTHIS that is frequented by distinguished gentlemen from the upper classes, though some individuals from outside these circles (including women of storied backgrounds or gentlemanly dispositions, as well as SHAPERS, scholars and artists) can be vetted for entry. The Conclave has established a trusted and unsuspecting veneer as a social club, with dozens of clubhouses across Parthis and its territories, where members can meet to socialise, take part in conclave-sponsored activities, and conduit business, with public and private meeting areas available.

However, the Conclave of Presbyters has also become the target of various rumours and allegations, likely fabricated by disgruntled would-be members and detractors of the group, most persistent is the belief that clubhouses have subterranean chambers where members can carry out forbidden rites and rituals. The nature of these rites differ based on who is recounting the tale.

The Conclave is based in Tethra and was founded by the industrialist, philanthropist and amateur historian IORO MUSSANTO in 3587 RM, and it spread rapidly across Parthis throughout his life and following his death.

CONCLAVE OF TEN: Pol. Org. The ruling council of ARCHAEDON⁽²⁾, made up of ten individuals, most of whom are ether SHAPERS or GNOSTICATORS, of great renown. Councillors are elected to their positions by Archaedoni citizens and rule for ten years, with a new member elected every year.

CONCORDANTIST ORDER: Pol. Org. In the KORACHANI EMPIRE, one of the major SANCTIFIED ORDERS OF THE INQUISITION, obsessed with maintaining balance and unity across the KORACHANI EMPIRE.

The Order's primary tenet is to maintain the status quo within the empire, even if it means stymying growth and the chance for progress. Many events throughout the course of imperial history; most notable amongst them the WAR OF THE ARTIFEXES and the SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE, which led to almost half the vassal states and protectorates of the empire breaking free; have led to the weakening of the empire across ELYDEN, and the Concordantists seek to stop unfolding political and civil events, as well as technological innovations, from escalating into such calamitous outcomes.

It is the perhaps the most polarising of Orders amongst the literati of the empire, many of whom believe it is little more than a yoke to progress, preventing the development of new technologies, political relationships, and cultural advances, to the eventual detriment of the empire, citing the aforementioned conflicts as reasons to doubt the effectiveness of the Order. Others believe its presence is not only necessary, but a crucial part of the imperial government, believing that were it not for the largely unrecorded actions of the Order, the empire would have crumbled long ago. The latter is probably truer.

The Order is also heavily involved in the AVVERENATI – a secretive council made up of high-ranking officials from across imperial institutions, including the COUNCIL OF SEVEN – who determine the future of imperial policy and major actions. It is also believed to have a hand in the mysterious APASTRONIC CONGRESS, which seeks to eliminate non-humans from reaching positions of power in a bid to maintain stability in imperial cities.

The Order is known as a major purveyor of propaganda and it has a hand in controlling the spread of information through newspapers, pamphlets, and telegraphs, deciding what news is reported, and when and how. All official news outlets in the empire must have their stories vetted by Concordantist agents, and unofficial ones must live in fear of being discovered and disbanded by them...

The Order was founded in KHADON as an independent entity in 3037 RM, largely in response to widespread disruption brought about by the Artifex War and the loss of the industrial powerhouse of ALMAGEST, though its beliefs were present within certain factions of other Orders well before this time. This makes it the youngest of the Orders, though it has the most progressive mindset amongst its fellow Orders, seeing the value in the manipulation of information. It has the most widespread presence both within and without the Korachani empire amongst all Orders, though few would know this – where the structures of other Orders are often imposing structures, designed to inspire awe or fear, those of the Concordantists are often inconspicuous, the nature of their occupants unknown to those living around them.

The Order's emblem is scales being held by two griffins, both of which are ancient symbols of order within the empire.

The Order has far more civil roles than it does militant ones, and it is one of the least martial Orders overall. Its members often work closely with the MINASTERIA OF NEGATIONISM, whose role is more political than that of the Order, whose members more commonly deal directly with the masses.

Common ranks within the Order include INQUIRERS, ABEYANCERS, OBSCURATORS, and PROPAGANDISTS, which are the most elite of its agents.

The Order's present Grandmaster is SIDION ROUYO.

CONCUPISCEA: Geo. Rocky region in the c north east of THE SURRACH, south of the NGHALLEAL Mountains.

CONCUSSIVE HAMMER: Tec. Wea. Sledgehammers with small explosive charges in their heads, which are employed by mining industries and the various military forces in the INNER SEA REGION. Most people are not able to wield concussive hammers for prolonged periods due to the toll their explosions, small and controlled as they may be, take on their bodies. Most wielders are forced to retire after a few years, their bodies wracked by arthritis. In battle, oversized hammers are often wielded by OGHUR shock troops, who assault enemy fortifications and siegeworks.

Smaller versions of the hammers are used in a competition known as the FESTIVAL OF HAMMERS.

CONFERVA: Geo. Hilly region in the c. of AHRISHEN, bordering the north western shores of lake NAIDA.

CONFESSOR: Pol. Mil. Rnk. Rank within the SANCTIFIED ORDERS OF THE INQUISITION, above that of INTERROGATOR, specialising in torture and other methods of extracting information. They are most common amongst the ARÂTHUAHI, AVÉNETHI, CONCORDANT, GRIGORIAN, KYONI, MORÉHAN, and VÁMAN Orders.

CONFLAGRATION OF LIGHT: Sup. His. A FIRMAMENTAL calamity that took place in the north of the island of ARCHAEDON^(1.) in 2802 RM left most SHAPERS in the north of the island and the south of the TIAMOLDORAN CITY STATES dead or in a vegetative state. The event left the region devastated, an Archaedon^(2.) suffered from a dark age that lasted until at least c. 3000 RM.

CONFRATERNAL HALL: Rel. Org. Str. The headquarters of the CHURCH CONFRATERNITIES that ae common in regions that worship the THREE

CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. They serve as clubhouses and social clubs, as well as places of religious teaching where members can meet

CONFRATERNITY OF THE LAST DAYS: Rel. Org. Secretive order forming part of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE that is active within the KORACHANI EMPIRE. Its members, who come from all walks of life beg for alms to help pay to help those who they believe have been unfairly sentenced to death. They work within the law and try to help the families of the accused/condemned. They wear white robes and mantles, with masks not dissimilar to those worn by PLAGUE doctors to help protect their identities.

CONFRATERNITY OF NATURAL TRANSMUTATION: His. Org. Classical KORACHANI⁽²⁾ organisation that believed that elements could be transmuted through pure mechanical application, without recourse for the ATRAMENTA or TECHNARCANA. The Confraternity was based in the city of DEOCHAN in the nation of Korachan, though it had ATELIERS and chapters across the EMPIRE where like-minded scholars could meet to relax and discuss their research. Its members became embroiled in the CHEMISTERS' WAR, though was one of the least-affected factions, only being tangentially involved.

The organisation was a natural evolution of the classical alchemists' quest to transmute lead into gold. The confraternity waned in power after the RENAISSANCE CRUSADES, and was eventually disbanded in 1113 RM, with the process deemed to be too costly and time-consuming to have any practical use. Surviving members either formed their own private ateliers or were absorbed by other organisations, such as the SODALITY OF TECHNARCANE RESEARCH, which promised more encouraging results.

CONGRESS OF THE WINDS: Pol. Org. Elective senate of AHRISHEN, in effect since c. 3200 RM, though was annexed by the CHILD-PRINCE in 3763 RM. It remains the officially-recognised title of the government in MAHSERTH, though in truth serves as little more than an advisory capacity.

CONGRUENCE, the: also 'Yalatal'. Geo. Gigantic hewn cave-system in the mountains of SATAQ in the north of MAENMIST, in the c south of SAMMAEA. It is ancient, and is thought to have been built by a race of long-dead giants in the SECOND or THIRD AGE. They are expansive and cover hundreds of miles beneath the Sataq Mountains, with unnumbered entrances along the foothills and upper reaches, many of which are now crumbled, obscured by cave-ins. In many areas, the tunnels dead-end in collapses and fractures, where the slow movements of the mountains have damaged them, though for the most part they remain intact, ignored, the subject of dark legends and myths that speak of unseen chthonic denizens that dwell there, as yet undiscovered. The upper reaches of the runnels have been used as short-cuts by merchants needing to quickly traverse the mountains, though this is often done under duress and rarely without added guards, for more mundane threats exist within the tunnels than the whispered-of denizens.

The tunnels bear testament to blackened fossils of ancient unknown creatures that were at one time prized as object d'art across the south of Sammaea, where they can still appear in the collections of royalty and the cognoscenti, though their true origin may since have been forgotten.

CONNEAS: Set. Small city in the south east of TISARA (Pop. c. 12,000). CONOMA: Set. Settlement in the south of OPHIUSSA, in the west of the region of GOMELA. Its main industry is viticulture, and the production of OPHIR^(3.) (Pop. c. 6,000).

CONOMRA: Soc. Arc. Wall of names in the south west of ANDILUTH. Itinerants write the names of those who have died, believing that if the name of the person lives on within the wall, the person survives in the OTHERLIFE.

 $\underline{\text{CONS}}$: Rvr. River in the south of $\underline{\text{GREST}}$, in the west of the island-continent of $\underline{\text{BROR}}^{(1,)}$. The river flows south for 350-miles before emptying into the $\underline{\text{SEA OF AHAGGAD}}^{(1,)}$.

CONSANGUINE DYNASTIES: His. Soc. Ntn. Ancient ruling household of the city-state of PHAND^(2.), and eventually the Kingdom of Phand, in what is now the west of present-day KARGAMA. The dynasty rose from the ruling priestly caste in c. -500 RM, whose members practised incestuous marriages to foster certain physical traits (defects) that were considered holy in their veneration of the KARGAMAN IDOL AGHATYRAELL.

The Dynasties ruled over Phand for many centuries, eventually taking healthy outsiders as consorts to keep the bloodline strong following an increase in miscarriages, stillbirths, congenital issues and birth defects amonest their children.

By c. -100 RM, the Dynasties had spread across the western reaches of ELITAGRI territories, with their lands becoming culturally and politically distinct from those of the Elitagri city-states in the east, though many of its rulers had short reigns dominated by physical ailments. Despite this, the kingdom's expansion continued for many centuries, culminating in c. 350 RM, when it is considered to have reached its peak.

Despite their personal problems, the Dynasts became great patrons of the arts, commissioning sculptures and paintings to fill their palaces and temples. This created a nation of renowned artisans and craftspeople whose works were famed far beyond the borders of Phand. Valuable antiques from this period are still sold at auction around the Sea of SEA OF ORRIDA.

In 1122 RM the ELITAGRI FEDERATION moved against the eastern borders of Phand and, following a few years of stalemate, they were eventually able to move west, marching against the city of Phand and taking it in 1126 RM following a 3-month siege. The idol of Aghatyraell was toppled, and 17 centuries of rule under the Consanguine Dynasties came to an end with the EXECUTION of most of the family. The cities of Phand were absorbed by Elitagra, ending its period of independence.

CONSORTS OF WHISPERS: Org. Cohort of intelligence gatherers with agents in many brothels around the INNER SEA and beyond. They operate under the guise of courtesans and escorts, who are based in the COURT OF WHISPERS in the city of KETESH.

CONSPIRACY OF SLAVES: His. Planned SLAVE prisoner revolt in CITY OF ALMAGEST in 3178 RM which was to culminate with the assassination of the speaker of the republic. The movement gained steam through the clandestine spreading of notes so that disparate prisons were alerted and planning for its eventual execution was meticulous, and plans for the revolt were only unearthed by mistake. The ringleaders were executed and contact between prisons was lessened as a result.

CONSTANT CORRIDOR, the: Int. Sup. Geo. Dre. Fantastical location within the DREAMWORLD. It takes the form of endless liminal space akin to a roofless corridor or antechamber, above which a moonless night sky can be seen, its stars glinting lazily. However, it appears as though the details vary somewhat from person to person. It is a popular meeting place for LUCID DREAMERS and ONEIROMANCERS, and it is a relatively safe space for novices to explore.

Doors along the walls of the corridor can lead to other locations within the Dreamworld, though not all of them can be opened by any visitor – some require a degree of focus and skills beyond the grasp of average DREAMERS.. Possibly a good thing, as the doors may lead to nightmare regions that are incredibly dangerous or populated by fearsome oneiroi.

The location is so-named as it is one of the most permanent and well-known regions within the Dreamworld, and has been described by lucid dreamers since at least the THIRD AGE.

It is populated by luminescent moth-like DREAM CREATURES that flit ceaselessly around the corridor, trailing motes of light in their wake.

CONSTELLAR: Sup. Rnk. Title in KOLCHIS granted to the most esteemed of the astrologists who plan the year ahead. Over time the title would become a political one, with Constellars becoming the rulers of cities and territories, with the entirety of Kolchis falling under the control of a LORD-CASTELLAR.

CONSTELLATION: Con. Ast. A group of visible STARS^(1,) that when connected with an imaginary line form a perceived pattern in the sky, often seen to resemble an animal, figure or object. These patterns are not typically universal, and different cultures may interpret the stars as different patterns. The difference in the appearance of stars between the northern and southern hemispheres have led to wildly differing constellations in their different respective cultures.

Despite the change in STARS^(2.) due to the lifecycle of OTHERWORLDERS, most cultures with established constellations will simply substitute the missing star for the closest extant one, updating the constellation over the centuries. This means that while the individual stars in a constellation may change multiple times over the centuries, the generic shape will remain relatively unchanged over time. In some rare cases, constellations have fallen out of popular usage to be replaced later on as new stars form different patterns. An example of this is the constellation of OCULUS, which only came into common usage in approximately 1300 RM, after a previous constellation, known as ALCANTARA fragmented in c. 820 RM. See Vol II: Constellations.

CONSTELLATIONS, the: Geo. Series of islands off the south eastern coast of LIMOTH^(1.) and comprising much of the south west of the PANTHEON ISLES.

CONSUL: Soc. Law. Lawgivers in the KORACHANI EMPIRE, replacing the older title of QUAESTOR in c. 1000 RM following law reforms. They setdown laws and ensure that knowledge of them is successfully disseminated across the empire. Despite their efforts, the empire was, at its peak, a large place and corruption and ignorance ran rife.

CONSULITE, the: also 'High Consulite'. Pol. Enigmatic figure within the hierarchy of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, that serves as an advisor and second-in-command to the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR, and a keeper of the household in the BASTION OF STEEL in KHADON.

It is unknown if the Consulite is an individual or a title that has been held by many people over time, but if it is the former, it means that the Consulite has been serving Malichar and the empire for close to four millennia, for his oldest recorded mention dates back to c. 30 RM.

In times when the Archpotentate is absent, the Consulite takes it upon himself to ensure that THE SEVEN are ruling towards the betterment of the empire.

Many have postulated what the origins and true purpose of this mysterious figure could be. It is commonly thought that the Consulite is a BASILEAN (a very powerful SHAPER), regardless of whether he is an individual or an inherited title.

CONTH: His. Ntn. Ancient city-state and later nation centred along what is now the border between LIDEA and BA'AKH. At the height of its power in c. -200 RM the city-state of Conth had amassed lands reaching no less than 150-miles in all directions, reaching as far south as the SHIBOTHA Mountain, west to the plains of TARETHI and east to the BAY OF ORA (3.). In the west it subjugated many of the scattered settlements of the NAAHI people from which it had emerged in c. -1100 RM, whilst its pirate-fleets preyed on settlements for hundreds of miles in either direction along the coasts of the SHADOW SEA and THE INNER SEA.

It fell to the greed of its own armies, forced into signing an unfavourable peace treaty with the allied nations of DHEA and DHAMATEA in -117 RM, which eventually led to its fragmentation by c. 1 RM and its eventual attack and destruction by Naahi armies in 193 RM.

Over the millennia the ruin has continued to deteriorate, leaving it as little more than a collection of sun-bleached ruins and shattered half-buried onion domes, considered cursed and haunted by Lideans. See Vol III: Extinct States.

