DAEMON-IDOL: Rel. Arc. Soc. The states of the VESPERTINE LEAGUE are famed for their Daemon-idols – regional gods that are embodied in large idols, where to all intents and purposes the idol is the deity. In a time before the alliance of the states, a conquered city would have its daemondol toppled and shattered, signifying the death of the daemon and the downfall of its people.

As a result, the people of the Vespertine League found ingenious ways of securing the 'health' of their Daemon-idols – secreting them within greet fortifications, or constructing them from harder materials such as granite or even metal. In some cases, city-states reduced to ruin retained a standing daemon-idol in their centre, signifying that the city might one day be reborn and that the deity still guards the area and its people.

These idols are similar to those worshipped in KARGAMA, and scholars believe that they share a common heritage, having been crafted in the THIRD AGE, though little else is known of their history. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

DAIMAL: Dem. 'Daimalan'. Eth. Ethnic group that originated in the early FIFTH AGE in the south of WESTERN LLACHATUL in what are today the south east of AQUARIIA, most of HOLOLACH^(1.), and THUMAL. The Daimalan people are thought to be descendants of an earlier nation that occupied the area prior to the FADING of the FOURTH AGE.

DAIMALAN: Lan. Language of the ancient FIFTH AGE DAIMAL people. See Vol II: Languages.

DAKISUH: also 'the Great Sulphur Desert'. Geo. Large, extremely inimical region in the c of ABACARDAT, in the east of SAMMAEA, south of the SEA OF LETHEA, covering a 100-mile-long strip of volcanically-active land, just east of the UHBATAQI basin. The region is named after its thousands of conical sulphurous formations and acidic lakes. The region looks extremely otherworldly and even the air there is dangerous to most forms of life.

Hearing tales of sulphur and other resources needed for its metallurgy, KORACHANI explorers went to the region and in c. 1210 RM Set. up a colony 50-miles from Dakisuh, where it processed raw materials, before sending them north via NOAVATUR, though its maintenance ultimately proved too costly and the colony was left to perish less than 40-years after its establishment.

Local nomads inherited the colonists' MMPERIAL FAITH and continue to worship a corrupted form of the UNDYING MACHINE to this day, despite Dakisuh no-longer being an imperial colony.

DAEDARN: Set. City in the north east of the PANTHEON ISLES, in the endorheic basin of EVVER, on the mainland, in the east of LLACHATUL. It is a major trade city, with a close trade relationship with Tethysia, particularly the city of EBRIKAS. The city was originally coastal but the retreat of the SEA OF MYMEREA saw it become landlocked in c. 3000 RM, though it found itself at the edge of an endorheic basin that was watered by many rivers flowing into it from surrounding highlands. In around 3450 RM a satellite city, KALAAKE, was founded to act as a harbour to the city so goods traded from the north east of Llachatul can be easily traded around the Pantheon Isles (Pop. c. 106,000).

DAEGAREN: see GREAT BEAR.

DAEKYN: Also 'the Isolation of Daekyn'. Geo. Region in the c of SAMMAEA, in the c south west of the KHARKHARADONTID desert, around 300-miles north east of the SEPULCHRAL PALACE. The region is dominated by plains of arid dust and sparse rock pillars and characterised by its cold arid climate (possibly attributed to the closeness of the BLACK FOUNTAIN). The land is inimical to most life and even UMBRANS and GROTESQUES are uncommon there, with the only creatures that seem to survive there being PLAGI. The region is most commonly known in the KORACHANI EMPIRE as the place in which the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR found the imprisoned body of the UNDYING MACHINE. What few know is that the DEMIURGE RACHANAEL was imprisoned there by his sister ALLAISHADA at the end of the WAR OF SCOURGING towards the end of the FOURTH AGE, for his sadistic crimes and megalomaniacal aspirations. The pit in which he was imprisoned is known as the PIT OF DAEKYN.

DAEKYN, THE PIT OF: Sup. Geo. Rel. Large pit roughly in the centre of the ISOLATION OF DAEKYN in KHARKHARADONTIS, where the body of the DEMIURGE RACHANAEL was smote into the ground and imprisoned by his sister ALLAISHADA, marking the end of the FOURTH AGE. Rachanael later escaped in 212 RM of the FIFTH AGE, through the aid of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR, though the pit remains, bearing the scars of its ATRAMENTAL prisoner.

Little is known of the pit's origins, though it thought to have been created at the behest of Allaishada and TALANTEHUT by SYNCHTHONITH or VORROPOHAIAH.

Though many believe the SEPULCHRAL PALACE to be constructed above the Pit of Daekyn, this is not in fact true, with the Pit being around 300-miles to the north east.

DAEKYN'S BREATH: Geo. Rock formation in the west of DAEKYN, that is riddled with narrow caverns, said to lead to the darkest, oldest reaches of ELYDEN'S underworld, deeper even than the pits of the PRISON CARCERI. The area is dank with the foul air that emanates from the depths. The name is derived from the foul air that emanates from the DAELLA: Geo. Ancient glacial valley network in the north east of PELASGOS, its broad shoulders and rock-strewn floor characterised by thick moss-like growths and dark grey rocks.

DAEMONTYR: Tec. Fau. An advanced winged form of SICTHAINEN TECHNA once common in PELASGOS, particularly around city spires and mountain regions. Originally the products of a single advanced MANUFACTORY of RODIA, in the north of Pelasgos, the secrets to their construction were lost with the destruction of the manufactory. The remaining daemontyr scattered to the regions surrounding the manufactory and eventually bred, spreading from there. Though few in number, they were sighted for many centuries following their escape in 2371 RM, though sightings have lessened since then, with the last confirmed sighting being in the south of Pelasgos in 3863 RM, though many claim to have spotted them since then. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life: Asicthai.

DAEMUS: Lan. SAMMAEAN word for AEHARI.

DAENED SULRACH: lit. 'Western Wastes'. 1. Geo. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED desert in the c north of NORTHERN SAMMAEA, just north of the TROPIC OF RAH. It is of an arid continental climate and dominates large expanses of the territories of southern KHALHAT, northern ETUA, north western of KHARKHARADONTIS, and western of MOAH, effectively negating contact between the nations along their borders.

The corruption of this region appeared in c. 800 RM, expanding over the next millennia, 'stabilising' in c. 3200 into the rough borders that are known today, and the name is derived from a loose confederacy of people that once existed in the region^(2.). Land within the Daened Sulrach is brittle and dominated by DUSTSTONE formations, which, while beautiful to look at, are unstable and prone to collapse, with old features crumbling and now one appearing every season.

The region is categorised as DANGEROUS by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES. 2. Dem. 'Sulrachi'. His. Ntn. Prior to the appearance of the ATRAMENTAL CORRUPTION, a loose confederacy of cities in the c north of SAMMAEA, to the south of the LHAUS territories of KHALHAT. It was populated by a mix of HUMANS, KERATIN, and ETHERI.

The was a relic of ancient times, and many of its customs and culture are thought to have dated back to the FOURTH AGE, at the end of which its people suffered terribly in the WAR OF SCOURGING. For the first few centuries of the FIFTH AGE, it was little more than a barren land populated by the rudderless remnants of the cultures that once lived there, though these eventually coalesced into independent cities that formed the basis of the confederacy that rose in 810 RM in response to ETUANI^(L) aggression.

The growth of the ATRAMENTA in the region into the vast area now known as the Daened Sulrach^(1,) led to the death of this culture, and little remains of it to this day other than hardened nomads, many of whom are sickened by exposure to the Atramenta. These people worship an ancient chthonic deity known as the GIBBERING WORM, which originated in Etua. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

DAENICA: Set. City in the c-south east of IZABAL^(1.) (Pop. c. 38,200).

DAENT: Mil. Str. Fortress erected in c. 830 RM in the west of HARÉ SHKA, by its first king and ruler, HAREKH.

 $\underline{DAER\ NOT}$: Mil. Str. Fortress in the prefecture of $\underline{EROSENEA}^{(1.)}$ in the north west of $\underline{HOLOLACH}^{(1.)}$.

DAGAKHA: Set. City in the c south of AHKA. It forms part of the RED ROUTE and is renowned for its towering basalt-and-iron fortress, which was built many centuries ago atop the ruins of a much older ARGHAN citadel. The fortress is now a major depot, serving merchants travelling along the Red Route and is controlled by the city's rulers – an influential and despised merchant house.

Local myths speak of the Iron Ghosts, spirits of miners who perished in long-spent tunnels deep beneath the city, who are said to still haunt city's lower wards to this day (Pop. c. 36,100).

DAGADDOL: Fau. Giant sea salamanders common to the eastern coastal waters of the BATHASHAL OCEAN and coastal areas of the SEA OF AMMASH^(2.). They can grow to around 6 – 9-ft. long and have fat snakelike bodies, vestigial limbs and powerful tails that sway from side-to-side to propel them through the water. They are largely aquatic, and typically only venture onto land to lay their eggs in coastal wetlands and tidal flats. They are very dangerous and known for their infectious bites that can fester. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

DAGESARETH: Geo. Dry region in the north east of AETHIOS, forming the north eastern-most part of the badlands of ZOLANDETH. The region is famed for the large quantities of SOULSTONES that are found there, which are mined on an industrial scale by Aethios. The region is peppered with open cast mines that are operated by slaves (the mining of soulstones is delicate and machines would likely destroy as many stones as they uncover) who dig and search carefully. The entire region is heavily guarded by military and mercenary presence all the way to the city of GOBAI, which prepares the stones for storage and export.

The region lies close to the border with $\underline{BARATHEA}^{(1,l)}$ which itself controls a small portion of soulstone reserves, leading to clashes between the two, as Aethios claims all soulstone reserves in the region.

DAGGAL PLAINS: Geo. Region surrounding the river SHIBBOLETH^(3.), crossing the border between AETHIOS and RHINOCOLOURA. The region is sparsely populated, and home to diverse wildlife.

DAGGER OF Y'BERU: Rui. Arc. Ancient obelisk on the island of Nir in the far north east of Elekhid. The obelisk once protruded directly from the water, reaching some 80-ft.high, its reflective metal-like surface reflecting sunlight, acting as a navigational tool to those travelling on both land and Sea. As ELYDEN'S seas began to wane, an island was revealed at the base of the obelisk that bore strange hewn geometric features that remain a mystery to this day.

DAGHA: Geo. Plateau in the c of CHTHYRID.

DAGHAR CAVES: Geo. The cliffs and steep slopes of the once-STRAIT OF NÁRTHEL are riddled with natural caves, niches, and hollows, which collectively are called the Daghar Caves. These are most-pronounced in the north of the Lake DRACONA region, in LYRIDIA. Once submerged beneath the sea, they were later settled by people displaced from other lands, including \underline{DACIA} and $\underline{N\acute{A}RTHEL}$. Together, they formed a ramshackle settlement known as \underline{HABBAS} , where hundreds of people now live in autonomy as troglodytes.

DAGHITARI: Set. Farming settlement in the c south of TEMUJA, along the course of the river ARILLIEN (Pop. c. 6,000).

DAGLIEL: Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTALLY-ACTIVE area in RASSAPTREX, in the south east of LYRIDIA. The area takes the form of brittle DUSTSTONE formations riddled with caves and honeycomb-like structures that are unstable and prone to collapse. Trees in this area have long reaching roots and splintered wood that litters the land.

DAGON: Sup. Rui. Set. Dre. Buried city in the north of PARTHIS, its pylon-like structures ancient beyond reckoning, the DREAMS of those who wander there becoming infected with doubts and despair. The region is shunned by most, and is thought to be an active DREAMSCAPE.

DAGSIN: 1. Geo. Narrow strait between the SEA OF SÛN and the SEA

2. Set. Settlement in SALOROC, overlooking the SEA OF TIAMA. Its natural harbour makes it an ideal spot for its fishing fleet, and it is a stop along the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 7,000).

DAHAK: Rvr. River in the east of NÁRTHEL flowing east for 500-miles from sources in the east of the UEFIR and the QUTTAKAL Mountains before emptying in the north of the SEA OF BEAR.

DAHAKK: Geo. Mountain-range in the KHARKHARADONTID desert, forming a western extension of the MOLOTH KHAMMOTHUL Mountains.

DAHALLASH: Geo. Desert in the east of ANUBIA, between the GO BISAMMAM and the MOLACHARI DESERT. It is thought to be the hottest known desert in SAMMAEA, with recorded temperatures exceeding 70°C. The cause of this heat is unknown though it is thought to be supranatural in origin.

DAHAAMAAN: Geo. Expansive mountain-chain in the north west of SAMMAEA. The Mountains are noted for the large schism, known amongst KORACHANI explorers as the DISSENTION, that run along its western-face.

DAHBIEL: Geo. Scrubland and glacial field strewn with large granite boulders in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of UCHRON.

DAHEN: (15,350-ft.) Geo. One of ten peaks (colloquially known as the TEN PRINCES) of the south eastern face of the A SAVI Mountains, in the north of AHRISHEN, named after an ancient prince.

DAHKAT: Set. City in the south of AHKA, along the northern shore of lake SHAHAN. The city has grown over recent years, taking refugees from coastal cities, and a large shanty town has appeared outside its ancient southern walls. It forms part of the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 45,000).

DAHR: Rui. Abandoned city in the south east of AHKA. The settlement was ransacked and razed by KORACHANI troops in 3996 RM.

DAHUT: Geo. Region in central VÂRR close to the course of the river ICHORIA. Much of the area was flooded in 1717 RM with the construction of the STEEL CATARACT over the Ichoria. Many settlements, including the regions' namesake city, Dahut; were flooded by the reservoir created by the dam, thousands of people losing their homes, scattering throughout Vârr and KORACHAN.

DAIJANI: Set. Settlement in the west of RHINOCOLOURA, just 9-miles west of PHITHASOL, across the river SHIBBOLETH^(3,). It is a major producer of food, particularly grains (Pop. c. 7,500).

DAIKORO: Ind. Set. City in the east of SAUA. Its main industry is sulphur mining (Pop. c. 48,000).

DAIMON: Mys. Rel. Dei. OTHERWORLDLY SPIRITS^(1.) revered by the people of GREST^(1.) in the west of the island-continent of BROR^(1.). The tradition was introduced by the HE'ELAN CULTS in c. 3400 RM, though their mention dates back to earlier DALLIAMORAAN texts that were condemned as heretical. The daimons are a form of tutelary spirit, or a guardian angel that people adopt as part of their indoctrination. They pray to them in times of need, and those who are able to contact them in the Otherworld using OCCULT traditions and MAGICKS, seeking knowledge and dark secrets from them. Together, they form the basis of teachings of the He'elan Writings – the closest thing to a religion in Grest.

Much in the same way that individuals choose a daimon as a patron, most cities and institutions also take on a specific daimon as a patron, and statues dedicated to patron daimons can be found across Grest, as do their SIGILS, which adorn everyday objects and are borne by their followers in the form of brands and tattoos in prominent places such as foreheads and palms. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

DAIONAL: Cal. In the KORACHANI CALENDAR, the second DAY OF THE WEEK. See Vol II: Month and Lunar Cycle in Elyden: Calendars.

DAJID: Set. Small fortified coastal city in the north of IRUGNA⁽²⁾ (Pop. c. 11.600).

DAKARRA: Set. City in the c of NORTHERN SIMBARA, overlooking the strait between the seas of KRIHIEK and AMMASH⁽²⁾. Much of the nation's navy is based there (Pop. c. 70,000).

DAKATA: 1. Rvr. Waterfall in the c of SAUA, known locally as the fivefingers, after the shape the water takes along the cataract. A citadel dominates the earthen knolls between the fingers of the falls, looking over the entire area beneath.

2. Mil. Str. Citadel atop the eponymous waterfall in the c west of SAUA.

DAKATTA: Pol. Set. Colony of the city-state of UBAKKAR that appeared in c. 2905 RM on the eastern face of the DISSENTION schism in the north west of the VESPERTINE LEAGUE, in the north west of WESTERN SAMMAEA. The city fractured from its parent government in c. 3150 RM and, following a strangely passive war (the schism itself forming an impossible barrier for armies to traverse), emerging as an independent settlement, controlling lands north of the Dissention. It was later absorbed by the Vespertine League (Pop. c. 28,000).

DAKHA: Set. Farming settlement in the c east of LAASKHA, built in the fertile soils of LAABOU KENNATH (Pop. c. 2,100).

DAKHACAIA: Set. City in the south east of KORACHAN. It was once home to PATRICIAN HOUSE MILIMORDA, which played a large role in the growth of the city (Pop. c. 32,000).

DAKHAN: Rvr. Major river flowing west for 700-miles from sources in the tribal territories of JACITTA and ILLPHAGOS in the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER, into RHINOCOLOURA, before joining with the river RASELETH, itself a tributary of the river NARRETI.

DAKHLA: Geo. Mountain pass in the north of the KARKARMIS Mountains in the north of HOGGOTHA ISZ. The entire pass is controlled by a single tribe of serapis, preventing travel by outsiders across it.

DAKHRA: Set. Main city of the SIX CITIES region in the west of THE SURRACH in the north west of SAMMAEA. It is a state living in the distant shadow of the Tyrant DAARAN, who some 250-years ago subjugated half of the present-day region. It was only upon his death, following a coalition of other peoples, that the region would slowly recover, giving rise to the present city-state.

The people of Dakhra are now ruled by his son, the god-king Soth, who rose to power around 200-years ago and has been ruling with an iron fist since then (Pop. c. 44,500).

DAKHRAN PLAINS: Geo. Coastal plains, covering around 7,500-squaremiles, in the west of THE SURRACH region known as the SIX CITIES.

DAKIND: Set. Small fortified city in the west of the tribe of KORIND, in the north west of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 12,000).

DAKMAR: Set. Settlement in the c south west of PHYRR, in the north of the region of SLIMA, along the course of the URRABANA river. Its main industry is agricultural, supplying the city of KHIRITT with food (Pop. c. 10,000).

DAKORA: Set. Coastal settlement in the north of OD MEGINNAS^(1.). Its main industry is fishing (Pop. c. 7,300).

DAKSIL: Set. Settlement in the c west of the tribe of HAVATH in the far south east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 5,000).

DAKTA: Set. Settlement in the south west of ARKOS^(1.), known for its date groves (Pop. c. 4,800).

DAKTRA: Pol. Ser. City-state in the region of SHAAT LOTHA in c of THE SURRACH noted for its mercenaries and political agitators, whose expertise is bought across THE SURRACH and beyond. There are great arched markets where people bid for the services of famed assassins and agitators. Their widespread use can be summed up by a Surrachi saying: 'An old politician is considered a mighty man indeed (Pop. c. 73,000).

DALAHET: Set. Small city in the c west of RHINOCOLOURA. Its main industry is tanning, using cattle hides (Pop. c. 18,000).

DALAHIR: Set. Settlement in the far south west of the SULTANATE OF
ABACARDAT. Its main industry is the quarrying of coal, most of which is exported (Pop. c. 8,000).

DALAK HOTHABBIR: x. Myr. His. In the mythology of ancient ELYDEN, a SCION of the DEMIURGE TALANTEHUT. Dalak Hothabbir is described as a slender giant with 4 gangly arms. One pair of arms has 6 digits, and the other has 5, one of which is missing. Its face is forever concealed beneath a featureless white mask that is thought to depict in fine relief upon its surface a map of the entirety of the OTHERWORLD.

Dalak Hothabbir is featured in many ancient accounts, including the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN, as an arbiter of the dead upon the MATERIAL PLANE, inspecting the SOUL PEARLS of those who perished soulless, destroying those belonging to MORTALS who lived a worthy life and creating artificial spirits from their ground remains, which are bound to the Material Plane in a manner similar but not identical to the way in which naturally-formed spirits dwell in the otherworld.

There are no accounts of its demise or death and some scholars believe that it continues to do its timeless work, hidden from the extant world. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

DALAL: Set. City in the north of AETHIOS, in the region of ACTANORS (Pop. c. 40,000).

DALAM: Sec. Small city in the c south west of SEDISIA, along the western course of the VETHRANDAN RIVER SYSTEM, in the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region of EGUAOT. It is a major producer of raw UMBRA, with thousands of mines and siphon engines within its territories (Pop. c. 50,000).

DALAMAN AGUATA: m. Sup. Per. (D. 3382 RM) VORANDI
ONEIROMANCER who settled in KORACHAN in c. 3360 RM, and whose treatise 'PRINCIPLES ON THE GOD'S DREAMS' earned him great notoriety and the enmity of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, culminating in his EXECUTION in 3382 RM for heresy.

DALAN TA: Rel. One of five aspects of the PENTATAEL religion of ELAT and AYAD.

DALARIA: Rvr. River in the east of VARR, flowing south east for 380-miles from its source in the south of the VARRACHON Mountain before emptying in the SEA OF PROPONTIS Though the mountain is shunned, the waters of the Dalaria are relatively clean, though at various points during the KORACHANI tenure there its flow was polluted by industries that have now largely disappeared.

DALATH: 1. Sea. Bay in the east of ALTHA^{(2.),} forming the mouth of the river Altha^{(1.).}

2. also 'City of Columns'. Pol. Set. Capital of ALTHA (2.) (Pop. c. 382,000).

DALEA: Rui. Ancient city in the west of ERASHA, founded by ARABEALLI immigrants in c. -900 RM. The settlement slowly grew as the region restabilised into the re-emerging Erashan culture that appeared in c. -350 RM. Despite the collapse of the region in c. 100 RM, the city remained powerful, defending itself against opposing city-states, though as PARTHIA took control of the region in 237 RM, the city was abandoned, with most of its populace moving east, settling the newer richer Parthian cities in north eastern Erasha.

DALEDI: (B. 1283 – D. 1453 RM) Pol. His. Famed governor of Azazem, who ruled the vassal from 1329 RM till his death. The island fortress of DALEDI is named after him.

DALEDI, FORT: Mil. Str. Island-fortress in lake AGLAIA^(1.) named after the eponymous GOVERNOR. It played a vital role in the WAR OF THE ARTIFEXES, where it defended the city from dissident attack from the west.

DALEST: Set. City in the far west of ALMAGEST, in the territories south of the BAND Mountains the city is known for its harbour and ferries that cross the strait to the capital of ALMAGEST (Pop. c. 13,400).

DALFUN: Set. Settlement in the north of AHRISHEN, in the far east of the region of PELADA. It is major source of slate and granite (Pop. c. 2000).

DALION: Tec. Sup. Org. MYSTERY CULT in TZALLRACH that rose c. 500 RM, possibly after repeated sporadic contact with imperial missionaries. The cult is comprised of ATRAMENTAL SHAPERS and promotes the use of TECHNARCANA.

DALKIN: Geo. Rugged Mountains in the north west of IZABAL^(1.).

DALLEA: Rvr. River in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of MEDES.

DALLIAT: Set. Coastal settlement in the south of NAARETH overlooking the GULF OF VEGATETH. Like many Naarethi coastal settlements, it is constructed on stilts to deal with the region's tides (Pop. c. 8,000).

DALLUS: Mil. Str. Fortress in the c north east of RHAMIA in the marshes of OBLITHIA perched on a promontory of hard rock overlooking the region and the river that leads north to ZOR.

DALMA: 1. Sea. Bay in the north east of SKAROS, along the coastal border with ALMAGEST.

2. Mil. Str. Naval fort in the far north of SKAROS, overlooking the SEA OF DALMA.

DALMMA: Geo. Mountain range in the north east of the HENDECARCHY of DERAEIA in the east of MALAN, just south of the region of SARANTHIA. The region is FIRMAMENTALLY TAINTED, and its rocks are fused into brittle pearlescent crystals in many places. These formations are prone to breaking, causing landslides and slopes of dangerous glass-like scree, that are avoided by most.

DAMAGA: Set. Major coastal city in the north west of Sabaea. It is an influential commercial power in the region and its ruling merchant house holds a monopoly on trade with NALARDIL via exclusive SKYSKIFF routes in the region (Pop. c. 300,000).

DAMAKIA: Rui. Sprawling now-abandoned open collieries in the north of BA'AKH

DAMAMRACH GODHEADS: Int. Rui. Series of ancient half-buried GODHEADS in the north east of THE OLD FOREST. There are thought to be around 50 such godheads, spread around an area of 12 square-miles, and most or overgrown, obscured between thick roots and vines.

DAMARA: Set. City in the south west of KHURAUR. It is known for its hunting and tanning of ANKYLOURA hides (Pop. c. 17,000).

DAMARKAN: Set. Settlement in the north east of ETUA. It is a stronghold of the priests of the GIBBERING WORM, and is home to a large cliffside temple in which strange rites and acts of sacrifice take place in the name of the cosmic deity (Pop. unknown).

DAMARTH: Plr. 'Damarthi'. Mil. Rnk. Elite soldiers in MALAN.

DAMATRA: Set. Small coastal city in the west of THE VORANDINE, on the island of KEYUSH^(1.), overlooking the SEA OF BYRIS. Its main industry is the harvesting of EVOLAM kelp that is vital to various modern ATRAMENTAL industries, including CLONING and FLESHWRIGHTING (Pop. c. 14,000).

DAMAZ: Mil. Str. Fortress in the north of GNOTH, guarding one of the few passes across the spine of the SOLUN HIGHLANDS.

DAMIOL L'HERRE: (B. 1132 – D. 1184) Art. LAASKHAN artist and sculptor, created the black marble sculpture knowns as the ECSTASY OF ST. MALICHAR, which remains in the BASILICA OF KHADON, in the capital city of KHADON, KORACHAN. He died in hysteria, his 2-decade obsession with the sculpture finally consuming him in 1184 RM.

DAMMAN: Rvr. River in the west of the territories of ETHISTONITH in RHINOCOLOURA, flowing east for 310-miles, before meeting its parent, the river SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾.

DAMMARACH: Geo. A rounded plateau in the far north east of THE OLD FOREST, that forms part of the natural border with SHOTHA. The entire region is shunned by the various peoples of the forest, and the GODHEADS – gigantic carved faces with screaming mouths – that are hewn into the grey cliff-faces of the plateau are given a wide berth, even by the VALKAI nomads, which are seen as the most pragmatic of the peoples of the Old Forest.

The cliffs of the plateau are crumbling and shallow, and relatively easy to access, despite the uneven ground. Ancient ruins dot the base, and the foundations of a large structure that might be a wall or aqueduct can be found close by.

DAMMARAT: Set. Settlement in the c south west of KEPHUAAN, in the northern foothills of the GARDAGHIN Mountains. Its main industry is the mining of pyrite and coal (Pop. c. 6,800).

DAMMGHRA: Set. Settlement in the c south west of METHUMN, in the south of the IRAGASH valley, along the course of the GARAGIRA river. Its main industry is agriculture, with its inhabitants relying on terraced farming to cultivate hardy crops like lentils. The people of Dammghra are renowned for their resilience and resourcefulness, traits that have been honed by the challenging environment of the Iragash.

Over recent years it has become a much-needed link with TAAN AN to the south (via the city of SAMATIA), allowing merchants to use its territories. Its population is slowly growing and is expected to double within a few years as increased trade bolsters its economy (Pop. c. 6,500).

DAMMGHRAN ROAD: Com. Geo. Nascent trade-route between TAAN
AN and Methumn in the AMMASHI^(1.) peninsula. It links the city of SAMATIA in the south with the settlement of DAMMGHRA in the north.

DAMMON: Set. Small coastal city in the north of TISARA, past the mouth of the river ACIONNA. Its main industry is the cultivation of flax and the rearing of sheep, both of which are vital (Pop. c. 14,000).

DAMON: Set. Fortified coastal settlement in the URTAN LEAGUE, to the south west of IZABAL⁽¹⁾ (Pop. c. 7,500).

DAMPING ENGINE: Sup. Tec. A complex TECHNARCANE ENGINE that generates a damping wave within the MATERIA OMNA that is felt by SHAPERS. This makes it difficult for shapers to FOCUS^(1.) and to maintain focus, which in turn makes it harder to reach ATTUNEMENT, preventing them from SHAPING. Shapers caught in the area of effect are dazed and the negative effects can persist for some hours after. The effectiveness of such engines is somewhat arbitrary, and is influenced by the ARCANE TEMPERS in the area where they are employed as well as the prowess and fortitude of individual shapers in the area of effect.

Such engines are used in prisons (the most notable being fort ARTHAGNIA) and other places where it is necessary to prevent shapers from using their abilities, but overuse may lead to internal injuries, or instance organs rupturing, bubbling blood, laboured breathing, irregular heartbeats, and so on. As a result, they are used intermittently, relying on the lingering effects to ensure that the targets remain debilitated.

They can be used in battle like artillery to negate the functionality of enemy shapers, though they are relatively short-ranged. When modified, they can be used to counter the effects of other engines, though when used in this way their waves are largely ineffective against enemy shapers.

DAMRANATOSIKON: Set. Small city in the c south of NOAVATUR, 40-miles north of the capital (Pop. c. 12,600).

DAMSON: Set. Small city in the c of PORPHYR. It is a major producer of purple dye, which is extracted from a specific form of lichen, known as orchella weeds (Pop. c. 17,000).

DAMUISA: Set. Coastal settlement in the north of TISARA, overlooking the GULF OF USEA (Pop. c. 7,000).

DANAAUA: Geo. Honeycomb rocks in the north east of the TARAHID ANNEXES that is covered in strangler-roots, at the centre of which is a grotesque brain-like tumour. Those who enter this region are invariably assaulted by a feeling of unease and a compulsion to approach the wretched feature in the centre of the area.

DANABAD: Rvr. River flowing for 310-miles in the south east of TARTAK from sources in the RUADOM and SAHODOM Mountains before meeting with its parent, the river AALARAD, which is itself a tributary of the river KHARAD. Its waters are largely untainted, unlike the Kharad.

DANAEL: 1. Sca. Sea in the west of the INNER SEA, dividing the lands of SAGITTARIA, ALKHA and EREBETH in the north west from CYHLAGHARR in the south east. The sea derives its name from an ancient city-state that once existed in present-day Erebeth.

2. His. Ancient city-state, the ruins of which are in present-day south eastern EREBETH. The city is believed to have once been a major port in the region, though its sun-bleached ruin is now some 2-miles from the present coastline.

3. Mil. Str. Fort in the north of EREBETH, overlooking the south westernmost part of the Sea of Danael.

DANAL: Set. Settlement in the south east of ARKOS^(1.), north of the city of SALPINIX (Pop. c. 6.400).

DANARAT: Geo. Rocky foothills to the west of the EGETAKH Mountains, dominating the north of ALBASSITA in the north west of WESTERN MENISCEA.

DANATHAN: Set. Settlement in the c of CISNERIA. It is built around one of many ancient gigantic tree stumps situated in the region. The stump has a circumference of some 300-ft. and once formed part of an ancient forest that is thought to have been cut down by ancient industries in the late FOURTH AGE that came in the wake of the AZAHAR empire.

Early in the FIFTH AGE the stump was hollowed out, and dwellings were built within it, forming the basis of a short-lived culture that died out by around 400 RM. The culture left no written records so little is known of it but is thought to have ranged from the north of present-day ATARAXIA into ALAM BETHYL and is known amongst KORACHANI historians only as the TREE-DWELLERS. (Pop. c. 2,000).

DANCING DEITY, the: Rel. Dei. Deity of OBLEVIS, CAMAU, and EGINAZ since the abolishing of the old DESPOSYNI DYNASTY and their deity the UNDYING MACHINE in 3199 RM. It is thought that she was a previous divinity that had been abolished by the Desposyni Dynasty in favour of worship of the Undying Machine that they had brought with them, but whose reverence continued in the form of a saint and, later, a mystery cult unbeknownst to the royal household and its priests.

The religion spread across the OBLEVISH EMPIRE by 3300 RM and continued to be the main religion of various territories after it crumbled in 3821 RM.

The Dancing Deity is a symbolic figure, representing the constant forward motion of the universe, balance, and grace. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

DANDRAXAN CYCLE: Sup. Tec. The cycle through which a heat engine (such as a steam turbine) is able to produce energy through the movement of a foreign agent, most commonly water via the conversion of its state from liquid to steam. It is also a feature of SUNSTONE ENGINES.

DANFUSA: Set. Fortified settlement in the north east of N'RAKH, close to the border with SUMA'YA. It is amongst the more outgoing of N'rakhi settlements and, alongside CH'TASSA, allows foreign trade into N'rakh via the SALT ROAD, even guarding many caravans across the north east as they head to and from the border with LIDEA and the city of PERESIA (Pop. c. 20,000).

DANGEROUS: Sup. The middle-most class used by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES to categorise regions of ATRAMENTALLY TAINT. Unprotected travel in areas of dangerous Atramental taint is discouraged as even brief exposure may leave longlasting side effects or permanent damage, including contracting ailments such as GLANDULAR DISTEMPER, CAGASTRIC FLU, AEPATHY, ST. AGAR'S ROT or other ailments unique to their region of origin. Use of softsuits, technarcane protection, or magickal shields may negate the effects of dangerous ATRAMENTAL LACUNAE, though prolonged exposure may still lead to minor long-term effects.

Settlements are rarely found in such regions, and those that are were typically founded to take advantage of umbra reserves within the region. Pre-existing settlements that find themselves in a region of dangerous Atramental taint are usually abandoned unless there is a very compelling industrial or economic reason for them to remain inhabited, in which case they must rely on the constant use of siphon engines to keep the area clean.

DANIKO: Set. City in the south of SAUA, in the region of MELAIA. It is a centre of the farming settlements in the region and is one of the more metropolitan cities in Melaia (Pop. c. 50,000).

DANILA: Pol. Duchy in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of UCHRON.

DANILAT: Pol. Set. Major city in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of UCHRON^(1.), and capital since 4004 RM after attracting refugees from the south, which have been, over the past years, been victims of coastal piracy and slave raids. The old capital, Uchron, was itself the subject of a major attack, with pirates landing and travelling over 50-miles inland, destroying roads and razing farmland, leading to a short siege in 4005 RM, which ended in a victory for the defenders, though by then the capital had been moved, and remain in Danilat to this day.

Danilat is a link in the Great ROAD trade route, and sees much trade from across the INNER SEA REGION (Pop. c. 277,000).

DANILLI: 1. Rvr. River forming the far eastern border of the HARÉSHK. The river flows almost 400-miles south from the HRYG RIMS before emptying in the GULF OF NESHER^(1.).

2. Pol. Region in $\underline{\text{NICADA}}$ in the east of the city-state of Nicada in the $\underline{\text{HAR\acute{E}SHK}}$

3. Set. Conurbation, comprising many satellite settlements in the east of the city-state of NICADA in the HARÉSHK, bordering SAUA. The city-state and outlying regions are famed for their wine, OLIVES and farmlands, that stretch from the HRYG RIMS in the north to the BOSK in the south (Pop. c. 96,000).

DANNAR: Dem. 'Dannaran'. His. Ntn. Nation in the south east of MENISCEA, that would later evolve into DHA NAR after its annexation by the Pirate Queen ZAYANOZA in c. 3300 RM. See Vol III: Extinct States.

DANOLICH: His. Ancient half-sunken citadel in the north of LYRIDIA, on the banks of lake INACHA.

DANOR BET: Set. Small city and surrounding pasture in the north west of SARASTRO. Its main industry is cattle rearing, and nearby settlements are known for their tanning (Pop. c. 17,000).

DANOS: Set. Settlement north of the river THAUR in the south of ARKOS^(1.). It is a major producer of platinum (Pop. c. 6,000).

DANOSOTH: Geo. Expansive mountain-range in the c east of SAMMAEA, forming the southern-most border of ETHISTONITH in RHINOCOLOURA, known for some tainted terrain. It is home to lake AKASM, which is commonly referred to as the main source of the river SHIBBOLETH^(3.).

The mountain-range is commonly divided in two: the Upper and Lower Danosoth, to the north and south, respectively.

DANSE OF THE BLACK DEATH: Mus. Popular piece of organ music opera within the KORACHANI EMPIRE penned by the famed composer TORASZMA in 2718 RM.

DANTALIA: Rui. One of three ancient towers (the other two being NARABIA and DECARABIA), scattered across the south east of SAMMAEA. Found in the north east of the XETEAN STATES, it is the more decayed of the three and lies toppled like a shattered petrified tree. It is half sunken, overgrown with weeds and mosses, any metal long since rusted. Some bricks have been taken to construct a ramshackle shanty some miles south of it, known as THASTARO. Natives of the region know the fallen tower by the name of RASTIS.

DANTAR: Set. Small city north of the river THAUR in the south of ARKOS^(1.). It is a major producer of platinum (Pop. c. 15,200).

DANTIS: Geo. Rugged mountainous region forming the northern coastline of PERGOST, bordering the SEA OF POLARIS. The mountain-chain runs for some 1,700-miles, from the north west of Pergost to its eastern-most point, marking its largest and most recognisable geographical feature in all of Pergost.

The mountains are covered in permafrost and for most of the year the coast is hidden beneath a thick layer of frozen sea ice that melts only in the height of summer.

DANU: Dem. 'Danuan'. Ntn. Nation in the far south west of WESTERN MENISCEA. It has close links with VARU, and is known for its relatively high variance of STONE MAN'S DISEASE and STONE CHILDREN, which are kept in home shrines and revered as wise members of the family, who are said to answer questions. MENISCEAN INDRIKS are commonly used as mounts by people in power. It was a member of the FEDERATION OF FREE NATIONS OF MENISCEA, until its disbanding in 3272 RM. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

DANUR: Rvr. Major river in the north of ALMAGEST, flowing west for 1,890-miles south west from various sources, including BRENNANG Mountains, HYSTAR massif, the PLURAN RIM, and the GAEFANG Mountains, amongst others, before emptying into the SEA OF SEKHEM. The river flows through major lakes, including TERA and SURATT, and is noted for its deposition and large flow that leads into the SEA OF SEKHEM, which is dammed from access to Elyden's other seas through the \underline{DAMOF} $\underline{ST.\ SIMEOL}^{(1,l)}$ and it is the rivers' heavy flow that allows the dam to function as intended.

DAORN: Sct. City in the c south west of RAONGEN^(2.), in the coastal hills west of the URAHASH Massif. It is built in the subterranean structures of an ancient culture, with only hundreds of chimneys and air vents visible on the surface and a great belfry with a giant brass bell that is struck twice daily. The lands surrounding the city are populated by amaurid elks, which are hunted by people from Daorn for food, pelts, musk glands and bones (Pop. c. 42,000).

DAPPORT: Set. Settlement in the south of JURRAS^(2,), in the western-face of the INNORADOS Mountains (Pop. c. 5,000).

DAPRE: Mil. Str. Fortress in the north of the Templar States, situated along a narrow isthmus overlooking the BAY OF OMERA^(1.) in the west and the BAY OF FIK in the east. The fort originated as a sea fort in c. 1800 RM, at which time the headland to its north was an island and the present-day isthmus was a narrow channel linking the bays together.

DAQALLA: Lak. Lake in the north west of AHRISHEN, forming part of the greater NALESH river system.

DAQAN PHAR: Set. Fortified city in the far south east of PNESSA, close to the border with CHEIRA. It has a large population of Cheiran expatriates (Pop. c. 14,000).

DAR CINNRA: 1. Mil. Rui. Ancient cob wall built by the TRIBES OF AD, stretching for over 500-miles in what is now the east of KREM. The wall was built between c. -900 and -800 RM by the warlord BOKKORON, who succeeded in uniting the disparate tribes in the defence against marauding SERAPIS attacking from the deserts of the east.

2. Mil. Rui. Specifically, the name given to the largest fortress constructed in c. -780, to the north of the above wall, where the bulk of military forces were stationed.

DÂR ADAMH: Set. Fortified city in the north west of SYNCHTHONITHA, known for its rich DVERG history and extant dverg population (Pop. c. 22,000).

DÂR GHANA: Set. SYNCHTHONITHAN enclave in the north west of LIEVTHRA. It is heavily fortified and is home to insular DVERG, who are all that remains of the historical south western-most territories of Synchthonitha (Pop. c. 22,000).

DÂR KAATH: Set. City in the north west of SYNCHTHONITHA, known for its rich DVERG history and extant dverg population. It is said to have been founded by the descendants of the champion Traghllan, who singlehandedly vanquished a MESOCHTHON, the ruin of which now makes up the geography to the south of the city (Pop. c. 28,000).

DÂR ZOAR: Set. Small city in the north west of SYNCHTHONITHA, known for its rich DVERG history and extant dverg population. Its main industry is the breeding of HAYAVARS (Pop. c. 18,000).

DARAB: Mil. Str. Fortress in the far north of KARAKHAS, close to the border with ALLASAN. Originally built by the KORACHANIEMPIRE during the time of the SABISSILIAN REVOLTS in the 13th century RM to control hinterland rebellions. Constructed from the region's distinctive red stone, its thick, towering walls are said to be infused with the blood of the workers who perished during its construction, fuelling local myths that the fortress is cursed.

DARADAN: Set. Coastal city in the south of SUOR overlooking the ROILING SEA (Pop. c. 40,000).

DARAGIN: Set. Major coastal city in the far north of SHAZGIN, overlooking the SEA OF INDIRILL (Pop. c. 260,000).

DARAMEUT: Rel. Str. Cemeteries in SUMA'YA and BA'AKH where the bodies of VEMDI are laid to rest. The vemdi are a caste of people who abandon their families to protect their homes from ATRAMENTAL CORRUPTION.

DARAN: Set. Settlement in the south east of ERET^(2.). Its main industry is stone quarrying (Pop. c. 4,800).

DARAQ TOO: Set. City in the south east of CHEIRA (Pop. c. 43,500). * DARASHIR: Set. Small coastal city in the north west of ESHIR^(2.) (Pop. c. 12,000). * DARASSIN, DIADON PRIME OF SAUA: (B. 3891 RM) Pol. Present DIADON of SAUA.

DARAT: Set. Settlement in the c of TAAN AN (Pop. c. 4,000). *

DARATAR: Set. Rural area made up of over a dozen close yet distinct settlements in far southern VÂRR, 18-miles from the border with PELASGOS. The region is famed for its large herds of aurochs, many of which are from strains altered by the KORACHANI EMPIRE or otherwise tainted by the ATRAMENTAL WASTES of VÂRR. It lies along the main path of the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 17,000).

DARATAS: Set. Settlement in the south east of JURRAS^(2.), in the north eastern face of the INNORADOS Mountains. The settlement's main industry is its iron mines (Pop. c. 5,200).

DARATAY: (B. 3934 RM) Pol. Ruler, and ARCH-HIEROMONARCH of IACIO.

DARATT: Set. Settlement in the c south west of the TEMPLAR STATES. It originated in c. 250 as a dolerite mine, and remains a source of the volcanic stone, which is used in construction across the States (Pop. c. 8,000).

DARAYANDI: Rvr. River in the c south of HABOT, flowing south for 160-miles from sources in the EMMIGHI Mountains, before meeting its parent, the river VAIAUANTI. The river was not a distributary prior to the disappearance of the SEA OF ELLSALEN^(1.) and it flowed directly into the sea.

DARCHANA: Set. Coastal city in the c of PERGOST, overlooking the BAY OF OMONIA (Pop. c. 33,000).

DAREA: Pol. Duchy in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of CARIA^(4.).

DARENT: See. City in the c of PARTHIS, with ruins of the monastery of NATHAR 3-miles outside its present walls. It one of many cities along the course of the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 30,500).

DARESH: Rel. Phil. Religion and philosophy common in the island-state of ARCHAEDON^(2.), which espouses the pursuit of knowledge, and in particular esoteric secrets and the nature of FIRMAMENTISM. Its priests are known as GNOSTICATORS, and most of them are SHAPERS. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

DARHAA: Set. Coastal settlement in the east of HARAPPA^(3.). It forms a part of the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 8,000).

DARHAM: m. Int. Leg. Mys. Rel. Per. (D. 2068 RM) Mystic whose teachings are followed in the HENDECARCHIES of AONIA, CYRENIA and HATON in the north west of MALAN. He was born in northern CYRENIA in the wake of collapse of the NAHORIAN EMPIRE, and lived a life of altruism. He was beloved, becoming very popular during his lifetime, and attracted many followers. Following his death, his closest friends continued his legacy by living as he had, spreading his 'teachings' across the north west of AMILLAERE (3.), where it evolved into a religious-like philosophy that survives to this day as DARHAMISM.

DARHAM, TEMPLE OF: Rel. Str. Site in the c of the HENDECARCHY of CYRENIA, in the north west of MALAN, where the mystic DARHAM first taught his acolytes. It is now a large temple visited by many pilgrims.

DARHAMISM: Phil. Rel. Religion-like philosophical movement prevalent in the north west of MALAN, specifically in the HENDECARCHIES of AONIA, CYRENIA and HATON, though temples can be found across Malan in regions where it has taken hold.

The movement gained traction following the death of the mystic DARHAM. He left behind many followers and friends who took it upon themselves to follow in his footsteps, living lives of joy and altruism. Their beliefs spread, becoming popular in the north west of Malan.

DARHOLT: Mor. Bestial humanoid race, averaging 6' tall, 300 lb. They have grey fur, bestial features, and limited intellect, but learn instructions well. They are relatively common in cold regions, particularly in DURCHAA^(1.).

DARIGASH: Set. Settlement in the c-south east of TARTAK. It forms a part of the SALT ROAD, and offers bedding and lodging to travellers (Pop. c. 9.100).

DARIHOR: Set. Small coastal city in the far south west of KHAMID, at the southern-most tip of the coast of AENU (Pop. c. 13,000). *

DARK AGES, the: Pol. His. Period following the SUNDERING OF THE KORACHANI EMPIRE in 3705 RM, where the aftermath of its fragmentation into the HIGH-EMPIRE and REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO saw the resultant empires' economies falter. The period is ephemeral, and scholars rarely agree on concrete dates, though the period is generally thought to span the years 3705 and 3845 RM, centring around three distinct events: the collapse of the High-empire's economy following its loss of territories south of the INNER SEA; a horrific PLAGUE that swept across much of inner LLACHATUL that killed livestock and weakened labourers; and the fragmentation of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE into two denominations, that saw a crisis of faith envelop the people of the High-empire.

Though somewhat melodramatic, the period is characterised for the slowing of technarcane progress, the collapse of trade, including the loss of many existing trade-routes through SAMMAEA, increased xenophobia and religious fundamentalism and a turn from manufacture to the CYCLING of many industrial goods. Thousands if not millions died in imperial cities. Just as many were driven from the cities, filtering through the wastelands that had come to dominate the northern territories. Scavengers became a palpable threat to travel, leading to the isolation of many settlements and regions.

The age ended only through the storming of the BASTION OF STEEL in KHADON in the winter of 3845 RM – a near-unprecedented event, that forced $\underline{\text{THE SEVEN}}$ to take notice of their faltering lands. Until then, the leaders of the northern empire had withdrawn from the realities of the present into nostalgic reveries, where the memory of decadence and infamy sustained them.

DARK BEYOND: Oth. Dark part of the OTHERWORLD, where AEHARI are said to dwell. Its opposite is the LIGHT BEYOND.

DARK GUARD, the: Pol. Law. Policing force in the cities of the KORACHANI EMPIRE similar to the IRON GUARD, but patrol large city's underworlds and sewers.

DARK MILE, the: Soc. Slum area in the CITY OF ALMAGEST.

DARK SEA, the: Sea. Sea to the east of the STRAIT OF NÁRTHEL dividing the nations of LYRIDIA, the HARÉSHK, SAUA, MALAN, KHAMID, VENTHIR and NÁRTHEL from each other. The CATACLYSM OF KHAMID in 101 RM flooded the sea, creating new seas, the largest of which are the PHARANX, the CARCASS, the RED ISLES and the BROKEN LANDS, all of which are dominated by sheer-sided volcanic islands.

DARK SEA REGION: Geo. Pol. Common geopolitical term used to describe the nations that surround the DARK SEA, as well as lands directly to the west of it, around the INNER SEA and east of it, around the IAPETAN SEA, and their environs. The term is not precise, and one person's definition of the term may be different to another's.

DARK VIGIL: Soc. Mil. Org. Every year on the winter, on the anniversary of the founding of the VÁMAN ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION, its agents take part in a ritual known as the Dark Vigil where they renew their vows to the Order. New agents are also believed to be officially indoctrinated during this feast. Little is known to outsiders of the ritual, the details of which are kept secret.

DARKANA: Sec. City in the c west of KARAKHAS. Its main export is a heady perfume known as ASSIR that is popular in the region. Its main ingredient comes from the CENTURY PLANTS which are cultivated in the plains of SHAKEL ANU and contribute to the rarity and prestige of the product (Pop. c. 14,800).

DARKWOOD: Sup. Flo. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED trees that remain strong enough to be economically viable. Such trees are harvested in many places throughout ELYDEN, and are prized amongst imperial nobility and COGNATENSIA, who are the few who can afford items made of such wood within the KORACHANI EMPIRE. The wood is very light, yet retains much of the strength associated with other hard woods. It is used mostly in the manufacture of object d'art, idols and even decorative weapons.

DARMUN: Rvr. River in the c of PARTHIS, flowing for 190-miles from sources in the KASPIAN Mountains before meeting with its parent, the river ESHMUN.

DARORRO: Set. Large fortified caravanseral in the c of SAUA, guarding the pass between the SHIORI and MERA Mountains (Pop. c. 12,000).

DARRAEN GARVALLI: m. Int. Oth. Mus. Per. (B. 3939 RM) SHIE organist, composer and poet of great fame and notoriety. Born in the city of FALKAN in AZAZEM to merchant parents, he began showing an aptitude for keyboard instruments at a young age while attending the SOCIETY OF RACHANAELI INDOCTRINATION. This went far beyond even the natural skill that shie have in various musical instruments due to their two pairs of arms, being perceived as a divine gift for which there was no natural explanation. He was then given formal training starting at the age of 8, first performing a solo concert to rave reviews at the age of 13 after which hid stardom continued to grow.

By the age of 19 he had already travelled across the length and breadth of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, performing for dignitaries, ARCHPATRICIANS, magnates, and OTHERWORLDERS, but his largest performance was during the FEAST OF THE REBIRTH OF ST. MALICHAR, where he first played a composition of his own devising, to which he provided vocal accompaniment himself. Titled Korachani Lament: Fugue in D minor, he performed in the BASTION OF STEEL before dozens of archpatricians of the LEAGUE OF PATRICIANS, two members of the COUNCIL OF SEVEN, and the CONSULITE himself, with the IRON ANGEL making a rare appearance on behalf the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR. A retelling of the ITINERARY OF MALICHAR, it was an epic masterpiece of three hours, at the end of which his fingers were bloody and his voice broken. It left the audience stunned, with many in tears and others unable to join in the hour-long standing ovation out of sheer awe. It is said that he became POSSESSED by the SPIRITS (1.) of a dozen composers in that performance, after which he was a changed man.

Brash, arrogant, and fully aware of his infamy and status, he became withdrawn, sullen, and reticent of greeting his legions of fans. He began focusing on composing, writing hundreds of concertos, operas, and dirges, and penning thousands of poems, each darker and more nihilistic than the last. It was with the writing of his Eschatologie Abyssal in 3963 RM, which detailed in unnerving details the death of Malichar and the subsequent collapse of the empire, that he is believed to have lost his mind. His list of patrons grew shorter after this as the scandal spread across the empire, though he remained in the good graces of enough connoisseurs of the grotesque to continue producing music and prose, if such they could be called. He became persecuted after this, and went into hiding, likely under the auspices of his remaining benefactors. Chapbooks and pamphlets of his new works continued to slowly make their way into the public eye, with each new work more scandalous and fixated on death and decay as the last, until in c. 3975 RM, when he is thought to have lost his last patron.

Little is known of his life after this, and the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE declared him dead after a 10-year manhunt failed to apprehend him or find a body, though most who had been following his life believed he was still alive. A handful of works released after this time similar to his style were attributed to him, despite no confirmation that he was alive. This continued for some years until he was sighted in the city of ALMAGEST. Word soon spread and within days he had been granted citizenship, and was placed under the protection of the ALMAGESTI republic on condition that he was allowed to continue writing new music. He was given a penthouse residence in the central peninsula of the city of Almagest, overlooking various bastion gardens, where he spent his days composing new symphonies that continued his descent into melancholia. As he grew older, he became consumed by a deep sense of ennui that saw his output dwindle and he eventually withdrew from public life altogether.

He appeared one last time in the Traian Square and performed an impromptu concert on the organ of the Church of St. Alit, after which he fell down dead amid the bittersweet applause of bystanders. A flash of golden light erupted from his body moments later, and an otherworlder appeared suspended above him — commonly assumed to be the otherworlder reborn from his spirit^(1,). The otherworlder drifted away over the Sekhem and to the north, and was never seen again. Rumours abound in Almagest as to the fate of Darraen's otherworlder, though none are rooted in any truth we know. His mortal body was buried in a mausoleum built specifically for him in the Katona Bastion Cemeters.

DARRAM: Set. Settlement in the north west of JURRAS^(2.), overlooking the ATRAMENTAL region of ZOPISSA (Pop. c. 5,200).

DARROU: Set. Small fortified city in the west of PARAIYA, in the KAURCANI basin, close to the border with Karakhas. It was once a major hub of trade, but with the abandonment of Bakkau, many of its markets were abandoned (Pop. c. 13,000).

DARTSU: Set. Major harbour in the south west of SAUA, overlooking the SEA OF NESHER^(1.). Dartsu is Saua's only major coastal city and its harbours are home to the Sauan military fleet, as well as its largest fishing vessels. It is known for the ancient ruined lighthouse on a rocky promontory to the far north west of the city (Pop. c. 245,000).

DARUTH: Lake Lake in the east of LAASKHA, in the east hills of the ARCANTHEA Mountain along the course of the river PARRAN.

DARUTOSH: Set. Small city in the east of DURCHAA^(1.), forming a part of the DURCHAAN UMBRA LINES. It is known for its trapping and game, and many are employed as guards along the Lines, spending months away from the city, patrolling as far north as the UTAGHAN Mountains, and as far south as the capital (Pop. c. 13,000).

DARVESH: Mys. Rnk. Caste of MHAROKKIN mystics and students of the FIRMAMENT and ATRAMENTA. Regardless of their tools, their practice was outlawed throughout KORACHANI rule c. 1000 RM, though they survived imperial dominance in the region, largely due to their small numbers and careful work.

DASALL: 1. Rvr. River in the south east of TAHALL, flowing for some 275-miles north east from sources in the DHAKALL Mountains and the BETHOL hills, before emptying in the SEA OF MARDEN.

2. Set. Major city in TAHALL, along the course of the above river. The city is renowned for its military college, where the SUHLKERA caste warriors are trained (Pop. c. 112,000).

3. $\it Edu. Str.$ College in the eponymous city $^{(2.)}$ where, for the past 2 millennia its warrior-caste has been trained.

DASALOON: Set. Small city in the north west of CUTH. It is a major producer of jute and jute rope (Pop. c. 11,800).

DASASHI: Set. Small fortified city in the north west of SAUA, between the FOREST OF REVERIES and the wetlands of TAIROKO (Pop. c. 17,200).

DASIEA: Set. Large fortified settlement in the far north of OPHAR, overlooking the western-most gulf of the CAMARINAL SEA, its cannons aimed at the cliffs of ANGRDUR, from which it anticipates an attack by CYHLAGHARR. Built on the ruin of the OGHUR stronghold of ANGRDA that was established there in c. 750 RM (Pop. c. 47,000).

DASIL: Mys. Str. LACHRYMIST monastery in the west of THE SURRACH, along the hills of KO-ORHAZ.

DASOS: Mil. Str. AZASAOTHI fortress, to the west of the plains of ENDURAGH, built atop the ruins of a CYHLAGHARRI island-fortress abandoned in c. 1008 RM.

DASRALL: Set. Settlement in the north east of TAHALL, along the course of the river TRADRU (Pop. c. 10,000).

DASSK: Com. Set. A major trade-city in the c-south east of MHAROKK that controls traffic along a stretch of the SALT ROAD as well as south along THE SHADOW MARCH, linking the main SAMMAEAN continent with northern Mharokk and VAALK. The city is renowned for its immense high walled, open-topped horseshoe arched market-district, which is open all day to cater to the merchants of the Salt Road. The city is also home to the legendary CATHEDRAL OF THE WOMB.

It was an important location during the $\underline{WAR\ OF\ SUNDERING}$ and was taken by \underline{LIDEAN} ($\underline{SARASTROAN}$) troops on the 5^{th} of $\underline{CYKRANALEN}$, but was later retaken by imperial troops on the 24^{th} of $\underline{LIVIALEN}$, beginning a pushback of Sarastroan forces back into Lidea (Pop. c. 583,000).

DASTAN: Rel. Obj. Gigantic BELL in the high-temple of DHU TENRA in the EROCH MAER in TEMUJA. Prayers to the TUTELARY SPIRITS are inscribed upon it, and it is struck by deaf monks who tend to it. They are deafened in a ritual they undertake when they come of age following years of training, though would likely be deafened by their proximity to the bell.

DATARA: Set. Coastal fortified city in the west of AMMESH, overlooking the BAY OF LEPHET. It is known for its large harbour and portside markets, where goods from across the Lephet are traded (Pop. c. 44,000).

DATASU: Set. Settlement in the north west of SAUA, along the shores of lake PAVO. Its main industry is crab fishing (Pop. c. 5,000).

DATEPHA: Dem. 'Datephan'. Ntn. Nation dominating the eastern coast of the island of ISEA, east of the ORMARIKH Mountains. The nation is curious in that it is largely comprised of VAPULIM, the children of the DEMIURGE ARIMASPI, which were thought to have been extinct by people of the NEAR HEMISPHERE until their 'rediscovery' by KORACHANI explorers in 1306 RM, though they were known to other mortal natives of the island since the dawn of the FIFTH AGE.

The vapulim of Datepha are, much like their ancestors, noble creatures of feral hearts. Their dislike of human cities does not translate into their own lands – for their nation is home to many large stone cities, their foundations carved from the earth of Isea and they have managed the resources of their home well, so-much so that Datepha was target of a KORACHANI invasion in 3104 RM that ended in disaster for Korachan, thousands of troops were slain and thousands more taken as slaves, the descendants of which remain to this day – either as slaves to the Datephan people or as migrants, having populated other regions of the island-continent of Isea, most notably IRORA, which until recently was a region shunned by the Datephan people.

The capital and main city of Datepha is ORAWARAN, and it remains home to king MARBAS following his rise to power in 3954 RM. Of HUMAN and VAPULIM heritage, he is working to end centuries of racial caste systems and bigotry, though is facing harsh opposition from various so-called nationalist groups, even though he has won much of the population to his cause. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

DATH ARAMEG: Arc. Gigantic metal pillar located in the cavern of ARAMAEG in the eastern reaches of THE OLD FOREST. The pillar was discovered by KORACHANI explorers in c. 540 RM though failed to be located by latter explorers, making the tale of a 100-foot-wide pillar of tarnished and pitted metal that is constantly sinking, a product of fancy, though later forays in the forest between c. 1175 – 1325 RM claimed to have rediscovered, confirming that the huge pillar was still sinking – over 600-years later.

Later expeditions, most notably one made in 2324 RM, studied the object, claiming that it was sinking at a steady pace of 7-feet a day. They also found that the pitted surface was covered in pictograms and unknown scripts, thought to cover the length of the entire pillar, however-big it might be. Given the calculated speed of the object, and using the estimated date of c. 540 RM as a starting point (even though it can be assumed that the pillar has been in motion for far longer) it has been calculated that the pillar is at least 8,840,300-feet (1,674-miles) long as of the year 4000 RM, and likely far, far larger, despite the many impossibilities this presents.

The object has been attributed to the DEMIURGE VORROPOHAIAH, though none of the writings and symbols on its surface correspond with any of his own writings.

DATHAE I: (B. 2432 – D. 2489 RM) His. Pol. The first king and founder of the LIMOTHAN DYNASTY, who became the first king of LIMOTH^(1.) in 2471 RM following decades of political machinations in the region that slowly unified its noble families via marriages, treaties and alliances until Dathae I achieved full hierarchical power.

DATHOA: 1. Pol. Geo. Tribe in the c south west of MULCIBER, in the GROWING MOUNTAINS, in the north east of SAMMAEA, bordering the nations of RHINOCOLOURA and PNESSA. Its people practice a slaver culture and have one major city, NETISOA, where marauders return with captured prisoners from the west and south. The cliff-temple of TARPEIA looms over its north, and KARKADANNI nomads are said to travel there, and are ignored by the slavers.

2. Set. City in the eponymous region of the Growing Mountains. Most of the Dathoan populace are nomadic, travelling outside their own borders seeking slaves and prisoners to capture and bring back to NETISOA as slaves. The city of Dathoa is effectively a depot where slaves are catalogued and categorised before being taken to Netisoa for sale (Pop. c. 10,800).

- DATHOT LLOL: Set. Small city in the region of TUSENTAL in the c of THE SURRACH (Pop. c. 15,000).
- DATRIMH: Set. Settlement on the island of Branat in the south west of GYZHA (Pop. c. 8,000).
- DATUND: Set. Small city in the west of the tribe of NINIR in the south east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 11,000).
- DAUGHTERS OF REJHELLE: Rel. Org. Female members of the SECT OF REJHELLIAN OBSERVANCE. Whereas the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, on which the sect is based, are dominated by men, the Sect of Rejhellian Observance is dominated by women in positions of authority.
- DAUGHTERS OF ST. SANSA: Str. Monastery and rural hospital for women in the north of PELASGOS.
- DAULOON: Set. Coastal settlement in the east of CUTH, at the periphery between the badlands of CAUAT in the west and the salt plains of BRAGGAY in the east. Its main industry is salt panning (Pop. c. 6,500).
- DAURAENT: Geo. Mountain-range to the west of the ARGENT Mountains , dominating the western reaches of the HENDECARCHY of ATALLUA in the south east of MALAN. Its western face overlooks the tainted forest of ILLHACH.
- DAVAL: Lak. Lake in the c south of AHRISHEN, along the course of the river MIRQAL^(1,).
- DAVANOS SOLLAR: (B. 3009 D. 3065 RM) Art. Artist who between c. 3030 3062 RM painted many artistic world maps depicting KORACHAN as the centre of civilised life on ELYDEN, and espousing its colonies and military conquests.
- DAVDEL: Ser. Small city in the c north east of NARTHEL, just south of the UEFIR highlands. It is home to the legal system of Narthel and was once far larger than it is today, having diminished due to lessening water supplies (Pop. c. 16,600).
- DAVDEL NU: Geo. Pass across the UEFIR Highlands in the north east of NÁRTHEL.
- DAVFAR: Rel. Str. Monastery in the west of RHAMIA, home to devotees of nightmares. The monks who live here do so purposefully, so that the sleeping DEMIURGE VORROPOHAIAH can whisper to them in their sleep. They are considered mad by most and the monastery makes little contact with the outside world.
- DAVKA: Sea. Bay in the north of VENTHIR, to the south west of the DARK SEA.
- DAVYE: Set. Settlement in the south of VENTHIR, along the banks of lake OMARO (Pop. c. 10,000).
- $\underline{DAWAMAN}\!:$ Set. Settlement in the east of $\underline{NOAVATUR}$ (Pop. c. 7,500).
- DAWARKA: Set. Settlement in the north west of IACIO. Its main industry is ALUMINIUM mining (Pop. c. 4,000).
- DAWNBRINGER: also 'Aubadin'. Phil. Rnk. In GNOTH, a caste of GIGANRI whose daily prayers coincide with the rising of the sun. Dawnbringers are well-versed in the WAY OF THE DRAGON and are respected members of GIGANRI society there, though their demanding lives require them to sacrifice much of their liberty.
- DAWNVALE: Geo. Valley in KASPIA overlooking the south of the land. Is known for the temple that exists at the exact point where the sun strikes on the winter solstice.
- DAWN PALACE, the: Pol. Obj. Seat of TETHYSIAN power, situated on a coastal hill, surrounded by the city LYSITEAS.
- DAWN CROWN, the: Myr. Obj. His. A powerful artefact mentioned in the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN as having been made by SYNCHTHONITH and stolen by ASHTERATH, who wielded it for most of his life. The Crown was said to grant whoever wore it dominion over the skies and heavens. It was later stolen by the SCION TALMESH, who wore it throughout his life.
- DAWN STAR, the: Ast. Brightest and first star visible after dusk in the NORTHERN HEMISPHERE, commonly attributed to the DEMIURGE ASHTERATH. Though many assume it to be one of ELYDEN'S seven PLANETS visible to the naked-eyes, it is not so.
- DAWWAN: Rvr. Major river in the territories of ETHISTONITH in RHINOCOLOURA, flowing north for 750-miles from sources in the Upper

- $\underline{\text{DANOSOTH}}$ Mountains before meeting its parent, the river $\underline{\text{SHIBBOLETH}}^{(3)}.$
- DAYHOUSE: Soc. Str. Slavery is forbidden in J'THANA, which has led to some degree of difficulty with visiting foreigners, particularly merchants travelling the SALT ROAD, and diplomats, whose slaves are prohibited from travelling through the nation with them. To deal with this, dayhouses exist in many areas long the J'thanan border, where slaves are allowed a respite while their owners travel the nation.
 - Many slaves are given ideas of freedom while staying in these dayhouses, and foreign dignitaries with past experience of travelling in J'thana have learnt to travel there without slaves.
- DAYIB: Set. Coastal settlement in the south east of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES (Pop. c. 5,500).
- DAYLAM: Set. Major city in the region of ALBICA in the c south west of THE SURRACH. It is known for its gladiatorial games and mercenaries (Pop. c. 91,000).
- DAYS OF THE WEEK: Cal. In KORACHAN and those nations adopting the KORACHANI CALENDAR, there are ten days in a week, which are: AIONAL, DAIONAL, IDAIONAL, KAIONAL, IKAIONAL, KUAIONAL, and IKUAIONAL.* Regional dialects and languages have led to many different variations on these names, though they are generally recognisable. Traditionally, the seventh day, Ikuaional, is regarded as the holy day when weekly masses are held and most workers are given a day of rest.
- This system streamlined the earlier one, which had seven day weeks, and was introduced on the 1st of MALICHALEN 1199 RM following a conclave of lawmakers and influential members of the empire the previous year. See Vol II: Month and Lunar cycle in Elyden: Calendars.
- DAZAKUR: m. Mil. Pol. His. Per. (D. 3735 RM) MHAROKKIN champion who in 3704 RM united the disparate people of western Mharokk, from between the rivers CTHONA and LISSA during the WAR OF SUNDERING, establishing an independent demesne around the city of ALLAS that became known as ALLASAN. He was the first of the DORN KINGS, and the line ended with the disappearance of the 5th Dorn King ALABAS AZER III in 3887 RM, after which the region would be governed by a line of regents.
- DAZAN: 1. Headland to the south west of the BAND^(L) peninsula, protruding to the north west, creating a bottleneck and strait between the SEA OF ADAM in the north and the APHOTIS in the south. It is the south eastern-most territory of ALAM BETHYL, and is heavily guarded from both sea and land attack.
- 2. Mil. Str. Major coastal fortress in the south of ALAM BETHYL, overlooking the strait between the SEA OF ADAM in the north and the APHOTIS in the south. It guards entry across the strait, and its artillery and ships are the first line of defence against pirates and slavers from the south. It also commands a sizeable corps of land troops who patrol the Dazani $^{(1.)}$ headland
- DAZHAT: Sea. Body of water dividing the nations of ELAT and GYZHA.
- D'ARKHAN: (B. 3942 RM) Art. Well-known ALMAGESTI artist.
- DAUTHAZ, BATIK OF THE NAUTHANATIDS: (B. 3903 RM) *Pol.*Since 3991 RM, head BATIK of the NAUTHANATIDS a funerary cult based in the city of NEKOR in the north west of NARTHEL.
- DEACANIA: also 'City of the Eye'. Set. City in TRAKIA, known for its large number of HUMANS and OGHURS (largely a slave caste) that suffer from CYCLOCEPHALY. Such individuals are known to be closer to the ATRAMENTA than others, and those who are able-bodied study in the small Atramental university there (Pop. c. 20,000).
- DEAD MAN'S MAGGOT: Mil. Obj. In the KORACHANI EMPIRE, an oval copper plaque that is posthumously awarded to soldiers who die in battle, awarded to their families. Many of them are melted down for the metal or sold, making old ones relatively uncommon and a popular collectors' item amongst enthusiasts of military history. They are named after the slang term for a Korachani PENNY, otherwise known as a SKUD, due to them being the same material and shape.
- DEAD PLAINS, the: Geo. Region in the east of the territories of ETHISTONITH in RHINOCOLOURA, in a basin surrounded by the NAKARAS and TATRASAN Mountains. In c. 2000 RM it was a healthy scrubland, known for its many settlements of shepherds and cattle-drivers, but a series of devastating droughts between 2180-2280 RM, saw millions of herd animals starving and eventually dying of dehydration. Hundreds of settlements were likewise wiped out, their people either dying or fleeing to the north where the climate was not as severe. The region remains a desert to this day, the desiccated remains of livestock dotting the ground, reminding any foolish enough to travel there what awaits them.

DÉADESA: 1. Set. Small city in the south east of EREBETH, close to the border with CYHLAGHARR. Its main industry is the mining of iron (Pop. c. 14.900).

2. $\it{Mil. Str.}$ Fortress in the far south east of EREBETH, guarding the eponymous city from CYHLAGHARRI attack.

DEADHEAT: Lan. TEMUJAN term for summer.

DEALAN BATHS: Soc. Str. Hot baths outside the city of AMILLAERE^(2.) in the HENDECARCHY of Amillaere^(1.) in the c of MALAN. The Dealan Baths are a large resort complex where the rich and influential of Amillaere and other Hendecarchies holiday to indulge in deep relaxation and luxurious pampering.

The Baths also offer rejuvenation clinics that make use of modern ATRAMENTAL procedures pioneered in the INNER SEA REGION that can rejuvenate organs and prolong lifespans.

DEARTH: Sup. Geo. Dre. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED area in SAMMAEA, stretching from the southern border of PARAIYA to the north western border of AETHIOS, dominating over 160,000 square-miles of the north east of the UMBRA SOKHAR. Though Atramentally-active, its effects are not as dire as other such regions and temporary exposure has been found to be of little consequence to body and mind, though prolonged exposure to it remains detrimental to health, particular sanity. Those spending long within its borders, such as they are, have been known to become paranoid, with troubling DREAMS plaguing them.

The Dearth is known for its SHADOWISPS, which are created in its heart, and are carried on prevailing winds north east into N'RAKH and Aethios, poisoning that which they come to rest upon.

The region is categorised as LEAST CONCERN by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

DEAS: Ast. Con. Star in the constellation of ESTAL. See Vol II: Constellations.

DEATH-CULT: Rel. Org. Being one of the last of the classical nations assimilated by the KORACHANI EMPIRE, SARASTRO retained much of its cultural identity throughout Korachani rule; including its death-cults, who roots lie in the latter days of the SAOSTANAN DYNASTIES. Priests wear ritualistic masks and draw out the dying spirit, keeping it safe in a large canopic jar, which is sealed and large Solaria temples while the body is discarded. The practice became corrupted throughout imperial rule, with the death-masks remaining though stylistically evolving and the canopic jars becoming technarcane storage vats overseen by BATIKEARIN.

DEATH MASK: Soc. In JURRAS⁽²⁾, a common death ritual, where steel masks are nailed into the dead's faces. This makes the soul anonymous, making its journey into the OTHERWORLD safer. Those without the money or families to support such customs are buried without the masks: a sign of stigma.

DEATHLESS LADY: Pol. Ruler of XYRPHAAT, known as the VARHAI, who rules from the city of ARIMOTHA. Little is known about her in the NEAR HEMISPHERE but she is thought to be a powerful SHAPER, and possibly a BASILEAN or a SCIONIC CREATURE of some form.

DEBADI: Set. Settlement in the c north east of RHINOCOLOURA, known for its sizeable goat herds (Pop. c. 6,000).

DEBAKAK: (6,780-ft.) Geo. Volcano in the in the north west of the tribe of LEGEO, in the c south of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER.

DEBAN: Set. Settlement in the west of KORACHAN, around 25-miles west of DEOCHAN. It originated as a refugee shanty in c. 2500 RM where people displaced by the lowering sea levels settled, but coalesced into a permanent settlement within a few (Pop. c. 12,500).

DEBON: Set. Farming settlement in the c east of SAGITTARIA (Pop. c. 7,100).

DEBT BONDAGE: Soc. Pol. Peony is a practice where a debtor who fails to make repayments within the stipulated time is bonded to labour until a time as the lender sees fit. Lenders who take on bonded \underline{SLAVES} often inflate interests to make it impossible for the debtor to pay off their debts. When the bonded labourer dies, their debts may be passed on to their children.

This practice is old, and has largely fallen out of favour, being replaced with MODENTURED SERVITUDE. It remains common PELASGOS and YVÂRR, as well as some overseas colonies of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, such as CRASSULA, MELHUMBRA, and TAVVADRA.

DEBURA: Set. City in the c west of EREBETH. It forms part of the IVORY ROAD (Pop. c. 42,600).

DECARABIA: 1. Fau. Green bird native to THE OLD FOREST. Was seen as a bad omen by ancient PELASGOSI travellers. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

2. His. Str. One of three ancient towers (the other two being NARABIA and DANTALIA), located in the nation of AKACHA, just outside the extant city and capital of ATUL. The best-maintained of the three, it has been converted into the headquarters of the ORDER OF PEOSHK.

DECASSIA: Set. Fortified settlement in the far north of PORPHYR, in the contested lands of UTIMAN. It is a source of valuable iron there (Pop. c. 9,000).

DECAVAISA: Set: Settlement in the west of SABAISA. In 3526 RM it was the last city conquered by the JAHINN warlord ALDEBARRA, who with this act reunited the scattered warring cities of Sabaisa under his household banner (Pop. c. 100,000).

DECEBUS: Small city in the north of DACIA^(1.). Its main industry is salt panning (Pop. c. 13,000).

DECUSSATA: Set. Small city in the south west of KORACHAN. In c. 2140 RM it was targeted by the ARÂTHUAHI SANCTIFIED ORDER OF THE INQUISITION following reports of corruption. In a single night of fighting dozens of corrupt leaders and officials were rounded up and crucified on x-shaped crosses, where they starved to death, their bodies remaining in place as a symbol to others who would follow in their steps. Today the city is one of the more devout in Korachan and many of its people have gone on to be recruited in the Arâthuahi Order (Pop. c. 17,500).

DEDEIMUN: Rvr. River in the c of PARTHIS flowing for 775-miles from multiple sources along the eastern face of the BALAUR and SIPYLANA Mountains before meeting its parent, the river ESHMUN. The city of TAPUR has grown around the confluence of the two rivers.

DEDLEAGH: Pol. Str. Polar outpost in the far north west of LLACHATUL, at the edge of the WHITE SHEET, overlooking the SEA OF POLARIS, to the north of the ARERAQTH. Belonging to the above nation, the outpost is thought to be a hub where explorations of the White Sheet begin.

DEEP ARCANA: Int. Alc. Sup. Phil. Belief held by disparate scholars, SHAPERS and philosophers, in many cases independently devised, that there exists a level of mastery of the MATERIA OMNA that is completely unknown and unattainable by MORTALS, that is only known of through innate means by the ancient DEMIURGES and possibly their SCIONS and closest acolytes.

This Deep Arcana exists in a state that is so utterly beyond the comprehension of mortal senses that it cannot even be guessed at, but it likely to have been the means through which the Demiurges were able to shape the Materia Omna in what is mentioned in the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN as the ACTS OF SHAPING.

There are those who claim that mortals can yet attain an understanding of the Deep Arcana, either through ALCHEMICAL, OTHERWORLDLY, TECHNARCANE, or spiritual means, though most established schools of thought shun this hypothesis as ridiculous. Opinions differ on what would happen should the belief that mortals can obtain knowledge of Deep Arcana ever be realised. Some scholars maintain that the knowledge in-and-of itself would be more than enough to shatter a mortal mind, rendering the wielder a babbling idiot, though others say that they would ascend to a level of potency similar to that of the scions in their time of dominion over the MORTAL PEOPLES, or possibly even a Demiurge.

There are those who oppose active study in the field, out of fear of what discovery of ancient secrets might bring upon ELYDEN. It is likely that such primal archaic secrets were never intended for mortal comprehension and that unearthing them may change Elyden in ways that are as yet incomprehensible. See Vol IV: the Materia Omna.

DEEP SURRACH, the: Geo. KORACHANI term, coined during its exploration of the south east of THE SURRACH in c. 2300 RM. The term refers to the inaccessibility of the region as well as its sparse population, due to its climate and location along the TROPIC OF RAH.

DEEPER CHTHONIC MYSTERIES: Mys. Phil. Rel. Mystery cults in HOGGOTHA ISZ that revere ancient unknowable chthonic beings. Little is known of these cults, and what is known is likely tainted by lies and misinformation. The Mysteries are followed by HUMANS, SERAPIS, PLAGI, and other MORTALS that dwell in the unforgiving region expanse of Hoggotha Isz.

DEFEDATIA: Geo. Major region of ATRAMENTAL TAINT in the north of SARAGOS, crossing the border into the south of VENTHIR in parts. It occupies some 6,000-square-miles of dry rocky terrain in the region of AGGOSHETH, and is shunned by most. Those travelling close to it claim that the ground there is covered in thick black tar that grows thicker the farther into the taint one goes. An unnatural stench pervades the area, and the bodies of dead birds and other vermin that were drawn to their deaths pepper the region.

The region is categorised as a $\underline{\text{MODERATE THREAT}}$ by the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI}}$ $\underline{\text{INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES}}$.

DEFILER KINGS: Pol. His. SAOSTANAN DYNASTY that ruled between - 513 – -382 RM, made up of four rulers – Voragh the Defiler, RAKHAHANA, Reshab, and Habakukh.

They are remembered today for undoing much of the good that had been done by earlier dynasts. They were tyrants who cared little for the prosperity of the region. Granaries and coffers lay empty even as the Defiler kings erected more lavish and marvellous monuments in their honour. By the time of the last of the Defiler Kings, Habakukh, claimed the throne, Saostana had become a dead place, most of its cities reduced to shadows of their former selves. Habakukh died to the PLAGUE in –382 RM, leaving Saostana without heir.

DEGENERATE: 1. Sup. Mor. Soc. A form of ASICTHAI, that due to the influence of the ATRAMENTA, either direct or indirect, has degenerated both physically and mentally into a feral form. Today, degenerates are regarded as a race unto themselves, though they have developed independently in various areas around ELYDEN and their forms can vary wildly. The term can be used to both describe an afflicted individual born to able-bodied parents, or the child of two degenerates.

First recognised in c. 50 RM, following the growth of Atramental effects across Elyden, the problem continued to increase in magnitude throughout the next century, when such defects were becoming far too common. Most such children were culled at birth if the defects were readily apparent; the rest remaining with wealthy or loving families who could care for them.

Those who survived were stigmatised and shunned by their communities, and many were pushed away from civilisation, forced to live in the wildernesses and underworlds of their homes, with people believing them cursed by whatever deity they worshipped.

Over the years these degenerates would gather in the dark places that other shunned – sewers, ruins, dark forests and other places far from the discriminating eyes of others. In these places they would gravitate to one another for security and companionship, and they would eventually breed

In 2306 RM and sporadically in subsequent decades, the KORACHANI EMPIRE launched campaigns to rid its lands of the creatures, but they had become too pervasive. Eventually the more able-bodied degenerates were rounded up for use as manual slaves or processing in food manufactories or TECHNARCANE experiments. By c. 3000 RM they had become so pervasive that such efforts at eradicating them had been abandoned, and they became a common-enough sight in larger settlements, lurking in the dark alleys and undercities, where they became associated with blackmarkets and scavenging. They are particularly adept at navigating the sewers, vaults and ruins they make their homes.

The bodies of degenerates are twisted and scabrous, their eyes large and dark, their teeth misshapen and discoloured, their gums bleeding and foul, their limbs slender and grotesque, though no two degenerates are identical. They are naturally distrusting of unafflicted mortals, though individuals have been known to integrate, offering their services, which though considered base by most are invaluable when required.

Following the DISSOLUTION OF THE HIGH-EMPIRE OF KORACHAN, degenerates thrived in the ruins and deserted cities left behind. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life: Asicthai.

2. lit. 'poisoned body', also 'Vehenthai'. Sup. Mor. Commonly in the KORACHANI EMPIRE, name given to any creature, usually ASICTHAIN with a corrupted body. Unlike the common DEGENERATE^(1,), which is accepted as a species onto its own, this form of creature is truly an aberration, a one-off creature with no equal; sired by healthy parents, influenced in the womb by the ATRAMENTA. In this case the term can be used interchangeably with GROTESQUE. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life: Asicthai.

DEGENERATE EXODUS: Sup. Soc. His. Exodus of ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED creatures, such as DEGENERATES, after which the event is named, during the time of the SHADOW IN THE DESERT between c. -400 – 200 RM into surrounding lands. This largely occurred into the north, north east and east of SAMMAEA, as routes west and south were blocked by the KARKARMIS and ACHARKHARAN Mountains, respectively.

DEGISAAR: Geo. Island in the KORACHANI colony of MELHUMBRA off the north western coast of SAMMAEA.

DEGLIA SHUR: (B. 3379 – 3447 RM) Pol. His. One of three children born to the then-ruler of PNESSA, KARAN SHUR. Upon his death in 3388 RM her younger brother MITH had her and her elder brother MORTHA imprisoned in the tower of Eneph in the far east of Pnessa so that he could claim the throne. There, Deglia and Mortha maintained a small but loyal following that began working to secure their release, eventually gaining the support of the city of ENEPH as well as individuals close to the royal family in IRUT MARKA.

In 3402 RM Deglia and Mortha were freed from the tower of Eneph. In Irut Marka, supporters of their cause showed their colours and attempted a coup, but it was thwarted. Fighting broke out in major cities, devolving into a war that lasted till 3409 RM, becoming known as the WAR OF SECESSION. Mith was killed by Mortha in 3409 RM following a parley, though he was unable to claim the throne. With Mith's only heir still a child, leadership broke down in the capital as allies of the secessionists sowed discord.

A series of military blunders saw the armies of Pnessa falter against Eneph, leading to a ceasefire that ended in the signing of the independence of Eneph and the birth of the nation of Elekhid upon the marriage of Mortha and Deglia in 3409 RM, starting a new dynasty that rules to this day.

DEIARCH: His. Pol. Ancient ruling title of the city-state of KHYTER and, later, the kingdom of MINTHA (present-day THETIS). The title predates the appearance of Mintha by some 800 years and emerged in c. 1650 RM during colonisation efforts of RHEAN settlers, which had been based around the new city of Khyter since c. 1590 RM. The Deiarch was a hereditary patrilineal title, and various dynasties would go on to rule Mintha until c. 2860 RM, by which point the region had been suffering for centuries in the wake of the growing desertification of the RTHEI^(1.) desert. The nation fractured under growing infrastructural and economic strains, with its surviving cities coming to self-rule over the coming years. Over the next century the culture of the NEMIS nomads would spread, bringing the surviving cities together, leading to the foundation of Thetis as it is known today.

The Deiarch was famed for the SERPENT HELM that he wore, which was an ancestral heirloom created by the first Deiarch and handed down to successive rulers until the collapse of the kingdom, after which it was lost.

DEIBA: Set. Coastal settlement in the c east of LOEGRESS⁽¹⁾. It was the site of an ancient sea battle and its waters are renowned for their many shipwrecks (Pop. c. 3,900).

DEII: Sup. SAUAN shapers who recognise the sovereignty of the SLEEPING QUEEN, guarding her against harm from dissident contemporaries and the Diadon PRIME DARASSIN. Many of them are halfbloods who are her descendants, marginalised by the Diadon, since the Sleeping Queen entered her catatonic state.

DEII, SANCTUARY OF: Rel. Org. Monastic order of SHAPERS who follow the philosophy known as the PATH OF THOUGHT in western SAUA, close to the border with the HARÉSHK in the foothills of the western Mountains.

DEINAR: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the north of ALTHA^(2.), guarding entrance into the BAY OF ESTRUCHA^(1.).

DEINON, KING OF UCHRON: (b. 3932 RM) Pol. King of UCHRON, in the HARÉSHK, was killed during the siege of the city towards the end of the WAR OF SCOURGING, which left Uchron in ruins, its lands poisoned by the ATRAMENTA. The capital was later moved to DANILAT.

DEIRA: Pol. Set. Major coastal city in the c east of LOEGRESS⁽¹⁾, often mistaken for its capital (which is actually the much smaller CAER SIDI). It is centred around a great classical citadel that is kept in pristine condition by its classical history-obsessed rulers and has a large port and harbour, where most foreign trade and cargo makes its way into the city (Pop. c. 827,000).

DEITHO: 1. Pol. Geo. One of five emirates of the SECULAR EMIRATES OF LIMOTH, located in the c west of the nation. Its northern-most expanses are characterised by rocky and highland terrain, forming the southern-face of the Kotha Icholligha Mountains, and its south is dominated by the LITHUROVEAN rainforest.

The other states are $\underline{\text{LIMOTH}}^{(2)}$, $\underline{\text{NIMALO}}^{(1)}$, $\underline{\text{OTHOTEL}}^{(1)}$, and $\underline{\text{UKOLIST}}$.

2. Pol. Set. Capital city of the eponymous emirate within LIMOTH^(1.), located in the c north of the state (Pop. c. 192,000).

DEKARAIA: Rel. Dei. Artificial deity worshipped by the people of NASTAL⁽²⁾. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

DEKANA: 1. Sca. Sea to the south of the SEA OF AZAM, serving as a border between the east of JURRAS^(2.) and the north east of KARAKHAS.

2. Pol. Set. Capital of KARAKHAS since c. 1100 RM, when the old city of SERKAN was eschewed in favour of a coastal capital closer to KORACHAN at the mouth of the river NEGHIRREN. In the centuries since, the mouth of the river Neghirren has moved farther north, leaving the city around 6-miles away from the coast, though the river still serves as a link to the Sea. It is a major stop along both the RED ROUTE and the SALT ROAD, and its harbours and storage yards are full of produce (Pop. c. 410,000).

DEKIN: Geo. Mountain-range in IZABAL^(1.), dividing the wooded region of ABERRO TAL in the south west from the plains and hills to the east.

DEKISRAMEK. Mys. The most common of the three houses of BLOOD MAGICK, with the widest applications. It is most commonly associated with manipulation of the body, though most blood magi are limited by a specific assortment of usually linked abilities. See Vol IV: Other Forms of Mysticism.

DEL: Soc. Obj. Item of TEMUIAN clothing, a full body dress, worn by men as well as women, resembling a caftan.

DELA: 1. Pol. Duchy in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of EDICULE^(1.).

Set. Coastal city in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of EDICULE⁽¹⁾. It is part of the Great Road trade-roue, and is known for its sale of slaves that have been caught in SAUAN and KHAMIDIAN waters (Pop. c. 42,500).

DELEGATORY PRAYERS: Soc. Rel. A common practice across the Inner Sea Region where the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE are prevalent, where people (usually of high social standing) pay others (usually of low social standing, or the elderly) to pray on their behalf. Those who take on these delegatory prayers are typically members of the FUNEREAL SODALITIES.

Large cities have large monasteries filled with people in pewter masks and wearing black robes, who spend their days in prayer. These halls are overseen by the Sodalities themselves or the respective church, depending on their location.

DELFA: 1. Geo. Deep natural cleft, 75-miles long, running through the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOMS of MEDES and NICADA. 100 ft. below sea level at its lowest, before levelling out into a simple valley in c Medes. Delfa has become a well-travelled pass, linking the central and southern regions of the Haréshk. A walled citadel stands in the midspan of the cleft, grown from a caravanserai that appeared c. 2900 RM.

2. Set. Great walled citadel in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of MEDES⁽¹⁾ that lies within a natural cleft in the HARÉSHK. The citadel rose from a caravanserai that existed there since at least 2350 RM, becoming a city by c. 2900 RM. It was a strong bastion during the civil uprisings of 2918 RM, weathering the war that engulfed the Haréshk in the subsequent decades, and is today a major city along the route of the Great Road (Pop. c. 79,000).

DELIA: 1. Geo. Mountain in the c of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of MEDES.

2. Geo. Grasslands and hills in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of MEDES.
3. Set. Fortified city in the c west of TRAKIA, in the north of SAMMAEA. The city is dominated by the series of star-forts which originated as KORACHANI fortifications (Pop. c. 42,000).

DELIA REYNE: f. Per. (B. 3953 RM) High-ranking member of the CONCORDANTIST ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION. Officially a High-OBSCURATOR, she is an expert in propaganda, specifically in manipulating current events to be more 'palatable' to the masses in an effort to avoid eliciting extreme reactions.

She has a close relationship with most major news outlets across the KORACHANI EMPIRE, vetoing sensitive topics and censoring them before they are deemed to be fit for release. As such, she has a reputation for being a stoic figure of fearful countenance, whose loyalty to the empire and belief in the importance of her job are absolute.

DELIASHANA: His. Ntn. Now-extinct state in the east of SAMMAEA, in what are the present-day lands of SOLEYN, the west of SUOR and the east of MULCIBER from c. 900 – 1328 RM. The state was known for its large SHIE population, and was ruled by the tyrant AMENABAST, a sadistic otherworlder whose slaying in 1328 RM at the hands of the mortal champion RAHANKHEN I, led to the rapid downfall of Deliashana. Amenabast had all written histories expunged, so little is now known of the early FIFTH AGE history of the region, though the people of Deliashana spoke a language called DEMIAN, which was already fully-formed when Amenabast took control. See Vol III: Extinct States.

DELIAH: Set. Capital city and the first settled area in the nation of HALEDONIA (Pop. c. 131,000).

DELIS: Pol. Duchy in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of MEDES.

DELLARA: Mil. Str. Fortress in the far north east of VAALK, overlooking THE INNER SEA, and the BAY OF EDARA.

DELOMIG: also 'the Diamond Gaol. Geo. Region in the c north of SARASTRO, covering some 25,000 square-miles, and is known for its diamond mines. The region is home to dozens of strip-mines, now operated by the Sarastroan government (most of which were created by the KORACHANI EMPIRE), which uses unnumbered thousands of slaves. Many such quarries were spent during the Korachani empire's ravenous mining, and they remain now as blights upon the surface of Sarastro.

The region is heavily guarded with many towers and a strong military presence there, as well as private patrician-owned forces guarding individual mines.

Local legend has it that in ages past a race of immortals once thrived in the area. Over years its people grew decadent and they were cursed by HAGE to forever be as the riches they so-desired, and they were imprisoned beneath the plains of their homeland as diamonds. The myth survives in various forms amongst the nomads and herders of Sarastro, propagated by the occasional diamond-find.

DEMAGOGUE PULPIT: Rel. Str. Guard towers located along the course of the SHADOW MARCH in KHARKHARADONTIS. They are equipped with loudspeakers that ceaselessly drone prayers and litanies to pilgrims undergoing the March. They are well-guarded and are a ubiquitous sight along the march, often accompanied by a CENOBITE shrine.

DEMANA: Set. City in the c east of IMEAL (Pop. c. 73,000).

DEMENTIA PLAGUE: Sup. Med. Plague of FIRMAMENTAL origin that leaves those afflicted by it with decreased memories, unstable emotions, and senility, that is common in parts of MENISCEA. Outbreaks occur approximately every 20 – 30 years and last for 5 years before dying down, and typically originate in the north east of SHAZGIN and spread to the east, across LARISH^(2.). FATH, LAOD, PHUT, CAMAU, ENDUI, EGINAZ, OBLEVIS, and DHA NAR, depending on trade and traffic between cities and across nations.

There are few known cures, and once afflicted, an individual is likely to spend their lives suffering from the effects. As a result, hospices that care for sufferers are common in the above regions, particularly in Shazgin. See Vol II: Diseases and Illnesses.

DEMARAJA: Pol. Rnk. Highest ruling title in the CITIZENRY OF THALI, controlling large swathes of land typically containing dozens of cities, each of which is in turn ruled by a RAJA. Many Demarajas are SHAPERS, using this position to increase their prestige and renown, regardless of their true talents.

DEMERA: Set. Settlement in c AHRISHEN that was once a major port at the edge of the SEA OF DEMERAL. The retreat of the sea left the city landlocked and greatly diminished in size. It remains now as a pastoral region (Pop. c. 6,200).

DEMERAL: Rvr. Expansive region of plains and marsh wetlands in the west of AHRISHEN, that until c. 3000 – 3200 RM was a shallow sea, stretching as far east as the city of DEMERA. It is now an expansive region that becomes waterlogged in summer (following runoff from melted snows in the Mountains surrounding AHRISHEN that makes its way into the interior) and periods of heavy rain.

Depositions from the river $\underline{ARESH}^{(2)}$ throughout the waning of the \underline{SEA} $\underline{OF\ PYREA}$ over the past millennium have made the region fertile, bringing wildlife and agriculture to it.

Attempts were made to stall the wane of the Pyrea, particularly between c. 3420 – 3540 RM, but the efforts were futile and ultimately abandoned, though the remnants of the old dykes and dams can be seen in various areas of the Demeral, which is also peppered with old coastal settlements which have either adapted to their new land-locked status or been abandoned and left to ruin.

Ahrisheni STILT-WALKER culture emerged from this region around 800 – 1,000 years ago and has spread across the rest of Ahrishen since then.

DEMETHUUN: also 'the Black Place'. An ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region in the c-south east of VENTHIR. Known simply as the Black Place to those who live nearby, it is known for its fine black sand that will shred the insides of anyone who inhales or ingests it. Only the most well-made softsuits will allow an individual to traverse the desert without fear of injury, and over the years the sand has been used as an aid in assassination across the ARID TRIPTYCH.

DEMETRESIA: Geo. For. Sparse woodlands and scrubland in the north east of IO, stretching north into eastern SALOROC and the west of SARASTRO.

DEMEVEDARAS: m. Myr. His. Per. Dre. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, a SCION of the DEMIURGE SYBARIS. His body is presently buried beneath the city of SEROMNIA in the VORANDINE, and is the centre of a cult of hedonism. The presence of his body in the city has resulted in a faint DREAMSCAPE, that sees its residents affected by a sense of euphoria that makes all senses far more sensitive to external stimuli. Their DREAMS are populated by carnal images that they act upon after waking. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

DEMIAN: His. Lan. Now-extinct language spoken in the early FIFTH AGE state of DELIASHANA, though which originated in an even earlier Fifth Age state whose details were erased by the tyrant of Deliashana, the otherworlder AMENABAST. As a result, little is known of the roots of the language.

DEMIGOD: Pol. Rel. Rnk. The children of any of the GOD-KINGS of TETHYSIA. This lives are marked by extremes of privilege and tragedy, for they are showered with adulation and are shepherded into esteemed vocations, with some becoming missionaries, generals, and diplomats of great renown, however these lives are often cut short for they are slain with their divine father the God-king upon the appointment of a new God-king.

Many simple accept this faith, having been indoctrinated to their peoples' custom throughout their entire lives, though others come to shirk the duties that their birthright brings with it, and descend into lives of debauchery and opulence, trying to forget their inevitable expiration. Others flee Tethysia upon the end of their father's tenure, living the rest of their days in exile.

The people of Tethysia regard them with extreme respect and endure the more sadistic ways of some demigods, though most end up devoting their lives in service to $\underline{KATHISIS}^{(2)}$.

DEMIGOURGA: Pol. Ser. Capital city of CANNOS, along the north western coast of BROR^(1.). The city features in many ancient legends from the NEAR HEMISPHERE, and it is purported to have been the site of a great conclave in the mythic history of ELYDEN, where various scions met as envoys of their divine parents (Pop. c. 927,200).

DEMIHIER: Soc. Rnk. Noble title in VENTHIR, common since c. 500 RM, the naming of which bestows certain religious privileges upon the person.

DEMIRUTI: Set. Coastal settlement in the far west of ALMAGEST, in its territories east of the BLACK MOUNTAINS. The settlement is built over the ruins of an indigenous MULL fortress that was attacked and destroyed in 3624 RM and is now a centre of slavery in the Almagesti lands east of the Black Mountains (Pop. c. 5,250).

DEMIS: Cur. Currency around ALLASAN, KETESH, and the south of VAALK. See Vol II: Currency and Coinage in Elyden.

DEMITHO SHOSHATHANI: His. Ancient beings predating any other in ELYDEN. They are whispered of in ancient PELASGOSI myth, where they were primordial creatures created before time, and destroyed because they could not be contained. The scholar CIDASUS examined ancient neolithic ruins that were positioned over a filled-in sinkhole and found mention of them there. Today they are often equated to the MESOCHTHONS or the FORGOTTEN ONES.

DEMIURGE: Mys. His. The creators and shapers of the MATERIAL PLANE. There were Two-and-Twenty Demiurges mentioned in the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN, created by THE SHAPER to manipulate the MATERIA OMNA into the Material Plane and all the PLANETS and stars that exist with it – the so-called ORBS OF LIFE.

Their actions were both directly and indirectly, responsible for the creation of all mortal life upon ELYDEN in what is now regarded as the FIRST AGE OF SHAPING. They were once worshipped as gods across Elyden, and drew strength from the devotion of the Two-and-Twenty MORTAL PEOPLES, though through corruption and the passage of time, the mortals distanced themselves from the Demiurges, causing them to dwindle in influence, stature and divinity.

They were great SHAPERS and together they crafted the Materia Omna into the MATERIAL PLANE that we see and experience today. Though tasked to prepare Elyden for the appearance of the so-called IMMORTAL PEOPLES, they continued in their shaping even after Elyden had reached the point of perfection, causing the IMMORTAL SEEDS to be born before their time. This led to the corruption of the immortal races into the Mortal peoples and the shattering of The Shaper's great plan.

The Demiurges were punished and stripped of their divine link, causing them to grow weaker. Many amongst them despaired or grew mad following this time, which is commonly regarded as the start of their downfall into torpor or even death.

Knowledge of the Demiurges is fragmented at best, though scholars, INTELLIGENTSIA and other learned individuals may know at least the basics of their history, though they may not understand the true weight of such knowledge. Even the work-slaves and HELOTS of the KORACHANIEMPIRE know fragments of the legends that surround the Demiurges, through their myths and legends, and even though the people of the empire worship the Demiurge RACHANAEL as the UNDYING MACHINE, few are those who know it or realise the true meaning of their actions.

This it true around Elyden, and people revere idols and entities without knowing that they are their deities are often the result of millennia of corrupted beliefs.

In order of their naming in the Mythologia Elyden, the Demiurges were: ALLAISHADA, ASHTERATH, DURUTHILHOTEP, TALANTEHUT, SYNCHTHONITH, IALDABAOTH, RACHANAEL, URAKABARAMEEL, BAPHOMET, ARIMASPI, SHIBBOLETH, NEITH⁽¹⁾, DOPELLANICH, NERGAAL, SYBARIS⁽¹⁾, NYARLOTH, MALACHAI, AVRAHAM, KHARANI, ACHAIAH, VORROPOHAIAH, and RYHASSHARAUCH. See Vol IV: the Two-and-Twenty Demiurges.

DEMIURGE RENAISSANCE: Pol. His. Period in KORACHANI history related to the earlier RENAISSANCE CRUSADES, marking an increased scepticism and questioning of imperial culture and its religious teachings and oppressions, characterised by artists and scholars who sought to understand the truth of the world outside the empire.

The movement was named after one of the major focuses of its proponents – the DEMIURGES of old, knowledge of which had been largely excised from records and the public consciousness to further the propaganda of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE – though it was in no way restricted to the Demiurges as subjects, with individuals seeking truth in art and the science, as well as lands outside of the empire's influence.

This period in its associated movement is considered to have lasted from c. 1540 – 1620 RM, and was at its strongest in the Korachani vassal state of AZAZEM. Both the imperial government and the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE reacted harshly to those who openly questioned traditional mores and dogma, and individuals were branded heretics and executed for their so-called crimes, causing word of the movement to travel farther, reaching a broader audience.

The organised response to the Renaissance is now thought by many to have been spearheaded by the ARCHBISHOP (later ARCHBISHOP MAGNUS) VAMAS MICHAELLOS DUCAS, who poured church funds into a defence that quelled massed gatherings across imperial cities, and executed the leaders of the movement.

Proponents of the Demiurge Renaissance made major strides in art and science, as well as shaping and abstract notions such as social awareness, though much of their work was destroyed by the empire and its church in the ensuing centuries. Notable remnants of the period include works of art, including paintings and sculptures, though it is though that some scientific breakthroughs were retained from the public and implemented in private endeavours, free of their socio-political roots.

DEMIURGES: also 'the Demiurges'. Ast. Con. Constellation in the NORTHERN HEMISPHERE, comprised of 22 stars and named after the DEMIURGES of old. Few are those who know the meaning of the name today. See Vol II: Constellations.

DEMIURGES, TEMPLE OF THE: Rui. Ancient structure in the south west of Sammaea, to the south of the Acharkharan Mountains. It is thought to be a relic from the Second Age, when the Demiurges were still divine. It is now a hollow ruin, surrounded by lifeless deserts, dark skies and the fossils of alien sea creature embedded in the crumbling rocks.

DEMIURNE: Int. Mor. Descendants of the PLAGI, who were the mortal children originally entrusted to the aegis of the DEMIURGE RACHANAEL. They remained in DAEKYN following Rachanael's imprisonment there in the FOURTH AGE, their blood now diluted by breeding with HUMANS, an act that has over the millennia left them looking more like humans than plagi, though they have red irises and greyish skin, not dissimilar to the ETHERI nomads.

Found by the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR in 212 RM, they immediately recognised him for what he was and supported his pursuit to free Rachanael and further the prophecy from the SCRIPTURE OF SHADOW. They guided Malichar after his restoration to life, and indeed, some accounts claim that it was a demiurne SHAMAN who brought Malichar back to life.

They accompanied him during his sojourn in NYALAR, after which they begin construction of the LEADEN THRONE in Daekyn, around which would later be erected the SEPULCHRAL PALACE, to which they became its wardens and bearers of the technologies that sustain it. It was during their time in Nyalar, c. 332 – 338, that they first began breeding with the crazed human technarcane fanatics of the cult of the NYARALA. Soon after this the AIWAHAN ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION was founded, which counts many demiurnes amongst its members to this day, whose expertise in maintaining ancient technologies (foremost amongst them the Leaden Throne itself, and the INVOCATION ENGINES that power the temples the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE).

Since that time, the demiurnes continue to dwell in human lands – primarily within the TWIN EMPIRES, the INNER SEA, and the PORPHYRI PENINSULA areas. Now they are the techno-priests of the Sepulchral Palace as well as other religious structures in the above regions, where they are often seen with DVERG workers and HAEMACOLYTE servants. Renowned for their BIOMECHANICAL implants, they are secretive, guarding their knowledge of the UNDYING MACHINE'S identity and history with silent devotion.

Their allegiance to Malichar and the Undying Machine transcend any racial, political, or religious identities, and a demiurne travelling in foreign lands can depend on his kin for support and hospitality regardless of what nation of empire they may be in.

DEMIURNE, CULT OF: Tec. Org. TECHNARCANIST cult in the KORACHANI EMPIRE. As the name implies, the cult is comprised of DEMIURNES, who make up a small but vital part of imperial populace. Specifically, members of the cult are responsible for the maintenance of the more archaic technologies that keep the empire in working order, including the mechanism known as the LEADEN THRONE, that sustains the UNDYING MACHINE. The Cult is prevalent within the AIWAHAN ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION, where most demiurnes can be found.

DEMM: Geo. KORACHANI collective name for the BORDER MOUNTAINS that surround TEMUJA.

In many imperial accounts the Mountains of Demm are a seen as a natural border between the lands of the ATRAMENTA in the west and the lands of the FIRMAMENT in the east. While not precise, this is roughly correct, with the Mountains crossing the path of the NULLAMBIT.

DEMON BOMB, the: His. Obj. Historical ATRAMENTAL BOMB that mistakenly detonated while in transit in the north of the UMBRA SOKHAR in 3720 RM. The explosion devastated around 5,000 square-miles of land that slowly increased in size, to around 10,000 square-miles today, leaving the afflicted region as ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED wasteland filled with duststone formations, sinkholes and caves, all of which are dangerous to mortals.

DEMONSGATE: Rel. Str. Temple constructed within a steep-sided crater in the southern foothills of the CHACTHORNYS Mountains in the far north of AZAZEM. The temple dates back to a previous age, its hewn temple walls testament to the artistry and devotion of its creators. Dominating the temple is a large basalt-like statue of a demon, Set. inside a great arch on one side of the crater wall. Little is known about the site, only that the region immediately around it is filled with barely visible ruins – indications of a once-thriving culture that is now extinct. The statue is thought to be built of meteoric material (adamantine) that was excavated from the heart of the crater.

DENA: Set. City in the north west of NORTHERN SIMBARA, on the end of the eponymous peninsula, just south of the SEA OF AMASAL (Pop. c. 49,000).

DENACRA: Ser. Last known VALTHAS city in ELYDEN, located along the equator, 94°45'20" west, within the western territories of HOGGOTHA ISZ. The area surrounding the city is known as one of the most distant places from the coast and dominates the parched centre of the SAMMAEAN continent. It is dry beyond reckoning and wholly inimical to mortal life, forgotten by all but the most strident of scholars.

The city is a relic from ancient times, little more than a fossil that somehow continues to survive. It is a place covered in dust and rot. The valthas haunt the ruins of their city, carrying out their last commands on an endless loop. Most were labourers and slaves to a ruling caste of higher thought, and thus continued working in quarries and mines, stripping the earth of its resources, slowly adding to their city.

Millennia later and the lands surrounding the city have become a morass of spent mines, open-cast pits and quarries, some reaching hundreds of miles around, every stone and item of value drawn from them taken back to the city, which continues to be repaired in an increasingly haphazard fashion to this day. As the orders imprinted onto their consciousnesses slowly decayed, so too did their implementation of them, leading to maddening labyrinthine streets and maddening structures without purpose or ascetic value. Indeed, the few mortal travellers who have seen Denacra describe it as a place of despair and cacophonic winds amplified by its strange winding streets (Pop. unknown).

DENDERA: Set. Major coastal city in the north of KHAMID, known for its shipyards and ports (Pop. c. 308,000).

DENDYDRIS: f. Myt. His. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, the SCION of the DEMIURGES ACHAIAH and ARIMASPI.

She is believed to have lived in the forests of what are now the south east of SAMMAEA. Various passages of the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN describe her as a tree given mortal form, and for having an affinity for trees and plants, drawing strength from them, much as her parents drew strength from their mortal worshippers. This allowed her to live for thousands of years, a trait that was passed down to her three known children – OKSHANA, IPOMEA, and CASSIA (4.) – who were also long-lived, passing on their mother's traits to their own offspring. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

DENEM: Set. Settlement in the west of SABIA, in the region of URGRORD. Its main industry is the mining of Iron (Pop. c. 6,900).

DENERYX: Mil. Str. One of two major fortifications built in the empire of NEANDARA (present-day RHINOCOLOURA) in 3280 RM, the other being the tower of LEKHERYX. The towers were constructed to defend the northern borders of Neandara from possible attack from the north, specifically from the KORACHANI EMPIRE, though they were never used and fell into ruin after the collapse of Neandara in 3470 RM.

DENGEDDAR: also 'Mortals' Zenith'. Int. Rui. His. Mys. Arc. Ancient THIRD AGE monolithic MORTAL engineering project in what is now the region of PITTILAYA in the c north west of IMEAL. It was built to be as imposing and large as possible and was surrounded by a great colonnaded courtyard surrounded by colossi and terraced gardens in which were planted the largest trees found in ELYDEN – altogether a hubristic cenotaph to the power and ingenuity of mortals that utterly forsook the Demiurges, whose reign over Elyden was waning by then.

It was annihilated by TALANTEHUT and her VALTHAS children in what became a war mired in atrocity and bloodshed. She cursed the land surrounding the structure, of which nothing remains today, the stones once used in its construction blasted and scattered for miles around, all trace of its original purpose removed.

DENGUEA: 1. For. Jungle just north of the equator in the east of CHEIRA, in the SAMMAEA, west of the SEA OF MOSASA. The region has advanced rapidly following the retreat of coastal waters, and is now a disease-ridden wetland. Ancient stepped ruins dot the region, bearing cultural motifs that are seen in the headland of IRKALLA^(1.) in the west of CUTH, indicating that the CHILDREN of the DEMIURGE NERGAAL may have settled the area in ages past.

2. Rvr. River in the east of CHEIRA, flowing east for 320-miles from sources in the YGGOUAGO Mountains, before emptying in the SEA OF MOSASSA.

DENIM: Fas. Obj. Sturdy cotton-based textile that is mass-produced in automated manufactories and used extensively by labourers across the Inner Sea Region, particularly in mining and farming, where dungarees and jeans are the most common garments made from the fabric.

PATRICIAN HOUSE SAPHRAX is renowned for its large denim manufactories located in AZAZEM and LAASKHA that supply labourers across the Inner Sea Region with industrial garb.

DENIMAL: Set. Fishing settlement in the south of THUMAL (Pop. c. 16,500).

DENIN: Set. Small coastal city in the far west of KAZZAR^(2,), in the peninsula of UNARALOTT overlooking the IGUZZEN lagoon to the south and the BAY OF SHIAAN to the north (Pop. c. 12,000).

DENNA: 1. Geo. Hills dominating the north east of HITTA, on which most of its vineyards and OLIVE groves are located. Half-buried FOURTH AGE ruins dot the region, though there is little of note to be found there.

2. Set. Fortified city in the east of HITTA. It is a major producer of OLIVE oil (Pop. c. 19,000).

DEOBRASHIA: Geo. Headland in the east of MENISCEA, overlooking the north western-most part of the SEA OF LYNNAE. It is now occupied by the PARTHISAN colony of EZHIRAYA (2.).

DEOCHAN: 1. Sca. Bay in the west of KORACHAN, named after the city that is situated along its shores.

2. Set. Metropolis situated on a long slender peninsula in an inlet on the western-coast of KORACHAN, with quarters on both flanking coastlines, it is renowned for its steel mills and vast shipyards and dry-docks, which are home to the heart of the Korachani navy. It was one of the original seven Korachani CITY-STATES. HOUSE RHEGA is the dominant PATRICIAN family in Deochan, and controls most of the shipyards and land in the region. The city is home to the LANGUE(1.) of the KYONI ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION, which was founded there in 96 RM. The city has been regraded, and moved multiple times at great cost, to combat the slow wane of ELYDEN'S seas. As a result, its coastline is very steep and edged in stepped concrete tiers, to allow descent to the sea's edge.

The city is also renowned for its many scientific institutions and places of higher learning, and is also a hub of the arts, with many theatres and museums, making it a popular stop along the GRAND TOUR.

It is also known for the large dump that is situated outside its steep northern walls, in which bottles, tins, and jars have been disposed of over millennia, including more recent additions, such as machinery, scrap and broken tyres or track links. The dump is frequented by SCAVS who live there outside of the structure of the city proper, scavenging for goods to use or sell in the city's markets and merchants arriving into the city via the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 1,750,000).

DEOCHAN, OBSERVATORY OF: Edu. Ast. Str. College of astronomers and cartographers 10-miles north west of the city of DEOCHAN. The PRIME MERIDIAN is commonly recognised to lie along the longitude that passes through the College, after the works of the cartographer SIMOLEUS, since 1832 RM.

DEOTOTH MUAKKAR: (B. 3942 RM) Pol. Present ruler of LIMOTH^(1.) and SUPREME LEADER of the SECULAR EMIRATES OF LIMOTH, an autocratic government that has ruled Limoth since 3573 RM.

DEPARTMENT OF EXAMINATIONS: Pol. Political department in KEPHUAAN that oversees the qualification process through which individuals can apply to sit on the COUNCIL OF MERIT. The department is known for its strict policies and impartiality – no individual is favourited over another and councillors attain their positions through merit alone.

DEPHON: Cur. Main currency in CHEIRA, also used in OKKHAM, as well as PNESSA and SERROK, amongst merchants and major markets. Its official mint was in c. 2774 RM, after the unification of the DIVIDED EMPIRE. See Vol II: Currency and Coinage in Elyden.

DEPON: Set. Settlement in the east of IPANAH^(2.). It originated as a slaver outpost, where KORACHANI slavers operated under control of HOUSE CROTON.

The city, like most of Ipanah was abandoned by Korachan in the wake of the SUNDERING OF THE KORACHANI EMPIRE in 3705 RM. Depon remained under the control of House Croton for some decades as Ipanah began to self-govern, though it was eventually overthrown in 3752 RM (Pop. c. 33,000).

DEPURA: Set. Coastal settlement in the south east of SABAISA. It is known for its natural spring and the mineral water that it is said to have restorative qualities (Pop. c. 10,000).

DER: Sea. Crater-like bay on the island-nation of SAELEH. The crater is around 45-miles wide, and a 5-mile-wide bay exists at its base. In antiquity the bay was much larger with only the steep sides of the crater above water.

DERACINANT: Set. Small fortified city in the far east of THE SURRACH, close to the border with KHALHAI. It is known for its amethyst mines, which are worked by prison labour (Pop. c. 20,000).

DERAEIA: Pol. Tenth of the HENDECARCHIES of the FOREST KINGDOMS, located in the east of MALAN. Its capital is the city of MORDANT (2.), and it is ruled by the HENDECARCH ULLISANDRA ONNERI.

Found in the temperate zone, Deraeia is dry and cool, and is one of the most mountainous regions of Malan. FIRMAMENTAL effects in the region make much of its north eastern areas hotter than they otherwise should be, resulting in the parched region of SARANTHIA. It is one of the oldest regions in Malan, and though it was one of the last territories to be absorbed by the ancient kingdom of AMILLAERE⁽²⁾, it is filled with far older ruins dating to the FOURTH AGE and beyond.

In 1922 RM princess $\underline{\text{EWHA}}$ married into the merchant house of $\underline{\text{TISHANNA}}$ (present-day $\underline{\text{TISARA}}$) establishing a new monarchy there over which she became queen regent, establishing close ties between the two states that lasted until the assassination of queen $\underline{\text{SHIRAT}}$ in 2513 RM.

DERAEA: Sca. Gulf to the north of the SEA OF URAN, and dividing the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOMS from each other. The sea is relatively deep and remains largely fertile with some fishing taking place there.

DERAKHAR: Rvr. River in the c north of RHINOCOLOURA, flowing north west for 400-miles from sources in the SIRI RAH and NORERAEL Mountains before meeting its parent, the river. SHIBBOLETH.

DERAMA: Set. Settlement in the north of PELASGOS, in the hills east of the BULOPARRI MASSIF. A number of mines are situated north of the settlement, excavating gold and other ores (Pop. c. 6,100).

DERASPA: Set. Coastal settlement in the south east of OPHIUSSA (Pop. c. 5,000).

DERATOALA: Pol. Set. Capital of the HENDECARCHY of NHORA, in the north east of MALAN. It is nestled in a shallow highland valley, and is relatively isolated and well-defended. The lands to the north east of the city are populated by wild INDRIKS, which are its official animal and feature on its emblem. The city originated in the post NAHORIAN landscape as an outpost for itinerant indrik riders, whose descendants eventually settled the region, founding a settlement that grew steadily in the isolation afforded by the THARORAT Mountains. Acolytes of the mystic DARHAM arrived in the region in c. 2700 RM, bringing their philosophy with them, which remains popular there to this day (Pop. c. 320,000).

DERAUC: Rui. Ruined city in the north west of SAMMAEA, in the IALO ABGAN region within the north of extant TAL ZHAAN. It originated in c. 2100 RM, though really grew powerful following the nearby discovery of an ancient MAGICKAL SOULSTONE idol that came to be known as EZROKAHAELL in c. 2400 RM. The idol was taken to the town, where it came to be worshipped by its people. The town prospered under the aegis of the idol, and grew in both size and influence, though knowledge of the idol and its magickal properties were kept secret from outsiders.

The Sorcerer-lord TAL learnt of the secretive cult in 2875 RM and requested an audience before the idol, which was refused. Enraged, he vowed that he would possess the idol. Two years later he declared war on the city and following a gruelling 2-year siege, finally succeeded in defeating the city's inhabitants, claiming the idol as his own, and razing the city to the ground, salting the earth around it. It remains a ruin to this day, though over time has become a popular site of pilgrimage to followers of the CHURCH OF EZROKAHAELL. In c. 3620 RM a shrine was built atop the site of the original temple where the idol was housed.

DEREK: 1. Cur. The official currency of AHRISHEN. See Vol II: Currency and Coinage in Elyden.

2. Cur. The official currency of the OLD FOREST. See Vol II: Currency and Coinage in Elyden.

DEREKTU: Set. Small fortified coastal city in the south of the independent region of ANAGAR, west of RAONGEN^(2.) (Pop. c. 15,000).

DERELUTH: Set. Settlement in c west of EZASUH^(2.) (Pop. c. 10,000).

DERIKO: 1. Pol. Before the unification of SAUA in 3108 RM, Deriko was the name of one of the FIVE THRONES of SA'WEH.

2. Set. Small fortified city in the south west of SAUA along the shores of river SHIMACHI in the region of MELAIA (Pop. c. 15,400).

DERKA: Set. Settlement in the north west of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of PALUS^(1,). The settlement is situated in the south eastern foothills of the ASHER Mountains and lies along a trade-route west with AHRISHEN (Pop. c. 8,500).

DERKAZ: 1. Sea. Strait dividing the island of CRETA from mainland VAALK, and serving as one of two channels between the seas of FOR and AZAM.

2. Set. Old Jurrasi⁽²⁾ capital, which was supplanted by SAMARIS with the rise of the KORACHANI EMPIRE in the early 5^{th} century RM. Derkaz remains now a small town surrounded by the ruins of its former grandeur, a chorsair hub, between the Seas of FOR and AZAM (Pop. unknown).

DERMESTES: Set. Major city-state in the c north west of the VESPERTINE

LEAGUE in the north west of SAMMAEA, just north of the TROPIC OF

RAH. Little is known of the place save for its cultural predilection for exposing the bodies of its dead, where they are dried and naturally mummified by the region's harsh sun.

Its vast necropolises surrounding the city are known for their 'streets' of raised basalt platforms on which lie the bodies of the dead, some centuries old (Pop. c. 134,000).

DEROATRA: Set. Major city in the west of THE VORANDINE, along the course of the river CASSIRADA. It emerged in c. 2280 RM, as a coastal village overlooking the SEA OF BYRIS. During the reign of king VORAND as a waypoint for whalers and fishermen, developing into a shipyard where vessels could be repaired by c. 2600 RM. It would go on to attract its own fleets, increasing its size over the next centuries, and by c. 2850 RM it had become famous for its own whalers, bringing much wealth to the region. A large city grew around the shipyards and by the time the whaling industry diminished in the wake of waning sea levels in c. 3100 RM, it had reliant on other industries, including the cultivation of EVOLAM kelp, allowing it to survive.

Deroatra is also known for a sacred tree that once crowned a hill outside the old city, which is now located in a park that is surrounded by buildings, which serves as a place of meditation and focus to those sensitive to the DREAMS and visions of the GOD WHO SPEAKS.

It is the birthplace of world-renowned ONEIROMANCER DALAMAN AGUATA, whose treatise of oneiromantic studies titled PRINCIPLES ON THE GODS' DREAMS' earned him a death sentence in his adoptive home in KORACHAN in 3382 RM (Pop. c. 420,000).

DERREN: Eth. Nomads common in the SURRACHI PLAINS in the north west of SAMMAEA. See Vol II: the Nomads of Elyden.

DERRI, THE FOX: Myr. In TEMUJAN SPIRITUALISM, the TUTELARY SPIRIT of luck. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

DERSSAH: Mil. Str. Large fortress in the c west of BASSORAH⁽²⁾. overlooking the ANOMOFERROH. Due to the rusting effects of the region, the fortress contains no metals, though is heavily fortified with concrete. The troops stationed there are assisted by ATRAMENTISTS who specialise in the manipulation of metal, and they patrol the region, inspecting it for strange activity that may affect Bassorah.

DERU N'KH: Flo. Sacred tree in the south of M'HOTOK, in N'RAKH. The tree is situated on a FIRMAMENTAL LEY and acts as a strong FOCUS to SHAPERS. Its hollow trunk is often seen glowing with latent Firmamental energies which are shaped by the ATTERKHAT caste of the M'hotok people. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

DERUS: Set. Coastal settlement in the south west of KHITAI. It is known for its stilt-architecture, designed to protect its people from the extreme tides in the area. Its main industry is salt, which is collected in gigantic pans outside the settlement (Pop. c. 4,000).

DERUWEID: Plr. 'deruweids'. Mor. One of the original Two-and-Twenty MORTAL PEOPLES, and the children of the DEMIURGE ACHAIAH. They are tall, standing between 7 – 9 ft., with their skin undergoing a slow transition throughout their long lives, which can last up to 200 – 300 years. The young have malleable greyish green skin that flakes at the joints like sloughing birch. As they grow older their skin appears to calcify, becoming darker and tougher, like gnarly bark. Hairless, they are an ascetic race, without clothing or known cities; aloof and xenophobic, living the last of their declining days in the shadow of their Demiurge mother in the deepest reaches of THE OLD FOREST.

The deruweids were abandoned by their mother Achaiah in an early age and never received the guidance and leadership that the other Mortal peoples received, and they remained backwards as a result. Even after their abandonment they continued to crave her attentions, travelling around ELYDEN in her wake, but she was ever fickle, unable to provide the children with the love they required.

Following her transformation into the immortal TREE OF AGEN, the deruweids were left a broken race filled with bitterness and self-blame at her death, ever grasping for the beauty that had once radiated from her, yet never able to achieve it. Their shamen tried to shape their bodies in her image, and the practice slowly came to permeate their whole culture, leaving them an empty race obsessed with recapturing that which had been denied them.

This practice of bodily mutilation to mirror their Demiurge mother became slowly corrupted into meaningless scarification that left them as monstrous beings. They lost themselves to their fleshy vices, forgetting the source of their self-mutilation and forgetting their mother, moving deeper into the forests away from the light and the rest of Elyden, where they became known as SIDHE: dark mirrors of the dwindling deruweids.

There remained pockets of uncorrupted deruweids scattered across Elyden that had never returned to the Tree of Agen, who in the ensuing years found their way back home, where they rediscovered their old mother transformed. There, they devoted their remaining days to maintaining her, and ridding Elyden of the influence sidhes while they slowly shape their bodies in her image as their ancestors once had. This caste of deruweid is outnumbered by the sidhe, though what remains of them now is unknown, though it is thought that most live in the depths of the Old Forest. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life: Sicthain.

DESAGHABAGI: Ser. Small city in the west of NOAVATUR, it is located relatively close to the border with the insular region of MNEMON. Given its distance from the heart of Noavaturi settled lands, its people are self-sufficient and hardy, capable of navigating the thick tangle of foliage that surrounds their mountainous home. Wood, fruits and rubber are cultivated here and sent east via the river HATHSHATHIID, in return for military aid to bolster the western borders of their lands against marauder incursions from KHARKHARADONTIS (Pop. c. 18,000).

DESENI: Set. Settlement in the south of OPHIUSSA, in the west of the region of GOMELA. Its main industry is viticulture, and the production of OPHIR⁽³⁾ (Pop. c. 4,000).

DESERT-FATHER: Eth. Mys. Caste of nomadic contemplatives in TARATI^(1.) who wander the MOLACHARI DESERT seeking enlightenment. See Vol II: the Nomads of Elyden.

DESERT-REALM OF ANUBIA, the: see ANUBIA.

DESHAGHAR: Set. City in the c south of the MULL CITY-STATES, known for its limestone quarries (Pop. c. 20,000).

DESHOUL: Rui. Ancient ruins buried beneath the south of SAMMAEA, in the c west of HOGGOTHA ISZ. They take the form of a metal-like structure, archaic and clearly ancient, buried untarnished beneath strata of rock. It is clearly a relic of an immeasurably ancient time, before the rise of the mortal races – perhaps the work of a DEMIURGE. The area directly surrounding Deshoul has remained largely ignored throughout the region's history.

DESHUN: Set. Major city in the c east of HARAPPA^(3.) (Pop. c. 72,000). *
DESICLAIA: His. Rel. Grotesque hard black lattice-like formations that resemble humanoid forms in agonising poses that are scattered around the south of TAES. Though they are ancient, any attempts at dating them have failed, though most believe they go bad at least to the THIRD AGE, if not older. Likewise, it is unknown if they are natural or supranatural in origin, or if they were crafted by MORTALS of SCIONIC CREATURES.

They were considered holy by the worshippers of the $\underline{\text{GOD ADRIFT}}$ and were destroyed in their hundreds by $\underline{\text{ICONOCLASTS}}^{(2.)}$ from the $\underline{\text{MORÉHAN}}$ $\underline{\text{ORDER}}$ of the $\underline{\text{SANCTIFIED INQUISITION}}$ between c. 1520 – 1550 RM, though many hidden desiclaia remain to this day, forming holy sites to those who still revere the God Adrift.

DESIN: Cur. Currency of the empire of SEDISIA. See Vol II: Currency and Coinage in Elyden.

DESKAAL: Ind. Set. Coal mining settlement in the south west of VAALK, in the ATRAMENTAL sinkhole of GLEED (Pop. c. 3,100).

DESKATH: 1. Geo. Island to the west of the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS known for ruined neolithic temples, studied by the scholar CIDASUS in c 2340 RM. 2. Settlement on the above island^(1.) off the western-coast of the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS (Pop. c. 5,000).

DESOLATI: also 'the Keepers of Astudan'. Org. Apocalyptic ascetic warrior-monks who believe in the paramount truth that is the decay and ultimate end of ELYDEN and the enlightenment that will exist subsequently. They emerged in c 2222 RM from the fortress of NENODEMIA in the ASHOSHOTH region of the DESOLATION OF ASTUDAN, and rapidly spread to surrounding lands from there (notably ALMAGEST, and GÂTHA).

They are commonly regarded as fatalistic mercenaries, with their trademark giant cleaver-like swords and HEAT BLADES (used mostly symbolically of Elyden's entropy and the role weapons serve in expediting it) becoming a powerful symbol. When hired for war they demand payment in valuable items (anything from buildings to object d'art) which they often destroy in moonlit rituals).

When not meditating in wastelands, which are considered holy land to them, they can be seen preaching in cities, their followers often fulfilling roles related to decay (demolishing buildings, running crematoria, etc). They adhere to a severe ascetic cult that is unofficially known to outsiders as the DESOLATI CULTS.

The order grew wealthy following the WAR OF THE ARTIFEXES that dominated LLACHATUL, beginning 2947 RM, in which they fought as mercenaries. They settled the ruins of many northern ASIBAIAN settlements (the nation all but destroyed in the conflict), forming a loose coalition of city-states known as SHOTHA that served mostly as recruitment-grounds and depots for the Desolati.

DESOLATI CULTS: Phil. Ascetic nihilistic cults that are controlled by the DESOLATI mercenaries. They preach of the impending death of Elyden in cities in the west of CENTRAL LLACHATUL, particularly in ALMAGEST, SKAROS, and in ASTUDAN, where they control various settlements and fortresses, and sell their services as mercenaries or operate services that fall within their tenets. They are famed for their use of the large cleaver-like CALMANS. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

DESOLATION PRISM: Mys. Tec. Wea. Rare and archaic form of FIRMAMENTAL weapons dating to the FOURTH AGE within the FAR HEMISPHERE. The weapons shoot a stream of concentrated light that is devastating, causing flammable materials to burst into flames or causing them to crumble under the intense heat, even causing stone or concrete to crack or burst if the stream is maintained for long-enough. Its effect on flesh is unsurpassed, and those hit find their flesh liquefied near instantly, with the remnants of their bodies bursting into flames, as though from within.

The construction of such weapons is incredibly difficult and time-consuming, and their operation is also costly, utilising a rare form of crystalline FIRMATITE that is particularly pure and strong. These crystals can be found today in the wastelands of south western XYRPHAAT and north western TAHOMIA, where they are major resources, though they are rarely used for the construction of such machines of war. Most extant examples are ancient siege weapons or defence artillery, kept operational by constant maintenance and vigilance.

DESOLATION, the: also 'the Desolation of Astudan'. Geo. Generic name, popular both within the KORACHANI EMPIRE and the east, used to describe the unclaimed lands given that exist between ALMAGEST and TEMUJA in the west and east, and SABIA and SKAROS in the north and south. The place is a wasteland, characterised by wind-worn rock formations and boulder fields, though different features do dominate different areas, such as the cracked lands of ASHOSHOTH in the south west and the BONEFIELDS in the east.

DESOLATION OF MAAVALDGAL: Geo. Barren rocky region in the c north of GIBEAH, in the northern face of the north east of the ZOIQUAGO Mountains. Little is known of the region or the reason for its present state. The vegetation of the ACHOREHEN forest stops suddenly, making some scholars believe that there is a supranatural influence over the region, preventing flora from growing in it.

DESOLATION OF ZAAGYAT: see ZAAGYAT.

DESPOSYNI: 1. Pol. His. Oth. The direct descendants of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR. Being the offspring of the Archpotentate, the Desposyni are amongst the most feared and respected individuals in the KORACHANI EMPIRE, and those amongst them who were born after his ITINERARY and rebirth in KHARKHARADONTIS are also powerful HALFBLOODS.

During the first centuries of the Korachani empire, where loyalty amongst his followers were paramount, the Archpotentate Malichar expended much time and resources in moulding his children into paragons of the Korachani ideal. Following his disappearance in 84 RM, most of his descendants had little to do with the running of the empire and instead grew decadent, turning the Bastion of Steel into a lavish palace and falling into lives of excess, with those few who paid attention to the running of the empire, such as ABADDIAL, becoming ruthless general and politicians.

Upon his rebirth as an otherworlder and his subsequent return to Korachan in 331 RM, almost 250-years after his disappearance, Malichar saw what had become of his house and shook his head, vowing to himself that he would not let his bloodline be remembered for decadence and profligacy. He culled much of his house in 339 RM following a terse edict in a period now remembered as <a href="https://doi.org/10.108/JRM.10.1081/JRM

Following this, the Archpotentate became more insular, less willing of sharing his hard-won empire amongst undeserving power-hungry descendants, especially given that he was now an otherworlder and his offspring would wield not only wield powers gained through position and wealth, but also from their otherworldly heritage, the details of which Malichar could only guess at, leading him to live a life of celibacy (though rumours persist to this day of him siring a secret bloodline of halfblooded Desposyni).

He retreated into obscurity by c. 700 RM, and it was during this time that the remaining Desposyni, without the policing of their primogenitor, once more fell into corruption, leading to the period known as the DESPOSYNI WARS, which was ended by Malichar in 902 RM, who personally oversaw the ruthless execution of many more individuals.

By c 1200 RM almost all of Malichar's descendants offspring had been ruthlessly slain, and for many of them there remained little influence to be gained from their heritage – indeed the blood of Malichar served as a curse to many of them, who fell into obscurity.

A few influential branches of the bloodline did survive however, particularly in KHADON, where they remained involved in politics, and as Malichar's his own presence began to wane once more, the Desposyni regained some of their infamy, siring large families, often in 'secret'. This came to a climax towards the end of the end of the fourth millennium RM, at a time when Malichar had been missing or centuries, and the Desposyni's own descendants (colloquially referred to as the UNBORN) rose to prominence, most notably in the two sons and one daughter of the PRIMID MELESH in the city of KORACHAN.

Like the noble PATRICIAN HOUSES of the empire, many of the remaining Desposyni are formed in houses, with each house tracing its ancestry to the descendant of a Desposyni, or, in rare cases, an actual Desposyni.

As described above, the edict of 339 RM prohibits the Desposyni from siring children, though many methods have been found to bypass this, most notable of which is adoption and cloning. Through these and other means, have seven distinct Desposyni bloodlines managed to thrive throughout the empire's rule.

2. Pol. Soc. Rulers of the KORACHANI EMPIRE during the period of DESPOSYNI RULE.

DESPOSYNI DYNASTY, the: Pol. His. The ruling political power in OBLEVIS from c. 900 RM to their overthrowing in 3199 RM. They were members of the KORACHANI DESPOSYNI who fled there during the height of the DESPOSYNI WARS in c. 880 RM, and whose ancestors went on to rule as divine monarchs and were overthrown and slain alongside all eligible to claim the throne in a night of bloody revolution that saw the nation reformed into the OBLEVISH EMPIRE.

DESPOSYNI, RULE OF THE: His. Pol. Soc. Period, between 2517 – 3012 RM, in KORACHANI history following the retreat from public of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR in 2503 RM. During this period the KORACHANI EMPIRE was ruled by a royal line of DESPOSYNI, beginning with king TAKIYAH, who ruled until 2693 RM.

The Desposyni Line became known for its corruption and decadence, and it was under their control that Korachan was allowed to lose various territories, including Khuraur, which had fractured from KARAKHAS is 3478 RM; MÁRTHEL in 3699 RM; and, most famously, SARASTRO and its dependencies in 3705 RM following the imperial defeat during the WAROF SUNDERING.

Malichar's return to public life in 3012 saw the line ended and its current ruler deposed. It was the only time since Malichar's creation of the empire that he was not in direct control, save through proxy.

DESPOSYNI WARS: His. Pol. Soc. Period within the KORACHANI EMPIRE, c. 800 – 900 RM where the many HOUSES OF DESPOSYNI became embroiled in bitter politicking for power and influence within the empire.

At the root of this often-open warfare, was the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR'S increased insularity and withdrawal from his duties, which led to a power vacuum in the empire that the COUNCIL OF SEVEN was often reticent of filling (or, conversely, all-too-willing to fill).

After siring a long and convoluted line of heirs, tensions rose between them during a time when Malichar had been absent for decades, leading to the Desposyni Wars, which reached a peak in c. 830 RM, affecting Korachan more than any other nation within the empire. Many colonies were lost in this period and distant territories likewise suffered.

This period of strife was officially ended by the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR in 902 RM when he emerged from his isolation and personally oversaw the execution of a great many of the Desposyni, some of them considered by scholars and courtiers to be his favourites, including the PRIMID MELESH who would later be reborn.

DESSA: Set. Settlement in the south east of KORACHAN, and a favoured holiday destination for the empire's nobility, who often take part in the game hunts organised in the SONN woods outside its walls (Pop. c. 2,400).

DESTRUCTION OF THE GRAND ATELIER: see GRAND ATELIER, THE.

DESZMEN: lit. 'Sea of Snakes'. Sea. Body of water in the far north west of the SEA OF DAGGERS.

DETH: 1. Sea. Bay in what used to be the eastern-most reaches of the STRAIT OF NÁRTHEL, in the south east of LYRIDIA. Its waters are stagnant and free of noticeable currents, making them largely free of life.

2. Set. Troglodyte cave-settlement in the south east of Lyridia. Despite its proximity to the Parthisan colony of Sothra (1.), there is little contact between the two (Pop. c. 4,000).

DETHAR: 1. Rvr. River in the east of Sabia, flowing north for around 140-miles from sources in the north of the FARIS Mountains.

2. Set. Coastal city in the east of SABIA, at the mouth of the eponymous river^(L) at southern-most reaches of the BAY OF SZALLOST. It forms a part of the GÂTHAN ROAD, and is the main route east into KASPIA (Pop. c. 72.000).

DETHEA: Set. Settlement in the south west of BARATHEA^(1,), known for its SOULSTONE quarries. Clashes along the border with Aethios are common, as AETHIOS claims all soulstones in the region and maintains that Dethea is illegally exploiting Aethiosi resources (Pop. c. 10,000).

DETHURE: Set. Dre. City in the east of GRARNEÂST and forming one side of the 'corridor' DREAMSCAPE of OSCULATA, alongside the city of HOTOCHTHIA. Dethure predated the appearance of Osculata, at which time it was a minor industrial city with little industries of note. The appearance of Osculata and the eventual founding of Hotochthia brought much trade to Dethure, which grew considerably over the next centuries.

Due to the fast travel between Dethure and Hotochthia, the two share a close connection, and they have become a vital part of the nation's trade inner trade route (Pop. c. 96,000).

DETITSRA: Set. Fortified city in the east of SERROK in the BEREPHASS rainforest. Its main industry is logging (Pop. c. 41,800).

DETTIL: Set. City in the c of the tribe of SATAR in the north of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. The city is known for its ancient carob groves and carob liqueur, which is popular across the Growing Mountains (Pop. c. 28,000).

DEUSAN: Fau. Bulky horse-sized ruminant cervid with stone-like crests that live in rocky and dry areas. Deusans are common in MALAN, the north of EASTERN LLACHATUL, and temperate regions of the far north western MENISCEA. They are wild and difficult to tame or domesticate, though there are documented cases of individuals having been used as mounts, particularly in the Hendecarchies of ATALLUA and DERAEIA in Malan, and most notably by the Malani demigoddess SESHA. They are naturally resilient to FIRMAMENTAL TAINT, and it is thought that their crests store excess FIRMAMENTAL energies that their bodies cannot otherwise nullify. Traditionally, their horns were used by SHAPERS and SHAMEN as FOCI^(2.) and they were historically also ground down into fine powders used in rituals and potions. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

- DEUSOT: Sup. Geo. Region of DUSTSTONE peaks in the north of the tribe of SATAR, in the north of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. The region serves as a border with the tribe of AUEREN.
- DEVACHAN: Soc. Str. Major mortuary temple in the city of KHADON in KORACHAN, where the bodies of deceased nobility are left in state for 3 days to allow their families time to mourn and to give the spirit time to vacate the body.
- DEVADAS, HIGH KNIGHT-WARDER OF TETHYSIA: (B. 3971 RM). High KNIGHT-WARDER of the order of the same name in TETHYSIA.
- DEVARA: Mil. Str. Coastal fortress on the southern-most point of the island of EDARA in north eastern VAALK.
- DEVED: Rvr. River in the north of EREBETH, flowing into the SEA OF DANAEL. Many cities survive along its banks, including the capital of BETENATH.
- DEVIL OF KALLAVARA, the: Int. His. Ohj. An artifact located in the city of KALLAVARA in KORACHAN said to contain the body of a devil, vitrified in a block of glass. The devil is only an inch tall and the block of glass is a cube barely 4 inches to a side and it is kept in a reliquary in the church of Malichar Ascendant. It is claimed by the church to date to the 18th century, when it was trapped in the glass during an EXORCISM.
- DEVIL'S BASTION: Geo. Butte in the c east of AZAZEM in lands that have been devastated by agricultural mistreatment. Most people believe it to be a rock formation but it is actually a gigantic petrified tree stump, its origins unknown, though possibly dating back to the THIRD AGE or earlier. No records in the area mention a gigantic tree and any references to the feature are always in the form of a rock formation.
- DEVORA: Set. Settlement in the east of NAARETH. Like most settlements in the region of JARRA, it is known for its apiarists and honey (Pop. c. 6.800).
- DEWAN: Soc. Rnk. Hereditary title in SABIA, the bearers of which are wardens of the cliff-temples common in the land.
- DHAB: 1. Geo. Grasslands in western SAUA.
- 2. Pol. One of the FIVE-AND-SIXTY STATES of SAUA, close to the contested border with AHRISHEN. It was originally a major agricultural region, though uncertainties from a long-standing border conflict between Saua, Ahrishen and the HARÉSHK, has led to its settlements slowly dwindling in size over the past decades.
- 3. Mil. Str. Major SAUAN fortification in the contested region of Dhab (2.).
- DHABB: Geo. Massif in the far south of AETHIOS, forming part of the border with RHINOCOLOURA.
- DHACHAH TRAZI: f. Com. Pol. Per. (B. 3922 RM) One of the three TISRAHANS who rule the NACRE LEAGUE from the city of ENNERA in SIMBARA. Together with ANGALISH MORAD and ZIHIMMAR DOS, she usurped control from the 17 councillors of the GRAND HOUSES during a tumultuous time following the declaration of war against MAENMIST.

She is a charismatic orator and master of diplomacy, able to sway factions with her words and served as a VAKKIL for over a decade. She is shrewd, using her charm and wit to manipulate others to her advantage. Beneath her graceful exterior lies a fierce determination, and she is known to hold grudges, carefully plotting her revenge against those who cross her.

- DHAGH: Rui. Ruin in the far west of SAUA, in the contested region of KARROO.
- DHAAHAN II: (B. 582 RM D. 614 RM) Pol. His. The last king of the royal HOUSE OF MENEVATH in AHRISHEN, who was killed by HAMAR ULLUREN, who claimed the throne, beginning the HOUSE OF ULLUREN.
- DHAKALL: Geo. Mountains in the north east of TAHALL, forming part of the HARKONNA MOUNTAIN-chain.
- DHAL ALEIN: His. Lan. Classical KORACHANI name for AHRISHEN, though with increase of trade Ahrishen has gained more usage, even within the empire, with Dhal Alein being considered an antiquated term.
- DHALAULLA: Geo. Expansive savannah covering over 150,000 squaremiles of the south east of the TARAHID ANNEXES; home to most of the region's animal population, including monitors.

- DHALILA: Rvr. River in the south west of SAMMAEA, flowing south east for *-miles from sources in the SASTAKAUR Massif in the north east of PHYRR, before moving east into MAENMIST.
- DHALINESH: Set. Major city on the south west of the island of CAMARA in the south of the CORAL BARONIES, off the south western coast of SAMMAEA. It lies around 5-miles upstream along the course of a river, and it is a mercantile hub, linking various harbours and ports across the IHEDROUR ITRUSH together (Pop. c. 116,200).
- DHALITH: Set. Settlement in the south east of KARAKHAS, which, for many years was a ruin populated by vagrants and the destitute, most of whom are worshippers of KHAR'ILLAE. Following the SUNDERING OF THE KORACHANI EMPIRE in 3705 RM, the ruin became an independent trading post, which, over the next centuries, grew into a powerful city-state, despite the rest of Karakhas becoming a vassal to Sarastro.
 - In 4005 RM the city was attacked by KORACHANI armies, leading to a protracted siege, that persists to this day (Pop. c. 29,500).
- DHALONA: Set. City in the c of PARTHIS, situated along the river ESHMUN. The city is one of the most productive and vibrant in Parthis and it is also the founding city of the WHITE LEAGUE, and is home to many CHAPTERS⁽²⁾ of the League (Pop c. 90,000).
- DHAMA IKH: Mil. Str. Fortress in the south west of PERGOST, overlooking the border with DURCHAA^(1.). The fortress is a remnant of past ages, originally of a scale far too large for HUMANS, leading some to attribute it to GIGANRI or OGHURS, or possibly some other unknown gigantic race. The fortress has since been expanded and refitted for the human and DVERG guards of Pergost.
- DHAMA: Set. Coastal settlement in the far south west of the HENDECARCHY of LONAR, in the south west of MALAN, overlooking the BAY OF GITHKA. Its main industry is shellfish farming (Pop. c. 7,000).
- DHAMAS: Com. Rnk. Mercantile caste that emerged in the ITHOIAN territories in c. -1300 RM following contact and trade with DHEA in the north. The caste would in c. -1280 RM erect the settlement of DHAMATEA over an older THYMI ruin, leading to the rise of Dhamatean culture.
- DHAMATEA: 1. Dem. 'Dhamatean'. His. Ntn. Nation emerging in c. -1300 RM from the ruins of ancient THYM in the south of present-day BA'AKH. The city of Dhamatea was founded in c. -1280 RM by a caste of merchants called the DHAMAS. Dhamatea became a close ally of its northern neighbour DHEA and the two erected the so-called twin-city of BATELL in -311 RM in to serve trade between the two. The two lands were renamed Ba'akh in honour of the ATRAMENTIST who reunited the faltering cities in the wake of Atramental disaster there in c. -110 RM. See Vol III: Extinct States.
- 2. Rui. Ancient city founded in c. -1280 RM by an ITHOIAN mercantile-caste atop an older THYMI ruin; most notably a gigantic half-buried dome, its sunken foundations serving as granaries and catacombs to the growing city. The city rapidly became a centre of culture and trade, with its name emerging within decades as a name for the region as a whole, leading to the word Ithoia disappearing from usage. SVATHI migrations and aggression starting in c. -1200 RM led to the city's fortification and its populace becoming veteran warriors. By the time Svathi attacks declined in c. -1100 RM the city had grown wealthy, and was the centre of an established trade-network that spanned around 200-miles in all directions, going farther north, into DHEA.

The city began suffering from c. -880 RM as the presence of the ATRAMENTA began to be felt, leading to increased miscarriages, birth defects and withered crops, and by -850 RM the city was facing an exodus, with many people fleeing into INTH, AGUR and ECHA. The city was reduced to a ghost-town in little over a hundred years, and it was abandoned in c. -710 RM. Increasing LACER activity in c. -700 RM led to them controlling the city of LRIR, from which they eventually moved south, securing the ruin of Dhamatea in c. -550 RM. Dhamatea was eventually razed, the lacer pushed north west in c. -510 RM by a combined force of Dhamateans. The city has been a ruin ever since.

DHAMATEANS: Sup. Soc. Rnk. Nomadic pariah caste in BA'AKH, that emerged from the ATRAMENTAL TAINT that claimed the nation of DHAMATEA in c. -110 RM. Though most of the regions' populace fled north into DHEA or south into KHARKHARADONTIS (where many became the misshapen slaves of the AANTH), those who remained became pariahs, bearing the stigma of their ancestors Atramental afflictions.

The Dhamateans that remained in Ba'akh were shunned and they came to control oases and various trade-routes across the nation and LIDEA, including the STERBHEL PASS and, following the KORACHANI abandonment of Ba'akh, the conurbation of the RE'HAIZ. See Vol II: the Nomads of Elyden.

DHAMIA: His. Rui: FOURTH AGE ruins in the c north west of GIBEAH, their blade-like buttresses now pitted and tarnished, the decay of ages blatant upon their surfaces. The place is surrounded by bleached bones, possibly the inhabitants of the old cities. The region is shunned most Gibeahns.

DHAMMAN: For. Large scrub region in the north east of the HARÉSHKI
CITY-KINGDOM of SYRTIS^(1.).

DHA NAR: also 'the Pirate Nation'. Dem. 'Dha Narran'. Ntn. Peninsular nation in the far south east of MENISCEA, and also occupying the ZHOFFAR ISLES of WESTERN SAMMAEA. In c. 2000 RM many people from this region emigrated north into what would later become MEDINEA.

It is known as the Pirate Nation due to the legacy that piracy had on its history. In c. 3300 RM the predecessor state of DANNAR was usurped by the Pirate Queen ZAYANOZA whose fleet, the FIVE SAILS, made up of pirates and brigands from across the SEA OF SAVAEN and the DRAGON ISLES, blockaded its harbours and attacked its merchant fleet. Her leadership brought great prosperity to the region and set the foundations for a powerful dynasty that remains in power to this day. The piracy that the early kingdom was built on is now largely forgotten, though Dha Nar still has a powerful fleet – both navy and merchant – and it dominates trade in the surrounding seas – including the seas of NARANOR, LYNNAE, SIPARIA, ERITHYDEA, ABRAXA^(1.), and the BATHASHAL OCEAN.

As a result, its culture has spread to surrounding regions, particularly the ZHOFFAR ISLES (known as the DRAGON ISLES around the INNER SEA), which over the years became closer to Dha Nar, until in c. 3620 RM, when they became a part of the Kingdom. This cultural predominance spread to the western-coast of Sammaea, when RAHENG became a large colony of Dha Nar, though it eventually gained its independence in 3812 RM. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

DHAN: Mil. Str. Line of fortresses covering over 550-miles of MECHABETI northern coastline. Constructed in c. 2000 RM, they are now in decline, many of them ruined and in decay. Some are still manned, though such is only in reverence to the past glory that were the Dhan fortresses.

DHANAND: Set. City in the c east of ABATTUR (Pop. c. 45,000).

DHANUSII: His. Eth. Historic culture that lived to the north west of the KORACHANI PENINSULA in the early years of the KORACHANI EMPIRE. Following the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR'S rise to power they were persecuted alongside other minorities. In the case of the Dhanusii, it was their continued worship of the CULT OF LIFE AND DEATH following the rapid rise of the CHURCH OF THE IRON DEITY and the abolishment of other faiths. They fled Korachan alongside others of their ilk (such as the SAGITTAARI), and settled in AQUARIIA, where they would become instrumental in the growth and development of the region. The Cult of Life and Death would become corrupted by local moons-based traditions, becoming known as ALBULAANISM.

DHAR: Set. Town in the west of KHALHAT, with links to the city of MOAH (Pop. c. 7,000).

DHAR KOTH: Rel. Str. Mausoleum-temple in the wilderness in the c-south east of LIDEA, characterised by its onion dome and brown granite.

DHARA: Int. Rel. Str. Holy site in the c of CHTHYRID atop the plateau of DAGHA. It is home to a large subterranean temple complex at the centre of which is a gigantic amphitheatre that can seat 200,000 bodies.

DHARNAR: Rvr. River in the north west of KHULL, flowing north east for 275-miles, from sources in the Alittu highlands before meeting the coast at the BAY OF KALLAR.

DHART: His. Set. Small harbour town in ancient CITADEL MOUNTS, which in c -740 RM was assimilated by the nearby city of MHAQ.

DHASSATHILL: Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTALLY-ACTIVE region in the south of SARASTRO, in the region of NEYSHABUR. The region is known for its delicate DUSTSTONE formations that are prone to collapse, as well as the water-carved caverns that reach deep below the surface.

 $\underline{\textbf{DHASSER}} : \textit{For.} \ \textbf{Jungles dominating equatorial} \ \underline{\textbf{LANTUA}} \ \textbf{in the south east} \\ \textbf{of Western Llachatul.}$

DHASSRA: For. Sparse forest in the north of KHAMID, south of the BAY OF KHIT.

DHAT: Dem. 'Dhatian'. Ntn. North western—most nation on the isle of ISEA. In c. 3300-3400 RM it saw an influx of refugees, largely made up of freed slaves from the nearby nation of DATEPHA.

It was the birthplace of the religion of ABACINISM in c. 1200 RM, which remains the dominant religion amongst HUMANS on Isea. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

DHATH: Rel. Flo. Sacred tree in the c of the HENDECARCHY of AMILLAERE^(1.), in the c of MALAN, dedicated to the demigoddess SESHA. It is of a unique providence and is believed by her worshippers to have been created in a DREAM by Sesha. It is a popular place of pilgrimage today, and the tree is kept safe by paladins of the CULT OF SESHA.

DHAUDACAA: Geo. Dry savannah region in the c east of THETIS. It is an endorheic basin that collects spring and rain water from a region measuring around 300,000 square-miles. It is dry for the most part, as it lies to the east of the RTHEI desert, though rain has been known to fall here occasionally.

DHAUGOSH: Ind. Set. Manufactory-city in the nation of DURCHAA^(1.). It was once a monolithic edifice that stretched beneath the permafrost of the Durchaan surface, covering miles of natural and hewn caverns, though fell into decay following the independence of ALMAGEST from KORACHAN.

The city was unnatural, its populace thriving only thanks to the vast ACERGENE ENGINES that kept the air circulating, and TECHNARCANE engines that kept the food flowing and the corridors safe from ATRAMENTAL seepage. With the SUNDERING OF THE SHADOW, Dhaugosh's engines fell silent, its people dying in droves. What was once a major metropolis instead became a tomb, festering with the decaying bodies of its dead.

It was later repopulated though vast chambers and corridors of the city are sealed off, their once unceasing engines, dusty and silent. Today the city is overseen by shaper tyrants who rule the unfortunate remnants of the once-great city. It is known for its large HALF-OGHUR population and their descendants (Pop. c. 23,200).

DHAUKA: Set. Settlement in the c of KHALHAT, overlooking the DAENED

SULRACH^(1.). It is believed to be a source of raw UMBRA that is used in CLONING and KLADOS industries across the nation (Pop. unknown).

DHEA: also 'Confederacy of Dhea'. His. Ntn. Small nation that rose from the ruin of the ASADEAN civilization in the wake of the WAR OF SCOURGING that engulfed the FOURTH AGE OF MORTAL LIFE. Formally recognised as a singular state (ruled as a confederacy of its largest cities) in -543 RM, Dhea had existed until then as a series of loosely-connected city-states that encompass what is now northern BA'AKH.

The nation was united in -30 RM by the ATRAMENTAL scholar AKH (the leader of a secretive cadre of ALCHEMISTS, Atramentists, and arcanists known as the ADUMBRAESK) following an Atramental disaster that affected the entire region in c. -100 RM caused its disparate people to band together. His death the next year resulted in Dhea and its neighbour to the south DHAMATEA being divided amongst his 17 lieutenants and renamed Ba'akh, in Akh's honour. See Vol III: Extinct States.

DHEAMATRAE: Rel. Str. Statue-temple in the north of TISARA, dedicated to the goddess ANDRASTE. Its plinth serves as a small temple, above which stands the solemn statue of the goddess Andraste, looking north to the GULF OF USEA.

DHEBI: Geo. Low Mountain range dominating the c south of LIMOTH (1.).

DHEEZAN: Fau. SYNAPSID cervid-like creature, common in MALAN and the EIDOGOTATH plains in the east of TETHYSIA. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

DHEKAAR: Dem. 'Dhekaar'. His. Eth. Early FIFTH AGE nomads of the EHRENISIAN COAST, in what is today KARGAMA in the north of WESTERN SAMMAEA. They were culturally-linked to the people of ELITAGRA, and adopted a polytheistic belief-system, paying tribute to different KARGAMAN IDOLS as they encountered them. They grew into experts on the history and worship of the Idols, and their elders became famed across the Ehrenisian Coast for the depth of their lore. They travelled across the coast, spreading their knowledge of the idols with the pastoral Elitagri people.

Their equal reverence for all the Kargaman Idols was in contrast to the more monotheistic beliefs that the Elitagri people developed, whose people revered a specific idol over others. This differences in their styles of worship became more pronounced by c. -780 RM when the Elitagri people became more fundamentalist in their beliefs and renounced the polytheistic culture enjoyed by the Dhekaari. They forbade outsiders from travelling into their settlements, effectively alienating the nomads from the majority of Kargaman Idols. Tensions rose over the years, leading to the accidental death of a nomad in the settlement of LYVAR as the situation worsened, leading in the widespread killing of Dhekaari nomads that effectively saw them omitted from records.

Only a handful of Dhekaari groups remained after this period, and they retreated to the wilderness, where they forsook the Kargaman Idols and the Elitagri people alike. Few references were made to them after that time, and most Elitagri people forgot about them.

In c. 25 RM a large group of people descended from Dhekaari nomads founded the settlement of KARAMERA in a narrow canyon that formed part of the course of the river WOLMASH. Over the years it attracted surviving Dhekaari, who settled down there, effectively ending their nomadic culture.

DHEOTH: Set. Major fortified city in the far west of the emirate of OTHOTEL^(1,1) in the west of LIMOTH^(1,1).

DHERBA: also 'the City of Stairs'. Set. Capital city of RHEA, along the western bank of the river ENNOIA. It was the seat of power of the AURADIAN DYNASTY, and the HIEROMONARCHS that followed them, though the Hieromonarchs would move the capital south, to MARECHOTTAY in 3203 RM, after which their influence would wane in Rhea. In 3242 RM, the COURT OF DREAMS succeeded in supplanting the power of the Hieromonarchs, resulting in a schism that saw the nation divided in two. The south western-most territories, where the Hieromonarchs were most powerful, broke away, becoming known as Iacio, and the remainder came under control of the Court of Dreams, which would rule from Dherba, making it capital once more, after 1,259-years.

It is an expansive city, and is ancient, with few modern industries calling it home. With over a million bodies calling it home, and it is known to locals as the City of Stairs, after its many impressive stairs that lead down towards the banks of the river Ennoia from the hills in the west (Pop. c. 1,200,000).

DHERKAZ: 1. Also 'the Splintered Forest'. For. Forest in the south east of LYRIDIA, stretching east into the far west of TAMAR, about 13,000 square-miles, in the valley between the east of the KYTHI and HELIOPARNASSUS Mountains. The eastern part of the forest is ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED, causing its trees grow in large and splintered forms.

2. Geo. Small mountain the far south east of LYRIDIA, crossing the border into the west of TAMAR. The mountain is riddled with basaltic rock and is renowned for its octagonal pillar formations, particularly on its southern-face.

DHEUNNA: Int. Geo. Dry plains in the north east of THETIS, notable for its mostly barren land and an uninviting landscape in the west, and shrublands and dry hills in the west. Despite the appearance of the place, it is teeming with life; its ruinous appearance merely testament to the accelerated pace that life takes there – animals mature and die in a matter of months, the living unable to replace the dead rapidly enough. Disease is rife here, the foul sicknesses of the dead eager to find warmer haunts. A truer example of the inimical nature of the FIRMAMENT could not exist. The region is also peppered with the ruins of the early FIFTH AGE RTHEI⁽²⁾ empire.

DHAIACHAN: Set. A common settlement name in KORACHAN and regions where KORACHANI is the primary language, roughly translating to 'New Place'. The name is most common in colonies or recently-settled regions, and there are perhaps dozens of individuals settlements that bear the name, including:

- Coastal settlement in the east of the KORACHANI colony of UKOBACHAN (Pop. c. 6,000).
- 2. Small city in the south west of LAASKHA, forming an integral part of the NATHHALAN PIPELINE, whose troops and rangers patrol the entirety of its 450-mile length. The city emerged in c. 1900 RM from the remnants of an older iron mine, whose deposits were exhausted long before and it is known today as the 'gateless city' on account of its old walls being reduced to scattered free-standing ruins as it outgrew them.

It has been ruled by a triumvirate since 3788 RM, whose rulers have been at odds with the governor of MENAAIS since 3989 RM (Pop. c. 18500)

- 3. Small city in the c east of NOAVATUR (Pop. c. 6,300).
- 4. Settlement in the north of Skaros north of the Strait of Skaros (Pop. c. 4,800).

DHOMAAL: Geo. Burning sink-hole in the far north of KHARKHARADONTIS, just south of the border with ANDILUTH. The land around it is dead, any goodness in it sapped by the strength of the ATRAMENTA that lurks within. The twisted creatures of Kharkharadontis – men-like beasts, and beast-like men and more grotesque things in between – gather around the pit, as though it were the termination of some gross pilgrimage.

The region is categorised as $\underline{\text{HIGHLY DANGEROUS}}$ by the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI}}$ Institute of Atramental Studies.

DHOSTAR, TREE OF: Flo. One of the oldest known OLIVE trees in KORACHAN, located outside the city of KHADON, predating the appearance of the KORACHANI EMPIRE. It is sprawling, half dead, with a hollow trunk, though still bears fruit that are harvested by members of house ALLARIS and are used in the production of the famed ALLARIS OIL; a fine extra-virgin olive oil that is reserved only for the finest of palates and is renowned for its smoky flavour.

DHOTA: Rvr. River in the south of the TARAHID ANNEXES, running south from the OSKR mountain for some 380-miles, before emptying into the SEA OF BYSSOS.

DHU: Soc. Rel. Str. TEMUJAN granary-temples, common to most sizeable settlements.

DHU TENRA: Rel. Str. High-temple of the spirit TENRA, atop the peak of TENRA the EROCH MAER in TEMUJA. It is home to the BELL of DASTAN.

DHUBATAR: also 'Tower of Mirrors'. Ancient tiered minaret in QARALAM that features in many myths and legends of the area. In most such tales the inside of the tower is covered in rows of two-way mirrors and intense light sources and was said to have been used to magickally create copies of objects and creatures. It has been abandoned for centuries, if not millennia, and its famed mirrors were looted or are now shattered. It is shunned by most Qaralami, who consider it cursed.

DHUDATHA: also 'the Half fort'. 1. Lak. Lake in the c east of NÁRTHEL forming part of the course of river DAHAK.

2. Mil. Str. Fort built in the c east of NÁRTHEL during the KORACHANI EMPIRE'S conquest of the region. It is now ruined, half destroyed, crumbling. Despite this, it has become the nucleus of a shanty-city that was settled by opportunistic merchants who cater to pilgrims undertaking THE SHADOW MARCH.

The population waxes and wanes throughout the year, depending on the number of pilgrims passing through. At its smallest it can comprise no more than a few thousand bodies, and at its largest it can swell to as many as 30,000 (Pop. Varies).

DHUL RHUGI: Set. Major city in the south west of CHEIRA, and capital city of the sixth prefecture of Cheira (Pop. c. 140,000).

DIABALL, SCION OF DEITIES: (B. unknown) Oth. A powerful seemingly ageless HALFBLOOD and scourge of MHAROKK and LIDEA. They were first recorded in c. –750 RM in the ACCOUNT OF YEARS:

"...the demon that will not sleep/the potter of lives, whose skin is reborn/his will be feared...'

The reference to 'the potter of lives' possibly refers to purported skill with $\underline{\text{SHAPING}},$ as shapers were often equated with potters.

They were opposed by native and KORACHANI forces many times, often believed to have been killed, only to reappear at a later time, often decades or centuries later. In their centuries of sporadic activity, they have destroyed settlements, raped and killed thousands, torn the landscape of Mharokk and western Lidea asunder.

They are infamous in Lidea for their felling of the city of $\underline{\text{CYRENA}}$ in 1672 RM, killing no less than 11,000 people before reducing it to rubble, their prize no more than an unnamed circlet from ancient times. Children born of their seed were almost always stillborn wretches, though the few who lived became powerful halfbloods and shapers in their own right. Despite their abilities, these offspring have invariably been persecuted for their infamous heritage.

2. Mil. Str. Fortress on a headland that guards entrance into the above $\mathrm{bay}^{(1)}$.

DIACONIA: Rel. Str. Side-room common to places of worship of the THREE

CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, where volunteers (often VOTARIES and CENOBITES) provide support to those afflicted by ATRAMENTAL AILMENTS such as AEPATHY.

DIADARI: Set. Large city in the east of TAMAR, overlooking the border with THE HARÉSHK (Pop. c. 120,000).

DIADIA: Ser. City in the north east of NORTHERN SIMBARA, overlooking the saltlands of ANAHARA. Once a coastal city, it now exists primarily as a cultivator of salt and sulphur with various satellite towns that specialise in tanning the hides of the BROMAAI (Pop. c. 14,000).

DIADON: title granted to the ruler of SAUA, synonymous with emperor. The First Diadon was HU. There is tension between the ruling Diadon class and the followers of the SLEEPING QUEEN.

DIAKONIK: Mys. A caste of mystics linked with ancient cavern temples, dating to the LITHIC PERIOD of IONIC history. The temples were mostly built into the sides of mountain, with the vast majority of them in the south western face of the GHOLA Mountain and were austere structures, bare and dark, in accordance with the tenets of cult of THE VOID, to which they were dedicated. They were the refuge of the Ionic Priests who in -587 RM seized power of the region in SALOROC and renamed the area Io; and as such became scholarly places where the IONIC TALPA was studied and golems constructed.

The rise of the APOSTATE WARS in -192 RM led to Io fracturing, its cities separated from one-another, the so-called VOID APOSTATES that came to rule each city-state attacking their neighbours, most of the Diakonik temples were destroyed in this period, with the remainder allowed to rot following the end of the war in -128 RM and again after the imperial conquest of Io in 212 RM, though some mystery cults remained throughout KORACHANI rule.

DIANOSH: Rvr. River in the north of AZAZEM that flows west to lake AGLAIA^(1.) from various sources in the CHACTHORNYS Mountains, many of which are seasonally inundated by snow melt from across the mountain chain. Heavy rains occur in a rough 3-year cycle, causing lakes RANNO^(1.) and VANKER to break their banks, leading to the flooding of the river Dianosh. The people of Azazem are accustomed to this and most cities that lie along the course of the river, including the capital city Agalia^(2.), have large storm drains and reservoirs to deal with floodwaters.

DIANU: Geo. River in the north east of OPHIUSSA, flowing for 350-miles west from sources in the HARKONA Mountains.

DIAOR: also 'the Eternal Tree'. Rel. Flo. An ancient tree, its form unequalled in other extant examples, its branches bifurcating and ending in tendrils. The tree is located in the badlands of KARIMAHAL in the south of KHAR NADUL and is encased in what, to all intents and purposes, appears to be amber, though how a 100-ft. tall tree came to be encased in amber remains unknown.

In antiquity the tree came to be regarded as a divine object by the people of the region. This worship is not as widespread as it once was due to cultural and religious changes in the region, though a small subset of people still worships Diaor, choosing to live in the wilderness close by, with the city of ALMIRA. Outside of this region the tree and its worshippers are almost ridiculed, leading to a schism, with the people of the Karimahal rarely leaving their homeland and those from greater Khar Nadul seeing little of value in who they regard as idolatrous simpletons.

It is tended to by a caste of priests known as DIAORESSES, who spend their lives in service to the tree, which is surrounded by a walled compound to keep it safe.

Diaor is regarded as the first tree, which was protected by its creator to preserve its beauty and perfection, and as such is seen as incorruptible and a symbol of aspiration, with worshippers tattooing a symbol of the tree on their faces, framing their eyes, with the trunk extending to the nose. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

DIAORESS: also 'Branchmaiden'. Rel. Pol. Rnk. The priestesses of the ETERNAL TREE OF DIAOR, based in the city of ALMIRA in the south of KHAR NADUL. Diaoresses are chosen at a young age, their destinies entwined with the branches of the amber-encased tree they are indoctrinated to worship. They are chosen due to their potential for ATRAMENTISM, and those who are successful in their indoctrination are SHAPERS who share a link with trees, specifically Diaor, and they are said to interpret the 'root memories' of the Eternal Tree.

The role of a Diaoress is both a position of power and a burden, for their minds are often haunted by the 'root memories', driving them to seek cosmic truths

They are highly respected members of Almiran society, and the theocratic council of Almira that rules over the surrounding region, is made up of high-ranking Diaoresses.

DIAPANU ASHIA: m. Per. (B. 3911 – D. 3982 RM) Soc. PARTHISAN ARCHPATRICIAN who in 3955 first proposed the idea of an international mean time, dividing ELYDEN into 24 longitudinal time zones of 15° each, centred around TETHRA, corresponding with the 24 hour CLOCK. The system was formalised in 3962 RM and rapidly spread across the INNER SEA. The system was adopted by KORACHAN, which in 3980 RM changed the centre of the system to DEOCHAN, which is also the PRIME MERIDIAN, streamlining the process, which led to its widespread adoption across Elyden.

DIARCH: Soc. Pol. Regional rulers in TZALLRACH, so named as they embody the dichotomy of secular and religious power amongst their people. The ONARCHS who rule each of the four states of Tzallrach are elected from the ranks of the Diarchs.

The title can be used for rulers of small tribes and large cities, though in either case they are autonomous rulers of whatever group they represent, though will often have a council of advisors at their behest.

DIARCH-FAMILIAR: Pol. Rnk. In TZALLRACH, a colloquial title of the four regional lords, more commonly known as ONARCHS.

DIARCHS, COUNCIL OF: Pol. Org. In TZALLRACH, an annual gathering of all the DIARCHS and ONARCHS, where matters of importance are discussed. In antiquity the FIRMAMENTAL practice of WIKKJAZ was used to conjure the spirits of dead diarchs to oversee important decisions, though the practice has since fallen out of favour due to changing perceptions regarding the way the dead are treated.

DIARCH'S THREAD: Cui. The sap of the NATHI FIG, which is used in cooking in TZALLRACH, southern MALAN, and parts of KREM. The trunk of the Nathi Fig is pierced so that its thick sap drips out. The sap is viscous and drips down as a single long strand that dries in the natural sunlight. These strands are removed from the tree and served with soft pasty as a simple rural desert.

DIASPORA: Eth. Caste of nomadic HARÉSHKI exiles who were cast out of their homes during political uprisings c. 3325 RM. The diaspora live nomadic lives, moving from place to place in large communal caravans. Though unwelcome in the Haréshk, they occasionally move into its territories, though are more commonly found in AHRISHEN, LYRIDIA and the west and south of SAUA, subsisting off the land and offering their skills as lead beaters, tinkerers to those willing to employ them. See Vol III: Nomads of Elyden.

DIASPORA OF EXIS, the: Pol. His. As the cities of HAGRADEA and MORULAURGO declared their independence from SARASTRO in 2783 RM, forming the HOLY STATE OF HAGRADEA, the emirs of Sarastro retaliated savagely – allies and sympathisers of the Holy State were executed and exiled in their thousands, the latter either moving to the newly-formed state, or fleeing south into MULCIBER or the deserts of ANUBIA. The Diaspora lasted until 2974 RM, when SATHEP THE RISEN returned to power and a sundered Sarastro was restored.

DIASTEMA: 1. Pass in the nation of ANANTHUL between the EMSUT
ZHALCA Mountains, and the HERE Highlands.

2. Mil. Str. Fortress guarding the eponymous pass between the EMSUT ZHALCA Mountains, and the HERE Highlands.

DIATESSARON: 1. Sea. Small bay in the north west of OKKHAM, into which the mouth of the river EKTASIC flows.

2. Pol. Set. Main ruling city in OKKHAM, and home to the COUNCIL OF THE FEDERATION. It emerged in c. 3300 RM from a much smaller settlement that was renowned for its natural remedies and medicine, an industry that survives today, even though the city is now better known for its large domed council hall and many diplomats and ambassadors from cities across the Federation and beyond (Pop. c. 380,000).

DIATET: Sct. Major coastal city in the south east of \underline{FATH} (Pop. c. 108,000).

DIATHI SANDS: Geo. Coastal semi-arid desert in the south of ANANTHUL, located right along the TROPIC OF MAOCARHL. The sands are black, and reach the water's edge.

DICAM: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the south of HANNAH, overlooking the SEA OF ETAGIRIA.

DICHOTARCHIC EMPIRE OF HOAMM: see HOAMM.

DICHOTARCHIC EMPIRE OF.

DICHORA: Plr. 'dichori'. Sup. Rare individuals who can SHAPE both the ATRAMENTA and the FIRMAMENT. Most live their lives on the fringes of society, never truly developing their talents, using them to achieve petty goals, though a rare few manage to hone their skills, becoming potent individuals with their own agendas, such as ARESTAS EVERTAN and ILDABAOTH, BANE OF SKAROS. They go by many names in many places, though are most commonly referred to a dualists.

DIELEGAME: Rvr. River in the base of the KAZZARAN Peninsula^(1.). flowing west for 180-miles from sources in SITAMET and BOSPAR Mountains, before meeting lake OLBIA. Its course has been altered by mortal hands across thousands of years and it is well-travelled, with river boats and barges travelling along its length, to the river TIAGAME.

DIELSAERA: Set. Large city in the north west of LIEVTHRA. The air above the city is ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED, though it is breathable close to the ground, resulting in very few structures being built with more than two storeys. Taller structures do exist in the city, though they are fitted with individual SIPHON ENGINES that keep the air around them breathable. The city itself is sprawling and is surrounded by a modern concrete wall to defend it from possible attack, due to its adamantine and UMBRA industries, which are together a great source of wealth to Lievthra (Pop. c. 990,000).

DIERDFAN UMATRA: (B. 2353 – D. 2416 RM) Pol. His. Son of king GISHEN IV of the HOUSE OF UMATRA in AHRISHEN. He was exiled to HARÉ SHKA following his father's killing and spent his years in exile, working to re-establish his house's rule. His granddaughter VOKNA II was able to unite many of the squabbling barons of Ahrishen, reclaiming the throne in 2472 RM, fulfilling his dream.

DIESTRA: Ser. Fortified settlement in the east of PORPHY, known for its ARK-BUILDING culture. The city was once much larger, though many of its adults have taken vows of celibacy as a form of extreme religious observance, and it has dwindled greatly over recent years (Pop. c. 10,000).

DIGERATI: Tec. Rnk. A caste of TECHNARCANISTS scholars in the KORACHANI EMPIRE, based in the HERONEAN ward in KHADON, KORACHAN. TECHNOLOGISTS of renown, the digerati ware a powerful force in the politics of the city, rich from their holdings. The digerati maintained a great deal of power after the SUNDERING OF THE KORACHANI EMPIRE in 3705 RM, though they were pushed out of the city into outlying workshops where they remain to this day, still supporting THE CONSULITE and the ZACHARIAHNS, who they serve.

DIGNORA: Set. Settlement in the c south of NAARETH, along the course of the river SULLAR. It has a history of animal husbandry (Pop. c. 7,350). DIGORI: Mil. Str. Fortress in the north east of the island of ARTALSCELLI, with unparalleled views of the surrounding land and seas of ARTA and LISASSA.

DIJAK: Sup. Edu. Rnk. Common term for young or novice SHAPERS in SABIA, KASPIA and south eastern PERGOST.

DIKALAH: Set. Settlement in the south of the desert of THAMAAZ in the south of THE SURRACH, under the control of HAAB. It is known for its diamond mines (Pop. c. 4,000).

DILETH: Set. Series of small rural settlements populated by goat herders in the c north east of LYRIDIA (Pop. c. 1,800).

DIMASHK: Mil. Str. A relict tower in the east of in LAASKHA, overlooking the heathen realm of IPANAH⁽²⁾, thought to date back to the late FOURTH AGE. It has been used as a defensive and lookout tower by various people for millennia, and played a major role during the WAR OF THE ARTIFEXES.

It has been restored and added to, with modern fortifications being constructed around the ancient tower by the KYONI ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION, which has controlled the area for well over a millennium.

DIMON: Plr. 'Dimon': Sup. Org. A cult of SHAPERS based in MECHABET, that have ruled since 3435 RM, after infiltrating the old monarchy as advisors and taking control from within. They once wielded unmitigated power in the land, though this was lessened somewhat following its annexation to PARTHIS in 3860 RM, though they continue to rule with relative autonomy, so long as yearly tithes are upheld.

They are secretive individuals, seemingly more concerned with their own secretive cult than they are with ruling, and much of the day-to-day running of Mechabet is entrusted to their sycophants. Public appearances are typically made behind a veneer of followers, entourages and retainers, and they are never seen without their trademark BLOODSTONE masks and brocaded cassocks.

There are always thirteen Dimon active at any one time, though their identities are unknown. Though many believe them to be the rulers of Mechabet, this is not the case and in truth they fulfil a role similar to that of advisors and ministers to the Regent.

It is thought that the seeds of their cult were sown during the imperial HIGH CONSULITE'S sojourn there between 466 – 469 RM, during a period of KORACHANI influence in the region.

DIMYA: 1. Sea. Small bay in the east of CUTH.

2. Set. Large coastal city in CUTH, overlooking the above bay^(1,). It is one of few present-day major harbours, and trades in goods from the east, which are traded overland to HAMMON to be traded west (Pop. c. 139,000).

DINIKARA: Geo. Mountain in the east of SUOR, forming an extension of the SIRDAIRA Mountains.

DIOCESE: Rel. Geo. Religious jurisdiction within the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE that is controlled by a BISHOP, and which together form the larger ARCHDIOCESE within a specific territory, that is headed by an ARCHBISHOP.

DIONDAWA: Ser. City in the c south west of RHEA. Starting in c. 1555 RM it became the centre of a large civil conflict, at the centre of which was the church of AURADIA. The conflict escalated into civil war within the city, where members of the clergy were killed amid riots. This led to a waning of the Auradian religion in the city.

Today the city is amongst the least religious in all of Rhea, though those who want to are free to do so without persecution (Pop. c. 50,000).

DIORROTH: Set. Major coastal city in the south west of SATHAII. It is known for its highly secure vaulted harbour (Pop. unknown).

DIPHDA: Fau. Near-mythic amphibian, thought to be unchanged since the time of the DEMIURGE'S creation of animal-life. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

DIPTYCH: 1. Art. Obj. Traditionally an object that is divided in two. In antiquity folded panels were often used as negatives for wax designs. In literature, a diptych can also be a work of poetry or score that is composed of a complimentary pair.

2. Lan. Common slang present in the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI EMPIRE}}$ between c. 1500 & 2800 RM, used in reference to $\underline{\text{HALFBLOODS}}$. It is still in usage in some regions.

DIRADET: Set. Settlement in the c of the tribe of OURANASSA, in the far south west of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 4,500).

DIRDUM: Geo. Pass in the c south of the SULTANATE OF ABACARDAT, offering safe passage between the AHBATAQI and the ENWATIQ Mountains.

DIRECTORY, the: (yo-incaito) Soc. Pol. In the KORACHANI EMPIRE, the code of conduct and chief codex of the SANCTIFIED ORDERS OF THE INQUISITION. Originally written between c. 400 – 430 RM, at the dawn at the age of the Orders, it originated in its most basic form as the personal mantra of the acolyte-ASSESSOR Esceon of the GRIGORIAN ORDER, who was assassinated in his pulpit while sermonising a crowd in LAASKHA in 403 RM.

Since then, the Directory has been expanded, added to and altered, as the Orders have expanded and evolved.

DIRGE OF DAYS, the: Rel. Vol. Apocalyptic writings originating in the south of VAALK in c. 3920 RM. The writings describe, in great detail, the events leading up to the end times, including scenes of panic, hysteria, and bloodshed. Many believe the writings to be prophetic and eschatologists have devoted years to studying the potential explanations for the passages, though the verity of their claims are scrutinised and still in doubt

The writings have been the source of much art originating ins Vaalk as well as surrounding regions, and have gained a large following in KETESH.

DIRGE OF THE MARTYS IN D MINOR: Art. Composition by the famed composer CAE VEDTI, which was written in 1686 RM.

DIRIHET: Geo. Island in the north of the MAIDEN ISLES, off the south eastern coast of MENISCEA.

DIRUCHA: Set. Settlement in the east of OTINTH. Like most Otinthian settlements, little is known about it due to the nations' insular nature. It originated as a KORACHANI city forming part of the colony of OHDURTAR and was later resettled by the Otinthian people (Pop. c. 15,000).

DIRUCHAN: Set. City in the c of SKAROS, along the course of the river ULAARA. Its people are known for their antiquated superstitions. It has been the home of the MINASTERIA^(2.) of MYGALURGEN since 3781 RM (Pop. c. 42,000).

DIS: His. Rel. Now-forsaken deity that was worshipped by many LASCAR⁽²⁾ peoples, mostly in what is now the south of SKAROS during the FADING between the FOURTH and FIFTH AGES.

DIS, TEMPLE OF: Rui. Ruined, half-buried mausoleum-sanctuary in the ANOMOFERROH, in the south of SKAROS, around 170-miles north of its southern border with LAASKHA. The temple was once dedicated to the obscene deity DIS, though any trace of its past allegiances is gone now, hidden beneath the corruption of ages.

DISAPPEARED, the: His. Eth. Minority group that was annihilated during a short but brutal act of genocide across the nation of ALMAGEST following its independence in 3014 RM, starting in the city of ALMAGEST. It is unknown now what demographic of people were targeted, though it is thought that the act was perpetrated against DEMIURNES, who were already distrusted in the nation due to their loyalty towards the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR. Today they are a rare sight in Almagest, though can be found living in virtual anonymity in cities scattered across the north of the nation, with none able to trace their lineage back to this time, implying that their ancestors found their way into Almagest long after the genocide of the Disappeared. Indeed, the event is now so distant that few alive in Almagest today know or care about it, and demiurnes are largely ignored, though their relative rarity does make them conspicuous. Most have forsaken their technarcane roots and live simple lives.

DISCHARGER: also 'battery'. Lit. 'give out', also 'dhizrah'. Tec. Primitive batteries manufactured and used to some degree by most industrially-advanced nations, mostly across the INNER SEA. A core of UMBRA is at the heart of every discharger, one half in its natural frigid state, the other half agitated to a heated condition creating electrical friction and an electromotive force that is used to power all manner of technarcane devices, such as BOTTLED LIGHT, AMBULANTS and, in larger instances, even entire manufactories. All dischargers expire with use, and their measured output also wanes over time until the force is so weak, they must be replaced.

DISCIPLINE: also 'order or sphere'. Sup. In FIRMAMENTISM, a form of SHAPING that falls within a particular theme or subject. Some shapers only have abilities that fall within a particular discipline, whereas others might have more than one, depending on their abilities.

Originally conceived by the ancient KHAMIDIANS in their pursuit if knowledge, the idea of spheres travelled east to MENISCEA with exiled shapers following the CATACLYSM OF KHAMID in 101 RM. There were originally twenty-seven catalogued disciplines, though there is no officially recognised or exhaustive list. In its loosest term, a discipline is the path a shaper chooses or is forced upon due to the affinity of his shaping. See Vol IV: the Materia Omna.

DISCORDANT DEITY, the: also 'ALTAR'. Dei. Rel. A deity and its surrounding cult that has been prevalent within the KORACHANI EMPIRE over the past century. It rapidly became influential, with its beliefs disrupting trade and politics, attracting members from all walks of life; though mostly the troubled, disillusioned, infected, corrupted and tainted. The first mention of the Discordant Deity is attributed to the demagogue Ozga'Mot in HUSHAOT in VAALK, in 3905 RM. His words of change were welcomed by the many destitute people of the ailing shantycity that had grown in the ruins of Hushaot, and word rapidly spread throughout the Korachani empire, attracting even HALFBLOODS and the attentions of OTHERWORLDERS alike.

The Discordant Deity is a being of chaos; whose goals (if indeed goals it has) are unknown to all but the wisest of savants. Its followers court chaos as a means of escaping the shackles the empire has enforced upon them, be they the prison of their class or the inevitability of their vocations. Sins of the flesh, bloodshed, disease and chaos follow the preachers of Altar and despite being without any (known) leadership, the actions of the so-called church have brought the empire to its knees in many areas around THE INNER SEA. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

DISEASE, ATRAMENTAL: see ATRAMENTAL AILMENT.

DISHKAR MAZE: Geo. The southern foothills of the SASTAKAUR Massif, which are known for their sandstone gullies, canyons and deep valleys.

DISLMA: Soc. Pol. One of seven ruling CLANS in CISNERIA, whose emblem is the white owl, who embodies efficiency and beauty, and is a guardian to women and hunters. The others are BERMION, GYSTAR, HOMMAL, KRAKYR, KRISLOR, SKULFUR.

DISMISSER: Sup. Rnk. SHAPERS who specialise in anticipating and counteracting the SHAPING of others, regardless of their SPHERE of influence. They are commonly found within law enforcement agencies, the military, and other organised institutions across various cultures and regions. They are common in the KORACHANI EMPIRE, where they are known as ANNULLARII and have a MINASTERIA⁽²⁾ in the city of BAAYN, in LAASKHA. See Vol IV: Spheres and types of Shaping.

DISPATIS: Set. A large domed city located within the PRISON CARCERI, beneath the forests of south eastern RAONGEN^(2.) in the west of CENTRAL LLACHATUL. The city, like the city of PANDAEMONIA, is said to be built on the shoulders of a divine being, though it is situated much closer to the surface, even trading with the Raongeni people on occasion. In c. - 2000 RM the dome above the city partially caved in, burying it and its 10-million purported inhabitants. A gaping sinkhole over 5-miles in diameter remained. Over the years the calamity's survivors repopulated the rubble, erecting a new city that claimed the same name as its predecessor, building down along the sides of the pit.

Occasional earthquakes and other aberrations are attributed to the entity that slumbers beneath the city, whose DREAMS have slowly turned the earth around it to duststone, and its inhabitants into ashen lifeless beings. Sporadic earthquakes levelled much of the sinkhole, destroying the city again in c. 600 RM. What remains is an uncharacteristically cold region said to be riddled with a honeycomb of hollows and caverns waiting to cave in beneath unwary explorers, and a howling wind that local legend claims moans with the lament of millions of spirits (Pop. unknown).

DISPLACEMENT OF THE FAITHFUL: His. Pol. The SUNDERING OF
THE KORACHANI EMPIRE that happened in 3705 RM also saw its religion, the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, sundered in two – with the REFORMED CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE becoming the official faith of the LOW-EMPIRE OF SARASTRO, with the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE remaining the official religion on the HIGH-EMPIRE OF KORACHAN.

The schism within the church was slow and many regions in the Sarastroan empire, particularly in rural areas, continued to adhere to the northern faith despite the empire-wide conversion to the new church. The Reformed Church was harsh on those who did not convert. Entire settlements were emptied, their populations either exiled to KORACHAN, or worse, slain. It was a dark time between 3705 – 3712 RM, and tens of thousands are thought to have died, with many more displaced in a great diaspora.

Hundreds of settlements across Sarastro and its dependencies were left empty, with crucifixions or a mound of burnt bodies as testament to what happened there. Many such settlements remain deserted to this day, over 300-years later.

DISPOR: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the west of the TARAHID ANNEXES, overlooking OPHAR, beyond the southern-most part of the ASOGHAQUA Mountains.

DISSENTION, the: Geo. Large geographical feature, some 750-miles long in the north west of WESTERN SAMMAEA, west of the DAHAAMAAN Mountains. Reaching an estimated depth of about 900-feet in places, the schism is a tear in the badlands depressions of the area. Caverns and boreholes sometimes open up following earthquakes, revealing black abysms below, from which spew hot rancid air thought to have been trapped in deep hollows for eons. Those breathing such air are stricken by a debilitating illness that seizes the joints and lungs, leading to laboured breathing and often paralysis and death. Like most of the world's maladies, mortals have found a way to exploit these fissures (which have been known to reveal veins of precious ores) and in some places geothermal plants have appeared, fuelling desperate mining operations along the schism wall. The cities of UBAKKAR and DAKATTA are the largest such settlements and survive despite the harshness of the area.

The rend was flooded as recently as 1,200 years ago, when the sea levels of ELYDEN were much higher than the present day, though it has since dried up.

DISSOLUTION OF THE MINASTERIA, the: also 'Minasterial Reforms'.

Pol. His. (3708 – 3779 RM) Major governmental reforms that took place in the KORACHANI EMPIRE in 3708 RM in the wake of the SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE that took place only a few years before in 3705 RM.

Ignoring the protests of various people and groups, the COUNCIL OF SEVEN dissolved all non-shaping MINASTERIA^(1,1) across the empire, as well as its military institutions, and reorganised them into Orders, following the organisation and hierarchy of the SANCTIFIED ORDERS OF THE INQUISITION.

This led to widespread chaos, with many officials not even knowing what Order they worked for, but the Seven were adamant that their changes were for the best, and this period of discord lasted for close to eight decades, ending finally in 3779 RM with the re-election of two new members of the Seven, who, alongside the CONSULITE, were able to reverse the ruling.

The various Minasteria were later resurrected and the existing Orders restructured, with many lesser ones folded into larger ones or disbanded altogether, after becoming redundant by the reintroduction of the Minasteria.

Some of the Orders that were disbanded following the reversal of the Dissolution of the Minasteria include, the ELAIMAN ORDER, amongst others.

DISURAST: Set. Settlement in the region of HAMULAR in the c north east of THE SURRACH. It is known for its wine-making (Pop. c. 4,800).

DISUSI: Set. Settlement in the south of OPHIUSSA, in the west of the region of GOMELA. Its main industry is viticulture, and the production of OPHIR⁽³⁾ (Pop. c. 8,000).

DITARTHA: Soc. COMING-OF-AGE RITUAL in PARTHIS, TARTAK, and some of its colonies and more recent vassals, where children who reach the age of 15 undertake various rituals in preparation of their ascent to adulthood. The tradition emerged in the south east of extant Parthis, and spread through the early Fifth Age to the rest of the peninsula.

The exact traditions differ from region to region, though most places have a few common elements, including mentorship from an older person of the same sex and sexual orientation that typically starts at the age of 12. This teaches the individual important skills and values, often leading to them following in the same vocation. The final ritual includes a celebration of the accomplishments of the scion AZER^(2.) with their peers. Azer is an important figure in Parthisan history, particularly in its path to secularism, and he is remembered as a cultural hero to this day. This celebration bestows a sense of individuality and spirit in the individual, who emerges from the ritual as an adult.

Following the ditartha, many individuals will also emerge from their mentorship to become apprentices.

DITHAN: 1. Rvr. River in the east of GYZHA flowing south for 200-miles from sources in the far east of the PARNASIAN Mountains before meeting the coast at the SEA OF DURAHRAT.

2. Geo. Endorheic basin in the east of GYZHA. Following heavy rains floodwaters collect in the basin, causing the river Dithan ^(1.) to break its banks.

DIVASHA: Mil. Soc. Rnk. Black-skinned female oracles who live in the region of KATOPRACH in the far south east of the UMBRA SOKHAR wastes in SAMMAEA. They are guardians of the many oases that dot the region and serve as hosts to nomads and merchants seeking shelter there. They are known for their large septum piercings from which they hang delicate chain masks that cover their mouths and cheeks.

DIVI: His. Mys. Ancient mythological beings in DNEB^(2,). The name was used to describe the mysterious bronze hands that appeared on the coastlines of the island of Dneb^(1,)

DIVI, HANDS OF THE: His. Arc. Ancient giant bronze hands with 7 fingers that are scattered on the eastern coastlines of the island of DNEB(1.). They were revealed in c. 3300 RM by waning sea levels and were untouched and untarnished by the touch of the ocean.

Each one is around 5-ft. long, and there are around 30 of them in all, in an area of land around 2,000 square-miles. Nothing is known of their origins or purpose and they are largely ignored by locals. There were around 200 originally but most of them were taken, possibly to be melted down and sold, and others were taken for use in private collections, some of which can be seen in the palaces of the nobility in the city of Dneb^(2,).

DIVIDE, the: Geo. Impressive mountain chain known for its spectacular large rock formations. Located in the north east of TEMUJA, it runs north to south for some 300-miles, serving as a border between it and the HENDECARCHY of CYRENIA in MALAN, becoming less prominent and more gradual the farther south it goes. At its highest point, it's 13,080-ft. high.

It was once home to many tribes of ALMAS, though these were eradicated by concerted efforts between 1800-2100 RM, though they still remain in small numbers in the eastern face of the mountains, in Cyrenian territories, where they are a nuisance.

DIVIDE OF BA'AKH, the: Pol. His. Treaty signed in BA'AKH in 201 RM, following over a decade of war along the borders of many of its 17 states. The wars' roots lay in ORESS' taxation of trade along the river ORA (2.) and other actions that destabilised the borders, leading to many skirmishes breaking out with its neighbours. The conflict escalated into a war that lasted until c. 180 RM, following which many states sought the safety of BAALBETH, leading to the signing of the Divide of Ba'akh in 201 RM, which left the nation officially sundered into three states – Oress in the north, the PRINCIPALITY OF AASHA in the east and the state of Baalbeth, which controlled the rest.

The Divide of Ba'akh lasted until 318 RM, when Baalbeth was able to unite the 3-states into one cohesive nation – Ba'akh.

DIVIDED EMPIRE: His. Pol. Geo. Now-defunct political region in the east of SAMMAEA, active between c. 1730 – 2772 RM, occupying what are now CHEIRA, PNESSA, and SERROK, with as many as nine competing powers all vying for the old seat of power left behind by the death of the UALLA MIGHAN emperor in 1724 RM. The period ended in 2772 RM with the rise to power of the state of WAELMIGH⁽²⁾ which managed to unite the disparate states under its banner, before it, too, was eventually subsumed by the SORCERER-KINGS of CHEIRA.

DIVINE PRECEPT, the: Int. Phil. Per. An enigmatic figure whispered of throughout gnostic circles across ELYDEN, it is possible that the Divine Precept isn't so much an individual but rather a title or perhaps little more than a tenet or belief system. Many philosophers and sophists who have heard of the Divine Precept lose themselves in the pursuit of more knowledge on the figure, with some dedicating their lives to travelling across Elyden following esoteric clues in the hopes of finding the figure, after which it is assumed that enlightenment regarding the true nature of Elyden and the purpose of mortal life might be gleaned.

Most Gnostics have never heard the term, for it is a closely guarded secret that can only be discovered through tireless work and self-improvement, and many who come across the term see it as little more than yet another aspect of symbolism that is rife in their chosen field.

DIVINIFUGUE SUIT: also 'godscloak'. Tec. Singular TECHNARCANE suit, possibly of legendary or mythic origin, that is designed to hide one's presence from divine influences and forces, similar to how REALITY SUITS obscure the wearer from DREAMSCAPES and the ONEIRIC CREATURES that dwell in them. It is first mentioned by the scholar Corydorius in an 11th century text, and all later mentions are believed to be derived from this record leading to many scholars doubting its very existence. Other mentions are scattered throughout historical accounts following this period, with the most recent significant mention of it being an eyewitness account from the 34th century, where it is claimed by two distinct sources as having been used by a lone shaper in battle against a sonic creature during an exploration of KHARKHARADONTIS. These claims have been largely disputed by historians despite them being the basis for most modern retellings of the story.

If such a suit is indeed real, it is unknown if it is a singular item or if various examples have been manufactured throughout history. Either way such a suit must be of unrivalled power, with its true applications unfathomable, for who can know the uses of a suit that makes its wearer undetectable to DEITIES and DEMIGODS? It is unknown how such a suit would even be made, and what elements might go into its construction, though some has postulated it may require the SOUL PEARL of a SCIONIC CREATURE or some other divine element to work, making it similar to another rare technarcane suits known as the SOULSUIT.

DIVINITY OF SEVEN: Phil. Soc. World-wide belief of the importance and possibly divine significance of the number seven. It is linked with the similar principle of the POWER OF THREE, this may have originated from the tale of the fall-from-grace of the last of the Two-and-Twenty DEMIURGES (their own number, twenty-two, seen as an imperfect number as twenty-one is a multiple of three and seven. That divinity is destroyed by the addition of another character). The Divinity of Seven is a common belief amongst many organisations in the KORACHANI EMPIRE and the KNIGHTS OF SET, in TETHYSIA; to the point that it influences many aspects of their culture, including architecture and organisational structures.

DIVONNA: Set. Settlement in the south of TISARA, along the course of the river CLOTANNA (Pop. c. 5,500).

DIVRATICUA: Geo. Region of labyrinthine tunnels in the PRISON

CARCERI, dominating the southern reaches of the BLACK MOUNTAINS, under the north of ATARAXIA, with no-known exit to the surface world.

DIVUMMA: Geo. Mountains forming an eastern extension of the BLACK MOUNTAINS, forming a border between the north of CISNERIA and the south of ALAM BETHYL. Its southern-face was found to be rich in UMBRA reserves in around 3630 RM and it was instrumental in bringing Cisneria into the modern world. Today much of the umbra reserves have waned, reading to the death of the related industries, but the city of SUDIVA is one of few whose SIPHON ENGINES remain active.

DIWAN: see DIWAN, IMPERIAL.

DIWAN, IMPERIAL: also 'Overcouncil'. Pol. Org. Autocratic ruling council of the REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO, since its founding by the LICHKING SATHEP THE RISEN in 3728 RM. Based in the city of ARGEA, the Diwan replaced the older OVERCOUNCIL (though many people still call it that) and oversees the daily operations of the LOW-EMPIRE, allowing Sathep to concentrate on larger or more mystical matters. The members of the Diwan are selected from the ranks of governors, SHAPERS and nobility through a vetting process that is rife with corruption and favouritism.

DIYADA: Rvr. River in the west of THE VORANDINE, flowing south and west for 225-miles from sources in the IDREGAN Massif before meeting the coast at the BAY OF LASHA.

DIALLACH: 1. Myr. His. In the mythology and ancient history of ELYDEN, a race of semi-divine beings who dominated the north of SAMMAEA in the SECOND AGE (the TIME OF DEFIANCE), in what are now BA'AKH, MHAROKK, LIDEA, and VAALK. Legends of the region say that the Djallach are the offspring of a greater deity who gave birth to six copies of herself. This has connotations with the story of the DEMIURGE IALDABAOTH, though little evidence remains from the time to allow a true connection to be made.

2. Myt. His. In mythology, and the ancient history of ELYDEN, the descendants of the original Djallach. They were powerful beings akin to, but less esoteric than the OTHERWORLDERS, who dominated the northern regions of SAMMAEA in ancient ages – the latter part of the SECOND AGE and the THIRD AGE. The names of some djallach can still be seen in the old legends of MHAROKK, with individuals like MUKHAL, ALL, TALGENN and SURMAS all dominating the myths and legends of the region.

DJALLACH WARS, the: Myt. His. In the mythology and ancient history of ELYDEN, great war in the late THIRD AGE (c. –41000 – –40,000 RM), that dominated all of the continent of SAMMAEA. The war was fought between the descendants of the immortal DJALLACH^(L) and their mortal armies, and the demons of ancient myth. The great war ended with the passing of the THIRD AGE and the deaths of the Djallach.

DIELOT: Soc. Mus. Rnk. A caste of wandering storytellers, musicians and historians common in the north east of SAMMAEA. Djelots are almost invariably loners, moving from settlement to settlement, sharing songs and stories in return for food and accommodation. They are highly respected within the society of AETHIOS, where they are thought to have originated, though form a crucial part of oral culture in other nations. In the north east of Sammaea including MULCIBER, SIRIPHAGOS, ARKOS^(1.) and the south of SARASTRO.

Though traditionally laymen with regards to the FIRMAMENT and the ATRAMENTA, many are known to be SHAPERS, possess minor supranatural abilities, they use to help those they encounter.

Some djelots have been known to wander into the darker lands of KHARKHARADONTIS, some of them emerging untouched by the great taint that lurks there.

DJERRA: Geo. Region of ATRAMENTAL TAINT in the c of KHAMID.

It is categorised as a MODERATE THREAT by the KORACH.

It is categorised as a MODERATE THREAT by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

DJESMASH: river in the north of SABIA, flowing south for 290-miles from sources in the METUN KOR Mountains before emptying in the SEA OF BIELOST.

DLONA: Geo. Region in the south east of WESTERN MENISCEA, forming a border of sorts between the south east of VALA and the south of CHAUTULA. Since the earliest records began it was considered a place that is close to the OTHERWORLD and the gestating spirits of the dead, with many seers claiming to see visions of their horrific bodies in midmetamorphosis, either in their visions or as dreams.

NECROMANCERS have, since time immemorial, conducted summoning rituals here to try and bring the dead back to life, though such attempts are rarely successful or work out as intended. It is shunned by most and some areas, particularly in Vala have walls and tower to keep people out.

DNEB: 1. Geo. Island north of the TROPIC OF MAOCARHL, in the SEA OF MIROVEA. Much of the island was revealed by waning sea levels in the first half of the 4th millennium RM, and by c. 3600 RM it had more than doubled in in size.

2. Set. Only major city on the eponymous^(1,) island, that pre-dates its growth following the waning of ELYDEN'S seas, and thought to have appeared in c. 2200 RM (Pop. c. 110,000).

DOAHMII: Set. Major city in the south of PNESSA, in the region of SIMEANAGH, which traditionally was the densest part of its jungles, though the region has been subjected to logging over the past 50-years, leading to a loss of surrounding flora and fauna. The city is situated along the southern shore of river IGRAHORA and controls trade across it via barges that traverse the river through a system of dykes and locks that are centuries old (Pop. c. 130,000).

DOALE: Set. Small coastal city in the far north west of the INTERURBAN STATES (Pop. c. 12,400).

DOAST: Set. Small coastal city in the north of GIBEAH, overlooking the ROILING SEA. It is known for its skyship ports as well as its sea harbour (Pop. c. 13,000).

DOCENT: 1. Atr. Rnk. Org. Medium rank within the Arâthuahi Order of the Sanctified Inquisition, whose members serve in one of two roles, either acting as mentors to other agents, or travelling across the EMPIRE, educating people to the dangers of the Atramenta, where they also act as scouts and information gatherers, reporting back to the Order with their findings, establishing whether further investigation by Shadow Hunters is needed in the area.

2.Pol. Elected rulers of each of the eight prefectures of HOLOLACH^(1.). Each docent is an accomplished SHAPER of great worth as well as a practitioner of the VARPULIS' divine teachings.

DOCET: Geo. Region in the c of GNOTH known for its level glass-like surface known for its reflective quality.

DOCETAN: Set. Settlement in the c of GNOTH, along the course of the river NEPHOT. It forms a part of the northern route of the GNOTHI ROAD and offers lodging, food, and other services to merchants travelling the road (Pop. c. 3,000).

POCTRINES OF AVRAHAM: Rel. His. clay tablets unearthed in PARTHIS in c. 3600 RM believed to bear the teachings of AZER^(2.), scion of the DEMIURGE AVRAHAM. The writings, though largely untranslated, became the centre of a small but influential mystery-cult (also called the Doctrines of Avraham) in Parthis and the north east of the TARAHID ANNEXES towards the end of the 37th century RM, many members of which were SHAPERS. The cult is pervasive in all echelons of Parthisan culture, including its uppermost classes, and some commentators have likened it to a religious cult, which runs contrary to the vocal secular stance taken by the republic.

The popularity of the Doctrines of Avraham was questioned in 3922 RM with the discovery of the so-called ELDRITCH EPISTLES, that threw their validity into doubt. The discovery was rapidly silenced and few today are even aware of their existence.

DODRANTA: Rvr. River in the far north of NAARETH flowing for 415-miles east from sources in the IROT and IROTHA Mountains before meeting the coast at the IAPETAN SEA. The river is used to ferry raw stone east to the city of MAARCH.

DOERIA: Rvr. River in the east of KOLCHIS, flowing west and south for around 575-miles, from sources in the MARMARA Massif and the THAURIR Mountains in ALMAGEST, and the ARINIEL Hills in the c east of Kolchis, before reaching the SEA OF SEKHEM. The river is for the most part narrow and fast moving, its waters crystal clear and cold.

DOG SEA, the: Geo. Dune desert in the c west of ANUBIA, over 22,000-square-miles in size. It is named after the many dog-headed colossi that pepper the area, most of them ruined, half eaten by the crawling sands. These statues are most common in the ruined temple known as CYNOPOLIS.

DOGE'S PALACE, the: Pol. Str. Rulers' palace in the city of HOAMM, on the eponymous island. The palace is renowned for its large display of framed maps dating from all eras of the INNER SEA'S history.

DOGON: Lak. Salty endorheic lake in the south of LYRIDIA, and remnant of the now dry STRAIT OF NÁRTHEL.

DOGRDIN: Int. Set. Sulphur mine in the east of CYHLAGHARR in the region of ANGRDUR (Pop. c. 2,200).

DOHILLA: For. Forest in the west of BROR^(1.), across the border between the north east of ISESETH and the south of TOAHN.

DOIDA: 1. Lak. Lake in the c west of AHRISHEN, fed by the river SAVEST. Like many other lakes in the c of Ahrishen, it is seasonally inundated by floodwaters from summer snowmelt and a lengthy wet season, making it grow and shrink in cycles. The lake once formed the eastern-most part of the SEA OF PYREA though was the first lake to be born from the seas slow retreat.

2. Rvr. Canal in the c north west of AHRISHEN, forming part of the AHRISHENI WATERWAYS, linking lake EURADA^(1.) in the north west and lake Doida^(1.) (after which it is named) in the south east. It is around 34-miles long, and contains 23 locks.

DOIL: Set. Settlement in the south west of RAONGEN^(2.) to the north of the URAHASH Massif, in the JIANNAN Hills. Its people are known to be aesthetes, using shaping and technarcana to help them become more receptive to the visions and DREAMS of the GOD WHO SPEAKS (Pop. c. 6,500).

DOKTANDIYA: Rvr. River in the north east of PARAIYA, flowing north for around 130-miles, before meeting its parent, the river SHIBBOLETH^(3.).

DOLI CODA: Set. Small coastal city on the east of SURUTUR. Its main industry is fishing (Pop. c. 11,000).

DOLINE COAST, the: Sea. Region in the western-most coast of THE SURRACH, over 100-miles long and covering some 650-square-miles. It is characterised by hundreds of sinkholes and caverns, many of which are linked and flooded. The coast is beautiful and its lack of resources of note has left it largely unpopulated and untouched by civilisation. It is a haven for birds and small mammals.