CONTINGENT LABOUR: Soc. Contract work that is non-permanent and often on a piece work basis. Such work is relatively common in the KORACHANI EMPIRE, where untrained and low-earning FREEMEN flit from job-to-job, often based on seasonal requirements within the agricultural and construction sectors. Such workers rarely stay in one place for long, and many of them become jack of all trades, moving throughout KORACHAN, following harvests, taking what work they can find.

CONTRACEPTION: Soc. Once relatively common through various means within the KORACHANI EMPIRE, the use of contraceptives was banned in 3844 RM in a bid to increase the birth rate to increase the size of the workforce over time. This has only led to alternate, often dangerous methods that are undertaken in unsanitary conditions.

CONULAN: Set. Settlement in c of THE OLD FOREST, south of the EPITRACHON Mountains. The settlement is one of few in the region that continue the granite mining the area, known as KOLRAUTELIOCH, was once famed for in the FOURTH AGE (Pop. c. 8,200).

CONVEYOR: Com. Veh. Common term for commercial AMBULANTS used across the territories of THE INNER SEA. They are often large and capable of lifting large containers unaided. COPHI: Set. Major coastal city in the east of the TIAMOLDORAN CITY-STATES, overlooking the BAY OF HEYAT. It was traditionally known for its honey and wax production, though has since grown into a great metropolis (Pop. c. 421,000).

COPPER WASTES, the: see AERUGINIA.

COPPERPLATES, the: Mar. Law. The law enforcement of OD MEGINNAS^(1.). They originated as the private forces of HOUSE VALTARIS before the House's move to the island of JIRIDUN, and continued offer protection to the House and its merchants throughout its migration and settlement on the island. Following the House's elevation to the ruling power of Od Meginnas, the copperplates became a more comprehensive policing force, though were often accused of acting in the interests of the House rather than those of the people.

They are named after the copper lamellar armour they once wore. Though they no longer wear armour, their uniforms are still the colours of autumn, and their badges are still made of copper.

COPTOS: Str. Gigantic tiered fortified lighthouse on the far south west of the PHILIAN peninsula in the south of HANNAH, guarding the entrance into the BAY OF KEIJIR. It predates the nation of Hannah and is a relic of the FOURTH AGE, restored and expanded over the years by various cultures.

CORPO SANCTO: Plr. 'corpi sancti'. The bodies of venerable (in the sense of someone awaiting canonisation by one of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE) religious figures are often saved from the ignominious fate that awaits those of most imperial denizens, whose bodies are processed into DROSS, with only their skulls kept. Instead, their followers, hopeful that their beloved religious figure will eventually be canonised, pay the MORTUARY CULT to save the body from being processed.

The body it then cleaned. In some cases, it is embalmed and preserved, and in others, the flesh is cleaned away, leaving only bones, which are polished and encased in a wax replica of the figure with 'windows' (usually in the chest, face, hands and feet) cut into it, through which onlookers can see the bones beneath. Other than these windows, the wax replica looks lifelike and is clothed in religious finery, where it often finds its way beneath an altar or in a baroque reliquary.

Should the figure eventually be canonised, becoming a saint, the Corpo Sancto itself becomes the centre of a small cult of reverence. This is particularly so within the ALMAGESTI TEMPLE, where saints are given a great deal more importance than they are in other denominations of the Three Churches.

CORPOSANT: also 'Will-o'-the-wisp' and 'ball lightning'. Mys. Atmospheric ghost light that is often seen over wetland across Elyden, though this name is most common around northern KORACHAN and eastern AZAZEM. The terms 'Ball Lightning' and 'Will-o'-the-Wisp' are used more universally, in MENISCEA and LLACHATUL & SAMMAEA, respectively.

CORFEN: also 'the Cutting Pool. Int. Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTAL lake in the south east of KHARKHARADONTIS, north of the SSAH ESOH. The waters of Corfen are dark and of a thick gelatinous texture and have, since the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR'S return from his ITINERARY, been a considered a holy place.

A large temple renowned for its grotesque hewn caryatids and nightmarish interior frescoes depicting Malichar's suffering was constructed on its banks in c. 900 RM and is perhaps most well-known for its deep crypt, that holds the bodies of many holy figures (many of them successful CENOBITES) who were mummified through immersion in the waters of lake Corfen.

The pool is as close to pure Atramenta as can be found outside the borders of the BLACK FOUNTAIN and is extremely dangerous. Indeed, few are those who visit its shores who do not become afflicted by some form of corruption. As a result of this its guardians are manufactured beings, their bodies carefully selected from donors considered to be NULLS to the Atramenta.

The 'waters' of Corfen are cut into brick-like cakes by devoted acolytes who refuse medical aid for their maladies. These cakes are sent around Imperial cities by proselytizers and are 'planted' as relics, where their influence slowly spreads.

CORONACH: Rel. Rnk. Rank within the hierarchy of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, the members of which sing in lamentation after the passing of important figures.

CORPSE ORCHID: Flo. Beautiful orchid native to SAUA, and the west of the HENDECARCHIES of LONAR and MYEIN in the west of MALAN, with a flower that looks vaguely like a stylised skeleton. It is prized across THE INNER SEA as a curiosity by those wealthy-enough to afford it. It is grown in plantations in Saua, from where it is exported across the Inner Sea and beyond. In Malan it is a sacred flower that is used in funerary rituals. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

CORRIA: Sup. Str. FIRMAMENTAL lighthouse in the south west of the HENDECARCHY of CHLORIS, in MALAN overlooking the SEA OF MUSSAR. The lighthouse overlooks a particularly shallow part of the sea, which in low tide is peppered with the hulks of ancient shipwrecks.

CORRIDOR OF LUMINARIES: Arc. Corridor within the GREAT LIBRARY in DUARIAHAHN, TEMUJA, where the paraments of past curators hang. The Corridors leads to the HALL OF LUMINARIES; the Great Library's main chamber, where the present luminary sits.

CORRIDOR OF SÛD: Geo. Long narrow valley, some 70-miles long in the far south west of RAONGEN^(2.) in the c north west of the URAHASH Massif. The valley is incredibly smooth, leading some to think that it is artificial in origin.

CORUAE: f. Pol. Per. (B. 3922 RM) Present queen of TISARA. As per tradition that spans almost 15 centuries, her role is largely ceremonial, and she acts as the chair of the republic council and the head of the CULT OF ANDRASTE.

COSECETEN: Geo. Dry plains in the south east of WESTERN MENISCEA, dominating the northern coast of CHAUTULA and the north west of VECTIS. It is known for its early FIFTH AGE cave writings, that reveal a distinct pictographic style that became the basis for the language of VAEVECTA^(1.).

COSECEAN: Lan. Language spoken by the VAEVECTAN^(1.) culture in the south east of MENISCEA. It emerged between c. 700 – 900 and its written form was influenced by the earlier cave writings of COSECETEN, from which its name is derived. The languages of its descendant states of CHAUTULA, VECTIS, AHOPAH and VAEVECTA^(2.) are all influenced by Cosecean to some degree. See Vol II: Languages of Elyden.

COSONA: Set. Settlement in the west of TISARA, in the northern face of the north eastern arm of the ARGENT Mountains (Pop. c. 6,500).

COSSYRA: 1. Sea. Strait between mainland TAHALL and the island of Cossyra^(2.).

2. Geo. Island off the eastern coast of TAHALL. Historically, it was the location of the Temple of Sagittaar, which was erected in 21 RM.

COTHON: 1. Sea. Small bay in the north of the STRAIT OF NÁRTHEL. Named after the city of Cothon, which at one time stood at its shore, though is now 13-miles from the coast.

2. Pol. One of three prefectures that make up LYRIDIA DHAI, which was became a free nation following the disappearance of its tyrannical ruler in 3742 RM, following years of subjugation before which it had been a KORACHANI INTERREGNUM since 1704 RM.

3. Ser. City in the south of LYRIDIA DHAI, and capital of its south westernmost prefecture. It emerged under LYRADEAN rule as a harbour in c. -20 RM, where it dominated trade across the NÁRTHELI STRAIT. With the KORACHANI blockade of the Strait in 81 RM, Cothon, alongside TERARA funded the VEPARI initiative, raising an army around the plains of AMANAL which in 85 RM attacked imperial-occupied NÁRTHEL. This led to the Korachani invasion of south western LYRIDIA and the taking of Cothon, which remained a powerful city in the region, though it eventually found itself removed from the coast.

Following the death of the last $\underline{\text{INTERREGES}}$ in 3742 RM, Cothon emerged as an opportunistic state vying for control of the region, alongside Vepar and Terara. In 3892 RM the territories were formalised and it is now a major link in the $\underline{\text{RED ROUTE}}$ (Pop. c. 175,500).

CORAL BARONIES, the: also 'Scyllareth'. Ntn. Series of islands, including ten major islands, and hundreds of coral islands, atolls and sandbars off the south western coast of the AMMASHI^(1.) peninsula in the south west of SAMMAEA, in the south east of the SEA OF MERCUVIA. The islands are of a warm temperate climate with little difference in seasons, though they do experience a short wet winter and a long hot summer that is alleviated by plentiful wind and morning mists.

Many in the distant INNER SEA REGION consider the region to be idyllic, though few have seen it first-hand. Those who have, bring back a more realistic view of the region, detailing misty islands and dangerous reefs in which live a myriad of baronies whose rulers dwell in towering basaltic citadels of ancient design. The baronies are considered by these foreigners to be technologically-backwards, and they have few major manufactories and negligible industrial production. Use of TECHNARCANA is not widespread, due to the regions' relative vicinity to the NULLAMBIT, and it does not have a strong shaping tradition due to this.

Originally encountered by KORACHANI explorers in 2812 RM, the region was thought to be a part of KAPHAAR (extant KEPHUAAN) and it was only in later years that it was discovered to be an independent kingdom known as SOLOGAMIA, though it wielded little power or influence in the region outside its immediate domains.

The Coral Baronies have their root in that kingdom (better known colloquially as the CORAL KINGDOM) that collapsed in 3889 RM with the sudden death of king TARUSTAN III. The 118 barons quarrelled amongst themselves for over a decade, with some islands descending into war with each other until in 3903 RM an accord was reached – the barons would continue to rule their individual baronies, being answerable to none other than a council of their peers that convenes within the great citadel of SPHYNIA on the island-capital of CYNCER. The old CORAL CROWN, the symbol of power of the old kings and queens, was encased in glass and placed within the Barony Chambers in Sphynia at a symbolic place above the council table, which is headed by an ARCHBARON.

And so, they rule to this day, each baron or baroness the undisputed ruler of their respective barony. The continued lowering of sea levels have resulted in territorial disputes as islands increase in size (as occurred in the south of CAMARA) and merge, or with the creation of new islands and atolls. Over the years the number of baronies has decreased to 83, which are divided across five Dominions, which are overseen by a judge, who aside from setting laws and overseeing territorial disputes, is responsible for electing an Archbaron every five years. The past century has seen a decrease in trade and foreign relations as the judges and barons have turned to increased courtly intrigue, which has become a defining part of life in the Baronies.

Its people are expert mariners and fishermen, and most coastal settlements survive on a seafood diet caught by distinctive TWIN-HULLED DHOWS. Indeed, many of them are known for the pink or orange tint to their skins, a trait acquired from eating soft-shelled shrimps. The region is also peppered with ancient basaltic structures (the most notable being the FORTRESS OF ESHEGDA), which are commonly misidentified as fortresses. They are thought to date to the THIRD AGE, though ultimately very little is known of them. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

CORAL CROWN: Int. Col. Obj. Symbol of power of the old line of sovereigns of the CORAL KINGDOM of SOLOGAMIA, before the sudden death of TARUSTAN III ended the line, leading to the formation of the CORAL BARONIES in 3903 RM. The crown is made of a single delicate piece of carved coral with 118 pearls (representing the baronies of the Coral Kingdom).

Today it is encased in glass and placed within the Barony Chambers in SPHYNIA at a symbolic place around the council table.

CORAL KINGDOM, the: also 'Sologamia'. His. Ntn. Predecessor state to the extant CORAL BARONIES and the ISLAND KINGDOM of FALLAROUR.

Originating in c. 2410 RM from a two-century civil war with its own predecessor nation of AMMASH^(3,), the Kingdom thrived for many centuries on sea trade as Ammash waned, though it never grew into an important or influential state, enjoying a relatively peaceful existence in the shadow of Ammash, which ultimately collapsed in c. 2550 RM, fragmenting into many separate states that allowed Sologamia to survive relatively unchallenged. Lowering sea levels over the next millennium saw both increased instability and growing land mass, including the formation of new atolls, reefs and sandbars, that continued to grow as sea levels lowered, only to reveal new ones in a cycle that contuse to this day albeit at a reduced rate.

The kingdom was ruled by three consecutive dynasties, whose monarchs were the so-called $\underline{CORALCROWN}$ as a badge of office.

The kingdom was thrown into disarray in 3889 RM with the sudden death of king TARUSTAN III. The 118 barons and baronesses bickered for years, with most descending into war with each other, with one in particular, BARON HAALDOS, paving the way for the creation of the Island Kingdom of FALLAROUR. An accord was reached in 3903 RM that saw the barons continuing to rule their respective baronies, who together formed a council that oversaw their collective territories from within the great citadel of SPHYNIA on the island-capital of CYNCER, thusly leading to the formation of the Coral Baronies. See Vol III: Extinct States.

CORDIAIJA, MONASTERY OF: Rel. Str. Isolated monastery in the far south west of RAONGEN(2.). deep within the URAHASH Massif. The monastery is populated by monks dedicated to the SECT OF SILENCE, who seek the isolation from other mortals so that they may better commune with their god. These monks are unlike the OBSERVERS, and have no desire to catalogue the visions of others. Instead, they seek to empty their minds of thought and memory so that their bodies may be adequate vessels for the whisperings of the GOD WHO SPEAKS. They are willingly mute and communicate little with each other, using simple hand gestures when they need to.

They are welcoming to outsiders and will not provide shelter, even in cases of emergency, fearing that the chaos that outsiders bring with them would ruin the serenity they have achieved.

CORIANUS PATERSONOR: (B. 3798). Pol. Current ruler of AZAZEM, appointed by THE SEVEN in 3851 RM, and who oversees the thousands of fiefs that comprise its territories. He is well known for his hedonistic lifestyle COROYAGON: For. Jungle region in the western coast of CUTH. It is known for its dense lichens and thick growth.

CORRAS: Set. Fortified settlement in the region of HITHRA in the far north of THE SURRACH, overlooking southern EREBETH. It is a major producer of food in the region (Pop. c. 7,200).

CORRECTIONAL FACILITY: see PRISON.

CORYBANT: Set. Settlement and surrounding farmland in the north west of VENTHIR known for its OPIATE production. It is one of few regions in Venthir that still produces opiates on an industrial scale and supplies many of the metropolises in Venthir.

In antiquity, it was a city-state known for its masochistic mystery-cult that performed rites characterised by orgies and self-mutilation. Parts of this remain in the culture of the present settlement and the surrounding region.

More recently, it had grown into a large city with a population of over 200,000 though it was selected as the target of a powerful ritual (now known as the SEGARRAN RITUALS) by SATHEP THE RISEN during the WAR OF SUNDERING that toppled most of the city, leaving it a smoking crater in the ground, the majority of its population dead. Only a small part of the south eastern city was spared, which later became the foundation for the present city, which originated in the decades following the war as scavengers combed through the remains of the old city, which remains a crater to this day (Pop. c. 10,000).

COSMIC DREAMER, the: Mys. Phil. Dei. Dre. The unknowable deity of the DREAMING NIGHT creation myth and philosophy that is prevalent in the FEDERATION OF PERGOST.

The Cosmic Dreamer is the entity in whose dream the totality of creation manifests, and should the Dreamer ever wake, all of creation would suddenly cease to be, making its worshippers rather pragmatic and nihilistic. See Vol IV: Gods and Pantheons.