DOLL'S HEADS: Leg. Soc. A common custom in rural parts of ALMAGEST and SKAROS where people use dolls heads to ward off evil spirits. The tradition dates back to the early centuries of the FIFTH AGE when people would make small humanoid fetishes from bundles of twigs. These later evolved into wooden dolls, themselves being replaced by just the heads.

These are commonly strung from belts, baldricks or straps and have become as much a common symbol of luck as an antiquated superstition, and even people in urban areas make and buy ornaments in the shape of doll's heads, perhaps without knowing the roots of the tradition. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

DOLLOR: Set. Small city in the north west of the HENDECARCHY of LONAR in the south west of MALAN. (Pop. c. 15,000).

DOLLURN: Set. Coastal city in the east of KAZZAR⁽²⁾, overlooking the BAY OF ILLIA. Its main industry is shipbuilding (Pop. c. 33,000).

DOLMEN: 1. Mys. Str. Simple stone structures common in ASTUDAN that take the form of doorways or portals, typically with a pair of standing stones with a large lintel resting on them.

They are ancient, dating back to the FADING after the FOURTH AGE till the early centuries of the FIFTH AGE, and were constructed over LEY intersections as a means of stabilising the flow of the MAGICKAL energies and the ARCANE TEMPERS in the surrounding region, making it easier for SHAPERS to act. Today most are either forgotten, lying ruined, though some continue to be used and are tended to by a caste of shamen known as DOLMENWYRDS.

2. Geo. Small mountain-range in the c-south east of GNOTH, known for its jagged peaks and stone-pillars.

DOLMENWYRD: Mys. Sup. Rnk. Wasteland SHAMEN common in ASTUDAN and rural eastern ALMAGEST, where their pagan ways are more likely to escape undetected. A dolmenwyrd is a guardian of ancient DOLMENS⁽²⁾, which lie on important LEY intersections, where they serve variously as waypoints, tombs, cenotaphs, memorials, and/or shrines. They see to it that the flow of supranatural energies crossing the Leys remain undisturbed, and also protect the physical structure from harm – both natural, supranatural, or mortal.

Travellers, rare as they might be in the Desolation, are typically respectful or reverent of the dolmenwyrds, often leaving them offerings or showing their respect by leaving food or other supplies that they might need.

DOLMES: Also 'the Portal-city'. Set. An exotic and unique city located in the c-south east of the VESPERTINE LEAGUE, in the c north west of SAMMAEA, just north of the border with NASTAL (2.). The stone-and-steel city is prosperous and heavily fortified, largely due to its great wealth and the unexplained natural lacuna around which it is constructed. The lacuna acts as a portal or doorway through which any one passing can travel instantaneously to a distant land that is subject to a similar phenomenon in what can only be considered a foreign land, known as FAR DOLMES, that remains unidentified as any known realm within ELYDEN, despite centuries of exploration across its strange lands.

Some scholars have postulated that Dolmes may lead to another PLANET within the SORCHARI SYSTEM, possibly LIVIAD, though such claims are unsupported. Despite this, those travelling through the gateway at night report the stars taking on different positions to what they are used to seeing, which might support the claim, though it also means that they are emerging on the far hemisphere of Elyden or a drastically different latitude.

Far Dolmes is largely a colony used for resource-gathering, with strange stones and ores mined there and transported back to Dolmes, where they are sold as exotic object d'art. Dolmes is very prosperous and is largely unaffected by the death of Elyden, though its tyrannical rulers see little of the massive wealth they generate redistributed amongst the populace – most of which are slaves. The tyrants claim to be the first men to discover and travel through the lacuna, and are said to have been granted immortality by an OTHERWORLDER, whose icon now crowns the city (Pop. c. 160,000).

DOLNAS: Set. Settlement in the southern mainland of the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS (Pop. c. 8,300).

DOLRA: Rui. Ancient abandoned city in the south of AZAZEM. Once a large city, it is now abandoned, its buildings eerily intact, following an ATRAMENTAL incursion there.

DOLYST: Rui. Ancient fortified settlement in the short-lived nation of UHLSAAT (later the CITADEL MOUNTS), on whose ruins the imperial fortress of ASIUM was erected in c. 400 RM. The settlement was built on the highest peak of the eponymous peninsula that divides the DAARKEN GULF from the SEA OF ERIA in c. -1500. Its high-tower had an unobstructed view of the surrounding seas and became in important citadel, the city's walls built atop a steep-sided bluff that made it highly defensible to attack.

In c. -1120 RM Dolyst was attacked by AUERENI barbarians following their victory in the siege of COLYIS that had lasted 7-years. There they slammed against Dolyst's high-walls, largely ineffectively, though managing to cut it off from the rest of the nation, which had already been largely destroyed. In c. -1195 RM a mason known as MONDL escaped the city with a handful of faithful, and he travelled north, attracting refugees and Haageni nomads that had begun to enter Uhlsaati lands. He returned to the KOHOD mountain, building the high-tower of MHAQ, where he led counterattacks against Auereni reinforcements, which effectively left their armies in surrounding Dolyst cut-off. The death of their warlord in c. -1193 RM ended the war, with the remnants of the barbarian army feeing east.

LORD-MASON MONDL oversaw the erection of another 3 high-towers, which eventually led to the dawn of the Citadel Mounts. Dolyst remained an independent city-state, growing from strength-to-strength, its fishing fleets dominating the south of the Daarken Gulf and the Sea of Eria, though by c. -150 RM the waters north west of Dolyst became corrupted by the Atramental affliction that had crippled Dhamatea, leaving them barren. Dolyst suffered as a result and diminished greatly in size and power, becoming a vassal to the Citadel Mounts in -19 RM. From there it lingered until c. 300 RM, where the imperial fleet blockaded it and forced it to surrender in 309 RM. Under Korachani control, its harbours were strengthened and refurbished to accept imperial ships, which by c. 325 RM had begun arriving there, bringing immigrants with them. The city was heavily fortified, becoming a major imperial bastion by c. 400 RM, where it was renamed ASIUM; the name of the city's first governor.

DOMACIUS ELEBIN: (D. 1587 RM) Soc. Pol. LAASKHAN PATRICIAN who in 1563 RM devised a new system of postage of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, where postage was paid by the sender, rather than the recipient.

DOMAINS OF SHAUATAS: Ntn. Nation in the south east of BROR^(1.). climate/territories *

Little is known of the land other than its extreme xenophobia and insular nature that has led to all foreign attempts at penetrating its waters failing. Its shores and borders are guarded by massive steel-skinned towers, and ironclad ships patrol its waters across the western BATHASHALOCEAN.

The nation is guarded from incursion – to the north west by the LAHAED Mountains, to the south by the OROGEN highlands and to the east by the deep waters of the eastern BATHASHAL Ocean.

Its people are thought to have emerged from an earlier culture of disparate lagoon fishermen known as the SHAEWA, and countless legends and myths surround their culture today, most of them likely based on nothing more than urban legends and third hand accounts becoming corrupted by countless retellings. The most populous state in each of its domains is ruled by a SCIONIC CREATURE who wields absolute control within its respective domain, but which is subservient to a living deity that rules over the nation.

Its people value hunting and other survivalist activities, and they follow a strict convoluted apocalyptic cult that serves as the backbone of their culture, informing various aspects of their lives. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations

DOMAINS OF TRISKETHIA: see TRISKETHIAN DOMAINS.

DOME OF THE PATRIARCHS: Str. Large dome in the city of SYCHTA, in the south of SAMMAEA.

DOMEO: Set. Settlement in c PELASGOS, and crossroads, linking west with east via the ILONAN PASS. It forms a part of the RED ROUTE and operated hostels and inns that service those travelling the road (Pop. c. 5,000).

DOMINAR: Lan. Sup. Rnk. Voc. PARTHISAN word for incredibly powerful SHAPERS, roughly analogous with the KORACHANI word BASILEAN.

DOMMI: Set. Fortified settlement in the far east of PNESSA, overlooking the border with ELEKHID (Pop. c. 10,000).

DOMNAR: Soc. Rnk. Hereditary title in ANUBIA. Its bearers are the rulers of its fixed settlements.

DOMNENA III: also, 'the Apostate Pope'. (B. 3739 – D. 3814 RM) His. Rel. Pelasgosi church leader and Archbishop. He was elected to Archbishop Magnus of the Church of the Undying Machine and enacted radical reforms that led to the period known as the Reign of the Apostate Pope, which lasted until his assassination in 3814 RM.

DOMNITORS: Pol. Rnk. In the KORACHANI EMPIRE, administrators of Imperial provinces, most notably VÂRR, whose worth were perceived by Korachan to have waned. The appearance of Domnitors usually indicated the long-term plan to desert a region, usually due to its resources having been spent (otherwise the region would be abandoned by whatever Korachani government had come to rule, and handed over to the INTERREGES instead). Their peak was during c. 1500 – 2800 RM, at the height of Korachani imperialism, but as the empire consumed most of its resources and abandoned its goals of destroying THE OLD FOREST, the region was allowed to crumble; the Domnitors with it.

DOMORM: Set. Small coastal city in the south of ANANTHUL. Its main industry is fishing, specifically in the waters of the TURTA (Pop. c. 16,000).

DON: Set. Settlement in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of SYRTIS^(1.) (Pop. c. 2,400).

DONACHAR: 1. Geo. western-most island in the KORACHANI colony of UKOBACHAN, off the eastern coast of SAMMAEA. It is home to a large prison.

2. Set. KORACHANI prison on the eponymous Island off the eastern coast of SAMMAEA (Pop. c. 13,500).

DONADA: See. Small fortified city in the region of ADA in the c west of THE SURRACH, along the course of the river HATHURAN. It was founded in c. 3600 RM after alluvial gold was found there. It rapidly boomed into a city, though has since diminished into a settlement with various industries (Pop. c. 13,000).

DONAGER: Pol. His. Eth. Ancient ruling elite of KOMMEA, descended from ancient KASPIAN immigrants who brought with them the worship of a god known as the SKY DEITY. Their rule had waned by c. 1100 RM and the eventual coming of the scionic being CUNOMAGLIO to the region saw their descendants mingle with settlers from the south.

The first queen of a reunited Kommea, ARLEIE, was descended from Donagers and proudly flaunted her birthright, leading to a string of dynasties (the $\underline{\text{KOMMEAN DYNASTIES}}$) who could trace their ancestry back to ancient Kommea.

The region's vassalage to Tethysia in 3883 RM led to a decline in importance being attributed to the Donagers, and few today call themselves Donagers and of those who even fewer are of bloodlines that have not been dilute by those of other people. Some Donager families remain, who serve as minor nobles subservient to the extant TETHYSIAN regional governors, and they still reverse their ancient god the Sky-deity.

DONDON: Set. City in the west of SABAISA, forming a regional hub and centre of trade in the area (Pop. c. 38,000).

DONDOUR: Sea. Frozen sea in the far north of LLACHATUL.

DONHAK: Rui. Ancient metropolis in the far west of the territories of ETHISTONITH in RHINOCOLOURA, in the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region of TARUULA HAAL, within the desert of PHRITPHORA. Little is known of the ancient stone city, but it had already been deserted for many years when first encountered by imperial explorers in c. 1150 RM.

DONISIA: His. Geo. Ntn. Ancient historical territories belonging to the DEMIURGE SYBARIS and her tribe, the SHIE. It is unknown where those territories were in relation to today's borders, though it is likely that they were along the northern coast of SAMMAEA.

DONN: Geo. Mountains in the far south west of LOEGRESS^(1,), close to the border with TETHYSIA and HARITH.

DONTA: Set. Settlement in the south of AZAZEM close to the coast, though separated from the water by steep 80-ft cliffs. The cliffs are peppered with damp caverns that are filled with fungi and mosses that are harvested by the people of Donta. It is also known for its CHEESE industry, particularly the production of AHAROR (L) cheese, which is used by ONEIROMANCERS across the KORACHANI EMPIRE and beyond (Pop. c. 3,500).

DONYOON: Sec. Small city in the c of KREM. Known for its master artisans who craft exquisite GLASTEEL weaponry, it is also famed for its intricate glass puzzles that challenge their users to solve them without shattering their delicate designs. These puzzles make their way to the ACACINNATHI DYNASTY, where individuals commission bespoke pieces intended to amaze those who look upon them (Pop. c. 17,000).

DOON: Set. Settlement in the c of ALAM BETHYL, along the course of the river OZZUM, a few miles before it meets the KEGHOK. It is within the territory of UNERKILISS^(2.) (Pop. c. 3,800).

DOOR: Set. Fortified coastal city in the c north of IRUGNA (Pop. c. 37,000).

DOORIA: Set. Small coastal city in the south west of AZAZEM, overlooking the BAY OF BASILEA^{(1.).}

It is a relatively recent city to appear in the region, following the revelation of a new rocky coastline in the wake of expanding coastlines following the dwindling of $\underline{\text{ELYDEN'S}}$ Seas in the early 4^{th} millennium RM. It rapidly became a centre of fishing between c. 3100-3300 RM, though pollution of the bay has caused these industries to dwindle (Pop. c. 11,300).

DOPELLANICH: also 'the Whisperer and the Sleeper'. x. Myt. His. In the mythology and ancient history of ELYDEN, thirteenth of the Two-and-Twenty DEMIURGES, whose children were the CATACHIS⁽²⁾.

They were known as dual beings trapped within a single body and had a unique physiognomy as a result, with four legs, four arms and two heads with one eye, ear, nostril, and mouth in each, and a pearlescent disc behind their head. Each head embodied one of Dopellanich's two aspects — S'HITH (the whisperer) and NELCHAEL (the sleeper, with closed eye and mouth).

They wear the flayed skin of the famed ONEIROMANCER SHAMATZAR

Their known SCIONS are: the DREAMWEAVER, and ETAMOSIS^(L). See Vol IV: the Two-and-Twenty Demiurges.

DOPILIA: Set. Coastal city in the c south east of OBLEVIS. It is a major stop along the BROKERS' ROAD trade route (Pop. c. 55,000).

DOPPON: Geo. Fertile plains dominating the west of TATAR. It is famed for its wild Amaranth and over the years its people have domesticated it into a highly nutritious and easily grown crop that has become the nations' main food source.

DOR ILL: also: 'Light's Tomb'. Rui. Ruined archway in AHRISHEN leading to a hollow in the ASHER Mountains from which emanates an eerie ceaseless halo of rare ATRAMENTAL light.

DORAKRAKOR: For. Dense forest dominating the north west of EZASUH^(2.). To the east, it gives way to ASAHAUROKOR forest.

DORCAS: also 'the Gazelle'. Ast. Con. Constellation in the NORTHERN HEMISPHERE, taking the form of gazelle. Her primary star, WORMWOOD, ceased shining on the night of the 3rd KAIONAL of ASHTALEN. See Vol II: Constellations.

DORESAI: Geo. Old, crumbling mountain some 250 miles long, forming the centre of SAUA'S northern border with TEMUJA.

DORLEIDON: Geo. Mountainous region approximately 350-miles long in the c west of RHEA, forming a partial border with the east of CUTH. It was named by FIRMAMENTISTS after the below island state⁽³⁾ who explored the region in c. 1100 RM, searching for FIRMATITE.

DORMA SAR: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the south west of VÂRR, originally built by early KORACHANI occupiers there and upgraded over the years until the INTERREGES 'retreat from Vârr in 3791 RM. It remains in use to this day by the forces of the HIEROGOTHS as their main fortress.

DORISCA: Set. Small city in the south east of VAALK (Pop. c. 17,200).

DORMIVEGLIA: Set. Major city on the south west of mainland HOAMM, built atop an artificial geometric hollow in which are mined DREAMSTONES in great quantities. It is the largest extant continental city in Hoamm.

The city is wealthy, and is the heart of much of Hoammi economy. It is well-guarded and serves as the headquarters of HOUSE VEREND, which is responsible for the mining and trade of dreamstones across the INNER SEA (Pop. c. 118,300).

DORMM: Set. Settlement in the c of PNESSA (Pop. c. 8,000).

DORO: Set. Coastal city in the east of ALTHA⁽²⁾. It is a major industrial centre (Pop. c. 43,000).

DOROPHONOS: Rvr. Major river in the nation of AYAD, the drainage basin of which dominates most of its landscape. It flows for an estimated 820-miles from many sources in the LERASA Mountains and the highlands of PELAN.

DOROTA KUBAN: (B. 3939 RM) Pol. Present prime minister of the vassal state of BISBUT.

DOROZHA, ORDER OF THE: lit. 'high guard'. Mil. Rnk. In the KORACHANI EMPIRE, an elite guard-caste, whose members are drawn from influential PATRICIAN HOUSES. Individuals of the order can rise to become powerful figures in their own right, sometimes becoming heads of defensive agencies of the IRON or BORDER GUARD, even succeeding a patrician to power in some cases.

DORRA: Sea. Small inland sea in the c of the TEMPLAR STATES. It was a far larger sea some 2,000-years ago, though has dwindled in size with the lowering of sea levels, and it is thought that it will become a lake within the next centuries.

DORSA: Set. Settlement in the c west of KORACHAN, east of the FATUACH Mountains, known for its vineyards (Pop. c. 2,500).

DORSAN: Set. Settlement in the c of AQUARIIA along the course of the river BELDAT (Pop. c. 8,000).

DORTHA: Set. Small coastal city in the west of the PANTHEON ISLES, in the region of KARAXHANES (Pop. c. 12,000).

DORUK: 1. Geo. Originally a vast winding plain in the east of AZAZEM, stretching from the ALLARIS⁽¹⁾ ridge in the north, to the BAY OF BATHOS⁽¹⁾ in the south, covering some 40,000 square-miles. It by c. 800 RM it was colloquially known as the 'Garden of the Empire', on account of the vast farmlands and fields that existed there, providing food to the EMPIRE and its colonies and dependencies.

2. Geo. Centuries of deforestation, over-farming and the removing of native grasses that held the soil together and absorbed water eventually led to the region developing into a dry barren land, leading to the slow death of the farming industry in Azazem.

By c. 2400 – 2900 RM, the region of Doruk had effectively become a desert, destroying hundreds of communities and farmsteads, displacing thousands of families, and killing millions of livestock over the years. The AZAZEMI government attempted to reverse this damage by using TEMPESTARII SHAPERS to bring rain to the region and reintroduce agriculture to the region. The effort was initially a success, but unforeseen changes in the climate brought about by the Tempestarii led to torrential rains that caused massed flooding and landslides of the Doruk basin, killing and displacing hundreds of thousands of people from the east of Azazem in one of the largest single man-made ecological disasters of the FIETH AGE.

The event, known now as the DORUK CALAMITY, irrevocably altered the geography of the Doruk basin and shifted the course of the river ZEMEN^(1.) as much as 20-miles west, obliterating hundreds of communities.

The entire region remains now a barren land, empty but for the rotten wooden remains of farmsteads, standing vigil over a grey landscape.

DORUK CALAMITY, the: His. Massive man-made ecological disaster that struck the east of AZAZEM in the region of DORUK^(1.) in 3088 RM, killing and displacing hundreds of thousands of people.

Centuries of deforestation, over-farming and the removal of native grasses from the Doruk basin throughout the 2nd and 3nd millennia RM had left the desertified. In a bid to restore the region, the Azazemi government began a project in c. 2920 RM to alter the climate and reintroduce agriculture. Tempestarii Shapers, which had formed a mainstay of the Minasteria OF Agriculture for centuries, were employed to alter the local weather to benefit agriculture – introducing rain and more temperate microclimates, for instance.

Normally taking a subtle form, in Doruk they were encouraged to push their shaping to the limit, with the end goal of making Azazem an agricultural utopia. They worked for years, and after decades of indirect manipulation, were successful. Farming settlements and livestock were reintroduced to the Doruk region, though in late 3086 RM, after the shapers had stopped their manipulation of the weather, it became clear that all was not well. The region was experiencing its first weather cycles without any outside assistance through either shaping or technarcana, and heavy rains were widely reported across the Doruk region in the month of ASHTALEN, continuing throughout the winter into early 3088 RM, by which point the basin had been stricken by severe flooding for months. This reached a crux in HAELEN, when massive landslides in the western foothills of the TEKRACHT and OTHACHA mountains devastated the east of the Doruk basin, effectively burying the river ZEMEN (1.), which would re-emerge with continued rains and flooding, some 20-miles west of its original location.

The calamity saw hundreds of settlements, some of them large cities and hubs of metallurgical and DROSS industries, obliterated and their people wiped out. Those who could, fled to the north or across the BAY OF BATHOS^(1.) to safer lands, where they became refugees or established new settlements, amongst them FALKAN.

The Doruk Calamity caused the KORACHANI EMPIRE to re-evaluate its use of Tempestarii in agriculture, and they are now used in a reactionary rather than pre-emptive capacity – controlling storms, redirecting rain on a small scale and so-on, rather than attempting to alter climates on a large DORN KINGS, the: Pol. His. A dynasty that rose in the west of MHAROKK, during the WAR OF SUNDERING. The first Dorn King was the champion DAZAKUR, who rallied the disillusioned and forgotten people between the rivers CTHONA and LISSA in 3704 RM, becoming the first Dorn King, and founding the nation of ALLASAN from the city of ALLAS. The name Dorn Kings harks to an ancient legend common to the region and was adopted by Dazakur, being used by his descendants.

The line of Dorn kings ended in 3887 RM with the self-imposed exile of the 5th and last King Alabas Azer III, whose childhood was ended by LAACHOMI attack of Allasan, leading to the execution of his father, and his mother being forced to wed the following his self-imposed exile to atone for the wrongdoings of his predecessor. Since then, the region has been ruled by a line of stewards who are prevented by law from enacting new laws or edicts, leading to the stagnation of Allasan. In c. 3874 RM the stronghold of YBEI was built, taking its name from an ancient ruin beneath it.

DOROSS: Set. Small city in the contested lands of UTIMAN, in the north of PORPHYR (Pop. c. 14,300).

DORTISS: Int. Set. Crystal mines in the tribe of ORIM in the far west of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 3,000).

DORYNTH: Set. Major city in the east of KOLCHIS that stands on the western bank of the river DOERIA. It was attacked by ALMAGESTI forces in 2992 RM, after geological surveys in the area discovered deposits of iron, though most invading forces had been whittled down by indigenous trappers and parties in the THAURIR Mountains by then. It was the last major battle in a decades-long war with Almagest. Since then, it has become famous for its 150-ft. high astronomical tower and its three CLOCKS, which are maintained year-round by expert HOROLOGISTS (Pop. c. 52,800).

DOSSAL: also 'the Hanging City'. Ser. Independent settlement in the c west of THE SURRACH. It is situated along the steep cliffs in the treacherous eastern slopes of the PSAMMOL Mountains and is home to various monasteries and religious groups and is known for the high-quality manuscripts it creates (Pop. c. 24,000).

DOTHEGAR: Geo. Mountain-range that serves as a natural border between the nation of RHINOCOLOURA and its vassal, the territories of ETHISTONITH. The east of the range is home to the independent state of HAZOR.

DOTHIL: (B. 1777 – D. ?) also 'Surveyor of Impossibilities'. Car. KORACHANI cartographer and, later, explorer. Born in KRIESHTAN, on the island of MALETH, in the middle of the INNER SEA, to a sea-merchant family, he spent his youth on one of his father's vessels before studying at the OBSERVATORY in DEOCHAN, where he became a cartographer in 1796 RM. He spent some years in a private office, reproducing maps by famed explorers for the literati in KHADON, though always wanted to be the explorer himself.

After working hard to attract rich patrons between 1802 and 1803 RM, he was granted a charter to explore KHARKHARADONTIS in the name of the Empire. In 1811 RM he came across a previously unrecorded hollow that led into the mythical realm of CARCERI, the so-called underworld that stretches beneath as much of ELYDEN'S surface. There, he became obsessed with the PRISON CARCERI and devoted the rest of his life to a futile attempt at mapping it and cataloguing its flora and fauna He grew rich bringing back exotic spoils from his expeditions and was able to prolong his life through ATRAMENTAL means and TECHNARCANE orthoses, though few ever believe his wondrous tales of the oddities he came across.

Known as the Surveyor of Impossibilities in his first years of exploration, he was known to spend years and even decades away from home, with his increasingly infrequent returns to the civilized world becoming cause for celebration. But each return showed ELYDEN the price of his expeditions. His mind was broken and his body was not that of the man who first left Korachan in 1803 RM. His stories became more fanciful and grotesque, and he fell out of favour, accused of lunacy by all but his most ardent followers, who would all eventually die of old age, leaving him with no living link to the Empire. His return to the capital in 2215 RM was largely ignored — most had never heard of him and even cartographers and scholars had passed him off as dead over a century before, and accused the man as being an impostor. The few who would listen to his ravings assumed he was a descendant of the first Dothil, though his ramblings of chambers without ceiling, baroque engines hundreds of square miles in size, and cathedrals that hung from cavern roofs didn't garner him much acclaim.

His last recorded return to civilisation, if indeed it was him, was in 3978 RM. If that's true, he would have been 2,201 years-old – an unimaginably long life, even by Korachani standards, which have led some biographers to postulate that he had died at some point in his travels, returning as an otherworlder to continue his work; or that he had discovered some alien method with which to prolong his life; or that time may not pass the same in Carceri as it does in the surface world.

Much of what we know of deep Carceri is attributed to him and his acolytes, though more recent findings could just as easily be the ramblings of a mad descendant. The move valued and tested maps of Carceri – particularly those of the upper depths – were drawn up by him and are prized to this day.

DOTTUR: Set. Coastal town in the south of AZAZEM (Pop. c. 1,800).

DOUN: 1. Geo. Plains in the north east of TEMUJA.

2. Int. Pol. Soc. Bus. Small PATRICIAN HOUSE native to AZAZEM, known for its eccentric ways, most particular of which is its mobile ancestral home, known as the GARDEN OF DOUN, which crawls on gigantic caterpillar tracks across the wastes of Azazem and its surrounding lands.

The house is believed to have once been charged with governance of vast tracts of agricultural lands, which slowly died to mismanagement. It later dabbled in the nascent science of DROSS manufacture, becoming one of the houses that pioneered its production in the INNER SEA in c. 2780 RM. Its lands were later taken by the imperial government and in 2821 RM it was charged with further developing techniques required to cheapen the production of dross, earning it a place amongst the famed Attropy Houses. Its new role required its members to travel across agricultural centres across Azazem and beyond and over the years it began to rely on conveyors and LANDSHIPS, living in them while moving across the empire.

In c. 3200 RM it commissioned the construction of a large landship, which was completed in 3282 RM and christened as the GARDEN OF DOUN, after which the house completely relocated to the engine, in which it lives to this day. It employs various smaller (yet still large) conveyors that are used to shuttle house envoys and diplomats across the empire as the Garden of Doun crawls across Azazem. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

DOUN, GARDEN OF: Int. Veh. Pol. Gigantic LANDSHIP that serves as the house and bae of operations of the ATROPI HOUSE of DOUN. The great vehicle crawls across the empire on 6 caterpillar tracks, taking the house and its envoys to centres of DROSS production. It is named after the verdant gardens that rest on its arched back, in the centre of which is the estate of HOUSE Doun. The Garden of Doun is famed across AZAZEM and it can often be seen crawling in the wasteland on its way to strategic locations.

It was built in 3282 RM and has been constantly in operation since then, moving slowly from place to place as the House conducts its business. Its vast hangars are home to dozens of smaller (yet still large) ambassadorial conveyors that are used by House members to travel more quickly to embassies and dross manufactories across the KORACHANIEMPIRE.

It employs dozens of engineers, mechanics, technologists and gardeners, not to mention the slaves and household staff more common to the more mundane PATRICIAN estates and villas found across the empire.

DOUVA: Geo. Island in the north east of TATAR in the east of the east of the IGUZZEN lagoon in the BAY OF RIPAA. It was part of KAZZAR⁽²⁾ until 3970 RM, though control passed to Tatar following years conflict and territorial disputes on the isle, over ownership of collieries. As a result, most of the islands' inhabitants speak KAZIRAN, following their years under previous Kazzaran rule.

DOWER: Sup. Form of FIRMAMENTISM whose users rely heavily on FOCI in the drawing of their powers. Without a focus many dowers find their Firmamental abilities greatly diminished, though while in possession of a focus (a specific item through which the SHAPER has grown accustomed to using) they are incredibly potent within their sphere of influence.

DOX: Set. City occupying the northern slopes of the SYNHODOS plateau, in the c of JURRAS^(2.). It was the Jurrasi capital until 403 RM, when the government was moved to DERKAZ, and was also home to a MYSTERY CULT dedicated to the entity SENDKA, which was the main religion in Jurras until c. 420 RM, at which point it was assimilated by the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE (Pop. c. 50,000).

DOXAMELES: For. Sparse scrubland in the c east of AQUARIIA.

DOYEN: Rnk. Scholars within the WHITE LEAGUE, who also serve as clerks within its administration, and bankers of the WHITE BANK.

DOYEN-KNIGHT: Mil. Rnk. Scholar knights within the WHITE LEAGUE, who, unlike the DOYENS that they are drawn from, travel across the INNER SEA, documenting their discoveries alongside the more militant warriors of the order. Many of their findings have found their way into major works such as the ENCYCLOPAEDIA ELYDEN.

DRACONA: Lak. Salty endorheic lake in the south of LYRIDIA, in what was once the STRAIT OF NÁRTHEL. The lake is fed by the waters of the river UEFIRAT, whose flow is bolstered in summer following snowmelt in the UEFIR Highlands as well as rains in winter. The extra water increases the level of the lake enough that it sometimes breaks its banks and flows into the remnants of the Strait of Nárthel to the west, though this effect has lessened over the years. The last recorded incident was in 3997 RM. The name is ancient and its origins are now unknown.

DRAD GATH: see MIRROR LAKE.

DRADAMAN: Sea. Reef in the west of the MAIDEN ISLES, between the island of ELDARA in the north and VOIRIN in the south. It is known for the labyrinthine formation of its reef.

DRAGAN ALARIC: m. Atr. Per. (B. 3933 RM) SHAPER and high-ranking member of the VÁMAN ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION, who serves as a High-INQUIRER. He has undertaken the SHADOW MARCH twice and his body has contracted ATRAMENTAL AILMENTS as a result, leaving one of his arms withered and blackened from prolonged exposure to the corruption around the SEPULCHRAL PALACE.

DRAGLIA: Set. Major coastal city in the north west of CHAUTULA, overlooking the SEA OF ALETA. Its natural harbour is very deep and it is known for its dry docks, which repair and build ships from across MENISCEA (Pop. c. 130,000).

DRAGOMAN: Pol. Rnk. Common court title amongst nations in the north east of SAMMAEA, notably SARASTRO, VENTHIR, and NAARETH (where it is one of few roles in which men are given prominence). Their roles include acting as guides, translators and interpreters in cities and on journeys. During the rule of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, the dragoman caste remained, though became assimilated into the occupying empire's culture. Despite this, the strength of the dragoman caste was enough to allow its spread to other nations, and by c 1000 RM other regions, such as PELASGOS and LIDEA became home to the dragoman caste, and they survive to this day.

In Venthir they are appointed to visiting diplomats and dignitaries under the guise of guides, though it is well known that they act as spies for QUEEN HETEPHERES.

DRAGON: 1. Alc. Myt. Phil. In GNOTH, one of many anthropomorphisms, used to explain natural phenomena and ALCHEMICAL reactions. Synonymous with true enlightenment, and seen by scholars as a symbolism for the DEMIURGE URAKABARAMEEL and his teachings; a reconciliation of spirits between SCIONS denied by their ancestral father.
2. Fau. Fantastical extinct creature, commonly linked and attributed to the DEMIURGE ASHTERATH. Described as being reptilian and of large wings, their closest surviving relatives are the BALAURS, PHYLACTERS, SERAPIS, and TARRAGONS. They are thought to have died out some time during the early FOURTH AGE, possibly hunted by Ashterath himself.

DRAGON, the: 1. Also 'Iaga' or 'the Guardian'. Mys. In TEMUJAN SPIRITUALISM, the TUTELARY SPIRIT of protection. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

2. Ast. Con. Constellation in the NORTHERN HEMISPHERE of ELYDEN, commonly regarded as the largest and most well-known of constellations. See Vol II: Constellations.

DRAGON ARCH, the: Int. His. Arc. Ancient ruin in the west of ATARAXIA, in the foothills of the BLACK MOUNTAINS. Around 200-ft. high, it is carved from FIRMATITE in situ, made to resemble two dragons, their bodies and necks entwined. It is free-standing and, despite its apparent age (it is thought to date to the middle FOURTH AGE), it miraculously stands solid to this day.

DRAGON ASSASSINS: Org. Group of assassins based in the fortress of MUNDER NAH in the ABOSHATHOT Mountains in the far east of THE SURRACH. Their blades are fashioned after ancient dragon teeth, and it is said a real blade of such design hangs in their base.

DRAGON-BLOOD TREE: Flo. Exotic trees native to the north of the island-continent of BROR (1.). They are characterised by their parasol-like appearance, with branches and vane-like leaves concentrated in the top of the tree above a thick, segmented, bare trunk that seeps a thick red sap – its namesake – which is dried and utilised in various industries, most commonly as a varnish or dye. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

DRAGON ISLES: also 'the Zhoffar Isles'. Geo. Common name around the INNER SEA REGION for the archipelago known as the ZHOFFAR ISLES, located off the far western coast of WESTERN SAMMAEA.

The origin of the archipelago's name is difficult to place, though few scholars now believe in any draconic links. DHA NAR.

DRAGON, ORDER OF THE: Org. Secretive militant order common in EASTERN LLACHATUL of which little is known around the INNER SEA. Its leaders are known as Draguleans.

DRAGON TOWER, the: Mil. Str. Coastal fortress in the north west of JURRAS⁽²⁾, overlooking the SEA OF TARAMAR, and has been home to the HARBINGERS since c. 2300 RM.

DRAGON'S SPINE: see SPONDYLIA.

DRAGON WARS: His. Ancient conflict that took place during the early THIRD AGE, in which the DEMIURGE ASHTERATH and his children the SERAPIS waged a barbarous war from their stronghold of HINDESSEL against the other mortals, with no objective other than bloodshed and the soring of discord. Eventually, seeing the grandeur and scope of the PLAGI empire, Ashterath turned his attentions towards them, bringing the conflict to his old mentor Rachanael, causing great destruction that spilled over into the domains of many other peoples.

The war ended with the intervention of TALANTEHUT, who banished Ashterath to the heavens and cursed his children to a bestial existence. She commanded Rachanael to divide the monolithic plagi empire to limit its influence in ELYDEN.

Rachanael laughed. He was the first being to deny one of Talantehut's edicts and it broke her. Rachanael, his opponent killed and his armies neutralised, continued sowing destruction across Elyden, unopposed.

ALLAISHADA saw this and knew that it had to stop. Seeing what Rachanael had done with the Atramenta, she turned to DURUTHILHOTEP and together the two were able to harness the FIRMAMENT, turning her into a conduit for its presence in Elyden – the AVATAR OF LIGHT — SILLAMÉ. She brought balance to Rachanael's actions, demolishing the domains of the plagi and bringing an order to Elyden that continued throughout the Third Age, ending the Dragon Wars.

DRAGONSHEDGE: Flo. Large hedge known for its very tough wood, that burns very slowly with a lot of smoke. It is most common in TEMUJA, and the north of SAUA and MALAN, where it was traditionally used in religious rituals. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

DRAHEN: Set. City in the north west of AHRISHEN, close to the border with THE OLD FOREST. Drahen has steady trade partnerships with the city of ORM ZALESH to the north west, and is thought by many to be controlled by the GREY MERCHANTS (Pop. c. 20,000).

DRAHOMIRA: Geo. Grey crags in the north west MALAN, in the HENDECARCHIES of AONIA and CYRENIA, which act as a natural border with the south east TEMUJA. Their southernmost reaches were once home to a large ruin of grey stones, though nothing remains of it today for it was slowly disassembled over the centuries for use in other construction projects.

DRAIDH: Set. fortified coastal city in the north west of the HENDECARCHY of NHORA in the north east of MALAN. It has a large port, which trades goods across the GULF OF ELRI (Pop. c. 46,000).

DRAIN FLY: Fau. Large flying insects that can grow to around 1" long that live naturally in fens and bogs but which have adapted to life in temperate urban areas, where they are often found over sewer grates and vents, and which are considered pests. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

DRAK LON: lit. 'Citadel of Judgement'. 1. Pol. Sct. Capital city of OPHIUSSA, located in the east of the nation, to the north east of the ESATH Mountain. The city has existed since c. 1000 RM, when it was a powerful polity, and eventual opponent of the OPHIUSSAN LEAGUE, moving against it with its ally APHALASS in 3262 RM, effectively excising a third of its trade-routes and caravanserais, with many smaller settlements defecting. This led to the dissolving of the league in 3285 RM, after which Drak Lon would grow in importance.

Over the coming decades the culture of Drak Lon would spread, becoming more pervasive than that of NALE, and by c. 3300 RM it had come to control what by then was known as Ophiussa, becoming its capital in 3308 RM. Today it is a major centre of education in the nation, and is also the base of its military recruitment (Pop. c. 820,000).

2. Mil. Str. Fortification in OPHIUSSA and stronghold of the SUCCESSOR-KING and heart of the capital city^(1.). It was constructed in c. 3800 RM, atop an existing fortress that once overlooked the SEA OF SERPENTS following the rise to power of the Successor-king.

DRAKAINA: Pol. Geo. Tribe in the west of MULCIBER, in the GROWING MOUNTAINS, in the north east of SAMMAEA. The people of Drakaina inhabit the hot roughlands that dominate the north eastern face of Mulciber, overlooking the Tomb of the Lost Ones in the west of the deserts of ANUBIA. The culture of Drakaina once revolved around the FIRE LIZARDS that their warriors rode into battle, and the SERAPIS that once plagued their lands. The serapis have been largely neutered, and fire lizards now remain as a cultural emblem, though some rural settlements still maintain the old traditions. The strength of their defeated foes was thought to be passed on to the victors by ingesting their flesh, and so, defeated serapis were cooked and eaten communally. The practice remains to this day, though given the relative rarity of encounters with serapis, it is uncommon.

The ruling city of Drakaina is DRAUT, known for its worship of a corrupted idol of ASHTERATH known as OTHUR HALL. Clashes with Anubian nomads are common along the floodplains of the river ATEIGHA.

DRAKE: Fau. Creatures native to lands west of the STRAIT OF SKAROS, synonymous with BALAURS. They are reptilian bipeds that stand some 8-feet high at the shoulder and 25-feet long from head to tail. Their skin has a metallic green sheen, and the limbs, neck and tail of males are covered in brightly coloured feathers, not unlike those of a peacock.

They are fierce hunters and wild, extremely hard to domesticate, even if they are incredibly rarely seen, only occasionally glimpsed in the hills of the BLACK MOUNTAINS by trade ships plying their trade up and down the Strait of Skaros. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

DRAKEMOUNT, the: (11,181-ft.) Geo. Great steep-sided mount along the south western peaks of the SPONDYLA Mountains the top of which grazes the low clouds of central HARÉSHK. The skeleton of a drake tops the mound, and it is a place of pilgrimage amongst worshippers of ASHKERON.

DRAKIN: Fau. Small omnivorous creatures distantly related to DRAKES, with which they share many physical features. They are common in heavily wooded areas in LLACHATUL, particularly in the south of MALAN and THE OLD FOREST, where they are floor predators. Though difficult to tame, they are sometimes seen as companions to wealthy and influential people. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

DRAL RETH: Set. Major city in the c south west of KOLCHIS. It is one of the larger cities in Kolchis, and lies south of the northern POLAR CIRCLE. It is famed for its astronomical CLOCKTOWERS and its clockmakers, whose timepieces are sold across the INNER SEA REGION (Pop. c. 120.000).

DRANA: Set. Settlement in the c of CHANDOS (3.) (Pop. c. 8,200).

DRAPETOMANIA: Med. In the KORACHANI EMPIRE, an affliction common amongst the chattel-workers and work-slaves of the MANUFACTORIES, where they come to fear their skyless lives and the monotony of the MANUFACTORY, resulting in a compulsion to escape. This is often irrational, coupled with nausea and vomiting; sufferers usually die in the process of escape. Those that do make it out find their sickness cured within a few days.

DRAZZAN: Soc. Org. One of the 17 Grand Houses of the Nacre League. The House is based in the west of AKANTHRA, and its computers are renowned for their mastery of logistics, calculations and supply chain management. They oversee the coordination of caravans along the most treacherous parts of the Nacre Road. The Houses expertise ensures that goods arrive safely and on time, despite adverse conditions along the road.

DRERLLATAR FARISÛN, BEARER OF THE GODSTONE: (B. c. 1580 – D 2175 RM) His. Pol. Ruler of ASSEER from c. 1620 RM until his death five centuries later. He was born in a tumultuous time, centuries after the discovery of a powerful GODSTONE brought chaos to the region, with warlords allying with each other against whoever controlled the godstone at a specific time. This led to it changing hands many times, making a target of whoever possessed it. Despite the otherworldly powers granted to the wielder of the godstone, every person who gained control of it was eventually killed.

Drerllatar of the $\underline{FARIS\hat{U}N}$ kindred came into possession of the godstone in c. 1600 RM following generations of it being a powerful heirloom, being handed down from parent to child in the dynastic fortress of \underline{LIRIN} . He alone was able to use the godstones' powers to subjugate all his rivals, forming the first truly united Asseerian nation by c. 1620 RM.

Unlike many others who wielded the godstone before him, Drerllatar seemed to innately understand its powers and used it directly rather than as a mere symbol as others before him had. It granted him unnaturally long life, and he wielded great powers not unlike those of a SHAPER while carrying it.

He was a ruthless leader, personally executing those who opposed him, and over the centuries of his rule thousands were killed in this way, cementing his rule as undisputed overlord of Asseer. However, possession of the godstone over so much time is said to have corrupted him, warping judgement. No MORTAL was ever meant to wield such an artefact, let alone be in its possession for so long. He introduced CANON LAW to Asseer in 1677 RM, which remains in use to this day.

Over the decades, he found himself becoming numb to sensations and emotions, seeing colours less brightly. This forced him to seek more extreme forms of sensation and pleasure just so he could feel something. Stories of grotesque deeds within his court abounded as his reign progressed. He became more insular and delegated work, while idolizing the godstone, allowing no-one else near it. He was last seen in public in 2096 RM, and spent the last century of his rule living in the treasure chamber where the godstone was kept, spending his days before the great shrine dedicated to it.

In 1923 RM he reformed the ASSEERI PANTHEON, elevating himself to the rank of chief deity whilst delegating the dozens of traditional deities to demigods under his rule. This allows him to finally rid Asseer of the GODLESS caste, who are rounded up and executed ruthlessly within a few days of the reforms taking effect. Few, if any, escape these actions and the religion suffers in the wake of their culling.

The doors leading to the shrine were found open one morning in 2175 RM, and the headless body of Drerllatar impaled on the blood-soaked shrine. His head was later found outside the gate leading to the palace. No culprit was ever found, though dozens of people were executed in the chaos that followed. Efforts were made to cover up the death, but word travelled fast and Asseer descended into internecine war soon after, destroying the unity that he had brought to the region. Of the godstone there was no trace.

DRAS: Geo. Expansive karst formations in the east of ABRAXA⁽²⁾ beyond which lie the jungles of CAMBAR.

DRASS: Oth. Set. OTHERWORLDER city in the east of the wastes of ATRAMETA in the south east of CAMAU. The city is notable in that it is populated exclusively by OTHERWORLDERS, SCIONS, HALFBLOODS and other divine-blooded creatures, largely due to the fact that the vast majority of MORTAL PEOPLES become afflicted by a debilitating wasting disease of FIRMAMENTAL origin that calcifies the body, leaving its victims dead, their flesh stone-like and malformed.

The city thrives on its independence from the mortal world and is largely insular, trading with outside regions only rarely. Culturally it is elitist, looking upon mortals as weak creatures, and they are commonly captured and brought to the peripheries of the city where they are displayed naked for all to see their slow torturous transformation into stone. Later-generation halfbloods are considered lower-class citizens, and some are known to suffer mildly from the Firmamental effects of the area, causing them to live in discomfort, if not pain (Pop. unknown).

DRAUT: Pol. Set. Ruling city in the tribe of DRAKAINA, in the east of MULCIBER, in the GROWING MOUNTAINS, along the banks of the river ATEIGHA and surrounding valley. Clashes with ANUBIAN NOMADS are common in the area, as the river lies close to the border with Anubia (Pop. c. 53,500).

DRAXIA: Set. Conurbation in the c south of ATARAXIA, known for its logging industry, and wooden ornaments and furniture are often sold to merchants travelling the RED ROUTE, sometimes finding their way in distant markets (Pop. c. 15,050).

DRAY: 1. Oth. Infertile HALFBLOODS, often sickly, though sometimes of curious properties or abilities. Their livers are prized in some regions as postcoital contraceptives, dried and ground up as powder, which is also called dray, though there is little science to back this up. Drays can be from any halfblooded lineage and the term is a colloquialism used to describe any sickly or degenerate halfblood. See Vol II: Anthropeidos..

2. Med. Postcoital CONTRACEPTIVE made from the ground-up livers of the eponymous HALFBLOODS^(1.) that are renowned for their barrenness.

DRBAND: Geo. Rocky highland region along the western-coast of CYHLAGHARR.

DREAM ARCHITECT: also 'dream jockey'. Sup. Pol. Rnk. Dre. Specific type of ONEIROMANCER (known as SOMNIARIIN in the KORACHANI EMPIRE) who specialise in implanting bespoke DREAMS into their clients' sleep. They are most commonly found in DREAM DENS, where they operate TECHNARCANE machinery, either selling LUCID DREAM experiences to groups or individuals.

DREAM CITY, the: see ONEIRACHAN.

DREAM CREATURE: see ONEIROI.

DREAM JOCKEY: see ONEIRONAUT.

DREAM DEN: also 'Oneirotopia'. Sup. Dre. Bus. Establishments common in regions were ONEIROMANCY is also found, where people go to experience vivid LUCID DREAMS – either their own, or new DREAMS planted there by Oneiromancers. The means through which these dreams are experienced are various, though most commonly by either submitting oneself to the hands of a SHAPER, or, as is often the case in larger establishment, a TECHNARCANE engine that can serve multiple people at once.

The legal status of these dens varies by nation, or even from region-to-region. They are regulated in the KORACHANI EMPIRE and their owners must be licenced SOMNIARIIN. They are very common in PARTHIS, where they are found in most cities and offer various services. They have been prohibited in SARASTRO since 3712 RM, though they still remain in its larger cities as underground establishments. They are perhaps most common in VENTHIR, where they have been a part of its culture for millennia, with most dens having communal dream pits where groups can share in the same dream.

DREAM QUEST: also 'hypnerotomachia'. Soc. Sup. Dream quests are a common cultural practice amongst societies with strong ONEIROMANTIC traditions, where individuals (or sometimes groups) must undertake a 'quest' whilst LUCID DREAMING or travelling in the DREAMWORLD. Often aided by oneiric drugs or taking place in places where the link between the MATERIAL PLANE and the Dreamworld are close, the dream quest can sometimes be a COMING-OF-AGE RITUAL such as amongst the people of ETHISTONITH.

The quest itself is usually secondary to the experience, and that is the lesson that is often taught to people undertaking their first dream quest—that the journey can be as important, if not more-so, than the destination. This teaches people to live in the moment and to appreciate the present more than a yearning for what has been or what has not yet come to pass.

The dream quest itself is usually undertaken in solitude, in a secluded natural setting, though the growth of urban areas and $\underline{DREAM\ DENS}$ has seen an increase in dream quests that are undertaken indoors and/or aided by $\underline{TECHNARCANE}$ means.

The most notable dream quests include the ARDIKHALU, which is undertaken by young AANTHA in N'RAKH prior to rising to the rank of K'HAT; and the DREAMWALK of Ethistonith, in which groups of children about to turn 17 bond while undertaking a long dream quest.

DREAM WALKERS, the: Ent. Org. Veh. Dre. A troupe of actors who travel in a mobile theatre-AMBULANT across SKAROS and northern LAASKHA, and occasionally BASSORAH⁽²⁾ and IPANAH⁽²⁾. It is known for its intricate mechanisms that allow it to fold out when stationary, giving the impression of it being far bigger than it actually is. This includes using mirrors and other stage trickery to enhance its appearance.

Aside from putting on performances, the troupe is known for its 'Hall of Dreams and Mirrors'. Rumoured to be connected to a TECHNARCANE engine (itself possibly operated by a powerful ONEIROMANCER) that allow patrons to travel in a reconstruction of their DREAMS and desires, as though they were made manifest. It is unknown if this is true, and if so, quite how the engine works, for no other known engines similar to it are known to exist.

The troupe has become adept at evading law enforcement as well as the prying eyes of scholars, oneiromancers, and AIWAHAN and GRIGORIAN agents. They typically only spend a few days in a particular location, and travel off of major roads in a haphazard way to prevent people anticipating the next settlement they will be travelling to.

DREAMER, the: also 'Onoched' and 'the Watcher of Worlds Unseen'. Int. Oth.
Pol. Dre. OTHERWORLDLY SEER based in the BASTION OF STEEL in KHADON, KORACHAN. KORACHAN! legends claim that the Dreamer has been present since time immemorial and there are no records confirming when they first appeared or were first used as a seer by the people of the region.

Few can directly speak with the Dreamer, and those can in include the ARCHPOTENTATE himself, THE CONSULITE, some of the members of the COUNCIL OF SEVEN, and a few other high-ranking SHAPERS and ONEIROMANCERS throughout history. Its visions are powerful omens, and its own dreams are said to seep into the dreams of those who sleep in the Bastion or close to it, slowly shaping them to its own image.

The Archpotentate Malichar has been known to seek the counsel of the Dreamer on occasion, though historical accounts claim that it speaks in riddles that are interpreted by people to fulfil their wildest fears, so cannot be reliable. But, being an otherworlder himself, it is said that Malichar can wade through the lies to view the truth beneath.

DREAMFISH: see VARESVAT.

DREAMFORGED: also 'Ephiarraniin'. Dre. Mil. Rnk. Elite militant SHAPERS of the SOMNIARECHI ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION. They are trained soldiers and are all of them expert SOMNIARIIN; equipped to deal with the worst of DREAMSCAPES and their ONEIROI inhabitants. They are equipped with the most sophisticated REALITY SUITS available to the order and wield rare LUCID JEZAILS – powerful weapons tailor-made to flense oneiroi and strip dreamscapes from the MATERIAL PLANE.

They are recruited from amongst the lesser PROSELYTES who show their worth in the field, and may return to them later-on as sergeants, leading them in the field.

DREAMING DEATH: Rel. Dei. An entity believed to be buried in the darkest reaches of the MAW OF DORMORRO in DURCHAA. It is worshipped by the OHATAN people, who refuse to move near the Maw out of fear. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

DREAMING GOD: Dei. Rel. Dre. God worshipped by the people of OKKHAM. The god emerged in c. 3425 RM from religious teachings that grew in the city of RAMIFERA following the growth of the DREAMSCAPE of EKON OSSYL over the previous decades. The teachings revolved around the appearance of a white figure that populated the collective DREAMS of those in the vicinity of Ekon Ossyl, and appeared to them in visions, spreading across Okkham and beyond (in the form of a MYSTERY CULT). See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

DREAMING GOD, CULT OF: Rel. Dre. Religious cult that emerged in OKKHAM in c. 3425 RM following the appearance and growth of the DREAMSCAPE of EKON OSSYL decades earlier. The religion and its teachings spread across Okkham over the next decades and even appeared in nations such as NOAVATUR, CHEIRA, and ZHARIAH^(2.), in the form of a MYSTERY CULT.

The cult appeared in the wake the guru THOCZHEIL teaching his disciples on the hills of UMSTRALOASI, after which it rapidly spread across Okkham. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

DREAMING NIGHT, the: Phil. Mys. Rel. Dre. The creation myth and defining philosophy in the FEDERATION OF PERGOST, possibly dating back to the last days of the FOURTH AGE. In its simplest interpretation, ELYDEN and all that exists within it, including all thoughts, philosophies and ideas are all a great cosmic DREAM that is dreamt by the so-called COSMIC DREAMER is unknown and unknowable, though is attributed as the originator or all that exists, though only inadvertently so, through its unconscious dreams.

The world is thusly as ephemeral realm – any moment could be the last, as the Cosmic Dreamer wakes from its slumber, bringing to an end the totality of 'creation'. As a result of this, adherents of the faith have a very pragmatic outlook on life.

Though the religion clearly has its roots in the torpor of the Demiurgess and the power of their dreams, in the form of Dreamscapes, Theosophists and philosophers have postulated that the religion is a parable for the foolishness of religions in general – the irony inherent in the worship of a deity that has no conscious control of its creations and their fates is not lost on the people of Pergost, though the origins of the faith are now so old that few know the true tale of its birth. It is thought that it first appeared in the dying decades of the Ceeropian empire, though there is little proof in this belief. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

DREAMLESS SLUMBERER, the: Mys. His. Common epithet by which the DEMIURGE NELCHAEL was once known.

DREAMS: Mys. Dre. Involuntary images, sensations and emotions experienced during certain phases of sleep. Dreams can take the form of memories, familiar visions and experiences, though are often of a more surreal nature, often considered to be prophetic or ominous. All dreams are said to be linked, no matter how tenuously, by the so-called DREAMWORLD – a liminal space, not unlike the OTHERWORLD, where practiced ONEIROMANCERS (SHAPERS who are able to interact with dreams) can project to, from where they can explore and interact with the dreams of others.

Though the purpose and origin of dreams remain contested subjects in most scholarly communities, there is a long-held belief that dreams flow from the thoughts of the DEMIURGES (and possibly their early generation SCIONS) in the form of residual emotions or memories: perhaps a byproduct of their original Act of SHAPING the MATERIAL PLANE that MORTALS in the right frame of mind can experience through dreaming. Even in their torpid states their creativity and imagination cannot be bridled and their thoughts seep into the material world in the form of dreams, which take on primal forms and emotions that are universal amongst mortalkind and unfettered by language, culture, time, or other barriers. Strangely, naturally-occurring dreams (i.e. those not imparted by an oneiromancer) never feature any technological items or modern innovations, and other objects of mortal artifice, such as buildings or objects appear vague with little details.

The dreams imparted by healthy Demiurge's are considered normal, as the land surrounding a healthy Demiurge's body is normal and follows the ancient rules of physical nature. Conversely, the torpor of decaying and bitter Demiurges leads to dreams that are twisted and wicked, often potent enough to shape the thoughts of their victims, much as the material world is warped into grotesque shapes by a tortured Demiurge's nightmares, in the form of DREAMSCAPES.

Dreams are often considered to be prophetic in nature, and the power of prophecy and vision is not underestimated in most areas of ELYDEN, and they often form an important part of many culture or religions. This trait implies that dreams may be connected to the otherworld (whose SPIRIT (1.) inhabitants are commonly a source of cryptic auguries from the future) or that the whispers of the Demiurges may themselves also carry revelatory glimpses.

Of note are the dreamscapes that surround some torpid Demiurges – regions where their twisted and bitter thoughts and dreams are made manifest in the Material Plane, and which can be traversed by mortals or manipulated by Oneiromancers and SOMNIARIIN, who often wear reality suits to DREAMS, LUCID: Sup. Dre. In the field of ONEIROLOGY (the study of DREAMS) lucid dreaming is a state of dreaming where the dreamer is aware of the dream and able to influence the contents of the dream.

Most people who experience lucid dreaming are unaware of the phenomenon, but it is a skill that can be taught and refined and can be performed by laypeople as well as ONEIROMANCERS, allowing individuals to navigate the DREAMWORLD. Lucid dreamers who are remarkably skilled can use lucid dreaming to access the Dreamworld to enter the dreams of others. A few an even influence the dreams of others in this way, without calling on the MATERIA OMNA to do so. This is one of few instances when laypeople can achieve effects similar to SHAPING without actually shaping.

Lucid dreaming can be used defensively to block the penetrative influence or attacks of Oneiromancers.

DREAMSCAPE: Sup. Geo. Mys. Dre. A region within ELYDEN where the MATERIAL PLANE has become twisted by the thoughts and DREAMS of torpid DEMIURGES and SCIONS. Though a Demiurge may be physically inactive, their thoughts may continue to dream throughout their torpid state. This, coupled with their considerable abilities with SHAPING the MATERIA OMNA, can result in their thoughts and dreams shaping the world around them, twisting landscapes into otherwise impossible terrains, even going so far as subconsciously populating them with beings born of their dreams and nightmares.

There so-called Dreamscapes are relatively rare, though have been continuously documented throughout mortal history wherever 'dead' Demiurges or scions have been nearby, with such regions appearing and disappearing over time, with the ebb-and-flow of a Demiurge's dreams.

Such Dreamscapes may be beautiful or nightmarish, depending on the thoughts and emotions that were most-prevalent throughout the subconscious actions that created them, though they are subject to change, and may grow or disappear over time, along with the CREATURES that were born within them, which are unable to persist without the direct link to the Demiurge who created them.

Some ONEIROMANCERS are able to locate these areas, and some are even possessed with the ability to alter them, or even give birth to their own limited versions, including dream-born creatures, though sustaining such dreamscapes or dream creatures is tiring, and can severely weaken inexperienced shapers.

There has been recent postulation by renowned oneiromancers and dream scholars that many of the dreamscapes across ELYDEN, particularly those that remain unattributed, may be related to the unborn musings of the stillborn Demiurge RYHASSHARAUCH, particularly in the case of dreamscapes that exist in areas where the OVERLAY between the Material Plane and the DREAMWORLD is weak. See Vol IV: the Materia Omna.

DREAMSINGER: Sup. Rnk. Drc. A caste of DICHORA in GNOTH whose DREAM-visions are held in high esteem. They are thought to be a form of SHAPER who specialise in ONEIROMANCY.

DREAMSTEALER: Sup. Rnk. Drc. Common vernacular used for those SHAPERS (specifically ONEIROMANCERS) with abilities to 'read' or 'steal' the DREAMS of others. Conversely, some are also able to plant specific dreams and nightmares. See Vol IV: Other Forms of Mysticism.

DREAMSTONE: Sup. Ele. Dre. Rare ore found in DREAMSCAPES that are sensitive to the emanations and manifestations that are common in such regions, and are said to store DREAMS. It is unknown how such ores came to be, but it is possible that they were first created by the DEMIURGES themselves in the first ages of shaping and given as gifts to their children.

SHAPERS who are able to manipulate dreams and travel to dreamscapes are able to sense the dreams and emotions stored in these stones, and can tap into them as a source of power for their shaping, conjuring any dream-creatures from within for a short period of time.

Dreamstones are one of the most common fake reproductions sold in ELYDEN, with nobility paying handsome prices for them, without realising that they are fakes. These reproductions are a threat to the real dreamstone market, particularly the city of DORMIVEGLIA in HOAMM, which is noted for its dreamstone mines.

DREAMWALKING: Int. Soc. Sup. Dre. Common practice in the absorbed nation of ETHISTONITH, now in the south of RHINOCOLOURA. The region is noted for its many subtle DREAMSCAPES, in this case little more than areas where ONEIROMANCERS find it easier to practice their art.

Dreamwalking involves an oneiromancer guiding a group of people in a shared LUCID DREAM that can give the impression of taking months when in fact it typically lasts no more than a few hours. Children of both sexes are considered to become adults at 17 (a sacred number to ancient Ethistoni people), at which point a group of prospects about to turn 17 will embark on a DREAM QUEST together. This forms a lifelong bond between the individuals, and as a result, people of Ethistoni ancestry share a cultural link that few other nations have, even between individuals who did not dreamwalk together.

DREAMWEAVER, the: x. Mys. His. Dre. In the mythologies of the DEMIURGES, Dreamweaver is the androgynous SCION of NELCHAEL, one of the twin aspects of DOPELLANICH, and features heavily (though often in corrupted forms) in the legends of WESTERN SAMMAEA, along the NULLAMBIT, including the VESPERTINE LEAGUE, the east of the CITIZENRY OF THALI, and northern CARNYNGA and BELEGOR.

They are said to be the only being that can physically inhabit the DREAMWORLD and by dint of this are its uncontested ruler. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

DREAMWORLD, the: also 'Oncirosphere'. Mys. Sup. Dre. Supranatural liminal realm that serves as an anchor for all DREAMS and nightmares, including DREAMSCAPES. All dreams take place in the dreamworld, and the act of LUCID DREAMING allows a dreamer to potentially explore the dreamworld. In this regard, the dreamworld is different to the OTHERWORLD in that it is accessible to laypeople, and not just SHAPERS, though one must be highly skilled in the act of lucid dreaming to access the dreamworld without access to oneiromancy. The dreamworld has specific locations that people can travel to. These locations are relatively stable, and can be visited over and over again and can last for millennia, though others are more ephemeral. The CONSTANT CORRIDOR is an example of a famous location within the dreamworld, though there are dozens of different areas that have been discovered and explored over the Ages.

Though not a physical realm, it is a tangible space, much like the otherworld, where accomplished lucid dreamers and ONEIROMANCERS can project their consciousnesses (as shapers can ASTRALLY PROJECT to the otherworld), where they can interact with and manipulate the dreamworld itself as well as the dreams of others.

Projection into the dreamworld whilst awake is difficult, and not all Oneiromancers are capable of such travel, with many simply lacking the raw mental strength needed to do so, and others only capable of doing so through the aid of TECHNARCANE engines. Once projected into this dreamworld a shaper can simply travel, experiencing the dreams of others as they do so, or they can track down specific dreams or individuals, where they can influence their subconscious. There they may also find old dreams and nightmares, adrift in the void, which they can dissect in the hopes of finding forgotten knowledge, though this is dangerous.

Talented Oneiromancers and SOMNIARIIN can attack an individual in this way, causing permanent physical or mental damage through the stress caused by these attacks. These acts are known as ONEIROMACHY and are often employed by military forces to attack sensitive targets.

Philosophers have speculated whether the dreamworld is an extension of the subconscious of the DEMIURGES, though this remains as-yet unproven. Maby legends and myths claim that the Dreamworld is inhabited by only one corporeal being – the so-called DREAMWEAVER, a scion of the Demiurge DOPELLANICH.

The Dreamworld is known by different names amongst different peoples, including HESHEREMA amongst KORACHANI speakers, NEVANEX amongst PARTHISAN speakers, and RUTALUM amongst speakers of SARASTROAN.

DRECHAN: Set. Settlement in the c of AZAZEM, along the north western banks of lake HATTEL (Pop. c. 4,000).

DREG MARKET: Com. Common term denoting the various underground (economically and literally) markets of the larger cities in the c of LLACHATUL, originating in ALMAGEST, but popular in the KORACHANI EMPIRE. They are often sporadic places, with itinerant traders gathering together selling their wares, and rarely last for more than a few weeks.

DREJAH: Set. City in the far east of RHAMIA, overlooking lake GALATA It is a stop along the GREY ROAD (Pop. c. 32,800).

DREJIKAH: 1. Set. Coastal city in RHAMIA built on ancient ruins thought by scholars and archaeologists to date to the early SECOND AGE. Deep burial crypts have been unearthed over the years during city constructions, the remains of which bear iconography common to the tribe of SYNCHTHONITH (Pop. c. 81,000).

2. f. Myt. His. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, a SCION of SYNCHTHONITH, embodying the dark and wretchedness of the chthonic earth. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

DREKAN: Mil. Str. Fortress on the island of VALARCH, south east of HOLOLACH.

DREKAVAC: Fau. Large felid endemic to cold climates in the west of CENTRAL LLACHATUL, including the north of SKAROS, and western ALMAGEST. Drecavacs are large, with very long limbs and typical feline features, with lynx-like ears. They are solitary creatures, with large ranges, and they can wander for tens of miles, avoiding the path of other drekavacs, whose sinister wails can be heard for miles around on cold winter's nights.

They are curious in that they often stand and walk on their hind limbs (during which they can stand up to 7-8-ft. tall), resulting in many eerie sightings and false encounters, with people mistaken them for humanoids or misshapen mortals. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

DRELLU: Pol. Set. Important coastal city in the OMERUVED CITIES.
Politically, the city is no different to any other in the region, though it does house the CHAMBERS OF THE COMMONWEALTH, where delegates from the other cities convene. It is a major port and is known for its many restaurants, which cater to the different palettes of visiting diplomats (Pop. c. 74,000).

DRELOS: Mil. Str. Fort in the south of CHANDOS⁽³⁾, overlooking an old disused pass south into LAASKHA.

DREMIR: Set. settlement in the region of MELUHULLU, in the west of KHULL. Its people cultivate the wild flowers endemic to the region, harvesting them for their pigments (Pop. c. 8,000).

DRESHIM: Set. small fortified city in the west of GYZHA (Pop. c. 18,000).

DREY: Soc. Lan. Native DVERG term for their semi-subterranean dwellings.

The word is used in a general sense by outsiders and can represent anything from a dverg city, cave, metropolis or anything in between.

DREGLANDS, the: Geo. Expansive coastal region in the south of the SYCHTAN PREFECTURES. In effect, it's a coastal shelf that was exposed over the past centuries following the slow wane of ELYDEN'S Seas, revealing an expanse of mud and silt for miles to the west and east that flood as TWIN TIDES come in. Today, natives of the region have adapted to dredging the mud when the tide is at its lowest, beachcombing and digging into the mud in search of items of value, which may include ancient relics that over the years have come to be worshipped as idols.

In the years since the Dreglands have appeared, the people of the region have adapted their COMING-OF-AGE RITUALS, where an individual chooses a guardian totem – a relic claimed until death as a GUARDIAN TOTEM, after which it becomes a headstone bearing an epithet. The Idols are thought to date to the THIRD AGE, and are latently psychoactive, amplifying the desires and emotions of their bearers. Their origins unknown, and worship of them has been discouraged by the greater government of the Sychtan Prefectures, though such warnings have been unheeded.

DRIAHA: Set. City in the c east of VIRAHAN (Pop. c. 42,000).

DRILLA: Set. Settlement in the east of BARATHEA^(1.), along the shores of lake C'DATA (Pop. c. 7,800).

DRIS: Set. Coastal city in the far south west of CHEIRA (Pop. c. 28.500).

DRITA: Set. Settlement in the west of the emirate of DEITHO^(1.) in the c west of LIMOTH^(1.). located about 5-miles west of the river MATHRAS. Its main industry is agriculture (Pop. c. 4,700).

DRITI: Set. Small city in the north east of KORACHAN, along the course of the river CHANI (Pop. c. 18,000).

DRITT: Geo. Coastal highlands in the north of KHULL.

DRIVING: see CAGERUNNING.

DROCERA: Set. Settlement in the north west of KORACHAN, overlooking the sea of LALLEH. Its main industry is fishing, and it is part of the RED ROUTE, providing food and provisions to merchants and caravans travelling the road there (Pop. c. 16,000).

DROM: Set. Major city in the north east of KARGAMA, close to the river WOLMASH. It has a long history, and was once one of three major ELITAGRI cities (the other two being KIVAR and PLYSIANE) that rose in what is now Kargama in the north of the EHRENISIAN COAST between c. -700 RM and -400 RM, growing wealthy from selling BRIMSTONE over the next centuries.

The city prospered until c. 900 RM, by which time nearby brimstone reserves had started to wane, however its plutocrats had built a solid foundation and were prepared for the eventuality, having forged alliances with its neighbours, both in Elitagra and farther afield, such as the TRISKETHIAN DOMAINS">TRISKETHIAN DOMAINS, and establishing well-guarded trade-routes. The city was coastal during this time, and its ports were busy with trade vessels from across the SEA OF ORRIDA, though the waning of the sea eventually found Drom become landlocked, after which it lost influence.

The founding of the FEDERATION OF ELITAGRA in 1122 RM, brought renewed industry to Drom, though the next century saw brimstone deposits in the region fully depleted and the city transitioned to a centre of trade and it grew considerably as a caravanserai after this, remaining a thriving metropolis to this day (Pop. c. 210,400).

DROMAL: Set. Settlement in the southeast of VALBAR⁽²⁾. Its main industry is agriculture (Pop. c. 6,200).

DRON VIGRA: Set. City in the east of CHEIRA (Pop. c. 40,000).

DRONDAR: Set. Settlement in the west of \underline{V} ARR, in the northern–face of the ADALLA Mountains (Pop. c. 3,500).

DRONE: Soc. Rnk. Rank within the CHURCH OF THE VOLUTE, those born to THE VOLUTE (2.). EISHETH. Through the aid of TECHNARCANE ORTHOSES and ATRAMENTAL drugs, she is able to give birth to multiple drones at once over an accelerated gestation of no more than 2 – 3-months. The drones are human, though are of a stunted intellect, and are gifted to the MATRIARCHS across NAARETH, where they are used as HOUSEHOLD slaves.

DRORMA: Rvr. River in the region of HA AKH, in the c of NOAVATUR, flowing south east for 360-miles from sources in the IQUAHAITH Mountains before meeting its parent, the river HARIID. It cuts canyons through the impacted dust of the Ha Ath, though it supports little life, other than mosses and lichens, due to the barrenness of the region it flows through.

DRORREN: For. Small forest in CENTRAL LLACHATUL, crossing the border between the south east of Skaros and the south west of BASSORAH⁽²⁾. though not Atramentally corrupted, its trees are twisted, with grey bark and withered leaves. Despite this appearance it is thriving, with fungi, mosses, lichens and shrubs all covering its floor.

DROSS: Tec. Artificial food common across urban areas around the INNER
SEA, made from offal, vegetable wastes, moss, fungi, and most famously, human bodies.

Devised in different places across the Inner Sea between around 2600 – 3200 RM, dross was the solution to ELYDEN'S needs. Originally made from carrion, offal, and vegetable matter that would otherwise have gone to waste, it was mixed up and turned into a slurry that was easy to transport and eat. Over the years this mixture was supplemented with mosses and fungi that were specifically cultivated for this purpose, and the process was slowly automated, with ATRAMENTAL processes also used to make it last longer before needing to be disposed of and infusing it with antibacterial and antibiotic properties to help the millions of bodies that came to rely on it as their main source of food, alongside, if they were lucky, simple bread.

Today dross is produced on an industrial scale in manufactories and piped to the largest cities across the Inner Sea in a grotesque mirror of ancient aqueducts. Though the needs of a rapidly growing populations around its urban centres and metropolises led to the addition of more ingredients over time, most notable of which was human flesh.

The practice originated in Khadon in 2950 RM after its population reached 1-million and surrounding farms were unable to sustain it, though it rapidly spread to other regions and cultures. Unidentified bodies and those who had been too poor to afford burial plots were ground up after having their heads removed – their bodies were ground up and mixed with dross, and their heads stripped of their flesh and interred within ossuaries and FUNERARY TOWERS. This operation was controlled by the MORTUARY CULT, who had been responsible for the collection and disposal of bodes in the empire since 1143 RM, and they came to work closely with the PATRICIAN HOUSES that operated the dross manufactories.

Originally given to slaves, who had no choice in the matter, dross would eventually also become the main source of nourishment to HELOTS and FREEMEN who could not afford to eat natural foods every day.

New sources were needed as the demand for dross increased, and by around 3200 RM it became common in Korachan for all bodies to be claimed by the Mortuary Cult for use in dross manufacture. Only those who could afford to buy the bodies off the cult were given the luxury of burying an entire body, though the practice of donating bodies to the cult became so common that today most Patrician Houses do the same thing, keeping only the skulls of their dead, which the decorate lavishly as a show of wealth

Today the manufacture of Dross is controlled and overseen within the Korachani empire by the ATROPI HOUSES. Elsewhere it largely government-run.

DROSS FARM: Ind. Common name given to MANUFACTORIES where DROSS is made.

DROSS LANDS, the: also 'the Dross Rivers'. Geo. Region outside the north west of the city of KHADON in the KORACHANI PENINSULA, where the waste of close to a million people collects. Millennia of sewage, garbage, runoff from the DROSS manufacturing process, industrial waste, oil, ATRAMENTAL POLLUTANTS and so-on lie heavily on the ground in an artificial semi-solid endorheic lake. It is a target to scavengers, who trawl through the waste for anything of value.

Amazingly, despite the area's inimical nature, it remains populated by the most corrupt of SCAVS and DEGENERATES, who have turned it into a settlement of sorts, and rumours abound of subterranean entrances leading into the city proper (Pop. unknown).

DROSS RIVERS, the: see Dross Lands, the.

DROSS WINE: also 'Azazemi Wine'. Bev. Collective name for various alcoholic beverages that are made from fungus, moss, and various other byproducts of the DROSS industry, and which are most common in AZAZEM.

Charitably described as being an acquired taste, there is little demand for dross wine outside of the regions in which it is produced, and it is largely consumed by the lower classes. However, a few boutique breweries exist that have a small following amongst the patrician classes across the INNER SEA REGION. See Vol II: Beverages.

DROS WARDENS, the: Pol. Mil. Specialised law-enforcement in the Demesne of AZAZEM, tasked with safeguarding the vital DROSS pipelines from harm. They form a part of the IRON GUARD.

DROSTAN: Set. Settlement in the TOGARMAH region in the c north west of TEMUJA. It is known for its KESHIKS (Pop. c. 10,000).

DROTER: Ind. Set. Dre. Settlement in the north of VALBAR^(2.) in the region of PIL AUSH^(1.). The settlement appeared in the wake of silver being unearthed in the DREAMSCAPE of Pil Aush^(2.) and became a boomtown. Miners work in REALITY SUITS to counter the ill-effects of the dreamscape, and the mines are overseen by ONEIROMANCERS who work hard to aid in the extraction of the silver (Pop. c. 2,800).

DROUVAR: Set. Near-coastal settlement in the east of VÂRR. It was once coastal though found itself 2-miles inland following the retreat of the SEA OF PROPONTIS. Its harbours have been converted into FOOTWORM vats, where the parasitic creatures are harvested and prepared for consumption (Pop. c. 6,400).

DRUCHAN: Set. City in the c south west of DURCHAA^(1.), known for its meteore mines (Pop. c. 28,200).

DRUET: Set. Small city in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of NICADA^(1.) in the Duchy of NESHRA. It is built on a sandstone foundation that is riddles with natural caves and hewn tunnels that were used in antiquity to hide from a tyrannical ruler. The tunnels were later used for smuggling. Today, most of these tunnels have been blocked off and are largely forgotten by most people, though some have been converted for use as granaries and cisterns (Pop. c. 12,400).

DRUGOR: For. Virgin woodlands in the south west of GNOTH, forming the south western part of the AEONIA forest. It is protected by giganri rangers, who spend most of their days in its southern-most reaches of the forest, in the northern foothills of the HARKONA Mountains, where they maintain a vigil against $\underline{\mbox{TAHALLAN}}$ poachers who often cross the border into Gnoth.

DRUID KING, the: Leg. Folklore common in CENTRAL LLACHATUL, amongst various nations surrounding the OLD FOREST, including various KORACHANI territories (amongst them AZAZEM, SKAROS, and VÂRR), RHAMIA, BASSORAH^(2.), and ALMAGEST.

The Druid is usually depicted as a decrepit itinerant in dirty mustard robes, with a crown of moss-covered antlers or horns, and a heavy cowl with obscure features. He is an ageless figure, inexorably tied to the forest, cursed to guard it from foreigners. He is considered a revenant by those outside the Old Forest and a guardian by the natives of the forest. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

DRUITHAL: Rvr. River in the east of LOEGRESS^(L), flowing south and east for 330-miles from sources in the VOULLOR Mountains before meeting the coast as the SEA OF AKRY, to the south of the BAY OF SIDI.

Much of the river's flow diverted for use in agriculture, leading to its flow slowing down over the past centuries, though its many tributaries ensure that it flows steadily to the coast.

DRUNETH: Set. Settlement in the c south of KOMMEA, along the course of the river GOIRATH (Pop. c. 5,000).

 $\underline{\textbf{DRUPAN}} : \textit{Set.} \ Small \ city in the north of \underline{SABAISA}, along the nations' main trade-route (Pop. c. 16,000).$

DRUS: Set. Settlement in the south west of LYRIDIA DHAI, seen as a bulwark of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE in the region. The settlement is home to a permanent EXOCRINE enclave (Pop. c. 10,000).

DRUS AD: Set. Settlement in the south west of SUOR, along the course of the river LOTAN. It is a major agricultural centre in the region (Pop. c. 8,000).

DRUSSIA: Set. City in the c north of SKAROS, north of the SKAR Mountains^(2,). The city is a major industrial centre and controls raw materials unearthed along the Mountains before ferrying them north along the river SKAROSIA. (Pop. c. 18,000).

DRY SEA: Sea. Sea along the TROPIC OF RAH, east of the SEA OF MYMEREA, off the western coast of MENISCEA, specifically OSSIEL, NALARDIL and SABAEA. Named after the high salt content of its waters and the salt pans that are common along the coastline there.

DRYSDA: Set. Coastal settlement in the south east of OPHIUSSA (Pop. c. 28,400).

DRYTETH: Set. Settlement in the north of the HENDECARCHY of AMILLAERE^(1.) in the c of MALAN, in the south eastern face of the EGLAENT Mountains. Its main industry is the mining of jade (Pop. c. 8.000).

2. Set. Small fortified coastal city in the north of ZHARIAH⁽²⁾. It is home to a large HYENA fortress, where new recruits are trained (Pop. c. 14,500).

DUAHEN: Set. City in the north east of AHRISHEN (Pop. c. 4,200).

DUAHIR: Set. Coastal city in the north eastern coast of KAZZAR^(2.). Its main industry is fishing (Pop. c. 32,000).

DUALIST: See DICHORA

DUARIAHAHN: Pol. Set. GREATTOWN and capital of TEMUJA, dominated by the PALACE OF CRYSTAL and the TABLE OF THE PLAINSLEAGUE. It is the largest and most advanced settlement in Temuja, though is still woefully backwards when compared with the post-industrial cities of the INNER SEA REGION.

It is the main trade-town linking SABIA, KASPIA and Temuja with MALAN and appeared in c. 300 RM from the campsites of pilgrims come to see the burial mound of an ancient leader, and it has grown greatly through trade along the GREAT ROAD, which passes through the GREATTOWN, as Temujan culture moves away from a rural one to an urbane once. It is also the eastern-most stop along the GÂTHAN ROAD (Pop. c. 410,000).

DUARMEN: Set. Small city in the north east of PORPHYR (Pop. c. 16,000).
DUATH: Plr. 'Duathi'. Eth. Indigenous people found in the PARNASIAN STATES in the south west of LLACHATUL and most common in present-day GYZHA. They date back to a far older culture that dominated the region in the late FOURTH AGE, whose descendants became nomads following the War of Scourging and the Fading of the Fourth Age. They remained there in small numbers until the Ezasuhi (2) immigration to the lands south of the Parnasian Mountains, at which point some of them integrated with their new settlements, becoming a necessary working class that persists to this day in Gyzha. Very few Duathi are still nomads, and those who are have been granted freedom of movement by the governments of Ayad and Gyzha, allowing them to move freely across the two lands. Despite Elat not formally recognising their claim to its lands, they are known to pass within its lands, which causes them to be persecuted by Elatian military forces. See Vol II: Peoples and Races of Elyden.

DUATHAS: Set. Major city in the south west of ALAM BETHYL in the territory of GELAH^(1.). It serves as a crossroads of trade and culture, and is people are fiercely independent, and were amongst the most fervent opposers of the SORCERERS^{*(2.)} rule, leading to a brutal CIVIL WAR that led to the creation of the FEDERAL ASSEMBLY (Pop. c. 212,000).

DUBBEA: Rvr. River in the c north of KASPIA, flowing south west for 215-miles from sources in the KEPHATHAO Mountains, before meeting its parent, the river TARAGEA.

DUBERDIA: Set. Small city in the c north west of KOMMEA, along the course of the river LUGHBRAEN (Pop. c. 14,900).

DUCAL CROWN, the: see, SALOROC.

DUCAL LORD: Pol. Following SALOROC'S independence in 3032 RM, its ruler became known as the DUCAL LORD after the title of Ducal Crown the city had adopted.

DUCENARIA: Set. Small city in the KORACHANI colony of CRASSULA, in the far north east of MENISCEA. It was originally a fort built in c. 2830 RM in which were stationed 200 STEEL LEGIONNAIRES trusted with the defence of the entire colony. Contact with the legion was lost following the colony's abandonment after the end of the WAR OF THE ARTIFEXES, when it disappeared from the history books with no further trace.

Today it is the largest settlement in the colony that is not directly involved in the mining of gold (Pop. c. 20,000).

DUEA: Rel. Set. Holy city in the far south of LIDEA, on the northern shore of lake KONRA, along the shore of the river SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾. It is dominated by stone steps that descend into the lake were people descend to wash away their sins and ailments. Though the lake is widely recognised to have healing powers, the waters themselves are quite dirty from pollution from industries that have grown around the influx of pilgrims who visit the city on their passage of the SHADOW MARCH (Pop. c. 39,000).

DUGOROS: Set. Settlement in the c south west of the tribe of ATEVEGOS, in the west of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 6,000).

DUGRN: 1. Ser. Major city in the north of CYHLAGHARR (Pop. c. 110,000).
2. Arc. Granite monument in the above city in the north of CYHLAGHARR.

3. One of two brothers, the other being \underline{MALGRA} , who together founded the ancient oghur nation of $\underline{FALLDRG}$.

DUHEN: Mil. Str. Large fort in the north west of AHRISHEN, overlooking the SEA OF PYREA and the RHAMIAN capital of FASCIA.

DUIÁRHI: Geo. Mountain in the south of TEMUJA that forms its southern border with AHRISHEN, running around 500-miles from west to east. Translated from the old tongue it means 'Southern Rim'.

DUKKERIN: Set. Small city in the south east of the HENDECARCHY of HATON in the c north of MALAN, along the course of the river OTHAN (Pop. c. 14,000).

 $\underline{\text{DULA}}$: Ind. Set. Shipbuilding city in the c south of $\underline{\text{AZAZEM}}$, overlooking the $\underline{\text{SEA OF BATHOS}}^{(1.)}$ (Pop. c. 32,000).

DULACHRIS: Set. Coastal city in the prefecture of ALITENEA^(1.) in the c north of HOLOLACH^(1.), near the mouth of the river VARASSAI. It is a link along THE WAY trade-route (Pop. c. 138,000).

DULAFUR: Lak. Lake in the north west of AHRISHEN, forming a part of the course of the river SAIAS.

 $\underline{DULAND} \hbox{: } \textit{Set.} \ Small \ fortified \ city \ in the north \ east \ of \ the \ tribe \ of \ \underline{RAOSI}, \\ in the north \ east \ of \ the \ \underline{GROWING \ MOUNTAINS} \ of \ \underline{MULCIBER}. \ It \ is \ known$ for its rangers who travel east across the border with $\underline{\text{ANUBIA}}$ into the $\underline{\text{HAAGEN}}$ Mountains (Pop. c. 12,000).

DULCIMER: Mus. Ohj. Stringed musical instrument that is played by striking the strings with a 'hammer'. The instrument is common in the south of MENISCEA, particularly in ACHAA^(2.) and LANTUA, as well as AURUM and TAES.

DULILOT: Ind. Set. Mining settlement in the west of the tribe of THLOLOT, in the north east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. It is a major source of granite in the region (Pop. c. 8,000).

DULIRACHAN: Set. City in the c of PELASGOS, along the BATHAN route between the BULOPARRI Massif and BATHAKOL Mountains. It is known for its regraded streets (where the street-level is raised, turning the ground floor into a basement and the first floor into the new ground floor), beneath which now lie sprawled sepulchres and catacombs in which are interred countless saints of the imperial faith, many of them now forgotten.

The city once formed an important part of THE SHADOW MARCH, though changing trends found the city ignored for some centuries after 1750 RM. Its old Pelasgosi name is Dekion (Pop. c. 26,500).

DUMACHA: Geo. Rocky upland region in the c of MECHABET. The area is replete with fissures through which emerges steam and, on occasion, lava. The air in some areas of Dumacha is acrid and poisonous, with little unadapted life surviving there.

DUMBAR: Set. Settlement in the east of AHRISHEN, close to the course of the river ARESH^(2.). It forms a part of the GREAT ROAD trade-route. Its main industry revolves around the gathering and drying of reeds (Pop. c. 6,000).

DUMIADA: Geo. Island in the south west of the SHIBBOTHA ISLES off the south western coast of SAMMAEA. It is part of territories contested between FALLARAUR and the CORAL BARONIES.

DÛN: Ind. Set. Settlement in the KORACHANI colony of AMONDOR. Its main industry is copper mining and it is surrounded by various terraced quarries, all in various stages of productivity – some are spent, full of garish water, while others are still producing copper. Between them are mounds of tailings, some of which are centuries old and overgrown (Pop. c. 4,000).

DUN IACH: Set. City in ARKOS^(1.), established as part of the KORACHANI occupation of the CITADEL MOUNTS in 352 RM.

The settlement, originally known as IYAT, was little more than a town straddling the foothills of a great mount which was once home to the Citadel Mount of DUN IYAT, which was destroyed in a great earthquake many centuries earlier. The imperial governor assigned to the region, Lord-patrician Eliias, saw the echoes of beauty in the ruined peaks and abandoned hewn loggias, and began restoring them, moving his palace and offices there in c. 385 RM. This prompted others to seek the old noble-quarters of the mount, and by c. 450 RM it had re-established itself as a proud citadel, ruling over the growing settlement of Dun Iach, as the occupiers had come to call it. The old aqueducts and hanging gardens were rebuilt and the city thrived under its newfound beauty. Farms, mines and quarries were established to the east of the city, bringing further prosperity to the city as ancient cliff-hewn temples were reclaimed by the Church Of The Undying Machine following their cleansing by the ICONOCLASTS (1).

War with Auereni barbarians had gripped the region since c. 375 RM, though Dun Iach had largely been spared most of its effects, but increasing numbers of refugees saw the city's prestige diminish. The arrival of imperial reinforcements saw the city fortified in 511 RM, though it was little to convince the empire to stay there – the majority if its mines and industries were deemed to be unprofitable and cursed by Auereni attacks, so it was abandoned it to the INTERREGES in 527 RM, with the so-called Legion Mordant stationed there to defend it, leaving the rest of EHBOT to its own fate. Soon the region would take on a new name – $\frac{Artros}{Artros}$

Conflict with the Auereni barbarians continued, and in 531 RM the ruling INTERREGNUM Ebaeon was wounded while inspecting the citadels' defences. The war was eventually stopped, thanks to the intervention of three foreign mystics called AVENTORS (later known as AUSPEXES) who established themselves in Dun Iach. The majority of the Interreges would flee over the coming centuries, with only Ebaeon and his advisors remaining. Ebaeon's death in 953 RM left the descendants of the STEEL LEGIONNAIRES, known as CUSTODES in charge. Over the years, their rule became increasingly tyrannical and in 2134 RM the Auspexes openly opposed their reign, an act which saw a brutal civil conflict that ended with the extinction of the Auspexes in Arkos; who by c. 2200 RM had either been executed or exiled into AETHIOS and SIRIPHAGOS.

With the Auspexes' influence over, the Custodes abandoned Dun Iach in c. 2250 RM for the fortifications of DUN KHARR as capital. Dun Iach remained an important city, though never again rose to the heights in enjoyed as capital, even after 2326 RM, when the SARASTROAN occupation of Arkos saw the Custodes ejected from Dun Kharr returning to Dun Iach. The retreating coastline around the UHLSAAT saw its fields growing drier, crops failing. The region faltered and Dun Iach slowly dwindled in size, the many Sarastroan raids against it culling swathes of its populace.

By the time of the SUNDERING OF THE KORACHANI EMPIRE in 3705 RM, the citadels of Dun Iach were largely abandoned, the majority of its people restricted to the lower portions of the walled city located at the citadels' base, defending themselves against the increasingly fragmented city-states of the region. The ensuing years saw a period of growth, renovation of ancient aqueducts that once more redirected water to the city, allowing its hanging gardens and fields to flourish once more (Pop. c. 62,500).

DUN IYAT: see IYAT.

DUN KANACH: His. Set. Ancient city in the CITADEL MOUNTS, originating as an independent trade-post in c. -1250 RM. The settlement was absorbed by the Citadel Mounts as they grew more powerful, and by -399 it had earnt the epithet of Dun Kanach, after the actions of its troops against the DEGENERATE EXODUS from KHARKHARADONTIS. It soon took on aspects of its parent empire, with loggias hewn from the sides of its mesas and rooms hewn deep into the heart of their peaks, and before long it had become famous for the same gold-gilded domes and the red stucco spires that the Citadel Mounts were renowned for.

The city went on to grow in influence, its merchants gaining exclusive rights of trade in GELHANA and much of the domains of ACTANORS. The city became renowned for its great vaulted caravanserais and loggia markets beneath the peak of KERRAN. By c. -100 RM it had gained such influence that DUN SZAS was losing trade and revenue from its taxation of the river FALX. This led to a schism between the two states that left the region's economy struggling. In -93 RM merchant-owned armies of Dun Szas and Dun Kanach met along the hills of the AMRAOT, and their two champions fought in ritual combat. The champion of Dun Kanach was defeated, leading to the resurgence of Dun Szas and beginning a period of decline for Dun Kanach.

By c. 20 RM it had diminished, its people eschewing its epithet in shame of their city's decline, and it became known once again as KANACH.

The city lost trade and allies and its mercantile tradition died. The suburbs outside of the citadel mount proper slowly grew silent, and by c. 200 RM the only occupied structures were the old palaces and apartments atop the peak, with the city below a ghost-town. And so, the place remained until the arrival of the KORACHANI EMPIRE in 352 RM, which repopulated it, giving it a new name – KENACHEL.

DUN KHARR: also 'the Mount of Golden Domes'. Set. One of five major citystates in ARKOS⁽¹⁾, located to its north east, where overlooks SARASTRO.

The city emerged with the arrival of the KORACHANI EMPIRE to the CITADEL MOUNTS in 352 RM, who renamed it EHBOT. The empire established its government in the city of DUN KYAL in 353 RM, renamed Dun Kharr. The city later became famous for the gold-gilded domes of its highest temples and palaces, and its distinct silhouette, the subject of many paintings over the course of history, has since gone on to become recognised around THE INNER SEA.

Ehbot was cursed under its Korachani rulers and the region suffered from over a century of conflict, leading ultimately to the empire's abandonment of the colony in 527 RM, where it was left to the INTERREGES. Dun Kharr was left under the control of a small garrison of soldiers who could do little against dissenting locals. It was allowed to rot over the centuries, its halls and loggias slowly emptying, its corridors growing silent. A death cult had taken control of the ruin by c. 650 RM, constructing large crypts and establishing a culture that obsessed over death. The cult grew in strength and under its aegis did the city grow once more, seeing a small resurgence in c. 725 RM. It remained for the next centuries, a religious place, and an important part of the nations' culture and economy.

The persecution of the ruling AUSPEXES in c. 2200 left Arkos under the complete rule of the CUSTODES (descendants of imperial STEEL LEGIONNAIRES left there), who abandoned their ancestral city in Arkos and moved their palaces to Dun Kharr, which became capital of the region. Under their leadership the city was restored to greatness, with new mines established beneath its crypts, leading to the rise of an unseen slave caste that never left the mines. War with Sarastro in 2326 RM saw the city attacked and taken, with much of its populace taken north as slaves, its mines exploited, leading to their exhaustion little more than a century later. Following Sarastro's retreat from the region in 2412 RM, Dun Kharr was reclaimed, restored to status of capital in just over 100 years.

The city was subjected to Sarastroan attacks again in 3522 RM, where slavers terrorized the region for decades, leaving the city crippled. Dun Kharr could never recover from the raids and diminished in size, becoming a lawless state for some time. It recovered by c. 3700 RM, emerging as a small fortified settlement, its people dour and hardworking, their obsession with death solidified by their history. The crypts were restored and became focal points of their religion and culture once more.

In c. 3800 RM a caste of disfigured mystics from the east known as $\underline{\text{CATRACHI}}$ brought their own morbid teachings to the people of Dun Kharr, and they gained great renown there, becoming a ruling caste, which remains in control of the city to this day, overseeing trade along the $\underline{\text{SALT ROAD}}$, which passes through it (Pop. c. 41,000).

DUN KYAL: see KYAL.

DUN MHAQ: Set. One of five major city-states in the CITADEL MOUNTS, and later EHBOT, and now in present-day ARKOS⁽¹⁾, dominating the south of the region. Characterised by its square citadels and penthouses perched above well-made mudbrick houses, whose inner rooms are, more often than not, hewn from cliff-faces, the city was a thriving metropolis (originally known as MHAQ) before the arrival of the KORACHANI EMPIRE to the region in 352 RM and remained so until an on-going conflict with AUERENI barbarians escalated.

Korachani engineers bolstered its harbours to accommodate the larger imperial vessels that would be arriving with imperial immigrants. Being the first place in which they made landfall, Dun Mhaq was the first of the Citadel Mounts to adapt to imperial customs and, as the central-most of the city-states, this new culture then spread to the other cities. This shift in influence made Dun Mhaq a powerful city under imperial rule, and though DUN IACH and COLYIS became home to its administration, Dun Mhaq was its heart as far as commerce and culture went. The second Auereni war that broke out in c. 375 RM brought lots of military activity to the city. The long-standing militarisation of the area, coupled with hardships brought with the war saw its populace growing discontented. Those who could afford to, moved to the north, leaving the poor and weak to their own fates. In 503 RM the populace finally revolted against the harsh rationing and martial law that had stifled them for so long. The imperial administration was slaughtered in its palaces and the people took control. But they were ill-prepared for the ongoing war with the Auereni, who later seized control, taking thousands south east as slaves. The city was occupied by the barbarians, and many of its municipal structures toppled or otherwise allowed to rot.

The eventual defeat of the barbarians following the arrival of belated imperial reinforcements done little to restore Dun Mhaq, which remained half-ruined even after it was repopulated, though the Arkosian nation did restore its harbours to working condition in c. 650 RM, long after the empire abandoned it. Trade returned to Dun Mhaq, in the form of contact with what few independent regions remained in the area as well as isolated imperial settlements around the DAARKEN GULF. By c. 725 RM it was leading river trade east with RETHKA, where exotic items were traded with the ANUBIANS. Changes in the coastline over the next few thousand years caused its harbours to silt up as the river THAUR changed course. In c. 2400 RM a new harbour was constructed around the new course of the river, linked to the city via an elevated thoroughfare which, over the years, attracted new buildings around it, linking the harbour and city together as one. The 2325 RM war with SARASTRO saw much of the region devastated, though Dun Mhaq survived relatively unscathed, and led the majority of the rebuilding effort that reunited the region, though the massive slave raids of 3522 RM left all of Arkos devastated, Dun Mhaq included.

Its population largely slain or taken north as slaves, the city slowly recovered, and it is populated to this day, albeit greatly diminished. Its people, like those of other cities in Arkos, are untrusting of their neighbours, uncertain of their future, though it has found stability through the trade brought by the SALT ROAD, which passes through its borders (Pop. c. 20,000).

DUN SVA: see SVA.

DUN SVARR: His. Set. One of five major city-states in the CITADEL MOUNTS, and later EHBOT, and now in present-day ARKOS^(1.), established in ancient times, in c. -1150 RM, when it was then known as SVA. The city is now ruined, with a newer settlement built from its ruins appearing relatively recently, known as CATACHIS. Dun Svarr was the lowest of the city-states, its lands mostly flanking the banks of the river THAUR, though its borders were formed of steep hills and cliff-sided peaks. The city dominated the south eastern regions of Ehbot and, later, Arkos, and was fortified by its imperial governors following KORACHANI subjugation of the Citadel Mounts in 353 RM and the regions renaming to Fibor

It was under imperial governance that the city bore the brunt of AUERENI attacks, beginning in c. 375 RM, lasting until 534 RM, a full decade after the empire abandoned the region to the INTERREGES in 527 RM, which had the city evacuated within months of its appointment. The city became the site of years of intense close quarter fighting, with Auereni troops making their way into the lower city. The Auereni saw little value in the city and sacked it. A few years before the war ended, in c. 530 RM, the city was stricken by a foul debilitating disease which further marred its reputation. Dun Svarr became a pariah in its own nation, ignored by both sides of the war, its people left to rot.

As the war died down and the Interreges gave way to native rulers known as AUSPEXES and CUSTODES (descendants of the STEEL LEGIONNAIRES originally stationed there), the city was unable to shake the stigma it had acquired during the war and its people, many of which were scarred from the effects of the ATRAMENTAL DISEASE that had stricken it during the war, were shunned. The city never recovered from the war, and its harbours remained empty until c. 710 RM, when entrepreneurs opened them up again, trying to entice trade back to the city. Arkos slowly opened up to Dun Svarr and within a hundred years the entrepreneurs that brought trade back to the city had become powerful noble families, which ruled as a council. Their laws were harsh, but necessary to ensure stability and growth. By c. 1010 RM the nobility married into the city of MANRAH, where they gained much influence, leading to it becoming a vassal of Dun Svarr, bringing further wealth to the city by c. 1100 RM.

This marked a time of prosperity for the city and the rebuilding of its old peak-top citadels, its loggias and palaces restored to greatness, their gold-gilded domes resplendent once more and a mark to neighbouring cities that it had risen from its shame. The appearance of the gardens of HESPERA in 1374 RM brought more influence to the region, whose area of influence had grown to become the largest of all the Citadel Mounts, with the ruling Arkos growing weary of the city's growth and its rulers' influence. Dun Svarr's dominance of the conurbation known as THE PINNACLES some miles south of the main city exacerbated the Arkos' woes, who in 2212 RM attacked the Citadel Mount and its city in a bit to wrest power from its rulers. They succeeded two years later and placed an Arkos in control of the city.

SARASTROAN attacks against Arkos starting in c. 2325 RM left the entire region devastated. Dun Svarr was no exception. The Pinnacles were left deserted and much of the lower city of Dun Svarr was likewise targeted by slavers, leaving it a broken city that slowly declined until it final death in c. 3522 following another devastating Sarastroan attack.

The city remained empty until c. 3840 RM, when a caste of mystics calling themselves TECHISA travelled there from the north, settling the ruins beneath the Citadel Mount. There, from the ruins of Dun Svarr, they founded the religious city of TECHISUN, which has become a dominant force in the region by c. 3960 RM.

DUN SZAS: see SZAS.

DUN SZASS: Set. One of five major city-states in the CITADEL MOUNTS, and later EHBOT, and now in present-day ARKOS⁽¹⁾, dominating the west of the region. The city of SZAS was seized by the KORACHANI EMPIRE in 359 RM and renamed Dun Szass following its subjugation of the Citadel Mounts (and subsequent renaming to Ehbot) seven years earlier. Its many walkways and natural land-bridges connecting the walled high-city of the Citadel Mount, as ancient ruined structures crumbled in the badlands beneath; remnants of an older larger Szas.

Under Korachani rule, the native CHURCH OF CLEANSING and the KNIGHTS OF SZAS (the governing force of the city-state and its environs), were executed, their fortress outside the city toppled and a great imperial idol erected in its place in 412 RM as a sign to would-be dissenters. The deterrent worked well, for the city was easily subjugated by its imperial rulers, and it came to be ruled by ICONOCLASTS (1.) who opposed any of the city's old beliefs, though its distrust of the ATRAMENTA was not something that could be easily quelled, and TECHNARCANE industries never caught on, leaving the city somewhat backwards compared to others in Ehbot. Despite this, taxation of the river FALX was slowly increased every year and the city grew wealthy as a result.

The regions' wars against the vehement AUERENI and their allies reached Dun Szass in 512 RM. At that point Korachan was losing the war. 2-years later the lower levels of the city were taken by KANAATIAN marauders and its water-sluices destroyed. The city was flooded, with fighting filled its streets for the nest years. This marked the empire's abandonment of the lands west of DUN MHAQ, where its nobility and leaders holed up in its north eastern cities. Dun Szass was finally overrun by the barbarians in c. 519 RM, its populace all but destroyed.

When the war finally ended in 534 RM Korachan had left the region, which had become known as Arkos, inherited by the colonists descendants. The city was a ruined shell, with anything of value taken by the marauders during their occupation. It was resettled and by c. 580 RM had begun to re-establish itself, though by then the river Falx had been open to traffic for so long (almost 50-years) taxation was impossible. The people of Dun Szass looked north west to Thray, and trade was established between the two settlements. Over time Dun Szass became renowned for its merchant lords, whose command of the Tharran ROAD brought renewed wealth to the city, whose old spires were allowed to rot. The new city spread across the plains of eastern Araaht and grew far larger than it had ever been before.

In 995 RM the merchant lords of Dun Szass, in their search for new raw materials to exploit and trade, mounted an expedition to the west, which uncovered the AANTH birthing pits of MAALKAT. This precipitated a time of war in Arkos, with the ARHAAT becoming a contested region until c. 1150 RM, by which point the western Arkosian borders had withdrawn a hundred-miles east. The city's harbours were increased in both size and scope over the next centuries, with an intricate system of mechanical canals established to combat the change in coastline as the city's districts moved away from the river up the coast. By c. 2000 The city was around 2-miles north of its original incarnation, with the coast slowly retreating. This drying of ELYDENS' seas cost the city greatly, with the maintenance of its harbours and deepening its channels becoming prohibitively expensive. By. C. 2500 RM the city had diminished greatly in size, its merchant lords supplanted by a firmamental plutocracy who blamed the ATRAMENTA for the nations' woes. The old CHURCH OF CLEANSING was re-established and the ancient hatred of the Atramenta was preached by the church. By the time of the second major SARASTROAN war in 3522 RM, the city was a bleached ruin, no less than 10-miles from the coast.

The fragmentation of Arkos that followed those wars and the SUNDERING OF THE KORACHANI EMPIRE in 3705 RM saw the region resettled by bandits, who fortified the old citadels established their rule there, with a small but healthy community appearing there in the past centuries, forsaking the banditry of its roots, and now forming a part of the SALT ROAD (Pop. c. 8,500).