COSMIC JOKER, the: Rel. Deity worshipped by the people of the ISLAND STATES OF IRY. The figure known as the Cosmic Joker is the centre of a religion that believes in a single sadistic omnipotent god. All other cultures' gods are considered to be corruptions or bastardisations of that same deity, or simply false idols. As a result, worshippers of the Cosmic Joker actively deride worshippers of other gods.

The Cosmic joker takes great joy in setting up mortals to fail, creating more hurdles and obstacles to those who overcome the previous challenges. He is greatly nihilistic and has a laissez-faire attitude to mortal life, putting little value in them or the MATERIAL PLANE itself, all of which it considers toys to be played with, if it even considers them at all.

His worshippers do not revere him out of loyalty or a sense of duty, but rather fear of what might happen to them after death if they did not worship him while alive. As such this fosters little loyalty amongst his worshippers. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

COSMIC SERPENT, THE: Rel. Lose religion practiced by the disparate SERAPI tribes of HOGGOTHA ISZ. Outside scholars believe that the deity may be a corrupted form of the DEMIURGE ASHTERATH^(2.), worshipped through the eponymous star^(1.). See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

COTHLAN: Lake in the c north west of LOEGRESS⁽¹⁾. It lies along the course of the river TAHUDUN.

COTIA: 1. Sea. Long and narrow bay in the north east of PARTHIS. The city of PORCELLANIA guards its mouth, and the city of Cotia (2.) lies in its deepest reaches.

2. Set. Major fortified city in the north east of PARTHIS. It is famed for being the origin of the COTIAN MUTINIES of 3790 RM, in which the SLAVE crews of various vessels mutinied, demanding better working conditions. Word of their actions spread rapidly across the republic, gaining the support of various humanitarian groups that had already been working to end slavery. Their combined actions led to the abolition of slavery in Parthis and its colonies 4-years later.

A large bronze statue was erected in the main square of Cotia in 3912 RM, dedicated to the slaves that died in the Mutinies and throughout Parthisan history. In 3834 RM it become home to the KNIGHTS OF THE SUNDERED SHACKLE, whose members work to bring an end to slavery and liberate slaves of exemplary character.

Though once coastal, the city is now some miles from the coast, along the course of the stream MALOMUN, which allows it to maintain its link to the coast (Pop. c. 79,300).

COTIAN MUTINY: Pol. His. Political event in PARTHIS that took place in 3790 RM, during which the SLAVE crews of various ships mutinied, demanding better working conditions. Word of their actions spread rapidly across the republic, leading to insurrections amongst slaves in various other industries. Thousands – both slaves and law enforcement brought in to oppose them – died in the resultant fighting, though their actions managed to gain the support and founding of various humanitarian groups that had already been campaigning for an end to slavery for decades.

The events escalated over the next years until the Republic relented to pressure from various groups and the will of Emperor ARTAB II, leading to the abolition of slavery across Parthis and its territories in 3794 RM. Though many groups and individuals praised this, there were far more interested parties (including most PATRICIANS and manufactories) that decried this, declaring it would spell the end of the republic. Though the next decades were difficult, wrought with dissent and rogue patricians who refused to give up their slaves, preferring to commit atrocities against 'their property' than to give them up, the republic was able to bring its affairs in order, performing what some called a miracle to stabilise its economy by c. 3850 RM.

COTOVAD: Geo. Island in the north east of the PANTHEON ISLES.

COTRIA: also 'Cotrian Isles' and 'Cotrian Archipelago'. Geo. Archipelago stretching to the south west of WESTERN SAMMAEA, dividing the SEA OF NARANOR from the SEA OF ABRAXA(1.) Its islands form the bulk of the territories of the ISLAND STATES OF IRY.

COUNCIL OF DIARCHS: see DIARCHS, COUNCIL OF.

COUNCIL OF THE FEDERATION: Pol. Main governing body of the OKKHAMI FEDERATION, ruling from the city of DIATASSARON.

COUNCIL OF INDERACHAN: see INDERACHAN, COUNCIL OF.

COUNCIL OF MERIT: Pol. The ruling government of KEPHUAAN, established in 3780 RM following a political revolution that ousted the stagnating and corrupt plutocracy of its predecessor state, KAPHAAR. Citizens can apply to become councillors via the DEPARTMENT OF EXAMINATIONS. The current chair of the Council is the educator LIORA DATHEN.

COUNCIL OF NICAEA: see NICAEA, COUNCIL OF. COUNCIL OF OCTIRA: see OCTIRA, COUNCIL OF. COUNCIL OF SEVEN, the: also 'The Seven'. Pol. Org. THE CONSULITE, the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR'S chief advisor and confidant throughout the latter decades of his conquest of the SEVEN NATIONS, founded the Council of Seven in 84 RM, in response to the disappearance of the Archpotentate Malichar following his victory in NARTHEL. Made up of the rulers of each of the first seven KORACHANI nations, they ruled in his stead.

Following the Archpotentate's reappearance in 339 RM, The Seven remained an indispensable part of government, making decisions that were beneath the ken of the Archpotentate. They would continue to rule as regents during his increasingly frequent disappearances from public life.

The Seven are appointed by current members of the Council through popular vote, and the process is known to be rife with corruption. Wealthy Patricians and industrialists, and influential generals and members of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE are known to spend a great deal of effort on improving their chances of being elected, and the Korachani capital city of KHADON is a hotbed of deals and subterfuge, with people trying to learn the intentions and alliances within the Council. Over the years certain high-ranking positions across the empire has enjoyed automatic inclusion in the council, though this has varied from time-to-time. Currently only the ARCHINE is guaranteed a spot in the Council of Seven.

Despite the creation of the Council, Malichar's absence brought chaos to the empire, with events eventually escalating into THE THRONE WARS and later the REIGN OF THE EMPTY THRONE.

Present members of the Council include TRIUMVIR KOLROKH HANNO of the GRIGORIAN ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION, who has been on the council since 4001 RM.

COUNT OTARAN: (B. c. 2820 – 2914 RM) Pol. KERATIN notary and later tyrant, who rose in the days of TARAHID STATES, attracting towards him disenfranchised merchants and nobles, leading to the formation of the so-called INTERURBAN STATES in 2895 RM – a series of as many as a dozen neighbouring city-states, owing featly to his capital, which became known as the MARBLE COURT, in the city of GARES.

COUNTERFEIT MEN: also 'counterfeit'. Soc. Sup. Med. Tec. Common term, often intended as an insult, for CLONES, VAT-BORN, or any creature of unnatural birth. It is common amongst the TWIN EMPIRES of KORACHAN and SARASTRO.

COURT OF BONES: Int. Pol. His. Court of OTHERWORLDERS who ruled an unknown people in a region that now lies within the north of present-day SARASTRO. They were discovered all mummified seated around a round stone table by explorers in c. 1100 RM.

From what was deciphered of the stone-etched script on the wall surrounding them, these otherworlder rulers would mummify their peers upon death, slowly leading to more and more members of the council being mummies as fewer living otherworlders ruled. It is unknown who eventually mummified the last of their numbers and what happened to the culture they presided over.

COURT OF DREAMS: Sup. Org. FIRMAMENTAL sodality in RHEA, established in 2952 RM. Originally a secret society where FIRMAMENTISTS could meet in peace without fear of judgement from laymen. At the time Firmamentism was heavily regulated and practitioners had to register to receive a licence for their skills and most non-shapers distrusted them.

The appearance and rapid rise to power of the HIEROMONARCHS in c. 3160 RM saw the organisation pushed further underground due to an increased distrust of SHAPERS that they brought with them, yet this had the unintended result of bringing infamy to the shapers, whose colleges in IMMERIA and SOPARRA were disbanded between 3192 – 3195 RM after the hieromonarchs deposed the AURADIAN DYNASTY and came into power.

The hieromonarchy became most powerful in the south of Rhea, with the lands to the north, concentrated around the cities of Immeria and Soparra, becoming a hotbed of unrest, with supporters of the Court of Dreams, which had become a symbol of resistance towards the new government, which had started to impose worship of the SAEWAL religion upon the people.

The following centuries were dominated by further civil unrest until in c. 3227 RM, when the Court of Dreams became powerful-enough to oppose the Hieromonarchs, who retreated to their strongholds in Iacio, featuring the nation in two, leaving the Court of Dreams in control of Rhea.

Today the Court is the chief governing body of Rhea and exists apart from the Saewal Religion. It is comprised of 144 apises, who make up the Representative Council. Many amongst their numbers are shapers, and they are most well-known for practising ANIMISM, where they call upon the spirits of dead council-members to aid in their decision-making. The apises are elected by citizens of Rhea, and they in turn elect one amongst them to act as a speaker and overseer, and is bestowed the title of Archapex. Today the Archapex is ABIMELECH, a powerful animist.

COURT OF KINGS: Int. Geo. Region in the north of LIEVTHRA, noted for the high number of ancient FOURTH AGE colossi, known locally as LIEVTHRAN ANCIENTS. There are approximately thirty colossi in a region of around 10-square miles, averaging about 40-ft. tall, all with their faces destroyed.

COURT OF WHISPERS: Str. Org. Famed brothel in the city of KETESH and base to the CONSORTS OF WHISPERS, which operate as a guild of sorts to courtesans and escorts in the city.

COUXARE: Set. Coastal settlement in the c of the PANTHEON ISLES, in the mainland region of KARAXHANES (Pop. c. 6,000).

COVENANT OF BALAAM, the: Phil. Vol. Ancient philosophical treatise from ancient ALAAS, on which the common tenets of the region's culture were based, many of which remain to this day, despite the KORACHANI EMPIRE'S rule of its present-day territories, which include the west of LAASKHA, east of AZAZEM and south of SKAROS. It is named after the old capital of LAASKHA, BALAAM, in which the ancient records were stored following their discovery in c. 23 RM.

COVENANT OF KHURAUR: Pol. Vol. Declaration of independence signed in 3478 RM following the long period civil strife in KARAKHAS known as the BLOOD HETERODOXIES, which saw the nation fracture in two – Korachani-ruled Karakhas, and the new free state of KHURAUR.

COVENANT OF THE MOUNTS, the: Pol. Vol. Treaty enacted between ACTANORS, ARKOS^(1.), and SIRIPHAGOS (including J'THANA, which was then its vassal) following the failed KORACHANI attack of Siriphagos, which ended in 2109 RM. The aforementioned nations signed the treaty in 2111 RM, which served to bring them closer together, safeguarding trade relations and establishing a military code of alliance for combatting outside threats, such as the tribes of MULCIBER or other opposing nations. The Covenant broke down in c. 2300 RM as the quarrelling of Aethiosi states led to a resurgence in AUERENI activity against Siriphagos and Arkos.

COVENANT OF PEACE: Pol. Vol. Peace treaty that was signed in TETHYSIA in 3592 RM following years of religious war, which ended finally with the independence of the region of HARITH, which claimed the north eastern-most reaches of Tethysia.

CRADLE OF THE ARCHPOTENTATE: see ARCHPOTENTATE, CRADLE OF THE.

CRADLE, TEMPLE OF THE: Rui. Rel. Str. Large shrine devoted to the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE that was erected by KORACHANI colonists in the CARCHEMISHI PENINSULA (1.) above the CRADLE OF THE ARCHPOTENTATE in what is now the c north west of KULIGALA in c. 1050 RM. Korachan was forced to abandon the colony in 1153 RM but left a garrison to protect the temple and the Cradle. The garrison was eventually overpowered by cultists of the LIVING NIGHTMARE and the temple toppled in c. 1200 RM.

Korachan later invaded the peninsula, intent on recapturing the Cradle and securing the important religious site, and was able to establish a new colony, called FOLCHAN, in 1217 RM. From there it erected a new larger temple that welcomed pilgrims from across the empire. Folchan grew over the next century, but after NOAVATUR – the gateway that allowed people into the SEA OF LETHEA from the north – became an independent state in 1304 RM, it found itself cut off, with no new people or supplies arriving. The people of Kuligala, which by then had expanded their territories to encompass those of Folchan, whittled down the isolated colony over the next decades, destroying the last of the Korachani settlers by 1333 RM, whereupon the new temple was also toppled.

CRADLE OF YVOUGU: Geo. Depression in the ABYD CARGI badlands in the west of GIBEAH, akin to a crater, some 2-miles across. It is entirely different to the surrounding terrain, and some scholars have postulated that it is the site where a seed of one of the Two-and-Twenty MORTAL PEOPLES gave life to a mortal, which is where the name comes from. There is little proof of this though, other than conjecture and vague passages from apocryphal texts from the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN.

CRAS: 1. Rvr. River in the far south west of MAENMIST that flows south west for 480-miles from sources in the ESHTARES badlands before meeting the coast at the Bay of Cras⁽²⁾. The river's commonly accepted source begins in PHYRR, and it forms a border between the two states for around 40-miles of its course.

The river has been at the centre of the western theatre of the $\underline{\text{NACRE}}$ $\underline{\text{WAR}}$ since 3972 RM, with an alliance of $\underline{\text{NACRE}}$ $\underline{\text{LEAGUE}}$, Phyrran and $\underline{\text{SIMBARAN}}$ forces fighting against the insular state of Maenmist, that closed its borders to foreign trade in c. 3960 RM, effectively sundering the $\underline{\text{NACRE}}$ $\underline{\text{ROAD}}$ trade-route, disrupting the economy of the entirety of southern $\underline{\text{SAMMAEA}}$.

Allied attacking forces were able to cross the river by c. 3999 RM and most of the fighting is now centred around its tributary, the river TUDRAS. 2. Sea. Bay to the south west of MAENMIST, to the far north of the SEA OF AMMASH⁽²⁾. The river Cras⁽¹⁾ drains into it.

CRASIS: Pol. Rnk. Noble title in GNOTH.

CRASSULA: 1. Pol. KORACHANI colony in the north east of EASTERN MENISCEA, west of the SEA OF SUDUNIR, along the northern POLAR CIRCLE. It was a major source of gold for many years, though was lost following the WAR OF THE ARTIFEXES in 3019 RM. After close to a 700-years of independence it was regained by Korachan in 3682 RM, following many years of political machinations and the influence of various PATRICIAN HOUSES. Today it is home to one of the largest open-cast gold mines in the empire, spread across multiple mines in the region of KIGOA, and is heavily guarded against attack.

2. Set. Main city in the above colony, belonging to the KORACHANI EMPIRE. Founded in c. 2610 RM, overlooking the BAY OF GELICIA, the city has survived the region's secession from the empire in 3019 RM, and eventual re-absorption by the empire in 3982 RM, due to the actions of various PATRICIAN HOUSES. The city of today have moved steadily southern to keep up with the retreating sea; a necessary evil, as this is the only way of shipping the gold extracted in the open-cast mines of KIGOA to the empire (Pop. c. 50,000).

CRATER PLAINS, the: see CHONENO.

CRAVEN THRONE, the: see HABBUR ABUIT.

CRAWLING DARK: Lan. Ast. KORACHANI vernacular commonly used to describe the 4-month-long period of unending dark in lands in the farnorth of LLACHATUL that experience extreme seasonal variations in the lengths of days between summer and winter. By contrast the regions' summer is known as the MIDNIGHT SUN.

CREANT: Sup. Fau. Creature, made through one of various SUPRANATURAL means, most commonly FIRMAMENTAL or ATRAMENTAL, granting a semblance of life to inanimate matter. The act of granting 'life' to a creant is difficult, time-consuming and dangerous.

Creants can be anything from humanoid statues to piles of mulch or sand moving in a vaguely ambulatory fashion. Some creants are specifically made, often through the aid of LITHISTS, to be more readily created. Rarely, creants are formed naturally through the influence of the Firmament or Atramenta in an area. Of note are the FLOROANAN BODIES of the BARRIER LANDS, which are skeletons granted a semblance of life through intricate magickal means.

CREATOR, the: see SHAPER, THE.

CREEPING CHANGE, the: Sup. Geo. Expansive region of ATRAMENTAL TAINT straddling the border between SYNCHTHONITHA in the west and GRARNEÂST in the east. Characterised by Badlands and natural stone arches that slowly yet inexorably change, rendering detailed cartographical surveys of them impossible. The area is shunned by most Synchthonithans, but there is a caste of DVERG nomads who have dwelt in the region for generations and have learnt how to navigate them, though even they are not infallible to its mutability.

CREEPING VEINS: Atr. Flo. Fast-growing ATRAMENTAL vines that strangle nearby trees and shrubs, effectively killing them and turning them into a frame to which the veins can continue growing. Named after their resemblance to branching veins, they are common in heavily wooded areas across temperate regions of LLACHATUL and SAMMAEA that are susceptible to even minor ATRAMENTAL CORRUPTION.

CRENEISA: Lak. Lake in the c south of AHRISHEN, just north of the BHANN Mountains. The lake is fed by sources in the OSHEL and DURILIT and is linked to the ARESHI⁽²⁾ river-system by lake PANOIDA and lake AMATIDA, both downstream. The lake is a rare example of lake bifurcation, largely due to the level and marshy terrain.

CREPHITHISS: see AQUEDUCT OF CREPHITHISS.

CREPISCULA: Dem. 'Crepisculan'. 1. Ancient city-state in the south of the island-continent of BROR^(1.), in the c north west of the extant nation of the same name^(2.). It emerged during the time of the COALITION OF SURISSIA in c. 1800 RM, and remained a strong presence in the south of the continent as the BARBARIAN STATES proliferated in the south. It took advantage of the chaos that followed the fragmentation of the Coalition in 2132 RM, and expanded to the west, clashing with nearby AHAGGAD^(2.), and absorbing other city-states as they struggled to regain stability.

By c. 2300 RM it had established a new nation based around the founding city, though the capital was later moved to the city of \underline{ATAXIA} in c. 2580 RM after a series of wars with the waning Barbarian States between c. 2480 – 2600 RM stretched its borders far east.

The city of Crepiscula slowly waned in power and was eventually abandoned in c. 3200 RM after waning sea levels left it isolated form the coast that once supported it. Today, little remains of its ancient ruin and it has been forgotten by most.

2. Nm. Nation in the south of $\underline{BROR}^{(1.)}$, overlooking the \underline{SEA} OF $\underline{PRODIGLIA}$. It emerged from a powerful city-state of the same $\underline{name}^{(1.)}$ during the time of the $\underline{COALITION}$ OF $\underline{SURISSIA}$ in c. 1800 RM, and remained a strong presence in the south of the continent as the $\underline{BARBARIAN}$ STATES proliferated in the south. The present iteration of the nation emerged in c. 2820 RM.

Crepiscula is a dark reflection of KORACHAN and THE INNER SEA, acting a grotesque mirror to what might await the empire's future, should it continue in its rape of the natural world and wanton use of the ATRAMENTA. It is a wasted land, all resources consumed millennia ago, precursing that which awaits the rest of ELYDEN. Crepiscula is a strange land, touched by the corruption of the ancient empire of APLI, its features greyed and rounded, all beauty and function stripped bare eons past.

Though considered a nation by most, in truth it is little more than a lose collection of towns and cities with little affinity with one-another. What can be considered a government exists only in the city of ATAXIA, though it is of little influence upon other places, which are considered their own entities by most. Most settlements are made up of a few families and other individuals, rarely exceeding 100 – 200 members though a few larger settlements exist, usually next to some feature of perceived importance. By Korachani standards the region has little order and is truly a place of surreal anarchy, a grim reminder of the fate which awaits the rest of Elyden. As all resources are wasted, everything in Crepiscula is recycled, from food to water to material goods. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

CRESCIVIA: also 'the Growing Cleft'. Geo. Large canyon in the north west of ELALLIA in the south of SAMMAEA that is visibly growing, increasing by inches every year. It is around 600-miles long and over 200-ft wide with steep sides that prevent descent, and the frequent earthquakes in the region have prevented the construction of bridges in the area, meaning that the far north west of Elallia is cut off from the rest of the nation.

CRETA: 1. Geo. Island off the north eastern coast of JURRAS⁽²⁾, dividing the SEA OF FOR from the SEA OF AZAM. It is home to the pirate city DFRKAZ

- 2. Sea. Sea off the western-coast of JURRAS (2.).
- 3. For. Hardwood forest in the west of JURRAS^(2.).

CRETACEA: Set. Small fortified city in the far east of THE SURRACH, close to the border with KHALHAT. It is known for its white chalky bricks (Pop. c. 15,000).

CRISS BRACELET: Soc. Obj. Fas. Metal bracelet worn on the left wrist by men in LAASKHA and, prior to the SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE, also in VAALK, though it fell out of fashion as KORACHANI culture and religion waned following the Sundering.

It originated as a defensive bracer worn by swordsmen in ancient times, dating to pre-imperial LASCAR^(3,). most of whom worshipped the deity SETHENYN, and it still carries religious connotations. Indeed, most Criss bracelets have a sword motif or decoration on them, whose roots lie in old martial tradition, though which today is more commonly believed to be related to the Sword TARTARUCH.

CRITHAL: Set. Settlement in the south of LOEGRESS^(1.). (Pop. c.).

CRITHON: Geo. Region in the c-south east of AEONAS known for its iron ore deposits. It has been worked for many centuries and the landscape is littered with tailings and spend quarries.

CROCITA: Set. Settlement in the south east of NAARETH, along the course of the river ELGISAR (Pop. c. 6,800).

CROCODILE: Fau. Common name for a form of semiaquatic animal, classified as a THEROPS, endemic to various subtropical areas across ELYDEN, including SAMMAEA, the of LLACHATUL, south of MENISCEA and northern BROR. The largest example is the RELICCROCODILE, which lives in coastal wetlands in KASIHAAL and RASTAN. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

CROCUTEX: Fau. Gigantic hyena-like creature native to the WHITE SHEET, in the far north of LLACHATUL. They are amongst the largest carnivores in the NORTHERN HEMISPHERE, though are predominantly scavengers, living off the frozen remains of other animals that have died, including MAMMOTHS. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

CROSS OF GALLANTRY: Mil. Obj. Medal awarded to PARTHISAN soldiers who display exemplary acts of courage and bravery in battle.

CROTAL: Set. Settlement in the south of OPHIUSSA, just to the north west of lake ACANA. Its main industry is agriculture (Pop. c. 6,200).

CROTON: Soc. Pol. PATRICIAN HOUSE centred around the INNER SEA, with holdings in AZAZEM, IPANAH⁽²⁾, as well as the KORACHANI colony of MELHUMBRA. The house is concerned with SLAVING, and sends a steady stream of slaves to the heartland from across the empire's territories. During the REIGN OF THE EMPTY THRONE it was one of two houses that declared war on each other as they vied for the throne. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

CROUGA: Sea. Bay in the far north east of EASTERN LLACHATUL, between the south of MEHITIEL and the north east of LOEGRESS^(1.), forming the western waters of the SEA OF AKRY.

CROWN ISLANDS, the: Geo. Common name given to the outlying islands forming part of the PANTHEON ISLES. This region of Pantheon Isles is more difficult to protect than the larger islands closer to the mainland, and they are most at risk from predation by pirates and slavers despite the best efforts of the KATOBRAGHAN navy.

CROWN OF KAMARKA, the: Gam. Obj. The prestigious prize of the HEROES' CROSSING extreme endurance race that takes place in the VESPERTINE LEAGUE and NASTAL every five years. It is a leather circlet, the value of which lies not in its material worth but its cultural relevance and the prestige behind the victory its possession implies. An individual who has won the Crown remains a celebrity in the Vespertine League for the rest of their lives, and previous victors spend the rest of their days travelling across the League, speaking of their experience, living off of the hospitality of their hosts. The Crown remains in possession of the victor until the next champion is declared about three and a half years later.

The crown was lost or stolen three times in the near 700-year history of the race, and was replaced each time with as near identical a copy as possible, with the whereabouts of the older versions remaining unknown to this day.

CROWN OF THE SKY: see SKY CROWN, THE.

CRUCIATI: see THE CRUCIBLE.

CRUCIBLE, the: Rel. Shrine in ADOCT, ALMAGEST, overseen by the EPISTOLARIES. Comprises four self-appointed Epistolaries, called cruciati, who stand perpetually pulling against each other on a shallow crucible on top of which stands the burning form of an OTHERWORLDER. The cruciati's bodies are chained to the crucible and their efforts oppose those of their peers, keeping the crucible suspended, forever rooted to the same spot. Their suffering is symbolic, and by the tenets of their people is collective of the Epistolaries' struggle to attain full knowledge.

CRUCIBLE OF CNASSENIA: see CNASSENIA, CRUCIBLE OF.

CRUCIBLE OF VIVIDUSZHIREN: see VIVIDUSZHIREN, CRUCIBLE OF.

CRUCZHAE: Set. Small city in the north of OKKHAM, in the north western foothills if the Okkhami Mountains^(1.). Its main industry is sericulture – the production of silk from caterpillars of the giant ORUNA moth that is endemic to the lower mountains of Okkham (Pop. c. 14,000).

CRUDHA: Set. Settlement in the west of JURRAS⁽²⁾, in the region of VALASSIA (Pop. c. 10,000).

CRUDORI: Set. Settlement in the c north west of CHEIRA (Pop. c. 7,000).

CRUSADE: historically, a largescale act of aggression against a nation, ethnicity or other group. Most crusades have been motivated by racism or bigotry, though under the pretext of some other purpose, such as religious conversion, territorial expansion, resource grabs, or the simple desire to exterminate a group of people or area.

The most infamous crusades have been perpetrated by the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE and its eventual OFFSHOOTS, though the act is not exclusive to that demographic, and various other crusades have taken place across ELYDEN.

CRUSADES OF BLOOD: His. Historical period of the ancient FIFTH AGE in KARAKHAS, which lasted from c. -50 – 150 RM. It originated as a means of collecting blood sacrifices from neighbouring peoples, though once under KORACHANI rule, the main objective of these raids was to capture SLAVES, though as the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE gained influence in the region, the tradition was abandoned, to be replaced by Korachani alternatives.

CRUSADE, LAASKHAN: Pol. His. One of many ANTHROPEIDOS
CRUSADES that characterised the early years of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, between 36 – 41 RM. The crusade took place largely within LAASKHA, and concerned itself with eradicating the land of HALFBLOODS, OTHERWORLDERS and some non-HUMAN MORTALS.

CRUSADE, NÁRTHELI: Pol. His. One of many ANTHROPEIDOS
CRUSADES that characterised the early years of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, between 139 – 151 RM. The crusade took place largely within NÁRTHEL, and concerned itself with eradicating the land of HALFBLOODS, OTHERWORLDERS and some non-HUMAN MORTALS.

CRUSADE OF SHADOWS, the: Int. Rel. Mil. Crusade launched by the KORACHANI EMPIRE in 4007 RM by the ARCHREDEMPTOR XIMENES following the assassination of the ARCHPATRICIAN MARIUS of HOUSE USHAR.

The crusade was targeted against Firmamentists and sympathisers of the east, within imperial cities and territories. It was responsible for the deaths of thousands, if not millions, and was the cause of much inner strife that would eventually contribute to the end of the war.

CRUSADE, VAALKAN: Pol. Soc. His. One of many ANTHROPEIDOS
CRUSADES that engulfed the early years of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, between 19 – 23 RM. The crusade took place largely within VAALK, and concerned itself with eradicating the land of HALFBLOODS, OTHERWORLDERS and some non-HUMAN MORTALS.

CRUSADER-LORDS, the: see KNIGHTS FERROUS, THE.

CRUSADES, ANTHROPEIDOS: His. Series of xenophobic wars that took place between c. 10 – 151 RM under the leadership of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. Young and worried of the threat that HALFBLOODS and OTHERWORLDERS posed to its rule, the church launched the first crusade to whittle down their numbers. Initially little more than the proclamation of bounties for dead ASICTHAIN and halfbloods, the Crusades soon escalated into state- and privately-funded campaigns; most notable of which were: the VAALKAN CRUSADE, between 19 – 23 RM; the LAASKHAN CRUSADE, between 36 – 41 RM; and the NÁRTHELI CRUSADE, between 139 – 151 RM. Other crusades existed, and were a common part of life in Korachan in the first decades of the $2^{\rm nd}$ century RM.

The crusades dwindled following the death of GENERAL GRABRES and the massacre of his armies in 149 RM, and ended finally 2-years later in 151 RM, with the infamous BATTLE OF TWO WORLDS, where the halfblood CAMBION was martyred.

Ironically, in the millennia since the end of the crusades, halfbloods have become a ubiquitous sight in most imperial cities, though some rural areas (particularly in regions where the largest conflicts had taken place during the crusades) are known to maintain a bias against them.

CRUSADES, EGRET: His. Rel. Offensive actions perpetrated by the KORACHANI EMPIRE against the perceived barbarities of the 'hinterlands' surrounding the borders of those lands – NAARETH, ANUBIA, AETHIOS, RHINOCOLOURA, and particularly the lands that would later become SUOR.

Beginning in around 3250 RM, these crusades were launched from the eastern-most provinces of the empire. Named after the VENTHIRI General-PATRICIAN who organised the first crusade, the wars were launched by the patricians, BARRATORS and the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE in order to exploit foreign lands without the need of imperial subjugation and comprised mostly of coastal raids for slaves and resources. The so-called crusades were a constant in the area until their decline in c. 3500 RM. Though never declared to have stopped (indeed, localised crusades were continuing well into the dying days of the Korachani empire), the last official crusade of its kind was in 3523 RM.

The Egret Crusades were notable in contributing to the decline of native religions as exocrines and missionaries brought word of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE to locals. Most noteworthy is perhaps the near-destruction of the ancient form of mysticism known as GRAMARYE, which only remains in CHEIRA and GIBEAH.

CRUSADES, EHRENISIAN: Rel. His. Crusade initiated by the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE in the north west of SAMMAEA, to the south west of the SEA OF ORRIDA. The region had long-been known to the Church as a land of people who worshipped a large pantheon of heathen gods, many of which are thought to be corruptions of the Two-and-Twenty DEMIURGES. In the early 3rd millennium, the Church sent various missions to the land in a bid to sway its people towards worshipping the UNDYING MACHINE, but most attempts were rebuked. This led to increased prejudice and bigotry towards the people, who remained known to the general population of KORACHAN as heathen barbarians.

Sea merchants and EXOCRINES returned from the land with (obviously exaggerated or wholly fabricated) tales of cannibalism and depraved rituals that only served to worsen public sentiment towards the people of the EHRENISIAN COAST, which prompted the Church to action. In 2531 RM it issued tenders for parties interested in taking part in a crusade into the Ehrenisian Coast, with the goal of forcibly toppling the regions' religions and establishing a Korachani colony in their lands. There was great interest, both from within the Church, as well as from private consortiums, mercenary groups, as well as the Korachani government itself, which would stand to benefit should the land be successfully converted.

Named after the Ehrenisian Coast, which became the main target of the offensive, the crusade was eventually started in 2534 RM, with ships landing on the islands of REDDIN and ROHDIN, where the fortified ports of ST. BERREA^(2.) and ST. AND^(2.) were established respectively, allowing for safe passage of supplies and crusaders from the east.

Crusaders poured onto the mainland into INGHULL, KARGEMMA, and the TRISKETHIAN DOMAINS, attacking sites of religious importance to those people. The first attacks targeted coastal areas and were largely successful, though as time went on the natives coordinated a united defence, pushing the crusaders back to their island fortresses, which in time were also attacked. Korachani losses were great, but that only served to fuel their hatred, causing more people to take up the call to crusade from the church, over the coming decades.