DUNAR: Rui. Abandoned ARKOSIAN^(1.) harbour in the c east of Arkos, to the east of the SEA OF ERIA. The harbour was one of the region's main ports though was abandoned in c. 3100 RM. The ruins have since been appropriated by bandits, which are a menace along the road between DUN IACH and EDENTA.

DUNCHA: Set. Small city in the c. east of AQUARIIA, known for its iron mines, which employ most of its adult male population (Pop. c. 20,000).

DUNE SEA, the: Sup. Geo. Though many use the term synonymously with KHARKHARADONTIS, the Dune Sea refers to a specific desert region dominating the c and north of Kharkharadontis, that is covered in a thick layer of dunes made up of dust, rust flakes, ground bone, and sand, with individual particulates said to possibly date back to ancient civilisations and empires throughout the Ages of ELYDEN'S history.

It covers some 4,000,000 square-miles of land and in places is many miles deep, covering entire geographical formations. Where it is deep, the weight of overlying dust has compacted the lowermost reaches into a substance similar to duststone, and this lower stratum is sometimes exposed by the constant movement of the dunes, revealing the soft stone, which is highly susceptible to wind and rain erosion.

It is largely unpopulated, with the Atramental taint in its south western-most expanses being too severe for prolonged exposure, though animals that are adapted to its effects and the climate can be found there. Of note are lumbering reptiles known as KURMA, whose bodies are naturally adapted to the presence of the Atramenta. The katabatic winds of HYENEA carry moist air into it from upland regions in the south, allowing adapted life to survive there.

Though the place is desolate, it is not without its wonders and various grotesque and ancient landmarks pepper the region, including ancient ruins dating back to previous ages, when the dust was not as pronounced as it was today.

The region is categorised as a LEAST CONCERN by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

DUNKOYAN: city in the north of KREM, in the eastern face of the ARGENT Mountains. It is known for its self-sufficient hunters who live for months on their own in the wilderness, following the movements of ARGENT EAGLES, whose eggs are a prized delicacy. The pursuit is dangerous, not only due to the uneven terrain but also the protective eagles which can easily maim mortals with their sharp beaks and caws (Pop. c. 45,000).

DUNTAL I' UD'YO- TECHNADEUS: also 'Outposts of the God-machine'. Rel. Str. Outposts of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE overseen by ENDOCRINES and other facets of the church. These outposts (often in the form of walled citadels) mark the hinterlands of KORACHANI lands.

They were prevalent in the first centuries of the empire's conquests, and were used to enforce the will of the UNDYING MACHINE. In many cases, such outposts became the centres of newly-established settlements and would become the administrative and military centre of the settlements.

DUNTOL: Set. Fort in the c-south east of EZASUH^(2,), guarding the entrance into the BAY OF MALIKHAT.

DUR: Rvr. River in the south west of the HENDECARCHY of MYEIN, flowing south for over 500-miles from sources in the MEMNIDS before meeting with its parent, the river LAUL EGLEA. It is known for its dark waters, which are filled with sediment from the Memnids.

DURA: See. Fortified city in the south west of the PARTHISAN colony of IBANNEM^(1,). It is a militant city, and upon coming of age, its people serve for 5-years in its armed forces, whose main role is to patrol the contested region to the south. Those who survive the full 5-years are given citizenship and are exempt from serving any further, though many decide to continue as professional soldiers (Pop. c. 42,000).

DURAHRAT: Sca. Body of water that forms a north western expanse of the larger SEA OF ORRIDA, bordering the costs of GYZHA, AYAD, OTINTH, and SEDISIA. Like most coastal seas, it has diminished in the past millennia through the wane of ELYDEN'S seas and many of its onceislands have now become part of the mainland, primarily along the peninsula of IANNARA. DURCHAA: Dem. 'Durchaant'. 1. Ntn. Once the northern-most province of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, north of ALMAGEST and ASTUDAN, founded on the ruins of the nation of THYTHIA, which was destroyed following a lengthy military campaign that lasted from c. 900 – 1491 RM, during which the indigenous people of the region were wiped out, with the remained of its populace being enslaved.

Eventually embodying a diverse population of DEMIURNES, HUMANS and DVERGAI, the province became known for its FLESHMILLS, ATELIERS and cloning manufactories, where many of its manufactured creatures, including some iterations of the STEEL LEGIONS, were INCEPTED. It also became a major source of meteore. Many boreholes have been excavated to reach concentrations of pure-UMBRA deep below the surface and the region was a major supplier of raw umbra to the empire before its eventual loss during the WAR OF THE ARTIFEXES. Over the years, the chthonic taint seeped to the surface, where the land itself became twisted, warping otherwise healthy flora and fauna making much of the surface inhospitable.

The War of the Artifexes in 3014 RM saw Durchaa weakened, cut off from the empire. Much of its south western territories were annexed by a confident Almagest by 3284 RM, though the regions around the main city of Durchaa^(2,) remained strong, particularly around the fortifications of RICHAA. Despite this, contact with the Korachani empire in the aftermath of the war became sporadic at best, allowing Durchaa to fully break away in 3321 RM, though a lone Korachani city-state (TEMERACHAN) remains to this day along the border between Durchaa and Almagest. By the time Almagest gained its independence, even more lands, including vast territories south of the MARMARA MASSIF, had been taken by Almagest.

What remained eventually became a small kingdom allied with Almagest, powered and heated by geothermal energies and continuing the ATRAMENTAL and CLONING traditions set forth by its forebears. Today it sells vat-grown beasts and creatures to the highest bidders across Elyden. It is also known for its many HALF-OGHURS and their descendants with HUMANS, from a time when they were used as SLAVES and workers. Indeed, many people in Durchaa with wide frames who stand 6' tall or taller are just assumed to have OGHUR blood without anyone making a deal of it. Some regions See Vol III: the Nations of Elyden.

2. Pol. Set. Capital of the nation of the same name. The first major IMPERIAL colony in the region in c. 740 RM, before Korachani attacks on the indigenous populations began, it began as a city on the fringes of Imperial life where daredevil frontiersmen and prospectors would gather after long sojourns into the wilderness.

It has since grown into a thriving city, the largest in the nation and is home to many great manufactories, some of which experiment with the thick SHADOW-STUFF found beneath the surface, as well as more mundane sciences such as geothermal energies. It is situated in a great basin (once a cavern, its roof now collapsed), at the south eastern shore of lake THYTHIA and is prosperous, well known for its slave workforce, which is largely comprised of the descendants of natives who were taken by Korachani subjugators centuries ago (Pop. c. 580,000).

DURCHAAN: Lan. Language that emerged in DURCHAA from KORACHANI in the centuries following its independence in 3321 RM. Though it remains a Korachani language at its heart, it has many ALMAGESTI loanwords, and can be described as closer to LOW KORACHANI as it emerged from the workers' languages that were spoken across the nation. See Vol II: Languages.

DURCHAAN UMBRA LINES: Sup. Ind. Expansive UMBRA pipelines covering most of the nation of DURCHAA^(1.), originating in the offshore umbra fields of OGGUTEI. The pipelines are heavily guarded against attack and theft and are fortified throughout their 1,900-length and patrolled regularly.

The lines are commonly divided into two – the Western and Eastern Lines – with the former beginning in $\underline{DAALKATH}$ and ending in the city of Durchaa^(2,), and the latter beginning in $\underline{MEKONIA}$, and ending in \underline{UROTHA} , via the city of Durchaa.

DURCHAN: Set. Fortified city in the east of AZAZEM, guarding the SABBARA pass east into KORACHAN. It is built on the ruin of an earlier city that existed on the then banks of the river ZEMEN^(1.) that was destroyed by the DORUK CALAMITY in 3088 RM. The disaster saw massive flooding and landslides alter the terrain of the region, washing away the city and altering the course of the river, shifting it some 20-miles.

Durchan was rebuilt over the ruin of the old city, and eventually became a base of the KNIGHTS FERROUS, who share leadership of the city to this day (Pop. c. 32,500).

DURET: Set. Major city in the c of ERET (2.) (175,000). *

DURIAN: Geo. Massive escarpment, around 1,500-miles long, in KHARKHARADONTIS, north west of the DUNE SEA, serving as the southern border of the FLAESCUS region and a buffer to the crawling desert, preventing it from moving north. The area is notable not only for its size, which itself is something unknown of in other lands, but also the strange thorny honeycomb that peppers the escarpments' surface, its poisonous orange sap glowing from within, illuminating the region in an eerie light for miles around.

DURILIT: Geo. Two small mountainous regions in the south of AHRISHEN, each about 200-miles long. A local legend describes how the two ranges, separated by 310-miles, came by the same name.

DURLAR: Set. Small city and surrounding regions in the c north of VENTHIR, east of the SEA OF KALAUN. It is famed for its groves of OPOENA fruit, which are harvested for their medicinal qualities (Pop. c. 11.500).

 $\underline{\mathbf{DURNIR}} \colon$ (B. unknown) $\mathit{Pol}.$ Current ruler and Choyal-councillor of CHTHYRID.

DURNN: Set. Small cliffside settlement in the south of the ILLIGARHI Mountains, in TEMUJA (Pop. c. 3,000).

DURORI: 1. Rvr. River in the north east of AZAZEM, flowing west for 80-miles from the OTHACHA Mountains before joining with the river ZEMEN.

2. Set. Settlement in the north east of AZAZEM, west of the OTHACHA Mountains and 55-miles south west of the EDEN NU. It is a centre of mining in the region, particularly chalk and copper, which are both used in the alchymical art (Pop. c. 6,200).

2. Geo. Rocky upland region in the south of the $\underline{\text{HAR\acute{E}SHKI CITY-KINGDOM}}$ of $\underline{\text{MEDES}}.$

3. Geo. Also, the name used for the MEDESI peninsula, flanked to the east by the gulf of $\underline{CARIA}^{(1)}$, and the east by the gulf of $\underline{NESHER}^{(1)}$.

DURHADDON: Set. Major city in the north east of OPHIUSSA, relatively close to the border with GNOTH (Pop. c. 230,000).

DURUHIR: Set. Settlement in the north of AYAD. Its main industry is marble quarrying (Pop. c. 8,000).

DURUN: Rui. Ancient ruined tower in the far north east of CYHLAGHARR, in the eastern face of the RGWEROTHA Mountains. It was once a major outpost for Cyhlagharri armies, though is now ruined, mostly collapsed into the sea below.

DURUTHILHOTEP: m. Myt. His. Per. In the mythology and ancient history of ELYDEN, third of the Two-and-Twenty DEMIURGES, whose children were the IMMORTALS^(2.).

He was a counterpart to RACHANAEL. ALLAISHADA was his greatest pupil. As an ascetic and philosopher, he accepted his loss of divinity, which brought him even closer with the Firmament.

He withered in the late FOURTH AGE with the fragmentation of his people, the IFIRMIANS, though his will survived in the methods and rituals of those who continue the Firmamental tradition.

His known SCIONS are: ARAMMU, HAVELRA, KHAMAR, and VUALSAURA. See vol IV: the Two-and-Twenty Demiurges.

DURUTETH: Geo. Small island, in KHAMID just east of KHEMET, in the DARK SEA. The island is only around 2-miles long, and is relatively featureless, being little more than barren rock. It was landlocked prior to the CATACLYSM OF KHAMID and was said to be the place where the SCION KHAMAR first taught the ancestors of the Khamidians about the FIRMAMENT.

DUSAGHAA: Geo. Rocky hills in the c east of the nation of DURCHAA^(1.). DUSALON: Mil. Str. Fortress in the c north of SARASTRO.

DUSDADRIS: For. Sparse boreal forest in the c north west of ATARAXIA.

DUSES: also 'the Holy City'. Rel. Pol. Set. Capital city of the SYCHTAN PREFECTURES. It forms a major stop along the ISHMMARRAN TRAIL and caters to the many merchants and travellers that cross through it (Pop. c. 2,260,000).

DUSK, BASILICA OF: Rel. Str. Once a sanctuary for pilgrims of the UNDYING MACHINE, originally constructed some distance from the CITY OF ALMAGEST, the BASILICA has since become enveloped by the city sprawl, and is the largest non-MANUFACTORY structure in the city and is renowned around the Republic for the size of its verdigris-encrusted dome.

DUSKHEADS, the: Art. Large carved humanoid faces in the south of the JAT RAZDA region of THE SURRACH in the north west of SAMMAEA. The faces look west across the SEA OF ESCHATA, and are weathered by sea and rain, though their scope and expert construction mean that their features are still visible. Their creators are unknown, and they are thought to date the THIRD AGE.

DUSSAARA: Set. Coastal settlement in the north of the KORACHANI colony of TAVVADRA, in the north west of SAMMAEA. Its main industry is fishing (Pop. c. 3,000).

DUST MAW: see OBLEVIA.

DUSTINA: Rui. Abandoned city in the c of DURCHAA^(1.), west of lake THYTHIA. It was once a major deep-bore UMBRA SIPHON, though the engines fell silent in c. 3112 RM after decreased contact with the empire after the WAR OF THE ARTIFEXES led to a lack of maintenance. Today the region is an ATRAMENTAL WASTELAND, at the centre of which is the ruin of the old city, which once housed 30,000 bodies during its peak in c. 3002 RM.

DUSTSTONE: Sup. Ele. Stone, common across ELYDEN, particularly in areas that have been subjected to prolonged ATRAMENTAL exposure. Such exposure is thought to be responsible for the characteristic brittleness of duststone. Many areas where umbra has been found, such as ALMAGEST, AZAZEM and PELASGOS, are all riddled with this type of rock, which is a threat to construction works wherever they are found. Known for its brittle nature and propensity to absorb liquids (increasing its brittleness), it is known for its impressive formations, though is next to useless in construction, though of some use to sculptors and stonesmiths.

Duststone can be both sedimentary or metamorphic, with the Atramenta responsible for corrupting both – either influencing its creation (in the case of sedimentary) or its life (in the case of metamorphic). Areas of sandstone or thick dusty sedimentary deposit can, over time and exposure to the Atramenta (through natural or artificial means) create duststone.

DUSURRA: Set. Coastal settlement in the south of the KORACHANI colony of TAVVADRA in the north west of SAMMAEA. The settlement's main industry is pearl-diving (Pop. c. 5,000).

DUULAA: Geo. Salty basin in the south of LAASKHA, north of the NASUCHARI hills. The basin is a remnant of a bay that existed there until c. 3500 RM, marking the old coastline.

 \underline{DUYANU} : 1. (230-ft.) Rvr. Waterfall in the c north of $\underline{ATARAXIA}$, along the course of the river \underline{ARASTA} .

2. Ind. Ser. Logging settlement in the north of ATARAXIA, to the south west of the SARASH forest (Pop. c. 29,000).

DVEOMER: Mys. Amongst the DVERG, a quasi-religious practice that melds incantations and ritualistic chanting with the technological expertise the race is renowned for. A great deal of mysticism and hyperbole surrounds their mechanical teachings, making it difficult to distinguish stylised rituals from practical applications.

Through contact with the Dvergai, the trait was passed down to the Imperial DEMIURNES where it has perhaps become an even more widespread and fanatical practice.

DVERG: Plr. 'Dvergal'. Mor. One of the original two-and-twenty MORTAL PEOPLES, and the children of the DEMIURGE SYNCHTHONITH. They are a short, stocky, and technologically aware people, and are native to lands north of THE INNER SEA, originally centred around the RHAECHA Mountains, though are rarely seen in the open due to their sensitivity to light.

Their lands and clades were wiped out millennia past by $\underline{\text{HUMAN}}$ expansion in the $\underline{\text{FOURTH}}$ and early $\underline{\text{FIFTH AGES}}$, and now they are restricted to enclaves and ghettoes in various other nations and regions, though they claim the small nation of $\underline{\text{CHTHYRID}}$ as their own. They are also found in some numbers within the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI EMPIRE}}$, where they have become an essential part of its industries, working as slaves and technologists in its many manufactories. The $\underline{\text{STEEL CATARACT}}$ – the largest dam in $\underline{\text{KORACHAN}}$ – was mostly built by dvergai hands.

Their pale skin and large black eyes are sensitive to light, so when they are seen close to and above ground, they are almost always covered in thick leather suits and tinted goggles; the accoutrements of their trade. They show little affinity for the FIRMAMENT or the ATRAMENTA, though have a racial understanding of the latter and its applications within TECHNARCANA, and their seemingly innate affinity for engineering is legendary.

Though they maintain few open ties to their ancestry, a few ancient temples have been discovered by Imperial explorers, hewn from deep caverns, though all are eons old and lie abandoned.

MULLS are descended from ancient unions between dvergai and humans and are today more numerous than the dvergai themselves, with various small nations and city-states under their control. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life: Sicthain.

DVERGR: Lan. Language spoken by many DVERG in LLACHATUL, that borrows heavily from HUMAN languages from the early FOURTH AGE. See Vol II: Languages.

DWARFISM: 1. Med. Condition noted throughout ELYDEN where individuals of a race (generally HUMANS) are born with disproportionate limbs, characterised by extreme shortness. Etymologically, it is derived from the word Dverg. Though not universally so, it is commonly a result of Atramental or Firmamental influence upon the gestative process or inherited traits from the parents. In most cultures dwarfs are treated little different than those of larger stature, though in others they might form a unique caste of high or low station amongst the populace (such castes are commonly advisors, PARIAHS or SHAPERS).

- 2. Soc. Acceptance of dwarfism has varied throughout the reign of the HIGH-EMPIRE of KORACHAN, though was perhaps most common there amongst all the human nations of the FIFTH AGE, save perhaps PARTHIS. Dwarfism was accepted as just another form of the physical condition in the cities of the empire and was regarded with little difference to the form of ATRAMENTAL TAINT manifested in UMBRANS and DEGENERATES.
- 3. Soc. In PARTHIS, dwarfism has been viewed with esteem and historically many influential court advisors tended to be dwarves, and today ministers and other influential members of the government are dwarves.
- 4. Soc. In GNOTH, an ancient pariah-caste of GIGANRI that now survives as a caste apart from Gnothi society that operates as a (willing) servant caste in return for erudition and protection. These dwarves are about the size of humans, and are known as ARAQUI.

DYANOOTH: also 'the Illusory City' and 'the City That Isn't'. Int. Set. Dre. A large city in the wastes of WESTERN SAMMAEA, within the CITRINE PLAINS in the far east of the CITIZENRY OF THALI. The city originated as an independent city-state in c. 1800 RM which eventually became engulfed by a pervasive DREAMSCAPE that appeared in c. 1980 RM and which increased steadily in both strength and area over the coming decades. This proved detrimental to its economy, making travel into it increasingly difficult over time, causing the city to wane in influence until it became effectively isolated in c. 2265 RM. Those living within the city and its immediate surroundings became trapped and only ONEIROMANCERS and those with particularly strong wills were able to escape the confines of the dreamscape, in some cases never able to return.

The city has survived since then like an island separated from the coast by extreme tides, cutting it off from the mainland for most of the time but linked momentarily, allowing people in and out. Oneiromancers wield all power and those without such skills form the workers' caste, effectively trapped.

The city has created a DREAM-based economy over time, with people mining or harvesting the dreamstuff that surround it, which can be taken back to the MATERIAL PLANE by oneiromancers or during times when the oneiric veil surrounding the land weakens, allowing mundane travel.

The city is at risk from dreamers in the nearby Material Plane, whose dreams can warp and alter its fundamental nature, and it employs a cadre of oneiromancers who keep a constant vigil, guarding the citizens of Dyanooth from external harm.

The city is largely invisible to travellers in the Material Plane, though it can be seen by oneiromancers and faintly by those dreaming, though at the times in its cycle when the surrounding dreamscape's potency weakens, it can be seen as a mirage by those nearby, possibly materialising fully, allowing travel and interaction through mundane means. (Pop. c. 27,000).

DYCHOTI: Sup. Rare SHAPERS who are able to use both the ATRAMENTA and the FIRMAMENTAL in their SHAPING.

DYCRAAT: Set. Coastal settlement on the north east of the island of CYNCER^(1.) in the south of the CORAL BARONIES, off the south western coast of SAMMAEA. Its people's main diet consists of soft-shelled shrimp that lives in the waters around the SHIBBOTHA and SHIELD ISLES. These are boiled and eaten whole, usually in stews or with legumes, and as a result locals are known for the slight orange-pink tint to their skin (Pop. c. 9.500).

DYEA: Soc. Pol. Geo. Ancestral lands of the DYEIN nomads of the ERESHKIGAL in KASPIA.

DYEIN: 1. Eth. Nomadic people of KASPIA, and remnants of an older time before the rise of TAHIRA. They live in small family groups that travel the highlands of the ERESHKIGAL on foot, building small stone huts (also known as dyein) when needed or using abandoned ones they come across, leaving offerings to the next occupants when they leave. They do not recognise TAHIRA as a sovereign and are shunned by the urban populations, sometimes as far as being persecuted by faithful followers of Tahira. They worship the old ELDRIAN deities of the KRIAN PANTHEON. See Vol II: the Nomads of Elyden.

2. Soc. Obj. Round, flat-topped huts built by the Dyein nomads in KASPIA.

DYFAED: 1. Rel. Dei. Baleful demigod worshipped by the people of PHUT. It takes the form of a hunched winged beast with an open book in place of a head, and statues in this image dominate the skylines of its manufactory-cities and the harbours of its great coastal capital EPHUTA.

Worship of the demigod followed the rise of power of the current socialist dynasty and many voiced their doubt as to the authenticity of the nascent cult. These doubters were silenced, and people soon learnt to worship the idol without voicing any doubts, at least in the open. The open book is said to symbolise the dynasty's pursuit of power, though it is likely little more than propaganda.

2. Set. Major city in \underline{PHUT} and the centre of the cult of Dyfaed (Pop. c. 110,300).

DYKEWALKERS: specialised members of the ROYAL CORPS OF HYDRAULIC ENGINEERS in AHRISHEN. They check the structural integrity of dykes and other structures concerning the maintenance and upkeep of the AHRISHENI WATERWAYS. They live in simple boarding houses operated by the Corps, which are usually situated on either end of long dykes and bridges, where they sleep overnight before returning to work the next day.

DYLA TA': Set. Large fortified city in the far south west of KHULL, close to the border with the VESPERTINE LEAGUE. It is a major economic power and is home to the Kophic houses, who have grown wealthy in the region through trade with the west. The city is noted for hollow temple – a large coliseum-like church dedicated to the SHADOW TRIUMPHANT, that was repurposed from an old SORCERER-KINO⁽³⁾ arena (Pop. c. 130,400).

DYLPHIRA: Geo. Mountain in the west of NAARETH, forming an extension of the IROTHA Mountains. It is known for its many dark volcanic plugs, which stand out against the pale rocks of the region.

DYNASTY, TAREQIAN: also 'Tareqian Sultanate'. Pol. Org. The current ruling dynasty of SHAZGIN, which has ruled since 3792 RM. It is named after its first sultan, TAREQ I OF FATIMAR, and the present Sultana is ZARIFIRA II.

DYNASTY, ZARALL: also 'Zarall Sultanate'. His. Pol. Org. Historical SULTANATE of SHAZGIN that was in power between 3102 and 3321 RM. Its last Sultan was Haffalin, who came to power following the assassination of his cousin ZARALL III by his HAREM. He died childless and without any direct relatives who could inherit the mantle of Sultan, leading Shazgin into a period of strife that lasted for 3 years, until a new Sultan rose in $2234\ RM$.

DYRANTON: Soc. Pol. PATRICIAN HOUSE based in DURCHAA, with a history in mining. It was once a part of the ATRAAGOH SYNDICATE, which operated extensive mines in the region of ERIHAAS. The mines fell silent in c. 3945 RM after copper in the area reserves dwindled. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

DYSTORIN: His. Dru. An ancient drug that was used in early FIFTH AGE religious rituals around the SEA OF ETAGIRIA, particularly in ILLAKRAR, northern AKACHA, and ZATAUR. Made from a mix of various ingredients including EPHEDRA^(1.), it was said to bring those who took it (usually by inhaling smoke from burning resins made from the varied ingredients) closer to divinity. Though the recipe for the drug was lost years ago, it is believed that it was psycho-active, possibly making users more sensitive to the OTHERWORLD or DREAMWORLD.

There hae been attempts at making the drug in more recent years, particularly in Zataur, though most results have been mixed at best.

DYSTRA: Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTAL feature in the c mainland of the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS, along a dip in the midpoint of the spine of the northern HELICAR Mountains. The site is a sinkhole that leads into weak DUSTSTONE hollows beneath. The caverns are known to contain strains of raw UMBRA, though their extraction has proved too difficult to manage on a large scale.

E

EA NAGHIR: Sup. Mys. For. Wretched woodlands in the c north of the OLD FOREST, located atop the mouldering body of an unknown being, likely a SCION. Its trees are known for their dark thick trunks and long sinuous branches which lift upwards, their large red hand-like leaves moving to face the sun as it arcs in the sky above.

It appeared in c. 2200 RM to the east of lake SETTRON and has slowly expanded since then. Aside from the slow change to the trees, most vegetation in the region grew diseased and withered, yet not only remained alive, but also spread to cover the entire forest floor in a thick tangle that remains impenetrable to this day.

EAGLEWOOD: Flo. Brittle wood common to much of the north of LLACHATUL. It is good for much other than for firewood, though it gives off little smoke as it burns. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

EALAN: 1. (10,200-ft.) Geo. Highest peak of the EPITRACHON Mountains named after an ancient god of THE OLD FOREST who is no longer worshipped.

2. Dei. Rel. An ancient god of $\underline{\mbox{THE OLD FOREST}}$ who is no longer worshipped.

EAREARACH: Art. Korachani opera that features a SHAPER (likely a TEMPESTARII) who creates a storm and calls lightning to slay those who have scorned him.

EARLY KORACHANI: see KORACHANI, EARLY.

EARNEA: Set. Small fortified city in the east of the tribe of NUNEA, in the south east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 14,000).

EARTH: Mys. Ele. The second element in the alchemical philosophy of GNOTHI MYSTICISM.

EARTHWRIGHT: Soc. Rnk. In the KORACHANI EMPIRE, and, after the SUNDERING OF THE KORACHANI EMPIRE in 3705 RM, the REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO, artisans who specialise in sculpture and carving, typically in the lands around the region of the ARID TRIPTYCH. They are respected craftsmen, particularly in northern SARASTRO, where their talents are highly-sought.

EARTHWRIGHT, the: Mys. His. Common epithet by which the DEMIURGE SYNCHTHONITH was once known.

EAST ROAD, the: Com. Geo. Major trade-route that encompasses the nations of SARAGOS, SUOR, NAARETH, and KHITAI.

It stretches for around 4,280-miles, beginning in the city of IPHEIUS in Saragos, crossing the border into Naareth, where it passes through the cities of MAARCH, and BAGATIA, into Suor via KAPURRA, TAION and BESHER AD, before entering Naareth again via ALMA, KAURNAKAR, and SUMAAR. It then crosses the GULF OF VEGATETH into Khitai via the city of GRATH, ending finally in KOURIA. See Vol II: Major Trade Routes.

EASTERN: also 'Eastern Pidgin' and 'Tradetongue' Lan. KORACHANI name for the pidgin TRADETONGUE that is commonly spoken amongst merchants and diplomats in in the north of AHRISHEN, TEMUIA, SAUA, KASPIA, and the north west of MALAN. See Vol II: Languages. EASTERN BRORI CURRENT: Sea. Warm surface ocean current in the west of the BATHASHAL OCEAN that flows to the south as part of the BATHASHALI GYRE along the eastern coast of the continent of BROR^(1.), before meeting the WEST WIND DRIFT, where it flows back east before joining the WESTERN KALISANGELID CURRENT.

EASTERN DOLDRUMMS: Sea. Intertropical convergence zone where the north easterly and south easterly Trade Winds converge, roughly along the equinoctial line, in the MIROVEAN OCEAN, between the east of SAMMAEA and the south west of MENISCEA. Its specific position varies short-term by season and long-term by age, though is generally characterised by monotonous windless weather and thunderstorms.

In the age of sail, most vessels would travel west and then south, rather than directly south across the doldrums, taking advantage of the currents of the $\underline{\text{MIROVEAN GYRE}}$.

EASTERN HEMISPHERE: see FAR HEMISPHERE.

EASTERN LARISH: see LARISH, EASTERN.

EASTERN LLACHATUL: see LLACHATUL, EASTERN.

EASTERN MENISCEA: see MENISCEA, EASTERN.

EASTERN MYMEREAN CURRENT: Sea. Warm surface ocean current in the east of the SEA OF MYMEREA that flows north along the western coast of MENISCEA, before separating north west into the SEA OF AKRY, and south, where it meets the NORTHERN MYMEREAN CURRENT.

EASTERN PIDGIN: see TRADETONGUE.

 $\underline{\textbf{EASTERN SAMMAEA}}\text{: see }\underline{\textbf{SAMMAEA}},\underline{\textbf{EASTERN}}.$

EASTERN SAMMAEAN DIVIDE: Geo. Continental divide forming the eastern-most border of the INNER SEA, between the LLACHATULI DIVIDE and the KHARKHARADONTID DIVIDE. It stretches for 500-miles from the north along the KOKORO and ASHER Mountains, down the KYTHIS Mountains across the STRAIT OF NÁRTHEL, along the JAELA, KHO INNOR, and HAAGEN Mountains, into MULCIBER, and finally along the UGOSTAUTH, and TATRASAN Mountains, where it meets the Kharkharadontid Divide.

EASTERN SAMMAIDAN CURRENT: Sea. Surface ocean current in the SEA OF SAMMAIDU that flows to the west and south down the eastern coast of the KALISANGELID ISLES, before meeting the WEST WIND DRIFT, where it flows back east.

EASTERN THANO: see THANO, EASTERN.

EASTERN TULURKRYPH: Geo. One of two common subdivisions of the FIRMAMENTAL WASTELAND of TULURKRYPH(1.), located to the west of the SEA OF IPERIA in the south west of MENISCEA

EATAN: 1. Soc. Pol. Tribe in the c of MULCIBER, in the GROWING MOUNTAINS, in the north east of SAMMAEA. It is one of few c territories, and is surrounded by other tribes, including USAR, SALARNA, ALLAKAT, JACITTA, and ORIM. Its eastern-most border runs along the BOLILOT PEAKS, making it impassable. It is known for the many AIKLAH ruins that dot the BAESIN ridge along its northern border, most of which date back to the FOURTH AGE. Local legend claims that aiklah survive in the Mountains, hiding, and avoiding detection by other mortals.

2. Pol. Set. Ruling city in the tribe of Eatan, in the c west of MULCIBER, in the west of the GROWING MOUNTAINS (Pop. c. 90,000).

EATERS OF BLOOD: see KHAR'ILLAE, BEAST OF.

EATERS OF SOULS, the: see BAELONAE.

EATET: Set. Settlement in the east of THETIS (Pop. c.6,800).

EBAD: 1. Geo. Glacier in the c north of GNOTH, along the spine of the SOLUN HIGHLANDS.

2. Rui. Art. Arc. Ancient monument in the c north of GNOTH, roughly in the middle of the above glacier.

EBADIS: Sec. Small city on the island of EMARAD off the south western coast of CARNYNGA (Pop. c. 14,000).

EBADRIS: Set City in the prefecture of SONTADRIS, in the south of HOLOLACH^(1.) (Pop. c. 38,000).

EBAEON ELLETH, INTERREGNUM OF EHBOT: (B. 282 – 953 RM)

His. Pol. INTERREGES and IMPERIAL governor in charge of the imperial colonies of EHBOT during a time of strife and war with AUERENI barbarians and their allies. Ebaeon arrived in Ehbot with the first migrations there in 352 RM, already a veteran of various duties and governing services in IO. Little more than an ambassador at the time, he worked even as war consumed Ehbot. When Korachan abandoned Ehbot to a state of INTERREGNUM in 527 RM following an irreversible defeat there, Ebaeon became the head Interreges. There was little he could do; outnumbered and close to starving, he readied what remained of his forces and people for a war of attrition they could not hope to win.

In 531 RM he was wounded by a gunshot, and later that year his fate and that of Ehbot were irreversibly changed with the arrival of 3 mystics form ANUBIA. Calling themselves AVENTORS, they promised him his health would return, and that of Ehbot would follow. Within 2-years an imperial convoy had arrived to aid their defence and the Auereni attacks were losing intensity; a century of war was ended, and Ehbot was free. Though by then Ebaeon had already become a tool of the Aventors (known later as AUSPEXES) and he continued to weaken, his body relying on TECHNARCANE aid to function, though it greatly prolonged his life. By c. 620 RM Ebaeon remained a figurehead to those who remembered the war, though as the last generation of survivors died, his popularity waned.

Following the regions' victories against the Auereni and their allies, Ebaeon, by then simply a puppet of the Auspexes, had the remnants of the STEEL LEGIONS disbanded, their members spread across the cities of the region as wardens (later to become the ARKOS^(3,) caste and CUSTODES), though by c. 620 RM the Auspexes had gravitated towards the Custodes, leaving Ebaeon as a figurehead of waning influence. By 622 RM his physical condition had worsened to a degree that he could no longer appear in public and the Custodes took full control of Arkos.

Well into his fourth century of life, the Ebaeon of that age had little in common with the man who had led Ehbot against the Auereni wars; his body and mind altered by technarcana and the Atramenta, not to mention warped by the machinations of the Auspexes. He died finally in 953 RM and was lain to rest in the catacombs of Dun Iach without any ceremony, for by then none were alive who remembered the man that had been. His death marked the start of a great project – construction of a metal colossus was begun that same year outside the town of Colyis, ending in 1462 RM, by which point the city of Arkos had grown around it.

EBALA: Set. Coastal city in the south of ABRAXA^(2.) (Pop. Unknown).

EBALINUT: Set. Coastal settlement in the north of the BARRIER LANDS (Pop. c. 4,600).

EBANN: Set. Settlement in the east of OKKHAM, in the foothills of the NESAE Mountains (Pop. c. 5,000).

EBARRA: Set. Settlement in the south east of GIBEAH. Its main industry is logging (Pop. c. 8,000).

EBATAISA: For. Scrub forest along the south eastern coast of SABAISA. It is thought to have once been a great forest, later in the FOURTH AGE.

EBATHAS: Geo. The north western-most coast of PORPHYR, forming the western-most reaches of the RYKK Mountains, which continue beneath the surface of the sea. The region is rocky and the amnesic effects of the SEA OF LETHEA, make the area inimical to mortal life.

EBATRA: Geo. Island off the south western coast of WESTERN SAMMAEA, in the COTRIAN ISLES, forming a part of the ISLAND STATES OF IRY.

EBATURA: Set. Fortified city in the north of OKKHAM. It is a major base to the KNIGHTS OF THE BUDDING ORCHID (Pop. c. 4,000).

EBBERASH: Set. Fortified city in the c north east of the tribe of ITTRA, in the c of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. It is a trade link with the tribe of DRAKAINA, and has a notable AHHAS community (Pop. c. 30,000).

EBBET BRAH: Ser. Small coastal city on the island of NERA in the south west of GYZHA (Pop. c. 12,000).

EBBGATE: Rel. Soc. Religious mendicants common around the INNER SEA REGION, belonging to both the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE and the REFORMED CHURCH OF SARASTRO, and pre-dating the latter. They take on the role of sin eaters and travel around rural towns and settlements in the hinterlands of the TWIN EMPIRES, offering their services. Though an integral part of both religions, they are not entirely trusted and are mostly shunned unless their services are required.

EBBOARDI: Rvr. River in the south of GIBEAH, flowing south for 135-miles, from sources in the south of the BERDERAN Mountains before reaching the coast at the SEA OF MOSASA.

EBECHAA: Rui. Abandoned city in the south west of the nation of DURCHAA(1.). It was once a deep-bore UMBRA SIPHON, though the engines fell silent in c. 3000 RM after decreased contact with the empire after the WAR OF THE ARTIFEXES led to a lack of maintenance. Today the region is an ATRAMENTAL WASTELAND, at the centre of which is the ruin of the old city, which once housed 30,000 bodies during its peak in c. 3020 RM.

The region is categorised as HIGHLY DANGEROUS by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

EBEDA: Set Small city in the c north east of ATARAXIA, known for its halfsunken manufactories (Pop. c. 14,600).

EBEDORNA Set. Settlement in the north east of AETHIOS, along the course of river BESPAD (Pop. c. 6,500).

EBEGGON: Set. Coastal settlement in the far west of the BARRIER LANDS (Pop. c. 3,800).

EBEIRA: Geo. Island off the south western coast of WESTERN SAMMAEA, in the COTRIAN ISLES, forming a part of the ISLAND STATES OF IRY.

EBEJIN: Sec. Small city in the north west of SAUA in the region of HADASHIN. Alongside its limestone quarries, it is known for its fine statues that are famed across Saua (Pop. c. 12,400).

EBEL: Mil. Str. Fortress in the far north east of THE SURRACH, guarding the border north east with OPHAR.

EBENEK'S BLOOM: Also 'Century Bloom'. Flo. Poi. Exotic plant native to tropical regions of Western Sammaea, particularly the south of the WOLD rainforest. The plant itself is similar to a succulent, albeit on a gigantic scale. It flowers once around every 100-years, resulting in a bloom that is as much as 30-ft. tall, and 20-ft. wide. The flower takes around a month to reach its full size, during which time its noisome stench and bright flesh-coloured petals attract all manner of insects and vermin that serve to pollinate it.

Individual plants can live for many hundreds of years and are naturally resilient to the effects of the ATRAMENTA, though their natural habitat lies relatively close to the NULLAMBIT. Their flesh is poisonous to most creatures, meaning that they are not eaten and are typically allowed to live without disruption, save where their habitats lie in the path of MORTAL expansion. Indeed, it is thought that they were once far more numerous than they are today, and that they reached across all of, but mortal expansion during the THIRD and FOURTH AGES saw their range diminish.

The plant is named after the KORACHANI explorer who first documented it in c. 1600 RM. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life

EBERAD: Set. City in the c south of OPHAR. It is built atop the ruin of a city that was abandoned in c. 3100 RM after the river ELEVAN^(2.) ran dry.

Eberad appeared as a trade outpost in c. 3500 RM, built from blocks repurposed from the earlier ruin, and has since grown into a major trade centre, distributing goods across Ophar, including imports from THE SURRACH (Pop. c. 40,000).

EBERDEVIA: Set. Settlement in the far east of OKKHAM, known for its falconers (Pop. c. 4,500).

EBEREK: Mil. Str. Coastal fortress in the KORACHANI colony of TAVVADRA in the north west of SAMMAEA. It houses a large part of the navy of the region and its ships patrol the BAY OF OXTER and guard merchant ships on the passage north east to the homeland in the INNER SEA.

EBEREON IX: (B. 3954 RM) Pol. Present ruler of ERET^(2,) and the head of the ROYAL HOUSE OF ERET.

EBERR: Dem. 'Eberran'. His. Ancient group of people, too small to be truthfully called a nation, just east of KHAMID, in what are now the RED ISLES. Little is known of the Eberran people as their homeland was destroyed during the CATACLYSM OF KHAMID, though it is thought that whatever remains of them mingled with Khamidian survivors in the years following the Cataclysm.

EBERRA: 1. Geo. Island within the chain of the RED ISLES in the east of KHAMID, originally part of the small nation of EBERR, which was mostly destroyed in the CATACLYSM OF KHAMID in 101 RM.

2. Set. The only known settlement in the remaining territories of EBERR, on the island of Eberra, in the waters of the RED ISLES (Pop. c. 20,000).

EBERUK: Alc. Set. City in the south east of MHAROKK. It is built around the ruin of an ancient obsidian monolith known as the ATROUS MINARET. Today, it is a centre of ALCHEMICAL research and has close ties with the independent city of WYCHAN.

The city originated as a trading post by HOUSE SARCARN in c. 500 RM, and grew steadily into the thriving city of today, becoming a centre of ALCHYMICAL research by c. 710 RM, with various ATELIERS and settlements devoted to the nascent industries of FLESHWRIGHTING and cloning, which led to the founding of the IMPERIAL COLLEGE OF FABRICATED INCEPTION there in 732 RM. This in turn allowed for the first successful industrial-scale inception of primitive HAEMONCULI in c. 740 RM, which earnt the city many accolades.

It eventually became embroiled in the CHEMISTERS' WAR in 786 RM, becoming one of the largest players in the century-long conflict, during which it sent operatives across the INNER SEA REGION to neutralise other ateliers and their creations. The period ended in 823 RM, with the Imperial College of Fabricated Inception granted exclusive right to issue licences to ateliers to manufacture haemonculi for 100-years. The College eventually left the city in 3718 RM amid the chaos following the SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE (Pop. c. 103,800).

EBETUNIA: Set. Settlement in the far north of CISNERIA, in the foothills of the DIVUMMA Mountains (Pop. c. 2,000).

EBEVIR: Rvr. River in the north of SARASTRO flowing for 400-miles west from sources in the ACHALALI HIGHLANDS before meeting with its parent, the river SARAGON, itself a parent of the river SOLONA.

EBIHON: Mil. Str. Fortress in c northern GNOTH, in the SOLUN HIGHLANDS, overlooking the border with RAONGEN^(2.).

EBIN EN ATTOR: (B. 3966 RM) Pol. Present ruler and Sultan of PARAIYA. EBODGE: Set. Settlement in the c of TZALLRACH, linking the city of BELAISA with the more c cities in the RIVER LANDS (Pop. c. 5,800).

EBOLLIA: Set. City in the c south of AMMESH. It is known for its large spring and cisterns that keep the population well-watered (Pop. c. 38,000).

EBON GRAIL: His. Obj. A fabled relic from the now-extinct ALAOGGAN kingdom of the early FIFTH AGE. It is made from hardened ebony and is carved with intricate bass reliefs detailing the exploits of an unremembered ruler. Various legends claim that it has healing properties and that water poured into it can sterilise wounds. The grail is now in the possession of Laod, where it is kept in a large shrine guarded by templars, where it can be viewed by the public.

The object is culturally important to the people of Laod, for it is believed to have been carried by the Shaper King YRRANAH APHIR, who is an important figure in local history and myth.

EBON PALACE, the: also 'Ahhea'. Rui. An ancient edifice, located in the c south of present-day PARAIYA, thought to date back to the early days of the FIFTH AGE, some 5,000-years ago, or earlier.

The Ebon Palace is, culturally, the root of the Paraiyan people, though few amongst them acknowledge or know of this. Located in a lowland area in the east of the plains of MEGHA, the palace was re-discovered by local nomads in c. –200 RM, though was shunned, the dense brambles entwined around its foundations and the ruins around it reason enough for the superstitious people to ignore it. The place was forgotten, allowed to rot.

It was later re-discovered once more by an exiled prince, ABIR PARIA in 73 RM. The ruin was excavated and renovated, and the surrounding structures were repopulated by his entourage, becoming a prosperous trade-town by 300 RM. Drawn by its wealth and the rich tin deposits nearby, as well as the lack of outside influence in the area at the time, the region grew exponentially, with colonies and small mining-villages becoming city-states for around 250-miles around the river NOTHIYA, all answerable to the Prince of the Ebon Palace. The people became known as the Paria, after him. By 1150 RM, the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI EMPIRE'S}}$ presence had grown in the area, particularly in LIDEA, and pressure from there, as well as KARAKHAS in the west and MHAROKK in the north caused tension in the city-states, leading to a long period of hostility between the city-states of the Ebon Palace, caused by lack of resources and tense diplomatic relations. This period, lasting until 2132 RM, was rife with wars and disputes between the states, whittling down the once proud prosperous people of Paria, leaving whole regions and cities in ruins. In 2132 RM the Ebon Palace was sacked and toppled, the house of Paria left without heir.

Following this barren period, what remained of the Parian people dispersed, leaving the ruins of their once-civilisation Paria to rot. The Ebon Palace remained a cursed place amongst the Paraiyan people who rose from the dead Parian culture, and they shun it to this day.

EBON SHROUD, the: Rel. Obj. Religious artefact venerated by the members of the ALMAGESTI TEMPLE^(1.) and the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. The shroud is claimed to have been used by the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR during his ITINERARY to wipe ichor off the languid body of the DEMIURGE RACHANAEL, and bears both the blood of Rachanael and Malichar himself.

It has become a prominent relic and is preserved in a reliquary within the Almagesti Temple^(2,) in the ALMAGESTI PENINSULA, and has a acquired a potent symbolic status representing the dichotomy that runs deep within the teachings of the church – on the one hand it shows the fallibility of the mighty, but also how one can rise from a seemingly desperate situation (both Rachanael and Malichar were reborn after the shroud was used to wipe away their blood).

Pilgrims travel to the CHAPEL OF THE SHROUD, where it is preserved within the main Temple, to look upon it. Miracles hae been associated with the shroud and many of those who view it claim to have been healed of ailments and diseases, though conversely, others claim to have contracted AEPATHY and other ailments. Some claim that this is a punishment to those who have been lax in their devotions.

The shroud was coveted by the Church of the Undying Machine and there were various attempts at acquiring it (both diplomatic as well as military and covert) following the WAR OF THE ARTIFEXES and the independence of Almagest. It was successfully stolen in 3249 RM though was later reacquired in 3308 RM following decades of political wrangling. An agreement was made between the two nations that determined the Shroud to be shared by both churches, and is now venerated by pilgrims from both denominations undertaking the Shadow March.

EBON SHROUD, ORDER OF THE: Rel. Org. Order of nuns and monks within the ALMAGESTI TEMPLE⁽¹⁾, who devote their lives to prayer and veneration towards the religious artefact known as the EBON SHROUD – said to bear the ichor of the DEMIURGE RACHANAEL. Their monastery is adjacent to the Almagesti Temple⁽²⁾, and it linked to the CHAPEL OF THE SHROUD, where the Shroud is contained in a lavish reliquary, though they otherwise live lives of isolations from the rest of the CITY, choosing to venerate the shroud only at night, when the Chapel is closed to the public.

EBORRA: Sea. Shallow sea in the north of SAGITTARIA, considered by many to be the last remaining part of the SEA OF TROIA^(1.). It is characterised by many reefs, shallows and lagoons, all of which make sea travel there dangerous for any vessels other than flat-bottomed barges that cannot stray too far from the coast. Its only navigable waters are in its west. It is thought that the sea will be largely disappeared within a few centuries, at most.

EBOTTRUH: Set. Major city in the c west of GYZHA. The city is renowned for its iron-gall ink, produced from its vast oak groves, which are used across LLACHATUL as well as the north west of SAMMAEA. It is also a centre of mercenary recruitment and training (Pop. c. 100,000).

EBOZA: Set. Major city in the south east of TATAR in the north of SAMMAEA, along the course of the river DIELEGAME. It is the headquarters of the ORDER OF PALINOLA (Pop. c. 180,000).

EBRA: Set Settlement in HARAPPA(3), to the west of the capital in TOTH. It is a major producer of food for the capital (Pop. he c. 8,000).

EBRARIA: Geo. Badlands region in the c of the PARTHISAN colony of $\underline{IBANNEM}^{(L)}$.

EBRIKAS: Com. Set. Trade city in the south of TETHYSIA, which since c. 2850 has been in a close trade partner to the PANTHEON ISLES (Pop. c. 62,000).

EBRODHE: Geo. Rocky region in the north east of SERROK encompassing a small part of the WAELMIGH forest. The area is a labyrinth and is largely impassable to mortals.

EBROVAMM: Set. Major city in the south of ELEKHID, originally situated on an island at the fork where the river GAAZUSH meets its parent, the river GRELLOR, though it has since overgrown the island, and has expanded to either side of the rivers, with steep sided banks built to withstand flooding (Pop. c. 730,000).

EBRUKA: Set. Coastal settlement in the west of SABAISA (Pop. c. 8,000).

EBULLANAS: Rvr. River flowing north for 380-miles from sources in the northern face of the JURRASI^(1.) Mountains in the c north west of Jurras^(2.), before emptying in the BAY OF ESKER.

EBURANT: also: 'the Ivory City'. Set. City in the prefecture of BROTRIS in the c west of HOLOLACH^(1.). The city is known for its wild boar, both farmed and wild, and the boar-tusk ivory it produces. The city square is famed for its caged giant boar-tusk statue depicting the first VARPULIS (Pop. c. 12,500).

EBURIR: Set. City in the c north east of ELAT (Pop. c. 40,000).

EBURNIA: lit. 'Ivory Tower'. Rui. Ancient monolithic tower in sub-tropical wastes of far Western Sammaea constructed from a single gigantic piece of ivory. The tower was discovered by IMPERIAL explorers in c. 1820 RM and sketches from the time show a structure that is far more complete than present-day records show. Time and the elements marring its surface, which was once intricately carved. It once stood at around 150-ft. high and was crowned by a black gem, its fate now unknown.

Many historians claim that it should be included in a list of revised ANCIENT WONDERS of ELYDEN.

EBURUL: Pol. Soc. Tribe in the far south east of MULCIBER, in the GROWING MOUNTAINS, in the north east of SAMMAEA. The tribe of Eberul is one of only three coastal tribes of Mulciber, and has the longest coastline. It is characterised by coastal mangrove forests, and more traditional rainforests inland, with the foothills of the Growing Mountains forming its western and southern borders, south west of which is the foreign state of ELEKHID.

EBUSHEN: Pol. His. Nm. Historic political region occupying the present-day north east of AHRISHEN and VIRAHAN between c. 1000 and 2612 RM. It was founded during the first inter-monarchic period of Ahrisheni history by various minor noble houses, who named the region the United Kingdoms of Ebushen. Inter-house relations were common and before long their royal households had become practically indistinguishable from each other.

These land-locked Kingdoms became a thorn in the side of Ahrishen for over 16 centuries, preying on merchant caravans and travellers moving close to their territories

The Kingdoms were assimilated into Ahrishen during the reign of King OSHORN I of the FLUN-SANDRA SOVEREIGNTY in 2612 RM, remaining a part of Ahrishen until 3389 RM, when it broke away into the nation of VIRAHAN. See Vol III: Extinct States.

EBUT SAT: Geo. Mountain-range in the c south of the MULL CITY-STATES. The range serves as a border between two of its major districts and is a source of tin and lead along its southern-face.

EBYLOS: Geo. Island off the south western coast of WESTERN SAMMAEA, in the COTRIAN ISLES, forming a part of the ISLAND STATES OF IRY.

ECADAT: 1. Geo. Well-travelled pass in the south east of NÁRTHEL crossing gap between the QUTTAKAL and JAELA Mountains in the north and south respectively.

2. Mil. Str. Fort in the south east of NÁRTHEL, guarding those travelling across the RED ROUTE.

ECAUDA: Set. Settlement in the south west of IO, (Pop. c. 6,000).

ECCLESIARCH HALPHAS OF BALASA: (B. 3193 RM) Rel.

ARCHBISHOP of the PELASGOSI arm of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING

MACHINE, advocated full symbiosis with the machine, believing and founding many TECHNARCANIST ventures in Pelasgos. He remains a rogue element to this day, where he has forsaken the remnant cults of the Machine in favour of his own extreme tenets.

ECH MEMEI: Set. Major city in the c north east of SERROK, relatively close to the border with CHEIRA (Pop. c. 78,000).

ECHA: His. Set. Rui. Ancient city in the nation of DHEA, just south east of the hills of GEREMA. In -29 RM it became known as BA'AKH. The city was a major mercantile centre linking Dhea with its southern cousins in DHAMATEA, until the region to the south of the city (forming the eastern-most edge of the BAAL DAGON badlands) became corrupted by the Atramenta in c. -800 RM. This corruption slowly increased until another eruption in -491 RM, which led to the abandonment of the city in -463 RM, its buildings withered and scarred by the shadow.

The city remained empty for many years, though was repopulated in small numbers by c. -50 RM; most of them descendants of disenfranchised DHAMATEANS who were left homeless following the corruption of their land

By around the turn of the first century RM, the ruin had become a bandit fortress, its vagrants ranging from degenerates, those afflicted by the corruption of the land and true bandits that preyed on trade in Ba'akh. The stronghold was attacked by the Ba'akhi armies in 262 RM, where it was destroyed, its residents burnt. The region was never repopulated due to the degradation of the lands of Gerema in which it is located.

ECHACHA: Rui. Coastal settlement in the south east of AHKA, deserted following KORACHANI attacks there in its protracted blockade and siege of Ahka.

ECHAEL: Mys. Rel. Phil. One of the SEVENTY-SEVEN NAMES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE.

ECHAMIS: Set. Coastal settlement in the c of the PARTHISAN colony of IBANNEM^(1.) (Pop. c. 5,750).

ECHAMUN: Rvr. River in the c of the PARTHISAN colony of IBANNEM^(1.) flowing east and south for 250-miles, before meeting the coast at the BAY OF TIRGATOA.

ECHANEM: Geo. Mountain in the north of SABIA, forming a border with the nations of DURCHAA^(1.) and PERGOST. It is the southern-most part of the METUN KOR range. Like THE WASTELAND to its south, the Mountains are peppered with craters and are rich in meteore and glass beads.

ECHEA: 1. Sea. Strait in the Kingdom of ROMOREA^(2.) separating the southernmost reaches of the SEA OF ESCHATA in the north from the artificially-created Sea

2. Set. Major city in ROMOREA⁽²⁾, located along the path of the IVORY ROAD. It is known for its large caravanserais and yards where nomads can come for respite from the elements. It predates the Kingdom of Romorea by some centuries and is now one of the largest mercantile cities in the kingdom. The city controls the only bridge to cross the Echean⁽¹⁾ Strait, and passage of foreign merchants across it is taxed – a major source of income to the city (Pop. c. 72,000).

ECHELONS OF VARIS: Art. Geo. Ancient feature in the south western face of the VARRACHON Mountain covering around 4 square-miles of valley, containing hundreds of rows of bulbous column-like structures, each of which contains bass carvings and inscriptions. The rows follow the contours of the grey slate valley and rise to a level uniform height. Little is known of its purpose, though it is believed to date back to the early days of VORROPOHAIAH'S rule, following the construction of the PRISON CARCERI.

ECHRYSUM: Set. City in the c of AURUM⁽²⁾, along the western shore of lake ORICHAL (Pop. c. 67,000).

ECHULA: Set. Settlement in the c north of VALBAR⁽²⁾. It is known for its many fortified inns and taverns, where trappers, hunters, mountain men, and merchants can take shelter in the long dark winter months (Pop. c.3,300).

ECIRIS: Rel. Religion of the ACHSHI people, corrupted from that of their ACSISI ancestors. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

ECHLAT: Geo. Low mountain range in the north of the HENDECARCHY of CHLORIS in the south west of MALAN. It forms the easternmost expanse of the EGEAHAR Steppes, though its eastern face is sparsely wooded.

ECLIPSE: Ast. Astronomical event where one celestial body (usually the sun, a moon, or ELYDEN) passes into the shadow of another body, or has another body pass between it and the viewer. The term is most often used when one of Elyden's two moons (SIELLA ARAKHAMÉ) passes between Elyden and its sun, causing its light to dim (in the case of the smaller Arakhamé, which will leave a ring of light around it), or extinguish completely (in the case of the larger Siella) for a few minutes. Many cultures throughout Elyden's history have seen eclipses and incorporated them into their calendars and mythologies.

ECNA: Ser. Small city in the north west of TISARA, along the course of the river CARPUNDIA (Pop. c. 14,000).

ECSTACY OF ST. MALICHAR, the: Art. Rel. An expansive black marble sculpture by the troubled LAASKHAN artist DAMIOL L'HERRE located in the BASILICA OF KHADON in KORACHAN. L'herre spent the last two decades of his life working on the sculpture after visiting the Holy Land in KHARKHARADONTIS, and died in hysteria, his obsession finally consuming him.

It is a fictionalised version of the events that led to the death of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR at the hands of the OTHERWORLDER ABEZETHIBOU in 209 RM. It depicts the Archpotentate Malichar being lifted aloft by an unseen force (commonly interpreted to be the will of the UNDYING MACHINE) as grotesque ATRAMENTAL arms and mouths writhe around him, trying to drag him down as the monstrous form of Abezethibou looms below. It is considered a masterpiece of grotesque sculpture and is constructed from a single monolithic piece of perfect black marble and is famed for its intricate detail – flowing hair, grasping hands and limbs, all of which are made from the same single piece of marble.

It is venerated by millions of pilgrims undertaking THE SHADOW MARCH every year and has been blamed for countless unexplained phenomena, including self-healing, stigmata, visions and seizures, amongst those venerating it.

ECSTATICS, the: also 'Empyreans'. Org. Flagellants common to the free lands around coasts of the BROKEN LANDS and the sea of NUN. They are addicted to the FIRMAMENT (note that they are not, by definition, FIRMAMENTISTS), seeking ecstasy from its touch. They travel in ragtag bands around the FIRMAMENTALLY-AFFLICTED lands, such as those of TURCAR, seeking more and more extreme Firmamental sensations to engorge themselves on. Though far from an organised group, there are individuals amongst the ecstatics who seek to propagate their ways; a form of misguided way to disseminate the strength of the Firmament amongst a world that has increasingly forsaken the bright half of creation. These individuals refer to themselves as Empyreans, and, since c. 3700 RM, have tried to centre the group within the SEMINARIES OF SHAPING in the Broken Isles.

ECUMENA: Set. City in the c west of QARALAM, in the c east of SAMMAEA, ruled by FIRMAMENTISTS and SEERS who observe ELYDEN from afar, cataloguing its possible futures, unfulfilled presents, and hidden pasts. This research seems little more than a compulsion or obsession rather than a desire to find out more about the world. What they discover is not recorded and remains only in the GENETIC MEMORIES of its ruling caste, which is said to have ruled the region for millennia, since the FIRST AGE OF MORTAL LIFE.

The Firmamentists themselves are strange beings, as yet uncatalogued, though believed to be of scionic or OTHERWORLDLY heritage. They are frail of body, with bulbous heads and small features, making some believe that they are not entirely human, or might be the result of generations of selective of inbreeding.

The city itself is a relic of a past age, its thick angled stone walls offset by strange bass carvings on street corners. What populace remains does so only to serve the ruling caste in its endless obsession. The IAQRASHAN SULTANATE settled here in 2942 RM after sacking the old capital in the ELHUMBRA, though the capital was later moved to MAHHRIB in c 3320 RM, though Ecumena remained important in the years following this (Pop. c. 100,000).

ECYNDAR: Set. Small coastal city on the west of the island of CAMARA in the east of the CORAL BARONIES, off the south western coast of SAMMAEA(Pop. c. 15,300).

ECYRADA: 1. Set. Small coastal city in the west of KEPHUAAN (Pop. c. 13.000).

2. Set. Coastal city in the north west of TAAN AN (Pop. c. 25,000).

ECZHESE: Set. Coastal city in the west of OKKHAM, overlooking the BAY OF DIATESSARON. It has a large deep harbour where foreign merchant vessels lay anchor, bringing goods from abroad (Pop. c. 50,000).

ECZHNOEL: Set. Fortified city in the east of OKKHAM, close to the border with CHEIRA. It is a major centre of trade, with merchant caravans a common sight entering and leaving the city from its eastern gate (Pop. c. 45,000).

EDA: Set. Settlement in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of CARIA⁽⁴⁾, situated along the western-most foothills of the CARIAN⁽²⁾ Mountains (Pop. c. 10,000).

EDAANA: Geo. Island off the south western coast of LAASKHA, to the south of the BAY OF EDASK^(1.). It is largely flat and most of its western expanse was revealed through the lowering of sea levels over the 4th millennium RM.

EDAHAT: Set. Settlement in the south west of PNESSA. Its main industry is iron mining (Pop. c. 9,000).

EDAKRA: Set. Settlement in the north east of ATARAXIA, to the south of the SARASH forest. its main industry is logging, and wood is sold south, much of which is sold to merchants travelling the RED ROUTE farther south (Pop. c. 5,000).

EDAL: Set. Settlement in the c north west of the UMBRA SOKHAR, just north of the city of KADOTA (Pop. c. 6,000).

EDALA: Sea. Closed strait in the west of the SEA OF DERAEA, acting as a natural border between the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOMS of EDICULE^(L) and PALUS^(L).

EDALLA: Set. Major city in the west of THE SURRACH ruled by a tyrant who controls twin shapers who can cure AEPATHY. This makes him very powerful and he sells their services to the highest bidders across the Surrach and beyond. His people live in misery, slaving in large workshops, whilst his palace is opulence incarnate. It is most famed for its collection of oddities, including exotic skeletons (amongst them a well-preserved SPHINX skeleton, and conjoined SOULSTONES).

The twins have a rare condition similar to aepathy though they absorb it and use it to power their shaping. they are remarkable and out of his shackles would be powerful and fearful indeed, though their minds have been warped by his poison words (Pop. c. 180,000).

EDANDRA: Set. Settlement in the south east of Ahrishen, along the eastern shore of lake MASTI (Pop. c. 8,000).

EDANATH: Set. City in the south west of LYRIDIA, and home to its largest mint, where most of its coins originate. As a result, the city has a sizeable military presence, which guards shipments of gold to the city and shipments of money across the nation (Pop. c. 15,000).

- EDARA: 1. Sea. Body of water in the north east of VAALK, bordered to the west, east, and south by the BAY OF SALTRA, the INNER SEA, and the strait of MALKARRA, respectively.
 - 2. Geo. Island off the north eastern coast of VAALK, divided from the mainland by the strait of MALKARRA. The island is around 2,500 squaremiles and is home to two large fortresses.
 - 3. Geo. Hills and cliff sin the north west of the above island overlooking the INNER SEA.
- EDARIFANIKON: Set. Fishing town in the south west of NOAVATUR (Pop. c. 3,900).
- EDARIS: Rai. Ruined city in the north of ESHIR⁽²⁾. The city was abandoned in c. 3500 RM, following centuries of waning sea levels that had left it landlocked in c. 3300 RM. Once a thriving coastal city, it formed the centre of a large conurbation and was the largest of a dozen culturally-linked settlements that overlooked the GULF OF ESHIRON. The dwindling of the gulf revealed a vast coastal shelf that became known as the LEDGE OF LARCIA, after an ANCIENT DEITY that was once worshipped in the region. Though today it is dominated by thriving wetlands and salty marshes, the newly-exposed shelf was a barren wasteland for centuries after its slow disclosure, leading to a slow wane of Edaris, which saw its livelihood taken from it and its people struggling for generations before they ultimately abandoned it. Little remains of the original city today, and only the stone foundations of its ancient fortress and civic structures remain to bear memory that any people once lived here.
- EDASA: Geo. Region in the C of THE SURRACH, controlled by the city of EDASICH.
- EDASASH: also 'the Blooming Marsh'. Rvr. Salt marsh along the coast of the SEA OF ESCHATA in the w of THE SURRACH. It is known for its unique and colourful spring and early summer blooms.
- EDASICH: Ser. Independent city-state along the IVORY ROAD in THE SURRACH. It has links with the KNIGHTS AENEOUS and is a supplier of food for the caravans travelling the Ivory Road. It is the controlling city of the region of EDASA (Pop. c. 14,000).
- EDASK: 1. Sea. Bay in the south of LAASKHA, enclosed by mainland to the north and island in the west, east and south. The bay is one of the few coastal areas in Laaskha that harbours life of any kind, and many settlements hug its shores, protected by the expansive natural breakwater that the northern peninsula provides. The bay is a remnant of a far larger bay that existed in the area up until c. 3500 RM, and now remains largely as the shallow basin of the same name that stretches to the north east, towards the city of ORAASHKA, which was once a harbour along its shore, around 75-miles from the present coastline.
 - 2. Geo. Shallow basin in the south of LAASKHA, that until c. 3500 RM was part of the present-day sea of Edask. Its soil is dusty and saturated in salt the remnants of the old sea, and little lives there save marsh plants adapted to the saline water.
- EDDA PASS: Geo. Pass in the south east of JURRAS⁽²⁾, between the INNORADOS and GIBBORAH Mountains.
- EDDEFERROCH: Lit. 'metal artist'. Nou. 'Eddeferrochear'. Plr. 'Eddeferrochin'. Sup. Art. Voc. KORACHANI word SHAPERS (usually FERRIMIN) who use their skills in controlling metal as performance artists, where they manipulate thin ribbons of malleable metal with their mastery of the MATERIA OMNA, levitating them as a gymnast might control a ribbon, only without touching it. They are common in LAASKHA and SKAROS and often work as street performers or with larger troupes in theatres or travelling shows moving across the empire.
- EDDISA: 1. Sea. Bay in the west of TATAR, leading to the eponymous city (2.). It forms a part of the GULF OF ESHIRON.
 - 2. Set. Coastal city in the west of TATAR. It is a major port and harbour, and sees trade from the IVORY ROAD make its way to the west (Pop. c. 62,000).
- EDDRADN: Set. City in the c west of CYHLAGHARR, in the far south of the ANGRNN SOUND, at the mouth of the river ONNEGR (Pop. c. 30,000).
- EDECHAN: 1. Int. Set. Small city on the island of VUDA off the south western coast of LAASKHA, famed for being constructed from and around the once-sunken hull of the POTENTATE^(3.) class KORACHANI WARSHIP BATHOS^(2.). The battleship was sunk in the south of the BAY OF NAASU during an engagement with PARTHISAN vessels in 3003 RM, during a time of unease between the two powers amid the WAR OF THE ARTIFEXES. Lowering sea levels over the next centuries saw the vessel reemerge from the sea floor, eventually becoming land-locked by c. 3600 RM, after which it became a target to SCAVEN and opportunists. Today it is only x-miles from the coast of the island.

A scavenger settlement appeared around the hull of the vessel by c. 3750 RM, which slowly grew into the city we know today. Over the years more and more of the vessel was reclaimed for building materials or sold as scrap or salvage, and little of the original vessel now remains, though the central-most tangle of structures still echo the shape of the Bathos.

Those well-versed in the regions' history should have no trouble identifying parts of the ship across the city – with some displayed proudly (such as the old anchor, which is now the double doorway of a well-known inn and brothel) and others buried amid later structures, their original purpose forgotten.

The city remains a haven to scavengers and those with scaven ancestry and its people are more welcoming of scavs than other Korachani cities due to this. As a result, it has a reputation for being home to expert tinkerers, metallurgists and salvagers (Pop. c. 15,000).

- 2. Rui. Abandoned city in the c north west of AZAZEM. It was abandoned in c. 3860 RM following a severe infestation of GORGER GRUBS.
- EDECHOL ISLANDS: Geo. Island-chain in the INNER SEA, bridging the north of CYHLAGHARR with the south west of HOLOLACH⁽¹⁾. The chain comprises a few dozen major islands and many smaller ones, some under the control of Cyhlagharr and other under control of Hololach.
- EDELLA'S ABERRATION: Int. Sup. Fau. Aquatic/aerial aberration (RACHAR) first documented by the NEAR HEMISPHERE naturalist Edella in the waters south of the MAIDEN ISLES in c. 1600 RM. She described it thusly: "an unholy blend of blooming flower, squid, and spider crab, big enough to dwarf a frigate". Indeed, it was so big she later noted that she was unable to observe it fully in go If one part was in view, the rest was obscured in the oceanic murk. Other purported sightings over the years have described a similar being that was accompanied by a deep trilling and vibrations in the surface water above it. One particular sighting in c. 3100 RM described the sea frothing and rising, from which emerged a horrific dome that blossomed like a flower, to float into the air.

An eschatological tale common amongst local islanders speak of a monolithic creature, not unlike a jellyfish that will rise from the sea, its claws (or tentacles – translations are vague), dragging along the ground, bringing decay to all they touch – living or inert. It is thought that these might be related, though little is known about the aberration from reliable or Near Hemisphere sources. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

- EDEN NU: Geo. Pass through the OTHACHA Mountains linking the east of AZAZEM with the west of KORACHAN.
- EDENNA: (13,250-ft.) Geo. One of ten peaks (colloquially known as the TEN PRINCES) in the south eastern A SAVI Mountains in the north of AHRISHEN, named after an ancient prince.
- EDENORS: Set. Settlement in the north east of AETHIOS (Pop. c. 9,000).
- EDENT: Rvr. River in c-south east ARKOS⁽¹⁾ flowing north west for 50-miles from largely-seasonal sources in the TIPHEROT Mountains before emptying into the eastern-most part of the SEA OF ERIA.
- EDENTA: Set. City in c-south east Arkos(1.), along the course of the river EDENT. The city is a major industrial centre in Arkos and is one of its most modern cities, also finding itself along the course of the SALT ROAD (Pop. c. 33,000).
- EDER: Mil. Str. Coastal fortress in the north west of MECHABET, overlooking the SEA OF GHAN.
- EDERA: His. Set. Rui. Fortress-city in ancient ABERAN, where the IDOL OF BAPHOMET was once safeguarded in c -7200. The fortress was lost beneath the SANDS OF MOREG, sometime in the FOURTH AGE, with only third-hand accounts and ancient maps to suggest its present location.
- EDERIN: Geo. Rocky hilly region in the west of ESHIR⁽²⁾, flanked to the north and south by the rivers GAPI and GHATA, respectively. Many aqueducts leading to the east and south have their sources here in these hills.

EDERNA: Rui. Abandoned city in the c north west of AETHIOS, abandoned in c. 3040 RM after the destruction of the dam of AESAPIA^(1.) in 3017 RM. The settlement dwindled in size in the absence of lake Aesapia^(2.) and was eventually abandoned, its people scattering to nearby cities.

EDESRA: 1. Sea. Bay in the west of SAGITTARIA, forming part of the SEA OF AAHES.

2. Set. Coastal settlement in the east of SAGITTARIA, overlooking the eponymous bay. Its main industry is clam farming (Pop. c. 19,000).

EDETH: Mil. Str. Mar. Com. Fortress in the far south west of AHRISHEN, belonging to the WHITE LEAGUE. It is home to two CHAPTERS⁽²⁾ who frequently aid Ahrishen defending against the KORACHANI SCOURGE OF WITCHES.

EDEVAR: Set. Coastal settlement in the far north of ESHIR^(2.) (Pop. c. 6 500)

EDHAN: Set. Settlement in the c south west of CHEIRA (Pop. c. 8,000).

EDICT OF KHADON: Pol. Rel. Religious edict within the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE that took place in the city of KHADON in KORACHAN in 3243 RM.

EDICT OF NAMES, the: Soc. Pol. His. Famed KORACHANI census taken in 2474 RM, during the empire's golden age and the peak of its extent around THE INNER SEA. The census was a massive enterprise overseen by the MINASTERIA OF TITHES, dominating the empire for three years, following which the compiling of information gathered lasted a further decade. The list is large, and is divided into seven volumes, copies of which can be found in most major imperial cities (and many libraries of the LOW-EMPIRES, as part of their imperial records).

EDICT OF NICAEA: see NICAEA, EDICT OF.

EDICTOR: Pol. Rnk. Rank within the SANCTIFIED ORDERS OF THE INQUISITION, above that of PREFECT, charged with overseeing the enactment of laws and edicts and ensuring that they are enforced.

EDICULE: 1. Pol. One of the eight HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOMS, located in the south west of the Kingdoms. It has a long engrained history of slavery, capturing people from around the SEA OF URAN and the DARK SEA, selling many of them to NÁRTHEL, VENTHIR, and KORACHANI PATRICIAN HOUSES who have recently set up offices in its major slaving cities.

2. Pol. Duchy in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of EDICULE.

3. Set. Fortified city and capital of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of EDICULE. It lies along the river EDICA, the banks of which are much altered around it, 32-miles from the coast and the SEA OF EDALA. Its ports are now bustling and a hub of trade in the area.

It appeared in c. 1250 RM, and was largely founded by SAUAN immigrants, who mingled with pastoral native. As it became established its influence spread, increasing its borders far west. The city would retain a faint Sauan character throughout its existence., and now forms a part of the GREAT ROAD trade-route (Pop. c. 699,000).

EDICA: Rvr. River in the west of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of EDICULE^(1.), flowing for 300-miles south east from the ISHAHAAT massif, before emptying into the SEA OF EDALA.

EDISH: Set. Settlement in the north of VIRAHAN known for its copper mining (Pop. c. 8,000).

EDON: Set. Settlement in the c of KORACHAN, just north of the marshes of SERAH. It forms a part of the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 4,000).

EDONNA: 1. Geo. Island to the east of GIBEAH, in the SEA OF BALIMAN.2. Set. Main settlement in the eponymous island (Pop. c. 5,000).

EDRA: Set. Settlement in the c east of ALLASAN, along the course of the river BORUS. It is known for its farmlands and rich pastures (Pop. c. 7.000).

EDRAEL: Set. Coastal city in the far south of AEONAS (Pop. c. 54,000).

EDRALLA: Set. Coastal city in the far north of CYHLAGHARR, overlooking the SEA OF DANAEL (Pop. c. 14,500).

EDRAM: Mil. Str. Major fort in the north of AETHIOS, guarding the SOULSTONE quarries in the DAGESARETH region.

EDRAMESIA: Set. Settlement in the far north of SABAISA, overlooking the SEA OF OTALGIA (Pop. c. 7,000).

EDRAN: Set. TIKBALA settlement in the contested region of ASIKKA in the east of NAARETH (Pop. unknown).

EDRATH: Set. City in the north west of EASTERN LARISH. It was originally a part of PHUT, though cultural and political changes saw it become a part of Larish in c. 3640 RM. It is known for its caste of sleep-seers — FIRMAMENTISTS who display scrying abilities when sent into a druginduced coma. Such Firmamentist — known as EDRATHI — are viewed as little more than tools and are bought as slaves. It is also a major stop along the BROKERS' ROAD trade route (Pop. c. 60,000).

EDRATHI: Sup. Sleep-seers in the LARISHI city of EDRATH.

 \underline{EDROS} : Mil. Str. Coastal fort on the island of \underline{ATAROS} in the \underline{SEA} OF \underline{ERIA} in the c of $\underline{ARKOS}^{(1)}$.

EDUASIA: Set. Largest city in the SKAROSIAN territories south of the BLACK MOUNTAIN, along the course of the river KONDEGOR. It and its vassal towns are a major producer of food and wood in the area, and over the past decades it has grown steadily in size as people from mainland Skaros travel here at the behest of the government, in an attempt to stimulate industry here. It is an important stop along the RED ROUTE, with caravans boarding transport ship to head east across the SEA OF APHOTIS into ALMAGEST (Pop. c. 119,500).

EDUASIAN PLOT, the: Int. Pol. His. Widespread plot within the KORACHANI EMPIRE to topple the empire that was thwarted by agents of the GRIGORIAN ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION in 3822 RM. Named after the city of EDUASIA, in which the first dissident PATRICIANS were apprehended, plotting patricians and freemen were arrested and executed across the empire, including the LEAGUE PATRICIANS and the governing body of the KHADON itself.

EDUCATION CAMPS: Soc. Common practice in the KORACHANI

EMPIRE, particularly its territories north of the INNER SEA (AZAZEM, LAASKHA, PELASGOS, SKAROS and KORACHAN itself) where people ranging in age from children to young adults from rural and isolated areas are rounded up and taken to schools to be educated in self-sufficiency, agriculture, economics and other subjects, before being returned to their homes to help their communities.

In truth, these 'schools' are little more than work camps, where the children become slaves of wealthy PATRICIANS or the state. The children are never seen by their families again, with most of them dying within a few years of them being taken from either malnutrition or exhaustion. Their families believe or hope that they are living better lives, but fear the worst.

So as not to exhaust the populations of the settlements, the recruitment for school camps in a specific settlement is only done once every few decades, with large caravans controlled by imperial forces circumnavigating the above territories in a long slow circuit.

 $\underline{\hbox{EDUMMAR}} .$ Geo. Plains in the prefecture of $\underline{\hbox{BROTRIS}},$ in the c west of $\underline{\hbox{HOLOLACH}}^{(L)}.$

EDUSCIN: Set. Caravanserai in the c south west of CYHLAGHARR connecting the western-most city of GYALTSA with the cities in the c of the nation (Pop. c. 6,000).

EELYOUHN: Plr. 'Eelyouhna'. Myr. His. Though all the DEMIURGES have a race of MORTAL children attributed to them, ARIMASPI was unique amongst them, in that he also created his own children that were not born of seeds sown by THE SHAPER. Amongst the forms that eventually evolved from the shaping of their father, are the Eelyouhna. Humanoids of powerful bodies, standing some 7-feet tall and weighing 350 – 400 lbs., they possess feline traits and are fearsome warriors with strong bodies and acute martial skills and were once renowned warriors and mercenaries. They were once common in the regions that have become engulfed by the desert KHARKHARADONTIS, and are now thought extinct. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

EFFEII: Set. Settlement in the far south west of OTINTH (Pop. c. 5,000).

EFFEND: Rnk. An administrative title common in the larger cities of LIDEA and BA'AKH.

EFFLUX OF RASHAPH: His. Sup. Geo. Wasteland in the c south of KHULL, covering an area of around 2000-square miles. It was caused in 2669 RM when the SORCERER-KING⁽³⁾ RASHAPH THE INSCRUTABLE unleashed an ATRAMENTAL blast against invading VESPERI forces. Of such potency was the blast that the earth for 25-miles around him was broken asunder in consecutive quakes that cause the ground to ripple and break apart, killing everything within, including himself. This effectively ended the war and elevated Rashaph to the status of cultural hero.

The devastation of this act can be seen today by anyone observing the region from the south, in the neighbouring HERKALLAN highlands.

EFIRMAGRA: Flo. Poi. A hardy shrub common in the ERISHI AIA plains in the east of MENISCEA known for its deep purple flowers and rigid bone-like sepals. It is dangerous and if ingested by living creatures can lead to the calcification of organs, which accumulates over time, eventually resulting in organ failure.

It has been turned into both a medicine and a poison, with the former being used as an aide to mend broken bones through ALCHEMICAL treatment, and the latter taking the form of a concentrate poison that is made from pulping and drying the leaves, that when introduced to the body calcifies flesh. See Vol II: Poisons and Venoms.

EFYMIA: Mil. Str. Major fort in the far south of LYRIDIA, in territories formerly belonging to NÁRTHEL, south of the STRAIT OF NÁRTHEL.

EGATH: Set. Port-city appearing east of GATH in the far east of PARTHIS, following the retreat of the seas left its ports land-locked. Being part of the RED ROUTE, and forming a link between Parthis and its vassal state JURRAS⁽²⁾, it is growing quickly (Pop. c. 45,200).

EGLAENT: Geo. Mountain in MALAN, around 500-miles long, serving as part of the border between the HENDECARCHIES of AONIA and HATON, and MYEIN and AMILLAERE^(1.). It is the main source of the river ELRATH.

EGARUBOR: Lak. Lake in the c of CHEIRA, forming a part of the flow of the river YAHNOTH PHTHAN. Like much of the main course of the river, it expands greatly in the wake of flooding following heavy monsoon rains of meltwater from farther north.

EGASH: also 'the Ancestor Stone'. His. Arc. Located in the south east of KOLCHIS, in the plains of IMETH, east of the river DOERIA, the Stone is a marble monolith, its edges angular and sharp, one face covered in the eponymous ancestor's rune. The origins of the stone are unknown, though KORACHANI explorations of the region dating back to c. 410 RM documented the region and failed to describe it, perhaps indicating its relatively recent age.

EGEAHAR: Geo. Steppes in the south east of the HENDECARCHY of LONAR in MALAN, stretching into the north western territories pf CHLORIS, covering most of the former's area – some 40,000 square-miles. The area is characterised by mortal-made grasslands, shrubs, and sparse woodlands. It is thought that the region was once dominated by virginal old growth forests that were carelessly cut down at various ages, such as the dark ages following the collapse of the NAHORIAN EMPIRE, lasting through to the FADING between the FOURTH and Fifth Ages, by which time the dense forests has been largely felled and their fertile soils eventually washed away, leaving the steppes we recognise today.

EGEDDAN: His. Lan. Now-extinct language spoken in the ancient FIFTH AGE empire of PHOL EGEDDA. See Vol II: Languages.

EGENNAAH: For. Scrub forest in the north east of KULIGALA, in the north east of the CARCHEMISHI PENINSULA^(1.), in the east of SAMMAEA.

EGERIAN RIDGE: Geo. 1000-mile-long ridge-like mountain in the far north of the KHARKHARADONTID desert, stretching south west from the northern-most reaches of the MOLOTH KHAMMOTHUL Mountains, towards the TROPIC OF RAH. The mountain is of a polished black basaltic rock that reflects the dim sun's lights upon the sterile land that surrounds it.

EGETA: Set. Fortified settlement and caravanserai in the c west of ANUBIA. It serves as a link between the cities of BEREK HAL and ANUBIS in the north, and RETHKA and ILLATRA in the south (Pop. c. 6,000).

EGETAKH: Geo. Expansive mountain-chain dominating the western coast of Meniscea, running north to south for over 3,000-miles in the north west of MENISCEA, acting as a border between the narrow coastal Nations (ALBASSITA, MIRALUL, OSSIEL and NALARDIL) and the larger inland regions of CEHOPHELA and SHAZGIN.

EGETAKHAN ROAD: Com. Major trade route in the west of WESTERN MENISCEA. The road runs from SATARIEL in the north west of the continent and runs south, along the western foothills of the EGETAKH Mountains, passing through ABATTUR, MEHITIEL, SEDALLIA, ALBASSITA, MIRALUL, OSSIEL, NALARDIL, SABAEA, ZOHAK, and VARU, before terminating in DANU.

EGETTUR: Geo. Lowland region in the c of ELALLIA. It is waterlogged, with many rivers passing through it, the waters of which collect in its soft earth creating many bogs and marshes.

EGGLIL: Sup. The channelling of the FIRMAMENTAL energies through material objects, commonly weapons. Because of this, many SHAPERS who practice the art of egglil also have accomplished martial skills, making them competent firmamental warriors. The TIKBALA of LYRIDIA are renowned practitioners of this SPHERE.

EGG: Phil. Symbolically, many nations in LLACHATUL hold eggs as symbols for fecundity and are often granted as gifts in weddings.

EGGORII: Set. Fortified city in the far south of ELEKHID, close to the border with CHEIRA. It trades south with Cheira across the river YAGNOTH PHTHAN (Pop. c. 48,000).

EGHIGNAN RUINS: Rui. Mysterious ruins in the south of THE VORANDINE, in the northern foothills of the ZEHINE Mountains. They are monolithic and totemic in nature, with high platforms, indicating that they may have been built by AITHAR. The structures lie in ruins today, fallen and scattered around surrounding lands.

The ruins' name comes from an early FOURTH AGE account that references a now-lost FOURTH AGE account.

EGHURR: Set. Fortified coastal city on the eastern coast of CYHLAGHARR, at the mouth of the river ORGDA. It is known for its shipyards and harbour (Pop. c. 20,000).

EGINALL: 1. Rvr. River in the south of TAHALL, flowing for 380-miles from sources in the HARKONNA and DHAKALL Mountains before emptying in the SEA OF SERPENTS.

2. Lak. Lake along the course of the above river (1.).

3. Set. Settlement in the south of TAHALL, along the course of the river Eginall^(1.) (Pop. c. 8,000).

EGINAZ: Dem. 'Eginazi'. Ntn. Nation in the south east of MENISCEA, overlooking the SEA OF SIPARIA. It is known for its dry coast, but has links to expansive aquifers, and its major cities are built around oases and natural wells. Many of its smaller settlements are built within wide wells and are semi-subterranean.

The nation was formed in 3821 RM following the arbitrary partition of the larger parent state of $\underline{\text{SHUTIAZ}}$ by the retreating $\underline{\text{OBLEVISH EMPIRE}}$ into $\underline{\text{CAMAU}}$ and Eginaz. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

EGISIUM: Pol. One of the SEVEN-AND-FORTY DISTRICTS of ALMAGEST, known to be a scholarly quarter.

EGGOS: Rvr. Major river of the GORGELAN in the south of VÂRR.

EGO RINGS: Int. Myt. Obj. Divine objects mentioned in the MYTHOLOGIA

ELYDEN and the ARS DEMIURGA. Crafted by a collective of four

DEMIURGES - AVRAHAM, NYARLOTH, SYNCHTHONITH, and

VORROPOHAIAH - who combined their skills in artifice to create repositories for their power when they learnt that they were losing strength.

Details on the Ego Rings differ, based on the source, but there are thought to be as few as four, and as many as a dozen different rings, each of which have different abilities.

It is possible that the objects exist as little more than parables in the Mythologia Elyden, though there are scholars who believe they were physical objects that may yet exist, buried across ELYDEN.

If the latter is true, then the Ego Rings are likely to be amongst the most powerful supranatural objects in existence, and a SHAPER with the right expertise may be able to tap into their latent energies, granting them a power greater than anything shapers in the Fifth Age have experienced. See Vol IV: the Two-and-Twenty Demiurges.

EGORA: Set. Fortified city in the west of VAALK, controlling the STRAIT OF DERKAZ. Its sizeable fleet combats DERKAZI CHORSAIRS that prey on sea trade passing through the strait, keeping them safe. During the WAR OF SUNDERING, it was attacked by an allied force of WHITE LEGION mercenaries and SARASTROAN aggressors, withstanding a 5-month siege that ended with the signing of Sarastroan independence on the 23rd of SATAVALEN saw its forces forced to leave Vaalk, lifting the siege. To this day the people of Egora are proud at having withstood the siege, despite now being a Sarastroan vassal (Pop. c. 210,000).

EGOTHAN: Set. City in the c south east of the HENDECARCHY of MYEIN, in the c south west of MALAN along the banks of the river LAUL EGLEA, at the fork where the river LOT reaches it. It has many cultural and historical links with SAUA, and it is central Malan's link with Saua along the GREAT ROAD. It is famed for its tiered bastions and many forts, which have named after historic bannerets from Myein (Pop. c. 142,000).

EGRABA: Geo. Island to the north of AEONAS.

EGRET CRUSADES, the: See CRUSADES, EGRET.

EGOTHOL: Set. Fortified coastal city in the south east of the emirate of DEITHO^(1.) in the south of LIMOTH^(1.) (Pop. c. 32,200).

EGRAT: His. Ntn. Now-extinct state in the island-continent of BROR^(1.) in the c south of present-day GREST^(1.).

It emerged in c. 1600 RM and eventually became a part of the COALITION OF SURISSIA. It faltered following the Coalition's collapse in 2132 RM, and its former territories would absorb those of AFAINASAY in c. 2300 RM, keeping the name Egrat.

It prospered for some time, though a series of ineffective rulers saw it eventually crumble, and its old territories were later claimed by AHAGGAD⁽²⁾ in c. 2430 RM. See Vol III: Extinct States.

EGRISS: Geo. Plains in the south east of HOLOLACH^(L), between the HOLIASOR Mountains in the south, the hills of BROTISS in the north, and the RUALASOR Mountains in the east.

EGRUTHEA: For. Sparse forested region dominating the north east of the Parthisan colony of $\underline{IBANNEM}^{(1.)}$.

EGUAOT: Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region in the south east of SEDISIA. It is a major source of raw UMBRA to the nation.

The region is categorised as a $\underline{\text{MODERATE THREAT}}$ by the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI}}$ Institute of Atramental Studies.

EHA: Set. Settlement in the north of the tribe of KANAATI, in the c north of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 3,800).

EHAKACHAN: Set. Settlement on the island of CHANASAAR in the KORACHANI colony of MELHUMBRA. It is a major producer of cork in the empire, and its plantations are mostly worked by SAMMAEAN slaves (Pop. c. 8,500).

EHAMET: Set. Small city in the region of USSAMAR in the north of THE SURRACH (Pop. c. 17,000).

EHAROR: Rvr. River in the north west of KHULL, flowing north for some 195-miles from sources in the ALITTU Highlands, before emptying into the BAY OF KALLAR, in the SEA OF ORRIDA.

EHASAUL: Set. Major coastal city in the north east of VAUN, overlooking the BAY OF ELMEHIEK. It forms a part of the ISHMMARRAN TRAIL and caters to the many merchants and travellers that cross through it (Pop. c. 90.000).

EHATANAS: Rvr. River in the c east of JURRAS⁽²⁾, flowing for 175-miles from the north west of the INNORADOS Mountains, before meeting its parent, the river KARIBAT.

EHBOT: 1. Geo. KORACHANI name for the KOHOD Mountain in ARKOS^(1.), that dominates the area east of the SEA OF ERIA. Covering roughly 50,000 square-miles of area, the Mountains are rugged, with distinct pink mesa-like peaks in the south west, and smooth in the north east.

2. His. Nan. KORACHANI colonies that appeared in the CITADEL MOUNTS in 352 RM after the fortress of DOLYST was besieged in 264 RM, though it was not officially recognised as EHBOT until 381 RM. The region, though rich in mineral and ores, was extremely unstable, with ATRAMENTAL-CORRUPTION waxing at the time to its south western borders and near-constant wars with the barbarian tribes of north eastern MULCIBER. Following the Korachani empire's abandonment of Ehbot to the INTERREGES in 527 RM, the region was allowed to rot and by c. 600 RM all imperial influence had disappeared, replaced instead by the ARKOSIAN^(1.) culture, the patriarchs of which were the remaining few STEEL LEGIONNAIRES that were left garrisoned in the region. See Vol III: Extinct States.

EHBOTIAN: His. Lan. Now-extinct language that was spoken in EHBOT.

Originally a descendant of the earlier UHLSAATI language, it adopted many aspects of KORACHANI following the KORACHANI EMPIRE'S presence there for over two centuries. It would later give way to ARKOSIAN. See Vol II: Languages.

EHBREDA: Set. Major city in the CAMOTHUR basin in the AMMASHI^(L) peninsula, along the border between KEPHUAAN in the north and AMMESH in the south. The city is situated at a sharp bend in the river TAMANTI, where its tributary VERTANDI meets it, and it is a major commercial centre, where goods from Kephuaan and Ammesh are traded. Governance of the city is shared between the two nations, with Kephuaan having a larger presence north of the rivers, and Ammesh to the south. The eastern bank, is a hub of culture and has fealty to either of the two controlling states that other districts (Pop. c. 138,000).

EHEDEN: Rui. Abandoned settlement in contested lands to the far west of the tribe of AUEREN, in the far north of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER.

EHERON: 1. Mil. Str. Major fortress in the south of TARTAK, in the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region of AIOS KATH. It is one of 13 fortresses along a 13-mile stretch of the border with the CAMMOREAN Mountains, each of which protects a series of powerful SIPHON ENGINES that help keep the ATRAMENTAL phenomenon known as the SHADOW OF CAMMOREA at bay. Without this series of siphon engines working constantly in the region, the Atramental taint would move steadily north, engulfing most of southern Tartak.

2. Geo. Pass across the north western-most reaches of the CAMMOREAN Mountains linking the region known as the CAMMOREAN SHADOW with the nation of TARTAK, and forming a vital link in the SALT ROAD.

EHERSABBASH: also 'the Dias of Gateways'. Int. His. Rui. Arc. Ancient stone platform with 9 doorways in the hinterlands in the west of MHAROKK, said to have once granted those passing through them to specific locations across ELYDEN. Such claims are disputed, though ancient sources also state the same. The site is relatively popular with affluent tourists and scholars who try to this day to ascertain the gateways' true nature. The ruins of a metropolis surround the dais, though little is known about it.

EHETUTH: Set. Major coastal city in the far east of THETIS. It is known for its ship and scrapyards and the large shantytown that makes up its lower wards and almost half of its population (Pop. c. 121,000).

EHIBEL: Rvr. River in the south east of LLACHATUL, flowing east from RHEA through SURUTUR for 750-miles from sources in the BOKKARIS Mountains before meeting the SEA OF MIROVEA.

EHITUR: Set. Small city in the c SURUTUR occupying what was once the delta of the river EHIBEL (Pop. c. 14,000).

EHLBEZUN: His. Nm. Ancient empire that appeared in the east of SAMMAEA in the early FOURTH AGE, following the fall of the IROTHANI kingdoms and their SEPT leaders at the end of the THIRD AGE. It occupied what are today the south east of CHEIRA, SERROK, the east of PORPHYR, and the north east of SABAISA. The empire fractured later in the Fourth Age, after millennia of successful rule. Its people subsequently dispersed, forming their own successor states, none of which was as powerful or expansive as Ehlbezun. By this time, the descendants of the irothani and Septs had dwindled, with their descendants breeding with humans, leading to a dilution of their bloodlines.

Some Ehlbezuni ruins remain in those regions, though for the most part they are crumbling and old, save for some ancient machinery, which is rusted solid and calcified, their original purpose unknown. See Vol III: Extinct States.

EHMEOH: Geo. Expansive ATRAMENTAL BADLANDS in the c west of SAMMAEA, to the south west of lake NASTAL^(1.) in the south of the VESPERTINE LEAGUE. The land here is brittle and cracked, with electrical activity in the hollows below the ground. The waters in the south west of lake Nastal are thick and dark, taking on a foul jelly-like consistency closer to the shore.

The region is categorised as a LEAST CONCERN by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

EHNOR: Pol. Set. Capital of TOAHN, partially situated in the mouth of a cave of the same name in the region's south. It is the largest cave in TOAHN, measuring almost 3-miles long and boasts the largest stone temples of the nation (Pop. c. 390,000).

EHOR: Set. Small city in the c east of ELAT. Its main industry is the production of cork (Pop. c. 14,000).

 $\pmb{EHO\underline{TEN}} : \textit{Set. } Temple-city in the north west of \\ \underline{\textit{KHAMID}} \ (Pop. \ c. \ 8,000).$

EHRAK: Com. Set. Small city in the west of AHRISHEN, forming a part of the GREY ROAD as it forks west towards TAHIREN, and north into RHAMIA. It is home to offices of the GREY MERCHANTS, who keep a close eye on trade that passes the city (Pop. c. 15,000).

EHRANDEA: Geo. Massif in CHANDOS (3.), in the north of LAASKHA.

EHRATA: Set. Small city in the region of EDALLA in the west of THE SURRACH. It is a noted for its arable farmland that provides food for the region (Pop. c. 17,000).

EHRENI: 1. Eth. People native to the northern coast of WESTERN SAMMAEA, south of the SEA OF ORRIDA. Not a true ethnicity, the term is merely geographical, used in a collective way for the people of the EHRENISIAN COAST, including KHULL, the TEMPLAR STATES, and KARGAMA, though they do share common ancestors from the early FIFTH AGE, from people who repopulated the region after the FADING of the FOURTH AGE.

In 2534 RM they were targeted by the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, who for close to 200-years sent troops and missionaries to its lands in a bid to increase the influence and range of the UNDYING MACHINE, in a period now known as the EHRENISIAN CRUSADE.

Their numbers were whittled down by the xenophobic genocide and by the time the failed KORACHANI colony of INDERACHAN had departed the region in c. 2810 RM the Ehreni people had been almost entirely killed off. They slowly recovered and today form the majority of the population of the Templar State.

2. Lan. Language of the above people (1.) which was spoken by the people of INGHULL. It would later develop into the language of KHULLAN, which is spoke by the people of modern KHULL. See Vol II: Languages.

EHRENISIAN COAST: Geo. KORACHANI name for the region in the north west of SAMMAEA directly south west of the SEA OF ORRIDA, typically encompassing the northern coastlines of KHULL, the TEMPLAR STATES, KARGAMA, and in some case the north of the VESPERTINE LEAGUE. The region is named after the native people of the region, known as the EHRENI.

EHRENISIAN CRUSADES: see CRUSADES, EHRENISIAN.

EHSHUL: (12,300-ft.) Geo. One of ten peaks (colloquially known as the TEN PRINCES) in the south eastern A SAVI Mountains in the north of AHRISHEN, named after an ancient prince.

EHSRA: Set. Small city in the c north west of Pnessa, south east of the LOWER DANOSOTH Mountains (Pop. c. 12,000).

EHTAL: 1. Sea. Bay in the south of TERION, overlooking the larger BAY OF BHAAD.

2. Set. Settlement on the headland of EHTALA, overlooking the eponymous bay within the BAY OF BHAAD (Pop. c. 6,000).

EHTALA: Geo. Narrow headland off the south eastern coast of TERION, stretching for 90-miles, dividing the BAY OF BHAAD from the SEA OF ESCHATA.

EHYN: Set. Rock-UMBRA mine in the c south west of CYHLAGHARR in the region of KAYHIKH (Pop. c. 1,600).

EIANRA: Set. Coastal city in the far south west of THE VORANDINE, overlooking the BAY OF NURCYA. Its main industry is the harvesting of EVOLAM kelp that is vital to various modern ATRAMENTAL industries, including CLONING and FLESHWRIGHTING (Pop. c. 16,400).

EIBOGNAN SCHISM, the: Int. Geo. A half-mile long cleft in the northern foothills of the ZOIQUAGO Mountains in the south west of GIBEAH. The cleft is as much as 200-ft. deep in places and appears to have been artificially-made given its precision.

EIBON: x. Myt. His. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, the SCION of the DEMIURGE VORROPOHAIAH. They were born before Vorropohaiah lost his mind amid the construction of the PRISON CARCERI. Indeed, they are recorded in the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN as having opposed its construction, and for being exiled by the Demiurge for their beliefs.

It is unknown where they travelled to, but their only mention in the Mythologia following their exile paints them in an unfavourable light, of shattered body and enfeebled mind, presiding over an empire of a million mummified mortals, whose dying thoughts slowly sustained them. Their fate remains unknown. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

EICASTIA: Set. Mining settlement in the KORACHANI colony of CRASSULA, in the far north east of MENISCEA. The settlement is one of many directly involved in the mining of gold. Working conditions for the slaves are atrocious, with many dying of pneumonia and frostbite (Pop. c. 8.000).

EICLON: Geo. A dry stony region in the c east of LIDEA, covering some 15,000 square-miles and acts as a border with N'RAKH.

EIDOCHAN: His. Arc. Rui. Great stone monoliths along the north eastern border of the ZAHARAN DESERT, in the west of VALA. Five gigantic monoliths are recorded to have exited here once, each easily 100-feet to a side and over 300-feet high. Though featureless, each is constructed from a single block of granite, is source or purpose unknown. Of the original five, one has since toppled, its fragments littering the ground or miles around, and three have begun to sink and stand at angles to the ground.

EIDOGOTATH: Geo. The dry plains dominating the south east of TETHYSIA, covering some 350,000 square-miles.

EIDOLAR: Oth. Type of HALFBLOOD noted for its attraction to both the MATERIAL PLANE and OTHERWORLD. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

 $\underline{\textbf{EIGGID DEPRESSION}}; \textit{Geo.} \textit{Region beneath the } \underline{\textbf{WHITE SHEET}} \textit{ in the far}$ north of LLACHATUL, that through the sheer weight of ice above it has been pushed far beneath sea-level - at around -1,400-ft. Should the ice melt, the entire region would flood.

EIGHT SEALS, the: see SEALS OF THE COVENANT, THE.

EIHAUBA: Lake in the north west of CHEIRA, forming a part of the flow of the far larger river YAHNOTH PHTHAN.

EIINA: f. Myt. His. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, a SCION of the scion OPHRA (2.) and the DEMIURGE AVRAHAM (who is also her grandfather). She was a powerful SORCERESS (1.), who became a tyrant, subjugating many mortal states to create a vast empire that threatened the rule of the Demiurges themselves. She was eventually killed by Avraham. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

EIKARTHYEA: Dem. 'Eikarthyean'. Ntn. Nation in the far east of EASTERN MENISCEA, populated by the descendants of PARTHISAN immigrants, who settled the area in c. 3140 RM. The region was originally known as EYA PARTHIS (lit. New Parthis), though this name became corrupted over centuries of native influence. It was a very close ally of PARTHIS throughout the latter centuries of the 4th millennium RM and was once known for its jade trade. Though the jade trade has long since ended, the sale of jade antiquities remains a thriving part of the economy. See Vol

II: Extant Nations and Realms.

EINA: Lak. Endorheic lake in the c north of the SULTANATE OF ABACARDAT, fed by the river OURED OUMAQ.

EIONIA: 1. Lak. Lake in the north of AHRISHEN, forming part of the river AVASTI (itself a tributary of the river SAVEST). The lake is famed for being the site where ST. EIONA, martyr of the CHILD-PRINCE, received a vision of the prince, decades before his birth and was named after her. It remains now, a holy site to those that worship the Child-prince as a deity. 2. His. Rel. Martyr of the Child-prince of AHRISHEN. She received a vision of the CHILD-PRINCE in 3731 RM, decades before his birth in 3752 RM.

EIRIADA: Set. Coastal settlement on the east of the island of CAMARA in the east of the CORAL BARONIES, off the south western coast of SAMMAEA (Pop. c. 6,200).

EISHETH: 1. (B. 969 RM) His. Pol. Rel. Princess exiled from her home in AETHIOS following a political coup and the overthrowing of her family from power in 993 RM. She wandered around the north east of SAMMAEA until she discovered a ruined colossus dedicated to an unnamed power in c. 1000 RM with her followers. She began worshipping it as a deity and eventually founded the $\underline{\text{CHURCH OF THE VOLUTE}}$ in $\underline{\text{NAARETH}}$ in 1002 $\underline{\text{RM}}$

2. Pol. Rel. Following the founding of the CHURCH OF THE VOLUTE and her becoming the first MATRIARCH of the temple, Eisheth slowly began to change. Perhaps it was the discovery of the VOLUTE or some other malignant power at work, but her body began to mutate and, over the years, she became a corpulent creature barely recognisable as human; the grotesque embodiment of the NAARETHI matriarchal tradition. To remain alive, her body was fed with ATRAMENTAL forces and enhanced with TECHNARCANE ORTHOSES, her distended body constantly giving birth to Naarethi DRONES. She became the centre of the religion of the Volute, becoming known as the HEART OF THE VOLUTE; the name of her temple in the LATHMM highlands, where she is interred.

None outside the ranks of the Hierodules and Matriarchs are allowed to see her body, though it is believed that she is still alive. See Vol IV: Gods and Pantheons.

EISTAR, ORDER OF THE: Rel. Org. Small, now-defunct order of knights within the KORACHANI EMPIRE that ended with the death of its 13 members in RM. Little is known of the order's origins or its beliefs, but it is thought that they predated the appearance of the village of AMBUS on an ancient rocky hill that was known as the Eistar, after which the order was named. All 13 members are interred in a crypt beneath the Sanctuary of the Eistar in Ambus, where they naturally mummified.

The order has been largely forgotten, though there was once speculation as to its purpose, with some believing that they were sworn to guard a hidden treasure or relic that was kept by the Sanctuary of the Eistar.

EISSAD, the: Vol. Leg. Ancient epic poem dating back to the FOURTH AGE in what is now VÂRR. The poem details the cosmogony of Elyden and the lives of the so-called 'worker scions', now thought to be references to the DEMIURGES. Many passages had parallels to the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN, lending credence to the work as a whole.

Little details are known of the Eissad, for it was existed through an ancient oral tradition and what few written forms that made their way into the FIFTH AGE were destroyed by the KORACHANI EMPIRE after it came to power in 72 RM due to its heretical nature. It is believed that a few copies may still exist, including one held in the ARCHIVES OF THE HOLY PRECINCT in KHADON. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

EIUDA: His. Ancient metropolis in western HORSCH, now buried beneath thick silt deposits. Some have excavated it, revealing dark walled structures, though little evidence of their founders remains.

EIUSS ZUMM: m. Per. (B. 3899 RM) Pol. Present ruler of the PENTATAEL in EZASUH^(2.) and undisputed head of church, state and SHAPERS there. Like his predecessors his rule is seen as divinely-appointed, and he wields undisputed absolute power.

EJAGHRA: Set. City in the far north of METHUMN, in the north of the ANTENAS plains, along the course of the river HELAGHILRA (Pop. c. 42,000).

EKACARAX: Rui. Ruined city in the desert of ANTHAR, in the south west of SAMMAEA, in the far east of METHUMN, above which the LACUNA⁽²⁾ of GOROSHONNAR hangs in the sky. The city is thought to have been destroyed by an influx of ATRAMENTAL forces in c. -200 RM, that saw the lacuna increase in size, spewing ATRAMENTAL TAINT onto the land, rendering it uninhabitable. Though the corruption has almost disappeared since then, the great stone city remains ruined, now half sunken in DUSTSTONE formations.

EKADARA: Set. Small city in the south west of KEPHUAAN, in the south westernmost foothills of the GARDAGHIN Mountains. Its main industry is the mining of pyrite and coal (Pop. c. 18,000).

EKADHA: Set. Once a major city in the north east of JURRAS⁽²⁾, forming the centre of the INTERREGES' rule in Jurras between 3143 and 3226 RM. It was always at risk of ASAPHODELIA infestation, and with the dwindling of the Interreges' rule, the city was slowly overrun by the plants by c. 3300 RM. Over two thirds of the city is now in ruin, its old imperial structures reduced to rubble by the infestation. What remains is kept whole through great effort (Pop. c. 10,000).

EKAGHI: Geo. Mountain range dominating the c north of HABOT, in the AMMASHI^(1.) peninsula.

EKAIROBOS: Geo. Dry sandy region in the south of LIDEA, north of the river SICERAN. Not quite a desert, as it receives an amount of annual rainfall above the desert threshold, it remains nonetheless inhospitable due to its acrid nature. Its origin is unknown though was not documented before c 1500 RM, when it was located around 100-miles to the east. It has slowly grown and moved west over the years, and the gold mines of ASOA appeared along its periphery in c 3000 RM, though it continued to expand, coming to encompass them, forcing the construction of a fortified wall to keep the sands out in c 3200 RM.

EKAISS: Set. Settlement in the c south west of the BARRIER LANDS. It is a major producer of rubies in the region (Pop. c. 4,200).

EKALLU: also 'THE SILKEN CITY'. Set. Citadel-capital of N'RAKH, in the north western foothills of the AGRABU highlands. The palace is the hereditary seat of the D'ANU; an abhorrent tyrant blessed by MAALKAT in ways few others can claim to have been. It is a place built of the pumice-like stones common to the region and resin silk features marking it as unique (Pop. c. 160,000).

EKALSCA: Geo. Mountain range in the north of LAASKHA. It serves as a partial border with SKAROS.

EKANDARA: Set. Small fortified city in the north east of METHUMN, in the hills to the far east of the ANTENAS plains. It is amongst the more isolated of cities in the nation. Its isolation has made it one of the more self-reliant cities in the nation, with a culture deeply rooted in stoicism and independence. The city's location provides a natural defence, with steep, rocky terrain surrounding it, making it difficult to access except through narrow, winding paths that are themselves well-defended. Its people are known to trade occasionally with PHYRR, where food is traded for weapons and engines (Pop. c. 12,000).

EKARADA: 1. Sea. Strait off the southern coast of AMMESH, divided by the SEA OF AMMASH^(2.) by the island of CYNAKRIA. Its waters are relatively shallow and see a lot of traffic, from ferries to twin hulled DHOWS.

2. Set. Fortified coastal city in the south east of AMMESH, overlooking the Strait of Ekarada^(1.). It guards the small bay at the mouth of the river EKYANTI (Pop. c. 43,000).

EKARET: Set. Small coastal city in the east of MECHABET, overlooking the SEA OF ERUISA. It is a trade link with the far north of PARTHIS, via the city of PHOLIKIS (Pop. c. 18,750).

EKASYAI: Set. Small city in the north of THE VORANDINE, along the course of the river IASHANDEN. Its people are expert trackers and hunters of the corrupted creatures that dwell in the LUGENT forest (Pop. c. 6,500).

EKATON: Rui. Old coastal city in the east of PELASGOS. It was founded in the early FIFTH AGE by survivors of a shipwreck and eventually became an important mercantile poet in its own right. It was abandoned in c. 500 RM, following the growth of its new quarters (which had become known as MORACHI, which is found very close to the site of the old city).

EKEDDA: sea to the south east of $BROR^{(1.)}$.

EKEG: also, 'the Sunbaked Necropolis'. Rui. An ancient stone necropolis on the island of INARAK off the north western coast of SAMMAEA, north west of the SANTOREAN Mountains. The necropolis is believed to have been deserted for over 2,000 years, and little is known of its history. The necropolis takes the form of thousands of individual small structures, squarish, with a bronze domed roof, inside which are the bones of 1 individual.

EKEMMIR: Rui. Ruined coastal city in the south east of PHYRR. It was bombarded over many years of conflict during the NACRE WAR and is now an empty shell dominated by blasted buildings and rubble-strewn streets. At the onset of the war, it had a population of around 120,000 and was known for its thriving port.

EKEREAH: See. Small coastal city in the north east of GIBEAH saturated in the rocky region of YAIZOEH (Pop. c. 13,000).

EKET NEL: Set. Settlement some 35-miles south east of KHEMET in KHAMID. (Pop. c. 1.200).

EKETH: Geo. Isthmus of land in the south of KHAMID, measuring some 180-miles long. The narrow peninsula serves as a barrier between the sea of IANA in the north, where it is steep-sided, and the AENU coast in the south, where it is gently sloping towards the coast. The land is relatively empty with sparse vegetation, and little in the form of ruins, though a notable area is the flat plateau to the far north west of the formation, known to locals as ABASSUN, which contains carved linear glyph of undetermined nature.

EKHAJ KHTTAR III: (B. 3955 RM) Pol. Present governor of KARAKHAS, who answers directly to SATHEP THE RISEN, in SARASTRO.

EKHALLA: Sec. Small city in the c of KARAKHAS, forming part of the SALT ROAD. It is known for its caravanserais (Pop. c. 13,300).

EKHAT: Set. The largest BENESHI settlement in AHKA, once acting as a hub of Ahkan travel and trade, with members of the Beneshi caste congregating there from the myriad Ahkan settlements, bringing local produce with them. The city was funded by Beneshi settlers in c. 2300 RM, though has decreased in size and influence in the past decade following KORACHANI attacks in the region and much of its mercantile district is empty, with crime rife. Many soldiers from the Ahkan army are recruited from here, and are known to be good soldiers (Pop. c. 18,000).

EKHEF: Geo. Island off the south western coast of WESTERN SAMMAEA, in the COTRIAN ISLES, forming a part of the ISLAND STATES OF IRY.

EKHINA: Ind. Set. Major industrialised city in the central south of ANANTHUL (Pop. c. 7,100,000).

EKHORROS: Set. Small city in the c east of KARAKHAS (Pop. c. 14,000).

EKHUN: also 'Lime-chew'. Soc. Obj. In VÂRR, a blend of tobacco, lime and other select minerals which is chewed. Connoisseurs of lime-chew have been known to identify Vârran regions by the differing blends prevalent in certain regions.

EKHYSSA: Ast. Set. OBSERVATORY-CITY in the c west of AQUARIIA. It is one of few such cities remaining in present-day Aquariia, its original observatory now fulfilling the role of an administrative centre. It is famed for its ancient library and astronomical texts, and forms a part of THE WAY trade-route that links AQUARIIA with GNOTH (Pop. c. 42,000).

EKITAORA: Set. Coastal settlement in the south of the PANTHEON ISLES, on the isle of SURRUR (Pop. c. 8,200).

EKITERIA: Set. City in the c west of KHALHAT. Its main industry is believed to be agricultural, with vast glasshouses and hundreds of miles of subterranean hydroponic gardens beneath its foundations, which supply much of the food consumed by the people of Khalhat (Pop. c. 28,600).

EKITODDUR: Set. Settlement on the island of MARAD, in the BHALASSIAN ARCHIPELAGO⁽²⁾ in the east of the PANTHEON ISLES. Its main industry is the quarrying of silver and sulphur (Pop. c. 4,750).

EKIZIA: (D. 3159) Sagittarian SHAPER who in 3159 RM sacrificed herself in battle, taking a large portion of the Sagittarian army in an ATRAMENTAL explosion, allowing for the eventual independence of IZABAL. She quickly became a cultural hero, with a cult of worship emerging around her resting place, and she was rapidly elevated to the status of a saint in EKIZIACISM: Rel. Religion practiced by the people of IZABAL^(1.). It originated in 3159 RM, after the ATRAMENTIST Ekizia died, destroying the majority of the SAGITTARIAN army, paving the way for the independence of Izabal. Many saw her sacrifice as divine intervention and came to worship her as a martyr and saviour.

By c. 3275 RM this had become corrupted into idolatry and she came to be depicted surrounded by a black cloud, and her name would be invoked in a gesture of protection. She would eventually become a god to the people of Izabal, and her cult is now the main religion there. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

EKIRK: Set. Fortified city in the far south east of ALAM BETHYL, in the territory of TABERCIL (2.). It is the south western-most of Bethylan cities and is well-protected, have been built behind a series of s-facing fortifications and redoubts in the rocky terrain of the southern-most reaches of the BAND (2.) Mountains, in defence against any ALMAGESTI attack. It maintains a strong army, whose rangers are experts at patrolling the hills of the surrounding region (Pop. c. 47,100).

EKKAERT: Set. Small city in the south east of GIBEAH (Pop. c. 14,500).

EKKIDUR: Set. Small city in the north of the mainland PANTHEON ISLES (Pop. c. 13,000).

EKLAII: Set. Fortified settlement in the far north west of KHALHAT, situated along the foothills of the KEPHAMISHAI Mountains (Pop. c. 4,300).

EKMON: Ind. Set. Copper mines in the east of LYRIDIA, in the IPPARAN hills. The region is populated by TIKBALA and hostile encounters between them and the miners is not uncommon (Pop. c. 9,200).

EKON OSSYL: Sup. Geo. Dre. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED DREAMSCAPE that emerged in the c of OKKHAM in c. 3395 RM, its epicentre around 10-miles north west of the city of RAMIFERA. Though the land itself shows little signs of its influence, the DREAMS and thoughts of those close to it are linked by visions of a white figure, floating above the ground, its face unseen through the nimbus of blinding light. This figure later became known as the DREAMING GOD, and came to be worshipped first in the cities of Ramifera and HASLA ERSYL, but which then rapidly spread across Okkham, as well as CHEIRA and NOAVATUR, where it became a mystery cult.

The dreamscape is today considered holy ground and is the site of pilgrimage to members of the Cult.

The region is categorised as a $\underline{\text{LEAST CONCERN}}$ by the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI}}$ INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

 \underline{EKOTH} : Set. Major coastal city in the south east of $\underline{MIRALUL}$ (Pop. c. 200,000).

EKSTESI: Mil. Well-equipped berserker troops of VAALK. They are taken from the fiercest of conscripts and trained as elites, who take performance enhancing drugs before battle. They are used as shock troops and in close-quarter fighting.

EKTASIC: Rvr. River in the north west of OKKHAM, flowing west for 250-miles from sources in the Okkhami Mountains^(1.), before emptying in the BAY OF DIATESSARON.

EKURRAD: Set. Major city in the north west of NASTAL⁽²⁾, along the eastern shore of lake Nastal⁽¹⁾. It is a major industrial centre, and is one of few such places in Nastal (Pop. c. 263,000).

EKYANTI: Rvr. River in the east of Ammesh, flowing south for over 450-miles from sources in the URARAGHI, MEL SAGHI, and the NAGHIGH Mountains before meeting the coast at the STRAIT OF EKARADA^(1.).

EL'TA: Rui. Early FIFTH AGE ruin in the tribal territories of INDAAR, in the east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. The ruin was once a dark red colour, and was thought to have been built by the same culture that created the stepped city of ISA'TEH in SUUR'KA. Today, it is largely forgotten and crumbling.

ELAARH: Set. Edu. City in the c of LAASKHA, in the region of THAZAKHA. It is home to military colleges as well as the MINASTERIA OF EXORCISMS (Pop. c. 34,000).

ELAEL: Set. Settlement in the region of SÛR GHATH in the west of THE SURRACH, along the course of the river HATHURAN (Pop. c. 10,000).

ELAHEI IO SGIROUT: f. (B 3703 – 3813 RM) Pol. Per. Historic queen of ROMOREA (2-) who ascended the throne following her FATHER'S death in 3809 RM. She was instrumental in bringing the dream of flooding the Romorean (1-) rift valley to life, though the project would only be realised under her son, RAFFIN IO SGIROUT'S, rule.

ELAHIKH: Set. Settlement in the c south of the territories of ETHISTONITH in RHINOCOLOURA. It is a major course of granite in the region (Pop. c. 7.500).

ELAIMAN ORDER: His. Pol. Org. A historical Order of the Sanctified Inquisition in the Korachani empire that was founded during the MINASTERIAL REFORMS that swept the Korachani government in 3708 RM.

Named after the member of The Seven who helped envision the changes, the Elaiman was the largest of the newly-introduced Orders and effectively replaced the imperial army, navy, and the Steel Legions. Part of the reforms included the establishment of a department to police the imperial fighting forces, and ensuring that the armies remained loyal, disciplined, and ready to defend the empire.

The changes were monumental and resulted in an unfathomable spending of imperial resources, that left a new fighting force that never found its feet, leading to blunders in the field and various other disruptions in efficiency and leadership across the Order. Perhaps the most felt of the changes was a downsizing of the Steel Legions and decreased inception of new CLONE LEGIONNAIRES for its armies (partially to offset the costs of changing the military structure), which culminated in 3845 RM with the MANUMISSION OF THE CLONES.

The eventual reversal of the Reforms in 3779 RM were partially due to the decrease in military effectiveness and the sheer cost accrued by the changes. Following this, the previous imperial military structures were reintroduced and remain in effect to this day, though the Steel Legions remain only a small elite part of the overall military structure today.

ELALLIA: Dem. 'Elallian'. Ntn. Large kingdom in the south of SAMMAEA, south east of the SEA OF KRIHIEK. Its nine kingdoms are ruled by lords who are typically worshipped as demigods, forming a pantheon beneath the NIMBUS GOD – an enigmatic figure, possibly a SCIONIC CREATURE, who serves as the head of a pantheon of nine demigods.

In c. 1180 RM territories now occupied by northern Elallia were devastated by the aftermath of the MT. KLAUVAKAN CALAMITY, including famine and plage throughout the 12th century RM. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

ELAMIZ: Geo. Ridge in the c west of GNOTH. It is incredibly smooth and known for its dark mosses and lichen. It is likely a remnant from an ancient glacier field.

ELANRIN: Set. Major city in the c east of CYHLAGHARR, known as a centre of the slave-trade. Beyond slave merchants and discerning buyers, outsiders are not allowed in and little is otherwise known about it (Pop. unknown).

ELAPHA: 1. Sea. Bay in the north east of SALOROC, in the SEA OF SUN.
The river OZMANTHA empties here, and silt deposition from its flow makes the bay and its coastal area fertile.

2. Set. Fishing settlement in the east of Saloroc, overlooking the \underline{BAYOF} $\underline{ELAPHA}^{(1.)}$. The city is known for the black glassy monolith that stands some miles west of its borders, which has defied all attempts at demolition and investigation. It is thought to be a relic from the $\underline{THIRD\ AGE}$, if not actually being a work of the $\underline{DEMIURGES}$ (Pop. c. 10,000).

ELAPON: Set. Settlement in the east of OPHIUSSA in the ISHRAF basin. Its main industry is agriculture (Pop. c. 6,800).

ELAPRA: Set. Small city in the east of OPHIUSSA. Its main industry is copper mining (Pop. c. 14,000).

ELARGOYO: Set. Large caravanserai in the south of the MAUGOGNOTH basin the north east of KHARKHARADONTIS, west of ETHISTONITH, along the path of the NOAVATURI TRAIL. Following the independence of NOAVATUR in 1304 RM, the caravanserai saw decreased traffic passing through it and was eventually abandoned by c. 1150 RM. Today, all that remains are hollow buildings, and crumbling adobe walls.

ELARI: Rui. Ruined city on the island of SHIBBOTHA in the greater SHIBBOTHA ISLES. It is one of the main reasons, alongside another ruin known as RUOI, why the archipelago remains contested between FALLAROUR and the CORAL BARONIES, both of whom claim ownership in the hopes of exploiting rumoured industrial treasures believed to be found in the ruins.

ELARIA: His. Myt. Geo. Ntn. Ancient historical territories belonging to the DEMIURGE IALDABAOTH and his tribe, the LHAUS. It is unknown where those territories were in relation to today's borders, though it is likely that they were in c NORTHERN SAMMAEA.

ELASAH: Set. Settlement in the c east of SARASTRO (Pop. c. 8,000).

ELASHEN: Set. Fortified city on the western shore of lake SIBALLA, in the c west of the territories of ETHISTONITH in RHINOCOLOURA. (Pop. c. 45.500).

ELAT: 1. Also 'Republic of Elat'. Dem. 'Elatian'. His. Ntn. Republic that existed in the south west of LLACHATUL between c. 3250 – 3762 RM, and ruled by an elected TRIPARTITE MONARCHY. It became infamous for its brokering of sensitive political information to the highest bidders across Llachatul, SAMMAEA, and the east of MENISCEA, which led to war in 3760 RM. It collapsed in 3762 RM following 2-YEARS OF WAR and strife, giving rise to the nations of GYZHA and AYAD, and a reformed Elatian government^(2.).

2. Dem. 'Elatian'. Nm. Nation in the far south west of the continent of LLACHATUL, situated south of the KINGDOM OF AYAD, straddling both the west and east of the PARNASIAN mountains. It is of idyllic climate, with coastlines overlooking both the SEA OF SUDUNIR to the west, and the SEA OF ANIPTERRA to the south, and it is noted for its natural resources, including its cork oak forests, and zinc and tin reserves.

It is the surviving remnant of the older Elatian Republic⁽¹⁾, which collapsed following years of conflict with KORACHAN and other nations due to its espionage across the SEA OF ORRIDA and the INNER SEA. The war ended with the signing of the ELATIAN TREATY in 3762 RM, after which the region of GYZHA declared its independence. Months later one of the TRIPARTITE MONARCHS of Elat fled to the north, where she claimed the land as her own. Unable to fight two seceding regions without aid, a treaty was signed, legitimising the claims to independence of Gyzha and AYAD, and bringing the Republic of Elat to an end. The remnants of Elat took on the name of its predecessor, and it remains a republic to this day.

Despite the collapse of the original militant republic and the closure of its pervasive embassies and consulates, its inheritors are believed to continue to broker information across LLACHATUL and SAMMAEA, secreting its agents across all major cities in ELYDEN.

Its nobility is affluent from their shrewd selling of other nations' secrets to the highest bidders, and they are incredibly powerful and influential, not only in Elat, but in Elyden as a whole. As a result, its republic, once just and with good intentions, became a plutocracy, made up of the most powerful of the noble households in Elat, whose rule serves only their own interests, and whose subjects suffer under their indifference. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

3. Set. City in the south west of GYZHA. It was the first point where EZASUHI^(2.) missionaries and colonists landed in 3133 RM, and they spread rapidly, claiming ill-defended territories in the south of RAONGEN^(2.). It was a major city for some time, though following the dissolution of the TRIPARTITE MONARCHY in 3762 RM, it dwindled in influence and importance. It is a military centre and thought to be a hub of Elatian espionage in the east (Pop. c. 32,000).

ELAT, ORDER OF: Mil. Org. Militant order that emerged in the REPUBLIC OF ELAT^(1.) in c. 3760 RM, in response to the growing role of espionage in the economy and politics of the region. The order was responsible for the uncovering and death of dozens of Elatian spies and diplomats across the SEA OF ORRIDA and the INNER SEA. The capital in Elat would eventually become embroiled in chaos, leading to a schism amongst its politicians and armies. These events would directly tie in to the so-called TWO YEAR WAR that would end in the fracture of Elat in 3762 RM.

ELATHA: Mil. Str. Major coastal fortress in the north of TISARA, on the island of BAEG.

ELATIAN: Lan. Language spoken in ELAT^(2.) that emerged between c. 3400 – 3500 RM in the Elatian Republic^(1.) from the earlier EZASUHI language spoken by its founders. Its early roots borrowed from native RAONGENI languages, though its major influence remains Ezasuhi.

Today it is spoken in Elat, as well as \underline{AYAD} and \underline{GYZHA} . See Vol II: Languages.

ELATIAN TREATY, THE: Pol. His. Twin treaties, both signed in 3762 RM, the first ending the so-called TWO YEAR WAR against ELAT and its allies, the other, signed months later, ending hostilities between Elat and the seceding states of AYAD and GYZHA, granting the latter two states their independence. Though each is fiercely independent, with a strong cultural identity, an uneasy truce between the three so-called PARNASIAN STATES exists to this day, with each recognising their common heritage.

ELATIKA: Set. Small city on the island of EBEIRA off the south western coast of WESTERN SAMMAEA, in the COTRIAN ISLES, forming a part of the ISLAND STATES OF IRY.

ELAXO: Set. Small city in the west of SURUTUR, close to the border with RHEA. It is part of the trade-route linking the two nations together (Pop. c. 20,000).

ELBIA: Pol. Set. Capital of THUMAL, known for its beautiful and expansive natural harbours and the cliffs that stretch for almost 40-miles to the north. It forms a part of the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 160,000).

ELBIAN: Mil. His. ACTANORISH warlord who in 545 RM attacked SIRIPHAS, allowing him to secure the territories around the city-state of Actanors, allowing them to flourish as one state, under his leadership.

ELBRA: Set. Small settlement in the c of LYRIDIA, 35-miles north of the capital in MYRA, the settlement specialises in production of the special wine that's consumed by the AUGURS in their rituals and ages it according to a secret family tradition (Pop. c. 1,700).

ELDARA: Geo. Island in the north west of the MAIDEN ISLES, off the south eastern coast of MENISCEA.

ELDEA: Set. Settlement in the north of LIDEA. Its main industry is the cultivation of tea plants (Pop. c. 8,000).

ELDER: 1. Soc. Pol. Rel. Generally, a religious or cultural term used in reference to an elderly person who is respected within a community. The term has different connotations by region:

2. Soc. Pol. Commonly used in TEMUIA to denote family patriarchs and matriarchs and other family members of age and experience. In a more official sense the title forms part of the governmental structure of Temuja, with the eldest person of each family forming part of its settlement's governing body. The rank is hereditary, and as soon as a family elder dies, the next eldest person takes over. This trend is slowly being replaced by a more centralised form of leadership, such as that seen in VALGHAR (though in the case of Valghar it was merely a means to an end – the town is relatively new, populated by migrants and vagabonds, with no true elders).

The PLAINSLEAGUE of DUARIAHAHN is the ultimate representation of the importance of elders in Temuja, with the most respected elder (not necessarily the eldest – in many cases an elder is incapable of travelling to the capital) of each major settlement sitting on the table four times a year to discuss matters of national importance.

ELDER ANIMAL: Int. Fau. Some passages of the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN claim that the DEMIURGE ARIMASPI imbued all of his creations with a mote of his divinity. This mote granted the Demiurge a link of sorts with each of his creations, though in some cases this same link might make rare individuals more than just beasts, with those few gifted by Arimaspi living longer (as much as 100-times longer, in some cases), growing gnarlier and larger, and having more wisdom that others examples of their kind.

Some extreme examples are fully sapient and might understand speech (if they have been exposed to the language for long enough, for instance) though won't be able to talk due to the constraints of their biology. Others might be able to communicate TELEPATHICALLY or display certain nature-related supranatural abilities.

Today many scholars speculate whether such beings are real or just a part of the parables of the Mythologia Elyden. Many cultures swear by their existence, though maintain that in the wake of the Demiurge's retreat from mortal life, such individuals have grown rare. The march of industry and the destruction of the natural world prevalent around THE INNER SEA may have destroyed their homes, decreasing the likelihood of such creatures coming to light.

ELDHUIN: m. Pol. His. Per. (B. 3134 – D. 3173 RM) son of the exiled king TRIDUAN of LOEGRESS^(1.) whose daughter ARLEIE was raised to become the first queen of a reunited KOMMEA. He was a mighty champion and diplomat who spent most of his years securing relations between the disparate people of the region in preparation for his daughter's coronation.

He died on a hunting expedition in 3173 RM, far from home in the company of his own champions and followers and one of his son in law's advisors – a mute KHAMIDIAN SHAPER. Though some viewed the death with suspicion, nothing was made of it at the time.

ELDRIA: His. Ntn. Extinct FIFTH AGE empire that existed in the north of LLACHATUL, emerging in c. 1300 RM from a long line of successive kingdoms that emerged following the collapse of the expansive FOURTH AGE empire of CEEROPIA.

The peasant girl HULDAH discovered the WHITE ANGEL TAHIRA in a mere in the north of Eldria in c. 1500 RM, bringing about a religious renaissance that remains to this day in KASPIA – the nation that would go on to inherit Eldrian lands after their fall.

A line of rulers known as the ORREX emerged from the WHITE SHEET in c. 2180 RM, claiming to be descended from a line of genetically-engineered warriors from ancient Ceeropia. They slowly rose to power between 2185 and 2205 RM, creating a wedge within Eldria, eventually sundering it by 2227 RM, causing the east to break away, while the Orrex persisted in the, clinging on to Eldria, starting a great dynasty that would rule until its eventual fall.

Another schism saw Eldria sundered yet again, following a civil war that culminated in 2504 RM with the formation of the nation of SAKKHRIA, which would later go on to become SABIA.

Eldria would falter in 2682 RM, following centuries of decadence and tyranny, in which much of its territories were lost to Sakkhria and later Sabia. During this time, its subjects, many of which were slaves, suffered greatly. Immense brutalist citadels and palaces were erected across Eldria at great expense that hid lavishly-decorated ballrooms and theatres in which the Orrex wasted their days living in debauchery, oblivious to the wretched lives they forced upon their subjects.

The first signs of true unrest came in 2677 RM when an open-caste mine in UBHUTTAL collapsed, killing hundreds of workers. The Orrex merely forced the survivors to work longer and harder due to the losses. The workers refused, leading to a battle between them and the overseers, in which many died. The conflict was resolved only through the intervention of the dynastic armies, which wiped out the entire workforce of the mine, after which workers and slaves were recruited from Eldria and beyond.

This was the first of many similar revolts over the next years, which culminated in the autumn of 2681 RM when workers refused to harvest crops. Across Eldria, labourers and slaves lay down their tools and stopped working.

This conflict dragged on to 2682 RM, by which time it had grown into an expansive civil war that left the region powerless, its armies fractured, its workforce depleted, its people starving, and the last of the Orrex slain. By the end of the year Eldrian infrastructure had completely collapsed, leaving Sakkhria and the Kaspian states to pick up the piece, though eventually the Federation of Pergost would rise from the ruins in 3721 RM. See Vol III: Extinct States.

ELDRIAN: Lan. Language spoken in KASPIA that originated in the earlier ELDRIAN empire. Modern SABIAN⁽²⁾ emerged from this language, as did the pidgin TRADETONGUE that is common in CENTRAL LLACHATUL. See Vol II: Languages.

ELDRITCH EPISTLES, the: Vol. Sup. Mys. His. Ancient religious writings found in a cavern in the north of ERUTO(2.), PARTHIS, in 3922 RM. They were immediately apprehended by the republic following their return to the capital in TETHRA later the same year. Few people know of them and those that do can only guess as to their true meaning, though there have been whispers that the discovery of the epistles contradict the by-then established DOCTRINES OF AVRAHAM, which many people in Parthis had come to follow.

The name Eldritch Epistles emerged decades later and is likely unrelated to the contents of the writings, but many believe that they are a holy text of some kind, possibly attributed to the scion AZER^(2.).

ELDRITCH GOSPELS, the: Rel. Vol. Heretical texts penned by the disturbed IONIC demagogue MEDELER SANARITZ in 927 RM. Though largely incoherent and filled with senseless diagrams and symbols, the texts do describe the so-called Thrice Heptad – ancient unknowable beings, akin to deities, but utterly indifferent to the affairs of MORTALS or ELYDEN herself. According to the Gospels, they can be summoned through primeval rituals that predate the coming of the mortal peoples to Elyden.

It is believed that seven copies of the Gospels were made by Sanaritz, with some copies finding their way across the INNER SEA, possibly into private hands. Two were confiscated by the MORÉHAN ORDER OF THE INQUISITION and destroyed, and most of the others are thought to have been lost in the ensuing years.

He was apprehended by Moréhan agents in the city of HACHALIAH later the same year and he was executed after weeks of torture and interrogation. The source, if any, of his writings remained undisclosed.

ELDRITCH LYNX: Fau. Medium size felids native to the plains of southern MENISCEA knowns for the violet sheen of their thick black coats, their deep golden eyes, and tufted ears and cheeks They are FIRMAMENTALLY sensitive and are akin to a living FOCUS^(2.) Prized in Firmamental communities, they are effectively extinct in the wild though continue to be bred specifically for use as 'familiars', a lucrative business, though some believe that the breeding and domestication of the animals has stymied the traits for which they were originally prized.

They are most prized in $\underline{ACHAA}^{(2)}$ and \underline{VARU} , as well as other regions in Meniscea with strong Firmamental traditions, though they can still be found in small numbers in secluded areas of the plains of western \underline{ZOHAK} and Varu. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

ELEAH: Set. City and port in the north east of EASTERN LARISH. The city overlooks the bay of TANIA and serves as a major link between foreign nations (Pop. c. 35,000).

ELEBMEN: Set. Settlement in the c north of the territories of ETHISTONITH in RHINOCOLOURA. Its main industry is the production of myrrh (Pop. c. 8,000).

ELECTRICITY: Tec. Physical phenomenon that uses potential electrical energy delivered by a circuit to a terminus, which could be a device or object that requires electricity to work. Though known to ancient MORTALS under different guises (electrical eels, amber rods, etc.), it is only modern scientific developments that have allowed electricity to be used in everyday life – such allowing electrical lighting, the automation of machinery or manufactories, or the creation of batteries known as DISCHARGERS that are used in limited quantities in industry, with more applications in the military.

Most common around the region of the INNER SEA, including the HIGH- and LOW-EMPIRES, and the Republics of ALMAGEST and PARTHIS, amongst other territories, it becomes less common the farther away from those region one moves.

Electricity is provided by power-manufactories: heavily guarded stations where various methods are used to produce electricity, including heat source (burning fuel), natural energy (hydroelectricity), or other means such as TECHNARCANA. The ATRAMENTA is known to have an affinity with electricity, which is responsible for the independent discovery and application of the latter in 214 RM in various areas of the KORACHANI EMPIRE.

ELECTORNIC TELEGRAPHY: see TELEGRAPHY.

ELEDREON: Set. Settlement in the c east of GIBEAH (Pop. c. 7,500).

ELEGARA: Set. Small coastal city in the west of AMMESH (Pop. c. 14,500).

ELEKHID: Dem. 'Elekhidian'. Ntn. Kingdom in the east of SAMMAEA, overlooking the ROILING SEA, and situated between the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER to the north, PNESSA to the west, and CHEIRA to the south. It is characterised by many rivers, and a tropical climate with many coastal mangroves and rainforests reaching as far west as the border with Pnessa. Off its coast is a large coral reef, known as the ENEPHIAN REEF, and to the south east is the infamous bleached reef of Ictheli, which is now over 50-miles from the coast, following millennia of waning sea levels.

The kingdom was formed in 3409 RM after the culmination of events following the death of Magnate KARAN SHUR of Pnessa in 3388 RM. He left three children – brothers MITH and MORTHA, and daughter DEGLIA. The youngest, Mith, abducted the elder siblings and imprisoned them in the coastal tower of ENEPH while he assumed his father's mantle. Deglia and Mortha gained the support of many of their father's allies and they were freed by them, allowing them to organise a coup of the capital in IRUT MARKA. A civil war followed in which Mith was slain by Mortha, who was unable to claim the throne and was forced to flee east with his sister. Pnessa blundered their many counterattacks against Eneph, leading to a ceasefire and the independence of Eneph and its allies, and the eventual formation of Elekhid.

Today Elekhid is known for its religious extremists who follow the religion of SHURANISM. They wear black in mourning of a queen who died over a hundred years ago, with only tiny flashes of colour around their collars serving as a memory of the bright costumes they were once famed for. Many also wear black headdresses the sizes of which are dictated by their social class – with nobility and relatives of the ruling dynasty wearing the most elaborate headdresses. Its main industries are lapis mining and the manufacturing of the associated blue dye, as well as MANNA – a resin made from the sap of the manna tree, which is used by shapers to sustain their bodies during shaping. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

ELEKTOS: Set. City in the south west of ANANTHUL (Pop. c. 35,000).

ELEMENTAE VITALE: Int. Sup. Archaic term once used to denote the Atramenta and the Firmament, as they existed in their raw combined form.

Today the term is used in astronomy in reference to a similar raw element that exists in space. Were it not for ELYDEN'S atmosphere this Elementae Vitale would reach the planets' surface, causing irreparable damage to life, known as AETHERIC CAUTERITY. See Vol IV: the Materia Omna.

ELEMENTAL: Int. Myr. his. Ancient primordial beings said to have been created by the DEMIURGES (typically ACHAIAH, ARIMASPI, and SYNCHTHONITH).

The elementals embodied the Demiurges' aspect of creation. Gigantic and alien, they wandered the ancient world, sloughing their skin, bringing life to the land in their wake. Purposefully designed to live long, they were not immortal, and upon their inevitable death, their bodies would dissolve and spread for miles around, bringing about renewed life.

Some mythologists and scholars have postulated that the elementals were created by Demiurges who had foresight-enough to see that their own tenure as caretakers of Elyden might not last forever - the elementals were designed as failsafes to help replenish a world that might in the future be waning. Designed to live for millennia, the eventual death of an elemental would trigger a slow cycle of creation that would bring renewed life to a large area.

In the years following the wane of the Demiurges, many of the elementals came to be worshipped as nature spirits and primal deities, and not without reason. However, the elementals were blind to the actions of the mortals and operated as little more than automations, wandering across all of ELYDEN purposefully, mindlessly.

Over the years they dwindled in numbers, with most meeting their demise in the THIRD and FOURTH AGE, and they are thought to be largely extinct today, though some minor examples have purportedly been sighted in the hinterlands between civilisation.

ELEMENTAL CRUX: Int. Sup. Geo. In the study of the MATERIA OMNA, the region, approximating a 1,000-mile radius around either the two PRIME LACUNAE of the BLACK FOUNTAIN or the TRUE MENISCUS, where SHAPING of the ATRAMENTA and FIRMAMENT are respectively at their strongest and most unpredictable. So potent is the link to the respective Prime Lacuna within the region of its respective Elemental Crux, that shapers venturing within would lose their minds, and even to attempt shaping would break the.

The farther one travels from this radius, the more demanding shaping becomes, until one comes within the influence of the NULLAMBIT – the arcane equator that is equidistant from the Black Fountain and the Meniscus – where shaping is at its weakest. See Vol IV: the Materia Omna.

ELEMENTAL GARDEN OF IHANELONY: Int. Myt. Geo. Ancient magickally-formed forest in the c of BANT, in the c south of the CARCHEMISHI PENINSULA⁽¹⁾, in the east of SAMMAEA.

The forest is thought to have been formed by the death of an <a href="https://example.com/html/example.com/h

It is ignored by mortals, who either feel uneasy being in the vicinity of such a primal region or just feel fear, even if on a subconscious level, when presented with a place so alien and ancient.

ELEMENTALIM: Sup. Voc. A form of SHAPING, be it ATRAMENTISM or FIRMAMENTAL in which the shaper has a proclivity for shaping particular substances. Many shapers discover at an early age (often during adolescence, before they have received any formal training or before they even know they have the makings of a shaper) that they have an affinity towards a form of 'element' or 'energy' (both of which are unscientific terms with little tangible meaning).

These include, but are not limited to, elements such as fire, electricity, sand, water, ice, earth, wind, metal, dust, and wood. Some can be extremely powerful and, in some cases, abilities may overlap (a shaper who can manipulate fire and heat can turn water cold or into ice by removing heat).

Some schools of mysticism have spent millennia trying to categorise elements and include them in symbolic diagrams, often with 22 elements, each with allied and opposing forces, though these are largely believed to be arbitrary.

Examples of popular elementalists in the Korachani empire include FERRIMIN, who can control metal; and TELLURARIIN, who can control stone. See Vol IV: Spheres and types of Shaping.

ELEMENTS, TEMPLE OF THE: Rel. Str. Temple dedicated to the worship of AETHIOSI ANIMISM in the city of SALASAH in the c north west of AETHIOS. The temple was built atop a cathedral of the UNDYING MACHINE that was abandoned following the war with KORACHAN that ended in 3017 RM, which itself was built atop the ruin of a FOURTH AGE sybaritic temple that was part of the Salasahi empire.

ELEMITES, the: Geo. Island-chain off the southern coast of EPHATTA, stretching into the west of the SEA OF MERCUVIA.

ELEN DETH: Rel. Dei. Once-deity of the AHKAN people. The god, who was an earth-deity symbolising fertility and strength, was forsaken following years of persecution by KORACHANI missionaries and ICONOCLASTS led to its people decrying religion. See Vol IV: Gods and Pantheons

ELENA: Set. Small city in the c of VÂRR. It was once a major industrial hub, where raw materials from all over Vârr were brought, processed and stored for transportation west into KORACHAN via the river ICHORIA, and east to the harbours of NOUVAR (now NOUVATAI), though with Vârr's dwindling resources it too suffered. By the time the INTERREGES departed Vârr in 3791 RM, the place had become little more than a small town, its many storage areas and manufactories lying empty, ruined, though its independence saw it grow and it is now a centre of trade in Vârr (Pop. c. 24,200).

ELENARIS: Set. Large city in the c-south east of AEONAS known for its gemstone mines. It is built atop the ruins of a FOURTH AGE settlement, and remnants of ancient catacombs and crypts are often encountered during excavation works (Pop. c. 62,000).

ELEND: 1. Geo. Island in the SEA OF UGOLOTH to the west of TARTAK.
 2. Rui. Ancient once-flooded city on island of the same name in TARTAK.
 The city is ancient, its cyclopean architecture of an alien design, its proportions unlike any other in ELYDEN. Though once flooded, the island is now far from the coast, due to the waning of Elyden's seas.

ELENDI VARTHA: f. Pol. Edu. Phil. Per. (B. 3726 – D. 3806 RM)

KAPHAARI-born philosopher and educator whose teachings were instrumental in setting up the political revolution that was headed by her mentee ARIS TALMARA, who was the son of a corrupt plutocrat. Following the ousting of the government in 3779 RM they penned the PROCLAMATION OF MERIT together and established a new meritocracy that rules the nation, now known as KEPHUAAN, to this day.

ELEPHANTINE: Ele. Alternate word for ivory, commonly used in PARAIYA, ETHISTONITH, and RHINOCOLOURA.

ELES TIHAD: Geo. Mountain in the far south west of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER, serving as a border between the tribe of OURANASSA in the east and PNESSA in the west. It is largely granite, and its rocks are a green-grey.

ELETH: His. Rel. Once the site of religious importance amongst the AHKAN people, said to be the cradle of its now-forsaken earth-deity, ELEN DETH.

ELETI: Set. Small city in the east of VECTIS, in the region of the CARACAL. It originated as a watering hole in c. 1420 RM and grew into a caravanserai along the VAEVECTAN TRAIL, serving as a stop before the routes' terminus in the city of LAETA. It is now a major producer of sails for LANDSKIFFS (Pop. c. 13,100).

ELEVAN: 1. Geo. Endorheic basin in the south east of OPHAR.

2. Lak. Lake in the south east of OPHAR, located in the eponymous endorheic basin. It is the only remaining part of an ancient river system that disappeared centuries ago when its main sources in the western-face of the ASOGHAQUA Mountains ran dry.

3. Rui. Ancient ruin in the south east of present day OPHAR, located within the eponymous endorheic basin⁽¹⁾. The city appeared in the wake of the OLNNADI slave revolts of 2135 RM. Thousands of escaped slaves settled the area around lake Elevan, eventually founding the city of Elevan, which thrived for centuries before nearby water sources ran dry, forcing it to be abandoned in c. 3200 RM.

ELEVEN, the: Pol. Common name for the HENDECARCHS – the rulers of the FOREST-KINGDOMS of MALAN.

ELEVEN KINGDOMS, TEMPLE OF THE: Rel. Str. Name given to the great many temples erected around 2100 RM in celebration of the appointment of the last of the Eleven HENDECARCHS in MALAN. Many of them are still in use as consecrated places where worshippers or all religions and deities can meet in safety.

ELGAN: Geo. Mountain pass crossing the BETHET Mountains forming part of the SALT ROAD.

ELGAS: Geo. Island off the eastern coast of NAARETH.

ELGII: Set. Small city in the c of PNESSA (Pop. c. 17,400).

ELGISAR: Rvr. River in the south east of NAARETH, flowing south for 134-miles from sources in the CEPHAS Mountains before emptying into the GULF OF VEGATETH.

ELGREAD: Geo. Plains in the east of TAHALL, north east of LERAHA. The region is dominated by the river DASALL.

ELGRIM: Set. Settlement in south western AZAZEM, in the plains of KARAFFAR. The settlement is one of many producers of ALOARE in the region, and the brewing of BRAN (Pop. c. 3,500).

ELHUMBRA, the: Rui. Ancient capital and royal palace in the c west of extant QARALAM, which was abandoned following its conquest by the IAQRASHAN SULTANATE in 2942 RM. The palace was allowed to fall into disrepair, and by c. 3100 RM it had become a home to squatters, who over the years coalesced into a structured society of sorts. Today, the Elhumbra exists outside of the societal and political structure of Qaralam as a largely independent city-state that is forgotten by most. Though technically it falls under the jurisdiction of the Sultanate it is allowed to self-rule, provided its people do not serve as a nuisance to surrounding lands.

Little is known of its cultural structure, though it is popularly believed to be an anarchy, though how true this can be remains unknown. Its people are fiercely territorial and are not accepting of outsiders, though in 3657 RM they did welcome the explorer IBAL SABBRIN within their walls, who shared his experience in a book, though many today question its veracity. If his words are to be believed the city boasted a population of 100,000 over 300-years ago (Pop. unknown).

ELIAM: Geo. Rocky pinnacles along the southern-most coast of TAMAR, forming a division between the HARMACHIS and URAN seas. The region is somewhat perilous to shipping, and most vessels avoid the region.

ELIDA: Set. Port-city in the south west of HOAMM. It is the south westernmost point of the KORACHANI PENINSULA (Pop. c. 51,000).

ELIGIA: 1. Rvr. River in the far south of VENTHIR flowing for 350-miles east from sources in the ARUT DAZ, southern WORKNAH, and KAUIN Mountains before emptying in the Bay of Eligia.

2. Sea. Bay in the south of $\underline{\text{VENTHIR}}$, forming a border with the nation of $\underline{\text{SARAGOS}}$.

3. Set. Settlement in the east of VENTHIR, once famous for its 3-mile-long metalworking thoroughfare and the many gold mines to its north west.

The mines were exhausted in c. 3280 RM, and an earthquake in 3727 RM levelled much of the administrative quarters, leaving the city without leadership and in chaos. Within decades, most of its 150,000-people had left, leaving behind a settlement struggling to regain its former greatness. Its ruler is the enigmatic BARONESS BATHIN (Pop. c. 20,000).

ELIGOS, LORD-CAPTAIN OF THE ICEPEAK: (B. c. 3900 RM) Sup.

Powerful and enigmatic warlord in SABIA, said to be a SHAPER of great power, purported to know the future of wars and the manner in which soldiers should meet or die.

ELIGOS, FORTRESS OF: Mil. Str. SABIAN fortress of the warlord ELIGOS. Built atop a LODELITH in c. 3950 RM, it hovers above a lake in the south of SABIA, FIRMAMENTAL energies shimmering at its base. The fortress is located above a small but potent Firmamental LEY, allowing it to hover in the way it does.

ELIGOTH: Set. Fortified city in the east of VIRAHAN, famed for the ancient tower around which the rest of the settlement was originally built (Pop. c. 116,500).

ELIHAMAGNA: Geo. Large dry plains dominating the c of IO, covering some 25,000 square-miles of land. Its terrain varies from rocky and arid in the south, to sparse woodlands in the east, eventually giving way to forests (the HADASSALON of south western SARASTRO) and rough terrain to the north, where it finally gives way to the foothills of the GHOLA Mountain.

ELIKAMMAN: Geo. Expansive ridge in the north west of METHUMN. It was one the spine of a great peninsula that divided the BAY OF HEZAZ⁽¹⁾ in the south from the easternmost reaches of the larger BAY OF LRITHA in the east, though the lowering of ELYDEN'S seas saw it lose its shape, becoming a part of the greater mainland.

ELIND: Phil. Philosophy prevalent in most of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOMS, particular those in the east. Its acolytes advocate an ascetic lifestyle of contemplation and FIRMAMENTAL study, eschewing its use, and decrying all aspects of ATRAMENTISM.

ELINDA: Rui. Ruins of an ancient SAGITTARIAN port to the south west of the TROJAN salt flats⁽²⁾.

ELIOR: also 'the Plains of Light'. Geo. The so-called plains of light in OSSIEL, in the north west of MENISCEA. They are believed to be FIRMAMENTAL in origin. Travel into them is forbidden, and those caught doing so are sentenced to being tied to stone pillars in the plains, where they are allowed to starve under its harsh summer sun.

ELIOTH: (340-ft.) Rvr. Waterfall in the north of ATARAXIA, along the course of the river ARASTA.

ELIPHANIA: Pol. Set. Major coastal city and capital of IRORA, on the island of ISEA (Pop. c. 62,880).

ELIPHAO: Geo. Wasteland in SAMMAEA, just north of the TROPIC OF
RAH in the south east of THE SURRACH. Little is known of the region other than the ancient ruined city of KALAI, the demise of which is attribute to a DEMIURGE.

ELIS: Set. Small coastal city in the island of ALETARA in the south of $\underline{\text{LIMOTH}}^{(1.)}$ (Pop. c. 16,000).

ELISELD: Set City in the c south of $\underline{GREST}^{(L)}$ in the island-continent of $\underline{BROR}^{(L)}$ (Pop. c. 50,000).

ELISIA: Geo. Peninsula in the west of the HENDECARCHY of LONAR, in the south west of MALAN, flanked by the BAY OF KHIT to the west and the gulf of GITHKA to the east. The south eastern-most reaches of the peninsula form part of KHAMID.

ELISSANAS: Rvr. River in the east of PELASGOS, flowing for 280-miles east of the BATHAKOL Mountains into the SEA OF SPIRES.

ELIT: Set. Settlement in the north west of the INTERURBAN STATES, and centre of winemaking in the region (Pop. c. 5,400).

ELITAGRA: Dem. 'Elitagri'. His. Soc. Early FIFTH AGE culture that settled in what is now the north east of KARGAMA. They are the first known worshippers of the far more ancient grotesque idols that later became known as KARGAMAN IDOLS. This worship emerged from their contact with the DHEKAARI nomads, with whom they shared common ancestors. Where the nomads revered all the idols, paying their respect to any that they came across in their travels, the Elitagri people settled down next to specific statues, which became deities to the surrounding communities. Its people were master MATHEMATICIANS, and they devised a base 60 number system, many aspects of which remain in common use today, such as there being 360 degrees in a full rotation of a plane angle, or 60 minutes in an hour.

By c. -820 RM, the city of PHAND^(1.) had emerged as a religious and political power, forming its own state in the West as the Elitagri people remained as separate city-states. Within decades of this, the Elitagri became more fundamentalist in their beliefs, opposing the more polytheistic approach of the Dhekaari nomads, resulting in bloodshed that saw the nomads retreat to the wilderness, forsaking their less rural kin.

The discovery of vast BRIMSTONE deposits across the territories of various city-states led to an early metallurgical revolution, that saw the region become both powerful. The eastern Elitagri city-states entered the iron age centuries before their neighbours and began selling brimstone across the SEA OF ORRIDA, growing incredibly wealthy as a result.

To the west, the city of Phand⁽²⁾ had expanded into a kingdom, ruled over by the esoteric Consanguine Dynasties that rose to power in c. - 500 RM, becoming a major political force in their own right. The Consanguine Dynasties expanded over the next centuries, though the Elitagri people remained as disparate city-states that were held back by their own politicking. By c. 350 RM the kingdom of Phand was expanding, its eastern borders pushing against the western-most of the Elitagri city-states, causing new tensions to form. Meanwhile, the growth of the Triskethian Domains in the east led to an expansion of their own borders west, causing further tensions in the Elitagri city-states. This led to the formation of the Order of Witnesses across the Elitagri city-states in c. 800 RM, who helped to unify the region, strengthening it against outside powers.

The armies of Triskethia marched against the eastern-most of Elitagri cities in c. 1100 RM, resulting in a short but bloody war that saw the Elitagri city-states put aside their differences to fend off the invading forces. Their mastery of brimstone artillery and primitive incendiary weapons made them formidable opponents, and the conflict ended in 1108 RM with a treaty that saw Triskethian forces pushed back and the Elitagri cities united in a FEDERATION, bringing about a new political age in the region. See Vol III: Extinct States.

ELITAGRI MATHEMATICS: His. Edu. A base 60 mathematical system devices by ancient ELITAGRI mathematicians in c. -1500 RM. This is one of the earliest-known mathematical systems in the FIFTH AGE and it became very popular across the SEA OF ORRIDA over a millennium before the rise of the KORACHANI EMPIRE.

Many aspects of this mathematical system remain in use today, over 5 millennia after their devising, including the full rotation of a plane angle having 360 degrees, or an hour having 60 minutes.

ELITAGRI STATES, FEDERATION OF: His Ntn. A historic nation that emerged in the east of present-day KARGAMA in the north of WESTERN SAMMAEA, in 1108 RM The federation was formed in response to a period of uncertainty, during which the disparate ELITAGRI city-states were beset by enemies to the west and east, with the TRISKETHIAN DOMAINS to its east marching against it in a short war that the allied cities of Elitagra were able to win.

Newly united, Elitagra was able to bolster its trade-routes, and regions that until then had struggled to gain the influence that the more prosperous brimstone cities in the east had, were finally able to grow. Confident in its new land, Elitagra marched against the kingdom of PHAND(1.) in 1122 RM. In 1126 RM the city of Phand(2.) itself was taken after a 3-month siege. The IDOL of AGHATYRAELL was toppled, ending close to two millennia of influence in the region and bringing to an end the reign of the CONSANGUINE DYNASTIES, uniting the two lands under the banner of the federation.

With the support of the ORDER OF WITNESSES, the extremely influential KARGEMMAN MERCHANT PLUTOCRACIES were able to exert their influence on the federal council, finally overpowering it in c. 1660 RM after decades of political wrangling. Backed by the Order, the plutocracy founded the KARGEMMAN MONARCHY in 1682 RM, replacing the federal council entirely. See Vol III: Extinct States.

ELIXIA: Rel. Str. Temple in the north west of GNOTH. It is the fabled birthplace of the GIGANRI, where the fossilised remains of the seven seed pods remain. A large temple has since been erected above them and is itself ancient, dating back to the THIRD AGE. An order of aesthetes has arisen around the temple, the members of which dedicate themselves to the search for missing shards of the seeds and knowledge surrounding them. The name is thought to be linked in some way with the name ELYDEN.

ELIZIA: His. Set. Ancient city located in the north east of the present-day TEMPLAR STATES. Dating to c. -35 RM, it was one of the first cities founded by the ADEPTS who settled the region of TRISKETHIA in the early FIFTH AGE, and became a centre of supranatural study as SOULSTONES were unearthed in the cliffs of the region. By c. 500 RM the SHAPER cate known as SOULSEERS emerged in the city, becoming influential, pioneering uses for the soulstones. They used them as FOCI (2) for their shaping, allowing them to accomplish great feats that would otherwise be impossible.

This allowed Elizia to grow powerful indeed, becoming the cultural centre of the entire Triskethian area. The TECHNARCANE innovations continued, and in 1908 RM soulstones were used in archaic technarcane engines for the first time, creating clean electricity that could power a city for years. Elizia grew in power after this, and by c. 2200 RM it was boasting a population of 500,000.

But this was to be the height of its influence, for centuries of foreign predation in the form of CRUSADES and wars brought by KORACHAN and PARTHIS, saw it diminish. Already ailing through the drying of nearby rivers and the retreat of the coastline, it was blockaded in 2752 RM, leading to massed starvation.

The city never recovered from this and as the coastline continued to retreat, leaving Elizia miles from the coast, it found its industries leaving, and with them, its people. It continued to decline for many years, though its many empty manufactories and industrial buildings began to attract vagrants, criminals and the destitute, particularly amid the chaos that followed the collapse of the government in 2852 RM. It was razed in c. 3100 RM following the establishment of a new coalition government in the region, and little remains of it today, and its storied past has been forgotten by most.

ELKALL: Set. Small city in the west of ZHARIAH⁽²⁾, in the foothills of the SHAROOK Highlands (Pop. c. 14,000).

ELLALN: Set. City in the far west of THE OLD FOREST. It is known to trade with the city of TASSAH in the east of BASSORAH^(2.) (Pop. c. 32,000).

ELLAN: 1. Pol. Duchy of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of CARIA⁽⁴⁾, named after the ruin of an ancient castle there that is thought to be one of its oldest.

2. Rui. A ruined castle in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of CARIA⁽⁴⁾, thought to be one of the region's oldest.

ELLAN KINGDOMS, the: His. Pol. Ancient coalition of people that rose in the first millennium of the FIFTH AGE in the east of SAMMAEA, in what is today GIBEAH and the north east of CHEIRA. The Ellan Kingdoms gave way to the empire of UALLA MIGHA in c. 1100 RM following their conglomeration over the previous two centuries.

ELLERIA: Set. Small coastal city in the north of ZHARIAH^(2.) (Pop. c.).

ELLORA: His. Pol. Ancient FOURTH AGE human culture in the present-day southern JURRAS⁽²⁾, KHURAUR and the north of KARAKHAS, known for its rock cut temples. It is believed that they had links with KERATIN.

ELLORAN: His. Lan. Now-extinct HUMAN language of the FOURTH AGE ELLORAN culture. Some etymologies of present-day KARAKASHI words can be traced to Elloran, though the language is closer to KARTHANIAN. See Vol II: Languages.

ELLDA: Set. City perched atop a waterfall at the confluence of the rivers I'HATAT and NASAT in the region of GELHANA in the c north east of I'THANA. Historically, it traded salt with SIRIPHAS, and was the site of fighting in 3281 – 3289 RM as J'thana broke away from SIRIPHAGOS. It is now known for its art and ancient salt mines, and it forms part of the present-day SALT ROAD (Pop. c. 41,000).

ELLDAN FIELDS: Geo. Plains in the north west of SIRIPHAGOS.

ELLEH: Set. Settlement in the south west of PNESSA. Its main industry is iron mining (Pop. c. 8,000).

ELLIA: 1. Lak. Endorheic lake in the south of LYRIDIA DHAI, fed by seasonal rivers that flow from the hills west of the ETTHI Mountains. When the river stops flowing the lake shrinks to a fraction of its normal size and becomes concentrated with salt – the salt is a remnant from when sea levels were higher and the lake as in fact part of the STRAIT OF NÁRTHEL.

2. Set. City in the south of LYRIDIA DHAI, built around the abandoned structures of a spent open-cast iron mine that lies outside its borders. Its people search for iron scraps found in the remnants of the mine and sell what they can to passing merchants travelling along the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 16,000).

ELLIADHA: Geo. Name of mid-level plains and sparse boreal forests dominating the c of KASPIA.

ELLIADHAN LEAGUE: Pol. Org. Name of the political alliance of various states over which the state of $\underline{\text{KASPIA}}$ is dominant. Its name is derived from the $\underline{\text{ELLIADHAN}}$ plains.

ELLOILLENITHA: Geo. Monolithic karst pinnacle formation in the south east of KASPIA in the northern face of the ALCAAN Mountains. The feature is treacherous and filled with jagged edges.

ELLSALEN: 1. Sea. Now-dry sea that once dominated the south east of HABOT, in the AMMASHI⁽¹⁾ peninsula. The sea rapidly was bordered by the mainland to the west and north and the TEITIAN island chain to the south. It dried out between 3200 – 3400 RM, leaving it a shallow dry basin of the same name⁽²⁾. the sea's drying led to many settlements being abandoned and relocated.

2. Sea. Small bay in the far south east of HABOT, which is all that remains of the earlier Sea of Ellsalen⁽¹⁾, following its wane throughout the 4^{th} millennium RM.

3. Geo. Shallow basin dominating the south east of HABOT, in the AMMASHI^(1.) peninsula. Until c. 3200 RM the entire region was a beauteous shallow sea, stretching 250-miles west and 75-miles north of the present coastline, though the next few hundred years saw a rapid diminishing of the sea level that left many coastal settlements landlocked and the giant coral reef of VAIAURA, by then bleached and lifeless, exposed to the elements. The region surrounding the sea was once prosperous, with hundreds of fishing communities and larger ports between them, most of which were later abandoned.

ELLUESH: Geo. Basin in the north of KHULL, forming a valley through which flows the river UPINIS. It is bordered in the west by the coastal highlands of DRITT, to the east by the ILLAIT ridge, and to the south by the ZIMITRA. The region is covered in shrubs and sparse scrubland.

ELLUNUR PARADOX, the: Int. Phil. Physical law first postulated and later introduced by the mystic and physicist Erakh Ellunur of UPPER ALMAGEST in c. 2630 RM. In its simplest form, the law states the following: to live twice as long one must live half as much. What this means is that despite the myriad of options open to those dedicated or desperate enough to PROLONG their lives (through whichever means are available — FIRMAMENTAL, ATRAMENTAL, TECHNARCANE, esoteric, etc.), that which is gained must be paid for, through vigour, life-force, or essence. Essentially, in order to stretch a MORTAL (not necessarily a HUMAN, though most research was conducted with humans) life to twice its normal span (an arbitrary amount, though necessary for the example), one's spirit must also be stretched to inhabit that full span, essentially halving one's vigour. The longer the life is extended, the hollower that existence becomes as ones' vigour is stretched to fill the unnatural span of time.

Though still a hypothesis, there has been enough research on the subject to cause many scholars to agree – most known and stable methods that are proven to extend life (regardless of ethical laws) tend to result in the subject becoming weaker, at odds with the world of the living and the OTHERWORLD.

The timeless KORACHANI saying: 'Those who can't live long live broad. Those who don't live broad live long' is thought by many to support this hypothesis.

ELMEHIEK: Sca. Bay in the south east of SOUTHERN SAMMAEA, to the south of the SEA OF KRIHIEK.

ELMIAD: Ind. Set. Major manufactory city in the c north west of VALBAR⁽²⁾. It is the capital of the state of, and is also home to LUCAENUS MANUFACTURING. It is a major producer of FIREARMS and ammunition, most of which are exported far east across the SEA OF POLARIS, with PERGOST, THANO, and CEHOPHELA, amongst others. They city is dominated by a large lighthouse that provides artificial illumination in the long dark winter months (Pop. c. 29,400).

ELNAH: Set. City in the south of IPANAH⁽²⁾, in the c of CENTRAL LLACHATUL. It has a thriving mercantile culture, and has links with LAASKHA (Pop. c. 36,400).

ELNATH: Soc. Pol. PATRICIAN HOUSE with major trade operations across the INNER SEA. It has also been the ruling house of the microstate of ACHERA since 3043 RM after being granted the charter to maintain its citadel and caravanserai. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

ELOEVREN: f. His. Pol. Per. (B. 2552 – D. 2612 RM) a maiden of GLYNNED⁽²⁾ who was married to the warlord TORRVAN in 2572 RM to unite the region, propagating his further campaigns south that led to the conquests of ENAELLON⁽²⁾ in 2585 RM and MOTTANIA⁽²⁾ in 2588 RM, after which he united them under the name of LOEGRESS⁽¹⁾ later that year.

As part of the unification of the three states Torrvan took queen ARDFAEN of Mottania as his bride, further cementing his claim on the region, and locked up Eloevren until her death in 2612 RM after which he reformed the constitution, making him king of Loegress.

Today her memory has faded, and she is only remembered in scholarly circles where historians and genealogists discuss her minor role in the region's history.

ELORES: Set. Settlement in the c of the tribe of LINARIS, in the south of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. It is a major source of food for the region (Pop. c. 4,000).

ELOTRAUSH: 1. Sup. Geo. FIRMAMENTALLY-ACTIVE region in the north west of ANUBIA, close to the border with SARASTRO. Its terrain is unstable, the sky above it white and nauseating, the sun bleaching everything beneath its gaze. The earth here is cracked, with gigantic LODELITH boulders breaking free of their earthy prison, trying to float away. Many of them do, but the largest of the lodeliths are chained together, and have been since the earliest explorers have set sights on the place. Atop some of the lodeliths stand the ruins of an ancient city, broken domes and arches standing forlornly, made brittle by the FIR.

2. Also 'the Floating City'. Rui. Ancient ruined city in the above region perched atop a series of LODELITHS considered to be the centre of Elotarush. The true origins of the ruin are unknown, including its true name, and it is unknown if the city predated the appearance of the FIRMAMENTAL-TAINT or if it was intentionally constructed on the lodeliths there.

ELOTTUAKEI: Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED lands along the coast of north eastern BA'AKH, reaching as far as 20-miles into the GULF OF DAARKEN. The land was once exploited by the KORACHANI EMPIRE for its natural gaseous UMBRA reserves, though these largely dried up by c. 2650 RM, before the region was handed to the DOMNITORS.

Since then, the manufactories and pipelines have been allowed to decay, though the land itself remains mildly Atramentally Tainted. Much of the region is dominated by wetlands fed from various seasonal rivers that bring water to lowlands close to the coat. In early spring as the waters start to dry parts of the region explode into flame as trapped gasses catch fire. The ground here is unstable and prone to collapse, with sinkholes filled with noxious fumes being relatively common.

ELPHRII: Set. Small city in the north east of PNESSA (Pop. c. 14,000).

ELRATH: Rvr. 250-mile-long river in the HENDECARCHIES of HATON and AONIA in MALAN, flowing north from sources in the EGLAENT Mountains into lake SEHUTH.

ELRI: Sea. Large gulf in the north of MALAN, dividing the HENDECARCHIES of HATON in the west from NHORA in the east. It is around 840-miles long (N – S) and 225-miles wide at its widest point (W – E), and is fed by dozens of river systems, the largest being the VLARA, and METIGLEA, as well as early summer snowmelt from the surrounding highlands and glaciers in the $\underline{\text{THARORAT}}$ Mountains, and empties into the west of the SEA OF IALCUS.

The gulf is warmer than its latitude and shape would suggest, a trait likely attributed to the ARCANE TEMPERS and the presence of FIRMAMENTAL LEYS in the region that influence the climate.

ELRII: Sct. Coastal settlement in the south west of PNESSA, overlooking the SEA OF STYGAS. Its main industry is fishing (Pop. c. 3,800).

ELSALEN: Pol. Geo. One of the nine kingdoms of ELALLIA, located in the north of the nation.

ELSYIA: 1. Set. City in the east of KOMMEA, along the course of the river GLAESWEN in the landward side of the HOLLOW COASTLINE. It is the ancestral home of the Elsyian kings, who formed the 3rd ruling house of the KOMMEAN DYNASTIES. The Elssian kings ruled for around 160-years from 3654 to 3822 RM, during which time they moved the capital to Elsyia, building a large palace there. The Elsyian kings were replaced by Cerynian Dynasty, who moved the capital back to HOLLAMEA, but Elsyia remained a centre of culture in Kommea, and is home to many auditoriums and theatres to this day (Pop. c. 83,000).

2. Mil. Pol. Str. Ancestral fortress-palace of house Cerynian in Kommea, and during the time of the Cerynian Dynasty, home to the royal family and centre of their court.

ELSYIAN KINGS: see KOMMEAN DYNASTIES.

ELTA: Set. City in the east of TAMAR, overlooking the STRAIT OF BEREK (Pop. c. 15,500).

ELTANAIA: Set. City and surrounding mining-settlements in the c of NAARETH. Its main industry is the mining of gold, which is done by male slaves (Pop. c. 8,000).

ELTENNASH: see ARTAGNES.

ELTHA TURAH: Geo. western-most desert of TURCAR, east of the ARGENT Mountains.

ELKURIAN: also 'the Voice in the Deep'. m. Myt. His. Per. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, a 2nd generation SCION born to the scion ENNEI, grandson of the DEMIURGE SHIBBOLETH^(1.) and fathered by the 7th SEEDBORN MERILL.

Elkurian was depicted as a figure of great wisdom, inheriting his father's generic memories, with a deep connection to the oceans and the mysteries the deep. He lived throughout the $\underline{\text{SECOND}}$ and $\underline{\text{THIRD AGES}}$ and the $\underline{\text{MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN}}$ speaks of him as a weaver of tales and an ally to many scionic adventurers and sojourners. He travelled with the 3^{rd} generation scion $\underline{\text{SALLAHUADDIN}}$ for many decades and their exploits are recorded in his memoirs, (name of memoirs).*

His ultimate fate remains unknown, though his last mention in the Mythologia speaks of him as babbling like a fool, alone and homeless. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

ELVION: Set. City in the c south west of VALBAR⁽²⁾. It is an industrial centre, and is known for its manufactories and POWDERGUN production. The city is built around a geothermal plant that redistributes heat from deep geothermal vents that also power its manufactories (Pop. c. 32,000).

ELYDEN: Ast. The third of seven known PLANETS orbiting the star SOR. Its mean orbital distance from Sor is 92,000,000-miles and has a mean diameter of 12,046 miles.

It is the third of the $\underline{\text{INNER PLANETS}}$ and has an atmosphere capable of supporting life and has $\underline{\text{LACUNAE}}$ through which both the $\underline{\text{ATRAMENTA}}$ and $\underline{\text{FIRMAMENT}}$ reach the $\underline{\text{MATERIAL PLANE}}$. It has two moons – $\underline{\text{SIELLA}}$, and $\underline{\text{ARAKHAMÉ}}$.

It is the only planet on which life is known to exist (though some legendary FARSEERS claim to have seen cities and civilisations on other planets). We are currently in the FIFTH AGE of Elyden, and previous ages were marked by the works of the DEMIURGES and their offspring the SCIONS, and the various MORTAL PEOPLES, of which only HUMANS remain in considerable numbers today. See Vol II: Planets and Satellites.

ELYDIA: Set. Settlement in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of MEDES^(1.), in the peninsula of ORRIAH^(1.). Its main industry is the manufacture of ROTWINE (Pop. c. 6,200).

ELYDEN; AN ITINERANT'S GUIDE: Vol. Soc. A travelogue written by PRURIAS THE BEHOLDER during his travels of ELYDEN.

- ELYRIA: 1. Rvr. River in the east of TAMAR, flowing east from the MESATAR highlands. The river flows around 85-miles, before emptying in the STRAIT OF BEREK, in the SEA OF URAN.
 - 2. Set. Major city in the east of $\underline{\text{TAMAR}}$ known for its saffron production (Pop. c. 414,500).
 - 3. Soc. Pol. Old Patrician House from the north east of the Inner Sea that in c. 250 RM founded a colony in the lands of Thamar, becoming an influential noble family. It served there under the rule of the Cazhan and was secretly an influence on the dissent that would lead to the Cazhans betrayal and overthrowing in 843 RM after which Elyria would later become rulers in 354 RM, becoming known as the Elyrian Dynasty⁽⁴⁾.

The House still maintains a presence in the east of the Inner Sea, particularly in Vârr and the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

4. Pol. Ruling dynasty of TAMAR from 1354 – 3760 RM, then Tamar was annexed by SARASTRO. Though they rule to this day, they are subservient to the whims of Sarastro and SATHEP THE RISEN, though many believe that they retain affiliations with the KORACHANI EMPIRE, secretly feeding it Sarastroan secrets.

ELYTRAN BEETLE: Fau. Giant beetles common to the CAMBAR forest and other tropical regions of WESTERN SAMMAEA, in particular the north of CARNYNGA. These beetles are named after the hardened wing cases on their backs that provide them with a tough exterior. They can grow between 2 and 3-ft. long and their carapaces are beige, while their outer elytra (wing cases) are brightly patterned with blood-red and black designs, individual to each beetle.

Elytran beetles are hunted in some places, not only for sport and game, but also for their hides, which were commonly converted into tough shields, but which were sometimes also crafted into intricate suits of tough armour. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

ELZABHAL: Set. Major city in the c west of ZHARIAH^(2.). It is the largest city in the eastern foothills of the SHAROOK Highlands, and serves as a link between the less populated north west and the more populous east if the nation. In this capacity it has a large caravanserai and many hostels where travellers can stop (Pop. c. 182,000).

EMAAR: Set. Major coastal city in the east of KAZZAR⁽²⁾ overlooking the SEA OF ESCHATA (Pop. c. 88,000).

EMAHOM: 1. Lak. Lake in the far south of AETHIOS, forming the confluence of the river APENATI with its parent, the river RASELETH, in the arid plains of AROMUR.

2. (D. 2987 RM) Pol. Ruler and explorer of ancient AETHIOS, who lives on in the memories of the Aethiosi as an explorer who navigated the river RASELETH to its source in the UGOSTAUTH Mountains dying there in 2987 RM.

EMANAS: Rel. Str. Monastery in the east of GNOTH, located to the south of the FIR. region of AGASTIA. Its monks are known for their studies in ASTRAL PROJECTION and psychic emanations. The monastery is one of the seven MONASTERIES OF THOUGHT.

EMARAD: 1. Geo. Island off the south western coast of CARNYNGA.
2. Set. City on the above island^(L) (Pop. c. 33,600).

EMAS: Set. City in the c of the tribe of ALLAKAT, in the c of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 24,000).

EMATAK: Set. Settlement 4-miles south of the capital city of LIRAET in the south of TARTAK. The settlement, like many others in the region, is a satellite of Liraet and is a supplier of much of its food (Pop. c. 4,000).

EMBALMING: Soc. Practice in which the remains of deceased mortals are preserved through chemical or arcane methods. Different cultures have different practices with regards to embalming:

- Once a common funerary custom across the ARID TRIPTYCH, practiced to varying degrees amongst all strata of class. Today it is the reserve of the rich, as bodies of most dead are processed into DROSS.
- It remains common in Parthis, where family matriarchs and patriarchs are embalmed and displayed in family crypts behind glass walls.

EMBER: Set. Metropolis in VAALK, situated on the south east coast of the SEA OF AZAM, along the course of the river RAANA. It was abandoned in 19 RM during the KORACHANI siege of VALKA and was left to rot until c. 390 RM, when it began to be used as a prison for asylum seekers and prisoners of war, and a settlement slowly appeared around the prison over the ensuing years.

The prison was attacked by SARASTROAN forces during the WAR OF THE SUNDERING in 3705 RM and its prisoners were freed, most of them settling in the surrounding lands. The city continued growing, with shanties dominating the area for miles around, turning it into one of the largest and most influential cities in not only Vaalk but also the REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO (Pop. c. 1,700,000).

EMBER CHILDREN: Leg. His. Legend in the city of UCUET in the c of KOMMEA that emerged following the deaths of dozens of people, many of them children, following the spread of an industrial fire in one of its manufactories in 3892 RM.

Following the fire, rumours began to spread of soot-covered children roaming dark ad forgotten places of the city. These ghostly figures are said to glow like embers in the dark and follow people, their ember-like glow intensifying until they suddenly disappear. Some claim the children are seeking vengeance for their untimely deaths, while others believe they are trying to warn workers of future disaster. Those who encounter them often fall into strange trances or suffer hallucinations of being trapped in burning buildings.

Though dismissed by the authorities, some, including ANIMISTS and SHAPERS, claim that the city lies close to the otherworld, and that it is likely that the Ember Children are indeed spirits of the dead.

EMBRACE OF KATHISIS: see KATHISIS, EMBRACE OF.

EMEHEK: Lk. Lake in the c of AETHIOS, along the course of the river NARRATI. It is named after an ancient king of ETHAND.

EMEK: Set. Major coastal city in the south east of IMELKOT (Pop. c. 100.000).

EMEK TA': Set. Capital city of KHULL, in the north of SAMMAEA since 2138 RM following the rise to power of the SORCERER-KINGS⁽³⁾. It remained the capital with the rise of the KHULLAN INQUISITION and their creation of the ETERNAL ASSEMBLY in 2853 RM (Pop. c. 380,000).

EMEL SUMI: Rvr. River in the west of THE SURRACH, flowing south east for 475-miles from various sources in the western BAKHRAN Mountains before meeting with lake KAL ADHI.

EMEMETH JACEN: (D. 3246 RM) Rel. Schismatic endocrine who in c. 3240 RM gained many followers due to his divergent beliefs. Following the EDICT OF KHADON in 3243 RM he was excommunicated and exiled to AZAZEM. He settled in the town of OZEL in the north east of AZAZEM, where he gained many followers, who became known as JACITES.

His teachings spread across the north of Azazem and south east SKAROS and he was killed in 3246 RM following a purge of his followers in the previous months.

EMEN: Set. Coastal settlement in the c south of GNOTH, overlooking the SEA OF COSSYRA (Pop. c. 1,200).

EMEN SUBHALA: Set. City in the c south of PORPHYR, along the main national trade-route. It is known for its large hostels and manufactories (Pop. c. 43,000).

EMEND: Set. City in the c-south east of SABAISA. It is a centre of metallurgy (Pop. c. 48,000).

EMENGHA: Geo. Dry stony region in the west of the BARRIER LANDS.

EMENHORHIR: Geo. Region of badlands in the east of ELAT.

EMENRIST: Dem. 'Emenrist'. Ntm. Insular nation in the south east of BROR(1.). It is landlocked, though is known for its many rivers, and its northern-most territories are dominated by highlands, cliffs and waterfalls. The nation is incredibly isolationist and has refused contact with surrounding nations since c. 3200 RM, after which it has only become increasingly hostile to outsiders of any description. This was thought to have been in response to the inexorable advance of the BARBARIAN STATES in c. 3100 RM. It is ruled by a caste of shaper-priests, known as the MASHMATTIN, who use their powers to mimic miracles with which they have duped their ignorant populace into thinking they are demigods.

It is in control of the only known major pass across the central LAHAED Mountains, which was once a highway to traffic and trade, but which today has been sealed by a mighty wall and fortress, and which is heavily guarded against intruders. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

- EMERASH: Set. Settlement in the west of TZALLRACH, in the region of KARISSINA (Pop. c. 5,750). *
- EMERATIA: 1. For. Wooded region dominating the north east of the SAGITTARIAN^(1.) headland, across the north east of Sagittaria^(2.) and the north of ALTHA^(2.).
 - 2. His. Ntn. Loose coalition of pastoral city-states that occupied the north of the SAGITTARIAN^(I.) headland in the early FIFTH AGE. ITS PEOPLE were displaced by KORACHANI exiles who fled there in c. 15 RM, with some settlements willingly subjugating themselves to the militaristic immigrants, though others opposed this displacement, fighting back, eventually falling.
 - By c. 50 RM the region had become known as Sagittaria and its people SAGITTARIANS, and the name Emeratia fell out of common usage, though as still used to describe a small region in the north of Sagittaria.
- EMERATIANS: early FIFTH AGE native people of what are now the north of SAGITTARIA⁽²⁾ and ALTHA⁽²⁾. They were absorbed by immigrant KORACHANI exiles fleeing their HOMELAND in c. 15. By 50 RM most Emeratian lands had been taken by the immigrants, who had begun calling the region Sagittaria.

Within a century of this, the Emeratians had largely mixed with the Korachani immigrants and the term fell from common usage, though a few areas, particularly in the north east of present-day Altha, became refuges to the Emeratians, very few of which remain to this day.

- EMERET: Set. Settlement in the region of FURAKISH in the south east of KHARKHARADONTIS.
- EMERUN: Set. Settlement in the south west of VAALK. Its main industry is agriculture, growing food and spices, which are sold to merchants passing through it while travelling along the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 5,100).
- EMESH: Set. Agricultural conurbation in the north west of CHTHYRID that provides much of the food for the c of the small nation. This vast agricultural area is considered by Chthyridi strategists of being the most susceptible to enemy attack (indeed, it was the site of much fighting during the NINETY-NINE YEAR WAR), and it is now heavily fortified and militarised. Troops stationed here stand ever-vigilant against enemy threat (Pop. c. 40,000).
- EMESIS: Set. Small fishing village in the east of PELASGOS, with most of its produce going to TEREKON (Pop. c. 1,900).
- EMESSA: Set. City the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOMS, located between the kingdoms of CARIA (4.) and MEDES. The city is a relic of an older time and its star forts and coastal batteries were once the height of military defence and today continue to guard the entrance into its harbours, which are busy with trade from the GREAT ROAD (Pop. c. 9,000).
- EMI BEN: Ind. Sup. Fortified UMBRA extraction facility in the south east of SARASTRO, forming the farthest part of the ARGEAN PIPELINE.
- EMIR: 1. Pol. Ruler of a system of government that is known as an EMIRATE.
 - 2. Pol. Rnk. Ruling caste that supplanted the SAOSHYANTS in SARASTRO following its conversion to imperial culture. Their UMBRAPHAGY was pronounced and it altered their bodies and minds over many successive generations, making them more malleable to the needs of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, to whom they became puppets.
 - 3. Set. City in the north west of ADHERA. It is built on the old capital of the ancient empire of RAMIS (Pop. c. 80,000).
 - 4. Pol. Rnk. Ruling title of each of the five federal emirates of LIMOTH^(1.). Together the five Emirs form an electoral college, from which the nations' SUPREME LEADER is elected.
- EMIRATE: 1. Pol. In SARASTRO, the ruling government under the reign of the KORACHANI EMPIRE. It emerged in c. 500 RM, replacing the previous ruling caste, known as the SAOSHYANTS, and became powerful with settling there of imperial PATRICIANS following its subjugation of the region in 339 RM.
 - 2. Pol. System of government in $\underline{\text{LIMOTH}}^{(1)}$, which is divided into five emirates ($\underline{\text{DEITHO}}^{(1)}$, $\underline{\text{LIMOTH}}^{(2)}$, $\underline{\text{NIMALO}}^{(1)}$, $\underline{\text{OTHOTEL}}^{(1)}$ and $\underline{\text{UKOLIST}}$).
- EMIRIL: Sca. Bay in the far east of AMMESH, in the south of the AMMASHI^(1.) peninsula. It forms a part of the SEA OF AMMASH^(2.). *

- EMITHES: Set. fortified coastal city in the north of MHAROKK, overlooking the BAY OF SEDEA (Pop. c. 45,000). *
- EMIUN: Set. City located in the far west of the AEONAN Peninsula, forming a part of the ISLAND STATES OF IRY. It is one of few major cities in Iry to be situated on the mainland (Pop. c. 32,000).
- EMMACYI: Com. Set. City in the c south west of METHUMN, along the course of the river SAPPARANTI. It is a major mercantile centre that is known for its cosmopolitan atmosphere, uniting various routes and passages, and is known for its cosmopolitan atmosphere. It is famed for its great riverside marketplace, which is a hub of commerce where goods from across Methumn and beyond are sold. The marketplace is a maze of stalls and tents, offering everything from exotic spices to intricate textiles and rare minerals.

Despite its relatively small size compared with other larger cities, the mix of travellers and merchants from across Methumn have made it a hub of culture and economy (Pop. c. 48,000).

- EMMAFAIA: Pol. Set. City and capital of the AMMASHI FREE-ISLES, located in the north east of the nation, on the mainland of the far south eastern AMMASHI^(1.) peninsula. It is known for its great marble hall in which convenes the coalition council, and its walls are lined with historical artefacts and trophies from the various territories of the Freeisles (Pop. c. 330,000).
- EMMANDA: Ser. Settlement in the north east of HABOT, along the course of the river VAIAUANTI in the VAIAMMESHI valley. It is a link between the major northern city of KOBESH, and the URAKARA in the south (Pop. c. 13,000).
- EMMEN: Geo. Frozen plains in the far north of WESTERN THANO, made up largely of permafrost.
- EMMERANNE EFFIGY: Sup. Arc. Colossal statue on the eastern edge of the ABYSM OF BARATHRUM in the south west of the PRISON CARCERI. The statue itself is made of oxidised metal and dark dull skin. It weeps a thick oil-like substance that pours down the abysm in a recking torrent.
- EMMESH: Set. Coastal settlement in the far west of TAAN AN, overlooking the SAKEN ITRUSH (Pop. c. 5,000).
- EMMEUR: Set. Small coastal city in the south of KEPHUAAN, to the far east of the BAY OF LEPHAINA (Pop. c. 15,000). *
- EMMIGHI: Geo. Major mountain chain running for over 400-miles northsouth in the c of HABOT, in the AMMASHI^(1.) peninsula in south western SAMMAEA. It divides the nation in two, and the only major crossings are in its southernmost expanse, close to IKRARA.
- EMMIM: Geo. Island in the MAUSAMMAR archipelago in the far west of METHMUN, in the AMMASHI^(1.) peninsula in the south west of SAMMAEA.
- EMMIMA: Rel. Geo. Mountain in the north west of NORTHERN SIMBARA that is held as sacred by the LAZANIST religion. The prophet LAZAN is said to have ascended the mountain alone and meditation there for 49 days before returning to ENNERA, with divine insight.

Since then, the mountain has been considered sacred and MORTALS cannot step foot on it. An order of Lazanist warrior-monks now patrol its foothills, preventing people from trespassing and chasing down anyone who has managed to evade their attention. These heretics are mercilessly hunted down and brought back to church officials to be punished.

- EMMIRA: Soc. Pol. Now-extinct PATRICIAN HOUSE based in the west of LAASKHA. It fell on hard times in 3680 RM and its main stronghold, citadel ALSAAR, was abandoned as a result.
- EMMIROS ENOS ANTARRA: (B. 3928) Pol. Current ruler and autocrat of CANNOS. Despite his age he remains a physically active and is of a strong character, enjoying the support of most of his populace.
- EMMON: Geo. Island 225-miles off the south western coast of CUTH, belonging to KREM.
- EMMURAE: Set. City in the north west of KASPIA, in the wetlands of TAGHAIRM. It is located close to the ANGELS' LAKE and is a major religious city in Kaspia (Pop. c. 39,000).
- EMOLIS: Set. Settlement in the south of OPHIUSSA, on the fertile XEIA delta of the river MARAGA. Its main industry is agriculture, and the growing of legumes (Pop. c. 6,000).

EMON KARYN: Hi. Ntn. Historical state in the south west of WESTERN SAMMAEA and a predecessor state of extant CARNYNGA. See Vol III: Extinct Nations.

EMPAR: Cur. Currency of the CHILD'S REALM OF OPHAR. It is relatively weak and has little value outside its native territories. See Vol II: Currency and Coinage in Elyden.

EMPEROR: Pol. Rnk. A sovereign ruler of an empire. The title could be dictatorial, with the bearer wielding absolute power, or it may be ceremonial, forming a part of a parliamentary monarchy, with true power resting within elected officials.

Specific examples include:

1. The imperial monarchy was established in TAAN AN in 3633 RM after the signing of the AMMASHI TREATY decades earlier brought stability to the region after a millennium of conflict. Where many emperors are regarded as divinely ordained, the Emperors of Taan An were painted in a far less esoteric light by the machinations of the ISHINAL CULTS (SHAPING mystery cults), who wanted to be the sole wielders of supranatural powers in Taan An, where the Emperor is forbidden from being a shaper.

The present Emperor is EMPEROR ZHAGALONGA.

EMPEROR-FACTOTUM: Pol. Soc. Rnk. The ruling title of RAONGEN⁽²⁾ since c. 2800 RM when king INVIS IAFENG reformed the entire feudal system, replacing the title of king with that of Emperor-Factotum, and the nine FIEFLORDS with seven FACTOTUMS⁽²⁾.

The title remains in use today, though the position has been elected rather than hereditary since 3307 RM, following the death of Emperor-Factotum ASHAI LIIII, which left no heirs or eligible relatives to claim the throne so, to avoid a civil war the seven Factotums of Raongen decided to elect a member from within their ranks to become the Emperor-Factotum, with the winning candidate bequeathing their title of Factotum to the next in line, in accordance with their INDUSTRY'S traditions

EMPEROR LIOR: Pol. Ruler of KNAESS, who resides over a plutocratic council. The name is a hereditary eponym, inherited by all those who assume the leadership of Knaess and is thought to go back to at least c. 3250 RM.

EMPEROR ZHAGALONGA: m. Pol. Per. (B. 3916 RM) Present emperor of TAAN AN, who ascended the throne following his mother's premature death in 3931 RM. He was beloved as a child, and was known as the child-emperor, and he grew into an honourable man whose public perception has remained strong despite his increasing faulty and reliance on artificial means to remain alive.

His great grandfather was assassinated by unidentified foreigners in 3889 RM, which led to the nation and in particular the capital CUR APON becoming insular and less open to foreigners, which remains the case to this day.

EMPHYRRIC: Dru. Pervasive drug common to most urban areas around NORTHERN SAMMAEA, most of c LLACHATUL, and some parts of MENISCEA. Empyrric takes the form of a powder derived from various sources, commonly FIRMAMENTALLY-touched ores, SOUL STONES and the remains of ancient mortals who died soulless.

Its primary cause for consumption is as a hallucinogenic and euphoric, though it has also been used as a means to induce out-of-body experiences. Its most noted possible side-effect is of inducing comas as a direct result of the spirit being fully shorn from the vessel and being unable to return once the effects wear off.

Its use is outlawed in most civilised societies. In KORACHAN the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE played a vital role in suppressing its use (though some high-ranking members have been known to use the drug in a bid to bring them closer to their deity).

Despite this, some cults devoted to pushing its effects to the limit have appeared in some urban areas, earning some degree of notoriety. See Vol II: Drugs and Addictions.

EMPIRE: Int. Vol. Literary work collected into seven large volumes penned by the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR following his rebirth as an otherworlder, between 339 RM and 422 RM and first published in 882 RM, during a period when he had withdrawn from public life, against his knowledge. The work was culled from all imperial territories in 918 RM following his learning of its existence, but unofficial copies remain in existence across ELYDEN. Its ownership is considered a crime in KORACHAN, punishable by death.

It is a collection of musings, anecdotes, religious writings, and other ephemera, and also serves as a comprehensive and meticulous historical treatise of the Korachani empire and a biography of the first centuries of his rule over it. It is noted for its candour, and the revelation of certain events and matters that The Seven do not want to be made public, hence the censorship of the book and the persecution of those found to be in possession of even so much as a single page of the vast work.

Despite its sensitive nature, it has been studied by various PATRICIANS and historians over the ensuing millennia, though the accuracy of the various facsimile editions and reproductions are now disputed in scholarly circles, with its original contents now only guessed at.

EMPIRE WITHOUT, the: Soc. Lan. Common term within the SOCIALIST REPUBLIC OF ALMAGEST, for the HIGH-EMPIRE OF KORACHAN, referring to its presence outside the influence of Almagest itself.

EMPRESS LEAHRIT: His. Pol. Ruler of the VENATHI EMPIRE who in c. - 100 RM ordered the construction of several sandstone colossi in the c east of VENTHIR that became known as the THRONE OF THE GODS in later ages.

EMPTY CITY, the: see URHAGNATT.

EMPTY PALACE, the: Rui Abandoned fortified palace in the c east of THE SURRACH. It was abandoned in c. 3200 RM and is thought to date back to the days of the nation of AHINA. Despite its age of almost a millennium, it is in very good condition and has not been repopulated due to the small, if extreme, ATRAMENTAL TAINT that surrounds it, rendering any life within a 100-ft. radius of the palace impossible. Attempts to explore the palace in 3820 RM failed despite the use of hardsuits – over half of the 12-man party died within days of entering the region and the rest died on their way back to civilisation. It is shunned and thought to be cursed by most.

EMPTY THRONE, REIGN OF THE: Pol. His. Historical period within the KORACHANI EMPIRE, covering the years between the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR'S period of absence (known as his ITINERARY) following his in KHARKHARADONTIS. Before his departure to lead the imperial armies against NARTHEL in 82 RM, Malichar left a powerful Set known as RUGGORATH as caretaker of the Throne, and following Malichar's disappearance in 84 RM after successfully subjugating Nárthel, he became interim ruler, but his rule was largely spent on campaign in the field, and most matters of leadership fell upon THE SEVEN, who were assembled by the CONSULITE in direct response to Malichar's disappearance.

The time was characterised by chaos within the empire. Lords and PATRICIANS vied for the empty throne, with their actions ultimately culminating in THE THRONE WARS. The CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE (then still known as the CHURCH OF THE IRON DEITY) struggling to maintain followers as they lost faith in the church. It is only through the agents and supporters of the Archpotentate Malichar, such as the THRONE WARDERS, that the Throne remained free of occupation until Malichar's return in 339 RM.

EMPURIA: Arc. Fortress in the north of KULIGALA, built on the narrow isthmus that was revealed between the mainland and the island of ARALAN⁽¹⁾ through the waning of ELYDEN'S seas. A lock has also been constructed on the fort to allow vessels to cross the isthmus.

EMPUSA: 1. Also 'the Red River'. Rvr. River flowing north for 700-miles through THE SURRACH, from lake KAL ADHI, before emptying into the SEA OF ERET⁽¹⁾. The river is sometimes known as the Red River, after the blood of the soldiers killed in its waters.

2. Set. Main city in the region of IAZKIA in the north of THE SURRACH, along the course of the eponymous river. The city is today a centre of arable farming surrounding the river, though was once a great city and major power in the now-extinct empire of CHEGRINT. It was in the streets of Empusa, c. 4,000 years ago where the armies of POTENTATE HAABHUS defeated the last resisting forces of the PAUPER KINGS, forcing them across the river.

Local legend claims that the pauper general was so in love with the great enclosed bridge that spans the river Empusa that he instructed his troops to leave it standing, alone amongst all the bridges of the city. It was because of this his army was caught and drowned in the river. The general was captured and executed by hanging from a balcony on the same bridge. (Pop. c. 190,000).

EMPYREAL DEITY, the: Set. Dei. The unknowable deity of SHURANISM who is represented on the MATERIAL PLANE by the monarch of ELEKHID, who is considered its mortal embodiment and is worshipped as a living goddess. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

EMPYREAN, the: 1. Oth. The name given to the highest circle of the OTHERWORLD, reserved only for the most righteous and moral of spirits. The OTHERWORLDERS that originate from this part of the otherworld are the most distant of their kind, and least understanding of the mortal condition.

2. Oth. Myt. Conversely, in the myth and legends of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, the Empyrean is the lowest part of the pit in DAEKYN that RACHANAEL, as the UNDYING MACHINE UMBÁVGHAR, was cast into by the Avatar SILLAMÉ.

3. Oth. Myt. In common KORACHANI legend, the Empyrean is the place evildoers go to when they die, to be punished for their sins.

The word is said to derive from an ancient word, Emyrae; which translates as 'in or on the place of fire'. This might explain dichotomous nature of the word's meaning.

EMPYREAN SPECTRE: also 'ethereal, astral spectre, sidereal phantasm, outsider, celestial wraith', amongst others. Ith. Fau. Little-known and mysterious inhabitants of the SEA OF CHAOS before the SHAPING of the DEMIURGES created the FIRMAMENT and ATRAMENTA. Timeless, formless and unknowable, they exist in parallel to and separate from the MATERIAL PLANE, and are only seen by accident or by those who somehow stumble upon them. They are utterly alien, and so difficult is it for the mortal mind to comprehend them that those looking upon them have been known to go insane, degenerating into babbling wrecks. See Vol IV: Supranatural Creatures.

EMPYREANS: see ECSTATICS, THE.

EMPYREALOGY: Oth. The study of the highest circle of the FIRMAMENT amongst the Firmamentists of EASTERN LLACHATUL, including TETHYSIA, THETIS and RHEA. This study focuses on the EMPYREAN, which is the highest circle of the otherworld; and the art of higher Firmamentism, which few SHAPERS master. Its secrets are closely-guarded and many members of the circle are reluctant to even proclaim their affiliations with Empyrealogy.

Empyrealogy originated in the ARRETOYAN city of IMMERIA between 900-1200~RM and spread across the east of Llachatul in the following centuries, becoming most common in Tethysia since then See Vol IV: Spheres and types of Shaping.

EMREZEN, TEMPLE OF: Rel. Str. Temple and repository of knowledge in the north west of VALA, in MENISCEA. It was home to a large collection of the writings of the explorer NINAVAND, until it was sacked and its contents largely destroyed.

EMRINI: Geo. Escarpment in the west of MAENMIST, to the south of the ESHTARES desert. It is home to various half-ruined towers and defensive lines, that were built by the MEHMUTHI culture between c. 2200 RM in response to incessant PHYRRAN slave raids from the north.

EMSUT ZHALCA: Geo. Expansive Mountain-range dominating the c reaches of SABAISA. Stretching for 1,000-miles from the STRAIT OF BIMARIA to the pass at DIASTEMA.

EMTRAE: Sct. Fortified settlement in the west of OKKHAM, along the RASURE COAST. It is a producer of the drug LETH (Pop. c. 10,000).

EMULKHIL DUCAS: see ARCHBISHOP MAGNUS EMULKHIL DUCAS.

EMURAT: Rui. Abandoned city in the region of DORUK, in the east of AZAZEM. As recent as 2100 RM it was a thriving city with a population of close to 28,000. Attempts were made to regenerate the region early in the 33rd century RM, resulting in the infamous DORUK CALAMITY that saw unprecedented flooding strike the east of Azazem, leaving hundreds of thousands dead and even more displaced by masse floods, which destroyed most of the remnants of the city.

Today it is buried beneath the grey sands of the Doruk, only the roofs of ancient barns and the tips of windmills visible as testament to the once fertile lands of the region.

EMUROS SAMUIL III: m. (B. 1911 – D. 2183 RM) Pol. Per. ARCHPATRICIAN and member of the COUNCIL OF SEVEN between 1961 – 2153 RM. He was responsible for the SAMUIL EDICT.

EMURRASA: Set. City in the south of SAUA, to the far west of THE MOSSAN (Pop. c. 42,000).

EMYCER: Set. Coastal city on the north west of the island of CAMARA in the east of the CORAL BARONIES, off the south western coast of SAMMAEA. It is a major naval centre of the Baronies, where a coalition of a few dozen different baronies base their navies, particularly in response to recent events with FALLAROUR (Pop. c. 37,000).

EN ADU: also 'College of En Adu'. Sup. Edu. Str. Firmamental college in the south east of VARU, where GEMINATES and others study the art.

EN ROHIR: Set. Settlement in the c north west of \underline{AYAD} (Pop. c. 5,750).

EN SAMHIR: Set. Major coastal city in the far north of ELAT (Pop. c. 160,500).

 $\underline{EN\ TEDDRA}$: Set. Coastal settlement on the island of \underline{GETE} in the south west of \underline{ELAT} (Pop. c. 8,000).

EN ZABAR: Set. city in the c of GYZHA (Pop. c. 48,000).

ENAATH: also 'Malissia'. His. Ancient city of the NATHI KINGDOM. The city appeared in c. -300 RM and served as a caravanserai, acting as a stopgap between Nath and the more distant TEIRA, growing slowly yet steadily in size and power over the next century. Following the fall of Nath in c. -170, its most powerful cities became islands of stability amid the chaos of conflict. In -158 RM, Enaath became such a city, alongside VENATH and Teira, though by c. -50 RM Venath had become the most stable and Enaath was eventually abandoned, its populace flocking to the new capital.

Enaath was later repopulated by the exiled followers of the sphinx HETEPHERES and eventually grew into the metropolis known as HETEPHEROPOLIS, which remains to this day.

ENABEIN: Geo. Mountain-range in the north of ABACARDAT, in the east of SAMMAEA, overlooking the BAY OF BAZID.

ENADH: Set. major city in the west of CEHOPHELA, overlooking the bay of KAKOPHIS. It is a relatively recent city to appear in the nation, and until c. 3200 RM the area now occupied by the city was an island. Its port has become one of the major mercantile centres in the west of Cehophela, and it is rapidly gaining political prominence, with some believing that it will soon surpass the importance of the capital, MALADAE, within a few decades. It is rumoured to be secretly controlled by organised crime, whose families control its various warehouses and trade yards (Pop. c. 258,200).

ENAELLON: 1. Geo. Badlands region in the east of LOEGRESS^(1.), crossing the border into the far west of KOMMEA. It is known for its rugged hills, rocky outcrops and many fast-moving streams, most of which head north or east into Kommea.

2. Dem. 'Enaellish'. His. Ntn. Historical kingdom in what is now the south east of $\underline{\text{LOEGRESS}}^{(1.)}$ and the west of $\underline{\text{KOMMEA}}$. It emerged in c. 2500 RM following the collapse of $\underline{\text{PRAETTANIA}}$ about 5-decades earlier and was ruled by king $\underline{\text{CARADRON II}}$ when the warlord $\underline{\text{TORRVAN}}$ was conducting his campaign of unification in the region.

It is remembered now for the BATTLE OF BRYNFAEL, a large pitched battle in which Torrvan's arquebusiers proved pivotal, decimating the MASTODON shock troops that had been the mainstay of Caradron II's forces. Caradoc II was killed in the battle and his son, his second-incommand, was forced to swear fealty to Torrvan. It was a deciding battle, leading to the fall of the city of BRYNFAEL and eventually Enaellon itself two years later in 2585 RM.

Following this, Enaellon was folded into the territories of GLYNNED^(2.), after which it was renamed Loegress in 2588 RM after the fabled land of Praettanian myths. See Vol III: Extinct Nations.

ENAHRION: Leg. Legendary figure prevalent in RHAMIA and parts of VÂRR. The figure is a wretched goat-like being with fearsome red eyes. It lurks in dank forests and is often seen by those travelling at night, standing on its hind legs, watching from the shadows. It is said to be a ferocious killer and attacks and eats anyone who ventures too far into its woodland home.

Its roots lie in ancient Vârr, and was carried north by people fleeing the KORACHANI conquests in c. 700 RM, where it quickly spread amongst natives, becoming part of their own legends. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

ENAK AHIA: Set. Fortified city in the c of SARASTRO, north of the OTINDHAR Mountains. It is largely autonomous and is controlled by an ancient PATRICIAN HOUSE has lived in a mountain-side citadel for millennia (Pop. c. 40,000).

ENAKIRA: see ENKIRA.

ENALAS: Set. CHORSAIR stronghold in the eastern coast of KHITAI, in dangerous waters along in the SMOKING COAST (Pop. unknown).

ENALLAD: also 'the Writhing Lands'. Sup. Geo. Expansive ATRAMENTALLY-ACTIVE area in the c south west of KHARKHARADONTIS, over 1,500-miles west of the BLACK FOUNTAIN. The region is named after the unexplained undulating of the land there that makes travel and navigation difficult. The stench of rotten flesh pervades the region and little life – both flora and fauna – unacclimated to the region survives here.

ENALLAN: Geo. Small mountain in the far north of KASPIA, forming headland protruding into the SEA OF DAGGERS.

ENAMOY: Set. Fortified settlement in the west of CUTH, along the isthmus of land that connects the headland of IRKALLA with the mainland. It acts as a link between the two regions of Cuth, and is a hub of trade (Pop. c. 8.400).

ENARA VOSS: f. Per. (B. 3937 RM) High-ranking member of the ARÂTHUAHI ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION, where she spent many years as a SHADOW HUNTER before being elevated to Chief Investigator in 3949 RM. In her current role she oversees a myriad of investigations and inquiries conducted within the KORACHANI EMPIRE into reports of corruption.

ENARADINE: Rvr. River in the c south of ANANTHUL, flowing south east for 675-miles from sources in the OHRAM and ORAMON Mountains before meeting the north eastern-most expanse of the STRAIT OF BIMARIA.

ENARETH: Set. Small fortified city in the south west of KOLCHIS. It is known for its hunters and trappers (Pop. c. 18,000).

ENAROS: Set. Small city in the south of TARTAK. It is known for its hunting of ANKYLOURA and the selling of their hides to merchants travelling the SALT ROAD (Pop. c. 18,000).

ENARRENDI: Lan. Series of closely-linked languages spoken in THE VORANDINE and parts of the TWILIGHT STATES, likely descended from an earlier FIFTH AGE language that predates the appearance of king VORAND and the establishment of the Vorandine states in c. 2130 RM.