Despite regional successes, both the militants and missionaries had little overall success and the defence proved to be better organised and defended than expected. By c. 2570 RM the Church was receiving less capital to fund the crusade, but people continued to sign up for the crusade, lured by false promises of greener pastures and riches. Tens of thousands of Korachani people died in pursuit of a target that had been forgotten by the Church, which silently turned its attentions elsewhere, and the crusade eventually petered out by c. 2590 RM.

At its height the crusade was able to secure some land in the far north west of the extant TEMPLAR STATES, where a large shrine to the UNDYING MACHINE was built in 2563 RM, known as the SHRINE OF THE SHADOW TRIUMPHANT. This served as the centre of a short-lived beachhead from which crusaders could muster before setting out farther south.

The shrine survived the failure of the crusade and remained a fixture in the region, guarded by $\frac{\text{TEMPLAR KNIGHTS}^{(2)}}{\text{Sworn to defend it till}}$ their last breath. Indeed, when the Korachani empire rekindled its hopes of establishing a colony in the region in c. 2680 RM, the Shrine of the Shadow Triumphant became the first place where colonists settled down, establishing the colony of $\frac{\text{INDERACHAN}^{(1)}}{\text{NDERACHAN}}$

The crusades continued sporadically throughout the next century, reaching a crux between 2753 and c. 2810 RM. This led to a complex conflict between five sides – a loosely allied force of Kargemman and Triskethian troops defending their lands from Korachani colonisers and Parthisan invaders, who were themselves in conflict with each other, and the nation of Inghull, which was in the midst of its own civil war between the Khullan Inquisition, who were loosely allied with Parthis, and the Sorcerer-Kings(3), whose lands were rapidly dwindling.

Parthis retreated in 2772 RM, and by c. 2804 RM the Korachani settlers were pushed back, and the fortresses of St. And & St. Berrea were destroyed by allied fleets. In Korachan, interest in establishing a colony waned as the cost of the effort spirals, and in 2809 RM it signed a treaty with the defending nations ratifying a ceasefire on condition that the Templar Knights are allowed to live in the small exclave of Inderachan so long as they sever ties with Korachan.

CRUSADES, FOREST: see FOREST WARS, THE CRUSADES, RENAISSANCE: Pol. Soc. His. Tumultuous period of history in the KORACHANI EMPIRE between c. 1050 – 1100 RM, when the COUNCIL OF SEVEN rallied against scientific discovery and innovation and the growing renaissance movement that saw art, philosophy and the sciences being questioned and reinterpreted.

The government believed that this would eventually lead to the people challenging its power and authority so it organised a crusade against innovators and thinkers, calling upon the aid of the SANCTIFIED ORDERS OF THE INQUISITION – specifically the AIWAHAN, ARÂTHUAHI, and MORÉHAN Orders – to help scour the empire of those it believed were a danger to its safety.

Various groups were persecuted across the empire, and thousands were put to their deaths. Those who could, fled to the north west of the empire, with many settling the largely unclaimed lands, leading to the creation of the small nation of HRIDAN(2.).

The most affected regions were LAASKHA, SKAROS and ALMAGEST, and many monasteries and institutions of learning were destroyed in the decades of the crusades, with many settlements waning in the years after the crusades ended. Many PATRICIANS had become patrons to this growing class of artists and they too faced persecution during this time, with many HOUSES destroyed and weakened in the events. This led to the founding of the QORADIAN ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION in 1114 RM.

The period would lead to the DEMIURGE RENAISSANCE, in which philosophers and scholars would come to question the authority of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, leading to further persecution. These events would eventually cause the empire's attitude towards innovation and questioning of norms to change, leading to a stagnation that its ruling classes fought hard to maintain.

CRUSADES, WITCH: see SCOURGE OF WITCHES.

CRYING CANYONS, the: Geo. Canyon system in the c north of RHEA, just south of the southern-face of the AHRAN HIGHLANDS. Its name is derived from the many aquifer-fed springs that cover its 150-mile length, and the moist air of the area.

CRYPT OF CIVILISATIONS: Int. Myt. Str. Legendary location common to many myths of SOUTHERN SAMMAEA, particularly in ELALLIA and YSACYITHAIA. It is said to have been built by an ancient philosopher-king as a repository for artefacts and knowledge of dying cultures. At its peak in the end of the \underline{FOURTH} AGE, the Crypt was said to contain mementos and artefacts from dozens of different cultures that had died out throughout the age.

Its location was lost following the WAR OF SCOURGING and it gained a near-mythic status amongst various cultures.

CRYPT MARKET, the: Com. Name given to the black-market economy of KORACHAN, named after a physical black-market that once prospered within the crypts beneath the city of KHADON, but which was eradicated in 3804 RM.

CRYPTOMNESIA: Med. Sup. Condition where an individual experiences memories that, despite their vividness and seeming-realness, are false. Such memories are often planted by ONEIROMANCERS or COGNITARIIN, or might be the result of prolonged exposure to certain DREAMSCAPES.

CRYSTAL PALACE, the: Pol. Str. Crystal-clad hall in the capital of TEMUJA, DUARIAHAHN. It is partially constructed from crystal blocks mined in the PLAINS OF LAES.

CTAAGRU: Also 'the Forest of Flesh'. Int. Sup. For. ATRAMENTALLY
CORRUPTED forest in the east of VÂRR, to the south west of the SOLUM PLAINS^(1.), known for the fleshy tumorous growths on the trunks of its trees. The place is wretched and is avoided by most.

The region is categorised as $\underline{\text{DANGEROUS}}$ by the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI}}$ $\underline{\text{INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES}}$.

CTHAITH: Geo. Complex crater situated in highland plains in the north east of RHINOCOLOURA, just west of the ADAVAM Mountains. The meteoric iron deposited in its centre was the site of a large IMPERIAL opencast mine that was abandoned in c. 3200 RM, due to dwindling yields and the increasing difficulty of transporting iron over 1,500-miles to MORULAURGO, the closest SARASTROAN harbour.

CTHANOTHA: Geo. Region in the far south east of KHARKHARADONTIS dominated by an ancient sinkhole in which are the fossilised remains of what appear to be machines, their true purpose hidden beneath millennia of calcification.

CTHONA: Rvr. River flowing through the north of ALLASAN and the west of MHAROKK, for 600-miles from its source in the north of the SOLON HIGHLANDS, before emptying in the SEA OF AZAM.

CTHYNYS: 1. Geo. Name given by the explorer VREGL to the north western coast of BROR^(1.) (then relatively unknown) in 1303 RM.

2. Geo. Name now given more specifically to the island in the north of the nation of $\underline{BROR}^{(2.)}$, in the north western coast of $Bror^{(1.)}$.

CTUGHOTH-EMMANITH: His. Rui. Geo. Dre. This abandoned highland region in the BLACK MOUNTAINS in the c north west of CISNERIA is an innocuous place today. Uninhabited, it is often traversed by CARIOUNS during their itinerant travels of the wilderness, who think little of it.

Yet, in the 2nd millennium RM the region was a place of utter horror and chaos, formed by the nightmarish DREAMS of an unknown entity, possibly one of the DEMIURGES of a SCION of great power. By c. 2130 RM it had expanded to encompass much of the east of the Black Mountains, which under its influence had become a writhing mass where beast and lair were indistinguishable. As it increased in influence, some nightmarish forms escaped it, terrorising mortal settlements nearby. This continued for some time until in 2204 RM a CHOIR of archshapers assembled from across LLACHATUL was assembled to neutralise it.

CULLING, the: 1. Pol. Edict passed by the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR in 339 RM, whereby all the DESPOSYNI (his own children) and their direct descendants were investigated and those found to have been negligent and lived lives of excess and debauchery and who had not contributed to the running of the empire in his absence were executed.

This caused uproar amongst the Desposyni, who implored the Council of Seven to protect them, but none could defy the will of the Archpotentate. Many fled the empire but others accepted their fate. Thousands of people across the empire were investigated and executed in the years following the passing of the edict, and the practice continued over the millennia, though these persecutions became less frequent as the Desposyni became used to life under this new shadow and as Malichar withdrew from public life. Eventually, the UNBORN (as the children of the Desposyni became colloquially known) bred freely and, in the case of the three sons of the PRIMID MELESH (Malichar's first-born son), ruled the city of KORACHAN.

2. Pol. His. Era of political reforms in the history of RAONGEN^(2.) where in 2792 RM many of the ruling FIEFLORDS were replaced by rising industrialists, with two being executed by King INVIS LAFENG, after which he changed his title to EMPEROR-FACTOTUM. Their territories were divided amongst the new or surviving Fieflords, who collectively became known as FACTOTUMS^(2.).

The Culling was the culmination of decades of shifting power in Raongen, where true influence moved from the ancient noble houses to the rising titans of industry – industrialists and magnates. With many noble families struggling in this new political climate, Invis saw the opportunity to elevate the rising industrialists further and cull the ailing noble families. Dozens of venerable houses were effectively pruned, excised from the royal hierarchy amid a period of political upheaval that saw the vassals (common folk) supporting the king. With the support of the masses and the immensely wealthy industrialists he was able to proceed with his sweeping changes. Two of the old Fieflords opposed him, and he had them assassinated, with their heirs either bought off by the industrialists or silenced themselves.

Following the Culling, the old feudal system had been changed to a new one, with self-made industrialists replacing the millennia-old Fieflords as the de-facto governors and rulers of the empire.

CULLING STONE: His. Rel. Obj. Ancient sacrificial stone in the south eastern wilderness of KARAKHAS. It dates back to the mid FOURTH AGE, and was where worshippers of KHAR'ILLAE sacrificed their enemies to the scion.

CULLIS: Set. Fortified coastal city in the north east of the HENDECARCHY of HATON in the north of MALAN (Pop. c. 42,000).

CULLU: Mil. Str. Major fortress sin the south of the HENDECARCHY of CYRENIA in the north of MALAN, forming the heart of the CULLUAN LINES.

CULLUAN LINES: Mil. Str. Expansive series of defensive lines in the south of the HENDECARCHY of CYRENIA in the north of MALAN erected between 3682 – c. 3710 RM following the unsuccessful allied attack of AONIA, HATON and NHORA against the tyrannical rule of its HENDECARCH, MANESKARKON ZARRÉ.

CULMINATION BALL: Soc. Major COMING-OF-AGE CELEBRATION in the INNER SEA REGION that sees the children of noble families take part in elaborate social celebrations, where both boys and girls from PATRICIAN HOUSES and affluent FREEMAN families who have turned 16 are presented to others of high society. The event typically involves an elaborate banquet followed by social interaction that ends in a symbolic dance, after which they are considered to be adults in their culture's high society.

These balls play an important part in the social calendars of the upper classes, and many interfamily unions and political alliances are made and strengthened during such events, shaping the political landscape of the Inner Sea Region.

CULVERIN: Mil. Largely obsolete light cannon with a relatively long barrel for its bore, which could be transported by a pair of gunners with relative ease. Though antiquated in industrialised regions, such as around the INNER SEA, it remains in use in more backward regions, such as the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER, and more distant regions that are not as technologically-advanced, where outdated weapons might still be found.

CUNNINGMAN: Also 'Cunningwoman'. Sup. Primitive folk-healers and OCCULTISTS who are common in pastoral regions across ELYDEN, particularly in isolated areas – mountains, forests, and so on. They have a reputation amongst more urbane people for mummery and charlatanism, but their communities swear by them, and are quick to seek their aid for injuries and ailments, for which they have a plethora of remedies that often involve odd ingredients and rituals such as whispering to wounds.

CUNOMAGLIANS, the: Pol. Myr. His. Line of autocratic rulers that preceded the KOMMEAN DYNASTIES in the kingdom of KOMMEA. They were descended from a SCIONIC being of uncertain heritage who called himself CUNOMAGLIO and whose death in 1863 RM left his three children – the original Cunomaglians – in charge of Kommea. They divided the lands amongst themselves, creating a hereditary triarchy that lasted until the ousting of their kind over a millennium later.

They were characterised by their vaguely canid features, and digitigrade limbs, and were long-lived, not only perpetuating but fanaticising the pervasive cult of personality their father had started, highlighting their supposedly divine birthright.

In c. 2920 RM, the people of various territories formed a coalition and rose up against them, killing two of them and causing the third to flee (the whereabouts of the last Cunomaglian remains unknown).

Despite the fervour with which Kommeans had once revered Cunomaglio and his descendants, little is now known of the Cunomaglians and their rule, as those who led the rebellion against them had all reference to them erased – statues were toppled, monuments disassembled, palaces destroyed, and references to them and their primogenitor were destroyed with very few contemporary references left intact.

CUNOMAGLIO: m. Sup. Pol. Rel. His. (D. 1863 RM) The first of the CUNOMAGLIAN rulers of KOMMEA, who became autocrat of the nation in c. 1250 RM. Now believed to have been of SCIONIC blood, he established a cult of personality in the historical region of GHAL RIMMA just outside of present day INSEA in c. 1200 RM that rapidly spread throughout the region over the next decades, supplanting whatever religions and governments were present until then. Indeed, he undertook a concentrated effort to eradicate all memory of the regions previous religion, culture, and government, and very little is known of the period directly preceding his rise to power.

He claimed to have been ordained by a higher power and was able to convince the Kommean people through miraculous acts that could not otherwise be explained. He commissioned the creation of a magnificent throne (that he had originally dreams of being hidden in the (HOLLOW COASTLINE) that became the focal point of a new palace built around it in Insea, from where he made his court, ruling for over 600-years before perishing in 1863 RM. He had foreseen his death and prepared accordingly, appointing his 3 MORTAL-born sons as his heirs, who divided the land between them.

His line of heirs became known as the Cunomaglians and ruled under increasingly dystopian conditions until c. 2920 RM, when a coalition of states rose against their oppressors, killing two of three of them, forcing the third to retreat, losing his grip on the nation.

CUR APON: Pol. Set. Capital city of TAAN AN, in the c north west of the nation, to the west of the ACCA HOAL Basin. It once stood at the coast, and was the terminus of the great AQUEDUCT OF CREPHITHISS though has since found itself almost 200-miles from the coast following millennia of slowly lowering sea levels.

The city was founded during the early centuries of the AMMASHI^(3.) dominance in the region atop the ruin of an ancient city that once marked the terminus of the great aqueduct. It was built around the gigantic ruined pier (column) of the aqueduct, using bricks from the ruined pre-existing settlement and parts of the aqueduct itself, and structures were even built within the pier and atop it, with some surviving to this day.

The city serves as the seat of EMPEROR ZHAGALONGA and is also the home to the PRAEFECTURATE COUNCIL. The assassination of the present Emperor's great grandfather in 3889 RM by unidentified foreigners led to Cur Apon becoming insular and less open to foreigners, which remains the case to this day. Only approved individuals, most of them trusted merchants, are allowed in the city, and even then, only the trade district, so little is known of the city today. Despite this, it is known for its great industries, of which UMBRA refining is probably the most widespread—with raw umbra extracted from the regions of ZENEGE RES and UBERRET are processed here before being piped west to the harbours of URAMMALET (Pop. unknown, estimated over 1,000,000).

CURATE: Rel. Rnl. Within the ranks of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING

MACHINE (including the REFORMED CHURCH) a rank of priest with many traits in common with a physician. The curate's role is to care for the bodies of the faithful, using the credo that a healthy body is tantamount to a healthy soul.

CURATOR: Pol. Rnk. Hereditary title and ranks within the MINASTERIA
OF ANNALS in the KORACHANI EMPIRE.

CURE MENKEN: (B. 2322 – D. 2413 RM) His. Edu. VÂRRAN philosopher and physicist who in 2367 RM published a paper detailing the so-called MENKEN BARRIER that describes the hypothesis that there will come a time when everything will end. He gained notoriety following this, and was ridiculed within scholarly circles for many years until a re-evaluation of his work led to a reappraisal many years after his death.

CURSED KING, THE: His. Leg. Alleged founder of VECTIS, whose tale is ingrained in the legends of the region.