The UNITED VORANDI COUNCIL has embarked on a systematic eradication of the Evarrandi languages from its lands since its usurping of power in 3996 RM, leading to the extinction of some, and the dwindling of others, though most are still spoken to some degree across the Vorandine, particularly in regions far from the CAPITAL, leading to a linguistic divide across the fledgeling nation. See Vol II: Languages.

ENASSAHKA: Sec. Settlement in the east of AHKA. The RED ROUTE once passed through it, but war with KORACHAN has moved the trade-route farther west, leaving the settlement diminished. Today it has become a lawless city with man empty buildings (Pop. c. 8,000).

ENASSO: Set. Fortified caravanserai in the c of SAUA, 40-miles south east of the capital city of ADAIA (Pop. c. 3,000).

ENASYL: Set. Settlement in the c of OKKHAM, west of the Okkhami Mountains^(1,1). Its main industry is sericulture – the production of silk from caterpillars of the giant ORUNA moth that is endemic to the lower mountains of Okkham (Pop. c. 7,500).

ENATARR: Geo. Coastal city in the west of ZOHAK (Pop. c. 84,000).

ENATES: Rvr. River in the c of GNOTH, flowing south east for 335-miles from sources in the SOLUN Highlands, before meeting its parent, the river NEPHOT.

ENATHAAR: Rvr. River in the prefecture of ALITENEA in the c north of HOLOLACH^(1.), flowing for 430-miles from its source in the BRATUIL Mountains before emptying in the BAY OF AMATRRA.

ENATHASHA: Oth. OTHERWORLDER who once ruled the city of MASSEGA. Nothing is known of its life before being reborn as Enathasha, but as an otherworlder it was an epicurean who passed on its hedonistic lifestyle to its followers and offspring. The city and its extravagant yearlong carnival are overseen by the halfblood descendants of Enathasha, who during the peak of the carnival remove the mummified body of the otherworlder from its glass crypt and carry it across the city in a great procession.

ENAULUN: Set. Major city in the c of CEHOPHELA. It is the western-most stop along the SOVEREIGNS' ROAD trade route and the eastern termination of the VESHONAN PASSAGE trade route, and it trades goods from one to the other, under charter of the merchant houses of VESHON(Pop. c. 67,000).

ENCAMNA: Rui. Ancient catacombs in the western face of CABIENAN Highlands, in the north east of ABATTUR. They are believed to date to the mid-FOURTH AGE and pictograms indicate that they were made (or ultimately used) by SHIE, though nothing is known about the culture behind them.

ENCELADON, the: Str. Geo. Hewn monuments deep in hidden highlands in the peaks of the southern face of the RAHII Mountains in the north of NASTAL⁽²⁾. They take the form of large vestibules and what appears to be seven thrones, all hewn from the natural grey stone of the mountains. It is likely that the vestibules housed statues made from some other, possibly valuable, substance, though these were lost millennia ago.

They have been variously attributed to gods, giants or other unknown sources due to their scale.

ENCLAVE: also 'Khamsal. Pol. Org. The different branches of the SHAMASHI ENCLAVES in the REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO. They fulfil a similar role to the independent ORDERS OF THE SANCTIFIED INQUISITION, from which they emerged in the wake of the SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE, though following a period of restructuring in 3821 RM they all became different facets (Enclaves) of a singular organisation (the Shamashi Enclaves).

ENCYCLOPAEDIA ELYDEN: His. Vol. Large general-knowledge KORACHANI-centric encyclopaedia. Originally published in 848 RM, based on the writings of ST. ESPERION and others, following centuries of smaller encyclopaediae crafted by singular authors, which lacked detail and insight on particular subjects.

Currently in its 271st edition, the encyclopaedia has become a byword for quality and comprehensiveness, and efforts have been made to make the collected volumes available in as many Korachani libraries as possible.

The encyclopaedia is regarded with less respect outside of Korachan, where it is seen as a tool of propaganda filled with inconsistencies and falsehoods.

END SADID: Set. Small city in the north west of ANANTHUL, overlooking the SEA OF LETHEA (Pop. c. 20,000).

END WAHAK: Set. Small city in the north of ANANTHUL, overlooking the SEA OF LETHEA. It is known for its shipyards (Pop. c. 17,800).

ENDETH: Set. Coastal city in the east of THETIS, at the mouth of the river KHONS (Pop. c. 43,800).

ENDOCRINE: Rel. Org. Order within the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE (and later the REFORMED CHURCH OF SARASTRO) in the KORACHANI EMPIRE that specialises in maintaining faith within imperial cities. They are the counterparts to the EXOCRINES. and alongside them rose from the FOURTEEN APOSTLES.

ENDA: His. Rui. Ancient coastal city in the east of DHEA, now occupied by the city of RE"HAIZ in the east of BA'AKH, less than a mile from the coast of the DAARKEN GULF. The city was founded in c. -1500 by SVATHI immigrants who subjugated the native populace (descendants of the ASADEAN people that populated the area in the FOURTH AGE). The city was built close to steep shores and as the retreat of ELYDEN'S seas became apparent, its deep harbours were left crippled, and the city itself was eventually abandoned by c. 110 RM. The retreat of the GULF OFDAARKEN left a large sunken shelf less than half-a mile long exposed between the ruin of Enda and the coast. This land was eventually settled by DHAMATEAN refugees in c. 2000 RM and a new city named Re'haiz was built from the walls of the abandoned old city.

ENDAQ RHAM: Set. City in the c of CHEIRA (Pop. unknown).

ENDHERRABARIVKA: Set. Settlement in the c south west of NOAVATUR (Pop. c. 8,000).

ENDLESS CITY, the: His. Rui. An ancient city, once belonging the CHILDREN of ABUFIHAMAT, early in the days of the DEMIURGES, when the division between the MORTAL tribes was as yet distinct.

As one of the most successful tribes, under the hungry leadership of their primogenitor, Abufihamat, the city grew to monolithic size, with ancient texts (themselves quoting texts that to them were ancient) numbering its population as in excess of 10,000,000. Its mud-brick houses and limestone & granite temples and halls were said to stretch from horizon to horizon, with as many as a dozen rivers feeding it. For millennia, it was the dominant force in an entire hemisphere, though it fell to corruption and decadence, fracturing into a series of districts; each their own entity which became embroiled in warfare and politicking, leaving the region ruined.

What was once an idyllic region becoming desertified, the ruins of the city-nation swallowed by the ravenous desert and its mud-brick structures obliterated within a few years, leaving little to any trace.

Though little evidence exists to support it, many scholars believe the remains of the city (if any remains do exist) are now buried beneath the sands of ANUBIA. Some scholars and historians believe it should be included in the list of ANCIENT WONDERS, though the widespread belief that it was built by a Demiurge or SCION have led many others to discount it.

ENDORRA: Lan. Geo. Native word for MENISCEA, commonly believed to mean 'source', and thought to refer to the FIRMAMENTAL font; the TRUE MENISCUS.

ENDRACH: Rvr. River in the north of KORACHAN, flowing west from the southern face of the RHAECHA Mountains before emptying into the BAY OF LALLEH.

ENDRIAN ORDER: Sup. Mil. Org. Organisation of militant SHAPERS active in the HENDECARCHY of ATALLUA, in MALAN. Founded by the HENDECARCH SVIZIA OF THE CARALL in 3925 RM, they serve as elite palace guards and personal bodyguards, also undertaking special assignments on her behalf, where they stand above all other forms of law enforcement and military bodies in the Hendecarchy. They also serve as spies across the other Hendecarchies and outside Malan.

They are named after an old $\underline{LARAMI}^{(1.)}$ legend of spirits that haunt the land of the living.

ENDUI: Dem. 'Enduan'. Ntn. Nation in the c east of EASTERN MENISCEA that emerged from another territory in c. 3320 RM.

Its main industry is the cultivation of SUNBULBS and the manufacture of an expensive medicine that grants longevity to those who consume it regularly. As a result, its ruling class and nobility commonly live to 250 – 300 years. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

ENDULLI: Rvr. River in the east of MALAN, flowing west through the HENDECARCHIES of DERAEIA and ATALLUA for 470-miles from sources in the FATHMMA, DAURAENT and ARGENT Mountains before meeting its parent, the river NYALLA⁽²⁾, at the TWIN FALLS OF VATULIA. It forms a part of the Nyalla⁽¹⁾ river system and incorporates two major lakes — HÂT and STAL — in its drainage basin.

ENDURAGH: Geo. Expansive plains dominating the north east of OPHAR, to the south western coast of the CAMARINAL SEA. The region covers some 30,000-square miles and is characterised by boulder fields, hills, plains and more rugged areas to the south. Before the decay of the natural world, the region was rife with flora and fauna, which have diminished greatly in the last millennia.

ENEAR: Set. Fortified settlement in far west of TEMUJA, just 40-miles east of the gateway of the TAHNOL MAER. It is a major mercantile centre in the region, trading west with GÂTHA (Pop. c. 15,000).

ENEARHON: also 'the South Tower'. Mil. Str. One of two towers in the far western TEMUJA (the other being the SUBÉ) that flank the pass of the TAHNOL MAER, serving as the main link between Temuja and the DESOLATION OF ASTUDAN.

ENEARHI: also 'the Rimsfold Mountain'. Geo. Mountain that serves as a natural border to the west of Temuja, separating it from the DESOLATION OF ASTUDAN. Translated from the olden tongue, the name means – western rim.

ENEFEH: 1. Geo. Island off the south eastern coast of WESTERN SAMMAEA, forming a part of the COTRIAN ISLES in the ISLAND STATES OF IRY.

2. Set. small coastal city on the above island^(1.) (Pop. c. 13,000).

ENEGH: Set. Fortified city in the east of AHRISHEN, close to contested territory with SAUA (Pop. c. 26,000)

ENEHUNDI: Set. Small coastal city on the island of UKTRARA in the north of the CORAL BARONIES, off the south western coast of SAMMAEA. Its people's main diet consists of soft-shelled shrimp that lives in the waters around the SHIBBOTHA and SHIELD ISLES. These are boiled and eaten whole, usually in stews or with legumes, and as a result locals are known for the slight orange-pink tint to their skin (Pop. c. 17,500).

ENEINAR: Set. Small city in the c west of TATAR, 25-miles south of the capital, ASHHAR. Its main industry is agriculture, centred around the growth of amaranth grain (Pop. c. 12,800).

ENEKH: Geo. Highlands west of MONACH, in the north of KARAKHAS, east of the SEA OF AZAM.

ENELIN: Sea. Bay in the south of KHAR NADUL, located to the east of the peninsula of KHU ENDAT.

ENEN NOSYL: Set. City in the west of OKKHAM (Pop. c. 47,200).

ENEPH: 1. Sea. Bay in the east of ELEKHID, above which is the delta of the river NUBBIOR, to the south of which is the city of ENEPH(3).

2. His. Mil. Str. Tower where in 3388 RM MORTHA SHUR and DEGLIA SHUR, the heirs to the throne of PNESSA, are imprisoned by their younger brother MITH SHUR III after the death of their father, Magnate KARAN SHUR. Their supporters would conspire to free them from prison in 3402 RM after which they would lead the east against the west of Pnessa in the WAR OF SECESSION, which ended in 3409 with the independence of the east, which would later become known as ELEKHID. The tower would go on to become the citadel where king and queen Shur would reign.

3. Pol. Set. Capital of ELEKHID, where the court of the ruling dynasty is situated. The harsh laws of Elekhid originate here and it is where its nobility (those families who can trace their ancestry back to those who led the fracture from Pnessa) are based.

Though it is now some 5-miles from the coast, Eneph remains the largest harbour in Elekhid, where its triple-hulled ships shelter from the ravages of the ROILING SEA. following the long wane of Elyden's coastlines, the harbour today takes the form of a man-made lagoon that is maintained against great cost, and which is accessible from the sea via a series of five-tiered lochs (Pop. c. 390,000).

ENEPHIAN REEF: Geo. Expansive reef off the eastern shore of ELEKHID, in the east of SAMMAEA, in the west of the ROILING SEA.

ENERKHAT: Set. One of 3 cities in the ESHELI region, in the south east of FATH, with the other two being ALIKAHKAT and MELITET. Together, they form a loose confederacy and trade network, with few links to the outside world other than occasional trade with Etul.

Sundered from Etul proper in 3529 RM following an edict and excommunication, the city of Enerkhat is now plutocratic, with a council of elected elders from various professions elected yearly. a permanent speaker oversees the council and acts as their proxy in foreign affairs. The speaker takes the form of an otherwise catatonic FIRMAMENTIST, his body shrivelled and decaying, his head bulbous and linked to a cradle of SOULPEARLS, allowing him to speak TELEPATHICALLY to the plutocrats when needs require it (Pop. c. 136,500).

ENERYX: Set City in the north east of RHINOCOLOURA, forming a part of the SALT ROAD. It commonly trades north with the MULCIBIAN tribe of ORIM (Pop. c. 580,000).

ENERUH: Set. Settlement in the east of GYZHA (Pop. c. 5,000).

ENESH: 1. see ABYSS OF ENESH.

2. Pol. One of nine states that rose in the wake of the fracturing of the AMNATHI KINGDOMS in -589 RM. Enesh, alongside TAMESIS and NICATH (later NICAEA) formed a confederacy in c. -500 RM out of which the nation of $\underline{\text{N\'ARTHEL}}$ would rise in -403 RM. Enesh controlled the north east of the $\underline{\text{STRAIT OF N\'ARTHEL}}$, thriving off trade and fishing. In -309 Enesh became a regional administrative centre, growing in size and wealth, though the growth of the $\underline{\text{VENATHI EMPIRE}}$ brought friction and war to its borders, which shifted continuously as Venathi troops invaded and were repelled from c. 1 RM – its eventual destruction in 92 RM, which left much of the land north of the $\underline{\text{ILLIAN}}$ forests devastated. Though some of its ruined cities were later resettled, Enesh remains a ruin to the present day, a reminder to the $\underline{\text{N\'ARTHELI}}$ people of the fragility of their cities.

ENESSAAR: Geo. Small island off the north western coast of SAMMAEA, 600-miles north west of the KORACHANI colony of TAVVADRA.

ENESTEA: Set. Large city in the west of EREBETH. Its main industry is the cutting of gems and the creation of jewellery (Pop. c. 131,700).

ENETSIC: Rvr. River in the c of OKKHAM flowing west of 250-miles from sources in the Okkhami Mountains^(1,) before meeting the coast at the south east of the SEA OF STYGAS.

ENETHU: 1. Sea. Bay in the c-south east of THETIS, forming the north eastern-most part of the KAT ENNA inlet.

2. Set Coastal settlement in the c-south east of $\underline{\text{THETIS}}$, overlooking the above bay^(1.) (Pop. c. 3,800).

ENEXTHOL III: (B. c. 1780 RM) Pol. Current ruler and PHAOH of ANANTHUL. Like most nobility in the PORPHYRI PENINSULA his body is extensively altered through technarcane orthoses, prolonging his life.

ENGAN DHED: Set. Small city in the far south east of CHEIRA (Pop. c. 14,000).

ENGARA: Sea. Body of water in the south west of KORACHAN. Its waters are relatively shallow, with the Korachani coastal shelf lying some 100-miles off-shore. At one time the entire region was replete with marine life, though over-fishing in the area until c. 1750 RM led to the dead of the seas.

ENGEL: Set. Coastal city in the c south of KOLCHIS, in the north of the SEA OF SEKHEM (Pop. c. 42,000).

ENGER: Geo. Peninsula in the east of KAZZAR, acting as a breakwater to the BAY OF GAARAIR.

ENGINE OF ABOSS ATHA AIHOR: Int. His. Tec. Archaic TECHNARCANE machinery in the ZOHELETHI BASIN in the east of PARTHIS. Inscribed on a bronze plaque in the ancient Azer script are the words "Atop the bones of St Katharen is this, the greatest machine, built". Little is known of the ST. KATHAREN that the inscription refers to.

The machine itself is calcified and tarnished beyond the scope of mortal understanding, and its original purpose is unknown today.

ENGINE RACING: Gam. Tec. Soc. A mechanised form of racing that emerged from chariot races of ancient PARTHIS, replacing horses with wheeled or tracked engines that pull a cockpit in which the pilot stands. It is incredibly dangerous and competitors are often injured in crashes, with fatalities not uncommon.

It emerged in c. 3830 RM outside the city of TUALAR in the ZOHELETHI BASIN, and spread from there, becoming increasingly popular amongst the nobility of Parthis and its dependencies, with most competitors being wealthy FREEMEN who can afford the machines used in the races. See Vol II: Games and Pastimes of Elyden.

ENFOROT: Rvr. River in the east of VALBAR^(2.), flowing north for 670-miles from sources in the MARAGHA Mountains and the OSVALT Hills, before meeting its parent, the river VARAGOD.

ENGRHUL: Lak. Lake in the c south west of CHEIRA, forming a part of the flow of the river CHUCALA, a minor tributary of the far larger parent river YAHNOTH PHTHAN.

ENHA RITHYEL: Set. Settlement in the east of ALAM BETHYL, to the east of the river KEGHOK (Pop. c. 5,000).

ENHEDUANN: Set. Independent city in the west of THE SURRACH in the north west of SAMMAEA. It is famed for its large 'library' that's interesting for its lack of any books – the so-called library is home to a sect of monks who keep knowledge and myths through oral storytelling. They train themselves to remember epic tales word-for-word, helping to keep myths and legends from all cultures alive. The monks travel across ELYDEN and their reputation precedes them and they are valued in most societies, where they are allowed to observe customs and study at local libraries (Pop. c. 15,000).

ENHOR: Pol. Set. Capital city of the BRORI^(1.) nation of SABOMOR (Pop. c. 125,000).

ENIGOST: 1. Sea. Bay in the far north of the HENDECARCHY of CYRENIA, in the north west of MALAN. It forms a part of the border between Cyrenia and the south east of KASPIA. Its waters are noted for their fecundity, likely attributable to deposits from the river FACAL EGLEA.

2. Pol. Set. Costal city and capital of the HENDECARCHY of CYRENIA, in the north west of MALAN. The northern-most major city of Malan, Enigost lies to the east of the fertile delta of the river FAÇAL EGLEA and its people are expert farmers and fishermen as a result.

Its streets were all planned, and are arranged in a grid-pattern, hidden behind high wide walls. Conversely, its old city centre, far from the present coast, is a labyrinth of alleys and snaking streets, where its eldest noble families still live (Pop. c. 280,000).

ENIKOS: Rvr. River in the east of PELASGOS and tributary of the river ELISSAMNAS, flowing south west for 155-miles from the BULOPARRI Mountains before meeting with the river ELISSANAS.

ENIMIS: Set. Small city in the east of KHAMID, close to lake KANOUS.
Originally known for its goatherders it is now a stop along the Great Road trade-route, and offers accommodation to travellers, selling finely-made leathers and vellum to passing merchants (Pop. c. 19,000).

ENITH: Dem. 'Enithan'. Ntn. Failed state in the north west of SAMMAEA. It emerged from the KORACHANI colony of ITHAKA, decades after it was abandoned by Korachan in c. 1450 RM. The monarchy was overthrown by militants in 3984 RM and the region remains in a state of chaos to this day, with various groups battling for control of the capital of ITH AKHA, while no one group is able to maintain control for long. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

ENITHAN NATIONALIST COUNCIL: Pol. Org. One of many political bodies that is currently vying for control of the failed state of ENITH in the north west of SAMMAEA. The Nationalist Council was responsible for the coup that deposed the ITH AKHAN monarchy though struggled to maintain control due to a strong monarchist faction that remains prevalent in Enith.

ENKASSAR: 1. Rvr. River in the west of PORPHYR, flowing west for 260-miles from sources in the west of the RYKK Mountains.

2. Set. Major city some 40-miles upstream of the mouth of the above river^(1.), away from the influence of the SEA OF LETHEA. The region surrounding the city is very flat, with extreme tides. The city is famed for the rows of rusted ships that lie on the beach, which are slowly stripped of their metal and furnishings, which are sold on as scrap (Pop. c. 804,000).

ENKATTRA, OBSERVATORY OF: Ast. Str. Mountain-top observatory in the c south west of RAONGEN^(2.), in the c of the north eastern face of the CHIAVALLE Mountains.

ENKHALLA: Ser. Major coastal city in the north east of MHAROKK, overlooking the STRAIT OF SHIBBOLETH. It forms a vital part of the RED ROUTE and its busy ports are filled with merchant vessels preparing to go west up the river SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾ or east into the INNER SEA (Pop. c. 2,075,000).

ENKIRA: also 'ENAKIRA'. Mys. Ancient ascetic philosopher of GNOTH who set down various mystic teachings and tenets which its gnostics still follow as GNOTHI MYSTICISM.

ENKOON: Set. Settlement in the west of CUTH (Pop. c. 6,000).

ENNAGAR: Ind. Sct. Fortified settlement in the south west of VAALK. It is a rapidly growing industrial centre, and PATRICIAN HOUSES are investing in its manufactories, with new ones appearing as recently as this year (Pop. c. 7,400).

ENNAIAH: 1. Set. Rich apathetic coastal city-state to the west of THE SURRACH in the north west of SAMMAEA. The city grew incredibly wealthy centuries past, before the dwindling of the SEA OF ESCHATA led to the drying of its harbours. It is a spire-crowned metropolis governed by a strict social hierarchy, with the lower castes serving as little more than cattle and playthings for its dispirited and sadistic nobles, who rule as gods. It is common in the north, where it features in a parable, the moral of which is that the inheritors of knowledge or wealth do so without also inheriting the discipline required to attain them. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

2. Pol. Set. Capital and main city of the above city-state (Pop. c. 460,000 inc. slaves).

ENNAIAHN: Lan. Dialect of SAVIUDI spoken in ENNAIAH. See Vol II: Languages.

ENNDACHAN: Set. Largest city on the KORACHANI island colony of MALETH, comprised mostly of the workers and sailors who make the island their home, as well as government offices. The city is known for its many metal-workers and taverns (Pop. c. 18,000).

ENNEA MANI: Set. Fortified city in the north west of TISARA. The city lies along the course of the river BOUVIN and is home to a major military fortress, where two regiments of the Tisaran army are permanently stationed (Pop. c. $4,000).

ENNEI: f. Mys. His. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, a SCION and daughter of the DEMIURGES ARIMASPI and SHIBBOLETH, conceived in the waters of the GOLDSTREAM, becoming a spirit of all ELYDEN'S waters.

Following the disappearance of the QUINTUMVIRATE of Demiurges, travelled ELYDEN with her half-brother ERES, in search of their parents, cataloguing virgin territories as they moved. They were unsuccessful in their search and diminished into oblivion sometime during the FOURTH AGE. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

ENNERA: Pol. Set. Major city in the north of NORTHERN SIMBARA. It was once a coastal city, commanding a powerful harbour, and the city spend a period of time in c. 3400 – 3460 RM constructing elaborate mechanised channels and dykes, linking the retreating sea to its ports, though by c. 3510 RM it had become fully landlocked, its ports abandoned.

It has since become the centre for the Simbaran army and is also a major stop along the NACRE ROAD trade route, where the NACRE LEAGUE (the governing body of the trade route) was established in c. 1820 RM. Today it serves as an administrative centre to the League as well as to the Simbaran government, controlling the northern territories of the nation, where it is maintains regular contact with ITARA, the official capital (Pop. c. 780,000).

ENNOIA: 1. Rvr. River in central RHEA flowing south east for over 1,700-miles from sources in the AHRAN HIGHLANDS, and the ATHANIS and DORLEIDON Mountains before meeting the SEA OF ERUTHEA. It is known for its expansive deposition delta, which reaches some 120-miles from the coastline, as well as its winding route, across flat landscape, resulting in many waterlogged areas.

2. Set. Large city in the c. of RHEA, along the river of the same name^(1.), at the fork where its tributary, the river ONNOTOYA, meets it. The city originated as a boom town in c. 2300 RM, which outlasted the gold mines it was built next to. Today, the old quarries and mines have been built over and are gentrified, with its streets following the contours of the old open-cast pits (Pop. c. 220,000).

ENNU: (10,900-ft.) Geo. One of ten peaks (colloquially known as the TEN PRINCES) of the south east of A SAVI, in the north of AHRISHEN, named after an ancient prince.

ENNUIA: Oth. A type of HALFBLOOD with some degree of notoriety within the KORACHANI EMPIRE. The HOUSE is one of those more organised, and it actively seeks out halfbloods it believes form part of the bloodline, seeking them out and capturing them, often against their own will, where they are indoctrinated into the ways of the Ennuia. Assassins and torturers of the highest degree, they act as mercenaries within the larger mor urbane imperial cities, hiring themselves out to those who can pay the price. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

ENNUPHES: Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region in the west of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER, straddling the border between ILLPHAGOS and ATEVEGOS. It is a relatively-recent phenomenon, appearing in c. 3350 RM, and is studied by the shapers of the colleges of IMPONDERA.

The region is categorised as a LEAST CONCERN by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES, though it is expected to increase in size and strength over the coming decades.

ENONT: Set. Conurbation in the north east of BANT, in the north east of the CARCHEMISHI PENINSULA^(1.), in the east of SAMMAEA. It is made up of no less than five separate mining settlements within a w-mile radius of each other, whose main industry is iron and pyrite mining (Pop. c. 8,600).

ENORS: Set. Crossroads city in the prefecture of ALITENEA^(1.) in the c north of HOLOLACH^(1.). It is known for its caravanserais and taverns and forms part of THE WAY trade-route (Pop. c. 8,000).

ENRA: See. small fortified settlement in the north of the tribe of NUNEA, in the south east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 3.750).

ENRATON: Geo. Mountain in SAMMAEA forming a border between the east of LIDEA and the north west of SUMA'YA, itself a part of the larger SHIBOTHA Mountains. Its northern face is home to many LACER ENCLAVES, including AIMALEOCH, SESTAMEOCH, and TENELOCH.

ENSAH: His. An old lighthouse south of the capital in NOAVATUR. For centuries, its beacon guided vessels through treacherous seas. Over time, the receding waters of the SEA OF LETHEA led to the abandonment of the lighthouse in the region in c. 3520 RM, at which time it was replaced by a new one on the island of VROTHOT.

ENSHRINER: Rel. Rnk. In the KORACHANI EMPIRE, embalmers ordained by the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, who perform the last rites of those preserved, blessing their bodies and sanctifying their souls before their sojourn with the UNDYING MACHINE.

ENSUROS: Geo. Badlands region in the north east of GNOTH in the FIR. active area of AGASTIA.

ENTAFAR: Set. Fortified city in the west of ABATTUR, along the course of the river ADSULLA. It was fortified after Abattur gained its independence, and its surrounding bastions remain manned to this day. It also serves as a link with neighbouring TISARA, with trade crossing the border between the two states (Pop. c. 50,000).

ENTAPHALA: Mil. Set. Fortified manufactory city in the south west of PORPHYR (Pop. c. 20,000).

ENTARR: Rvr. River in the c of AZAZEM, flowing north east for 105-miles from the AAORA Mountains, before joining with the river ASHALA.

ENTARI: Sea. Sea in the south of SAMMAEA, between the nations of QARALAM and ZATAUR. The waters to the east of the sea are known to harbour the last remnants of the MERILL race, commonly seen in atolls around the isle of ST. UALLAR.

ENTELECHY: 1. Phil. In most philosophies, the realisation of ones' full potential.

2. Phil. More specifically, the potential of MORTALS (normally humans) to ascend to OTHERWORLDERS following their death on the MORTAL PLANE. There are many who have devoted their lives and fortunes to the pursuit of knowledge into what governs the ascent of a soul to the status of an otherworlder. This culminated in the creation of the artificial otherworlders known as LHAUAPARANS, which ultimately raised more questions than it answers. Thus far none have found a way to artificially transcend to the level of otherworlder in a natural way without first dying and gestating in the otherworld.

ENTIAN: 1. Lak. Lake in the south west of RAONGEN (2.).

2. Rvr. River and encompassing wetlands in the south west of $\frac{\text{RAONGEN}^{(2)}}{\text{EHINE}}$ Mountains, before meeting its parent, the river $\frac{\text{GARAILI}}{\text{GARAILI}}$.

3. Set. Small city in the far south west of $\underline{RAONGEN}^{(2.)}$ (Pop. c. 12,500).

ENTILLIA: His. Mil. Str. Ancient fortress hewn from a rusted mesa in the region of BAULLAGORATH in the north east of PARTHIS. Though the fortress is now a ruin, a small caravanserai has appeared at its foot, serving the trade-route that passes through the region (Pop. c. 1,000).

ENTIOIA: Mil. Set. Military city in the south east of SAGITTARIA in the region of BHATHAIA, overlooking the SEA OF DANAEL (Pop. c. 20,000).

ENTOMA: Mil. Str. Fortress in the c south of THE SURRACH, just north of the THAMAAZ. It is known for its network of deep dungeons, some of which are thought to date back to the days of the WAR OF SCOURGING in the FOURTH AGE.

ENTONIAN FORTRESS: Mil. Rel. Mys. His. Ancient fortress in the c of Kharkharadontis, just east of the MHUGIZZHE canyons. It originated some 4,00-years ago as a PLAGI temple dedicated to the DEMIURGE RACHANAEL. It was visited by the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR during his ITINERARY, and he was baptised, becoming a powerful figure to them, winning them over to his cause.

Today the temple has been built over, with a large fortress enveloping it, housing the headquarters of the KNIGHTS OF THE MARCH, though the temple remains whole inside it and is a major stop along the SHADOW MARCH, where it is venerated as the place where Malichar was first made a child of Rachanael.

ENU BOKHA: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the south east of SARASTRO, 45-miles from the border with ANUBIA. It is home to a large portion of the Sarastroan military tasked with protecting its borders with the desert lands.

 $\underline{ENU\ MARTI}\!:$ Set. City in the c south west of \underline{PNESSA} (Pop. c. 42,000).

ENULLEA: Set. Fortified city in the south of SAGITTARIA (Pop. c. 40,000).

ENUSSYUR: Set. City in the c of THE VORANDINE. It was the cultural centre and main city of one of the c states of the Vorandine before the annexation of all states by the UNITED VORANDI COUNCIL in 3996 RM. Its main industry is iron mining, and it remains a centre of dissent, proving to be a thorn in the side of the Council (Pop. c. 40,000).

ENVATAR: Geo. Impressive cavern system in the c west of VÂRR, just east of the CALLA formations, the lower chambers of which are flooded. Though the caves are rumoured to be connected to the PRISON CARCERI, there is little evidence to confirm this. Many expeditions have been sent into the caverns though they are infested with GRUAIMIN, and no expedition has explored the caverns in full yet.

ENVOYS OF SILENCE: O_{PZ} . Pervasive political sect in the nations of ACHAA^(2,1), AURUM^(2,1), and TAES, in the south east of MENISCEA, that has recently led to a destabilisation of the government in Taes. Its main base is the TEMPLE OF NERVINE in Taes.

ENWATIQ: Geo. Mountains in the c of the UHBATAQI^(1.) headland in the east of SAMMAEA, forming an extension of the expansive Uhbataqi Mountain-range^(4.).

ENYGOHATH: Rui. AIKLAH ruins in the south east of RHINOCOLOURA, in the ZELET badlands. Little but the vaguest remnants of foundations and formless statues now remain, half buried in the foothills of the Rhinocolouran highlands, though some sun-bleached aiklah bones have been found, scattered around.

EODON LASCARIS: (B. 3939 RM) Med. PELASGOSI physician who, following years of research in the city of PARAGA, discovered the function of the FARAMON'S NODE, renaming it the ONEIRAL GLAND in 3972 RM. His research was fundamental to our modern understanding of ONEIROMANCY, and experimentation into how the gland affects SHAPING continues in earnest, with various nations competing to be the first to make a breakthrough.

EOMMIN: Ind. Sct. Small city in the south west of HABOT. It is an industrial centre and is known for its large foundry, which forms the backbone of the city's economy (Pop. c. 18,500).

EON ALIHOTH: Set. City in the east of LIDEA, built around the undulating contours of the land, giving its streets an unplanned snaking appearance. Indeed, the twist of streets, loggia-like overpasses and stone bridges makes navigation of its streets near impossible to outsiders, making the hiring of DRAGOMEN almost mandatory for foreigners. It is known for its surrounding manufactories, which also serve as homes to their workers, who rarely, if-ever, leave their confines. It also forms part of the SALT ROAD and maintains a very large multi-tiered market where caravans can stop to sell their wares (Pop. c. 165,000).

EOPIRA: Lake in the c of VENTHIR, in the SHARA plains.

EOPIROS: Set. City in inland VENTHIR, on the northern shore of lake EOPIRA (Pop. c. 43,000).

 $\underline{\text{BATHASHAL OCEAN}}.$ It was first documented by the explorer $\underline{\text{BOHMIUS}}$ in 1527 RM.

EPESTIS: Geo. Coastal plains in the south west of THETIS, south of the badlands of THAAM AEGLA. It is relatively level, and has increased greatly in size over the past millennium with the wane of the SEA OF ERUTHEA, exposing much land, allowing the people of Thetis to establish new settlements away from the RTHEI desert.

 $\underline{EPET\ KHAL}\!:$ Set. Settlement in the west of \underline{CHEIRA} (Pop. c. 9,000).

EPHALL: Lak. Lake in the c south of VÂRR along the course of the river ICHORIA.

EPHAN: Lake in the c north of AZAZEM, fed by the river EPHANOSH.

EPHANIG: petrified city, half buried in limestone fields of the east of EREBETH, 100-miles from the western coast of THE INNER SEA.

EPHANAS: Set. City in the east of KARAKHAS, abandoned in c 4003 RM following increased supranatural activity in the region surrounding it led to the creation of the Atramental wasteland now known as AKRABATOR. At its height in 3720 RM the city boasted a population of no less than 200,000.

EPHANOSH: Rvr. Major river in the west of AZAZEM. If flows year-rounds for 380-miles south east from sources in the AAORA Mountains, before reaching the coast in the SEA OF TYRSIS.

It was once the lifeblood of western Azazemi agriculture, and still flows across the eastern Atrophy to this day, though the once-fertile lands of the region are now grey and lifeless, the river's banks little more than EPHAQ ILLOT: His. Rui. Ancient statue in the c north of OKKHAM, in the western foothills of the Okkhami Mountains. It takes the form of a gigantic seated figure and is made of an ancient unidentified metal that is resistant to corrosion. Its surface is tarnished, and it stands at an angle, half buried beneath the soft ground the area. It is covered in epiphytes, foliage and mosses and is rumoured to guard a great necropolis, though if this is true, its exact location has been forgotten, as is the culture responsible for the construction of the statue, which has been attributed by KORACHANI explorers to a DEMIURGE, and is thought to date back to the THIRD AGE, if not earlier.

EPHAR: Com. Set. Large trade town in the north west of TETHYSIA, to the north west of the TURCAR desert. It is a major link between Tethysia and CENTRAL LLACHATUL via the city of CYTIS in the south east of MALAN, through which it connects with the GREAT ROAD, its merchants trading many fineries and exotic goods with the west, which accounts for its relatively large size. It makes use of deep wells that tap into natural aquifers, to keep its population watered (Pop. c. 62,000).

EPHARAEL'S BRIDGE: Arc. His. Large bridge in the north of SAMMAEA, just north of lake ATATU, spanning the river SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾, linking the south of LIDEA with the north of PARAIYA. It dates back to the THIRD AGE and is a monolithic piece of architecture, serving as the only bridge of the river for over 100-miles in either direction, along a span that is noted for its cliffs and treacherous terrain.

EPHARUSA: Sea. Sea to the north of EASTERN LLACHATUL, in the SEA OF POLARIS. It is bordered to the west by the territories of EASTERN THANO, to the south by IMEAL, and to the east by ARERAOTH. It is located within the northern POLAR CIRCLE and can freeze over in winter months.

EPHATTA: Dem. 'Ephattan'. Ntn. Nation in the south of WESTERN SAMMAEA, overlooking the SEA OF MERCUVIA. It is of a semi-arid climate, and most of its settlements are concentrated around the coast, where cool air from the Mercuvia makes life more tolerable.

Geographically, much of the east of Ephatta (and the south west of SYNCHTHONITHA) is dominated by water-carved canyons, from seasonal floods, some of which are gigantic and greatly impressive and date back many years. These canyons and the ancient ruins suggest the region was never submerged as many other coastal areas were, despite the retreat of sea levels

It is built on the ruins of a far older culture that left 15-ft basalt statues as ancestral markers. The land is littered with thousands such statues, many of which have been exported as object d'art and were used in early Ephattan construction as pillars and caryatids in architectural construction. Its people worship the deity ULUKDAM, who is embodied by a monolithic 4-armed anthropomorphic water buffalo idol. They are extremely intolerant of other religions and ban their worship within their lands. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

EPHEBIA: Ind. Set. MANUFACTORY city in PARTHIS. It is known for its strong ritual combat tradition and honour system (Pop. c. 190,000).

EPHEDRA: 1. Flo. Med. Shrub endemic to the south east of SAMMAEA and most common around the SEA OF ETAGIRIA, in ILLAKRAR, northern AKACHA, and ZATAUR. It has been a medicinal plant throughout the FIFTH AGE, being the heart of various home remedies in antiquity and going on to become an active ingredient of more modern medicines.

2. Set. City in the north of AKACHA. It is believed to be the origin of the name of the eponymous shrub⁽¹⁾ and is also a major manufacturer of the drug DYSTORIN (Pop. c. 40,000).

EPHEMERIS: Pol. northern-most of the SEVEN-AND-FORTY DISTRICTS of the CITY OF ALMAGEST. It was one of the three original city-states (the others being AZZII and Almagest itself) that would converge early in the FIFTH AGE, becoming the city of Almagest as we know it today.

EPHEMERON: Myt. Set. Mythical city that is commonly referred to in various SAMMAEAN legends and mentioned by revealing merchants and itinerants. It is said to disappear and reappear in different areas within inland Sammaea. Attempts of making reliable accounts of the city have thus far failed and to most scholars and geographers it remains little more than legend, despite the many accounts of people who have been there.

Those who have been there say of a multicultural place of great markets filled with exotic foods and materials that have never been encountered anywhere else in ELYDEN (Pop. unknown).

EPHERA: Set. Settlement in the c west of OPHAR, about 35 miles east of the capital in OPRET^(3,). It is a major producer of grains and rice, which feed the larger city (Pop. c. 4,200).

EPHESUS, TEMPLE OF: Rui. Rel. Str. Solitary temple in the north east of KORACHAN. It was once a popular site to local pilgrims, though an earthquake in the region destroyed most of the temple-complex in c. 2000 RM, leaving it a ruin.

EPHIARACH KHARITA, the: Int. Dre. Obj. Large globe situated in the courtyard of the SOMNIARECHI ORDER'S LANGUE^(1.) in BAAYN, LAASKHA. The globe stands around 50-ft. tall and is an exact facsimile of ELYDEN, showing in meticulous detail all regions of catalogued dreamscapes, including their invasiveness, severity and any related phenomena. The relevant details are constructed by a group of SOMNIARIIN, and the details are only visible to SHAPERS or anyone with THE SIGHT and their job is to keep it functioning, and ONEIROMANCERS across ELYDEN are able to view it within the DREAMWORLD, if they know where to look.

The globe is kept updated by recent findings by the Order's field operatives, who are equipped with detailed regional maps based on the globe that show these dreamscapes and other phenomena in more intricate detail.

EPHIARII: see SOMNIARII.

EPHIARRANII: see DREAMFORGED.

EPHIREN: Geo. Low mountain in the far west of LIMOTH⁽¹⁾, serving as part of the border with THETIS. It is thought to be very old, as evidenced by its rocky and lose terrain that is difficult to navigate.

EPHON: Set. Town in the south of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of EDICULE^(1.). The town is situated over the ruins of a far older settlement, that once existed along the then coast of the SEA OF BOKKEA, where once a series of rocky islands are now the peaks of a rocky peninsula south east of Ephon. It now forms a part of the Great Road trade route, and offers lodging to those travelling along the road (Pop. c. 7,900).

EPHORRA: Set. Major coastal city in the far east of FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS, at the mouth of the river EPHOROS. The settlement is now half-a mile from the coast, though its harbours still teem with trade from the east. It is a major industrial centre and is known for many manufactories (Pop. c. 94,500).

EPHOROS: Rvr. Small river in the south of PELASGOS, flowing east for 90-miles from the HELICAR Mountain before emptying into the SEA OF SPIRES.

EPHORR: Plr. & Dem. 'ephorr'. Mil. Soc. Guardians of major cities in PARTHIS and its dependencies. They operate independently of normal law enforcement and have a higher jurisdiction and do not concern themselves with petty issues. Their purview is one of more importance and they seek to protect the cities against perfidy and perdition.

EPHOT THAS: Geo. Expansive region in the south east of ANUBIA, covering around 235,000-square-miles. Though dominated by sandy deserts, one can also find stony deserts and Badlands there.

Its soils are known for their highly acidic nature, which, though promoting certain flora in areas where this isn't too pronounced, can be inimical to life in other regions, for instance the SANDS OF MOREG.

EPHRA: Lak. Shallow waters in lake ALANCARAC along the border between KARAKHAS and PARAIYA. It is one of few documented spawning grounds for MERILLS outside of lake SIBALLA. Numbering no more than fifty individuals every year, the merills are largely ignored due to the stigma surrounding them.

EPHRATH: Set. Sunken city along the west of NÁRTHELI coast. Abandoned in 2752 RM following an earthquake that destroyed its foundations. It was repopulated throughout the next 1,000 years, as the city re-emerged from the retreating coastline (Pop. c. 6,000).

EPHREK: Set. City in the region of ALBICA in the c south west of THE SURRACH, known for its ATRAMENTAL industries (Pop. c. 70,000).

EPHUORI: Pol. Set. Major city of KULIGALA, and home to the ONYX CONCLAVE (Pop. c. 807,000).

EPHUTAS: Set. Northern-most of the TETRARCHY capitals in JURRAS⁽²⁾. It evolved from a large library-monastery that was already well established by the time of the rise of the empire. Its scholars had already travelled around most of ELYDEN, the rest collating information from the few traders and merchants who visited the land. Today it is the seat of power of PATRICIAN HOUSE SYNOD⁽²⁾ (Pop. c. 420,000).

EPIC OF EREMESH: Art. Vol. Epic tale with origins in the FOURTH AGE INNER SEA, the Epic of Eremesh remains popular in KORACHANI nations and was instrumental in making the WANDERER OF MALETH a character of legend that survives to this day, largely unsullied by the influence of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE over the years.

EPIC OF SAAKAN, the: Art. VAALKAN war epic dating back to its PRE-IMPERIAL days, when it was known as VALKA. Originally a series of oral poems and legends, it was collected into three volumes in c. -20 RM. Traditionally, the epic is expanded with a new verse following any military victory, with the story woven into the existing narrative.

Following KORACHANI subjugation of the nation in 19 RM imperial ICONOCLASTS⁽¹⁾ attempted to suppress the texts, but all were failures. Eventually they adapted the texts, slowly replacing them with corrupted versions that celebrated the works of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR AND the growth of his empire.

A few original copies are known to exist, most of them in private collections or behind lock-and-key, and today few Vaalkans are aware of the full story and only know what portions are passed down orally through family tradition. See Vol II: Books of Elyden.

EPICURE'S RETREAT, the: Bev. Cui. Str. Exclusive restaurant in the south west of the ARTUL AKAEL, just a few miles east of the city of ALMAGEST. It overlooks a subterranean lake located in the base of a mile-deep mine shaft and serves exotic foods and drinks sourced from across ELYDEN, with rumours that even MORTAL flesh is served.

EPIDHAS: Set. Settlement in the north west of VAALK, just to the north of the capital of ANAKARRA. Its main industry is agriculture (Pop. c. 6.000).

EPINOIA: Set. Small city in the c of GNOTH (Pop. c. 12,000).

EPIPHEA: Set. Major harbour in the south east of SAGITTARIA, overlooking the SEA OF DANAEL (Pop. c. 190,000).

EPIPHORA: Rvr. River in the far north west of PNESSA, to the south east of lake AKASM. It is seasonal and flows north for some 140-miles from sources in the LOWER DANOSOTH after the rainy season, flowing into lake Akasm. It is believed to be the most distant source of the river SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾.

EPIPHYTE: Flo. Non-parasitic tree that grows on the branches of much larger trees. In dense forests, epiphytes can give the impression of multiple forest floors at varying levels, and are relatively common, in various scales, such as in the $\underline{\text{FIRMAMENTALLY}}$ -touched forests of $\underline{\text{MALAN}}$, the tropical rainforests of $\underline{\text{WAELMIGH}}$, as well as parts of the $\underline{\text{OLD FOREST}}$. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

EPIRU: Geo. Land of dust in N'RAKH. The place is an ATRAMENTAL WASTELAND and is avoided by the AANTH of the region, ventured only by those young aantha fulfilling their DREAM QUESTS in the pursuit of adulthood.

The region is categorised as a LEAST CONCERN by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

EPISCEA: Set. Small fortified city in the north east of LIDEA. It forms a part of the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 12,000).

EPISTANA: 1. Set. Fortified settlement in the far west of GNOTH, along the ASTATI LINES^(2.) (Pop. c. 3,000).

2. Mil. Str. Fortress forming part of the defensive lines in the west of GNOTH.

EPISTARA: Dem. 'Epistaran'. His. Ntn. Historical small nation on the far south western coast of BROR^(1.) that existed in the mid FIFTH AGE. Despite now being little more than a territory of the nation of GREST, it remains renowned across the INNER SEA REGION for being a cultured land of beautiful stone art and GIGANRI. The giganri now exist as slaves of the HE'ELAN ARCHDUKES.

EPISTATE: Pol. Rnk. A ruling title amongst a caste of guild masters, overseeing the various trades and guilds that make up the cities of KORACHANI-occupied NÁRTHEL, SARASTRO and VENTHIR,.

EPISTEMIC COMMONWEALTH, the: see CYAE.

EPISTEMIC ESOTERY, ORDER OF: His. Org. Monastic order based found in various nations in the north west of SAMMAEA, including KHULL. SATHAII, the north of the CITIZENRY OF THALI, as well as the VESPERTINE LEAGUE, where it serves as an institute of learning, and whose monks follow a philosophy that is closely linked to the AELORAN church.

The order emerged in c. 100 RM, in the independent city of THERASH, not long before its expansion into an empire. They followed the Therashan religion, known as Aeloranism, though claimed that Therash had corrupted the churches beliefs to further its own goals. They concerned themselves with studying and furthering the true tenets of the faith – knowledge and understanding – and over the next centuries these monks spread with the armies of the THERASHIAN EMPIRE, making little effort to oppose the corrupted version that was being worshipped by Therash, instead founding multiple isolated monasteries where they could study undisturbed.

The fall of the Therashian empire in 902 RM led to the region falling to chaos and eventually five rival warlords emerged, bringing a semblance of order. Throughout this time of conflict, the Order of Epistemic Esotery served as a bastion of stability, with its members travelling across the lands of OLD THERASH, spreading news and knowledge where they went. They became beloved by the people but were feared by the warlords, who refused to act against them out of retaliation from their rivals. This allowed them to thrive across the lands of Old Therash.

In c. 1075 RM, monks from an isolated monastery in INGHULL (one of the five states to emerge from the ruin of Old Therash) became powerful in the region, teaching history and mathematics to its people. Some settled down in its more isolated towns, becoming invaluable advisors to the regional governors, where they became known as SUPHETS, who would go on to shape the history of Inghull.

By c. 1200 RM it had become common custom for most families to send their second sons to the monasteries to be educated, and in most cases, they would remain behind as monks. In Inghull, many of these young men would go on to become suphets, though in 1263 RM king ASIPHYAL III saw the power that they had gained, and issued an edict to abolish the custom. Within decades the Order began to wane in Inghull, though it survived in the other states of Old Therash. By 1631 RM the order had lost its link with the Aeloran church, which by then had been expelled from Inghull, and its monks had become historians and librarians, with their monasteries gaining great renown as libraries.

The Order remained largely unchanged across the rest of Old Therash and even spread to other regions, and monasteries can still be found today in Sathaii, the north of the Citizenry of Thali, as well as the VESPERTINE LEAGUE, where they continue to spread serve as teachers, working hand-in-hand with the Aeloran church.

EPISTOLARIES, the: also 'Gnostics'. Org. Secular loremasters based in the town of ADOCT in ALMAGEST after the persecution of their kind by the KORACHANI EMPIRE in 590 RM. They have maintained since their formation that knowledge is the ultimate form of power and a man devotes his life to the pursuit of wisdom and learning will be all the greater for his troubles. Some Epistolaries maintain that the gods of the ancient world were no more than mortals who had achieved a state of being far above that of lesser beings through their greed for knowledge. Realists renounce such claims, maintaining that it is impossible for one to learn everything there is to learn. According to a Grandmaster of the Epistolaries, now long dead, yet still revered as the most learned mind of all time, the more one learns, the greater his understanding of not only the world around him, but himself becomes.

EPISTOLARY TREE: Rel. Flo. Singular tree in the south east of TEMUIA, a few miles south east of the capital, DUARIAHAHN. It is of great religious significance in the region, and is claimed by SHAPERS and ANIMISTS to stand above a LACUNA bringing it close to the OTHERWORLD. It is named for the thousands of written prayers that are pinned to it, each one a prayer to the SPIRITS^(2.).

EPITRACHON: Geo. Large mountain dominating the c northern expanse of THE OLD FOREST, covering around 800-miles. The mountain is old, its peaks rounded and snow-capped only at their summits, their slopes gentle save for granite extrusions and plugs that dominate its southern face.

EPIZEUA: Ser. Settlement in the c of KULIGALA, in the c east of the CARCHEMISHI PENINSULA^(1.), in the east of SAMMAEA. It is a source of onyx gems (Pop. c. 7,500).

EPKAL: Set. Settlement in the c of SERROK (Pop. c. 4,300).

EPONN: Mil. Org. Elite rangers in ABATTUR. They operate as a self-sufficient far-ranging corps, operating for months in the wild alone, patrolling its borders and northern and southern highlands. It is not uncommon for them to be mounted, and for champions to be mounted on MASTODONS.

EPPARUM: Pol. Set. Capital of NIZZUM, in the south of SAMMAEA (Pop. unknown).

EPRASATTA: Set. Major city in the north of EPHATTA, in the south of WESTERN SAMMAEA (Pop. c. 98,600).

EPPIUR: Geo. Reef off the southern coast of the SHIBBOTHA ISLES, in the south west of SAMMAEA, in the south eastern waters of the SEA OF MERCUVIA.

EPUPTA: Geo. Island off the southern coast of the AEONAN Peninsula, forming a part of AEONAS. It is very close to the coast and will likely become part of the mainland within a few decades.

EPUSH: Ser. City in the island of ABATRA in the ISLAND STATES OF IRY, forming a part of the COTRIAN ISLES.

EQARHAA: Set. City in the west of the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT in the north west of SAMMAEA. The city is a major industrial centre and is known for its iron foundries (Pop. c. 50,000).

EQUARIANS, the: Law. Pol. Org. Knightly order founded by KING KHAGAN in the BAKHRAN STATES in 4002 RM to police his new kingdom. Drafted from the many noble families who supported his ascent to monarch, the Equarians are expert riders and are entrusted to uphold the word of the law and, in particular, the name of the king. They have become notorious for their treatment of those who publicly besmirch the name of Khagan, and are now distrusted by the common folk as being corrupt.

EQUERRY: 1. Soc. Rnk. In TEMUJA, a household attendant, entrusted with courier and minor ambassadorial duties. The term originates from its ancient meaning; that of an equestrian attendant or serf.

2. Mil. TETHYSIAN knight.

EQUIII: Set. Settlement in the south west of RAONGEN⁽²⁾, situated along the main land trade route of the nation. It is a haven to merchants and other travellers and has many hostels and merchant yards and warehouses (Pop. c. 10,000).

- ERAAN: Set. Fortified caravanserai in the south east of THE SURRACH, just south of the canyons of RALLATA (Pop. c. 3,000).
- ERADA: Geo. Island off the south western coast of WESTERN SAMMAEA, in the COTRIAN ISLES, forming a part of the ISLAND STATES OF IRY.
- ERAECHON: Geo. 175-mile-long ridge in the c south of THE OLD FOREST.
 Its western-face is noted for the black basaltic hexagonal pillars that make up its face for a 100-mile stretch.
- ERAIDAAL: Geo. Leg. Sinkhole in the south of Vaalk. It was once the site of a rural chapel that served the few homesteads and farms in the area, though an earthquake in 2896 RM saw the chapel and its environs swallowed up by the earth, leaving a gaping hole in its wake.

Later legends from the surrounding region claimed that the chapel had been the site of religious blasphemies and dark rituals that had caused it to be stricken down by the UNDYING MACHINE. The place remains shunned to this day despite it being reconsecrated various times by the church over the ensuing years.

- ERAKHAR: Rvr. River in the east of the territories of ETHISTONITH in RHINOCOLOURA, flowing south for 290-miles from sources in NAKARAS Mountains before meeting its parent, the river DAWWAN.
- ERAKHINA: Set. Settlement in the c north east of ANANTHUL. Its quarries are a major source of coal (Pop. c. 7,000).
- ERAKON: Str. Lighthouse in the far east of PELASGOS, overlooking the SEA OF SPIRES and guarding the harbours of TEREKON. It is known for its large bronze bell that is struck to warn ships of danger. The bell was once also rung when important figures died and local legend claims that peals can be heard on the centenaries of their deaths.
- ERAKON: Geo. Highlands on the coast of eastern PELASGOS.
- ERALYX: Sec. City in the north west of RHINOCOLOURA, along the eastern bank of river DAKHAN. The city is a centre of a dozen smaller settlements up and downstream that are major producers of legumes, that are stored in Eralyx before being traded (Pop. c. 42,000).
- ERAMARDA: Rvr. River in the east of THE VORANDINE, flowing north for 340-miles from sources in the ERIVOINE Mountains, before meeting its parent, the river MANADARAS.
- ERAMORN: Set. Fortified settlement in the contested lands of UTIMAN, in the c of PORPHYR (Pop. c. 8,600).
- ERANDA: Rui. Ruined city in the south west of HABOT, along the river MEDDERANDI. A large portion of the city collapsed into the river in 3889 RM, which also destroyed its busy bridge. The bridge was soon rebuilt from wrought iron and concrete, but the city was never rebuilt and its remaining people slowly moved to other settlements, and was eventually abandoned in c. 3940 RM.
- ERAPH: Set. Settlement in SALOROC, to the west of the capital⁽²⁾. It was once coastal, and known for its shipyards, though is now some miles from the coast, much diminished (Pop. c. 6,000).
- ERASACH: Set. Small coastal city in the west of the KORACHANI colony of TAVVADRA. Its primary industry is fishing (Pop. c. 12,000).
- ERASAD: Lake in the c of TARTAK, along the course of the river LLIRAD.
- ERASHA: 1. His. Ntn. Late FOURTH AGE culture that was effectively ended by the WAR OF SCOURGING, the only city of note to survive the event being its eponymous capital city, which fell under the sway of a tyrannical OTHERWORLDER known as BAKORI LAUR, who let the old civilisation crumble, remaining only in the eponymous city-state. See Vol III: Extinct States.
 - 2. His. Set. Ancient city-state that emerged from the eponymous civilisation that faltered and disappeared following the events of the WAR OF SCOURGING in the FOURTH AGE. Civil strife reduced the place to chaos in c. -1300 RM after which a war with SAMA PARIA left the place ruined, largely deserted. The ruins of the city were settled by Erashan descendants and ARABEALLI immigrants, and became known as ALATEAN.
- ERASHABETH OF DEHA: (B. 3966 RM) Pol. Present ruler of BASSORAH^(2,).

- ERASHALLA OF THE BOPHOGH: (B. 3952 RM) Pol. Current ruler and Queen of IZABAL⁽¹⁾, named after her mother's PEOPLE, a minority in Izabal.
- ERASHAN: His. Lan. Language spoken by the FOURTH AGE culture of Erasha, from which the languages of SOTHAN and BAKORAN would later emerge. See Vol II: Languages.
- ERASSOS: 1. Rvr. River in the north western mainland of the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS, flowing for 70-miles from the EROS highlands west of the TEREKION Mountains into the BROKEN SEA. Its waters are fouled by ATRAMENTAL ACTIVITY in the Eros, explaining the lack of settlements on its banks.
 - 2. Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED marsh surrounding the estuary of the river ${\sf Erassos}^{(1)}$.
- ERAT: Mil. Str. Fortress-isle 20-miles north east of the northern coast of HARAPPA (3), formed from silt deposits from the river TOTHA and TENE.
- ERATHA: Geo. Scrubland and sparse forest in the east of VENTHIR, south of the SESHARRIB river. Tough trees adapted to the dry environment are common here, such as terebinth, myrtle, oak and sweetgum. Carobs and pomegranate are harvested in the area, particularly the groves flanking the Sesharrib that fall under the auspices of the city of TIRTHANKAR.
- ERATHASH: Geo. Rock formations in the KHUNRATH region in the far north east of RHINOCOLOURA, covering around 3,500 square-miles. The region is renowned for its untouched raw beauty, the red tint of its granite rock and the near geometric intrusive igneous pillars that dominate it.
- ERATRAMEA: Soc. Pol. PATRICIAN HOUSE located in ALMAGEST. Its main business is brokering mercantile deals and arrangements, and has a major presence in many other major coastal cities across THE INNER SEA. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.
- $\underline{\sf ERATON}\!\!: \mathit{Lak}.$ Lake in the east of <code>KORACHAN</code>, along the course of the river <code>CHANI</code>.
- ERATYTH: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the south west of THE OLD FOREST, overlooking AZAZEM. It forms part of the XYLLAUL defensive line.

- ERBALA: Set. Small city in the south east of IO, known to have been continuously inhabited since at least the mid FOURTH AGE. The city surrounds an ancient hilltop walled settlement that now serves as the government's hub (Pop. c. 11,000).
- ERBAYU: Set. Metropolis and largest city in CUTH, built within a large sinkhole in the south of the ERES IRKALLA highlands. The city is characterised by its two levels (over the years the city has outgrown the sinkhole and now also exists on the land above), its many pillars and tiered structures and its vast network of hanging gardens and aqueducts (Pop. c. 1,800,000).
- ERCHIAR: Sea. Large bay the south east of WESTERN MENISCEA, dividing the north east of AHOPAH from the south of VAEVECTA.
- ERDEN: 1. Lak. Lake in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of ALAMUT. The lake is about 1,250-square miles and forms part of the river SARA.
- 2. Set. Settlement in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of ALAMUT. It is an agricultural centre, producing grains and cured meats, which are sold on to merchants passing along the GREAT ROAD, either for use as provisions, or to be sold on to other settlements along the trade-route (Pop. c. 7,500).
- 3. Set. Fortified settlement in the north of THE SURRACH, in the southern foothills of the NGHALLEAL Mountains, about 80-miles south of CYHLAGHARR. It is famed for its large dungeon-like prison that is hew from the harsh bedrock of the mountains. Convicts from across the north of the Surrach are sent to the prison of Erden, where they spend their lives rotting in darkness, the hope of escape almost non-existent (Pop. c. 2 5000)
- ERDI: Set. Settlement in the north of THE SURRACH, close to the border with EREBETH (Pop. c. 4,000).
- ERDUIN: For. Sparse forest in the c north east of TISARA. It is believed to be the remnant of a far older forest that was largely cut down throughout the FOURTH AGE, though parts of which have regrown over the ensuing millennia.

EREBBER: Set. Coastal settlement in the north of SURUTUR (Pop. c. 4.300).

EREBETH: 1. Dem. 'Erebethian'. Ntn. SAMMAEAN nation, south west of the SEA OF DANAEL, first explored by the mariner NAVAH BERDEN in 566 RM. EREBETH had eluded many previous exploration due the sizeable Mountain along its coast and the CYHLAGHARRI OGHURS that lived there. Berden equated its beauty with that of his wife, after whom he named the land. It was originally called CALLISTEA.

Its native society was rigidly hierarchal, with many different castes and societal tiers. Oghurs formed a part of its lower castes, including as slaves and servants.

It was fully explored centuries later, with integration and trade established with KORACHANI merchants in c. 1100 RM. It would slowly assimilate parts of imperial culture until in 1743 RM it became a vassal state of Korachan. It became an independent nation in 3698 RM during events leading to the SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE, leading to the formation of its monarchy soon after. It became an ally of ALTHA⁽²⁾ by 3712 RM, by which point it had assimilated much of the more elitist parts of Korachani culture, with the divide between classes becoming severe. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

2. Geo. Plains that in the time of \underline{BERDEN} were beautiful and full of flowers, but now they are dry and waning.

EREBETH, GATE OF: Sea. Geo. western-most reach of THE INNER SEA forming a sea-strait, separating the nations of TAHALL in LLACHATUL from SAGITTARIA in SAMMAEA. It was once recorded as being as much as 43-miles wide though due to the diminishing of the Inner Sea, it has shrunk to little more than 13-miles wide, revealing the island of NERITA in the process.

It was crossed and described by the explorer $\underline{\text{NAVAH BERDEN}}$ in 565 RM.

EREBETHIAN DIVIDE: Geo. Continental divide that forms the westernmost border of the INNER SEA, between the LLACHATULI DIVIDE and the KHARKHARADONTID DIVIDE. It stretches for 800-miles from the north along the CROSLET and DOLMEN Mountains, down the BELLEPHARA and KENUNIT Mountains, into the NGHALLEAL and STRAMINEA Mountains.

EREBISH: Set. Settlement in the north of RHINOCOLOURA, situated along the course of the river DAKHAN. It is known for its legume productions (Pop. c. 10,000).

EREBU: 1. Set. Coastal city in the north of ARKOS⁽¹⁾, on the western-coast of the SEA OF ERIA. It has a large harbour that overlooks the entrance into the sea. (Pop. c. 101,000).

2. Mil. Str. Fortress in the north of $\underline{ARKOS}^{(1.)}$, on the western-coast of the $\underline{SEAOFERIA}$, overlooking the entrance into the sea.

ERECCIDART: Set. Coastal city in the south of LHACCIDA. It is the south westernmost stop along the ISHMMARRAN TRAIL, and caters to the many merchants and travellers that cross through it, and has large dockside warehouses, where goods from across SOUTHERN SAMMAEA make their way to other nations (Pop. c. 58,500).

ERECHRIS: Set. Settlement in the south west of HOLOLACH⁽¹⁾. Its main industry is lobster fishing (Pop. c. 4,700).

EREDATA: His. Ntn. Ancient FIFTH AGE territory once belonging to native YARAOMIC PEOPLE. It was situated in the north of SAMMAEA, forming the north easternmost of their ancestral lands in what is today BA'AKH. It was overrun by KORACHANI forces between 550 – 680 RM, during which time native Yaraomic People were taken as slaves or driven out, forced into ever-dwindling territories.

Like most of Yaraomic history, very little remains of its people's culture today, and the caste of lorekeepers known as the IARAOM GRABBA travel across northern Sammaea searching for ancient artefacts to take to their fortress-library in IARSHUGGAH.

EREDET: Set. Settlement in the region of FURAKISH in the south east of KHARKHARADONTIS.

EREDOS: Mil. Str. Fort in the north west of $\underline{\text{CHANDOS}}^{(3.)}$.

EREDUI: Rvr. Spring in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of ALAMUT that supplies water to a major aqueduct that waters the city of Alamut.

EREDWYN: Rvr. River in the north of LOEGRESS^(1.), flowing east for over 280-miles from sources in the VOULLOR and TREBAURA Mountains, before meeting its mouth at the SALDHUIN wetlands.

EREGAT TOMBS, the: Rui. Ancient rock-cut tombs in the badlands of SHAROOK Highlands in the far west of ZHARIAH⁽²⁾. The tombs date back to the THIRD AGE and their walls are covered in a logographic script that is not found elsewhere, meaning that little is known of them. The bodies found in the tombs are almost all SHIE.

EREHANN: Rui. Ancient FIFTH AGE YARAOMIC settlement in the territory of ASUWAN, in what later became the settlement of MEKENA in the far east of VAALK. It was one of few Yaraomic settlements of note, and was overtaken by KORACHANI forces in c. 180 RM during their conquest of VALKA.

EREIK: Ind. Set. Quartz and shale mining settlement in the south west of LYRIDIA, south of the HELIOPARNASSUS Mountains. The quartz needed for AUGUR rituals is mined here and much of its produce is sold to merchants and resold along the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 2,500).

EREKAAN: Set. Scrap city in the far south of LAASKHA, on the eastern bank of river SAARATAPARR. It is made from scrap materials from the neighbouring city of HESHIACHAN. It is a lawless place, attracting vagabonds and delinquents from across the river (Pop. c. 6,000).

EREKHA: Set. Coastal settlement in the south east of LAASKHA, along the main trade-route along its eastern coast. The settlement is a major supplier of fish to the area (Pop. c. 7,200).

ERELUL: Geo. Major island within the Federation of UGURIIT.

EREMIS: Set. Small settlement in the east of VÂRR, overlooking the BAY OF TARRO, though it is 3-miles from the coast (Pop. c. 3,800).

EREMMARA: Set. Small city in the south east of TAAN AN, built at the base of three gigantic columns supporting the AQUEDUCT OF CREPHITHISS (Pop. c.).

EREMUTUL: Set. City in the west if NIZZUM. It forms a part of the ISHMMARRAN TRAIL and imports many goods from abroad that find their way across wider MULIEBRAN trade-routes (Pop. c. 67,000).

EREN: Rui. Town in TAMAR, where in c. -50 RM the PHYSI philosophy (and later, religion) emerged. The religion rapidly spread across Tamar and, in the wake of natural disasters such as flooding and PLAGUE, it gained massive popularity, with Eren rising as a holy city, noted for its mystics and philosophers. Ironically, the city was destroyed by floods in 1743 RM, and abandoned, its people seeking refuge in the fortified settlement of KAHREN.

EREN BHATTOY: Set. City in the c of IACIO. It is a major industrial centre (Pop. c. 40,000).

ERENAST: Rvr. River in the north east of AHRISHEN, flowing south west for around 250-miles from sources in the A SAVI and the TEN PRINCES mountain ranges, before meeting its parent, the river SAVEST. It is connected to river LANAEST via NEQALENI^(2.) canal.

ERENDUN: 1. Set. Major city in the north west of KEPHUAAN. It is a major industrial centre, and is home to most TECHNARCANA produced by the nation. It lies along the course of the river SHAYANDI, which powers most of its manufactories, though which has become heavily polluted by heavy industries for a hundred miles downstream and its water is not deemed safe for consumption (Pop. c. 480,000).

2. Ser. Fortified coastal city in the far west of $\underline{\text{METHUMN}}$ that is perched along rocky cliffs overlooking the $\underline{\text{SEA OF MERCUVIA}}$. Founded in c. 3200 RM during $\underline{\text{VODARCH}}$ rule as a military outpost to protect the nations' westernmost coastline from seaborne invaders and pirates, it slowly grew into a settlement, becoming a large military port and dockyard by c. 3600 RM. It is known for its labyrinthine alleys and snaking streets, and its people are independent, and cold with outsiders, whose presence in their city they do not tolerate (Pop. c. 40,000).

ERENEA: Sea. Body of water forming the south western part of the MIROVEAN OCEAN, bordered by the nations of SABAISA, ZHARIAH⁽²⁾ and DHAT. Its western-most reaches serve as a strait that connects the larger Mirovean Ocean with the SEA OF LETHEA, between the north western coast of Zhariah, and the southern-most part of the PORPHYRI PENINSULA.

ERENIGG: Set. Small city in the c south west of PHYRR, controlling a pass across the MAR SAHIGH Mountains (Pop. c. 12,000).

EREPHYANA III: (B. 1858 – D. 1919 RM) His. Lol. QUEEN of INGHULL from 1875 RM until her death. She married the minor noble UBÉR KOPH in 1877 RM, bringing the house of KOPH (which had had close ties to the royal family since before the coronation of her ancestor, the first king of Inghull, ASIPHYAL I) into the royal family.

EREPIDIARII: also 'Telekineticist', and 'Telechirit'. Nou. 'Erepidiarear'. Plr. 'Erepidiariin'. Sup. Org. Mil. Rnk. An order of SHAPERS in the KORACHANI EMPIRE, whose MINASTERIA(^{2.)} has been based in the city of KORACHAN in the nation of KORACHAN since 1239 RM. They are ATRAMENTAL shapers whose SPHERE grants them the power to manipulate objects without touching them.

Most Erepidiariin make a career working in industrial and civil engineering projects, where they abilities are useful in controlling materials. They use their powers to fine-tune machinery and engines, and can help with lifting and constructing works.

Others can make a living from performing, using their abilities to put on impressive juggling displays and sleight of hand.

Some Erepidiariin can also use their abilities to levitate, using the push/pull principle (essentially pushing against the ground has the same effect as pulling yourself into the air), making them an asset in a myriad of roles, including surveying, navigating, and the military, where they can spy on enemy movements and formations.

Those with a delicate touch can work in the medical field, helping in carrying out unintrusive surgeries and other procedures.

Others are capable of passively discharging a steady stream of force outwards. This has various uses. A mundane example would be displacing incoming rain, keeping the shaper dry, while a more advanced use of this skill would be projecting a shield against incoming projectiles. Accomplished Erepidiariin can stop bullets and shrapnel dead in their tracks, making them incredibly useful in the military. Conversely, they can also use that force to expel projectiles, making effective as living weapons. An Erepidiarii with a handful of bullets and no gun can be just as effective as a skilled marksman.

Most Erepidiariin find out early on in their training that they have a knack at manipulating objects made of certain materials, indicating a proclivity for one sphere over others. These Erepidiariin must train hard to overcome these limitations, as professionals are expected to be able to work with any material, and any shortcoming may prove disastrous in practice. See Vol IV: Spheres and types of Shaping.

ERES: m. Myt. His. Per. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, a SCION of the DEMIURGE ARIMASPI, and half-brother to ENNEL.

The scion is believed by the VAPULIM of DATEPHA to be buried in the ORMARIKH Mountains, on the Island of ISEA. His son was GAEAL. See Vol IV: Scions. Children of the Gods.

ERES IRKALLA: Geo. Highlands dominating the c of CUTH, forming an extension of the fold mountains of MO-ORASSIM. The region is named after the IRKALLA, the children of the DEMIURGE NERGAAL, and are full of life, their southern-most reaches covered in jungles, and their c peaks known for their moss-covered surfaces.

ERESHKIGAL: Geo. Mountain-range around 600-miles long dividing SABIA in the west from KASPIA in the east. It is an extension of the ILLIGARHI Mountains, and stretches north into the SEA OF BIELOST in the form of a peninsula that extends 150-miles into the sea, known as the SILVERPEAKS.

ERET: Dem. 'Eretian'. 1. Sea. Bay to the south east of the SEA OF SERPENTS, bordered by the nations of Eret^(2.), the URTAN LEAGUE, and IZABAL^(1.).

2. Ntn. Small nation to the north of THE SURRACH, in the north west of SAMMAEA. The region was founded by HOUSE ERET^(4.) of KORACHAN in 1703 RM, who subsequently gained control of the lands to the north of the present-day Surrach. There was little integration with the SAVI natives, and as a result, the ethnicity of the region remains largely Korachani to this day, though its language has slowly taken on many aspects of the SAVIUDI tongue, making it an odd mix of the two, becoming known by c. 2500 RM as ERETIAN. See Vol III: the Nations of Elyden.

- 3. Pol. Set. Main city-state and capital of the eponymous region in the north west of THE SURRACH. The city is the seat of power to the ROYAL HOUSE OF ERET, and is also home to KORACHANI embassies (Pop. c. 720.000).
- 4. Soc. Pol. KORACHANI PATRICIAN HOUSE that colonised the north western lands of THE SURRACH in 1703 RM and founded a new nation there, under the banner of Korachan, called Eret^(2.). A monarchy emerged from the house there in 1825 RM, and rules to this day as an ally of the Korachani empire, whilst maintaining close ties with the Surrach.

The realm is a link between Korachan and the Surrach and trades with the east and west, and has a powerful navy, controlling the $\underline{\text{SEA OF}}$ $\underline{\text{AAHES}}$. Its ties with Korachan were slowly lost following the $\underline{\text{SUNDERING}}$ $\underline{\text{OF THE EMPIRE}}$ in 3705 RM, though it continues to trade east. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

ERET, ROYAL HOUSE OF: Pol. Rnk. The royal house of ERET^(2.), which has ruled uninterrupted since 1825 RM. It maintains affiliations with HOUSE Eret^(3.) in the east, from which it is descended, and Eret is a major hub of trade between the Surrach and the KORACHANI EMPIRE.

ERETH: major city in the west of MECHABET, overlooking the CAMARINAL SEA (Pop. c. 138,000).

ERETIAN: Lan. language spoken by the people of ERET⁽²⁾, in the north west of SAMMAEA. It has at its root the SAVIUDI tongue common across all of THE SURRACH, though was heavily influenced by the language of KORACHAN that house Eret brought with it in 1703 RM. Over the years the language has taken on its own identity, disparate from its two common roots. See Vol II: Languages.

ERETREA: Set. Island-settlement off the coast of the prefecture of SONTADRIS in the south east of HOLOLACH^(1.), overlooking the BAY OF BOKKA (Pop. Unknown).

ERETTIR: Set. Settlement in the south of EZASUH^(2.) (Pop. Unknown).

ERGALIA: Fau. Horned long-legged ruminant native to the hills to the west & south of the HAMSHEN plains. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

ERGAMMA: Set. Fortified city in the north west of NÁRTHEL and centre of opiate production there. The region around the city for miles around is covered in expansive poppy fields and farmsteads (Pop. c. 19,000).

ERGANON: Set. Small city in the south east of PORPHYR, overlooking the BAY OF ANDAFAR (Pop. c. 16,000).

ERGATIS: Ind. Set. City and major CERUSE producer in ATARAXIA (Pop. c. 38,200).

ERGEN: His. Ast. Ancient FIFTH AGE ALMAGESTI astronomer who in 52 RM described the comet VALASHNA, based on earlier FIFTH AGE accounts

ERGENT: Set. Settlement in the c north west of SERROK (Pop. c. 5,000).

ERGIME: Set. Small city in the c north east of SABAISA, along the course of the river MAYED (Pop. c. 14,800).

ERGONA: Ind. Set. Coastal MANUFACTORY city in the north western mainland of the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS. The manufactory is separated from the mainland by a narrow bridge-like isthmus (Pop. c. 62,000).

ERIA: Sea. Small sea to the north of ARKOS(1.).

ERIAPUS: See. Major coastal city in the west of CALBIA^(1.) overlooking the BAY OF BELENUS. It is the nations' largest port and its main contact with the outside world (Pop. c. 125,000).

ERIAS: also 'the Black Tower'. Tec. ATRAMENTAL SIPHON ENGINE in the region of ESCUNUR, in the south of the nation of DURCHAA^(1.). Constructed in c. 2000 RM to concentrate the considerable Atramental energies in the area, where many Atramental experiments were conducted. But the concentration of the Atramenta in the region was too much and the place was destroyed in a calamity that left it a ruin in c. 3220 RM, its researchers, SET and TECHNARCANISTS obliterated, their soulless bodies haunting its rusted chambers under the sway of the Atramenta.

ERIAS VALIAN: m. Per. (B. 3929 RM) High-ranking member of the CONCORDANTIST ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION. Officially a High-ABEYANCER, he is famed within the Order for his exploits over the years, and is rumoured to have spent many working deep within enemy territories, though to what ends remains unknown.

Though healthy and able-bodied for his age, his field work has lessened over the past decade, and he has come to teach others, passing down his skills to younger agents. Known for his ruthless efficiency in suppressing rebellions and innovations, he is believed to have once been a prominent member of the APASTRONIC CONGRESS.

ERIBEN: Set. Settlement in c north west of TISARA. Its main industry is the breeding and training of mastodons, which are used across the nation as beasts of burden (Pop. c. 6,800).

ERIDANA: His. Rvr. Ancient now-dry tainted river in the UMBRA SOKHAR that once flowed north from the northern face of the MOLOTH KHAMMOTHUL Mountains before meeting its parent, the river SPICIA, at the NDEPHARA canyon. The river was last described as flowing in c. 2800 RM and it is unknown exactly when and why it ran dry. Its corruption stemmed from tainted aquifers that were part of the river source, beneath the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region of TELLURIA.

ERIDETH: Rvr. Marshes within the city of KHADON in KORACHAN. They were originally a mile to the west of the city, but its growth over the last millennium has seen the city envelop them. Today they form part of the KASIMMON PUMPING STATION.

ERIHAAS: Geo. Harsh plains in the c of the nation of DURCHAA (1.), in the north of LLACHATUL. The plains are known for the large fauna that travel south across them in summer and for their subterranean UMBRA reserves.

The region is categorised as LEAST CONCERN by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES, though areas immediately surrounding umbra mines may be more severely categorised.

ERIILIA: Mil. Str. Major citadel in the territories of the tribe of AUEREN in the far north of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER, overlooking the fields of BAULDOR in SIRIPHAGOS. It was stormed by EHBOTIAN armies pursuing Auereni attackers in 462 RM, after which many Auereni people were taken north as slaves and put to work in Ehbotian industries — mines, quarries etc. Eriilia was later rebuilt and became the heart of a long defensive wall, which now lies mostly in ruins. The citadel remains, and have been restored and renovated many times over the years, and is now a hub for Aurereni armies and is the staging point for raids into Siriphagos.

ERIKIN GARAKHAMMAN: m. His Mil. Per. (B. 3648 – D. 3705 RM)
Historical SARASTROAN SARAKASHAR (general) who rose to prominence in c. 3780 RM as a mounted lieutenant who spent his days in the south of Sarastro, in the HAAGEN MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER.

He was famed even then for the PHYLACTER that he rode, which was rumoured to have been caught and tamed by himself as a young man. He later became Sarakashar of a mounted regiment in 3701 RM and played a large role in the later WAR OF SUNDERING, making a name for himself attacking KORACHANI forces around the city of TAHMAL and later attacking the city itself, being captured in the process. Despite attempts at locating him following the war, he was never found, and his eventual fate remains unknown. It is likely that he died as a Korachani slave or prisoner.

ERILAU: Set. Small city in the c-south east of the tribe of ESSENIA, in the c south west of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER, along the course of the river PADDAS (Pop. c. 12,000).

ERINAKH LAUR: lit. 'New Erinat'. His. Ntn. Nation in the north east of SAMMAEA, in what is now the north of RHINOCOLOURA that appeared in 1403 RM following the retreat of KORACHANI colonists from the region of ERINAT in 1195 RM, when the INTERREGES were left as caretakers of its abandoned mining operations there. Over the years they would forsake their Korachani roots, adopting local culture and traditions. Coupled with KZANADEMI immigrants from the south and the natives of Erinat, a new nation appeared, calling itself Erinakh Laur, which means 'new Erinat' in the Kzanademi tongue.

By c. 1780 RM Erinakh Laur had divided itself into three prefectures the north, south, and east, ruled from SARDONYX, HAZOR, and ERIVUR, respectively. Amongst them, Hazor would become far richer than the others through its industries and trade-routes, making its rulers believe the prefecture was more important than the others, leading them to demand more autonomy. This was refused by the ruling council, and Hazor would distance itself from the other prefectures, expanding south. While Erinakh Laur remained a singular nation on paper, in truth it had ended with the growing ego of Hazor's rulers, the MAATHORA, and by around 2400 RM Hazor had effectively excised itself from Erinakh Laur, leaving the other two prefectures to fend for themselves. Sardonyx and Erivur petitioned the Maathora to think of the common good, but it was too late. In 2483 RM Hazor declared its independence, effectively challenging Sardonyx and Erivur to refute the claim. Knowing that they were no match for the military might of Hazor, they had no choice but to accept.

Hazor came under the leadership of the OTHERWORLDER NEANDER in 2965 RM. He ousted the Maathora and moved his armies north to challenge the remaining prefectures of Erinakh Laur for dominance. The two prefectures fractured, the dream of a united Erinakh Laur ended. Neander would then pressure both Sardonyx and Erivur to capitulate, and secreted spies in both capitals to facilitate this, but neither prefecture capitulated. In 3194 RM Hazor besieged the city of Erivur, leaving it half-destroyed, its populace decimated. No sooner was the city been taken, did the Hazori armies march against the sole remaining prefecture capital – Sardonyx – but there was no need. The loss of Erivur led to a cessation of hostilities in 3211 RM, with the eventual capitulation of Sardonyx, bringing Hazor in full control of what had once been Erinakh Laur. Neander renamed his new empire NEANDARA, after himself, bringing to an end a nation that had existed for just over 2,000-years. See Vol II: Extinct Nations.

ERINAT: His. Set. Ntn. Ancient city-state that originated in the north east of SAMMAEA in what are now the south east of Aethios and the north east of RHIND COLOURA. Having located the IDOL OF BAPHOMET, the nomadic Erinati people would settle the land around the confluence of the river DAKHAN and SARADAR, building a temple to house the Idol, which became an object of veneration to them. The people of Erinat would spread over the coming centuries, founding new settlements along the two rivers, founding the settlement of SARADRYX (now SARDONYX) in c. 50 RM.

The arrival of KORACHANI missionaries and colonists to the area on their way to founding new mines for the empire in c. 380 RM brought with clashes with locals. As mining operations increased, Erinat would suffer greatly against soldiers that were better-equipped than them, and settlements were lost as people retreated from Imperial immigrants.

By around 610 RM merchants from HAZOR made their way north, bringing with them precious ores to Erinat, and its capital, TIGAR, and a well-guarded trade-network was formed between them, as well as the LIEGELANDS OF LAKERTHA, to the west.

In around 750 RM, at the height of Korachani activity in the region, the Idol of Baphomet was stolen by a rogue shaper. This devastated the people of Erinat, who by then had become dependent on it, and the religion that had arisen around the Idol waned, disappearing completely by around 1000 RM, along with much of Erinati culture.

Between around 850-1000~RM the people of Erinat (amongst others) would experience a cultural renaissance, as KZANADEMI refugees fled to the region from the distant south, bringing with them a healthy culture that rapidly took root in Erinat, filling the void left by the loss of the Idol. Their polytheistic religion the Kzanademi brought with them found a foothold, as did their language, which within centuries had largely supplanted the old complex Erinati tongue.

Korachani expansion continued over the next centuries, as resources continued to dwindle. In 1195 RM the region was left in the hands of the INTERREGES, who would remain in the region until 1403 RM, by which point support from Korachan was all but terminated. By that time, they had been assimilated by local culture and traditions.

What were once the colonies of Korachan, the state of Erinat, and the Kzanademi migrants, had all mingled, becoming one people, one nation – ERINAKH LAUR, meaning 'new Erinat' in the KZANADEMI tongue. See Vol III: Extinct States.

ERINGHA: Set. City in the c south west of DURCHAA^(1.). Its main industry is iron mining (Pop. c. 33,000).

- ERION ITHASSAI: m. Per. (B. 3829 RM) High-ranking member of the SOMNIARECHI ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION. A storied explorer and daredevil, he is amongst the most famous (or infamous) members from any of the Sanctified Orders, with his exploits serialised in cheap pulp adventures that were popular amongst young freemen.
- ERIROTUR: 1. Mil. Str. Coastal fortress in the south west of the ARITEAN peninsula in the south of THETIS, guarding the entrance into the SEA OF FRITTHEA
 - 2. Set. Coastal city surrounding the above fortress^(1,) in the south west of the Aritean peninsula in the south of THETIS (Pop. c. 43,600).
- ERISHI AIA: Geo. Plains in the c east of EASTERN MENISCEA, dominating the south east of ENDUI and the north of EASTERN LARISH. It is known for its FIRMAMENTALLY-sensitive plants, particularly the shrub EFIRMAGRA, which has been used as both a medicine and poison for thousands of years.
- ERISTHAR RAHMI: m. Per. (B. 3928 RM) High-ranking member of the MORÉHAN ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION. Officially bearing the rank of High-VIGILATOR, he has been stationed in the city of ZEPHANICHAN since 3961 RM, where he oversees the actions of the Order there.

He has also sat on the ruling council of Zephanichan since 3977 RM, where he serves as a chair. Praised for his tactical brilliance and ruthless efficiency, he has overseen various campaigns against upstart cults and political movements, ending them before they could spread to become a true problem to the metropolis.

- ERITASH: Set. Small city in the c north west of the tribe of EBURUL in the south east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. It is a major source of aluminium in the Growing Mountains (Pop. c. 12,200).
- ERITEI: Soc. Mil. Marauder tribes populating the ERITEIAN plains in the east of KARAKHAS.
- ERITEIA: 1. Geo. Plains dominating eastern KARAKHAS and home to one of three tribes of marauders that plague KARAKHAS, known as the ERITEI.
 2. Set. Main settlement and centre of the Eriteian population in KARAKHAS (Pop. unknown).
- ERITRA: Set. City in BISBUT. It is one of few places where LODESTONES are found in large amounts in the NEAR HEMISPHERE, and it has been a major manufacturer of lodestones that are used in DISCHARGERS and TECHNARCANE engines across the INNER SEA REGION (Pop. c. 14,000).
- ERIVASTA: Sup. Geo. DUSTSTONE expanse, over 325-miles long in the north west of DURCHAA⁽¹⁾, forming its north western border with the unclaimed lands of VALBAR⁽²⁾. The last 200-miles of the course of the river VARAGOD is known for its canyons and waterfalls, as the water travels through duststone formations.
- ERIVOINE: Geo. Mountain in WESTERN LLACHATUL, forming a border between the south east of THE VORANDINE and $\underline{RAONGEN}^{(2)}$.
- ERIVUR: Set. Major city in the east of RHINOCOLOURA, along the course of the river SARAKHAR. After the INTERREGES were ousted from the region in 1403 RM, it became the capital of one of three prefectures of ERINAKH LAUR (now Rhinocoloura). It was besieged in 3194 RM during a brutal civil war that left it devastated, its populace decimated. It would later recover and go on to become one of the most industrious cities in Rhinocoloura (Pop. c. 180,000).
- ERKA: Set. Trade-town in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of EDICULE^(1.). It forms a part of the GREAT ROAD trade-route, and sees much mercantile traffic passing through its borders (Pop. c. 5,000).
- ERKALA: 1. Pol. Set. The capital city of CUTH, built on the southern slopes of the ALTAR OF VAM ATAR. It originated from the temple of the same name, constricted in 2252 RM by the prophet and shaper KENG WALIN, following the discovery of the HAND OF NERGAAL in the caverns of TILLAYON. A settlement rapidly grew around the temple, and the capital was moved there from the abandoned city of KARKAUTH in 2275 RM.

Its people are immensely spiritual, their entire lives regimented and bound by the strict and archaic dogma of the $\underline{\text{TWIN CHURCHES OF CUTH}}$ (Pop. c. 830,000).

2. Rel. Str. Specifically the temple that was constructed in 2252 RM to house the HAND OF NERGAAL by the prophet KENG WALIN, around which the above city later appeared. The temple is vast, with tunnels

- stretching deep underground where Winter Solstice rituals would take place, and the mummified bodies of ascetics were buried.
- ERKI: His. Eth. Ancient early FIFTH AGE barbarians whose settling of the region of HARA, alongside HÁRR and the VARL, would later lead to the birth of the CITY-KINGDOMS OF THE HARÉSHKI. They are descended from the far older HATOUMIAN people who would go on to populate the land known today as SAUA.

ERKUN: Rvr. Major river in the south west of AKANTHRA, flowing north west to the coast at the SEA OF KRIHIEK.

- ERMAE: 1. Sea. Bay in the c north east of LOEGRESS^(1.), in the east of the SEA OF AKRY. The river MORRINACH flows into it.
 - 2. Set. Fortified city in the c north east of $\underline{\text{LOEGRESS}}^{(1)}$, along the course of the river $\underline{\text{MORRINACH}}$. It is a major agricultural centre and is also home to military garrison, whose troops patrol the $\underline{\text{MOTTANIA}}^{(1)}$ valley and surrounding headlands (Pop. c. 48,000).
- ERMMAS: Set. Small fortified city in the far south east of LOEGRESS^(1.). Ermmas is isolated from most other settlements in the nation, and its people are survivalists. Indeed, it serves as a recruiting ground for much of the nations' military, with many novice soldiers sent to garrison the fortress of LUCH (Pop. c. 18,000).
- ERNITUM: Pol. District in BAMOTH, ALMAGEST, known for its printing presses.
- EROCH MAER: also 'the Lonely Peak'. Geo. Mountain peak in the south western steppes of TEMUJA. Its highest peak is said to be home to the goose-spirit TENRA, and its high-temple, the DHU TENRA.
- EROCHAN: Set. Major harbour in the KORACHANI colony of TAVVADRA off the western-coast of SAMMAEA, overlooking the BAY OF OXTER. It appeared in c. 3600 RM after centuries of diminishing sea levels left the colony's capital landlocked (Pop. c. 42,000).
- ERODUH: Set. Settlement in the north east of AQUARIIA (Pop. c. 3,000).
- EROLUSIA: His. Set. Ancient capital of the UALLA MIGHAN empire. Today it lies in ruins, miles to the south west of the coast of the SEA OF MOSASA that it once called home. It was at its height between 1500 1600 RM, at which time its harbours are filled with great catamarans that fish and trade up and down the western coast of the MIROVEAN OCEAN, though by this time the Ualla Mighan empire has become over extended across much of present-day CHEIRA. A military coup in 1663 led to a year of war, which left the Reformed Empire of Ualla Migha in power.
- ERON: Rui. Ancient ruined city in the c west of OPHAR, dating back to the early FIFTH AGE nation of ERON SOTH. It is believed to have been a politically important city, possibly originating as a waystation between large cities where government agents congregated, prospering into the reign of OPRET⁽²⁾. Many artefacts, including bronze and marble busts were looted from Eron over the centuries, many of them finding their way in the private residences of PATRICIANS in PARTHIS and surrounding lands.
- ERON SOTH: His. Ntm. Extinct early FIFTH AGE nation descended from the late FOURTH AGE culture of ERASHA. It became a vassal to PARTHIA in 237 RM, and it enjoyed a period of prosperity under Parthian leadership, with the two cities of OPHAM and OPRET becoming culturally and economically influential.

Following a devastating attack on the Parthian capital of AZORIA in 537 RM that left the region devastated, Eron Soth found itself in a position to break away, which it did in 542 RM. Following the signing of the SEVERANCE TREATY in 592 RM, the region's territories were divided in two amongst the main cities of Opham and Opret, which became known as the Kingdom of Opham and the Principality of Opret, respectively. See Vol III: Extinct States.

- ERRA: Sea. Sea separating the south of CUTH from the headland of IRKALLA^(1.). The sea was divided in two by an isthmus as the sea levels of ELYDEN waned in the Fifth Age, leaving the island of Irkalla connected to the mainland. Both sides of the sea are still called Erra by locals, with outsiders referring to them as the western Erra and eastern Erra. The eastern coast of the Erra is known for its particularly dense vegetation, and the many rivers that flow into it.
- ERRAN: Com. Set. Small trade city in the north east of SHOTHA. It is an intermediary of trade connecting the west the ALMAGESTI city of APOTEGA with the east the city-state of GÂTHA (Pop. c. 16,000).
- ERRAT: Set. Coastal settlement in the west of NAARETH. Like many coastal settlements in the region, most of its buildings are constructed on stilts to weather the high tides of the region (Pop. c. 6,200).
- ERRATAZ: Geo. Dry-temperate plains in the south west of THE SURRACH, to the west of the deserts of THAMAAZ.
- ERRATRODIA: Set. City in the c north of MECHABET, along the main trade-route passing through the region and along the course of the river ACHET. The city emerged in c. 2940 RM as a caravanseral though later developed into a granite quarry, for which it is still renowned, though it still forms part of the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 33,000).
- ERREDH: Set. Major city in the south east of AYAD (Pop. c. 140,000).
- ERRELIS: Ser. Small city in the c of the PARTHISAN colony of IBANNEM^(1.). It is a major producer of food in the region, though also operates a few small-scale LODESTONE mines (Pop. c. 16,000).
- ERRHOR: lit. 'aberration'. Mor. Common word within the KORACHANI EMPIRE, used to denote those particularly aberrant creatures born of untainted wombs. Similar to GROTESQUES, though is rarely used to describe a creature (no matter how tainted) born to humans.
- ERRO RETH: Set. Fortified settlement in the far north of ALAM BETHYL, guarding the ALBUR pass north into the GEYISH STERKEM Mountains. Its people are expert hunters and trappers (Pop. c. 4,200).
- ERROLEA: Set. Fortified city built on the north east of the hill of ARRODIA in the c of AHRISHEN. The city is built atop an old star-fort that once guarded what was then a large island off the western-coast of AHRISHEN, though was abandoned following the drying of the surrounding sea that left the island part of the mainland.
 - The city is surrounded by an impressive 3-layer star-fort that and was heavily defended, never having been captured, though once changed hands through political dissent. (Pop. c. 12,000).
- ERRTAH: Lak. Lake in the IMMERUTH basin in the north west of LAASKHA. It is the smallest of three lakes in the region, all of which are remnants of a large bay that until c. 2600 RM stretched 175-miles east of the STRAIT OF SKAROS, beyond the city of FAALAR. The other 2 lakes are the Immeruth and the SHAOMATH.

- ERTHYDEA: 1. Sea. Savage sea south of SUDUNIR, dividing the east of MENISCEA from the west of LLACHATUL. The sea is noted for its treacherous waters and the gigantic anti-clockwise maelstrom that dominates its inner-most reaches, known as the Erthydea⁽²⁾.
- 2. Sea. Specifically, a great maelstrom in the centre of the eponymous sea. The cyclopean whirlpool flows anti-clockwise, affecting sea currents along the northern coasts of the west of LLACHATUL and the east of MENISCEA, affecting sea trade and travel in the area.
- ERTHYDEAN FLOW: Sea. Brings warm waters north from the SEA OF LYNNAE, making the western coast of LLACHATUL warmer than it otherwise should be.
- ERTOD: Mil. Str. Fort in the north west of TAHALL overlooking GNOTH. It guards the trade route west into Gnoth and its troops escort merchants to the Gnothi monastery of ACHAMOTH⁽²⁾.
- ERU'YA: Set. City in the north east of SUMA'YA. It is one of two cities that allows foreign merchants within its borders, and forms part of the SALT ROAD, where it forks into two separate parts of the trade-route west into the PARAIYAN route and north into the LIDEAN route (Pop. c. 40,000).
- ERUA: Sea. Shallow waters 25-miles south of mainland AMONDOR, south of the TOLIASOR Mountains.
- ERUCHANT: Set. Fortified city in the prefecture of TERECHANT⁽¹⁾ in the north east of HOLOLACH⁽¹⁾. The city makes regular contact with the MULL CITY-STATES (Pop. c. 20,000).
- ERUCZHAE: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the east of OKKHAM, overlooking the border east with WAELMIGH. Patrols from the fortress guard the eastern border of Okkham.
- ERUISA: Sea. Bay between the vassals of MECHABET and BISBUT in the north of the PARTHISAN PENINSULA.
- ERUK: Ser. City in the east of MHAROKK, overlooking the expansive mouth of the river SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾. In ancient times, Eruk was an agricultural centre, relying on the inundations of the river to sustain its crops. Now it is mercantile city specialising in moving goods along the Red Route as well as the river itself, with many embassies and offices specialised in chartering voyages into deep SAMMAEA, including KHARKHARADONTIS. It has large shipyards, that have been regraded several times with canals and complex channels constructed to keep it connected to the ever-retreating coastline (Pop. c. 280,000).
- ERUKAHAD: Geo. Region in the c of KARAKHAS, known in the past for its diamond mines. The mines were established and exploited by the KORACHANI administration in c. 300 RM, following its subjugation of Karakhas in 121 RM. The number of mines grew at a steady rate, coming under control of PATRICIAN HOUSE SATINA until they reached their peak in c. 1100 RM, at which point the capital was moved from SERKAN to DEKANA solely because of the mining industry. The mines were constantly worked for the next 600 years, though many mines began to slow down production following c. 1240 RM and the last mine was closed down in c. 1720 RM and the region was then left to rot.
 - It remains now as an expanse of abandoned mining settlement and open cast mines filled with chemical-stained waters.
- ERUKH: Set. Settlement in the north east of AETHIOS, in the eastern face of the ARAM Mountains. It is built atop an ancient ruined AIKLAH aery, and is now renowned for its ROC breeders (Pop. c. 7,000).
- ERUKHAD: Set. Settlement in the c north east of KARAKHAS. It is known for its caravanserais, which are used by merchant caravans that pas the settlement during their circuit of the SALT ROAD (Pop. c. 8,000).

- ERUSK: Lak. Major lake in the c-south east of the MULL CITY-STATES, forming part of the course of the river BATALL. The capital of ZBALL GHAR overlooks its waters.
- ERUTHEA: Sea. Sea dividing the nations of RHEA and SURUTUR from THETIS. It is known for its calm waters; a result of the two natural peninsulas the KOHNOR in the west and the ARITEA in the east that cut it off from the greater SEA OF MIROVEA.
- ERUTO: 1. His. Nm. Extinct nation and city in the north west of SAMMAEA, which became vassal of PARTHIS in 2723 RM, and was later absorbed fully by the parent nation in 3232 RM. See Vol III: Extinct States.
 2. For. Following the full absorption of the vassal state of Eruto⁽¹⁾ by PARTHIS in 3232 RM, the name remained in common use for the sparse forests in the west of Parthis.
- 3. Pol. Set. Main administrative city of the PARTHISAN territory of Eruto^(2,). It is situated on high-land in the west of the territory and was once famed for its sprawling citadel, which has now been divided into government offices and private palaces, around which the rest of the settlement has grown (Pop. c. 380,000).
- ERWAD: 1. Geo. Island off the southern coast of AEONAS in the south west of WESTERN SAMMAEA.
 - 2. Set. City on the above island^(1.) (Pop. unknown).
- ERYMBAX: Geo. Island off the southern coast of mainland PELASGOS, occupied by the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS.
- ERYMBAX CHANNEL: Sca. Channel between the south of mainland PELASGOS (occupied by the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS) and the island of ERYMBAX.
- ERYNAR: Set. Major coastal city in the north of OD MEGINNAS. It is the largest city in the island-nation, and is a major industrial centre and is home to a thriving port (Pop. c. 700,000).
- ERYX: Set. Once-coastal city and drydocks in the west of SKAROS, the city of Eryx is now landlocked, its docks home to DEGENERATE and OCCULTIST shanties. The city was also known for its vast UMBRA reservoirs, which now lie disused, near spent. The city is currently the base of the MINASTERIA (2.) of SOMNIFERIIN and SOMNIARIIN (Pop. c. 52,000).
- ERZEI LEINDREJ: (B. 1571 D. 1701 RM) His. ASSESSOR-GENERAL of the AVÉNETHI SANCTIFIED ORDER OF THE INQUISITION, who was renowned for his taciturn bearing and vehemence in bringing WITCHES to justice. He was offered the role of GRANDMASTER in 1655 RM, but refused it, preferring to work in the field. He died while on campaign in AHRISHEN to a fever following being hit by a stray piece of shrapnel
- In 1616 RM he began keeping a ledger of witches he had put to justice, beginning a tradition that continues within the order to this day, in the form of the $\underline{\text{LEINDREJ LEDGER}}$.
- ERZHA KASIMMON: (B. 2941 3012 RM) Tec. Engineer who proposed and oversaw construction of the KASIMMON PUMPING STATION in the city of KHADON in KORACHAN, which reduced cases of cholera that had grown common over the past centuries due to the river KHAD being used as an open sewer.
- ES TERMEST: Pol. Str. Capital of CENGUISSE, in the south west of SAMMAEA. It is one of the largest, most sprawling, highly populated cities in Sammaea, and is known for its nearby wetlands, and for the canals that dominate its eastern reaches (Pop. 8,000,000).
- ESAFFAH: Set. Settlement in the c west of BASSORAH⁽²⁾. The ruin of an ancient likely FOURTH AGE fortress lies just outside the city, whose people seem to instinctively ignore it. Its main industry is agriculture, and many of its farms and farmsteads are built with blocks reclaimed from the ancient ruin, some of which have inscriptions in an unknown tongue carved into them (Pop. c. 3,250).
- ESACOS: Set. Settlement in the east of the tribe of SUUR'KA in the north east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. The settlement is known for its large groves of the hardy OPOENA tree, the fruit for which - are used in the production of an analgesic in the nearby city of $\underline{\text{VISEDOR}}$, to the north west (Pop. c. 5,500).

- ESAISA: See. Small city in the c north west of SABAISA, in the far north west of the EMSUT ZHALCA Mountains (Pop. c. 16,400).
- ESAMAN; Mil. Str. large fortress in the south east of SKAROS, designed to guard the UMBRA pipelines leading north to NOCEN. Its troops patrol the length of the pipeline, often spending weeks in the wilderness.
- ESAMMA: Set. Small fortified settlement in the east of the tribe of NINIR in the south east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 2.000).
- ESAQ: Set. Settlement in the south of CHEIRA (Pop. c. 6,000).
- ESAR TA': Set. Small city in the c south west of KHULL. It is a recruiting ground to the KHULLAN INQUISITION and is home to many CLAVESIGNATI who go on to patrol the nations' western borders (Pop. c. 17,300).
- ESARATA: Geo. Island off the southern coast of WESTERN SAMMAEA, forming a part of the COTRIAN ISLES and the ISLAND STATES OF IRY.
- ESARIDH: Set. Settlement in the far south west of ELAT. Its people practice an ancient form of stilt fishing with fishermen standing on poles in shallow waters, waiting for hours at a time to fill their quota (Pop. c. 5,000).
- ESARIMH: Set. Large city linked with PENTATAEL in the west of LLACHATUL (Pop. c. 55,000).
- ESARRAS: Set. City in the c east of ALLASAN, known for its vineyards and wine production (Pop. c. 32,500).
- ESATH: geo. Solitary mountain in the south east of OPHIUSSA. It is the main major geographical feature of the nation.
- ESAUH: Rel. Str. Major temple stronghold in the south west of ELAT. Construction on it began in 3134 RM and it was completed in 3141 RM and became a centre of the religious policing force that would go on to evolve into the army of Elat.
- ESAUN: 1. Pol. Geo. One of the nine territories of ALAM BETHYL, entirely above the northern POLAR CIRCLE.
 - 2. Set. Conurbation in the c of ALAM BETHYL, on both banks of the river KEGHOK. It is one of the nation's largest urban areas, with dozens of surrounding settlements and fields, whose farmers are experts at agriculture in the polar region. It also serves as the capital of the eponymous territory^(1.) (Pop. c. 220,000).
- ESAYAN: Set. Settlement in the c east of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES. It is a major producer of firearms (Pop. c. 7,000).
- ESCAIA: His. Rui. City of mummies, 1,000 miles east of the BLACK FOUNTAIN.
- ESCARYAD: Rui. City in the west of CYHLAGHARR left ruined by the ongoing war with EREBETH.
- ESCHAN DYNASTY: Pol. Rnk. Ruling dynasty of the PANTHEON ISLES. It emerged in 2825 RM following the victory of native forces against the last remnants of the LIMOTHAN^(1.) occupation in the city of YICTAIANDA, under the leadership of AGUBBRA ESCHA. She would go on to become the first dynast of this ruling house that so far has controlled the Pantheon Isles for over a millennium.
- ESCHATA: Sea. Sea off the western-coast of THE SURRACH in the north west of SAMMAEA, to the south of the SEA OF ORRIDA. Its southern waters are dark, and afflicted by an ATRAMENTAL pall known as the NAMEGHA. The sunset over its waters is ironically a beautiful, if dark sight, with its light filtering through the Atramental smog in a rich purple hue.
 - The sea has, since time immemorial, been recognised as a place of death with many necropolises and death temples surrounding it, dating back to various ages.
- ESCHATOLOGY: 1. His. Phil. Study of the final events of history; the end of days.
 - 2. His. Phil. More specifically, in most scholarly circles, the study of the socalled FADING between ages; what causes life to falter and then reappear, causing a new age.

ESCULEA: Set. Small agricultural city in the c north of the UMBRA SOKHAR (Pop. c. 15,000).

ESCUNUR: Sup. Geo. Region of heavy ATRAMENTAL TAINT in the south of the nation of DURCHAA^(1.), dominated by many gigantic slanted menhirs in the centre of which is a coalescing of the ATRAMENTA, rendering SHAPERS in the area drunk with power, the strength of the Atramenta there crippling them. Attempts were made to harness this force, resulting in the founding of the city of ERIAS, which was obliterated in 3220 RM.

The region is categorised as HIGHLY DANGEROUS by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

ESCYNUR: Mil. Str. Monolithic fortress in the west of CYHLAGHARR, on the periphery of the contested lands with EREBETH.

ESCYRAD: Geo. Massif in the c north of CYHLAGHARR.

ESCYSIAN NOMADS: Mor. Eth. Nomadic HALF-OGHURS that dwell in the white desert of ESCYSIUM. See Vol II: the Nomads of Elyden.

ESCYSIUM: Sup. Geo. An unnatural white desert, around 120,000 square-miles in area, between 200 and 500-miles north of the TROPIC OF RAH, south of the LHAUS nation of KHALHAT in the northern SAMMAEA. The desert's existence is attributed to an ATRAMENTAL LACUNA deep beneath the surface. The region is strewn with the ruins of exotic colossi and monolithic statues, populated by a race of xenophobic HALF-OGHUR NOMADS (believed to be descended from escaped THRACIAN OGHUR slaves) who revere the crumbling statues, rarely leaving the wastes.

ESEA: 1. Lak. Arc. Lake and dam in the south of LIDEA, along the course of the river SICERAN. The dam was erected in 3284 RM to power manufactories of the city of Esea.

2. Ind. Set. MANUFACTORY city in the south of LIDEA (Pop. c. 170,000).

3. Rel. Str. Temple outside the above city in the south of LIDEA, forming part of THE SHADOW MARCH. The temple was originally outside the walls of the city, though its constant growth has seen it swallowing the temple, which houses the remains of $\underline{ST.IDEAS}$.

ESEKSHI NORNA: (D. 2097 RM) LACER explorer, historian, commentator, traveller, and cultural hero, who in the late 21st century travelled across KORACHANI-occupied SAMMAEA, documenting his findings. He spent many years living with humans and took on many of their customs and habits, taking them back with him to his homeland, where some were adopted by other lacers, forever changing their culture.

He became quite famous in his time and wrote various notebooks, some of which were published as curios. He died of old age during an extended stay in the villa of a patrician friend of his in CATHAGO. His body was returned to AIMALEOCH.

ESEMA: Mil. Str. Fortress in the far south east of GNOTH, overlooking the SEA OF LIAKARRA, and guarding access into the BAY OF ACHAMA.

ESEREA: Set. Settlement in the c of KASPIA (Pop. unknown).

ESETTIS: Set. Conurbation of farming settlements to the west of the city of HOLOLACH⁽³⁾ in the west of Hololach^(1,). Ten communities along a 30-mile stretch of the river HEMAVAR, leading up to its mouth near the BRETTA headland, grow rice and other crops sent upstream to Hololach (Pop. c. 4,500).

ESEVVIDA: Pol. Set. Capital city of EPHATTA, in the south west of SAMMAEA. It is known for its tiered footprint, and for the ancient ruined fort just outside its periphery (Pop. c. 115,800).

ESFAIA: Mil. Str. Ancient fortress in the BITAMMAN desert constructed from desiccated UMBRISKA. Over the years, the fortress has sunk into the foothills, the DUSTSTONE on which it was built slowly crumbling. Now the fortification is largely buried, its size forgotten by most.

ESFERAENIA: Rui. Ancient FIFTH AGE ruin in the c of the DAENED SULRACH^(1.) in the N of present-day KHARKHARADONTIS. Records claim that a multicultural city once exited in the area prior to the spread of ATRAMENTAL CORRUPTION in the region, which might correspond with the location of the extant ruins, making this one of the last cities of the SULRACHI^(2.) culture that once existed here.

ESH AMAN: Sea. Lan. KHAMIDIAN name for the DARK SEA. The term predates the KORACHANI usage of the name Dark Sea and is roughly translated as 'the Western Waters.'

ESH ETEK: also 'Sea of Fire'. Sea. Small sea south east of the island of KHEMET in KHAMID, roughly translated as 'firewater'. The name is derived from the magma flows that once characterised the region in the wake of the KHAMIDIAN CATACLYSM. Such flows continued for centuries, creating a large headland known as ETEKAKET that survives to this day, covered in mosses and other plant life that thrive in the volcanic soils of the area.

ESH NEMES: also 'the Temple Sea'. Sea. Native KHAMIDIAN name for an inland sea to the east of the isle of KHOHER in KHAMID. It is named after the many large sunken and ruined temples buried beneath its surface.

Before the CATACLYSM OF KHAMID (101 RM) the area now occupied by the Esh Nemes was considered holy ground, believed by Khamidian chroniclers to be the region where the SCION KHAMAR and his IFIRMIAN aides first taught the secrets of the FIRMAMENT to natives. The ground was considered hallowed by the Khamidian priest-shapers who considered it the birthplace of their art.

ESH PHARAS: also 'the Bubbling Sea'. Sea. Small sea south of the isle of KHEMET in KHAMID. Known colloquially in the KORACHANI EMPIRE as the Bubbling Sea, it is known for its deep volcanic activity, which results in it being warmer than the latitude and climate would otherwise indicate. Sea travel across the sea is uncommon due to this volcanic activity, which is of occasional danger to vessels.

ESHAHAK: Set. Coastal city in the west of TARTAK (Pop. c. 15,200).

ESHAMIL: Geo. Mountain-range in the c of HOLOLACH⁽¹⁾, forming the south west of the TOLIASOR Mountain range.

ESHAN: Set. Settlement in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of UCHRON. The city was once coastal, though it finds itself some 4-miles from the coast (Pop. c. 6,000).

ESHAR: Voc. Org. A caste of blood-priests in the MALANI HENDECARCHY of LONAR also present in MYSTERY CULTS in other Malani kingdoms. They are based in the temple-city of KARAETER and drink the blood of hunted animals before they are cooked; seeking acquiescence from their spirits for the act of murder committed. Some are SHAMEN and they are respected members of their societies.

ESHARAT: Ind. Set. Lead mining settlement in the BAKHRAN STATES in the north west of THE SURRACH (Pop. c. 7,000).

ESHARY ICE CAVES: Geo. Large cavern in c north of DURCHAA, in the ERIHAAS plains. It is wide and shallow, dividing into various chambers and shafts, and is famed for its underground glacier and fantastical icy features.

ESHAVA: Rui. Ancient FIFTH AGE YARAOMIC settlement in the territory of AMANNI, in what is today the settlement of ZAAVAR, in the c north of VAALK. It was one of few Yaraomic settlements of note, and was overtaken by KORACHANI forces in c. 100 RM during their conquest of VALKA.

ESHED: Geo. Dry plains in the east of THE SURRACH, between the city-state of KURDA and MERN.

ESHEIHA: also 'the First and Last Word. Mys. In GNOTHI mysticism, a word said to mark both the beginning and end of the ELYDEN. The word itself is unknown to anyone, and many Gnothi ascetics devote their lives to achieving enlightenment in the hopes of learning the word, even though it is unknowable. The paradox forms a major part of a particular sects beliefs, which teach individuals to make peace with their relative powerlessness.

ESHELI: Geo. Rocky peninsula in the south east of FATH in the east of WESTERN MENISCEA. Its coast is a convoluted mass of shards and sea caves that scream with the constant pounding of waves from the south of the SEA OF LARISH.

The harsh coast makes the area around it particularly difficult for ships to navigate, helping to cut the region off from the outside world. Three major cities exist within its borders – ALIKAHKAT, ENERKHAT, and MALITET (in the far north east of ETUL), which together exist largely independent of their parent states thanks to an edict passed in 3529 RM following their decided excommunication by the Etulian government. The three cities form a loose confederacy, often called the confederacy of Esheli, which gathers 4-times a year to oversee matters of state.

ESHELI TRIAD, the: Pol. Following their excommunication from ETUL in 3529 RM, its eastern cities formed a nascent nation out of which the cities of ALIKAHKAT, MALITET and ENERHKAT emerged as the three major cities, which by c. 3700 RM had become known as the Esheli Triad.

ESHERA AHMA: Sea. KHAMIDIAN name for the RED SEA, which appeared following the CATACLYSM of 101 RM.

ESHERIANDI: Rvr. River in PHYRR flowing east for 270-miles from sources in the MOROSIGHI Mountains, before meeting its parent, the river URRABANA.

ESHIBA: Rvr. River in the west of AETHIOS, flowing for 130-miles from sources in the ANCHIAUS Mountains before meeting its parent, the river SHIBBOLETH^(3.).

ESHILL: Dem. 'Eshilli'. Eth. MORTAL descendants of FOURTH-AGE unions between SHIE and HUMANS. They were most common in the early days of the FIFTH AGE in the CARIAN peninsula (2.) and the south of present-day SAUA (then SAEDISH), though most were culled during a long period of conflict with the realm of HARA, though others were taken by ROKA as slaves, where their bloodlines were eventually diluted through breeding with humans.

Today, very few are believed to survive, though a few do live in the $\underline{\text{CITY-KINGDOMS}}$ of $\underline{\text{UCHRON}}^{(l.)}$ and $\underline{\text{NICADA}}$, and the $\underline{\text{RACHI}}$ region of Saua. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

ESHINJI: 1. Sca. Bay in the far west of WESTERN LLACHATUL, between the ANAGARI peninsula and RAONGEN⁽²⁾.

2. Set. Fortified coastal city in the far west of RAONGEN⁽²⁾. It lies very close to the contested region with ANAGAR, and surrounding farmsteads and pasture are often targeted by their raids. As a result, the city has a large number of rangers attached to it who man the various lookout towers surrounding the city and patrol the surrounding farmlands (Pop. c. 28,400).

ESHINOR: Set. Major fortified coastal city in the north east of ESHIR⁽²⁾. a relatively recent city, appearing as a fishing community in c. 3800 RM, it rapidly expanded, becoming a major clamming centre and is now known for the giant sea otters that dwell in its harbours, which have become a nuisance to fishermen (Pop. c. 67,000).

ESHIR: Dem. 'Eshiran'. 1. Sea. Bay in the north of the nation of ESHIR(^{2.)} to the north west of the Gulf of GULF OF ESHIRON. It stretches west for around 175-miles and its many creeks and inlets are home to many settlements, together making one of the more densely-populated regions of Eshir

2. Nm. An independent nation in the north of WESTERN SAMMAEA, to the south of the SEA OF ORRIDA. It is of a relatively dry climate, seeing little yearly rain, though its people are experts at making aqueducts and cisterns, and have devised ingenious ways of using cool air generated in vents within their subterranean aqueducts to send cool air into large cooling towers, that help to make their cities more comfortable.

Formally established as a Republic in 2489 RM, Eshir has a long history going back to the 7th century RM, when a caste known as the ASSEERI was exiled from SETTAR (present-day TATAR) for its polytheistic beliefs. These people settled the land across from the GULF OF ESHIRON, establishing a culture that became known as ASSEER – a collection of independent cities and small states known as kindreds. The discovery of an ancient GODSTONE in 1209 RM irrevocably changed the region's history, leading to kindreds squabbling amongst each other for its possession. Becoming known as the SABRIYAN STONE, it changed hands multiple times, until it came under the control of DRERLLATAR FARISÛN in c. 1620 RM.

Using its powers, he was able to subjugate the surrounding area, uniting Asseer for the first time since its settling almost a millennium prior. He was a tyrant, instating CANON LAW in 1677 RM, which promoted a form of avenging punishment that echoes the crime. He eventually became corrupted by the power of the Stone, increasing his lifespan and power, but becoming sadistic as a result. This ultimately led to his assassination in 2175 RM under mysterious circumstances, during which the Sabriyan Stone disappeared.

His death led to the fracturing of the region and the appearance of the Order of the Stone, whose members (known as Seekers) searched Asseer for the Stone. The Order eventually stabilised the region, establishing a new republic council that was headed by an elected Chancellor, which saw the region renamed to Eshir. In 2489 RM the title of Chancellor was made a hereditary post, becoming akin to the sovereign of a constitutional monarchy, serving as a figurehead for the government. Over time the Chancellor gained more and more powers, effectively turning the region into a monarchy, with the republic being subservient to the Chancellor. This was overturned in 2981 RM, with the Council given back full powers.

The region has been relatively stable since then, with periods in which the Chancellor gained more power, and others when the council became more powerful. The Sabriyan Stone was rediscovered in 3203 RM and the council voted to keep the Stone away from harm, opting to construct three fortresses, secretly placing the Stone within one of them. Despite the effort, some believed that the stone was placed in a secret fourth location, with the public story of the forts merely being used as an excuse to fund the defensive military project without risking backlash.

The region is known for its tiered fortress-like cities, its sponge-divers, and for the large red canopies that criss-cross the streets of its larger cities, providing shade and allowing wind to flow beneath them, keeping the air cool. Primitive cooling towers are a common sight in most large cities, and draw cool air from subterranean aqueducts into the streets above, keeping them cool. The same aqueducts provide clean water to these cities and surrounding farmlands, making the region fertile and productive despite the hot climate. Eshir is also known for its impressive coastal cliff fortresses and for the skill of its metallurgists and artillerists, who are renowned for the quality of their coastal cannons which, though outdated, remain an important part of the nations' coastal defences.

Their dead are placed in large open-topped amphorae, with the head angled upwards facing the sky. Vermin are allowed to scavenge on the body, which in local belief allows the spirit to separate from the body, migrating to the otherworld through the mouth of the amphorae. This practice is thought to date back to their Asseerian ancestors, who buried their dead this way.

Following various attempts by foreign powers (the most notable being a blockade and various coastal sieges perpetrated by the $\underline{\text{GODSLAYERS}}$ and $\underline{\text{KAZZAR}}$ 3481 – 3514 RM) to acquire the Sabriyan Stone, Eshir has had to secure its borders against foreign infiltration. A new branch of the Order of the Stone was formed after this, made up of resourceful and skilled individuals, who came to operate both within and without Eshir, with the singular goal of maintaining the secrecy surrounding the Sabriyan Stone.

Foreign policy has become somewhat draconian over the years, with passport checks being mandatory at its ports and at land routes along the border, and foreigners are kept a close eye on by the Order of the Stone. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

ESHIRIAN: Lan. Languages spoken in ESHIR⁽²⁾, descended from SETTARAN. See Vol II: Languages.

ESHIRON: Sea. Large gulf to the south of the SEA OF ORRIDA in the north of SAMMAEA, separating ESHIR and the VESPERTINE LEAGUE in the west from TATAR and the BARRIER LANDS in the east. Its waters are known for their many GIANT SEA OTTERS, and its western-coast is particularly famed for them.

ESHKA: Set. Settlement in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of CARIA⁽⁴⁾ (Pop. c. 1,900).

ESHMUN: 1. Rvr. Major river in PARTHIS flowing for over 1,200-miles from sources in the BALAUR, KANDIA and SIPYLANA Mountains before emptying in the SEA OF GAAN. Its waters are relatively clean.

2. Mil. Str. Fortress in the south of PARTHIS, just north of the ATHORHU delta, and providing protection to merchants and travellers moving across the RED ROUTE.

ESHTARES: Geo. High badlands in the south west of SAMMAEA along the TROPIC OF MAOCARHL, in the west of MAENMIST and stretching west into PHYRR.

The region is largely shunned and is characterised by the many naturally-forming mummies buried beneath its twisting rocks, which look and move like sun-twisted rubber undulating under its own weight. Few permanent structures exist here and those which do are suitably titanic – tough enough to withstand the unending assault of natural terrain.

ESHUL: Set. Small city in the c of AHRISHEN, in the region of CONFERVA. The city was once far larger and was a busy port around 1,500 years ago, before the SEA OF PYREA began to retreat. The city remains to this day, though is greatly diminished, and is a producer of livestock which is traded to merchants along the GREY ROAD (Pop. c. 15,200).

ESHUNNA: Geo. Mountain-range in the far west of SUOR, the northern-most reaches of which form the border with the SOLEYN TERRITORIES. The range is known for its reddish colour.

ESHYAN: Set. Small coastal city in the south west of CUTH, along the western-face of the HAMMINGHEN peninsula. It lies close to the contested lands with the PARTHISAN colony of NISSA, and clashes between locals and colonists is not uncommon. This has led the population becoming trained as a militia to defend against the invaders (Pop. c. 15,000).

ESIAS: Ser. Coastal settlement in the west of SKAROS, built less than a mile from the ruin of an earlier settlement, ESROS, which was famed in around -100 RM for its ALCHEMIST. Little of that tradition remains in Esias, but the ruins still attract explorers intent on unearthing its secrets (Pop. c. 14,000).

ESIDDE: Set. Settlement in the east of N'RAKH (Pop. unknown).

ESKER: 1. Sea. Small bay off the north western coast of JURRAS⁽²⁾, north of the city of HYULL.

2. Geo. Ridge of sandy soil in the north of $\underline{\textit{JURRAS}}^{(2)}$, north east of the city of $\underline{\textit{HYULL}}$.

ESKUTET: Rvr. River in the east of KULIGALA, in the east of the CARCHEMISHI PENINSULA^(1.) in the east of SAMMAEA. It flows north east for 240-miles from sources in the KELLOIL Massif, before emptying in the SEA OF LETHEA.

ESLIUG: Set. Settlement in the c east of KASPIA (Pop. c. 4,500).

ESLON: Set. Settlement in the east of ALAM BETHYL, in the territory of MAHEN (Pop. c. 5,000).

ESMAS: Set. Coastal settlement in the north of ZHARIAH^(2.) overlooking the SEA OF LETHEA. Its main industry is fishing (Pop. c. 8,000).

ESOTER: Mys. Rnk. In VÂRR, northern PELASGOS and KORACHAN; itinerant mystics that travel between settlements (or districts in the case of larger conurbations) where they preach the words of the UNDYING MACHINE, help deliver and abjure ATRAMENTALLY-afflicted babies, and generally serve as counsellors in exchange for food and bedding.

ESOTERIC COLLEGE OF RA ALATRÉ: Sup. Str. Annex of the MINARET OF LIGHT in the island state of ARCHAEDON⁽²⁾, established in 1076 RM. it serves as an embassy of sorts to the many FIRMAMENTISTS based there, representing them within the Minaret of Light.

ESOTUTH: Lak. Lake in the east of LAASKHA, in the east hills of the ARCANTHEA Mountains along the course of the river PARRAN.

ESPERA: Set. Settlement in the c of KULIGALA, in the east of the CARCHEMISHI PENINSULA^(1.) in the east of SAMMAEA (Pop. c. 6,400).

ESPEER: Geo. Cliffy peninsula around 20-miles long along western coast of NÁRTHEL, near the city of NEKOR, where the bodies of defeated heretics were burnt after the siege of the fortress of ANOTONIA.

ESRAHON: Set. City-state in the north of SAMMAEA in the region of the CAMMOREAN SHADOW at the shore of the BAY OF BYSAMMA. The city is ruled by a caste of FIRMAMENTISTS who study the ATRAMENTA and is dominated by complex SIPHON ENGINES that study the Atramental phenomena of the region and protect the city from harm. The city is also known for its deep harbours (Pop. c. 38,200).

ESRAN: Set. small city in the c west of the TEMPLAR STATES. It was one of the first major cities to become a part of the TEMPLAR KNIGHTS^(2.) domains, and had become a major stronghold in the south by c. 2920 RM. The settlement proved to be tactically-important, and a large fortress was built there, though a lack of nearby resources meant it never grew beyond a small settlement intended to serve the troops stationed there.

In 3402 RM the Council of Inderachan ratified the territorial claims of the Templar States, and the fortress of Esran was expanded to guard the States' western border, and the surrounding settlement also grew, but the need for the fortress lessened over the centuries, and it was eventually decommissioned in 3683 RM, and the settlement slowly waned after this (Pop. c. 17,000).

ESRECH: Rui. Abandoned settlement in the north west of KHAR NADUL. It was attacked, if such a word can be used, by massed numbers of AL GHUL from the north in c. 3985 RM, which left the place deserted before the creatures dispersed in the surrounding countryside. It is believed that the all ghul were fleeing from an unknown calamity or persecution in the south east of HOGGOTHA ISZ.

ESROS: Rui. Ancient city in the west of SKAROS. The settlement of ESIAS now lies within 1-mile of its crumbled walls. It was once a hub of ALCHEMICAL research in the region.

ESSARA: Sec. City in the far south of CARNYNGA. It was once located on an island, though has since found itself part of the mainland (Pop. c. 63,000).

ESSADA: Sup. Geo. Region in the south east of SAMMAEA, just west of the SEA OF MORRAKH, noted for its low level of ATRAMENTAL TAINT and the seeping oil that renders the land inimical to mortal life. The place reeks with the decay of unnumbered fauna that gets trapped in it, mostly birds and vermin, their festering bodies attracting other creatures. Carnivorous flora thrives here, feasting on the decomposing bodies, making the place even more loathsome to mortals.

The region is categorised as a MODERATE THREAT by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

ESSAM: Set. Small city in the SIX CITIES region of THE SURRACH, under the control of ALRON (Pop. c. 20,000).

ESSAND: Set. City in the c north of TAHALL (Pop. c. 37,200).

ESSAR: (8,180-ft.) Geo. Rocky hill in the c north of IPANAH^(2.).

ESSARET: Set. Fortified city in the north east of IPANAH^(2.). It is home to much of the nations' military (Pop. c. 45,000).

ESSENIA: Pol. Soc. Tribe in the c south of MULCIBER, in the GROWING MOUNTAINS, in the north east of SAMMAEA, overlooking the nation of PNESSA. Its geography is dominated by river PADDAS and lake LERIA. Its people are adherents of the ancient Mulcibian tradition of foot-binding, a religious practice that many women willing subject themselves too, which is considered to bring them closer to their deity NEPHTHALONT.

ESSENTIAL SALTS: Med. In the fields of CLONING and PALINGENESIS, the building blocks of life that can be manipulated and harvested to create artificial life such as clones.

ESSERIS: Pol. Soc. Tribe in the south east of MULCIBER, in the GROWING MOUNTAINS, in the north east of SAMMAEA, situated along its northern face overlooking the Mountains of ETHITUL, which form a border with the SOLEYN TERRITORIES. The people of Esseris bear a great enmity towards those of NUNEA, which is evident by the many skirmishes that happen along the 2 tribes' borders, which is in a constant state of flux.

ESSEVERA: 1. Geo. Large coastal plains in the c of LACHATUL, dominating the western coastline of the SEA OF APHOTIS. It originated as an ALMAGESTI territory in c. 1800 RM that emerged following imperial colonisation attempts of CISNERIA that began in c. 1750. Following that, it was exploited for many centuries for its major UMBRA reserves. The region is today contested between Almagest, various independent militant forces, PATRICIAN HOUSES, and the Kingdom of Cisneria.

At the centre of this region are the cities of Essevera, which is the centre of all umbra mining in the region, and which serves as a hub of its processing and refining; and MEHOTHATI, where processed umbra is pumped ready for redistribution, either by further pipelines or shipping. Around them are dozens of different umbra fields, dominated by SIPHON ENGINES and extraction facilities, each owned by different factions that are constantly seeking to increase their territories.

The cities of Essevera and Mehothati have often changed hands, resulting in a period of chaos, after which manufacture of the umbra settles down back to normalcy in which the politicking and open gang war between factions begins once more.

The region itself is a wasteland of pumps, manufactories, pipelines and SOFTSUIT-clad gangs roaming the oppressive landscape, with no other resources and little flora and fauna of note, and it is avoided by all but the most opportunistic and greedy.

2. Pol. Geo. Autonomous region to the west of the SEA OF APHOTIS in the c of LLACHATUL. The region is known for politicking between rival PATRICIAN HOUSES and the ALMAGESTI government, which once controlled it, as well as hosting the open gang war between the various factions over control of the umbra fields that dominate the region, and the KINGDOM OF CISNERIA.

3. Pol. Set. Major independent city-state in the west of the above region⁽²⁾, and hub of most UMBRA extraction facilities there, with dozens of pipelines leading to it from across Essevera and Cisneria, where raw umbra is sold to it before being pumped east to the city of MEHOTHATI, before being pumped onto vessels for more distant distribution. The city is located along the course of the river SAKHAOST and is well-defended and it known for its mounted SOFTSUIT-clad private forces that guard the pipeline from sabotage, and which patrol the wastes against the threat of attack from rival forces (Pop. c. 360,000).

ESSIA: Sea. Bay in the south of HABOT, forming a northern extension of the SEA OF AMMASH⁽²⁾. Its waters are very fertile from deposits from the river MEDDERANDI, whose delta is the site of vast farmlands.

ESSIKA: Geo. Highlands and southern-most part of the HELICAR Mountains in the southern mainland of the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS.

ESSOCHAN: Pol Set. Coastal KORACHANI colony in the east of AHKA, captured from the allied defences in 3998 RM and used since then as a staging point for land offensives. Its harbours have been upgraded to receive the larger imperial transport vessels sent from OTINA and, despite Ahkan counterattacks, is growing steadily since the heavy bombardments that resulted in its fall into Korachani hands (Pop. c. 16,200).

ESSOMEN: Set. City in the south west of SABAISA, overlooking the SEA OF MIROVEA. It is home to a cadre of SHAPERS who study the future and use one of the most difficult spheres to master in an attempt to look into the future and see if there is any way of influencing it without the passing of time (Pop. c. 40,000).

ESSRA: Rvr. River in THE SURRACH, flowing south west for 1,100-miles from sources in the SARRASTER, BAKHRAN and PSAMMOL Mountains, before emptying in the SEA OF ESCHATA.

ESTAL: also 'the Crab. Ast. Con. Constellation in the SOUTHERN HEMISPHERE. See Vol II: Constellations.

ESTAMAL: Set. Settlement on the island of ABRAMAL in the east of THUMAL (Pop. c. 8,000).

ESTANTHANEI: also 'the Buried City'. Set. Rogue offshoot LHAUS enclave, 'exiled' in c. 200 RM because of its outgoing personality and sharing of certain lhaus secrets with other mortals. In c. 1980 RM relations with OLNNAD soured. Its people were persecuted by followers of 'true' lhaus culture and the city was eventually scoured, with caretakers placed there to oversee its people's reintegration into lhaus ways. Its caverns expanded south west to reach the true lhaus enclaves in KHALHAT.

Contact with humans was abolished in c. 2360 RM, with its borders bolstered, defended against human contact. Some rogue individuals escaped, settling into foreign lands, though Estanthanei was subjugated by its more fundamentalist kin, after which it was absorbed back into Khalhat (Pop. unknown).

ESTARATTI: Rvr. River in the east of AETHIOS, flowing west for 360-miles from sources in the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER, before meeting its parent, the river NARRATI.

ESTHET: Geo. Island in the far west of the MAIDEN ISLES.

ESTIA: Geo. Scrubland dominating the north east of LYRIDIA, covered in sparse woods. The region is prone to flooding in winter and landslides are common as water rushes down the shallow hills to the rivers BINI and LYCEA.

ESTIL: Set. Small city in the c west of RAONGEN⁽²⁾. Its main industry is the processing and refining of UMBRA mined to the north west, before being pumped north east to TAERIN (Pop. c. 12,800).

ESTMANII: Nou. 'Estmanea'. Plr. 'Estmaniii'. Sup. Org. Mil. Rnk. An order of SHAPERS in the KORACHANI EMPIRE, whose MINASTERIA^(2.) has been based in the city of ETHE in eastern PELASGOS since 1822 RM. Its members are ATRAMENTAL shapers whose SPHERE of influence involves the manipulation of steam and heat, sometimes overlapping with fire and bodily manipulation.

Though this repertoire of skills seems limited, Estmaniin have various roles in society that are great assets to industry. They work in mines, cooling the air and equipment, effectively increasing output by making work conditions more tolerable. They work in various manufactories and around steam engines, helping to regulate boilers and the output of steam for smoother-running of engines. They can sometimes be found in large buildings where they oversee boilers that provide heating and hot water.

They are often employed in manufactories, where they help to regulate the great engines within. They are most commonly seen in PELASGOS, where they originated, and where they remain a ubiquitous sight in manufactories. They often served as vehicle crews, where their powers were invaluable in helping to control them. Similarly, they operated STEAM CANNONS or served as living artillery, earing IRON MANTLES and operating personal steam cannons that they could fire with relative precision and speed.

Some Estmaniin are capable for subtly manipulating living bodies through their powers over heat. They might be able to increase metabolism or overall body temperature, causing discomfort or injury, as well as death in some cases.

In many instances the Estmaniin are amongst the Korachani shapers whose time is thought to have come and gone. Many technologies that went hand-in-hand with the Estmaniin, such as steam engines, are now largely obsolete, meaning that the roles that flourished around them have also diminished. Working examples of such ancient machinery can still be found in old manufactories and rural areas, where modern technology tends to take longer to be introduced. It is in these places that the Estmaniin now flourish, where they remain a vital part of life, being encountered in important roles. See Vol IV: Spheres and types of Shaping.

ESTOPIR: Set. City in the region of CHYPRE in the west of THE SURRACH. Like most cities in the region, it is known for its orange groves (Pop. c. 17,000).

ESTRALLON: 1. Geo. Peninsula in the c east of the PANTHEON ISLES.

2. Sup. Geo. Atramentally Tainted region in the c east of the Pantheon Isles, centred around the above peninsula. It was first recorded in c. 1900 RM and steadily grew over the next millennia, reaching its present size in c. 3500 RM, after which it stabilised. Its interior is characterised by ichorous vines and a pitch-like substance that oozes from the ground, all of which are inimical to mortal life.

ESTRUCHA: 1. Sea. Bay in the north of ALTHA (2.).

2. Set. Coastal city in the north of ALTHA^(2.) (Pop. c. 31,000).

ESTUARY OF WINDS: see CHILD'S ESTUARY.

ESUBADRA: Set. City in the c south of GIBEAH. It became a base to the last 3 SORCERER-KINGS exiled from CHEIRA in 3702 RM, when it was still little more than a collection of farmsteads and a small market. From there they consolidated their power (Pop. c. 35,000).

ESURA: Set. Small city in the c south of ATARAXIA, along the course of the river MALAKAH (Pop. c. 11,300).

 \underline{ESUS} : Set. Settlement in the north west of \underline{KOMMEA} , in the northern face of the $\underline{VAELDRAN}$ Mountains. It is built on stilts due to seasonal floods that rush down the mountains (Pop. c. 3,800).

ESZALA: Geo. Expansive geothermal region dominating the inland of VALBAR⁽²⁾. The area is known for its many geysers, hot springs, methane vents and other features related to such activity. The region experiences fluctuations in activity, with gradual increases in eruptions and gaseous emissions occurring every few hundred years or so. A particularly severe surge took place around c. 3930 RM, causing all manner of turmoil within the nation. This period ultimately led to the fracturing of the nation and the dissolution of its GOVERNMENT and the formation of Valbar as we know it today.

Since then, the region has been largely dormant, with hot springs and geysers erupting with minimal lasting effect upon the nation as a whole.

ESZALL: Set. Settlement in the territory of FARIS in the south of SABIA (Pop. c. 7,100).

ESZIMAN: Rui. Abandoned CARAVAN HALL in the north west of SABIA, originating in c. 3420 RM in the predecessor state of SAKKHRIA in the region of TOPORAN DOR. It was one of the northernmost stops along a long trade-route, where trappers and mountain men could sell their wares and where caravans could buy them and seek respite from the harsh weather, though it was abandoned in c. 3875 RM after an avalanche cut it off from the rest of the route a few years before.

ET ARA: Geo. Large area of scrubland that dominates most of north western TAMAR, serving as a border with the HARÉSHK, alongside the river ROHOTHA. The region was once heavily wooded, though with the CATACLYSM OF KHAMID in 101 RM, and the lowering of sea-levels over the course of the FIFTH AGE caused the climate to alter, leading to the death of the dense forests c. 1000 RM.

ETAGAR: Set. Fortified city in the far north of SARASTRO. It is a military centre, and a hub of troops in the north, dedicated to patrolling the border with NÁRTHEL (Pop. c. 40,000).

ETAGIRIA: Sea. Inland sea in the south east of SAMMAEA, dividing the nations of KHAR NADUL and HANNAH in the north, from AKAGHA and ZATAUR in the south.

ETAGIRIAN REGION: Pol. Geo. Political and cultural region in SOUTHERN SAMMAEA, made up of various states and nations, including northern AKACHA, HANNAH, ILLAKRAR, KHAR NADUL, QARALAM ZAKRON, and ZATAUR.

ETAINE: 1. Lak. One of seven major lakes in KOMMEA, collectively known as the SEVEN MAIDENS^(1.), situated in the east of the kingdom.

2. Dei. Rel. Myt. One of the SEVEN MAIDENS^(2.) of KOMMEAN myths. She was once human and was transformed into a lake, and now represents benevolent rebirth and transformation and is closely associated with the spring. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

3. Set. Coastal settlement in the north of KOMMEA, in the HOLLOW COASTLINE. Its main industry is fishing (Pop. c. 6,000).

ETAKHOT: Set. Settlement in the east of RHEA, just south of the river ENNOIA. Its main industry is cotton growing (Pop. c. 7,000).

ETAKRA: Set. Settlement in the south west of ATARAXIA. Its main industry is the mining of the rare ore PARADROSS (Pop. c. 4,200).

ETAMMIN: Set. Major fortified coastal city in the far south east of AMMESH, at the foot of the MEL SAGHI Mountains, guarding the entrance into the BAY OF EMIRIL (Pop. c. 120,000).

ETAMOSIS: 1. m. Mys. His. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, a SCION of S'HITH, one of the two facets of the DEMIURGE DOPELLANICH. His fossilised body is the site of the chief TEMPLE of the CHURCH OF ETAMOSIS in the c north west of OPHIUSSA. He was known as a seer who had visions through DREAMS, though there is little reference to him in the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN.

The body of Etamosis was first documented by modern mortals in c. 340 RM and recognised as being an inert SCIONIC CREATURE in c. 920 RM, after which it became shunned. Interest in the region surrounding it increased over the next centuries, when it was discovered that its fossilised flesh was of ONEIRIC properties, resulting in the mining of its flesh, which was first recorded in c. 1200 RM.

Since then, the scion came to be worshipped as the DEITY of Ophiussa, and the consumption of its flesh, which over millennia of mining had begun to wane, was kept for religious ceremonies. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

2. Dem. 'Etamosan'. Ntn. Theocratic republic that emerged in the south of WESTERN LLACHATUL, in what is now occupied present-day OPHIUSSA between 1623 – 2044 RM. The theocracy suffered at the hands of KORACHANI piracy and ICONOCLASTS(2), the latter of which launched a CRUSADE against its church in 2002 RM. The war lasted for a few decades, though primarily consisted of naval engagements and propaganda by imperial exocrines, and by the time it subsided in 2044 RM, the economy of Etamosis was crippled, and the theocracy compromised.

The Korachani empire instated a governor in 2044 RM and banned the worship of Etamosis^(1,), toppling the TEMPLE OF ETAMOSIS, and erecting a new church dedicated to the UNDYING MACHINE in its place. Secretly, the occupation continued mining the body of Etamosis and sold or exorbitant prices due to creating artificial scarcity, though it told the populace that the SCIONS' body was destroyed. Despite this, the people secretly continued worshipping it.

The Korachani occupation was ejected 2127 RM, after which the region began to recover, and a new Temple of Etamosis was built. Following the rediscovery of the scions' body, the religion stopped the mining of the valuable resource, reserving it for religious rituals, in which it was used sparingly.

3. Pol. Set. Major city in the c of OPHIUSSA, along the course of the river PURUSA. It appeared in c. 1300 RM and was founded by SHAPERS seeking to explore the oneiric effects of the torpid SCIONS' body, establishing a tradition of ONEIROMANCY that remains a dominant part of Ophiussan culture to this day. The city has steadily grown since then, as people clamour to live so close to the inert body of their deity, Etamosis⁽¹⁾. It is the terminus of THE WAY trade-route, and its markets and arcades are busy with merchants buying and selling before they head back east along the Way (Pop. c. 1,170,000).

ETAMOSIS, CHURCH OF: Rel. Main religion observed in OPHIUSSA, though it is also observed to a lesser degree in TAHALL and IZABAL^(1,). The religion revolves around the worship of the SCION ETAMOSIS, whose inert body was first recognised as belonging to a scion in c. 920 RM. Originally shunned due to its uncertain heritage, intermittent mining of the scions' fossilised body began in c. 1200 RM after it was discovered that the rocks acted as a FOCUS^(2,) to ONEIROMANCERS.

The religion emerged between c. 1400-1500 RM after oneiromancers began gravitating towards the region and started revering the scion as a divine being. This belief spread amongst the disparate people of the region, who elevated Etamosis to the status of god. This served to unite an otherwise fractured region, and solidified into an organised religion in 1523 RM, with the construction of the TEMPLE OF ETAMOSIS atop the inert body of the scion.

The body of Etamosis is mined and consumed in small quantities by priests during religious rituals, and its oneiric properties have led to many religious leaders being oneiromancers themselves, with dreams considered as gifts from Etamosis himself. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

ETAMOSIS, TEMPLE OF: Rel. Str. Major temple in present-day OPHIUSSA, outside the city of ETAMOSIS⁽²⁾. The temple is constructed around the inert body of the SCION Etamosis⁽¹⁾, though in truth the fossilised body is so large that the temple only encompasses a small part of the body, which is worshipped as a DEITY by the people of Ophiussa.

The temple was erected in 1523 RM by the ETAMOSAN^(2.) theocracy, the same year that worship of Etamosis was solidified in an organised religion. KORACHANI occupation of the region in 2044 RM saw the temple toppled, replaced by a new church dedicated to the UNDYING MACHINE. The people of Etamosis were told that the body of the scion had been destroyed, though it was secretly kept intact and mined for its ONEIRIC properties.

When the Korachani occupation was ejected in 2127 RM, the church of the Undying Machine was gutted and reconsecrated to Etamosis, with public worship recommencing. There was much rejoicing when the body of Etamosis was discovered intact, and it was interpreted as a miracle of faith. As a result, it was decided that mining of it as a resource would stop, with only small parts of the fossilised flesh reserved for use in religious rituals from then on.

ETANUL: Mil. Str. Highland fortress guarding the mountain-pass of EDEN

NU that links the east of AZAZEM with the west of KORACHAN.

ETAR: Set. Settlement in the north east of RHINOCOLOURA, along the course of the SALT ROAD. It is a major manufacturer of ochre pigment, which is sold across the trade-route and is used as far afield as the KORACHANI EMPIRE and PARTHIS (Pop. c. 26,000).

ETARIA: Rui. Ancient MULL gladiatorial arena in ATARAXIA. It dates back to c. 2000 RM and was a major focus of mull culture in ARGHAM, before it was ended by the KORACHANI EMPIRE in 2906 RM. following its renaming of the capital to ARKAM in 2907 RM the arena was abandoned and allowed to decay. It remains today as a ruin, visited rarely by nomadic mulls.

ETAREH: Set. Fortified settlement in the far north of IO, close to the border with SALOROC^(1.) (Pop. c. 6,400).

ETARTES: Pol. Set. City on AEONAN PENINSULA in the south west of AEONAS in SAMMAEA. It is the capital city of AEONAS and is amongst the largest urban areas in the nation. It was once an island, though became a part of the mainland in c. 3000 RM, long before the city appeared (Pop. c. 596,000).

ETARUN: Set. southern-most major city of the CEHOPHELAN empire. The city is a major trade-centre, and oversees most commerce south along the EGETAKH mountain (Pop. c. 160,000).

ETASRE: Set. Settlement in the region of ZAFFRE in the c east of THE SURRACH. Its main industry is logging (Pop. c. 8,000).

ETEKAKET: lit. 'firestone'. Geo. Volcanically formed peninsula on the south of the isle of KHEMET, in KHAMID. The headland was created by the lava flows that were common in the area following the CATACLYSM OF KHAMID. These flows built up over centuries, creating the headland of Frekaket.

The region is renowned for its fertile, if sparse, soils and the mosses that thrive on the black rocks left behind by the area.

ETELAN: Set. The eastern-most settlement in mainland KORACHAN, along the course of the river ICHORIA. Coal from KEPHANICHAN stops here before being transported south via barges to ZEPHANICHAN and HERESI. It is also a part of the SULPHUR ROAD, forming a major link east into VÂRR (Pop. c. 12,500).

ETERITT: Set. Major coastal city in the far south west of PHYRR. Eteritt has developed a maritime culture distinct from the more industrialized cities inland, and its economy revolves around shipbuilding and fishing, though the latter has decreased in recent decades, possibly from growing pollution in surrounding waters from industrial runoff from the URRABANA river.

The city's shipyards are famed for constructing the massive ironclad vessels that patrol the SEA OF AMMASH^(2.), enforcing the IMPERIARCH'S will. However, its shipwrights are known for creating bespoke additions to their ships, producing hidden compartments and clandestine modifications for TECHNARCHS willing to pay the right price – a dangerous game in a land where dissent is met with brutal retribution (Pop. c. 77,000).

ETERNAL ASSEMBLY, the: Pol. Org. The government of KHULL, based in the city of EMEK TA'. It was established by the KHULLAN INQUISITION in 2853 RM following its successful eradication of the tyrannical SORCERER-KINGS^(3.) from Khull and the dissolution of the previous government (known as the SOPHIC CONCLAVE) two years earlier. Their goal complete, the Inquisitors set about selecting candidates from across all territories and social ranks within Khull, with councillors elected from the citizen population to form the first council of the Assembly.

Throughout much of its history the Khullan Inquisition, which was ultimately responsible for the creation of the Assembly, claimed to be subservient to the whims of its councillors. However, as time went on it became clear that certain members thought themselves to be above the law. In 3012 RM the Eternal Assembly voted on the status of the Inquisition and decided unanimously to move their headquarters to NEKIR, to lessen their influence. This did little to help the situation, and by the 37th century RM the Khullan Inquisition was openly attacking members of the KOPHIC HOUSES, causing it to stand trial before the Assembly for its actions. Amid accusations of bribery, the Inquisition was released with minimal punishment – something the Kophic houses would not stand for.

This propagated a new period of corruption within the Eternal Assembly, whose members came to be in the pockets of either the Inquisition or the Kophic houses and by c. 3800 RM the Assembly was not even attempting to hide this from the people. Poisonings, kidnappings, and assassinations became more common after this. Despite the blatant corruption, people continued to seek election, hoping to attract a handsome payoff from either of the two powers. Corrupt council members were bound to enact the demands of their benefactors, with failure often meaning death, or the torture of their families and loved ones.

This has caused a state of stagnation in the Assembly as every councillor works against their peers, many of whom have conflicting agendas despite ultimately being beholden to the same benefactors.

ETERNAL CITY, the: see AETONIA.

ETERNAL RALLY, the: Int. His. Art. Oil painting by an unknown artist (though thought by many to be the work of the treasonous painter LUVELL) that was uncovered in the BASILICA OF KHADON in 3773 RM when a larger, painting, THE MACHINE ASCENDANT, by the artist KARSIMMON VOCH, was removed for restoration works.

The Eternal Rally shows the controversial regent RUGGORATH astride a rearing warhorse, leading KORACHANI troops to battle beneath a mockery of the imperial banner that is marred by his personal heraldry.

Clearly produced after his 'brief' time as regent of the Korachani empire, the painting is in the chiaroscuro style of the late 2nd millennium RM. Its treasonous intent was clear from the onset, and it remains unknown how such a piece of propaganda survived for some 13 centuries without detection. The obscuring painting was placed in the Basilica in 3234 RM, so it is likely that the Eternal Rally was placed there after this time, once the Machine Ascendant was already in place.

An order was made by THE SEVEN to have the piece destroyed, but it went missing before this could be done. An empire-wide search took place for years after its disappearance, to no avail.

The paintings' whereabouts remain unknown today, and it is likely to be in a private collection, probably in the possession of someone with treasonous aspirations, though whether in the empire or without can only be guessed at. There remains an open reward for its return to the authorities to this day, so that it can be properly destroyed, though it is believed that as many as a dozen independent rewards are also in place within various black-markets across the INNER SEA REGION.

ETERNAL STAIRCASE, the: see ABYSMAL STAIRCASE.

ETERNAL TREE, the: see DIAOR.

ETERO: Set. Small coastal city in the north east of mainland SKAROS, overlooking the BAY OF DALMA. Its main industry is campanology (Pop. c. 13,000).

ETERUBDA: Ind. Set. Major industrial city in the c east of PHYRR, within the ESHTARES badlands (Pop. c. 72,000).

ETHA: Sea. Small sea separating BA'AKH from IO. In its south east is the strait that leads to the DAARKEN GULF.

ETHAHASH DAYA: Geo. Lush grasslands dominating the c. of the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT.

ETHAKOR: Soc. Pol. PATRICIAN HOUSE in the SARASTROAN EMPIRE that became a powerhouse of weapons manufacture during the tumultuous decades following the SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE. Since then, it has become a renowned manufacturer of artillery and military vehicles. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

ETHALIL: Rel. Str. Ancient temple in the south east of the UHBATAQ^(2.), in the north east of QARALAM, in the south east of SAMMAEA. The temple is claimed to have been built over what was once a sacred cave, where an ancient deity of the earth gave birth to a demigod. The soil there was once seen as sacred and fertile, seeped in the blood and sweat of the god, though overuse and abuse of the resource in past ages has left the region a dead land. Despite this, the temple sees strange pallid skinned pilgrims from far lands, many of which are DVERGAI. Some scholars claim that the deity was the DEMIURGE SYNCHTHONITH, and that the child is the scion DREIIKAH.

ETHAN: Lan. Language spoken by the ETHEN nomads of the UMBRA SOKHAR. It is thought to be descended from the older FOURTH AGE SAMMONISH tongue, though has many influences from a contemporaneous language that belonged to a PLAGI empire that existed in the north of SAMMAEA. See Vol II: Languages.

ETHANASIUS: (B. 2239 - D. 2297) Art. Famed LAASKHAN composer and librettist, most famed for his PASSION OF ST. MALICHAR, which is considered a masterpiece to this day.

ETHAND: 1. (B. c. 2261 – ?) half-PLAGI LIDEAN exile. An UMBRAPHAGE, he became a NEGUS of AETHIOS in 2543 RM, bringing the people of Aethios together. Worship of the UNDYING MACHINE prospered under his rule and as a show of strength to the empire that had exiled him, Ethand oversaw the damming of the river SHIBBOLETH^(3.) in 2943 RM, where he was elected ARCHNEGUS. The damming of the river caused the KORACHANI EMPIRE to declare war on Aethios, culminating in the destruction of the dam and disintegration of the nation in 3017 RM.

Aethios would never again be as prosperous as it once was and Ethand remained archnegus only though his longevity (increased by his TECHNARCANE augmentations) and the iron grip with which he ruled. He disappeared in 3027 RM, and his fate remains unknown to this day.

2. capital city of AETHIOS since 2943 RM, when the capital was moved there from ACTANORS following the completion of the DAM OF AESAPIA (1.). It was named after the then ruler of Aethios. It is known for its hanging gardens and indoor pools, which are fed by complex pneumatic systems that draw on the waters of the river NARRATI (Pop. c. 710.000).

ETHARIC: (B. 289 RM – 345 RM) Famous KORACHANI pirate whose small fleet terrorised coastal waters in the east of the INNER SEA during the REIGN OF THE EMPTY THRONE. In 333 RM he was employed by THE SEVEN and became a privateer of Korachan, preying on rival nations' vessels.

ETHARIC'S LIGHTS: Leg. Sizeable will'o'wisps seen over large bodies of open water such as the Seas of MIROVEA and MYMEREA, or the BATHASHAL OCEAN. They are often called this by those familiar with sea legends of the INNER SEA, and are named after an INFAMOUS PIRATE OF LEGEND.

ETHAT: Set. Settlement in the c north of ERET^(2.), 45-miles from the capital, along its main route south east to the city of ASTRAPUR (Pop. c. 7.000).

ETHE: Set. Settlement in eastern PELASGOS, in the hills east of the BATHAKOL that is dominated by the MINASTERIA (2.) of ESTMANIIN. It is also known of its many outlying fields and vineyards, where new crops and varieties are grown, hopefully for later dissemination across the empire (Pop. c. 9,200).

ETHEN, THE AUROCHS: Mys. In TEMUIAN SPIRITUALISM, the TUTELARY SPIRIT of the earth. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

ETHER: Plr. 'etheri'. Eth. Nomads of the UMBRA SOKHAR wastes. Though humanoid in form, their mannerisms are quite unlike those of HUMANS, as are their language and customs. They are tall, thin and of grey skin and their eyes are totally black. The effects of the ATRAMENTA do not seen to manifest in physical corruption within them, though they are far from immune to its touch. Though nomadic, they maintain a large metropolis in the Umbra Sokhar by the name of MIHARAST.

It is postulated that they are the descendants of unions between PLAGI and other mortals, commonly humans, formed after the plagi left KHARKHARADONTIS between the FOURTH and FIFTH AGES, following the imprisonment of RACHANAEL beneath DAEKYN. See Vol II: nomads of Elyden, and: Classification and Taxonomy of Life: Asicthai.

ETHER-ZOTHAZA: Rel. The religion and cosmogony of the ETHERI nomads of the UMBRA SOKHAR. The cosmogony is characterised by two separate pantheons: the INNER GODS and the OUTER GODS. The Inner Gods are prayed to as part of day-to-day life and, offerings are also made to them in the hopes of swaying their favour. The Outer Gods are alien and unknowable and are considered indifferent to the petty affairs of mortals.

Many of the GODHEADS scattered around the Umbra Sokhar are believed to be attributed to early representations of the Outer Gods, before the religion turned to the worship of the Inner Gods, and have since been abandoned.

The religion has seen itself challenged by the cult of HAARUANISM, which has grown in popularity over the past years. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

ETHEREAL: see EMPYREAN SPECTRE.

ETHERI: see ETHER.

ETHEROGH, THE ENAMELLED EFFIGY: ancient Int. Arc. Bust of great scale located in the northern reaches of TESCORA in KARAKHAS, this colossus of alabaster-like material is known to weep a blood-like substance. It is the centre of a small cult among which some KERATIN are known to congregate.

ETHESRA: Set. Small coastal city in the far east of SERROK (Pop. c. 15,000).

ETHIA: Geo. 200-mile-long peninsula dominating the north west of TISARA, emerging from the mainland at the mouth of the river TAIHA, dividing the USEAN GULF in the west from the SEA OF GEAUA in the east. The ruins of an ancient culture pepper the peninsula, though the many earthquakes that have wracked it throughout the millennia have left most of them unrecognisable.

ETHISTONI HIGHLANDS: Geo. Expansive highland region dominating the c and southern regions of ETHISTONITH, in the north east of SAMMAEA. The highlands are made up of various ranges, all linked, including the ADARAS, KADDRAS, NAKARAS, SARASAN, and TATRASAN Mountains.

ETHISTONITH: Dem. 'Ethistoni'. Ntn. Arid highland nation in the north east of SAMMAEA, to the south of RHINOCOLOURA, the east of the UMBRA SOKHAR and west of PNESSA. Historically, its people were insular, maintaining little contact with the outside world outside of necessary trade. Its southern lands are sparsely-populated due to the climate and terrain, and most settlements were traditionally located within 100-miles of the river SHIBBOLETH^(3.).

There was much contact between Ethistoni natives and KORACHANI settlers during the height of Imperial colonisation of the region between c. 600 – 800 RM. this resulted in much conflict, but the Ethistoni people were adept at hiding in the rocky terrain and using it to their advantage. The Korachani invaders had difficulty securing the region, and moved on south, eventually founding the colony of NOAVATUR, about 800-miles south.

In c. 2500 RM Ethistonith became the target of HAZORIN hostilities, and the latter was able to annex some Ethistoni territories before the period passed. This stained relations with Hazor in the future and the already insular Ethistoni people would bear an enmity towards the Hazorin that lasts to this day.

In the years following 3470 RM, Ethistonith saw an influx of HALFBLOODED refugees fleeing south from Hazor – exiles of HOUSE NEANDER, which was overthrown in 3469 in Hazor, following the death of its ruler, the otherworlder Neander. These halfbloods would mostly forsake their noble heritage, mingling with the mortal populace of the north of Ethistonith. They were most numerous in the city of YEHHAN, and today most of its residents can claim some degree of Hazorin ancestry.

It was annexed by the RHANATE(2.) in 3703 RM, and its government dissolved, becoming little more than a territory of the Khanate. Today, 300-years following its assimilation by Rhinocoloura, its people are far-removed from the days of independence, and though there is an ancestral mistrust of the city of Hazor and its denizens, the people of Ethistonith have adapted to their live as part of a greater empire.

The region around the river Shibboleth remains fertile and largely rural, with few industrialised cities of note along its 1,450-mile stretch. Indeed, much of Ethistonith is considered wilderness, where wild animals roam free, the true rulers of the land. See Vol III: Extinct States.

ETHITH: Ser. Coastal settlement in the east of the nation of ENITH, in the north west of SAMMAEA (Pop. c. 7,000).

ETHITUL: Geo. Mountain in the far south west of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES, forming a natural border with the tribes of ESSERIS and GOROR in MULCIBER. The KWEI philosophy was born here in the early FIFTH AGE.

ETHITLU: Geo. Mountain in the north east of SAMMAEA, acting as a border between the south west of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES, and MULCIBER. It was the birthplace of the KWEI philosophy prior to its rediscovery in the south of Soleyn.

ETHNARCH: Rnk. In nations assimilated by the KORACHANI EMPIRE, a title amongst native nobles granted land and rank within the appropriating Imperial administrations, especially in relation to warfare. For instance, in VENTHIR the MARABOUTS were captains in command of large coastal towers, though after the arrival and reorganisation of the empire, the title was officially changed, to Ethnarch, though endemic peoples might still refer to them as Marabouts or, at best, Ethnarch-marabouts

ETHOROST: 1. Geo. southern-most peninsula of PERGOST, noted for its 'warmest' climate and rocky terrain characterised by rivers and lakes.

2. Pol. More specifically, since the rise of the TRIFECTATE, the region has taken on a political undertone, with many cities gravitating towards their rule, with the increasing threat that they will splinter from the FEDERATION OF PERGOST to form their own state.

ETHRA: Set. City in IO, perched on the banks of the river LOGOSH, a few miles from the present-day eastern coast of the DAARKEN GULF. The city originated in c. 100 RM, where it served as a caravanseral between the cities of UR SITH in the south and SALOROC in the north. The city steadily grew during its first 2-centuries of life, largely due to the influence of the EXARCHS OF MIRADOR, whose presence in Ur Sith was the cause of much travel between it and the north of Io.

The opening of the Ionic borders to the KORACHANI EMPIRE in 174 RM led to an influx of imperial immigrants into Ethra, which in turn allowed the city to grow prosperous, its harbours constantly in contact with Korachan and PELASGOS. As a result, the city rapidly became one of the most imperialised in Io and when the EXARCHS invited a delegation of imperial politicians to Io in 211 RM, they were housed in Ethra, their fleet filling its harbours for months. The delegation travelled to MIRADOR the next year, accepting the Exarch's surrender of Io to Korachan. Mass dissent followed the announcement, with many clashes occurring between the protestors and the newly-arrived IRON GUARD and STEEL LEGIONS of Korachan. The rebellions were quelled, with hundreds of people executed outside the city as a symbol to future unrest, though in the city of Ur Sith a warrior known as ASIMEL had gained a massive following and marched against Ethra in LIVIALEN that year, besieging the city. He was killed outside the FIRAM GATE during the battle along his army, which was broken in less than a week.

Following the SIEGE OF ETHRA the city was made capital of Io, with the ARCHPATRICIAN-general Ecius Nemes becoming its ruler. By c. 400 RM the appearance of iron mines along the south western face of the GHOLA Mountain led to the steady growth of the city, which had become a centre of cartography and exploration, with the now-legendary voyage of NAVAH BERDEN beginning from there in 559 RM. The capital was moved from Ethra to BAESHA in 1409 RM following the Exarch's rise there over the last centuries, a move which marked a steady decline for the city.

Ethra slowly dwindled in size following the government's withdrawal. The slow retreat of ELYDEN'S seas resulted in its coastal harbours becoming land-locked (its river docks were largely unaffected), leading to loss of trade by c. 2500 RM. Many imperial institutions and businesses fled the city as the iron mines of PTHAHIL and PYMION in the Ghola Mountain failed, exacerbating its downfall (Pop. c. 13,800).

ETHRA, SIEGE OF: His. Mil. War. Following the EXARCHS' abdication of IO to the KORACHANI EMPIRE in 212 RM, the region was replete with dissent, with people opposing their actions. Most dissenters were executed though a charismatic warrior by the name of ASIMEL gathered thousands of followers and in June 212 RM marched against ETHRA, then-seat of the newly empowered imperial administration in Io. The siege was repelled in a week by imperial forces and Asimel was slain by the recently-appointed governor of Ethra, the ARCHPATRICIAN-general Ecius Nemes.

ETIEL: Mil. Str. Fortress in the south of Io, facing north across a steep pass across the AMARU mountain. Erected in 215 RM by the newly-arrived KORACHANI EMPIRE (who had corrupted the regions' rulers into handing Io over to them in 212 RM following years of corruption), the fortress became a major southern staging point for imperial armies prior to the attack of SARASTRO that commenced in the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR'S absence in 322 RM. For three years Etiel was a centre of leadership to the empire's armies in Sarastro, though it was replaced in 225 RM by the so-called PALACE OF STEAM AND RUST (its original name long-since forgotten). Though the Sarastroan command of the regions' terrain and their vehement defence let what should have been a rapid attack peter out into a stalemate that lasted upwards of a century.

Sarastro was taken in 339 RM following the return of Malichar and the fortress of Etiel was allowed to rot, re-emerging in c. 2400 RM, where it became the base to a policing force that helped maintain order in the south of Io and Sarastro.

The sundering of HAGRADEA from Sarastro and the rise of the Holy State of Hagradea in 2783 RM left the regions' borders contested, and Etiel emerged as the major Korachani stronghold in the area and was the centre of 2-centuries of conflict, until the fall of the HOLY STATE OF HAGRADEA and its reabsorption by Sarastro in 2974 RM. The fort was allowed to fall into further disuse, with short periods of activity, though it found a new purpose following the SARASTROAN SANCTION of 3103 RM, which left SATHEP THE RISEN with direct control over Io, and autonomy over the heathen lands of ARKOS^(1.) and MULCIBER. By c. 3200 RM. Etiel was restored and became the base of Sarastroan armies and slavers venturing south into heathen lands, remaining active until c. 3700 RM, by which time the WORLD'S FADING had been noted and the region, like much of ELYDEN itself, began to dwindle.

ETICA: Set. City in the c of IZABAL⁽¹⁾. It is a burgeoning centre of metalworking and manufactories (Pop. c. 37,900).

ETIOLA: Rui. Blighted ruin on the TWILIGHT STATES, in the far west of LLACHATUL It was, at one time, one of the region's most decadent cities, and was deserted in a matter of months following a horrific PLAGUE that struck there between 3780 – 3810 RM. It is now populated by the twisted survivors who are shunned by the rest of the Twilight States.

ETIZOR: Set. FIRMAMENTAL college in the west of CARNYNGA, along a bottleneck in an isthmus that gives it access to the VOORMIN SEA in the north and the BAY OF SUR in the south. It originated in c. 1100 RM as a trading outpost where salt cultivated in the west was sold farther east, but as the salt trade died so too did the outpost, which was allowed to crumble. It was restored and added to over 600-years later, eventually becoming a school where SHAPERS could learn their art.

ETKHA: Set. Settlement in the west of LAASKHA, along the southern-face of the CAALUA Mountains. It is known for its limestone quarries (Pop. c. 1,600).

ETMECH'HAD: Geo. Ancient Mountain-chain in the south of THE OLD FOREST, running north from the northern face of the UMBRALA Mountains.

ETOMORM: Set. Settlement in the east of PORPHYR (Pop. c. 8,000).

ETONONONT: Geo. Rocky highland region in the west of BANT, and source of the river MELATUT.

ETRAGUR: Set. Small city in the c north of LIDEA, known for its mining of brown coal (Pop. c. 15,000).

ETRAMIL: Geo. Mountain along the border between the prefectures of $\underline{\text{HOLOLACH}^{(2)}}$ and $\underline{\text{HOLICHRIS}}$, in the north east of the nation of $\underline{\text{Hololach}^{(1)}}$, forming part of the $\underline{\text{TOLIASOR}}$ Mountain-chain.

ETRETIA: Set. Small city in the c of OPHIUSSA along the course of the river MARAGA (Pop. c. 13,000).

ETRIOR: Set. Independent city in the far south east of ANUBIA, close to the border with SUOR. It is one of the few permanent settlements in Anubia south of its deserts, and borders the northern-most reaches of the HARRUS forest and is a centre of logging, producing unique wooden that are famed abroad (Pop. c. 50,000).

ETROMU: Set. Settlement in the c south west of IZABAL⁽¹⁾, known for its OLIVE groves and oil production (Pop. c. 7,400).

ETRON: Geo. Small mountain in the c south of AHKA, forming a part of the TOLIASOR Mountains.

ETTAIA: Geo. Island off the south western coast of WESTERN SAMMAEA, in the COTRIAN ISLES, forming a part of the ISLAND STATES OF IRY.

 $\overline{\text{ETTELLA}}$: Sca. 1. Strait between the south east of Zhariah^(2.) and the island of SAELEH^(1.).

2. Gulf in the south east of $\underline{ZHARIAH}^{(2.)}$, dividing the mainland from the peninsula of $\underline{ABBI\ DA'AD}^{(1.)}$.

ETTERMIA: Set. City in the north west of PARTHIS, along the course of the river BALAMUN, in the region of BALAMUT (Pop. c. 15,500).

ETTHI: Geo. Scattered mountain-range in the south of LYRIDIA DHAI, to the west of the KYTHI Mountains.

ETTIGAR: Set. Small city in the east of PHYRR, in the far south east of the SASTAKAUR Massif. It controls a series of sulphur quarries in the volcanically-active surroundings. Indeed, the air outside the city is toxic from sulphuric fumes and most workers need to wear SOFTSUITS or gasmasks while working (Pop. c. 11,000).

ETTRASIA: Sec. Large settlement and mining region in the north east of ATARAXIA. It is a major producer of iron in the region (Pop. c. 4,000).

ETTRYAN: Set. Settlement in the c west of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES (Pop. c. 10,000).

ETTUR: Set. City in the far north east of IPANAH (2.) (Pop. c. 41,800).

ETUA: Dem. 'Etuani'. Ntm. Nation in the c north of SAMMAEA, nestled between the south east of THE SURRACH and the north west of KHARKHARADONTIS. It is of a dry continental climate, with very little running water. Most settlements must dig deep wells or rely on aquifers or rare few oases that dot its more hospitable regions in order to survive. Much of its land is covered in deserts, with the DUNE SEA of KHARKHARADONTIS spilling over into its eastern territories, and its c western lands dominated by the scattered stone deserts of GIGGERAGH.

Its people are insular and hardy and quite unlike HUMANS found elsewhere, with skin tones that range from red, to brown, and black, and features that echo other MORTAL PEOPLES, indicating a mixed heritage, perhaps from ancient unions with between humans, LHAUS, KERATIN and/or SHIE.

Most Etuani people are nomadic, moving from watering-hole to watering-hole, careful not to deplete any resource completely in any place they stop, out of respect for others who may follow. They are adept trackers, navigating their harsh homeland in even the harshest weather. This lifestyle breeds a culture of people who are highly militant, with most children capable of stripping and firing firearms and competent in close combat.

It is considered a state by most outsiders, though this is not really the case. Its people do share a cultural heritage dating back to the early FIFTH AGE, though most cities are self-governing with little in the form of an overarching government. One unifying factor is the GIBBERING WORM—the uncaring chthonic deity at the centre of a harsh religion that dominates most aspects of life in the region. Its elders rule the majority of Etuani cities under a tyrannical theocracy, who together form a network of leadership and intelligence across Etua.

Little is known of the regions' history for the Etuani people do not share their culture and history with outsiders.

Etuani merchants are known to trade gems north west with the Surrach and east with MOAH on occasion. Its architecture is known for its star-shaped arches, the negative shape of which is a common motif, likely dating back to an ancient precursor culture. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

3. Set. Largest city in the region of Etua^(1.), often mistakenly equated with a capital. This is not strictly the case though, as Etua is not a truly united region and most cities are self-governing.

The city is however a hub of the debased cult that worships the GIBBERING WORM, and many people from across the lands of Etua travel here in veneration of the grotesque being (Pop. unknown).

ETUAN WASTES: Sup. Geo. Expansive ATRAMENTAL WASTELAND in the far north west of KHARKHARADONTIS in the c north of NORTHERN SAMMAEA, crossing the border into the south west of ETUA. The natural terrain of the wastes tends towards rocky desert, of which the GIGGERAGH is the most expansive, though where the ATRAMENTA holds sway, the terrain is dynamic, varying between mud, rock and water, often changing suddenly. Underlying duststone foundations often collapse, leading to sinkholes forming and slurry gushing down. These areas are largely shunned, though are sometimes traversed by the IRASSAN people and ETUANI nomads.

It is categorised as $\underline{\text{DANGEROUS}}$ by the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF}}$ ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

ETUANI: 1. Eth. Dark-skinned nomads of the ETUAN WASTES. They are believed to be the native inhabitants of ETUA, predating the majority of its extant people, who arose from ancient unions between various MORTAL PEOPLES. They are known mostly amongst outsiders as worshippers of a strange entity known as the GIBBERING WORM. See Vol II: the Nomads of Elyden.

2. Lan. Language spoken by the people of ETUA. It is considered to be a language isolate, meaning that it has little if any links or relationships with other languages. It has some modern loanwords, largely from SAVIUDI via SURRACHI merchants, though is otherwise unique, with its roots remaining unexplored and unknown. See Vol II: Languages.

ETUKHIS: Set. Settlement in the c of KHAMID, along the course of the river ARAX (Pop. c. 10,000).

ETUL: Dem. 'Etulan'. Ntn. Nation in the east of MENISCEA, north of the BAY OF PANOTIA.

In 3529 RM it excommunicated its eastern cities after allying with LARISH⁽²⁾, and they remain now as a loose confederacy known as the ESHELITRIAD. It emerged from the older far-ranging empire of VALARIM, that collapsed early in the FIFTH AGE. Its people follow the philosophy known as the ALEMBIC PATH. The nation is interesting in that is home to a (comparatively) large concentration of valthas, particularly in its north west, where they keep to themselves in small isolated communities, though it is not unknown for individuals to be found in larger cities across the nation.

It is ruled by an enigmatic figure known as the Yellow King, whose followers fill out the ranks of the nations' nobility, priests and law enforcement. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

ETUN: Rel. Set. Cathedral city in the north east of SKAROS, forming a part of THE SHADOW MARCH as well as the RED ROUTE as a result its streets are filled with merchants and peddlers selling religious trinkets and idols to PETITIONERS OF THE MACHINE who find their way there.

Interestingly, it is also home to the only church of the ALMAGESTI TEMPLE in the KORACHANI EMPIRE – the CHURCH OF ST. SAUAEL THE PEACEMAKER, which was erected there in 3187 RM to honour the life and death of the beloved diplomat. It is kept open at great effort by volunteers, donations, and guards from ALMAGEST and Etun alike, and its parishioners have clashed with those of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE on many occasions. (Pop. c. 68,000).

ETUNA: Set. Small city in the south west of SAGITTARIA. It forms part of the IVORY ROAD and is known for its bank and moneylenders, who serve the many merchants that cross through the city (Pop. c. 16,600).

ETUNDU: 1. Geo. Large island-chain off the western-coast of TZALLRACH, composed of 5 major island and dozens of smaller islands. That are collectively known as Etundu. The retreat of ELYDEN'S seas has left this archipelago connected in a ring, with only a few navigable straits leading into the shallow Inner Sea.

2. Set. Fortified settlement on the major island of the Etundu chain, overlooking the shallow inner sea at the chain's centre. The region around the fortress is ATRAMENTALLY-ACTIVE, and is a centre of research on the subject (Pop. c. 3,600).

ETUNUCH OF HAMITHA: (B. 1419 RM) Rel. Author of religious texts banned in KORACHAN by the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE as heretical in 1442 RM. He was captured and burnt alongside hundreds of his texts and followers in 1458 RM by the AVÉNETHI ORDER.

ETURED PASS: Geo. Mountain pass crossing the HAMAIDAON
Mountains, close to the settlement of SOSSNAR. The pass allows access across the mountain in the dry months – flooding from snow-melt and storms render the passes unusable for much of the year, however.

ETUROU: Set. Settlement in the east of PARAIYA, along the western shore of lake AREN^(1,). Its main industry is the cultivation of reeds and the manufacture of reed-based products, many of which are sold on the SALT ROAD, which passes through it (Pop. c. 8,400).

EUAHIR: Set. Settlement in the north of EZASUH^(2.), in the forested DORAKRAKOR region (Pop. c. 4,300).

2. Set. Main city on the eponymous island (Pop. c. 35,200).

EUANAT RIFT: Geo. Geological rift on the island of EUANAT. It is known for its unstable land, cracks and fissures, as well as occasional SHADOWISPS.

The region is categorised as DANGEROUS by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

EUANTHEKIB: Int. Dre. Geo. Expansive DREAMSCAPE in the north of the island of ISEA, in the north east of DHAT and the north west of IDRIIS. It is a primal realm, known for its vast undulating rocky landscapes above which lie dense labyrinthine virginal forests with thick undergrowth, fungi and creepers. Fauna that lives within its domains are more feral and larger, with thick matted fur and horns and antlers seemingly made of wood with mosses and epiphytes growing on them. MORTALS who spend even as little as a few hours within its borders begin to find their bodies irrevocably changing, taking on animalistic traits. The changes are subtle at first but following days or weeks of exposure these changes can be major — with their skeletal structures and skin warping in a painful and irreversible transformation that will ultimately see them changed into hybrid beings, an unholy meld of mortal and beast.

In extreme cases these changes can be grotesque and without form or function, with limbs, mouths and eyes emerging in place where they have no right to as their bodies balloon and warp into tortured silhouettes.

There is a group of guardians known as the SENTINELS OF ARIMASPI, who yet worship the languid DEMIURGE, and guard mortals from straying into the few places where they might mistakenly gain entry into this land.

EUCALYPTUS OIL: Flo. Soc. Mys. Oth. In many cultures in and around the c of SAMMAEA, eucalyptus oil is seen as a deterrent to unwanted spirits and OTHERWORLDERS. It is used in EXORCISMS and sold in blessed vials to ward off unwanted spirits.

This belief (not entirely unfounded, as various reports can prove) has since spread throughout the KORACHANI EMPIRE and farther, where it is used in rites of permission and exorcism, and is applied to the skin as a warding unguent.

EUCHRA: Geo. Mountain in the south of BA'AKH.

EUDALEON: see ISARIC AGHREGNIS EUDALEON.

EUDALEON CODICES, the: Mys. Sup. Dre. His. Vol. Series of six volumes that contain the sum total of the writings of the polymath ISARIC AGHREGNIS EUDALEON. Originating as simple notes, most of which were written or drawn on scrap or reused papers never intended to be published, they were collected and bound following his mysterious disappearance in 1438 RM. The volumes each were instrumental in various fields and technologies and each has a storied past, with the whereabouts of some currently lost, though others are well-known, kept behind lock and key.

The six volumes are: the CODEX VAERDEN, which is concerned with natural history; the CODEX LIORNIS, which is a geographical textbook, touching on physics and other related fields; the CODEX ARCANUM, which is perhaps the most infamous, concerning itself with deep mysteries of the MATERIAL PLANE and the OTHERWORLD; the CODEX DEOCHAN, which focuses on mechanics, engineering and geometry, with many designs for inventions ahead of their time; and the CODEX MISHUR, which explores the nature of DREAMS; the CODEX RATHANASA, which was a religious tome and purportedly destroyed by the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE in 1443 RM.

EUDESA: Mil. Str. Major coastal fortress guarding the delta of the river NURIA in eastern EREBETH.

EUPATRA: Set. Settlement in the c of SARASTRO, to the south west of the capital of ARGEA. Its main industry is agriculture, and it sells food to merchants travelling along the SALT ROAD to ARGEA (Pop. c. 6,000).

EUPHAR, ORDER OF: Alc. Mys. Org. A sect of chanting monks based in the GNOTHI city of EUPHONIA who believe that sound can alter matter. They also dabble in FIRMAMENTISM and ALCHEMY.

EUPHARES: Rvr. Ancient river that flowed through much of the HOGGOTHA ISZ. It dried out millennia ago and is now little more than a parched canyon system dominating the region. It is believed to have once been a cradle of mortal life, with ruins attributable to various long-extinct cultures and civilisations.

EUPHONIA: Alc. Set. City in the south west of GNOTH, situated along the banks of the river PURUSA, noted as the birthplace of the ORDER OF EUPHAR, a sect of chanting monks who believe that sound can alter matter. They also dabble in the FIRMAMENTISM and ALCHEMY (Pop. c. 100,000).

EURADA: 1. Lak. Lake in the north of AHRISHEN, along the course of the river PELADA. The lake is fed by waters from the river PELADA as well as lake LAOMADA and MAEDA.

2. canal in the north west of AHRISHEN, linking two separate river systems – the NALESH in the west and the PELADA in the east. it is around 20-miles long and has 7 locks along its course.

EURARA: Set. Major city in the north of Illakrar (Pop. c. 400,000).

EURRTOS: Rvr. River in the north east of JURRAS^(2.), flowing north east for about 300-miles from sources in the east of the SYNHODOS Massif before reaching the coast in the south of the SEA OF FOR.

EUSATIR: Ser. Coastal settlement in the west of KAZZAR⁽²⁾ in the region of TASALOTT. Its main industry is the exporting of ivory and other game trophies, most of which make their way for sale along the IVORY ROAD (Pop. c. 8,200).

EUSIS: Lak. Lake in the north of WESTERN SAMMAEA, forming part of the course of the expansive river GAMUS. The lake formed in c. 3500 RM, when the retreat of the BAY OF SABRIYA (1.) dwindled with the retreat of the waters of the GULF OF ESHIRON The waning of the sea was the expansion of the river Gamus, which flowed along the deepest parts of the revealed valley. Lake Eusis formed when the river reached a natural basin, allowing it to collect, just where the city of ANAFA stood, giving the newly land-locked city a source of moving fresh water, which remains to this day.

EVANEVER, FLEET ADMIRAL: (B. 3593 – D. 3663 RM) Mil. Fleet Admiral of the ALMAGESTI navy from 3632 RM to his retirement in 3658 RM. In 3938 RM a chest with letters and correspondence from the Fleet Admiral was discovered, revealing romantic exchanges between him and a naval doctor who he would spend the years following his retirement with, until his untimely death in 3663 RM. One of the letters names the place where he declared his love – a BASTION GARDEN that would colloquially be named after him by c. 3950 RM, and which today is a safe place where minorities those who are not accepted by the populace at large can go to.

EVANEVER'S GARDEN: Int. Flo. Arc. Picturesque garden within the CITY OF ALMAGEST, overlooking its northern harbour. The garden is relatively well-hidden and is nestled between two bastions, making it difficult to access.

Situated partially within its old bastion walls, the gardens are filled with fragrant trees and flowering perennials and have had viewing platform carved out of the bastion walls, allowing quaint views of the tiered harbours far below. The gardens were opened in 3308 RM and are said to have been the place where FLEET ADMIRAL EVANEVER declared his love for the man he would go on to spend the rest of his life with. Since this came to light a few decades ago, the garden has become a haven to minorities seeking a safe place to enjoy views of the harbour. Despite this, the garden remains largely empty, with few knowing of their existence and even fewer going there regularly.

EVARII: Set. City in the c of PNESSA. Its main industry is iron mining (Pop. c. 30,200).

EVARSHA: Set. Coastal settlement in the west of IACIO, known for its fishing (Pop. c. 6,000).

EVARUN: Set. Settlement in the c-south east of VAALK, close to the woodlands of OKKARA. It harvests the sap of the ARRAKESH trees that are common in the forest, which is used to negate the effects of the ATRAMENTA (Pop. c. 1,000).

EVHRAN: Set. Fortified city in the south east of VETHRANDA (present-day OTINTH). In c. 990 RM it emerged as a power centre, its rulers, the Vethrandi family, uniting the disparate city-states of the region under its banner in defence against the predations of the HOLY LAND OF RACHANAEL, whose templars had come to subjugate the surrounding area. Following the wane of the royal family in 1662 RM, it remained the seat of power in Vethranda until its destruction by the scion known as the VHOCENT in 2735 RM, in which it was annihilated in an ATRAMENTAL blast of his own creation.

Today, its ruin mars the landscape of Otinth, and the surrounding area is covered in foul ATRAMENTAL TAINT that has forced people out of the area. It remains uninhabited to this day.

EVIRKA: Set. Settlement in the west of SABAISA (Pop. c. 28,000).

EVOLAM: Flo. A form of giant kelp that is common along the western coast of WESTERN LLACHATUL, particularly THE VORANDINE and southern RAONGEN^(2.). Oil processed from the kelp is a vital part of many ATRAMENTALLY-BASED procedures, including CLONING and $\underline{\textit{FLESHWRIGHTING}},$ and the kelp harvested at great profit by the above peoples.

EVORADI: Eth. Nomads of HOLOLACH^(1.). They are followers of the original VOLATA. When the Volata settled, some of his followers continued their nomadic lifestyle, spreading his word as missionaries (some ended up in other lands, where they settled, later mingling with locals, becoming lost to history). The Volata praised them as his outriders and they took the expression to heart, making it a tradition that's followed to this day. They travel not only throughout Hololach, but move along the western coast of WESTERN LLACHATUL, including AQUARIIA, whose people are thought to be descended from early evoradi settlers. See Vol II: the Nomads of Elyden.

EVRON: Set. Once major harbour on an island in the south east of the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS, though it is today landlocked, and of little importance. Today it is mostly known for the large monastery of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE that produces good honey (Pop. c. 1,000).

EVURAHAN: His. Ntn. Ancient FIFTH AGE territory once belonging to native YARAOMIC PEOPLE. It was situated in the north of SAMMAEA, forming the north east of their ancestral lands in what is today the north east of LIDEA. It was amongst the last Yaraomic territories to be taken by KORACHAN, and was slowly overrun between 800 – 900 RM, during which time native Yaraomic People were taken as slaves or driven out, forced into ever-dwindling territories.

Like most of Yaraomic history, very little remains of its people's culture today, and the caste of lorekeepers known as the IARAOM GRABBA travel across northern Sammaea searching for ancient artefacts to take to their fortress-library in IARSHUGGAH.

EVUT: Set. Coastal city in the south west of PNESSA. It is known for its UMBRA refineries and harbours, where processed umbra is shipped around the GULF OF SAURIAR and beyond (Pop. c. 70,000).

EVVER: 1. Geo. Endorheic basin in the east of LLACHATUL, along the border between the PANTHEON ISLES and TETHYSIA.

2. Lak. Seasonal lake in the above region, in the north east of the mainland PANTHEON ISLES.

3. Mil. Str. Fortress in the above region, in the north east of the mainland PANTHEON ISLES, guarding the trade-route north into TETHYSIA.

EVVRED: (B. 1564 – D. 1622) Pol. Emperor of IMELKA and bearer of the GODSTONE (1.) PRONAOS TESSERA from 1595 RM until his death in 1622 RM. His reign began after 3-years of civil war where he fought his brother over the throne following the unexpected death of his mother, empress NIALDA, in 1592 RM.

EWATAS: Set. Small city in the c of the SULTANATE OF ABACARDAT (Pop. c. 13,000).

EWHA: f. Pol. His. Per. (B. 1906 – D. 1989 RM) Princess of the HENDECARCHY of DERAEIA in the east of MALAN. In 1922 RM she was married into ruling merchant house of TISHANNA⁽²⁾ (present-day TISARA), becoming the queen regent of a new monarchy with close ties with Deraeia.

EXIDRA: Sea. Name for the SEA OF LYNNAE amongst the people of DHA NAR in the western-coast of MENISCEA and the CITIZENRY OF THALI in the west of WESTERN SAMMAEA.

EXAHARIA: His. Ntn. Now-extinct FOURTH AGE nation in the north of SAMMAEA, around the SEA OF BYSSOS region to the north of the CAMMOREAN Mountains. See Vol III: Extinct States.

EXAHARIAN: His. Lan. Now-extinct FOURTH AGE language that was prevalent in the north of SAMMAEA, spoken by the people of the Exaharian empire. See Vol II: Languages.

EXANEM: 1. Lak. Lake in the south west of AZAZEM, fed by the river UGONEM.

2. Mil. Str. Fort in the west of AZAZEM guarding the region of ATROPHY, which is a major producer of DROSS. Its forces protect the north eastern routes of the region.

EXARCH: also 'Exarch of Mirador'. Pol. Rnk. In Io, a caste of FIRMAMENTAL mystics which emerged from the GHOLA mountain in c. -150 RM and, following the events of the APOSTATE WARS that sundered the nation. Learnt how to create and animate golems, bestowing upon them much power and political sway.

Legend state that they discovered ancient tablets on mount MIRADOR in the Ghola mountain (similar to the IONIC TALPA discovered in c. -730 RM) referred to as the ZHATABAAB. With the knowledge learnt from the Zhatabaab, the Exarchs travelled to the ruins of GARAP in c. -150 RM, searching for the secrets of the Ionic Talpa. Though largely ignored during the chaos of the APOSTATE WARS, the Exarchs re-emerged in its wake, and in -111 RM managed to animate a number of golems in the hollow-temple of THE VOID in the city of UR SITH. This precipitated their uniting of Io – in -47 RM they attacked the city of BAESHA, taking it. By -30 RM they had united all disparate regions of Io but SCYTHEA, ending the rule of the old Ionic Hierarchy.

Following the moving of their palace to Mirador in -23 RM, they established embassies with the KORACHANI EMPIRE, formally opening Ionic borders with the empire in 174 RM. This would eventually lead to their abdication of Io to Korachan in 212 RM, though they remained largely autonomous following that time, concentrating on perfecting their art through the application of imperial technarcana. By c. 900 RM the Exarchs had become part of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, abandoning ETHRA in favour of BAESHA following the SECULAR DISSOLUTION.

The Exarchs were eventually disbanded following the SARASTROAN SANCTION of 3103 RM found SARASTRO gain control of Io, and its ruler, SATHEP THE RISEN, bequeathing the territory to his lieutenants. The Exarchs were hunted and driven out of Io, and their knowledge, including their golems, destroyed. The remnants of the Exarchs scattered around the north east of Sammaea, and their descendants continue their studies to this day.

EXCIAN HILL, the: Geo. Step hill in the c north east of SARASTRO, around which the city of ARGEA was erected, starting in 339 RM. The LICHFORT – home to the Sarastroan government, and palace to the LICHKING – envelops the hill in its entirety today.

EXECRATION: Soc. Rel. Lan. Verbal admonishments uttered by a caste of men known as EXECRATORS consecrated by both the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE and the REFORMED CHURCH OF SARASTRO.

EXECRATOR: Rel. Rnk. In both the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE as well as the REFORMED CHURCH OF SARASTRO, Execrators are a caste of men consecrated to utter curses (verbal admonishments known as EXECRATIONS that, while completely mundane, are feared by the lower classes) unless the target can make a donation to the church.

EXECRATOR HOSTS: Int. Rel. Mar. Org. Elite martial MUGHARRIBS of the REFORMED CHURCH OF SARASTRO that are tasked with hunting heretics, apostates, political dissidents and other high-profile enemies of church-and-state. The hosts are largely autonomous, answering only to their direct superiors and SATHEP THE RISEN. They typically operate in groups of three to five, with each host preferring a different composition, though these are not always the same from host to host. The most common roles are:

- ANNALIST. Theologians and historians, Annalists record the details of those apprehended and the judgements handed down to them.
 These records are then presented to the Reformed Church of Sarastro for inclusion in church archives.
- KALFA. Typically female, kalfas are infiltrators and spies, who can operate in places where men would be too conspicuous.
- LUMINARY⁽³⁾. Host leaders, luminaries have ascended farther along the hierarchy of the Reformed Church of Sarastro.
- PURSUANT. The martial backbone of any Host, pursuants are the equivalent of KORACHANI VENATORS skilled hunters and combatants and they are well-versed in the tenets of the Reformed Church of Sarastro.
- VEKKIL. Lawmakers and judges granted the power to condemn and sentence those hunted by the Hosts.

They have been compared by some to the various SANCTIFIED ORDERS OF THE INQUISITION of Korachan, and rightfully so, as they emerged in the wake of the SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE from the said Orders and fulfil a very similar role, also operating largely autonomously of their governing body in the name of church and state.

EXCUBANT: Sup. Rnk. Rank of SHAPER in ACHAA^(2.) tasked with standing guard over the most acute of its FIRMAMENTALLY TAINTED regions, including CHORHYST PHENOMENON and LYNASHA. They ensure that lodeliths do not drift too far into civilised lands, and also observe the Chorhyst Phenomenon for fractures or unusual activity. They are also entrusted with turning people who venture too far into dangerous lands away.

They are an important part of the social hierarchy in Achaa and are respected. Their work is difficult and they spend long periods of time away from the comforts of civilisation, though they enjoy a decent stipend that they continue to receive even after retiring.

EXECUTION: Int. The carrying out of a death sentence on a condemned person. This can take various forms, the most common of which are hanging or firing squad. Some specific forms can be found below:

1. Hanging. Common across ELYDEN, the condemned is hung from gallows, with a trapdoor released, allowing the person to drop, resulting in either their neck snapping, or strangulation should the former not work.

In some areas, including VAALK and MHAROKK there is a tradition that the executioner forces the condemned to kiss the gallows before having the rope tied around their neck. Many gallows have a part that is polished smooth from the lips of unnumbered thousands of previous condemned men and women.

- 2. Decapitation. An ancient form of execution that has remained prevalent in SKAROS, LIDEA and MHAROKK throughout their subjugation under various colonial powers is beheading by sword. This form of execution is typically reserved for heinous crimes, or treason against the government. This method of execution was most commonly administered by CARNIFEXES.
- 3. Crucifixion. Common method of execution for shapers particularly against Firmamentists in the HIGH- and LOW-EMPIRES. The exact form varies by region, though most common is for the victim to be tied to a large stake or pole, with their arms bound together above their heads. They would often be covered in oil or honey to attract scavengers.
- 4. Gibbetting. A traditional form of punishment along the SHADOW MARCH, where those found guilty while undertaking the religious pilgrimage are left behind in gibbets (cages hung within clear view of the March) to die of starvation or exposure, whose bodies would act as a message to future pilgrims. The entire route of the Shadow March is filled with such gibbets from past executions, many dating back centuries.
- 5. Blowing from a gun. In the KORACHANI EMPIRE treason and sedition are punished by tying the condemned to a cannon and firing it. This is often used to punish certain military violations, such as desertion.
- 6. Prison Tree. An ancient MALANI tradition where criminals were imprisoned within the hollow trunk of the PRISON TREE and left to starve, with their bodies sustaining the tree. Though no longer practiced in most urban areas, it is thought to still be a method of execution in more rural areas.
- 7. Quartering. Common in SIMBARA and other states in the south west of SAMMAEA, particularly amongst those convicted of treason, quartering involves the cutting or ripping of a person's extremities. In Simbara this involves the surgical removal of the legs at the hips and the then the head. In HABOT, the process is even more barbaric, with the condemned person chained by all four limbs to a black idol. The chains are connected to a machine that slowly pulls them taught, inflicting great pain as the limbs are stretched back, causing bones to break, flesh to tear and skin to rip apart.
- 10. Guillotine. Common in PARTHIS and its vassals, the guillotine is seen as a less barbaric form of execution and is quick and relatively painless, and it is used for various crimes, ranging from perfidy, murder, and crimes against the republic.
- 11. Molten Lead. An ancient form of torturous execution once common in industrial parts of established KORACHANI territories, including LAASKHA, VAALK, PELASGOS and VÂRR. In this execution molten lead is poured down the throat of the condemned. Death is painful, though mercifully quick, and results from a sudden explosion of steam releasing as the hot lead touches the windpipe, spelling air from the lungs. The lead cools within seconds, solidifying in the throat, by which point the person is typically dead from shock. Lead has sometimes been replaced with gold in rare cases, such as with royalty or nobility. This form of execution is rare today though has been revived by ruthless leader, in particular the Vârran state of NOACHIS and SATARR.

12. The Three Deaths: a common method of execution employed by the TWIN EMPIRES, that is reserved specifically for WITCHES. The execution involves stabbing, impaling and finally drowning. In most cases the victim is dead before the third or sometimes second 'execution' is reached, though particularly reviled persons are kept alive so that they can suffer through all three. Though technically reserved for shapers, this method of execution has sometimes been used for heathen leaders and generals.

EXEMPLAR TRIAD, the: Vol. Myt. His. In the field of cosmogonical and mythological study, three unique examples of the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN that together have formed the basis of our extant knowledge of the Mythologia. With many extant examples of the Mythologia Elyden being inaccurate copies of copies, or transcriptions of 3rd hand accounts, these three largely unadulterated versions of the Mythologia have been used to corroborate differing accounts to remove apocryphal texts from which we have created the most accurate version of the Mythologia in the FIFTH AGE.

The individual volumes that make up the Exemplar Triad are the NÁRTHELI CODEX, which was discovered in NÁRTHEL in 320 RM; the KASKEAN TOME, which was discovered in IZABAL^(1.) in 2788 RM, and the KHOLAMORI MANUSCRIPTS, which were uncovered in the WHITE SHEET in 3221 RM, during a doomed ALMAGESTI expedition. See Vol IV: the Mythologia Elyden.

EXILED KING: (B. 342 – 2132 RM) Pol. King PARDIS, who in 473 RM handed PARTHIS over to KORACHAN. Following the Korachani abandonment of Parthis in 967 RM, Pardis, alongside his family and followers were exiled to TARTAK, from where he continued to claim the Parthisan throne. In Tartak his descendants would ultimately weaken Korachani influence there by poisoning its cities, leaving the Imperial administration there severely weakened. This culminated in the poisoning of SHER in 2053, which left Tartak in chaos. The Exiled King briefly ruled from Sher between 2055 and 2060 RM, though Korachan regained control, moving the capital to LIRAET in 2064 RM. Conflict between Tartak and Parthis dominated his time in exile, though this was ended in 2132 RM with the abdication of the throne to Parthis. This effectively ended the claim of the Exiled King and his descendants to the Parthisan throne, who were executed.

EXIOFAR: Set. Coastal city in the north of TISARA (Pop. c. 36,500).

EXITUS: Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region in a peninsula in the south west of CHEIRA situated along the coast overlooking the SEA OF KHURSA. The region is heavily tainted and considered inimical to life, and despite being located in a tropical rainforest climate, it is a lifeless wasteland. Though not a desert (As it received too much yearly rain or moisture to be considered such) it is utterly devoid of life – both flora and fauna. There is little of value in the area, and is ignored by the people of Cheira.

The region is categorised as Highly Dangerous by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

EXOCRINE: Rel. Org. Religious order within the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE in the KORACHANI EMPIRE and later the REFORMED CHURCH OF SARASTRO following the SUNDERING OF THE KORACHANI EMPIRE in 3705 RM. Its members specialise in spreading the word of the imperial faith outside of its borders. They are the counterparts to the ENDOCRINES, and alongside them rose from the FOURTEEN APOSTLES.

EXOGIANT: Set. Small fortified city in the region of HATTRE in the east of THE SURRACH. It is known or its classical universities, where many of nobles of the Surrach go to study arithmetic, economic and history (Pop. c. 20,000).

EXORCISM: Soc. Rel. Ritual, sometimes religious, that seeks to rid a mortal of possession by a spirit or foreign entity. In the KORACHANI EMPIRE exorcisms are only authorised by the MINASTERIA OF EXORCISMS, though OCCULTSITS often offer such unlicensed service on the black-market.

EXORCISOR GENERAL: Pol. Org. Rnk. Head of the MINASTERIA OF EXORCISMS, based in the city of ELAARH in the c of LAASKHA. Presently the Exorcisor General is the ATRAMENTIST NEDMEN VOSTAIM.

EXORCIST: Sup. Voc. One who performs EXORCISMS. In the KORACHANI EMPIRE these will often be shapers known as SULRACHARIIN.

EXOSIA: Ind. Set. City in the c north west of SKAROS, just north of the BAY OF ZENID. It is best known for its SHADOWSTEEL foundries, which are amongst the largest in the western KORACHANI EMPIRE, the majority of its population is dedicated either directly or indirectly to the industry (Pop. c. 33,000).

EXPANSE OF GYARHT: Geo. Region in the north of Kharkharadontis to the south west of the SEA OF UGOLOTH, though its exact location is unknown today.

EXPEDITION TO THE OBSIDIAN ISLES: see Obsidian Isles, EXPEDITION TO THE.

EXPLOITATION RIGHTS: see SANCTION OF INDUSTRY.

EXPLOSION OF THE ZIZ TANNIN: His. Historic event that took place in the docks of KORACHAN in 3637 RM, in which the battleship Ziz Tannin, which was in a drydock being refitted following an exchange with PARTHISAN vessels, exploded when munitions being loaded onto it detonated, causing the entire ship and much of the quayside to explode. Many were killed, most of them slaves, and hundreds were injured, and the city was left devastated.

The explosion led to riots amongst the slave and helot workers of the docks, in which dozens more people were killed, leading to instability in the city that lasted for far longer than the few months it took for the docks to be rebuilt.

Even all these years later, the scars of the explosion – both physical, in the surrounding buildings, and cultural, in the collective memories of the locals – still remain.

EXPOTRA: Set. Settlement in the c north of OKKHAM, west of the Okkhami Mountains. Its main industry is sericulture – the production of silk from caterpillars of the giant ORUNA moth that is endemic to the lower mountains of Okkham (Pop. c. 8,400).

EXPRESSMAN: Lan. Veh. Common slang within the KORACHANI EMPIRE, for AMBULANT and landship porters.

EXPURGATOR: Org. Rnk. Rank within the SANCTIFIED ORDERS OF THE INQUISITION. Their exact duties differ from Order to Order, though they are generally charged with stifling profanation and calumny against the tenets of the respective Orders as well as the KORACHANI EMPIRE itself.

The Expurgators of the MORÉHAN ORDER differ in that they fill a more martial role, and they are known for the oversized filigreed maces they wield, which are as symbolic of their iconoclastic tenets as they are practical (and brutally effective) weapons.

EXTREMELY DANGEROUS: Sup. The most harmful-class used by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES to categorise regions of ATRAMENTALLY TAINT. Regions of extreme ATRAMENTAL danger are found surrounding the most overt of Atramental LACUNAE. All travel into such regions is restricted due to the near-immediate danger they pose to mortal physiognomies and no known method of artificial protection is of adequate protection against extremely dangerous Atramentally tainted regions.

Such regions are typically ignored and may be guarded by military personnel to discourage trespassing to lessen the chance of contracting potentially contagious ailments, though they may ultimately be of value due to resources (such as UMBRA) contained within them. In such cases a station will be constructed outside the worst area of influence, protected by an array of siphon engines. Mortals working in these stations will still need to wear a softsuit when operating in such lands.

Most of inner KHARKHARADONTIS and the region known as the ABYSSAL MARROW is considered to be extremely dangerous.

EXULANTA: Mil. For. Mar. Com. Fortress of the WHITE LEAGUE in the west of the KORACHANI PENINSULA. It has a great harbour and the centre of the operations of the White League in the nation of KORACHAN.

EYA PARTHIS: lit. New Parthis. PARTHISAN colony in the east of MENISCEA founded in c. 3140 RM. It later fragmented, becoming CYAE and EIKARTHYEA.

EYE, the: Rel. Geo. Monolithic rock formation in the TOMBS OF THE GODS in STOLAS, at the centre of which is a gaping hole said by some to be endless. The altars and temples of many extinct cultures line the base of the Eye, testament to the impact it has had on the inhabitants of the region.

EYE OF ARAK: Rel. Dei. In GIBEAH, name given to the sun, named after the deity ARAK. The symbol of the sun disk is used by those in power, where they often apply it to the heir left hands or foreheads as a tattoo.

EYE OF DARKNESS: Sup. Geo. Vernacular term used within the KORACHANI EMPIRE to describe the areas of KHARKHARADONTIS engulfed by the ATRAMENTA, which appeared between c. -550 RM and c. 350 RM, causing the KHARKHARADONTID EXODUS. It is used synonymously with the SHADOW IN THE DESERT and collectively encompasses may regions, including, but not limited to: the BLACK FOUNTAIN, the CARNOSE WASTES, the south east of the DUNE SEA, the FORGOTTEN DOMAINS, the PENUMBRA, the SEPULCHRAL PALACE, and many other regions. Together these form the most corrupted and inhospitable regions of Kharkharadontis and together are thought to encompass an area over 6,000,000 square-miles.

EYE OF DEKELLAH, the: Int. Geo. Spectacular geological feature in the c north west of KHARKHARADONTIS, partially within the REALM OF THE MARKED PALL, said to look like an obsidian eye by those few who have seen it from above. It is thought to be a heavily eroded dome of ancient igneous rock exposed by weathering of weaker limestone and DUSTSTONE above it. It is over 50-miles in diameter and has been explored extensively, including by the famed SURRACHI adventurer IGIDAR MOUSSAIN in 1821 RM.

EYE OF HARAGROSH: Int. Sup. Geo. Obj. Grotesque entity in the north of RAONGEN(2.), to the south in the direction of 96° of the NORTHERN POLE. It takes the form of a bismuth-like cube of pearlescent metal floating above the ice, in which is a large blinking eye. The entity appears to be indestructible and is possessed of a latent intelligence, though has no way of conveying its thoughts, of indeed it has them. This includes through MAGICKAL means such as TELEPATHY or ONEIROMANCY.

Its first recorded mention in the FIFTH AGE was by the Raongeni naturalist Hyogi, who described them thusly:

I first saw it bathed in the icy mist, its eye lazily blinking as it observed me from half a mile away. It drifted towards me, the many edges and angles of its geometric form catching the light. It stopped feet away from me, granting me an unrivalled view of the veins and imperfections in its alien orb. It blinked finally and turned, drifting away. Within moments it was out of sight, never to be seen again. I was left feeling exhausted, my heart heavy and my thoughts dark. In truth, I would have been glad to never see it again...

EYE OF MIMIR: see MIMIR, EYE OF.

EYE OF RAKAN: Rel. Dei. Sun deity of the PARAIYAN people of the north of SAMMAEA.

EYE OF SEBBERASH: Geo. Large circular feature measuring about 30-miles in diameter in the c north of the ANUBIAN desert. A bird's eye view of the formation reveals that the eroded dome looks like a gigantic eye. It is close to many notable examples of Anubian stone circles.

EYE OF KATHISIS: Rel. Obj. Symbol borne by the PROPHET KATHISIS and employed in later years by many officials in TETHYSIA.

EYE OF TETHYSIA, the: Ele. Obj. 4029 carat diamond discovered in 3534 RM in the wilderness of TETHYSIA. The discovered prompted the construction of a massive open-cast diamond mine there, and though it has yielded many superlative examples, none have surpassed that first chance discovery. Coveted by kings and emperors, it has been in the possession of the GOD-KING of TETHYSIA since that time.