One of few survivors of a devastating earthquake that left the precursor state of VAEVECTA^(L) devastated, he was adopted by the warrior tribes of the west, who knew nothing of his royal heritage. He became a competent general who, without knowing his roots, attacked his old people in the east, slaughtering thousands, and claiming the city of LEHIOK as his own and becoming the first king of Vectis. He learnt the truth of his actions on his deathbed, and later became known as the CURSED KING. Though the monarchy has since been abolished, he is remembered as the founder of Vectis.

It is unknown to outsiders whether this tale is historical or apocryphal, or whether it is a mix of the two.

CURSITOR: Rnk. Lawyer in IMPERIAL cities.

CUSHANUR: Sup. Geo. Region of mild ATRAMENTAL TAINT in TABERNACEA in the south east of AQUARIIA.

The region is categorised as LEAST CONCERN by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

CUSTODE: Pol. Mil. Rnk. In ARKOS^(1.), a title given to lords and generals amongst the ARKOSI CASTE^(3.). The title is an ancestral one, first given in 547 RM by the AUSPEXES. In 561 RM the LORD EBAEON granted them the right to take multiple wives to help repopulate the region following a century of war with AUERENI barbarians. Through the machinations of the Auspexes, they slowly gained power and influence, taking control of Arkos in 622 RM following the increased weakened physical condition of Ebaeon, who by then was well into his 4th century of life.

CUT YEAR: Cal. In the MACCABEAN (KORACHANI) CALENDAR, the opposite of a leap year, every seven years, resulting in the Winter Solstice festival lasting one day instead of two, becoming a day of mourning of the dead.

CUTH: Dem. 'Cuthi'. Ntn. Cuth is a land of insular people who cling to their archaic religion even as they attempt to bring their land into the industrial age. Located in the south east of LLACHATUL, its southernmost lands are made up of jungles that give way in the north to savannahs and great TURCAR desert of inland Llachatul.

The empire of Cuth, as it is recognised today, originated in 2275 RM, following the suicide of KENG WALIN, the religious leader of the empire of KARKAUTH. He was later reborn, the flesh around his wound black as coal. His rebirth brought chaos to Karkauth, leading to religious extremists from the CULT OF NERGAAL killing the ruling family, wanting to elevate Keng to the position of emperor. He would eventually trick the extremists into killing themselves through a display of loyalty, and proclaimed "Karkauth is no more. Today we build Cuth, and at its centre will be this church dedicated to my father NERGAAL".

The city of Karkauth was abandoned and a new capital established in the religious city of ERKALA, after which the Cuthi would slowly become xenophobic, ignoring trade and turning to a nocturnal lifestyle out of fear and reverence to the Sun, known to them as TALLAS^(1.), which was the symbol of Nergaal. People willingly sacrificed themselves to Nergaal in sunless temples deep beneath their cities, even as they stagnated. Keng's mortal body was declared dead in 3171 RM, close to a millennium after his rebirth, causing a schism in the church, which persists to this day.

The people of Cuth reverse illness and disease, which on one hand has caused millions of unnecessary deaths over the years, but which has inured the remnants, making them stronger. Cuth remains today as an oddity; a culture that clings to its archaic religions and practices, even as it embraces the spread of technology and industrialisation in its cities. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

CUTHADDUAN: Geo. Highland region in the west of CUTH, after which the nation is named. The highlands are an extension of the expansive MO-ORASSIM range.

CUTHI: Lan. Religious language spoken in CUTH that appeared after the collapse of KARKAUTH in 2275 RM.

It is a strange tongue, and though in a broad sense it emerged from KARKUTHI, it is said to have been devised by priests of the CULT OF NERGAAL during fever DEMIURGE NERGAAL himself.

Others say it is a corruption of the tongue of the IRKALLA^(2,), brought back from uncounted millennia of neglect.

Regardless of its roots, it is spoken by the priests of the Cult of Nergaal and does not see day-to-day use outside of religious rituals and festivals See Vol II: Languages.

CUTHI PLAINS: Geo. Dry hot plains dominating the central area of CUTH. The region sun-bleached and of little vegetation, though what flora and fauna exists there is well- adapted to the environment.

CUTU: Mil. Str. Expansive fortifications in the south of RHAMIA, guarding its southern border with AHRISHEN. It forms a part of the GREY ROAD and maintains large customs houses where goods are inspected before taxes are levied prior to their progress north.

CUTURAN: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the north east of THE SURRACH, guarding the trade-route north east into CYHLAGHARR.

CUXALL: Rel. Set. Shrine-city in the south west of IMEAL, known for its oracles who receive intermittent visions from the FIRST IMPERATOR. The shrine itself is more of a gigantic TECHNARCANE engine than a building, though is regarded by the people of the city as a religious structure, and the oracles – fourteen SHAPERS who are bound together through archaic orthoses within the engine – are revered as divine prophets. This worship of the oracles is largely contained within Cuxall, and they are not as well-regarded elsewhere, though they are understood to play an important, if somewhat controversial, role in the politics of Imeal.

For many years, the IMPERATORS have been forced through popular opinion to pay their respects to the visions of Cuxall, though it is thought that they would rather the tradition were ended, which would give them more powers. The present Imperator, IVEGGETH HO SIN, understands the value of the oracles – many people across Imeal hold them in very high regard – and it would be counterproductive for her to remove them from the picture.

The city itself is a slum that appeared naturally, in response to the popularity of the oracles, which were established in c. 3400 RM, and has received little in the way of funding or support from the capital (Pop. c. 28,000).

CY BUTAU: (B. 2235 D. 2288 RM) His. Prominent historical figure born in ESHIR^(2.), who travelled extensively along the southern coast of the SEA OF ORRIDA, becoming embroiled in political events in various areas. Born the son of a merchant, he began his apprenticeship at the age of 13 and was given control of his own small caravan at 17. In 2254 RM he travelled west with his father into UGHTEN (now the c north east of the VESPERTINE LEAGUE^(2.)), where he became a political figure, acting as a neutral ambassador between it and VESPER^(2.), in the west. The two regions were in the midst of an ecological, cultural and economic calamity, with the BAY OF BATHIN, which for centuries had been a hub of their fishing industries having recently become separated from the coast due to lowering sea levels, devastating their climates and economies. In 2256 RM he moved north west into KHULL, where he spent two decades, settling down as a merchant-lord. He grew restless with age and in 2279 RM moved west into the Citizenry of Thali, where he lived until his death.

CYAADA: Set. Small coastal city on the north east of the island of CAMARA in the north east of the CORAL BARONIES, off the south western coast of SAMMAEA (Pop. c. 17,200).

CYAE: also 'the Epistemic Commonwealth' Ntn. Nation in the south east of EASTERN MENISCEA. Their ancestors were immigrants from PARTHIS, who settled the area in c. 3140 RM and dislodged natives, who moved to the west and north, eventually settling as various culturally-linked states.

Since then, the myriad states have coalesced into the so-called Epistemic Commonwealth in 3337 RM – an enlightened land with links to GNOTH, whose many city-states are ruled by philosophers and FIRMAMENTISTS in what many other nations consider to be a utopia, causing many to question how Cyae can maintain such an existence. It is an ally of many powerful nations (through the sharing of resources and gnostic knowledge, as well las marriage to powerful PATRICIAN HOUSES and royal families across ELYDEN), which has ensured its political safety, despite its relatively small size. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

CYALET: Set. Coastal settlement in the south of KEPHUAAN, overlooking the BAY OF LEPHAINA. Its main industry is fishing (Pop. c. 5,000).

CYALINE: Set. Small city in the north of THE VORANDINE. Its people are expert trackers and hunters of the corrupted creatures that dwell in the LUGENT forest (Pop. c. 5,000).

CYAMIS: Flo. Succulent tree endemic to the north of THETIS, particularly the south western face of the HETHA GHUR highlands. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

CYANA KELL: His. Rel. Str. Ancient monolithic temple overlooking the western-most reaches of THE INNER SEA, south of the GATE OF EREBETH in the north of ALTEA.

CYANEA: also 'the Frozen City'. Set. Small fortified coastal city in the north east of VALBAR⁽²⁾, overlooking the SEA OF AMASIS. It is the main port responsible for exporting silver to the east across the SEA OF PROPONTIS (Pop. c. 16,000).

CYARNE: Mil. Str. Major line of bastions along the western bank of the river HAROTRARA in the far south of THE VORANDINE, guarding the nation from the south west of RAONGEN⁽²⁾.

CYCHAN: Rui. Ancient ruined hall frozen in glacier in the north of THE VORANDINE, in the south west of the SMYURMA Mountains, whose exact location is unknown. Ancient legends dating to the early FIFTH AGE speak of a horrific massacre in the area, where natives were slaughtered by a non-human mortal foe that is unknown to present-day scholars, though most Vorandi people are unaware of this.

The hall is famed for its ancient archives, which many have attempted to locate, but its location remains lost. Members from the UNITED VORANDI COUNCIL are hopeful to locate the archives, which may help it rewrite history in its favour.

CYCLING: Sup. Med. Practice common amongst SCAVEN as well as other communities around the INNER SEA. In its most basic form, any organic matter (including corpses, vegetable waste, excrement and any other materials conductive to a fertile substance) is mixed together in a large pit that, over time creates a fecund substance that is capable of bearing plants. It is mixed with dust and dirt to increase its volume.

CYCLOCEPHALY: Med. Birth defect common in some areas of ELYDEN (commonly the KORACHANI EMPIRE, PELASGOS, TRAKIA and CYHLAGHARR) where the face is devoid of full features. This usually takes the form of a single (at times double-pupiled) eye, malformed nose, proboscid nose, cleft palate or any combination of the above. Though congenitally crippling, in most cases such defects are caused by the effects of the Atramenta or Umbra upon pregnancies which, ironically, keeps these normally crippling deformities from claiming the sufferers' lives.

The most widespread and documented form of this defect is in Trakia, where a caste known as the AKHSI select their members from the cyclocephalic foundlings that are common in the region.

The few oghurs found in the region are also afflicted by the disorder; which indicates that some external influence (diet, Atramental influence etc) is responsible for the mutation in the area.

CYDARA: Sec. Coastal city in the south west of AMMESH, in the far eastern foothills of the BORRAGHI Mountains. Its main industry is the mining of quarry, and it controls vast tracts of land that have been dedicated to its extraction on an industrial scale. Its port is dedicated to the shipment of coal – whether to other cities in Ammesh or abroad (Pop. c. 44,600).

CYDARIA: Geo. Island off the western coast of TAAN AN, in the south west of SAMMAEA.

CYGAN: Set. City in the west of PORPHYR. It is known as an industrial centre, and as one of the few cities in the western-coast of Porphyr to construct ARKS OF PORPHYR (Pop. unknown).

CYHLAGHARR: 1. Geo. Peninsula in the north of SAMMAEA jutting north into the INNER SEA, forming the SEA OF DANAEL in the west and the CAMARINAL SEA in the east.

2. Dem. 'Cyhlagharri'. Ntn. Nation founded in 932 RM, following centuries of squabbling between successive warlords that inherited the Cyhlagharri peninsula from the failed FOURTH AGE state of FALLDRG, Cyhlagharr is a nation of OGHUR slavers and pirates. It is seen by most outsiders as a place of brutes, where barbarism and tyranny prevail and the height of culture is pit fighting and belching. The truth, though not far off, is far more nuanced.

The oghurs of Cyhlagharr create art (with military portraiture and battle-landscapes highly regarded). Their women are regarded with dignity and treated with more respect than many foreign so-called civilised nations. A common saying in Cyhlagharr is that only great women can give birth to great men, which sums up rather succinctly much of oghur culture in Cyhlagharr. The Cyhlagharri do enjoy brawling and watching others, including slaves and prisoners, fight to the death. This likely stems from their turbulent history, where life in their harsh homeland was difficult and required both physically and mentally powerful leaders to unite such strong-willed individuals together. They enjoy life, taking pleasure in drinking, eating, loving, and fighting, and work very hard to manage their harsh homeland, which is well-known for its Atramental Wastelands, and vast regions of dry plains and badlands in the rain shadow of the great NGHALLEAL Mountains to its south.

It has been ruled by KING ACAMAS II since 3968 RM, following the assassination of his father by PARTHISAN spies. Their attempts to destabilise the region were ultimately unsuccessful, in no small part due to the political acumen of Acamas II who rose in his place. He reformed trade and taxation laws, and as a result, Cyhlagharri slaves have found their way across the Inner Sea and beyond in great numbers. He has relaxed military forces across the Cyhlagharri borders, particularly in the south west, near EREBETH, though close to 300-miles of border with the nation remain contested. Trade with foreign nations has increased, though it remains insular and many of its interior cities are still a mystery to outsiders.

Under his rule, Cyhlagharr is seen to be prospering by political analysts – something that has the rulers of many surrounding nations worried.

One major stereotype amongst outsiders concerning the Cyhlagharri is their superstition and distrust of the ATRAMENTA and many other mystical beliefs. Though a generalisation, this is true if viewed from a cultural standpoint. To understand this, one must understand the roots of orders in ELYDEN.

Oghurs are brutish individuals, standing just shy of 8-ft. tall and commonly weighing 800-lbs. of fat and muscle. But that was not always the case, and it is thought that all oghurs are descended from GIGANRI – taller, more slender beings of a brooding nature and a propensity for introspection – created through one of two different, if similar, sources: either through physical manipulation of their giganri ancestors by ancient SHAPERS, or through natural mutations resulting from the growing Atramental corruption of their ancient homelands.

Those who were artificially-created were mutated and inbred to enhance certain traits, changing their temperament for the worse, as side-effects of the tampering. They were created to be slaves and warriors, and were abused by their creators and their descendants. They became heavy-Set. brutes, lacking the nuances and self-doubt that characterise their giganri ancestors. To this day many individual oghurs suffer from infertility, birth defects and a distrust of the Atramenta and those who recklessly manipulate it.

Slavery has always been a large part of the Inner Sea, and Cyhlagharri culture is no different. Its harbours are home to large slaver fleets that ply the waters of the Inner Sea, looking for small coastal settlements to raid and merchant vessels to loot. Captured slaves are sold in large markets that are the focal point of many Cyhlagharri cities. Foreign slave merchants are a common sight in these markets and pay handsomely for prime specimens. Though slavery is a social norm in Cyhlagharr, oghurs themselves are never seen as slaves there, with the exception of cyclocephalic individuals, which are regarded as little more than beasts of burden and are a relatively common sight there, working fields and hauling carts and litters. The nation of <a href="Inner Inner Inner

The people of Cyhlagharr, like most oghurs, revere an ancient deity known as ISHATA. She is a guardian-figure representing fertility and warfare, both of which are traits that oghurs consider important. The Cyhlagharri are aware that their race was artificially-created and have a great respect for the gift of fertility, knowing that so many individuals are born without the ability to reproduce. Oghurs, particularly those in Cyhlagharr, are known for the many genetic defects, including CYCLOCEPHALY and hydrocephaly, amongst others, leaving them sterile and weak. Such individuals are often killed when the traits of their illnesses become apparent, but a few can thrive – hydrocephaly in oghurs brings with it an increased potential for Atramental mastery. Those whose symptoms are not too debilitating can rise to positions of power, becoming known as Disciples – amongst the few who are freely allowed to practice shaping, in the name of the King. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

CYDONIA: Set. Fortified coastal city in the far south of HALEDONIA. It is known for its impressive coastal bastions and navy wharfs, which house most of its fleet, which protects its southern waters and the entrance into the UDANILLA (Pop. c. 56,300).

CYHLAGHARRI GYRE: Sea. Gyre in the CAMARINAL SEA, off the eastern coast of CYHLAGHARR. The gyre is where currents flowing south from the c INNER SEA meet with currents flowing north from the south of the Camarinal itself, creating a region that is known for unstable waters.

CYHULIR: Pol. Set. Fortified capital city of CYHLAGHARR, located 100-miles upstream of the river PHYGRA'S mouth at the coast of the CAMARINAL SEA. It is ruled by KING ACAMAS II, who rules from the PALACE OF TYRAGHON (Pop. c. 410,000).

CYIDA: Lak. Lake in the c of AHRISHEN, linked to the larger lake ACTAEA by the river SAKHIR.

CYIPHYR, THE TREE OF SKULLS: Flo. A specific gigantic twisted tree in the east of CYHLAGHARR. Skulls were once used as offerings in an ancient religion of the region, affixed to the tree, which then grew around them, its bark encompassing the skulls until they were consumed by it. Over time the religion was forgotten, yet the tree remains now, almost dead, abandoned, the souls of thousands tied to its form.

CYKRANALEN: Cal. In the KORACHANI CALENDAR, the third month of twelve, comprising 30-days. It is named after the PLANET CYKRANOSH, and is the third and last month of winter. See Vol II: Months and Lunar Cycle in Elyden.

CYKRANOSH: 1. Ast. The sixth of seven known PLANETS orbiting the star SOR. Its mean orbital distance from Sor is 880,000,000-miles and has an estimated diameter of 95,000 miles. It is the second of the OUTER PLANETS and is a believed to be composed largely of gases, possibly with a metal core. It is the largest planet in the SORCHARI SYSTEM and much like its smaller sibling GNIHLAS, is famed for its vibrant colours, which range from brilliant red, to yellows, browns and silvers, which are arranged in bands which are arranged laterally. It has at least three moons, KALULITTA, BERASEM and the largest, FALASHA, though it likely has dozens more.

It is believed to have been the work of the DEMIURGES ALLAISHADA and SYNCHTHONITH. See Vol II: Planets and Satellites.

- 2. Sea. Strait between the north east of $\underline{JURRAS}^{(2)}$ and the west of \underline{VAALK} , leading into the \underline{SEA} OF \underline{FOR} beyond which is the larger \underline{SEA} OF \underline{AZAM} . The strait is controlled by the eponymous city⁽³⁾.
- 3. Set. Large conurbation in the north east of JURRAS⁽²⁾; known for its many small settlements arranged around a central tiered city that controls the Strait of Cykranosh⁽²⁾ (Pop. c. 1,150,000).
- CYLPHAAD: Set. Small coastal city on the south of the island of CAMARA in the south of the CORAL BARONIES, off the south western coast of SAMMAEA. Its people's main diet consists of soft-shelled shrimp that lives in the waters around the SHIBBOTHA and SHIELD ISLES. These are boiled and eaten whole, usually in stews or with legumes, and as a result locals are known for the slight orange-pink tint to their skin (Pop. c. 16,200).
- CYLRESH: Set. Fortified coastal settlement in the west of TAAN AN (Pop. c. 4,300).
- CYME: Set. Fortified city in the north east of LYRIDIA. Contact and trade with Ahrishen has led to the city outgrowing its TROGLODYTE heritage, and is amongst the most metropolitan city in the north of Lyridia, forming part of the GREAT ROAD trade-route (Pop. c. 25,500).
- CYMMARA: Set. Industrial city in the east of TAAN AN, in the ATRAMENTALLY-TAINTED region of ZENEGE RES. It is a major manufacturer of UMBRA, pumping raw umbra west, where it is processed. The city is largely made up of roughnecks involved in the umbra industry, and it is protected from the ATRAMENTAL forces of the region by a series of rudimentary SIPHON ENGINES (Pop. c. 31,000).
- CYMMAT: 1. Set. City in the c south west of HABOT, along the course of the river MEDDERANDI. It is a major industrial centre and is known for its many manufactories that straddle the great river's banks (Pop. c. 48,000).
 - 2. Set. Settlement in the c south west of $\underline{\text{METHUMN}}$, in the south of the $\underline{\text{ELIKAMMAN}}$ ridge. It is a major source of anglesite and lead (Pop. c. 6,000).
- CYMMER: Mil. Str. Fortress in the c north of ALMAGEST, overlooking the SEA OF SAECULA. The fortress guards the entrance into the sea from the larger SEA OF APHOTIS.
- CYNA KELL: Mil. Str. An ancient redoubt and crumbled colossus that has been appropriated and turned into a modern fort, situated in the far north of ALTHA^(2.).
- CYNAKRIA: Geo. Island off the south eastern coast of AMMESH. It is over 280-miles long and is largely uninhabited, with a handful of coastal cities of note, the largest of which is SATALMA. The island acts as a breakwater, protecting the south eastern coast of Ammesh from harsh winter swells and storms.
- - 2. Pol. Set. Capital city of the CORAL BARONIES on the eponymous island. It is a hub of court intrigue and is known for its many barony offices and hostels where representative from the 83 baronies stay while on diplomatic stays in the city (Pop. c. 280,000).
- CYNCERIAN: Geo. Reef in the CORAL BARONIES, off the south western coast of SAMMAEA, east of the island of CYCNER^(1.), in the north of the BATHASHAL OCEAN.
- CYNDARA: Com. Set. Major coastal city in the south west of HABOT, overlooking the south west of the BAY OF ESSIA. Until c. 3960 RM it was a thriving port serving the south west of Habot, with a population of just under 100,000 people, mostly Haboti.
 - The NACRE WAR that engulfed the nation of MAENMIST following the closing of its borders to trade along the NACRE ROAD necessitated a quick alternative, and the Nacre League shifted land trade in the area to the SEA OF AMMASH⁽¹⁾, bypassing Maenmist and Phyrr, using the cities of Cyndara and BAVVERA (in NORTHERN SIMBARA) as ports to move land trade to the sea and back to the land, respectively. This caused an explosion of economy and culture in Cyndara and in 40-short years its population has greatly increased, and is showing no signs of slowing down.

It has since become a major stronghold to the Nacre League and House GALADRAT, and has also served as a base to the League's navy since the declaration of war by the League and its allies against Maenmist, with ships escorting merchant vessels to deter Maenmisti privateers from attacking them (Pop. c. 580,000).

- CYNFAEL: Set. City in the c of LOEGRESS^(1,). It forms a part of the nation's main trade route and it a hub of trade and commerce, and serves as a melting pot of culture (Pop. c. 37,000).
- CYNIA: Set. Small city in the c of THE VORANDINE, to the far south of the plains of BOTH RATHO. Its main industry is agriculture (Pop. c. 11,400).
- CODEX CYNNAVAR: 1. Geo. strait in the north of GREST^(1.), dividing the inland SEA OF RATASHAH in two. The city located around the strait is named after this feature.
- 2. Set. Major inland coastal metropolis in the north of GREST^(1.), in the west of the island-continent of BROR^(1.). It straddles the eponymous strait^(1.) that divides the inland SEA OF RATASHAH in two, and controls all trade leading crossing the strait, making it wealthy and influential (Pop. c. 1,122,400).
- CYNOPOLIS: Rel. Str. Ancient necropolis in the far west of the ANUBIAN desert, where a now-extinct ancient race of mortal humans, thought to be the LOST ONES by Anubians, buried its dead. The necropolis is riddled with large dog-headed statues that lie half buried beneath the dunes of the DOG SEA (after which it is named). A caste of Anubians known as CYNOTHROPI guard the area from trespassers.
- CYNOSIATES: Rel. Those who adhere to the religion of CYNOSIATY, in the east of THE SURRACH.
- CYNOSIATY: Rel. Religion of idol-worshippers common in the north west of SAMMAEA, particularly in the east of THE SURRACH. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.
- CYNOTHROPI: also 'the Jackals'. Soc. Rnk. Caste of ANUBIAN ascetics, who guard the necropolis of CYNOPOLIS in the DOG SEA. Their chant: 'We are the priests of Talantehut, the guardians of her glorious tombs, her humble graves. We are the keepers of the dead. We are the servants of Talantehut', is renowned in Anubia, though it is unknown if they have any further links with the DEMIURGE TALANTEHUT.

They have little ties to the nomads of the region and are fiercely protective of Anubia, particularly their ancestral home, the ruin of Cynopolis.

- CYNURIA: Geo. Wasted land in the north west of PELASGOS. It was one of the first areas colonised and exploited by the KORACHANIEMPIRE after its subjugation of the region in 73 RM. Its trees were felled centuries ago, and all its resources have also been spent, leaving it a barren land where soil has been washed into the SEA OF CYPRIA^(1,), leaving it a dusty wasteland. It is peppered with ruins and abandoned industrial centres, though is flanked by the still-prosperous cities of ADAMM in the west and CYPRIA^(3,) in the east.
- CYPAC: Sct. A small city in the south of the TARAHID ANNEXES. The settlement was, at the height of its power in c. 500 RM, a thriving metropolis-port, situated at the shores of the SEA OF BYSSOS. The slow dwindling of THE INNER SEA and the resultant retreat of the Byssos left the city to slowly die, its main sources of industry and revenue lost to the retreating coastline. The rusting hulks of ships and other vessels litter the shallow fields between the town and the coastline, their decrepit shapes forming eerie metallic skeletons on the horizon (Pop. c. 14,500).
- CYPHIRIA: Set. Major city in the far south west of the HENDECARCHY of ATALLUA, in the south east of MALAN. It is the largest city in Atallua and is the centre of its most densely-populated region. It straddles the banks of the river USHURMÁ and controls hundreds of satellites that serve as the main source of food in the Hendecarchy (Pop. c. 700,000).
- CYPRIA: 1. Sea. The north eastern part of the SEA OF LISASSA, forming a bay in the north west of PELASGOS. It is named after the city of Cypria, which, alongside the capital OCTIRA, allowed overfishing and industrial pollution to mar its waters.

- 2. (B. unknown) One of six founding members of the SISTERHOOD OF CYPRIA. A HALFBLOOD, believed by many to be a NYM. Her doctrine became the modus operandi of the sisterhood, which is based in $\underline{\text{SYBARIS}}^{(2)}$.
- 3. Set. Major city in the north west of PELASGOS, once known for its harbour and shipyards, though these became redundant in c 3600 RM after the city became landlocked following centuries of to maintain its coastal position were abandoned due to the sheer cost and effort.

It now lies along the path of both the SHADOW MARCH and the Red Route, and it serves as a hospice to the many travellers that cross its walls, with most of its economy and industries revolving around the year-long march of pilgrims and merchants passing through it (Pop. c. 1,315,000).

CYPRIAN SISTERHOOD, the: Soc. Org. A semi-secretive order of courtesan-spies based in the city of SYBARIS⁽⁴⁾, in SKAROS. They have no permanent allegiances and sell their services (of many varieties) to the highest bidder. They are named after a prominent founding member, CYPRIA⁽²⁾, who was a HALFBLOOD and follow her doctrine.

They operate across the INNER SEA REGION and beyond, and serve as spies, courtesans and assassins, and have no prejudices in who they work for. Its members can come from any walk of life – indeed, recruiters encourage a diverse background amongst candidates, to keep the skills of the sisterhood distinct.

The sisterhood itself is very secretive, and the exact location of their headquarters is unknown, and most common folk who hear the name believe it to be a religious order of some sort. Given the secrecy with which the sisterhood operates, it is unknown how potential employers seek them out, though it's likely that they operate through word of mouth, with previous employers recommending their services to others.

CYRECE: Set. Settlement in the north east of KASPIA in the northern foothills of the KEPHATHAO Mountains. It is known for its hunting and trapping, and sells pelts up the TARAGEA river for trade with the south (Pop. c. 3,400).

CYRENA: Rui. Ruined city in LIDEA. It was destroyed by DIABALL, THE SCION OF DEITIES, a powerful HALFBLOOD in 1672 RM. An ATRAMENTAL college was funded there in 663 RM, though it remains ruined to this day.

CYRENIA: Pol. Seventh of the HENDECARCHIES of the FOREST KINGDOMS, located in the north west of MALAN. Its capital is the city of ENIGOST (2.), and it is ruled by the tyrannical OTHERWORLDER HENDECARCH MANESKARKON ZARRÉ, who has ruled for over 700 years.

Cyrenia alienated itself under Zarré's rule, and by 3682 RM it was being besieged the combined armies of AONIA, HATON and NHORA, which had allied in a bid to put Zarré in their place. For whatever reason, the LADY AEGIS intervened and forced the besieging armies to retreat, leaving the AEGIS intervened and forced the besieging armies to retreat, leaving the Hendecarch untouched – a status quo that remains to this day. In the years following this the southern territories of the Hendecarchy were fortified and these forts remain in use today.

It is amongst the least mountainous of the Malani Hendecarchies, and is characterised by old growth forests and its ancient SHAMANISTIC FIRMAMENTAL traditions which are based around well-catalogued LEY markers.

CYRGYLA: Set. Fortified coastal settlement in the east of CYHLAGHARR, in the far west of the GULF OF OPHAR^(1.). It is known for its tanning of ANKYLOURA hides (Pop. c. 2,500).

CYRION OF NEKOR: (B. 3647 – D. 3703 RM) Astronomer, mathematician, naturalist, explorer and artist. Born in NEKOR, NÁRTHEL, he travelled extensively across the INNER SEA, SEA OF ORRIDA and DARK SEA REGIONS, eventually spending the last decades of his life searching for and researching the elusive SUPRANATURAL being that came to be known as CYRION'S GEOMORPH, in honour of his work.

CYRION'S GEOMORPH: Int. Sup. Fau. Fantastical supranatural 'creature' described by the polymath CYRION OF NEKOR in 3672 RM following decades of research and following-up on second hand eyewitness accounts of the creature around the SEA OF ORRIDA.

Accounts of the 'creature' date back to the early FIFTH AGE and likely go back further, though most accounts are from the last two millennia.

Typically described as a floating shape of ever-moving seemingly numberless geometric sides, the geomorph would commonly be seen floating just beyond in the coastal fogs and sea hazes common to the Sea of Orrida, making a true description or HELIOGRAPH difficult to acquire. With accounts of sizes varying from a few feet to dozens of feet across, their amorphous polygonal bodies are often described as brownish, with areas of contradictorily dark yet bright colours and no appendages or features to speak of.

After decades of accounts from nervous fishermen and farmers Cyrion first sighted the creature in 3672 RM, with several more sightings over the years leading to his death. He coined the term 'geomorph' for it, and with each sighting it would appear closer and clearer, affording him the chance to make several drawings, and take a handful of (blurry) heliographs, allowing him to describe it in detail.

He postulated that it was a being of the MATERIA OMNA, with various sightings of it in the seas of ORRIDA, MERCUVIA, SAMMAIDU, MIROVEA, and POLARIS causing him to believe that it was linked to the NULLAMBIT, which crosses each of those bodies of water. He noted that with each appearance the 'creature' seemed to be more comfortable around him, leading him to believe that each sighting was of the same entity, though how that was possible he was unsure. His disappearance in 3703 RM left his work unfinished and the entity was named after him in honour of his research into the matter.

Taxonomical categorisation of the geomorph has thus far proven impossible, and many scholars believe that the geomorph is no more a living creature than a cloud or ATRAMENTAL effect, and that their appearance are merely a by-product of as-yet unknown supranatural phenomena. See Vol IV: the Materia Omna.

CYSTAAN: Set. City on the north west of the island of CAMARA in the south of the CORAL BARONIES, off the south western coast of SAMMAEA(Pop. c. 15,000).

CYTIS: 1. Geo. Rocky highland region in the HENDECARCHY of ATALLUA, in the south east of MALAN. It is known as the main source of the river MEKHOZIS, which traverses over 70-miles of canyons before emerging from the mountains in its journey east across the TURCAR Desert. Many of its deep clefts and canyons see little direct sun and are known for their moss and vine-covered surfaces.

2. Set. City in the above region, in the HENDECARCHY of ATALLUA in the south east of MALAN. It is the largest city in this region and is relatively isolated, with travel across the ARGENT Mountains into the rest of the HENDECARCHY is limited to a few months of the year. It serves as a link with TETHYSIA via the caravanserai of ADI (Pop. c. 60,000).

CYUSA: Rel. Str. Fortified chapel in the c of KARAKHAS, built around the petrified remains of the OTHERWORLDER Lithenannea, half-embedded in the flat earthy plains some miles outside SARGOTH. The glass-like body of the otherworlder is said to bear healing properties and those few bodies undertaking the pilgrimage of THE SHADOW MARCH with wealth-enough to purchase access are allowed to touch her body.

The body was unearthed by imperial explorers camping above it in 42 RM, where it was buried beneath compact soil. Over the millennia, the once-perfect features of the statue-like corpse have been worn down by eager pilgrims, the wrath of the elements before the fortress was constructed and the weight of time that bears down upon the statue, whose crystalline-eyes look upon the world with a keen emotion that betrays her state of petrification.

CZEJISKEZZIK: also 'skitterlimb'. Fau. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED abominations that breed true, endemic to the inner wastes of SAMMAEA, in the south west of KHARKHARADONTIS and central HOGGOTHA ISZ. They are a cross between a stick insect, centipede and lamprey, and grow to up to 20-ft. In length. They are solitary creatures and belligerent, shunning all outside contact. Kharkhardontid rumours claim that some plagi nomads have mastered the art of riding the beasts without domesticating or taming them. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

CZHBAEZAE: Mil. Str. Fortress in the far north of OKKHAM, guarding the trade-route north into the west of CHEIRA.

D

D'ANU: Pol. Rnk. Ruling title in the nation of N'RAKH, the hereditary seat of which is in EKALLU.

D'HAID ARIMASPI: see ARIMASPI'S FOOTPRINT.

D'HAID MARAKA: see GUARDIANS OF THE FOOTPRINT.

D'RANA: Set. Major city in the north east of J'THANA. It is a major traderoute north into ARKOS^(1.) and forms a major part of the SALT ROAD, where it branches west into BARATHEA^(1.) and N'RAKH, and north into ARKOS (Pop. c. 55,000).

DA ARAE: Set. Fortified city in the c north of OKKHAM. It is noted as one of two cities (the other being OROAEGH, in PNESSA) that are linked by the subterranean CISTERN OF MÉAT PUDON that traverses the Okkhami Mountains^(1.) (Pop. c. 40,000).

DAADAN: Set. Settlement in the south east of BAATAN. Its main industry is goat herding (Pop. c. 10,000).

DAAEBET: Set. Fortified coastal city in the north of MECHABET. The city is noted for its large lighthouse which doubles as a CLOCK tower. Indeed, its clock is famed for its engineering and accuracy (Pop. c. 15,000).

DAALKATH: Set. Major city in the north west of DURCHAA in the north of LLACHATUL, along the course of the river VARAGOD. It is a major industrial centre, and its manufactories are geothermally and hydroelectrically powered. Its roots lie in a small fishing village, whose people would fish for SALMON and roe on their way to spawning farther upstream. It is known for its large HALF-OGHUR population and their descendants (Pop. c. 190,000).

DAAPURA: Set. City in the west of SUOR, along the course of the river ISH DARPA (Pop. c. 28,000).

DAAR: Geo. Peninsula along the northern coast of VENTHIR. It is characterised by dense, perfidious basalt rock formations, which stretch to the main NÁRTHELI mainland. The rocks are quarried and are used extensively in Venthiri architecture.

DAARAGU: See. Small fortified coastal city in the north west of KAZZAR overlooking the BAY OF KAIAKAN (Pop. c. 14,000).

DAARAN: (D. 3787 RM) Pol. Tyrant in the west of THE SURRACH, in the region known as the SIX CITIES. He gained the upper hand in 3752 RM, taking a 100-mile stretch of coast centred around the city of DAKHRA, stretching as far east as the city of EDENT.

In 3787 RM the tyrant Daaran sired twins, a boy, Soth; and a girl, Tehra. Upon Daaran's death they were entrusted to his lieutenant Arakh, who raises them as his own.

Between 3971 - 3976 RM, a coalition of other peoples (both within and without the Tyrant's lands) opposed him. Following a long period of strife lasting 5-years, Daaran was defeated and the surrounding lands were divided equally amongst the 6 winning generals, resulting in the birth of the Six Cities.

DAARKEN: Sca. Gulf between the nations of BA'AKH in the south west and IO in the north east. Most naming conventions are rooted in the fact that the gulf lies in the shadow of the EHBOT Mountains. The waters of the Gulf are very deep, and the dwindling of Elyden's coastline has had little impact on the region, though it is thought that Io and the lands east of it are pushing up against the SAMMAEAN mainland, reducing the sea in size

Its waters were once highly fecund though were slowly polluted from the over-industrialisation of $\underline{\text{KORACHANI}}$ $\underline{\text{BA'AKH}}$ between c. 1500 – 2700 RM and remain so to this day, its wildlife mishappen and largely infertile.

DAARKEN, SIEGE OF: Mil. His. Naval campaign that formed a part of the larger WAR OF SUNDERING fought between KORACHAN and its allies, and the dissident forces of SARASTRO and its allies.

Korachani ships entered the DAARKEN GULF and the Seas of SÛN, and TIAMA between the $10^{th} - 12^{th}$ of RACHALEN 3704 RM, beginning a blockade of Sarastroan, IONIC, and BA'AKHI cities. By the 13^{th} Sarastroan and LIDEAN ships were counterattacking imperial ships, bringing further conflict to the region.

Korachani forces renewed concerted attacks 3-months later, beginning on the 7th of ASHTALEN, including the Sarastroan stronghold of MORULAURGO. This is now considered as the true start of the Siege of Daarken. The attacks were successful in sowing disorder, forcing Sarastro to further spread its resources, taking its attention away from other campaigns, particularly around Argea (the NORTHERN SARASTROAN CAMPAIGN). By the 25th of NIHAVALEN, disease has begun to spread across Morulaurgo and other cities.

The siege ended with the BATTLE OF THE SHATTERED PENINSULA on the 30th of Nihavalen, with the imperial fleet defeated, cutting off its ground troops in the region, who lost their support and access to reinforcements. The Ba'akhi capitulation to Sarastro 2-weeks later on the 13th of SATAVALEN left Sarastro in control of the STRAIT OF GARAP, denying Imperial ships access to the Daarken for the remainder of the war, ending the siege.

DAATH: Pol. Western-most of the states of the SIX CITIES, in the far west of THE SURRACH, Daath is dominated by the ancient religion of IANHAN, revived in c. 3950 RM.

Daath was once the largest of the major settlements in the Six Cities, though it suffered after the newly-forged Bakhran kingdom ended trade with the Six Cities in c. 4002 RM and it has steadily dwindled in size since then, with some areas of the city empty and populated by WRITHENS and outlaws (Pop. c. 31,500).

DAAZ: also 'the City of Brass'. Set. Major free-city in THAMAAZ, in the c of THE SURRACH. At one point it held a powerful confederacy, of which PAAN was a major part, though it broke free and is now independent. Some groups want the two to remain divorced, whereas others want them united, leading to tense relations between the two and a rise in gang-culture, which has escalated in gang warfare on more than one occasion.

HALFBLOODS, as well as those descended from AZER and ARABEALLI immigrants are common there. Daaz began trading with the KORACHANI

EMPIRE in c. 2500 RM, though its people contracted an isolated disease carried by foreigners in c. 2700 RM, closing its borders.

This isolated Daaz for a while, leading to its insular culture, though by c. 2850 RM it had begun trading east again, at which point it became a permanent fixture along the IVORY ROAD.

Its people are known for keeping PALE ONE slaves, a practice which is rare in other lands of the Surrach; and for their fervent worship the so-called BRONZE KING. (Pop. c. 270,000).

DABAHASH: Set. Small fortified city in the west of the JAHADAT STATES, under the control of the city of ALAHAIM. It is rapidly becoming a centre of TECHNARCANE research, particularly HEART ENGINES and rudimentary ANALYTICAL ENGINES (Pop. c. 8,500).

DABBARA: Rvr. River in the north of PNESSA flowing east for 700-miles from sources in the TATRASAN, LIRAQAM, and LEKKUK Mountains before meeting its parent, the river YAGNOTH PHTHAN.

DABOT THAITH: Geo. Expansive highland region forming the westernmost reaches of NOAVATUR, where it acts as a border with the wastes of KHARKHARADONTIS.

DABRA: Rvr. River in the c of GNOTH flowing north for 360-miles from sources the HAKKA Mountains before meeting its source, the river NEPHOT at lake IAMTI.

DACATECH: Plr. 'Dacatechs': Mil. Engineers and troops of the SARAGOSI army, descended from the collegiate-TECHNOLOGISTS that were exiled from VENTHIR in 1921 RM and who later settled the city of SARAGOS.

Founded in the city of IPHEIUS, the Dacatechs are a highly-disciplined force. Though relatively few in number they are an elite army, specially-trained and well-equipped with the best Saragosi technarcana can offer. Though supported by various auxiliaries (including a disciplined citizen levy), they remain the mainstay of the Saragosi armies.

Notable battles in which the Dacatechs include their defence of the siege of Saragos between 3405 and 3409 RM.

DACHARA: Rui. Mil. Str. Ruined KORACHANI fort in the far south east of SUOR, on the peninsula of SATRUR. It dates back to early colonisation attempts of Suor by the Korachani empire in c. 3350 RM, though was abandoned within 30-years.

DACHRATU: Geo. Badlands region in the north east of THE SURRACH and south of CYHLAGHARR that's largely abandoned, save for the city-state of TARACEH. The region was, between c 1150 – 1180 RM site of a major conflict between CHEGRINT and Cyhlagharr. The area is covered with the ancient and derelict detritus of war, and many mines, technarcane weapons and bombs remain in the region, a potential danger to anyone trespassing.

DACIA: Dem. 'Dacian'. 1. Ntn. Small nation in the north of Sammaea, just south of the STRAIT OF NÁRTHEL, controlling two of the land passages across the strait, into LYRIDIA.

The nation emerged in c. 3785 RM, after spending close to 8-decades under the control of Lyridia, since 3712 RM, which had expanded south following the SUNDERING OF THE KORACHANI EMPIRE in 3705 RM, during which Lyridia was able to take much of the north of Nárthel, including the then-capital – Dacia. The city and surrounding areas managed to break away in c. 3785 RM, following years of unrest and city-fighting, becoming the capital of a newly-independent nation divorced from Nárthel.

The north west of Dacia is rich in gold reserves and is contested with Lyridia, with skirmishes between opposing forces common. Daring prospectors and mining companies brave the military patrols to search for gold, though the region is dangerous.

Dacia also maintains control of the CHASMA DRACONA crossing, which remains the easiest crossing across the strait, despite its silting and drying to the east. Old fortresses have been converted into tolling booths were soldiers tax traffic crossing it. The nation is expending most of its efforts in expanding east so that is can control both sides of the strait, allowing it to create a monopoly of moving trade overland from KOMARET to ALYCTA, mimicking what Nárthel is already doing with the cities of KAELRATH and PHENESH (2.), though it has had little success so far. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

2. His. Set. Once a major city in the north of NÁRTHEL founded in 1193 RM, controlling land trade from SAMMAEA north into LLACHATUL via the bridge known as the Chasma Dracona, which it controlled. It eventually also became a stop along The Shadow March, where the yearly Catechism of Shadows takes place in the massive plaza outside the city walls. In 3103 RM the city became the capital of Nárthel following the Archpotentate Malichar's handing over of the eastern Nárthel to Queen Hetepheres of Venthir as a gift.

The city remained capital of Nárthel until after the SUNDERING OF THE KORACHANI EMPIRE in 3705 RM and the closing of the STRAIT OF NÁRTHEL, following which LYRIDIA became aggressive and expanded south, taking much of NÁRTHEL'S northern territories, including Dacia. This did not last, however and Dacia broke free from LYRIDIA, becoming the capital of a newly-independent nation divorced from Nárthel (Pop. c. 390.000).

DACIAN MANUSCRIPT, the: Vol. Myr. His. Apocryphal copy of the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN that was discovered in a church library in DACIA^(2,) in 996 RM. Its discoverers claimed it to be a complete transcription of the Nártheli Codex, though this claim has been debunked in various independent studies over the years, and as a result, many of its passages are considered apocryphal to this day.

DACNO: Set. Settlement in the west of the PARTHISAN colony of ABDAKROS^(1.) on the island of IRUGNA^(1.). Its main industry is copper mining (Pop. c. 15,400).

DACTYLID: Soc. Rnk. In the KORACHANI EMPIRE, specialised scribes whose digits and head are enhanced with intricate ORTHOSES and/or biomechanical grafts to aid in the rapid transcription of treatises and edicts. They work very rapidly, often producing five times the amount unaltered scribes can produce, in the same time. Like the POLYDACTYLID scribe-families, dactylids are regarded in high esteem and can wield a considerable amount of power in their circles, though this is rarely as much as that garnered by the polydactylid HOUSES, who look down on those who receive such orthoses.

DACTYLOGRAPHY: the study of fingerprints for the purposes of identification. The science first came into prominent use in c. 3880 RM in PARTHIS and slowly spread across the INNER SEA from there over the next decades, where it is now a common tool of various law enforcement agencies – anyone questioned or arrested by law enforcement has their prints taken by pressing the fingertip onto ink and then pressed down onto paper, leaving the impression of the print behind). This is used as a database that can then be consulted in the future if need be. This goes hand in hand with various magickal means of identification and is fairly conclusive in identifying individuals whose details are already stored.0

This system is largely used in urban areas, with more rural regions lacking the resources to maintain an effective database.

DACTYLOPLASTY: Soc. Med. Form of body modification undertaken by the most affluent patricians. In its simplest form, dactyloplasty involves the removal of both thumbs and any other opposable digits an individual may have. The removal of these digits is symbolic of the affluence of the patrician, whose wealth and servants mean that the patrician can survive even without the use of his hands. Patricians who have had a dactyloplasty flaunt the evidence of the procedure, enjoying forays into the cities where they can expose their hands to the lower classes.

DACYCUS: Set. Settlement in the far south of IO, 15-miles north of the border with SARASTRO (Pop. c. 9,000).

DADADRA: Set. Small city in the c of PARTHIS, 105-miles north east of the capital in TETHRA. It is a major producer of food in the region and forms a part of the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 14,000).

DADHAO: Set. Small fortified city in the south west of OTINTH. Like most Otinthian settlements, little is known about it due to the nations' insular nature, though it is thought to be a centre of military activities (Pop. c. 20,000).

DADITA: Soc. Obj. Common child's toy in the KORACHANI EMPIRE that takes the form of a foetus. It is carried by young children who come from a background with the means to possess toys, and is said to bring good luck. Some people maintain a fascination with them into adulthood and collect them. They can be knitted, made of leather, or wood or any other material, and are only unified by the generic foetal shape they take.

DAEBROX: Mil. Rnk. Moniker and rank in the royal military of SURUTUR given to the personal bodyguard and assassin of the current ruler of the YALOLIAC REGIME. The Daebrox is commonly a SHAPER, and is equipped with the height of TECHNARCANE equipment, including IRON MANTLES⁽²⁾ and other personal apparatus designed to enhance their natural abilities, as well all manner of exotic weapons and orthoses that the regime can purchase.

The position dates back to 2973 RM, when the bodyguard of the then ruler was sent to train with the ASHASHINS of VENTHIR.

DAEDALON: (B? – 231 RM) pioneer of ATRAMENTAL SHAPING in the early years of the KORACHANI EMPIRE. He was born before the unification of the SEVEN CITY-STATES at the hands of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR, who would eventually study under Daedalon's tutelage before his ITINERARY. He was a polymath with regards to the Atramenta, and though not an expert in all MINASTERIAL (2) orders of SHAPING, he was a competent SHAPER in many different facets of the shaping.

DAEKAS: also 'the Pit'. Ast. Con. Constellation along the equator. It is named after the PIT OF DAEKYN in KHARKHARADONTIS. See Vol II: Constellations.