EYE OF ZKEHOTT, the: His. Str. Ancient edifice located in the far south of the SULTANATE OF ABACARDAT, north of the SHRUBLANDS OF AKANAR. It takes the form of a spherical hollow along a cliff-face in which is suspended a chrome-like metal sphere around 100-ft. Wide. Little is known of it, save that it is thought to date back to the THIRD AGE of life and is likely the work of a DEMIURGE.

EYES OF AELLEAD, the: Myt. His. In the mythology and history of TETHYSIA, an island relic on the Tethysian coast, from the days of the DEMIURGES. The FIRMAMENT is captured here and partially trapped in two hollows along the chasm wall that separates it from the continent, the source of its name. Its use is unknown, though SHAPERS sometimes visit the place. It is a magnificently powerful LEY marker, one of the strongest outside the NEHNAXIA, extremely dangerous to those shapers without the discipline to control it.

EYES OF HETEPHERES: Mil. Str. Coastal watchtowers in the north east of VENTHIR, overlooking the SEA OF KEMHAB. The watchtowers were constructed between 2379 and 2520 RM and were designed to guard against pirate and CHORSAIR attacks, numbered close to 300 during their peak use, before waning sea levels and changing political climate led to their abandonment.

EYES OF SETHENYN: Geo. Cavern system with seven ceiling entrances, in the western-face of the CAALUA Mountains in LAASKHA. The caverns, though not expansive are extremely large, with the largest chamber easily half a mile long and 250-feet high. The caves are named after the ancestral LAASKHAN deity which has seven arms.

EYU: Set. Settlement in the c south of RAONGEN^(2.), in the north of the JIANNAN Hills (Pop. c. 6,000).

EZASH: 1. Rvr. River in the c south of EZASUH⁽²⁾, flowing for 90-miles before emptying in the SEA OF EZASUH⁽¹⁾.

2. Lak. Lake forming part of the above river-system in EZASUH^(2.).

EZASUH: 1. Sea. Sea off the southern coast of Ezasuh^(2,), in the north west of the INNER SEA.

2. Dem. 'Ezasuhi. Ntn. Nation to the north west of the INNER SEA, off the southern coast of LLACHATUL. It was founded by the descendants of SAGITTAARI people exiled from KORACHAN during the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR'S reign for their worship of a serpentine deity. They decimated the native SUHE people, and adopted their religion.

The people of Ezasuh are known for their practice of funerary cannibalism and their traditionalist views on shaping and dislike of technarcana and other modern technologies, which has seen a decline of their influence over the past centuries.

In their exploration of the peninsula, the Sagittaari people discovered ancient Suhishi texts identified as the PENTATAEL⁽¹⁾, a word that has since become synonymous with Ezasuh and its people. The site where the texts were found became the city of Pentatael⁽²⁾, which is a place of great ATRAMENTAL learning to this day.

Acting to fulfil a prophecy within the Pentatael, the Ezasuhi people undertook a massed migration west in 3133 RM, during which they founded the colony of ELAT at great cost. Since then, the colony has broken down into the nations of AYAD, Elat and GYZHA, which maintaining varying degrees of relations with their motherland.

The deep-rooted link between the Pentataeli texts and the ruling body of Ezasuh has led to an inseparable triad of government, religion, and shaping, making Ezasuh one of the few regions in the INNER SEA to maintain traditional shaping that is seen as antiquated by the rest of ELYDEN. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

3. Pol. Set. Capital of the above nation. located in the wetlands of TROIA (Pop. c. 1,017,000).

EZASUHI: Lan. Language spoken in EZASUH^(2.), as well as the PARNASIAN STATES (which include its former colony of ELAT and its child states AYAD and GYZHA). It is a mix of the native SUHISHI tongue (now extinct) and the SAGITTAARIAN dialect of EARLY KORACHANI that was brought by SAGITTAARI exiles. See Vol II: Languages.

EZASUHI PENINSULA: Geo. Peninsula in the south of WESTERN LLACHATUL, now occupied by the nation of EZASUH^(2.). It is separated from the mainland by the BAY OF LIAKARRA.

EZEDALL: Set. City in the south west of ZHARIAH⁽²⁾, in the region of KUIASH. Its main industry is the processing of raw iron mined in the surrounding region into pig iron and steel (Pop. c. 49,000).

EZEKEVAR: Set. City in the north west of the tribe of JACITTA, in the c of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. It lies along the course of the river GAZAHAN (Pop. c. 24,500).

EZEROS: Mil. Str. Coastal fortress in the east of KORACHAN, overlooking the north of the SEA OF LISASSA.

EZHARIM: Set. Large city in AYAD, with links to the PENTATAEL (Pop. c. 48,000).

EZHIRAYA: 1. (D. 3964 RM) Pol. Empress Regnant of the Secular Republic of PARTHIS. She was succeeded by her daughter EZHIRAYA II.

2. Pol. His. PARTHISAN colony established on the headland of DEOBRASHIA in the far east of MENISCEA, west of the SEA OF LYNNAE, in 4002 RM by EZHIRCYN I. A huge fleet of ships sailed there in late 4001 RM, rapidly subjugating the people of KRYSA, either forcing them into vassalage or killing them.

Despite unrest from the subjugated natives, the headland is considered to be secure by the Parthisan empire, though tensions remain with its neighbours – LARISH to the north west and OBLEVIS to the south west, and the border is heavily patrolled.

- 3. Set. Small coastal city in the north of the eponymous colony^(2.). It was the first settlement of the colony, though it has since been replaced by the current capital of BADTHIS in 4005 RM (Pop. c. 12,200).
- 4. Pol. His. PARTHISAN settlement in the c of the established colony of NISSA, in the south of CUTH. It was a native settlement but was captured in 3961 RM, though it has been the subject of Cuthi attacks both on land and across its harbour since then (Pop. c. 2,200).

EZHIRAYA II: (D. 4001 RM) Pol. Empress Regnant elected empress of the Secular Republic of PARTHIS since 3951 RM until her death.

EZHIRCYN I: (B. 3971 RM) Pol. Emperor Regnant and Chairman of the People's Republic of PARTHIS since the death of his mother EZHIRAYA II in 4001 RM. He has maintained her expansionist policies, and in 4002 RM founded the colony of EZHIRAYA in the east of MENISCEA, which he named after his grandmother. Some believe that he wishes for the dissolution of the republic and many individuals and groups are keeping a close eve on his actions as he grows into his new position.

EZIMIAH: Set. Settlement in the north west of ZHARIAH⁽²⁾, in the eastern foothills of the SHAROOK Highlands. The settlement is a major manufacturer of fine limestone that is used in architectural and artistic endeavours across Zhariah (Pop. c. 7,200).

EZIRAT: Sec. Small fortified settlement in the south east of the tribe of ATEVEGOS in the c west of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 4,500).

EZKABET II: (B. 3943 RM) Pol. Present EMPRESS in THUMAL.

EZONUH: Set. Major fortified coastal city in the c of GYZHA, overlooking the SOUND OF SAPAH. It is known for its powerful navy and large harbour. The city is relatively recent, and appeared as a result of older harbours becoming landlocked due to the withdrawal of ELYDEN'S seas. Today it is known for its shipyards (Pop. c. 95,000).

EZREN'S AEZOAN: see ATRAMENTAL FLORET.

EZRET: Set. Settlement in the east of SEDISIA (Pop. c. 8,000).

EZROKAHAELL: Rel. Dei. Idolatrous deity worshipped in parts of northern SAMMAEA. It takes the form of a 9-ft. tall statue of otherworldly detail that is crafted from a singular gigantic SOULSTONE of ancient manufacture. Its origins are unknown but likely date back to a forsaken mortal civilisation of the early THIRD AGE. It was rediscovered in the IALO ABGAN c. 2400 RM and taken to the city of TAL ZHAAN^(2.), where it rapidly became the centre of a fanatical cult of worship. The cult, now known as the CHURCH OF EZROKAHAELL spread rapidly across the north of Sammaea, taking root in the TEMPLAR STATES, and KHULL, and other scattered cities. Some scholars believe that the idol shares roots with the craven idols of KARGAMA, though lack of access to the idol prevents a more detailed examination.

EZROKAHAELL, CHURCH OF: Rel. Church prevalent along the EHRENISIAN COAST in the north west of SAMMAEA, centred in the city of TAL ZHAAN⁽²⁾, though it is also popular in parts of the TEMPLAR STATES.

It emerged in c. 3000 RM after the Sorcerer-lord TAL besieged the city of DERAUC, taking the idol as his prize to his fortress in Tal Zhaan. From there he propagated its spread to surrounding lands to add prestige to his name

The religion centres on the worship of an ancient enigmatic $\underline{\text{SOULSTONE}}$ statue that has $\underline{\text{MAGICKAL}}$ properties.

EZUGHA: Set. Small fortified city in the far west of BANT, in the east of SAMMAEA. It is a centre of raw umbra extraction in the region (Pop. c. 18,000).

FAALAR: Set. Remnant city in the north west of LAASKHA, in the IMMERUTH basin. It was once a coastal city, though the retreat of the STRAIT OF SKAROS left the Bay of Immeruth greatly diminished, and, by c. 3600 RM, a salty lake, that continues to dwindle to this day. Without its coastal links, the city suffered greatly and was abandoned within 2-decades, leaving it an empty place that in 3851 RM was resettled by LOUDHAN nomads, whose descendants remain there to this day, living off of the ruins and salt pans.

FABBARA: Ind. Set. City in north east of KARAKHAS. It is a burgeoning industrial centre and also forms part of the RED ROUTE, with many metal items produced here finding their way for sale on the trade-route (Pop. c. 37,000).

FABLISM: Soc. Oral storytelling tradition common in many parts of ELYDEN, particularly in the ARID TRIPTYCH, and THE SURRACH. The most popular fabulists enjoy great political influence in urban centres, and are often clan leaders in smaller settlements where their vast oral knowledge of local histories, traditions and fables make them nearmystical figures. The most famous fabulist is, ironically the VÂRRAN shell Cassia, also known as the HOLLOW ONE.

FABENTU: Set. Settlement in the c of RHEA. It is a centre of logging (Pop. c. 5.500).

FABRIA: Set. Settlement in the south west of SERROK, along the course of the river BEREKODRA (Pop. c. 3,000).

FAÇAL EGLEA: Rvr. River in the north of the HENDECARCHY of CYRENIA, in the north west of MALAN. It flows north and east for 600-miles from sources in the eastern DIVIDE and the DRAHOMIRA Mountains before meeting the BAY OF ENIGOST (1.), where a large fertile delta has formed.

FACE OF OUR FATHERS, the: Rui. Half-buried ancient granite monolithic head in the c of TEMUJA, possibly belonging to a now-destroyed colossus. Though weathered, the face's features are clearly not human, possibly a SEITHIN. The head is on its side, acting as an artificial cliff some 10-ft. tall behind which is gently sloping plain.

Little is known of the origins of its current name, though it is unlikely to have any bearing on the statues' original purpose or design.

FACES OF THE ANCIENTS, the: Int. His. Mys. Str. Hewn stone faces found across the south east of SAMMAEA in what are now the states of HANNAH, QARALAM, <a href="SHEZALIAH, ZATAUR, and <a href="ZHARIAH, being most common in Hannah. They are believed to be truly ancient, possibly dating to the SECOND AGE, and are thought to be amongst the first works of the earliest mortal people of ELYDEN.

It is unknown how many individual faces exist today, though hundreds of examples have been documented, in varying states of decay. A rare few are in pristine condition belying their tens of thousands of years of age, while most others are badly weathered if not completely destroyed. Despite all the extant examples that have been identified, it is thought that many thousands more once existed, scattered around the eastern reaches of the SEA OF ETAGIRIA and the SEA OF ENTARI. Together, these faces, which traditionally stood around 6 feet tall, were at the centre of an early mortal culture of civilisation.

The faces themselves are stylistically similar, though there are enough differences that are not solely attributable to differences in skill and artistic choice to make it likely that the faces represented different figures, possibly making them idols or facsimiles of a thriving pantheon of deities or rulers.

Their age and widespread appearance have made them a ubiquitous part of life in the lands in which they are found and many later cultures, including some extant ones, continued to place importance in the eerie features, though most people simply recognise them as a part of history and think little else of them, though a few notable individuals have been fascinated by them throughout the course of the Fifth Age, enough to write or make art about them.

Few if any ruins or other traces of mortal culture have been found close to the sites of the faces, so it is possible that they were hewn in inaccessible or otherwise beautiful distant lands, far from the cultural centres. As such, they have been found in mountain peaks, cliffsides, half buried in forests, amongst other places.

FACHORTEO: Set. Coastal settlement in the north east of mainland SKAROS, overlooking the SEA OF APHOTIS. It is an industrial centre, with many small manufactories outside the city proper, making bespoke objects and parts used throughout the KORACHANI EMPIRE (Pop. c. 6.900).

FACTOTUM: 1. Pol. Rnk. Administrative rank in both the HIGH and LOW-EMPIRES that encompasses various responsibilities, often of great importance and influence.

2. Pol. Rnk. The rulers of the seven INDUSTRIES (territories) of RAONGEN (2.), and equivalent to kings, subservient only to the EMPEROR-FACTOTUM, serving as the highest noble rank in the empire. By law, they are considered equals, though in practice this is rarely the case, with each benign given certain roles and duties by the respective Emperor-Factotum, and there exists a great deal of political wrangling between the seven territories, which are known as Industries. The Factotums are also considered to be heads of industry, controlling the largest manufactories and industrial cities and regions in their own territories, and are responsible for ensuring that seasonal tithes reach GAVADA intact and in a timely fashion.

FACYDA: Set. Coastal city in the north of SABIASA (Pop. c. 38,000).

FADALK: Set. Coastal city in the west of TARTAK. Its primary industry is fishing (Pop. c. 19,000).

FADDOS: Geo. Leg. Strangely-shaped mountain in the north east of AZAZEM, serving as a border with the OLD FOREST. It is the centre of an Azazemi legend that depicts it as a place of primordial safety, possibly after the ancient catacomb and hewn caverns that dot its southern foothills. MORTALS have fled to these catacombs in various times over the millennia, seeking refuge, from war, natural calamities and other events. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

FADED STATES, the: see FADED STATES OF DAARKEN, THE.

FADED STATES OF DAARKEN, the: Pol. Geo. Collective term for the nations of ARKOS^(1.), BA'AKH, SALOROC, SUMA'YA and IO. The name refers to the general decline of the individual nations within the region, as well as the waning industries and growing wastelands that proliferate in their territories, as well as pollution caused by the UMBRA industry.

FADING, the: His. Generic name given to the span of time that exists outside of history along the periphery of two ages. Such periods are generally perceived to follow the diminishing of an age and preface the rise of a new age and are, historically, noted as times where the remnants of the mortal races are largely sedentary, recovering from whatever woes caused the end of the previous age, before the slow march of discovery (or, more likely, re-discovery) can resume.

The time of Fading following the FOURTH AGE was dominated by the worldwide war known now as the WAR OF SCOURGING, where the agents and allies of the DEMIURGE RACHANAEL opposed the rest of the free MORTAL races.

FADRAD: Lak. Lake in the south of TARTAK, along the course of the river LLIRA.

FAE: also 'Fey'. Creatures often found in the folklore of various LLACHATULI cultures, including those of ALMAGEST and KORACHAN and its dependencies. In most cases they are diminutive and malicious SPIRITS (3) of the natural world that torment MORTALS that venture too close to natural areas.

Though some fae have been studied and catalogued as being real beings (such as the FAEREX), most accounts are fancified or elaborated, making categorisation difficult. Their flitting and fidgeting nature also makes them incredibly difficult to study.

FAE EYES: Leg. A common legend within KORACHANI territories, regarding FAE creatures that dwell in woodlands. They are invisible to most mortals, though at times their eyes may become visible as pinpricks of light, staring in the darkness beneath the canopy. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

FAEACHAN: Ser. Prison colony on the island of FAEASAAR on the KORACHANI colony of UKOBACHAN off the eastern coast of SAMMAEA (Pop. c. 13,000).

FAEAMAR: Geo. Rugged valley region in the south of SHOTHA.

FAEAMUN: 1. His. Ntn. Historically, a small independent DEMESNE in the c of LLACHATUL, situated between THE OLD FOREST, SHOTHA and STOLAS. Its roots were believed to lie in the death of the nation of ASIBAIA, much the same as Shotha. In c. 3810 RM the nation of Shotha expanded east, conquering the Faeamun and its tributaries, eventually moving its own capital, and the base of the Desolati, there years later.

2. Pol. Set. Capital city of SHOTHA (Pop. c. 60,000).

FAEASAAR: Geo. Island in the KORACHANI colony of UKOBACHAN, off the eastern coast of SAMMAEA. It is home to a prison colony, where felons are 'rehabilitated' before being put to work on the umbral rigs farther east in the colony.

FAEDRA: Set. Small city in the east of PELASGOS, along the course of the river PHEMOS. It forms a part of the RED ROUTE, and has many hostels and inns where travellers can rest (Pop. c.17,000).

FAEGRIN: His. Pol. Mil. Per. (B. 2528 – D. 2590 RM) historical tyrannical king of MOTTANIA^(2.) until his defeat defending in the SIEGE OF CAER SIDI in 2588 RM, which ended with his capture and imprisonment and the marriage of his wife ARDFAEN to the warlord TORRVAN, who would later become king of a united LOEGRESS^(2.).

He was crowned king in 2552 RM following his father's death, and was known as a tyrannical ruler and many of his subjects defected to GLYNNED^(2.) during the conquest of Torrvan, helping him secure the territories. He killed himself whilst imprisoned in CAER SIDI^(2.) two years after his capture.

FAELIKKA: Geo. Lowland coastal region in the south of TAMAR. Its settlements and arable land were devastated by the CATACLYSM of 101 RM, leaving much of the region deserted, though it was resettled over the subsequent centuries.

FAEREX: Fau. In legends of THE OLD FOREST and other lands, where it often takes different names, the faerex are a race of FAE creatures descended from a young DERUWEID maiden who, lost and near-death in a forest came across the transformed DEMIURGE ACHAIAH while starving and moments from death. She prayed to the Tree-like Achaiah and from a branch a stream of golden sap did flow, which she drank. It saved her life, but granted her visions of pain; the memories of Achaiah's pursuit by her brother ASHTERATH. Her descendants would forevermore carry that pain, and their body would be different to that of the deruweids; far smaller, more delicate, with gossamer wings.

That original faerex maiden's progeny became truly ephemeral beings, brightest in spring-time and retreating during the winter; small, fickle, cruel, they seek the shadows and flit in scree and underbrush, preying on small creatures like insects and rodents. Larger creatures they torment for no reason other than the joy it elicits in their miniscule hearts.

In urban areas they tend to gravitate towards what nature they can find – cisterns, overgrown ruins, dead trees and so-on. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

FAEROAD, the: Int. Leg. Geo. Region in the north of CENTRAL LLACHATUL that carries with it many legends and stories that together have given it the name Faeroad, after the unexplained phenomena and FAE beings that many people claim dwell there.

Despite its name, the Faeroad is not a single highway or passage, but rather a region that crosses from the east of ALMAGEST into the north east of SKAROS, that crosses into the west of BASSORAH^(2.) that share many similar aspects of culture and folklore despite their disparate histories. The Faeroad region is known for its many OCCULTISTS, CUNNINGMEN and women, and the eerie folktales and legends that together have made people the region distrustful of travelling at night. Similarly, the many tales and legends of fae beings haunting the forests have made people distrustful of what woodlands remain.

FAERTH: 1. His. Ohj. The sword of the mid-FIFTH AGE champion IATH, which was said to have been crafted by an unnamed SCION-BORN descendent of the DEMIURGE ARIMASPI sometime in the THIRD AGE. The sword was said to have been imbued with the very lifeblood of its creator, making it a powerful artefact with powers that were once famed but which have since been forgotten.

It is famed for having been planted into the ground in its scabbard following a battle, from which sprouted a great tree that survives to this day in AKACHA in the form of the Sword-tree Faerth^(2.).

2. also 'the Sword-tree'. Int. Myt. Flo. Fabled tree in the myths of ancient AKACHA that grew from the scabbard of the champion IATH'S sword that had been planted into the ground during a great battle and later forgotten. The tree not only survives to this day but has grown into a mighty willow quite unlike any other. Some in Akacha have come to revere the tree and the sword that remains embedded in its core, its MAGICKAL heritage possibly sustaining it.

FAETUNNA: Set. Small city in the south east of NARTHEL, forming part of the RED ROUTE, linking Narthel with its parent, VENTHIR (Pop. c. 13.000).

FAHR'S PLAGUE: Med. Plague common in the east of SAMMAEA, with many outbreaks over the years, one of the most well-known as in 2138 RM, affecting the nations of ABACARDAT, HADDURATH and various lands in the far east of KHARKHARADONTIS.

FAIIA: Geo. Cave in the far north of the tribe of SATAR in the north of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER that leads into the PRISON CARCERI.

FAISA: Lake in the south east of PERGOST, in the region of MENNOM.
FAITH, THE: Rel. religion common in the city of APINAR in the SIX CITIES region in THE SURRACH. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

FAKIIM: 1. Sea. Bay in the west of KHAMID.

2. Set. Coastal settlement in the west of KHAMID (Pop. c. 6,000).

FALA: Pol. Duchy of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of ALAMUT.

FALACH: Mil. Str. Fortress in the south of LYRIDIA DHAI. It was once an island fort, though following the silting up of the STRAIT OF NÁRTHEL it became part of the mainland. Though its original function of guarding the entrance in the bay of COTHON, it remains in use to this day.

FALAD: Geo. Rel. A LODELITH temple in the east of TETHYSIA. The lodelith takes the form of a hewn cuboid, with a large window hollowed out of opposing sides, in which hangs a gigantic bronze BELL. Its walls are carved in runes and icons believed to be religious symbols taken from the region's pantheon.

FALAESA: Geo. Island off the southern coast of IACIO. A KORACHANI monastery and mission was founded there in 1524 RM, though was abandoned within a century. The ruin remains to this day, though it is now overgrown and shunned by the islands' few inhabitants.

FALASHA: Ast. Third and largest moon of the PLANET CYKRANOSH^(1.). Most mythologies across ELYDEN have it as a wandering spirit that fell in love with Cykranosh and became enslaved to her. It is visible through most common telescopes and was the first satellite other than SIELLA and ARAKHAMÉ that was observed by mortals, with FIFTH AGE records dating back to c 800 RM. See Vol II: Planets and Satellites.

FALAJA: Set. Fishing settlement in coastal c SABIA, overlooking the SEA OF BIELOST (Pop. c. 6,400).

FALAKK: Set. Small city in the c west of SERROK. It is located in the region of KRALVISSRA, and is known for its expansive coal-mines (Pop. c. 13,000).

FALANEM: Rvr. River in the c of AZAZEM, flowing south east for 100-miles from the AAORA Mountains into the SEA OF BATHOS⁽¹⁾. Its waters are polluted by industries upstream, though refineries in the city of FALKAN struggle to make it drinkable.

FALAYON: Set. Settlement in the west of RHEA, to the east of the DORLEIDON Mountains. Its main industry is iron-mining (Pop. c. 12.000).

FALCHAN: Set. Settlement in the c north west of KORACHAN, along the path of the SHADOW MARCH (Pop. c. 5,000).

FALIA: Set. Major city and surrounding conurbation in the c north of SARAGOS. It appeared in c. 2700 RM following the discovery of gold in the region and rapidly grew from there. The city was home of the corrupted form of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE that appeared there in c. 2400 RM.

The city grew in power following the arrival of KORACHANI diplomats there in 3301 RM and their establishing of a consulate in the capital city of SARAGOS in 3303 RM, which had links with the imperial church. By c. 3350 RM the imperial consulate was covertly manipulating the city's government, sending technarcane secrets back to Korachan. Imperial attempts to sunder the city from Saragos ended in a civil conflict in 3392 RM, which caused the abolishment of the SARAGOSI CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, though its edifices remained active and are a place for contemplation amongst the people of Falia (Pop. c. 1,520,000).

FALISSIA: 1. Geo. For. Region of shrubland & sparse trees in north of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of EDICULE^(1.), known for its rough, fertile land.

2. Pol. Duchy in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of EDICULE(1.).

3. Set. City in the north of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of EDICULE^(1.), that has in recent centuries become a haven to the slave-traders that characterise the region. It is a major city along the western path of GREAT ROAD, trading slaves to merchants in its vast slave market (Pop. c. 9,500).

FALK: Cur. Korachani denomination, more commonly known as a fly. See Vol II: Currency and Coinage in Elyden.

FALKAN: 1. Sea. Bay in the south east of AZAZEM, forming the northern-most part of the larger BAY OF BATHOS^(1.).

2. Set. Coastal city in the south east of AZAZEM that controls the north western-most part of the BAY OF BATHOS⁽¹⁾, known as the Bay of Falkan⁽¹⁾, where its impressive harbours see to the all manner of ships, from fishing vessels to naval juggernauts.

It emerged as a major city following the DORUK CALAMITY that in 3088 RM devastated the DORUK (1.) basin, displacing thousands of people following devastating floods caused by TEMPESTARII meddling. Until then Falkan was a relatively recent settlement of fishermen and reed gatherers, but its population swelled in the years following the disaster, causing it to grow rapidly, becoming a major harbour at the mouth of the river FALANEM. It has been home to the MINASTERIA ⁽²⁾ of ANALOGONIN since 3179 RM (Pop. c. 250,000).

FALLACHAN: Set. Small coastal city in the KORACHANI colony of CRASSULA, in the far north east of MENISCEA. It is a base for slaving vessels that ply the waters of northern Meniscea in search of slaves to work in the open- cast gold mines in the colony (Pop. c. 16,800).

FALLAN: Geo. Highlands in the east of HARÉSHK, in the CITY-KINGDOM of UCHRON, forming the southern-most part of the GESHAL massif. It is known for its silver deposits and panning is relatively common around rivers and alluvial deposits there.

FALLAR: Set. Settlement in the north of TAHALL (Pop. c. 10,000).

FALLAROUR: also 'the Island Kingdom'. Dem. 'Fallarour'. Ntn. Kingdom largely situated on the SHIELD ISLES in the south west of SAMMAEA, overlooking the BATHASHAL OCEAN. The region occupied by the islands is of a hot temperate climate, with little rain and moderate changes in seasons. The weather is characterised by stronger westerly winds that are mostly felt on the western side of the islands, with the eastern side of the islands experiencing less wind.

The kingdom emerged from the fracturing of the CORAL KINGDOM in 3889 RM with the sudden death of king TARUSTAN III, who died without legitimate heir. Baron HAALDOS, one of 118 barons of the Kingdom, quietly staked his claim over the Shield Isles as the other barons were distracted quarrelling amongst themselves over the matter of succession. He united the collection of islands, which in 3889 RM were formally christened the ISLAND KINGDOM of Fallarour.

Fallarour is considered to be technologically-backwards by those from the INNER SEA REGION, and though it is an industrialised state, it has few notable manufactories or industrial production. Use of TECHNARCANA is limited (largely due to its relative vicinity to the NULLAMBIT and the ARCANE TEMPERS there exacerbating the effect) and it does not have a strong SHAPING tradition as a result. Fallarour does however have a small but thriving ONEIRIC tradition, which emerged from the discovery of the so-called MANNALAN STELLAE, which are noted Oneiric FOCI (2.), which had a hand in propagating the tradition to flourish there.

Relations between Fallarour and the CORAL BARONIES (As the remnants of the Coral Kingdom became known) remain tense at best, due to them each laying claim the archipelago known as the Shibbotha Isles, leading to increased naval activity in the region, with many thinking that they will eventually end up in open warfare.

Its people are expert mariners and fishermen, and most coastal settlements survive on a seafood diet caught by distinctive TWIN-HULLED DHOWS. Indeed, many of them are known for the pink or orange tint to their skins, a trait acquired from eating soft-shelled shrimps. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

FALLASCHIA: Rel. Arc. Monument in the north west of RHAMIA, where the KORACHANI missionary, and later patron saint of Rhamia, was stoned to death in c 200 RM, before Korachan colonised the region.

FALLDRG: His. Late FOURTH AGE OGHUR nation that is said to have been founded by two brothers, DUGRN and MALGRA, whose descendants divided the land in two after their death.

It is the only known historic example of an oghur nation, and little is known of its origins, though it is known to have crumbled into many warring states towards the end of the Fourth Age, eventually leading to a loose coalition of oghur tribes that spent the FADING preying on the disparate MORTAL people who were struggling to survive. The tribes eventually coalesced in the first millennium of the FIFTH AGE, eventually becoming the SOVEREIGNTY OF CYHLAGHARR in 932 RM after centuries of tumultuous internecine conflicts. See Vol III: Extinct States.

FALLDRGAN: His. Lan. Now-extinct late FOURTH AGE SAMMAEAN language, spoken in the OGHUR nation of FALLDRG. Present-day OHRUSH emerged from this tongue between 500 – 900 RM. See Vol II: Languages.

FALLEN CITY OF QUDDISH: Rui. Once a major metropolis in the east of SAMMAEA, in what are today the JAHADAT STATES, the city was toppled by the UPHEAVAL OF LETHEA in 1303 RM and later abandoned. Its ruins are now overgrown, and barely recognisable, but rumours persist of great wealth buried in the area.

FALLIAGH: For. Major coastal forest in the far north of the nation of DURCHAA^(1.), overlooking the estuary of the river VARAGOD. FALLS OF HARITH, the: Rvr. Large waterfall in TETHYSIA, just over 300-miles from the AZHDAN coast. The spectacular waterfall spills the waters of the river ADHUMLA from the HARITH basin east into the Tethysian lowlands.

FALLS OF KAAR: Rvr. Waterfall in the west of LAASKHA, at the confluence of the river SAMAPAR and KAARAPARR

FALLS OF RUOTT: Rvr. Geo. Major cascade waterfall in the far east of XYRPHAAT⁽³⁾, covering many square miles. It is the terminus of the great VARAYA river and was revealed between c. 3650 – 3700 RM with the lowering of the SEA OF ERTHYDEA, exposing an intricate series of steps that until then had been submerged. This lengthened the flow of the river and resulted in its current 'delta', if such it can be called, taking the form of a series of massive stepped cascade waterfalls.

This has effectively cut off all cities upstream along the river from the coast, negatively impacting commerce and travel. Attempts at constructing a series of locks and canals that link the river to the coast commenced within the last decades, though administerial conflicts and the sheer scale of the project have seen it stall.

FALO: Set. Small coastal city on the island of LATRAS, in the MAIDEN ISLES, off the south eastern coast of MENISCEA. It is one of the largest permanent settlements on the isles, and its main industry is the manufacture of camphor from SEA CAMPHOR trees (Pop. c. 12,800).

FALSELIGHT: also 'BOTTLED LIGHT'. Tec. Name given to light generated from ELECTRICITY, as distributed by vacuum bulbs, commonly powered by DISCHARGERS.

FALUA: Set. City in MHAROKK that in 3727 RM suffered a population explosion, resulting in thousands of people being left homeless. Over the ensuing years people migrated to the ruined necropolis that lay sprawling on the horseshoe-shaped hill surrounding the city, which has since become part of the city; the old necropolis now built over and around, with some of the ancient mausoleums and sepulchres becoming apartment blocks and storage yards.

The city and its satellites are known for their MONITOR-breeding, and monitors bred there are considered to be the best-trained in all of SAMMAEA and are sold to merchants travelling to the city via the SALT ROAD (Pop. c. 630,000).

FALUM: Rui. Ruins of an ancient Neolithic temple in the north of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of ALAMUT.

FALWYN: Set. Small fortified city in the south of KOMMEA (Pop. c. 15,000).

FALX: 1. Rvr. River in the west of ARKOS^(1.) that flows east for 175-miles from lake C'DATA into the wetlands of SZAMAR, ultimately leading to the SEA OF ERIA. The river serves as a link to many landlocked nations to the Inner Sea, and despite it coursing entirely through Arkos, it is considered as free water, allowing vessels to travel across it freely.

2. Fau. Messenger-raptors common in ARKOS^(1.) and the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. With a wingspan of around 6-feet, they are easily trained and intelligent creatures, commonly used in warfare and civil conflicts as messengers, which are able to navigate the harsh terrain of their native lands quickly where even a single human messenger would take far longer. See Vol II: See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

FAMIAISA: Set. Small coastal city in the c east of SABAISA, overlooking the BAY OF BERITH. It is one of few Sabaisan cities with a thriving ARK-BUILDING culture (Pop. c. 16,000).

FAMILIAR: 1. Sup. Soc. Occult companions of SHAPERS and mystics, of a myriad description and forms. Familiars seem to transcend cultures and can be found across various civilisations in ELYDEN, fulfilling similar roles. This includes the KORACHANI EMPIRE, where they often take the form of HAEMONCULI or other VAT-BORN creatures. Familiars often share an empathic link with their 'masters' and are more an extension of their mind and body (spirit and vessel) than a merely a mortal companion.

2. Sup. Fau. Bespoke creatures kept as pets by the nobility of PARTHIS. They are engineered and vet-grown and no two are identical, with their owners commissioning specific traits and appearances.

FAMMAN: Rvr. River in the north east of the territories of ETHISTONITH in RHINOCOLOURA, flowing west for 310-miles from sources in the DOTHEGAR Mountains before meeting its parent, the river DAWWAN.

FAMMIN: Rvr. For. Region of mangroves and wetlands that form a contested border between the east of NOAVATUR and the south west of PNESSA. Until c. 3400 RM the entire region was submerged, though lowering sea levels revealed it and it eventually cut off the SEA OF SUPPA from the SEA OF STYGA, leading to the former diminishing greatly, until it became the snaking Gulf of Sauriar.

FAMMORDRAN: Set. Major city in the c of CYHLAGHARR (Pop. c. 45,000).

FAMNACH: Rui. GLYNNISH ruins in the north of LOEGRESS^(1.). It was once coastal, and was abandoned in c. 3300 after waning sea levels left it landlocked. Little remains of it today.

FANA: Set. Settlement in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of CARIA⁽⁴⁾, situated along the banks of the river FANAL (Pop. c. 7,200).

FANA KHAR'ILLAE: His. Rel. Rui. Ancient temple to KHAR'ILLAE 60-miles south of the KARAKHASID border, in the north of the UMBRA SOKHAR. The temple is expansive, covering about a square mile, and is hewn from the living rock of the region. It was almost completely buried when discovered by IMPERIAL explorers in c. 900 RM and was partially excavated over the next centuries, with its treasures and archaeological finds taken to Korachan, where many are still displayed with the IMPERIAL MUSEUM OF ARCHAEOLOGY, in KHADON. Much of the complex remains unexplored to this day.

FANAGORA: Lak. Lake in the west of KAZZAR^(2.) along the course of the river VETAGAME.

FANAIA: See City in the east of AETHIOS, along the course of the river NARRATI. It's a bustling metropolis, small for its population, and known for its glassworks, made with fine sands sourced in the river Narrati (Pop. c. 38,000).

FANAL: Rvr. River in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of CARIA⁽⁴⁾. The river flows north west for around 110-miles, from its source in the northern face of mount Caria, to its mouth in the SEA OF DERAEA.

FANAS: Set. Settlement in the west of the tribe of ALLAKAT, in the c of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 8,000).

FANATIC-CONSCRIPTS: Mil. Rnk. In the military structure of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, an irregular corps of conscripts drawn from the most fervent of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE's worshippers, many of which are self-flagellators. These fanatical men and women need little excuse to fight for their god, though the offer of past sins pardoned, no matter their gravity, is enough to lure many people from their prayers onto the field of battle where martyrdom is often the only reward that awaits them

FAND: Set. Settlement in the far south east of TISARA, in the southern foothills of the Rotting Mountains of VOULLOR. It is built on an ancient ruin that is equated to a mythic citadel of early FIFTH AGE myths, which was said to be of such beaty as to have been attributed to ancient deities (Pop. c. 4,000).

FANDR: Geo. Expansive rocky region in the west of PERGOST, which serves as a border with the east of DURCHAA^(I.) and the north of SABIA. The region is peppered with necropolises in which are buried bodies that have been naturally mummified over time.

FANDRA: 1. Lak. One of seven major lakes in KOMMEA, collectively known as the SEVEN MAIDENS^(1.), situated in the north west of the kingdom, close to the shore and the SEA OF AKRY.

2. Dei. Rel. Myt. One of the SEVEN MAIDENS^(2.) of KOMMEAN myths. She is most commonly associated with winter, love, and the unpredictability of nature, and in particular the sea. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

FANE OF KONKATERAH: Rui. Str. Ancient temple in the east of TATAR, in the north of SAMMAEA. It is thought to date to a FOURTH AGE SERAPIS culture. Little remains now of its hieroglyph-covered walls, most of which are now crumbled, or covered in underbrush.

The name of the temple is unattributed and has been used since the days of the SETTARS, though it appears in no other histories of the region in either the Fourth of FIFTH AGES. The mystery of its name has permeated local culture, and the entire area surrounding the ruin is avoided though it has become a tourist attraction to the nobility and JURATS of Tatar.

FANE OF NIRIAR: Rui. Ruined temple on the island of THORTIS in the far north of VALBAR⁽²⁾. Its design is monolithic and of large scale, and though little is known of it, may believe it dates back to the FOURTH AGE, but little is known of it.

FANE OF SHERTAL: Rel. Str. Temple dedicated to the deity SHERTAL in the south east of the BARRIER LANDS. Despite being a temple, it is not intended to receive worshippers and exists to appease the underworld deity. The temple was built over a vertical cave in a symbolic gesture.

FANES: 1. His. Nm. Last known KERATIN civilisation, in the c north of SAMMAEA, in what is now the south of KARAKHAS and the west of the UMBRA SOKHAR. It was largely destroyed following events towards the end of the WAR OF SCOURGING in the FOURTH AGE, in c. -1700 RM, though evidence suggests that it struggled on until c. -1300 RM, before disappearing into the increasing corruption of the TESCORA region, in which many of its ruins now lie.

Fanes was a huge metropolis-state, a singular city exerting its influence for hundreds of miles around. All settlements within its thrall were little more than slave-states and temple-cities, that existed only to serve the central-city, which was a place of decadence, home to aristocracy, many of whom claimed descent from the SCION IKHRA. The city-state rose in c. -2000 RM, following the dissolution of a larger and more united Keratin state, of which very little is known. The region of influence of Fanes extended to the north east of present-day Karakhas; dominating the lands south east of the KATHAN Mountain, south and east of the HAIMOTH and KELACHOT, and north of hills north of the CATON hills. Most of its settlements have since been reclaimed by the wastes of the area, corrupted by the ATRAMENTA, or built over by Karakhas, though the main city was so expansive that large portions of its crumbling ruins remain inhabited today by a small group of keratin that refuse to bow to the rule of Karakhas.

2. Set. Settlement to the south of KARAKHAS and the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region of TESCORA, inhabited by KERATIN who refuse to acknowledge the rule of Karakhas. The keratin of Fanes are descendants of a FOURTH AGE empire, that was known for aristocracy that claimed to be descended from IKHRA, a SCION of the DEMIURGE KHARANI (Pop. c. 10,000).

FANI: Plr. 'Fanin'. Sup. Rnk. A caste of SHAPERS in ancient VENTHIR, known for their shapeshifting properties and mastery over the deserts. Though spoken of commonly in lore and legends, little is known of the Fani in a historical context. It is likely that they are mythological beings, or corruptions of other creatures, such as a form of OTHERWORLDER or HALFBLOOD now forgotten of. The ANALOGONIN of the KORACHANI EMPIRE are often compared with them.

FANIA: Rui. Ruin in the west of VENTHIR. Was once a thriving settlement though is now deserted. It is named after the FANI of Venthiri legend, though none know why.

FANIN BHEN: Set. City in the c-south east of CHEIRA (Pop. c. 40,3000).

FANNAS: 1. Pol. Duchy in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of NICAEA, famed for its OLIVES and farmlands.

2. Set. Settlement dominated by a citadel and its vineyards (1,200).

FANNAU: Set. Small city in the region of KURDA in the c east of THE SURRACH (Pop. c. 16,000).

FANNORS: Set. City in the south of AETHIOS. It is known for its glass production (Pop. c. 29,000).

FANTEAPH: Set. Settlement in the west of the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT, west of the LOCKHABRA Mountains (Pop. c. 8,500).

FANU: Rui. Abandoned castle in the north of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of ALAMUT, in the wetlands of ACHUA.

FANUM: Mil. Str. Fortress erected in c. 825 RM in the north of HARÉ SHKA, by its first king and ruler, HAREKH. The fort is known to have been built over an ancient neolithic stone circle, which was thought to have been retained in an inner courtyard, though the fortress' destruction centuries later left the entire region devastated. Little remains of the fortress today, though some scattered blocks can be found to the west of lake MASTI, in the east of present-day AHRISHEN.

FAR DOLMES: Int. Set. City and twin to DOLMES, which is located in the north west of SAMMAEA. The location of Far Dolmes is less easily stated, as the two are linked through a strange natural phenomenon known as a lacuna, which connects the two otherwise distant places.

Many maintain that Far Dolmes exists on a plane separate from ELYDEN, perhaps even another PLANET (sometimes postulated to be LIVIAD), as evidenced by the different positions of the stars in the sky above. The region is exploited for its plentiful natural resources, which are transported across the lacuna back to Dolmes (Pop. c. 32,000).

FAR HEMISHPERE: also 'the Eastern Hemisphere' and 'FIRMAMENTAL HEMISPHERE'. Geo. Common term used to denote the side of ELYDEN that is centred around the KORACHANI antipode. Generally, it encompasses the majority of the continents of MENISCEA and BROR(1.).

Commonly it is further divided into two – the northern Far Hemisphere and the southern Far Hemisphere, dominated by the aforementioned continents, respectively.

Conversely, the remainder of Elyden, known as the NEAR HEMISPHERE constitutes the region around the Inner Sea and its environs.

FAR WORLD, the: Soc. Lan. Common term within the island-continent of BROR(1.) made in reference to the rest of Elyden, including LLACHATUL, SAMMAEA and MENISCEA, though usually intended for the NEAR HEMISPHERE.

FARA: Sett Settlement on the banks of the river PALA the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of PALUS⁽¹⁾, along the border with ALAMUT. It is situated along the route of the GREAT ROAD, and offers lodging to travellers (Pop. c. 4,400).

FARAGOR: Set. Settlement in the c south of KOLCHIS (Pop. c. 7,000).

FARAK: Set. Small fortified city in the region of PAAN in the c south of THE SURRACH. The city is located along the IVORY ROAD and is known for its caravanserais and underground trade-halls. (Pop. c. 16,000).

FARAMON'S NODE: see ONEIRAL GLAND.

FARAS: Lak. Lake in the c west of PORPHYR, forming part of the course of the river LATUSS.

FARASID: Pol. Mar. His. In the history of the ARID TRIPTYCH, a noble caste roughly equivalent to the knights of the west. They enjoyed their peak between 1500 – 2300 RM and waned after that time, largely replaced by knightly orders of the KORACHANI EMPIRE. An extant example of Farasids can be found in the LEGION OF THE SPHINX.

FARASKER APHEMA: (B. 3933 RM) Pol. Present High Templar Knight of the coalition of the TEMPLAR STATES and ruler of the city of OBYRYTH. He is an acolyte of the SOULSEERS and is claimed to use supranatural means to retain a young appearance.

FARAVAR: Set. City in the south of SARASTRO, noted for its tumultuous history and its many periods of independence as a city-state or small nation, most notable of which was as the head of the so-called 'SUNDERED STATES OF FARAVAR', which lasted from -138 to -37 RM.

Faravar's roots date back to the ancestral nation that predates Sarastro – SAOSTANA. The city began as a fortress in -796 RM overlooking the badlands of KRAONA to the north, the western-most expanses of the MOLACHARI DESERT in the east, and the SOLACHAN desert in the south. Initially built to keep Saostanan lands to the north safe from barbarian and nomadic incursion, the fortress of Faravar became a powerful presence in the region, its armies subjugating the nomadic tribes, taking many of them as slaves in military exercises.

It was during such exercises that the then ARGDUN of Faravar discovered rare LODESTONE deposits around 100-miles south of the fortress in c. 600 RM. Little was known of the FIRMAMENTAL properties of such stones and the world was as yet in its infancy, its people still remerging from a the FADING of the FOURTH AGE dark slumber, more concerned with survival than research. The Argdun noted the region to be further explored in the future, and returned to the Fortress.

Faravar was largely left to its own devices as the SAOSTANAN DYNASTIES concentrated in uniting the manifold city-states around the DELOMIG and keeping those already conquered under control. Faravar slowly grew, its people subsisting off the nomads, trading goods for services and occasionally emerging from the fortress in slave-raids. By c. -400 RM the fortress had grown into a sizeable city-state, self-sufficient with little contact with the north, the post of Argdun corrupted into a hereditary divine-right similar to a monarchy.

In -394 RM the Argdun Oracai stumbled across annals of her forebears and learnt of the lodestones discovered south of the Solachan, in what is now ELOTRAUSH. She travelled south with her retinue, following the directions on the crude map she had found, and found them. Mesmerised by their properties she explored the region, finding the ruins of a far older settlement and citadel nestled in the foothills of the southern KHO HAGAR mountain. There was little of worth in the brittle sun-bleached stones of that ancient place save for the sad beauty of its fall, though Oracai remained there for some time, venturing deeper into the ruins of that place, discovering the collapsed lodestone mines that had sustained the place.

When she emerged from the mines, she was a changed person, her eyes ablaze with pearlescent heat, her skin bronzed and radiating the heat of the sun. She had become one with the Firmament and found that she could manipulate the lodestones with her thoughts. She had the cavern sealed until mining operations could be started again, and returned north.

The region was christened Oracasho and mining began there in earnest by -392 RM, with lodestones transported north to Faravar where they were scrutinised by the regions' foremost scholars. At their head was Oracai herself, whose newfound gift allowed her to see into the Firmament. In the north, the assassination of the Dynast Habakukh in - 382 RM left Saostana lawless and fragmented, its cities breaking away into several quarrelling city-states. The rise of Reneb the Usurper 3-years later managed to bring a degree of order to the north, but lands south of the OTINDHAR were forgotten, allowing Faravar to assert its independence.

By c. -370 RM Argdun Oracai had become a mythic figure to her people. She hadn't aged a day since her experience in the caves and used her stats to unite the people of the surrounding region under her banner. All lands south of the Otindhar were hers. The lodestones were used to construct impressive high-walled keeps around the region. The citadels of Faravar became a thing of legend, spoken of in distant lands as the home of a fell sorceress.

The people of Saostana were not so easily fooled by the tales, and wanted the lodestones for themselves. In -298 RM a delegation was sent south from CARULA by the Dynast Sarkash. All but one amongst them were killed, the sole survivor sent north with word that Faravar could not be bought.

Enraged by this act of treason (in the eyes of Carula, Faravar was sill part of Saostana), Sarkash declared war on Faravar, dedicating his rule to bringing Faravar back under Saostanan rule. He was successful in -263 RM following a harrowing siege that left the Argdun Oracai dead. Their ruler dead, the city occupied by Saostanan troops, Faravar became part of Saostana once again. But their prize, the lodestone mines, had been destroyed in the final days of the war, their location (a closely guarded secret, even under the rule of Oracai) never disclosed.

As Saostana fell under the rule of the SAOSHYANTS in -172 RM, many regions who had recognised the sovereignty of the Saostanan Dynasties opposed this change in leadership. In the south, Faravar and its closest allies HAGRADEA and MORULAURGO failed to honour the Saoshyants and in -138 RM joined with the newly risen Dynast Sakhon Re, declaring their independence from Saostana, leading to the birth of the 'SUNDERED STATES OF FARAVAR'. Sakhon Re was welcomed in Faravar as a symbolic leader, the line of Argduns following Oracai having grown weak since her death. Despite his assassination in -132 RM, Faravar remained a separate nation from Saostana, and capital of the so-called Sundered States.

The fragmentation of the NATHI KINGDOM to the east led to Saostana growing more confident, reclaiming many of its lost territories by -90 RM. Within a few decades the Saoshyants had made clear their intentions and in -51 RM they declared full war on the Sundered States, eventually occupying Faravar in -37 RM, bringing the rule of the Sundered States to an end after little more than a century of independence.

Unrest dominated the next decades as cities were rebuilt following the war and dissident attitudes were quelled in Faravar and surrounding cites.

The next centuries were relatively peaceful as Saostana transitioned to the more modern state of Sarastro and Faravar was brought in line, becoming a policing presence in the south of Sarastro. It was to be the KORACHANI EMPIRE'S eventual occupation of Sarastro in 339 RM following a century of war that would see Faravar enter the history books once more. The city was wholly opposed to Korachan's occupation of Sarastro and the next century was to be dominated by severe strife. Korachan dispatched the ARCHPATRICIAN-general Esobis to Faravar in 423 RM, who personally oversaw the EXECUTION of the remaining members of the Argdun monarchy and introduced the ARÂTHUAHI ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION to the city. By c. 450 RM the city had become heavily policed by the inquisition and any signs of unrest rapidly enacted upon. In honour of the Archpatrician-general Esobis' victories in the city, the imperial government in ARGEA funded construction of a triumphal arch behind the city, carved from the natural wall of the Kho Hagar mountain.

The heavy imperial presence in the city led to its embracing of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, which by c. 600 RM had become a powerful institution there, controlling most of the plains east of the city. By c. 750 RM the hills beneath the city became the site of many grand umbra processors which took raw UMBRA shipped west from the mines in NEYSHABUR and processed the stuff, pumping it north to the larger cities around the DELOMIG. The fervour of its worship of the UNDYING MACHINE and its umbra processors became the characterising features of Faravar, until the mines of ACATEA were abandoned in 2523 RM, which led to a massive shift in power. The patrician families of Faravar had grown powerful from the umbra processing plants had come to control the city, though the loss of Acatea weakened their already faltering ruler and in 2531 RM the city fell under control of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, and even after the EDICT OF NICAEA (which diminished the power of the Church) the Church remained a powerful influence there.

The rise of the HOLY STATE OF HAGRADEA in 2783 RM that fractured Sarastro brought conflict to Faravar and after a short war in 2787 RM, it joined the Holy State until its collapse in 2974 RM under the rule of SATHEP THE RISEN.

Faravar was a diminished place following this time, and survived as its creation had originally intended – as a fortress overlooking the expanses of the south east of Sarastro. Its population dwindled and many of its spectacular citadels were allowed to crumble into ruin (Pop. c. 1,000,000).

FARAVARI: For. Dense forest in the c of SAUA. Though not considered holy in the same manner of the FOREST OF REVERIES, it is still regarded as a spiritual place by the people of Saua, who have kept its deepest reaches as untouched as possible.

FARCA: Ser. Settlement in the c west of THE SURRACH, and satellite to the city of DOSSAL (Pop. c. 4,000).

FARDATH: Rui. Ancient NATHI fortress in the northern periphery of the ASOEN scrublands (once a forest). The fortress was constructed in c. -310 RM to oversee the extraction of coal and umbra from the region. Following a long war with the sphinxes native to the region (which were nearly exterminated) the fortress became a dominant feature in the region, particularly following the rise of the ALCHEMIST clans of MIDAL in c. -270 RM, though was deserted following the LION HERESIES and allowed to fall into ruin.

FAREFAKSA: Set. City in the north east of PORPHYR in the contested lands of UTIMAN. It is militarised and has a large army presence there (Pop. c. 40,000).

FARENTH: Set. Small fortified city in the far east of OTINTH. Like most Otinthian settlements, little is known of it due to the nations' insular nature. It is close to the border of ATILIPHO, which is contested with SEDISIA and is militarised, with fortifications extending well-beyond its borders (Pop. c. 20,000).

FARGIA: Pol. Soc. Important PATRICIAN HOUSE in the north west of AZAZEM, with lands outside AGLAIA. It has a hand in DROSS and wine manufacture, though have various other holdings. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

FARGLIA: Set. Fortified coastal settlement in the east of CYHLAGHARR, overlooking the entrance into the GULF OF OPHAR^(1.) (Pop. c. 3,000).

FARIMAK: Set. Small settlement in the west of TARTAK (Pop. c. 18,000).

FARISÛN: Pol. His. One of the kindreds of ancient ASSEER, in what is now present-day ESHIR⁽²⁾. Its main stronghold was the fortress of Lirin, and for many centuries it was the ruling power in the region following the rise to power of $\underline{DRERLLATAR\,FARIS\acute{D}N}$ in c. 1620 RM. It dwindled after the mysterious death of Drerllatar in 2175 RM, after which the nation descended into chaos.

FARIS: 1. Geo. Highland region along the south east border of SABIA covering around 15,000 square-miles, under the rule of an ONÉSIMUS THANE. The area marks the south eastern-most border of Sabia with KASPIA in the east and the autonomous region of Faris in the south.

2. Dem. 'Faris'. Ntn. Small nation to the south of SABIA appropriated by the exiled ONÉSIMUS THANE HIOVATAT in 1893 RM from unoccupied territories in the east of the DESOLATION OF ASTUDAN. It became an autonomous territory of Sabia in 1902 RM, though later regained its independence in 3394 RM. See Vol III: the Nations of Elyden.

3. Pol. Set. The capital city of the autonomous territory of Faris⁽²⁾ to the south of SABIA. It is known for its fortifications, and it also forms a part of the GÂTHAN ROAD, and sees many GÂTHAN merchants passing by with goods from the north of CENTRAL LLACHATUL and beyond, many bought from the GREAT ROAD (Pop. c. 121,000).

4. Mil. Rnk. In SABIA, a rank of knight serving the VITYAZ-THANE.

FARJAR: Set. City in the south of SABIA (Pop. c. 20,000).

FARKAID: See. City in the south west of NAARETH, in the tidal zone north of the mouth of the river ABASHERA. It is built atop an ancient ABERANI ruin and is known for its catacombs and its harbour that operates in a cycle dictated by the tides of the GULF OF VEGATETH. At the time of low tide, it is as much as 24-miles from the coast. Its main industry is logging (Pop. c. 9,000).

FARKAS: Ind. Set. Lead-mining region in the c west of THE SURRACH, based around a large central settlement. It is famed for being the birthplace of the emperor HEGEUMAR (Pop. c. 17,400).

FAROUT: 1. Mil. Str. Specifically, a fortress in the south east of SIRIPHAGOS.

2. Mil. Str. Fortified wall on the south east of present-day SIRIPHAGOS, built between 3110 – 3200 RM to aid in the defence against SARASTROAN attacks. The wall was largely a failure and was abandoned. Today it has been partially reclaimed by the plains of BAULDOR.

FARRAD: Rvr. River in the north of TARTAK flowing for 175-miles from sources in the JURRASI^(1.) Mountains before meeting with its parent, the river KHARAD.

FARRIBA: Set. Small city in the c of VENTHIR, in the region of ZAMAINI. Its main industry is the cultivation of pistachios (Pop. c. 11,800).

FAROI: Set. Fortified city in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of ALAMUT^(1.), overlooking lake ERDEN. The city is known for its monastic guards, who belong to a secretive order thought to be tasked with the protection of an item of importance (Pop. c. 90,500).

FARRESH: Geo. Mountains rich in iron ore in the ANOMOFERROH region of south east SKAROS and the west of BASSORAH⁽²⁾. Like the Anomoferroh, the Farresh Mountain is scabrous with the ATRAMENTAL CORRUPTION that pervades the region. The iron is largely unusable, though there have been some attempts to investigate the cause of the FARRIS: Set. Small city in the c north of ALTHA^(2.) (Pop. c. 20,000).

FARROSH: see HOLLOW DESERT, THE.

FARROUN: Ser. Small fortified coastal city in the south of OTINTH. Like most Otinthian settlements, little is known about it due to the nations' insular nature (Pop. c. 17,000).

FARSEER: Also 'seer'. Noun. 'farsight'. Sup. Rnk. Common term used in reference to shapers (both ATRAMENTISTS and FIRMAMENTISTS) with abilities, no matter how disparate, that allow them to sense or otherwise experience events at a distance. Their SPHERES of influence are usually referred to as CLAIRAUDIENCE, CLAIRVOYANCE, and/or CLAIRSENTIENCE. In the KORACHANI EMPIRE they are known as PROCULIN.

FARVARI, THE SPIRIT-HOME: For. Forest, around 35,000 squaremiles, in the c of SAUA, that is believed to be the home of many SPIRITS. Many temples and YAZATA can be found there.

FARYS: Set. Settlement in the region of SÛR GHATH in the west of THE SURRACH (Pop. c. 10,000).

FASACIA: Set. Settlement in the west of PELASGOS, east of the GULF OF LEMAS. It has a sizeable port and shipyard (Pop. c. 96,000).

FASASCIA: Set. Oas. Oasis-settlement in EASTERN SAMMAEA, just outside the desert of ON FASASCIA. It was discovered and named by KORACHANI explorers in 2016 RM.

FASCIA: Set. Main city-state and capital of the Loose Kingdoms of RHAMIA. The CHURCH OF THE MEEK rose here in 3450 RM. Of all the cities in Rhamia, Fascia is the only one to regularly trade with the east, particularly ARMAGH in AHRISHEN and URINIT in LYRIDIA (Pop. c. 819,000).

FASEX: 1. also 'the Maw'. Rui. Ancient edifice located in the south west of ROMOREA (2.) close to the border with the BARRIER LANDS. The structure takes the form of a monolithic obsidian ring constructed around the natural gaping maw of a vertical cavern. The obsidian ring is around 50-ft. across and the ring itself is around 10-ft. wide, and sculpted into an orgy of MORTAL bodies that literally writhe as though alive, their eyes glowing red. The ring is anathema to SHAPERS or others who are sensitive to the MATERIA OMNA, and any attempts at exploring the depths beyond have been unsuccessful, with groups describing a feeling of palpable dread overcoming any who venture too close.

None know the provenance of the ring, though it likely dates back to the THIRD AGE, and may be the work of a DEMIURGE or SCION.

2. Mil. Str. Large fortress in the south west of ROMOREA⁽²⁾, situated close to the above feature. The fortress guards the Romorean border against possible incursion from the west, including the BARRIER LANDS and HOGGOTHA ISZ. However, some claim the fortresses true role is to protect against the strange obsidian ring^(L) that lies to its south west.

FASSA: Set. Settlement in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of NICAEA (Pop. c. 3.200).

FASTAR: Set. Settlement in the south east of KETESH⁽²⁾. It is known for its varied fruit groves, most of which are sent north to the capital in Ketesh⁽³⁾, with the remainder being sold to merchants travelling the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 7,400).

FASTING TEMPLARS: Law. Org. Order of policing templars located in AZAZEM, at their strongest in the north east.

FASTUNTIA: Geo. Large rock-crowned hills in the c south west of OPHIUSSA.

FASUA: Ind. Sec. UMBRA MANUFACTORY owned by HOUSE LLANA in the north east of PELASGOS, close to the ATRAMENTALLY-ACTIVE region known as the CIMMERIAN PALL. The manufactory is guarded by troops of HOUSE LLANA stationed 70-miles south east in Fort CARNIR, as is the pipeline running south east to MALICHARICHAN (Pop. c. 2,300).

FATA: 1. Sea. Strait in the north of SAMMAEA, serving as a channel between the SEA OF ESCHATA in the north west and the Sea of HASAAZ ARAAT.

2. Mil. Str. Major coastal fortress in the north west of ROMOREA⁽²⁾, overlooking the Strait of Fata⁽¹⁾, guarding the only entrance into the Sea of HASAAZ ARAAT.

FATAAR: Rvr. River in the prefecture of HOLOLACH^(2.) in Hololach^(1.), flowing for 4420-miles from its source in the KATEKUIL Mountains before meeting with its parent, the river HEMAVAR.

FATACHAN: Sct. City in the c east of VÂRR, known for its walled groves of ARISOUL plants and the manufactories where its taproots are dried into resin for use in metagenic medicine (Pop. c. 20,000).

FATARAH: 1. Sea. Bay off the c north eastern coast of the SULTANATE OF ABACARDAT. The bay is guarded by the coastal fortress of MUN BIQQAR.
2. Set. Major coastal city in the north of ABACARDAT. The city is the major link between c and eastern Abacardat, and maintains a steady sea trade-route with the city of ARHBAH, in the east. It was once coastal and was, during its peak, 2 millennia past, a great metropolis with a population of close to 3,000,000, but it has since waned greatly in size. Today it is a major port that sees most of the collieries to the south west exported (Pop. c. 208,400).

FATH: Dem. 'Fathi'. Ntn. Nation in the east of MENISCEA, east of the SABARAAN Mountains, overlooking the SEA OF SIPARIA.

Its people follow the philosophy known as the ALEMBIC PATH. It is also known for its relatively large VALTHAS population, most of whom live in ghettos in human cities, though there are a few isolated valthas settlements, particularly in the south west of the nation.

It is noted for its government, which is technically a plutocracy, but in which the elected emperor is a puppet of the PRAETORIAN GUARD, who are responsible for choosing the ruler and are the true power, having been so since c. 3540 RM. The position of emperor is one that few honestly want, but those chosen do the best they can, given their limitations. It emerged from the older far-ranging empire of VALARIM, that collapsed early in the FIFTH AGE. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

- FATHA: 1. Set Small city in the c north of the BAKHRAN STATES, 35-miles from the border with MARACHA (Pop. c. 15,000).
 - 2. Rvr. River in the c-south east of MHAROKK flowing for 550-miles south east from sources in the SOLON HIGHLANDS, before meeting its parent, the river SHIBBOLETH^(3,).
- FATHAZ: Set. Small city in the c of LIMOTH^(1.), to the south of the river ATROTHA^(1.). Like many cities in the region, it receives a large influx of people late in Summer, as farmers and other agriculturalists from around the river Atrotha move south to escape the flooding of the VOTH Valley. They spend the Autumn there before returning north.

The city was once a major source of iron in the days of the early years of Limothan culture in c. 1500 RM, though were spent by c. 1700 RM (Pop. c. 17,000).

- FATHAREN: Geo. Expansive rocky coastal hills in the north west of SAMMAEA, in the far north of the VESPERTINE LEAGUE, overlooking the south of the SEA OF ANIPTERRA.
- FATHEL ID: 1. Geo. Region in the c west of NOAVATUR. It is one of few large virginal regions of jungle left in the nation and is untouched by industry. This is likely due to the ancient monument, known as the ANAPIT NASTHALLA, that has exerted its influence over the region, drawing mortals away from it.
 - 2. Set. Major fortified city in the west of NOAVATUR in the above region^(1.). It is a major logging centre (Pop. c. 180,000).
- FATHERS AND MOTHERS: also 'Untu Nata'. Myr. His. Lan. Antiquated name used in much of the north of SAMMAEA, to describe the Two-and-Twenty worker gods of myth, making the term synonymous with that of DEMIURGE.
- FATHMMA: Geo. Mountain in the east of the HENDECARCHY of AMILLAERE^(1.) in the c of MALAN. It forms a western extension of the Argent Mountains and serves as a border between the east of Amillaere and the west of DERAEIA. It is home to the LADY'S PALACE, where the LADY AEGIS often spends her summers. The mountains are very old, their surface crumbling, the ruins of ancient temples barely recognisable on their hewn platforms, most of them now slanted due to the disintegration of the mountain
- FATICARIA: Mys. A form of agrarian MYSTICISM unique to the KORACHANI EMPIRE, that is distinct from SHAPING. There is little official schooling regarding faticaria, for it is a tradition that is largely oral, with its secrets handed down from master to apprentice within occultist circles. Its use is outlawed and its practitioners are hunted by members of the AVÉNETHI, GRIGORIAN, and KYONI SANCTIFIED ORDERS OF THE INQUISITION. See Vol IV: Other Forms of Mysticism.
- FATIMAN: Set. Small city in the south east of MHAROKK, along the course of the river FATHA, just upstream of its expansive delta, which is populated by crocodiles and hippopotami. It forms a part of the RED ROUTE, and operates ferries where caravans can cross the river (Pop. c. 14,000).
- FATRAROS: Rvr. River in the north of PORPHYR flowing west for 820-ft. from sources in the north of the POROPHOSSYR Mountains, and the north east of the RYKK Mountains, before meeting its parent, the river SOCCATOROS.

- FATUACH: Geo. Mountain-range forming the spine of the KORACHANI PENINSULA.
- FATUGHMA WEGH: Int. Arc. Gigantic glassy-blue monolith in the plains of LAULAR in the north east of TRAKIA, in the north of SAMMAEA. The tower is around 1100-ft. high and stands on an elevation of 130-ft. and can be seen as far away as 53-miles. Within this radius travellers are known to spontaneously develop headaches, nosebleeds and other phenomena that worsen the closer one gets to the monolith. This supranatural phenomenon has prevented exploration of the immediate area around the edifice, preventing more examination of its properties.

Little is known about its origins, though it is believed to date back at least the SECOND AGE, though there are little indications as to its true origins, though many scholars have put forth an unknown DEMIURGE as the architect.

- FATUK: Set. Fortified settlement in the north of SARASTRO, along the main trade-route between it and NÁRTHEL (Pop. c. 8,000).
- FAUG: Com. Set. A trade city in the north of VENTHIR, along the coast of the DARK SEA. It is renowned throughout the KORACHANI EMPIRE for its vast SLAVE markets. Most Venthiri slaves have passed through Faug, either upon entering or leaving the nation (Pop. c. 1,000,000).
- FAUGL: 1. Geo. Dry canyon in the south of CYHLAGHARR running for some 60-miles.
 - 2. Rui. Subterranean necropolis located in the bottom of the above canyon in the south of CYHLAGHARR dating back to an unknown THIRD or FOURTH AGE culture. It is made up of many hewn vaults and corridors, each of which contain row upon row of niches, each of which originally contained canopic jars, lacquered skulls, mummified idols and other funerary paraphernalia. It is shunned by the OGHURS of Cyhlagharr and is largely unexplored.
- FAULALA: 1. Geo. Region in the south of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of ALAMUT, dominating the eastern banks of the southern-most flow of the river SARA for some 90-miles from lake MONA in the north to the mouth of the Sara and the city of NILA in the south. The region is fertile, though naturally rocky and most farmlands in the area are cultivated through great toil, and are terraced.
- 2. Pol. Duchy in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of ALAMUT,
- 3. $\it{Mil. Str.}$ Citadel in the south of the $\underline{\sf HAR\acute{E}SHKI}$ CITY-KINGDOM of $\underline{\sf ALAMUT}$.
- FAULIL: Pol. One of the SEVEN-AND-FORTY DISTRICTS of the CITY OF ALMAGEST, known for its arched, multi-tiered architecture and many cottage industries.
- FAVUAR: Geo. Island around 10-miles off the western-coast of THE SURRACH, in the north west of SAMMAEA. This tiny island, less than half a square-mile in size, was once a prosperous mining city with a population of around 6,000, with apartments built directly above the vertical mine shafts that extracted coal from the region. It was abandoned almost overnight in c. 3876 RM and remains deserted to this day.
- FAZAR: Set. Coastal settlement in the north of KHULL, overlooking the BAY OF KALLAR. Its main industry is fishing, and, like many coastal cities in Khull, it is famed for its fish sauce (Pop. c. 6,300).
- FAZAUT, TEMPLE OF: Rui. Ancient FOURTH AGE temple located in the c south of SAMMAEA, in the northern foothills of the ACHARKHARAN Mountains. The temple is at the foot of a volcano, and is believed to have been constructed there intentionally. Today it is abandoned and half buried in cooled lava flows, and any trace of what divinity or power it was once dedicated to has long-since been erased.
- FE DURRA: Rui. Ruined white marble campanile (bell tower) in the c of the URARAGHI Mountains in the c of AMMESH overlooking the pass of SATAMMA. It is perched on the edge of a sheer rise and takes the form of a circular tower with external loggias topped by a collapsed dome, its bell long since lost. The tower is linked to the mountain by a long causeway which was once flanked by statues AMMASHI⁽³⁾ luminaries, which were added by the Ammashi government in its peak, though the tower itself is likely from the FOURTH AGE.
- FEAST OF MALICHAR THE RISEN: see FEAST OF THE REBIRTH OF ST. MALICHAR.

FEAST OF THE MORTAL BIRTH OF ST. MALICHAR: Rel. Soc. Cal.

One of four major seasonal holy days celebrated across the KORACHANI

EMPIRE taking place around the spring equinox, this festival originated in PRE-IMPERIAL celebrations that honoured the passing of winter and the rebirth of life. Today, the spring equinox is celebrated as the commemoration of the first birth day of the ARCHPOTENTATE

MALICHAR, which was actually thought to be in mid-Rachalen.

Many regions observe an ancient tradition where lambs are slaughtered and crucified before being paraded as part of festival processions. Once the procession is over, they are eaten as part of a feast. In larger cities tens of thousands may be slaughtered in one go, making for a grizzly sight. See Vol II: Feasts and Holidays.

FEAST OF THE MORTAL DEATH OF ST. MALICHAR: also 'Feast of Passed Souls'. Rel. Soc. Cal. One of four major seasonal holy days celebrated across the KORACHANI EMPIRE. Those who died during the previous calendar year are commemorated during this holy day which encompasses the two days of the winter solstice. See Vol II: Feasts and Holidays.

FEAST OF THE REBIRTH OF ST. MALICHAR: Rel. Soc. Cal. One of four major seasonal holy days celebrated across the KORACHANI EMPIRE observed around the autumn equinox. It originated as a traditional festival celebrated around harvest-time, however, as seasons became less distinct and traditional agricultural practices gave way to modern DROSS manufacture, the original meaning of the festival was lost. See Vol II: Feasts and Holidays.

FEAST OF THE SOLSTICE: Rel. Soc. Cal. Summer festival in TETHYSIA, seen as the high point of the KATHIAN religious calendar.

FEAST OF THE SOLSTICE, TEMPLE OF THE: Rel. Str. Situated on the Isle of AARU in TETHYSIA, its causeway facing east. Seasonal offerings are made to the Tethysian Pantheon, particularly KATHISIS.

FEASTS OF A HUNDRED-AND-THIRTY-EIGHT: Rel. Soc. Cal.

Festivals in MALAN, each corresponding with one of the 68 full moons of its LONG-COUNT CALENDAR, with a patron saint, hero or spirit residing over each.

FECUND IDOLS: Myt. Obj. Ancient idols depicting stylistically obese female bodies that are found across ALMAGEST, western ASTUDAN, northern SKAROS, eastern KOLCHIS as well as the north east of the OLD FOREST. They range in size from small figurines to monolithic idols and are believed to date back to the THIRD AGE, where they formed a vital part of shamanistic cultures. Many of the larger examples are found at conjunctions of LEY lines and were protected by temples, forming part of a widespread network that implies a large cultural reach.

Of note is the so-called IDOL OF AMAGAT, which is the largest such idol ever found, and possibly formed the centre of a fertility cult.

FEDEQAM: Geo. Mountain range in the c of PNESSA.

FEDERAL ASSEMBLY: Pol. Org. Ruling organisation in ALAM BETHYL that was introduced in 3482 RM to replace the tyrannical rule of the SORCERER^(2.) caste that was ousted following a bloody civil war that had raged there for decades. The region of Alam Bethyl was divided into eight territories (later adding a ninth in the south west), each of which governs its people as it sees fit, with each territory having its own laws and traditions. Together the nine territories answer to the Federal Assembly, which rules from SA RETH, and which is largely concerned with the protection of its borders, smooth passage of trade between territories, and conserving the balance between its established culture and the rapid change towards industrialisation.

The Federal Assembly elects a new Chancellor from potential candidates from across the nine Territories every five years, with previous chancellors remaining on the Assembly council as advisors. The present Chancellor is ASEMMA AMBARAS.

It also oversees the enforcement of laws originally passed in 3562 RM regarding shaping - particularly the sorcerer caste, which, though deposed as rulers centuries ago, remain as individuals. Intended to limit the spread and power of Sorcerers, these laws are strict and upheld by a specially-trained policing force known as the WARDERS.

FEDERATION OF ELITAGRI STATES: see ELITAGRI STATES, FEDERATION OF.

FEDERATION OF FREE NATIONS OF MENISCEA: Pol. Org. Federation of many nations in MENISCEA that aimed to maintain peace and security across Meniscea. It was founded in 2643 RM, largely in response to the growing political power of the Korachani empire in the west, and its increased colonial efforts, though disbanded in 3272 RM following political tensions amongst many of the member states and the withdrawal of SHAZGIN in 3258 RM.

FEET BINDING: Soc. Tradition of applying tight bandages to feet, with the goal of altering their size and shape. It is common in various cultures, though is most well-known in the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER, specifically in the tribe of ESSENIA, where is it a self-inflicted display of devotion to their deity NEPHTHALONT.

FELATHRI: Pol. Sec. Capital city of AYAD, in the south west of WESTERN LLACHATUL. It is known for its Guardians of the Groves, whose members guard its orchards (Pop. c. 421,000).

FELID: Fau. 1. Also 'feline'. Generic term for a wide range of Therops that share various similarities and which typically fulfil a predatory role in their environment. Examples of felids include HOUSECATS, LIONS, TIGERS, FELORS, and SERPOPARDS, amongst others. There are hundreds of varieties, with habitats ranging from savannahs to forested areas, including temperate and tropical woodlands.

Their numbers have dwindled during the Fifth Age due to the encroachment of mortal civilisation and may forms have since disappeared from areas where they were once common, such as CENTRAL LLACHATUL.

2. the term felid also can refer to a specific form of feline that is native to the $\underline{SHARA\ PLAINS}$ in the c of $\underline{VENTHIR}$, almost wiped out due to industrialisation. They exist in wild areas where $\underline{MORTALS}$ do not dwell and the natural world remains inhabitable. Reaching up to 10-ft. long, with golden coats, and white and black stripes, they were once synonymous with nobility and the $\underline{MAPHRIA}$ before their numbers lessened due to industrialisation and the spread of mortals.

FELLAQISH, FOLLOWERS OF: also 'Fellaqish'. Rel. Main religion followed by the people of HANNAH, QARALAM, ZHARIAH⁽²⁾, and SHEZALIAH. Its adherents are known as Fellaqishi and are divided into three distinct sects, each of which believes in a prophecy that culminates in the arrival of a religious figure who will unite Elyden under this singular faith.

The religion originated as a secretive cult within the ancient pantheonic religion of the FOURTH AGE YASHMINI empire (which persists in corrupted form in the religions of neighbouring HANNAH and KHAR NADUL). The Fellaqishi believe that a prophesied 'chosen one' – known as Fellaqish – will rise to unite its people and subjugate all unbelievers. Fellaqish was described with very particular features and 'deformities' (including a left hand bearing seven fingers and large pale eyes, amongst other details). Members of the sect came to engineer unions between chosen couples whose appearances were most similar to those of Fellaqish so as to manipulate the chances of the chosen ones' birth.

The sect was branded as heretical by the Yashmini religion, and its remaining followers had been exiled by the time of the empire's collapse before the FADING of the Fourth Age, where they continued in their selective breeding to engender the appearance of the chosen one. Priests became powerful figures, and the families of these children enjoyed lives of luxury and veneration in their own right. However, in the centuries following the Fading, there emerged three conflicting ideologies, based around three different bloodlines. Their leaders believed their respective bloodline was the one destined to birth the chosen one, leading to strife and conflict that remain a part of Qaralami life to this day.

The Royal bloodline of Qaralam is closely related to one of these three bloodlines, and though it is constrained by custom to not publicly show favouritism, it is believed to secretly favour that line over the others, which have become less popular over time. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

FELLAQISHI: Rel. Members of the religion known as the FOLLOWERS OF FELLAQISH.

FELLOAR: Sea. Sea in the east of EASTERN MENISCEA, dividing TAHOMIA in the west from CYAE in the east. It forms a north western part of the SEA OF LYNNAE.

FELONAL: For. Sparse deciduous forest in the east of PELASGOS, on the shallow slopes of the BATHAKOL Mountains and fed by the river ELISSANAS.

FELORCA: Set. Small coastal city in the north east of OD MEGINNAS^(1.). Its main industry is fishing (Pop. c. 14,300).

FELORS: Plr. 'felors'. Fau. Creatures bearing feline and ursine features, with flat mall face, big shoulders and large pointed ears. They are native to dry areas of Meniscea, and are largely found in savannahs. They are typically scavengers, though are very powerful, with large neck muscles designed to rip carcasses apart. They sometimes brawl with large sloths if very hungry. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

FELUTHA: Set. City in the north east of AZAZEM, just south of the ULLATAR scrub forest. It was once a major centre of logging, but began dwindled following the death of the forest. It remains now along the course of THE SHADOW MARCH, serving pilgrims that stop there (Pop. c. 32,000).

FELUUDA: Set. Settlement in the c south of RHINOCOLOURA, at the south of lake SIBALLA, along the course of the river SHIBBOLETH^(3.) (Pop. c. 8.000).

FELXIII: Set. Small city in the far south west of RAONGEN⁽²⁾, located upstream of the delta of the river SO FELX. The city's main industry is textile manufacture and the riverfront is crowded with manufactories (Pop. c. 15,000).

FEM: Set. City in the far north of BROR (2.). The city has ancient roots and has been abandoned and resettled many times over, with the most recent incarnation dating to c. 2200 RM, and being continuously settled since then. In c. 2790 RM an intricate network of catacombs was unearthed beneath the city, stretching west, far under the GILLIAN Ridge (Pop. c. 43,000).

FEMEND: Geo. Badlands in the c of SAMMAEA, serving as a border between the north of ADHERA, the far south east of GRARNEÂST, and the west of HOGGOTHA ISZ.

FEMERE: Set. Small city in the c north of TZALLRACH, known for its iron mining. It forms a part of the GREAT ROAD trade-route (Pop. c. 15,000).

FEMMEN: Rvr. River in the c of RHINOCOLOURA, flowing north west for 630-miles from the NORERAEL and DOTHEGAR Mountains before meeting its parent, the river SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾.

FENDOL: Com. Set. Fortifier city in the east of KARGAMA. It maintains close relations with ESHIR, and is home to the ZILLAS merchant houses that control trade between the two nations (Pop. c. 43,200).

FENDOR: Rvr. Large lake in the c-east of KARGAMA, along the course of the river WOLMASH. It is very shallow and its shores are wetlands that are home to a vast variety of wildlife, most prominently of which are mosquitos and other pests. These insects were partially responsible for the capital moving from LERA to KARGHEMIR^(2.) in 2875 RM.

FENEAL: His. Set. FOURTH AGE city in the west of LYRIDIA DHAI, now 4-miles from the coast with the SEA OF SPIRES in LYRIDIA. For much of the FIFTH AGE the city was partially submerged beneath the waters, with the remnants of its granite towers and spires visible - giving the sea its name. The retreat of the coastline led the city's slow re-emerging, and it is now buried in the compressed silt that covers the region. Despite this, rumours still abound of riches buried in the city.

FENT: Set. Settlement in the west of KARGAMA. It was founded in c. 2900 RM after the capital was moved to nearby KARGHEMIR⁽²⁾, and was built atop the ruin of an older city, known as PHAND⁽²⁾, that was once itself capital to the ancient CONSANGUINE DYNASTIES, but which had been abandoned for over 17 centuries. New structures in Fent were built using the derelict masonry of ancient palaces and halls, and many modern buildings have similar footprints to ancient structures. Fent lies some miles from the river WOLMASH, which has shifted its course in the years since the fall of Phand.

Today the settlement is a source of food for the capital and is famed for its cured meats and TSAMMA fields (Pop. c. 7,000).

FENWALKER: Soc. Itinerants of AHRISHEN. Stilt-travelling storytellers, often taking on the role of moderators in the villages they pass through.

FERANE: Set. settlement in the south west of the TEMPLAR STATES. Its main industry is the mining of copper (Pop. c. 8,000).

FERASOS: Set. Settlement in the c north of LIDEA. Its main industry is the cultivation and exportation of spices, which are sold to merchants visiting the settlement along the SALT ROAD, which find their way across the kitchens of the INNER SEA REGION (Pop. c. 7,800).

FERATORA: Geo. The southern plains of TETHYSIA, known for their rare seasonal rains and parched soil. The region is dotted with ancient half-buried colossi, amongst which is said to lie a half-forgotten shrine dedicated to the deity KATHISIS, where the relic known as the IDOL OF THE FALLEN is said to be buried.

FERIUG: Set. Settlement in the c of KASPIA (Pop. unknown).

FERMAT: Sea. Reef off the southern coast of the island of HAR FARRASH in the north of SEPAHAUNAT.

FERRENTIA: Ind. Set. MANUFACTORY city in the c of TARTAK along the shores of lake FADRAD. It forms a part of the Salt Road and offers repair services to AMBULANTS and other machinery that crosses its borders (Pop. c. 39,000).

FERRIM: Nou. 'Ferrear'. Plr. 'Ferrimin'. Sup. Org. Mil. Rnk. An order of SHAPERS in the KORACHANI EMPIRE, whose MINASTERIA (2.) has been based in the city of KORACHAN in KORACHAN since 2016 RM, though it was located in the city of ALMAGEST prior to the WAR OF THE ARTIFEXES. Its members are ATRAMENTAL shapers whose SPHERE allows them to control and manipulate metals. They are similar to TELLURARIIN, who have mastery over stone, but the two hae distinct roles in Korachani industries.

No other shaper within the Korachani empire is as valued as a Ferrim, and a child who is chosen to study at its Minasteria brings great respect to its family.

Ferrimin are most often found working in cities, where they repair metal objects (though rusted metal can only be restored by the most accomplished of Ferrimin, who would not be doing such menial jobs anyway), fixing dents, restoring sheen, sharpening blades, and repairing small holes and general wear. Others make a meagre living sifting through waste, separating metal from other refuse, or extracting certain metals from alloys so that they may sell them to industries in need of them. These tend to be the lowest of the Ferrimin who earned no accolades during their studies.

Others find work as sculptors or performance artists, using their skill in manipulating metal to create art that they either sell or use in performances. The steel ribbon performers of LAASKHA, known as EDDEFERROCHIN, are famed for their beautiful displays.

Perhaps more importantly, they can be found working in various industries in manufactories or in civil engineering, where they shape metal as it is being formed, or provide invaluable guidance in construction projects – such as bridges, fortresses and other large structures that make use of metal. Some may be able to control metal to such an extent that they can lift it with their minds, replacing the need for cranes and elevators. They are also an important part of mining, where they are able to rapidly located veins of ore, guiding mining and quarrying works, ensuring that all available ore is extracted. They are also expert metallurgists, working to device new alloys and methods of preparing metals for use in industry.

Many of those whose mins are strong-enough to move and shape metal to their will find gainful employment in the military where they can fulfil a myriad of roles. Infiltrating enemy territories and sabotaging their infrastructure and artillery. Repairing friendly equipment or otherwise altering or improving them. Carrying out battlefield engineering works. Or simply working as living artillery – hurling metal projectiles at enemies.

However, the truth is that most young shapers who show a propensity for Ferrear are often bought by manufactories and other industries illicitly before their training is complete to be interred in HEART ENGINES, where they toil without sleep or reprieve until their bodies eventually give out after little more than a decade of toil. The manipulation of metal and other ores is a potent gift and much politicking goes on behind the scenes in the training and search of such shapers. See Vol IV: Spheres and types of Shaping.

FESTAL: Rui. Abandoned UMBRA extraction city in the north east of BA'AKH. The city was abandoned in c. 2550 RM following the spread of the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region of HAMNEITH.

FESTERWOOD: also 'Vaggotha'. For. Large area of dense forest in the north east of the HENDECARCHY of STHAMAN, stretching east into the north of Atallua, in the c south of MALAN. The region is known for its dense flora and numerous fauna, and the large fleshy flowering plants and trees, and the distinctive odours that surround them. Its common name is derived from the musty stench of pollen and nectar that fills the air, and which is overpowering to many mortals. Indeed, the region is sparsely populated, with the city of TOBOSK being its only major city.

FESTIVAL OF AFFIRMATION: Rel. Soc. Cal. One of four major seasonal holy days celebrated across the KORACHANI EMPIRE taking place close to the summer solstice, the Festival of Affirmation is a time for celebrating life and the good-fortunes of the empire, and for giving thanks to the wealth and health of the celebrants, be what they may. See Vol II: Feasts and Holidays.

FESTIVAL OF HAMMERS: Soc. Martial festival celebrated in LAASKHA,

VAALK and MHAROKK with its roots in an ancient FIFTH AGE test of prowess celebrated with CONCUSSIVE SLEDGEHAMMERS. Today the festival makes use of concussive hammers similar to those employed by military shock troops. These hammers have gunpowder in their heads, which when struck produce a flash and a loud bang. The contestant who can produce the largest concussive blast whilst remaining standing is declared the winner.

FESTIVAL OF THE LADY: Rel. Soc. Cal. Four-day festival celebrated at the end of the 1014.8 day LONG-COUNT CALENDAR of MALAN.

FEUTA: Set. Major city in the south of the HENDECARCHY of AMILLAERE^(1.) in the c of MALAN. It is known for its hospitals and convalescent houses, and many who are injured while travelling the AEGISWAY are brought here for treatment (Pop. c. 58,000).

FHALAR: His. Pol. Failed PARTHIAN colony, established on an island just south of the BLACK MOUNTAIN in c. 180 RM. The region struggled for around 3-decades, suffering raids from natives to the north as well as succumbing to local diseases. The colony was abandoned in c. 230 RM.

FICASAT: Set. One of the northern-most permanent settlements in ALMAGEST, north of the MARMARA massif. The settlement is fortified due to its relative isolation and vicinity to the border with KOLCHIS (Pop. c. 7,500).

FICHIM: (B. c. 100 – 450 RM) Oth. Pol. CHARAMAN HALFBLOOD champion who killed the Lion King LABAISINGH in battle in 151 RM, ending the VENATHI EMPIRE'S war against his people, and effectively causing the collapse of the empire.

FIEFLORD: His. Pol. Soc. Rnk. Prior to THE CULLING of the RAONGENI⁽²⁾ political system and hierarchy in 2792 RM, the Fieflords were considered to be the highest members of the social structure outside of the Royal family. There were nine Fieflords (though the true number may have varied over time, depending on political events) and they answered only to the King of Raongen.

In 2792 RM King INVIS IAFENG restructured the entire political system in an event known now as the Culling, in which he executed two of the Fieflords, distributing their lands amongst the remaining seven and renaming them FACTOTUMS⁽²⁾.

FIELDS OF JERICHA, the: see JERICHA, FIELDS OF.

FIERISTA: Geo. Highland valley in the c north of CISNERIA, forming part of the eastern-most reaches of the BLACK MOUNTAINS. It is known for its rigged beauty and primal nature — it is inhabited by a high concentration of wildlife of myriad forms. It is dangerous to travellers, and is only of interest to the CARIOUNS, who hunt and trap in the peripheries there.

FIERY MARSHES, the: Rvr. Marshlands in the north of KASPIA, dominated by igneous fissures and crates, through which seeps volatile oil, which burns near-constantly. The air here is noxious and what creatures and plants live here are unlike those found elsewhere.

FIFTH AGE OF MORTAL LIFE, the: Cal. Soc. The present age, and the only age not to be featured in the earliest versions of the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN. It is commonly accepted to have started in around -1500 RM, following the FADING of the FOURTH AGE after the conclusion of the cataclysmic WAR OF SCOURGING that saw the DEMIURGE RACHANAEL defeated and imprisoned in the PIT OF DAEKYN by his sister ALLAISHADA.

A common misconception within the KORACHANI EMPIRE is that the Fifth Age began with the AGE OF STEEL in 0 RM and the dawn of the rule of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR.

Many claim that we are living in the twilight years of the Fifth Age, and that its Fading will soon be upon us. See Vol IV: the Mythologia Elyden.

FIG GATE, the: Flo. Mil. Arc. Two gigantic expansive bay figs in the city of NABERIZ, in the south of AKHELIZ. Together they serve as the gateway into the CHEVETINE CITY, where the royal palace and governmental buildings are located. The figs are gigantic and are considered a national monument. Guards make their homes in humble treehouses situated high in their canopies, which are linked by rope bridges and connected to the stone walls that surround the Chevetine City.

FIK: Sca. Bay in the north of the TEMPLAR STATES, to the east of the GHORDADOS headland.

FILADELFIA, TEMPLE OF: 1. Rel. Str. One of the SEVEN TEMPLES OF THE MACHINE, erected in c. 750 RM on ruins of an old temple in VAALK, that was originally created by the DEMIURGES. The temple was besieged by the GODSLAYERS in 2903 RM, its ruin now forming a major place of pilgrimage along THE SHADOW MARCH.

2. Rui. KORACHANI name for an older settlement that was once located on the side of the later temple, in central VAALK. The city, appearing in c. 450 RM, became an important municipal region and stronghold of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE in the empire's southern territories, leading to the construction of the temple in c. 750 RM, though records show that the settlement was constructed over an ancient heathen temple dedicated to Vaalkan deities.

The city dwindled by c. 1200 RM due to water shortage and marauder raids, though the temple remains a major part of THE SHADOW MARCH.

FILLICILIA: Set. Major fortified city in the south east of CISNERIA, in the valley of LIENE, overlooking lake BARGO and the river ARASTA. It is a major refuge to CLAN KRISLOR. A city of this size would not normally survive in a region such as this, but the discovery of a powerful GODSTONE in the region in c. 3300 RM allowed life to thrive there, and a fortress was soon built to defend the stone, and a settlement appeared around it over the coming years (Pop. c. 180,000).

FINAL COMMUNION OF SHADOW: Rel. Soc. The most common COMING-OF-AGE RITUAL in cultures that follow the doctrine of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, and of particular relevance in the KORACHANI EMPIRE, dating back to the first days of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE in the Korachani peninsula.

Celebrated during mass on the first IKUAIONAL following the FEAST OF THE MORTAL BIRTH OF ST. MALICHAR, children who turned 13 in the past year recite a chosen passage from the third part of the BOOK OF RACHANAEL, after having studied it over the previous years while attending meetings of the SOCIETY OF RACHANAELI INDOCTRINATION.

The ritual ends with the child being anointed by the HOLY SHADOW for the first time, after which they are seen as adults in the eyes of their respective church.

FINGER ROT: Med. Common ailment in cold regions in northern LLACHATUL, including ALMAGEST. It is so common in these regions that holding up ones' hands in greeting, to show that a person has all digits, is a widespread gesture, and is more well known as an ALMAGESTI GREETING. See Vol II: Diseases and Illnesses.

FINMALEN: Set. Settlement in the south west of KOMMEA, in the far south of the THUILOR Mountains. Its main industry is copper mining (Pop. c. 3,800).

FIORRE: Bev. Alcoholic beverage common in the KORACHANI EMPIRE, mostly in lands north of THE INNER SEA. It is distilled from the taproot of the fleshroot plant and, due to plant's natural resilience to the ATRAMENTA, the drink is often recommended to those suffering from its effects, though the benefits are far from certain. See Vol II: Beverages.

FIRAM GATE, the: Art. Arc. Triumphal arch outside the city of ETHRA, in Io.

FIRASAM: Rvr. A 20-miles stretch of the river LASIQ, in the c-south east of KHAR NADUL, whose surface is constantly aflame. Fed by a cocktail of chemical runoff from dozens of chemical plants upstream, this part of the river has been aflame for over 3-centuries, with no signs of extinguishing any time soon. All life in the river died long ago, and even downstream, where the flames no longer burn due to the chemicals being diluted, its waters remain inhospitable to life.

FIRE LIZARD: Fau. Large quadrupedal reptile, related to MONITORS, named after their red scales. They are heavy-set, their legs sprawled beneath them and average 3,600 lbs. in weight and 14 – 18-ft. in length, about a third of which is attributed to their heavy tails.

Like monitors, fire drakes are omnivorous, though prefer meat when food is abundant. They are difficult to tame, and offer little loyalty on the occasions when they are tamed, but are fierce in battle and in antiquity were valued for their psychological impact when used in war.

They are common in the north of SAMMAEA and the south east of LLACHATUL, particularly the ARID TRIPTYCH and the dry regions of EASTERN LLACHATUL, where they live in small numbers in the wild, except in SAUA, where a handful are bred every generation to be used as mounts in battle, usually by WUHIA. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

FIRE PRINCE: Pol. His. Ruling title in the ancient FIFTH AGE kingdom of VOLTUMN, who was said to be anointed by the deity TURRAN.

FIREA: Set. Small city in the c north of LIDEA, along the shores of lake CATHA. Its main industry is the cultivation and exporting of spices. The city is notable for the large stone platform that stands, abandoned, outside its borders, harking back to an ancient FOURTH AGE religion.

It forms a major link in the land trade of the north of $\underline{SAMMAEA}$ as both the \underline{SALT} ROAD and \underline{RED} ROUTE cross it before they diverge, with the Red Route heading to the north east and the Salt Road continuing east (Pop. c. 14,400).

FIREBLOODED: Soc. Rel. The descendants of the goddess OT, commonly regarded as a noble caste in TEMUIA. In some cases, the term refers exclusively to pure descendants of the goddess Ot, though it is usually used more freely as a way to identify those with even the slightest Fireblood. Fireblood is required for a man to enter the ranks of the KESHIKS.

FIREBOULES: Gam. Ball sport common to the KORACHANI EMPIRE and its dependencies, which originated in the south of KORACHAN millennia ago, similar to bowls.

It is characterised by its use of gunpowder in the Prido- the primary ball that is thrown, and the resultant small explosion of which moves the surrounding balls. Today it is most common in the north of LAASKHA, and the south of SKAROS. See Vol II: Games and Pastimes of Elyden.

FIREDANCE: Mys. A form of mysticism that borrows from the ATRAMENTA and FIRMAMENT to fuel a tribal belief in the divinity of flames, which are manifested during heated rituals around the firedancers who invoke them. The practice is most common in KARAKHAS and is most prevalent in the north of SAMMAEA, and was once practices in PARTHIS, when worship and belief in AZER was still common. It is believed that the origins of the word EMPYREAN lie in the roots of this tradition. See Vol IV: Other Forms of Mysticism.

FIREWINE: see AHUREDH.

FIREWORKS: see PYROTECHNICS.

FIRMAMENT, the: Sup. Also 'the Helix'. The light half of the MATERIA OMNA (with the other half being the ATRAMENTA) that originates on the MATERIAL PLANE through the PRIME LACUNA located in the FAR HEMISPHERE known commonly as the TRUE MENISCUS.

The Firmament was partly used as material in the SHAPING OF CREATION at the hands of the DEMIURGES. Similarly, it can also be SHAPED by well-attuned MORTALS, in the form of FIRMAMENTISM and other mystical arts. The effects of the Firmament upon the material plane and ELYDEN are subtle and its domains are that of the mind and constancy, though its influence on Elyden usually takes the form of magnetism (for instance, LODELITHS), and calcification of the living matter, both flora and fauna.

In the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN, it was created by the dreams of THE SHAPER, who churned the SEA OF CHAOS into the two halves of creation – the FIRMAMENT ABOVE AND THE ATRAMENTA BELOW. See Vol IV: the Materia Omna.

FIRMAMENT ABOVE AND THE ATRAMENTA BELOW, the: Myt. In the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN, the DREAMING of THE SHAPER caused the SEA OF CHAOS to churn, eventually separating into two linked, yet separate elements, known as the Firmament Above and the Atramenta Below, in what is known as the GREAT DIVINE UNDERTAKING. From these would emerge the FIRMAMENT and ATRAMENTA, with the MATERIAL PLANE, that the worker gods known as the DEMIURGES would shape in their ACTS OF SHAPING. See Vol IV: the Mythologia Elyden.

FIRMAMENTAL HEMISPHERE: Sup. Geo. The geographical hemisphere that lies between the TRUE MENISCUS and the NULLAMBIT, where the FIRMAMENT is typically believed to hold sway. It is often used synonymously with the term FAR HEMISPHERE, though the two are not identical terms.

FIRMAMENTAL TAINT: Geo. Regions of ELYDEN where the presence of the FIRMAMENT is strongly felt. This may be due to proximity to the TRUE MENISCUS or due to a powerful nearby lacuna or LEY, or some other effect that may or may not be related to fluctuations the ARCANE TEMPERS.

Typically, regions of Firmamental taint are shunned by most mortals due to their inimical effects on life and health, though they may be of interest to scholars and FIRMAMENTISTS.

FIRMAMENTAL TONGUES: Mys. Sup. Lan. Mystical language devised by ancient MORTAL people as a means of gatekeeping FIRMAMENTAL SHAPING from non-SHAPERS, serving to increase the apparent mysticism surrounding the tradition.

Traces of these Firmamental Tongues survive to this day, either as loanwords in other languages or as mystical languages in their own right, now much evolved from their ancient roots. These are common in parts of MENISCEA as well as in KHAMIDIAN still carries some influences from ancient Firmamental Tongues. See Vol II: Languages.

FIRMAMENTIAN, LODGE OF THE: Sup. Org. Scholars who devote their lives to the study of the FIRMAMENT and its domains, though whose respect and reverence for it necessitates that they not despoil it through SHAPING, meaning that they are never Firmamentists themselves (or if they are, they vow not to shape). The order emerged in c. 3500 RM in ARINAMA, in the north of TZALLRACH, after Firmamentally-devoted scholars unearthed many marble engravings in the ruins of an ancient shaper's enclave on a sheer-sided island in the BOILING SEA.

The Lodge has since spread to other lands of the free east, including TETHYSIA, where they are based in the city of EPHAR, from which various expeditions have been mounted east in the NEHNAXIA.

FIRMAMENTISM: Sup. SUPRANATURAL act whereby an individual, known as a SHAPER, can manipulate the FIRMAMENT to achieve one of many varied results. The act is reliant on the shapers' distance relative to the TRUE MENISCUS, as well as other local phenomena, known as ARCANE TEMPERS. See Vol IV: Shaping.

FIRMAMENTIST: Sup. One who is capable of SHAPING by accessing the FIRMAMENT. No two Firmamentists share identical skills and powers, though most SHAPERS can their group their abilities within a specific SPHERE – a range of linked abilities and skills that is shared by many other Firmamentists across ELYDEN. See Vol IV: Shaping.

FIRMAMENTOLOGY: study of the FIRMAMENT.

FIRMATITE: Ele. Rare ore found in areas of ancient or prominent FIRMAMENTAL activity, often close to LACUNAE or in the FAR HEMISPHERE. It is very difficult to extract, though when worked resembles somewhat pearlescent pink marble with metallic veins ranging from violet to purple and blue. Under certain conditions it can take on a crystalline form, which is considered very beautiful, and is sought after by sculptors and architects. This form of firmatite is also known for its use in TECHNARCANE industries.

Due to the difficulty in extracting and working it, it has been considered a royal substance for millennia and what few quarries exist are heavily guarded.

It is most-common in $\underline{\text{MENISCEA}}$, due to its vicinity to the $\underline{\text{TRUE}}$ $\underline{\text{MENISCUS}}$, and is most abundant in $\underline{\text{AURUM}}$ and $\underline{\text{IMELKOT}}$, as well as in RASTAN, KASHAAL, and KASIHAAL. It is also found around THE INNER SEA in GNOTH and VENTHIR, though such deposits are small.

FIRMATITE WEAVE: Sup. Soc. Obj. Fabric made from silk and rare FIRMATITE ore, specifically the metallic veins that are common in the latter. The fabric is used in garments worn by SHAPERS in ZOHAK, VARU, and DANU, and acts as a FOCUS^(1.).

FIRST AND LAST WORD, the: see ESHEIHA.

FIRST AGE OF MORTAL LIFE: also 'First Age'. Mys. His. In the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN, the first age in which the newly born MORTAL RACES took part after their premature birth following the hubris of the DEMIURGES. The age ends with the mortal races struggling to survive in a world that is not yet ready for them. See Vol IV: the Mythologia Elyden.

FIRST AGE OF SHAPING: Mys. His. The MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN states this as being the first age and precedes the appearance of the MORTAL RACES. This is the period of mythic history in which the DEMIURGES performed the SHAPING OF CREATION, in which the FIRMAMENT and the ATRAMENTA were shaped into the mortal plane. This included the shaping of the sphere of ELYDEN. It is followed by the FIRST AGE OF LIFE. See Vol IV: the Mythologia Elyden.

FIRST OTHERWORLDER, the: see VOID.

FIRST SIEGE OF ARGEA, the: see ARGEA, SIEGE OF.

FIRST TEMPLE, the: Rel. Str. Ancient FIFTH AGE temple in the c-south east of Thetis, claimed by THETISIANS to be the first temple dedicated to the KATHISIS.

FIRST TREE, the: Mys. His. In MALANI history, the tree thought to have been the first one shaped by the DEMIURGES in ELYDEN. The WOODEN THRONE of MYEIN is said to have been carved from the root of the great tree millennia past. The location of the First Tree has been lost, though many theologians, scholars, and historians have postulated on various locations over the years.

FIRST WAR OF FAITH: see WAR OF FAITH, FIRST.

FIRUN: Set. Coastal settlement in the far north west of Io (Pop. c. 8,000).
 FIRUS: Set. Major coastal city in the far north of the HENDECARCHY of DERAEIA in the c east of MALAN. (Pop. c. 250,000).

FIRUSH: Set. Small city in the south east of the JAHADAT STATES, under the control of the city of ZUHAL, at the mouth of the river VLARA (Pop. c. 16,000).

FISTS OF KYON: Mil. Org. The main militant arm of the KYONI ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION, named after the orders' emblem, whose members are drafted from the ranks of the Order's ACCENSORS. Regiments of Fists of Kyon are stationed at strategically important cities across the KORACHANI EMPIRE, where they work with the IRON GUARD in strengthening defences.

Most regiments of Fists contain a number of specialists, with different regiments having different specialities, and they tend to be stationed to maximise their effectiveness, when logistically possible.

FITHA: Soc. Pol. A form of courtier common in LIDEA, with many traits in common with the eastern DRAGOMAN.

FIVE-AND-SIXTY LANDLORDS, the: Pol. Rnk. The feudal lords of SAUA, answerable only to the DIADON PRIME DARASSIN. Each has their own territories for which they are responsible, and from which they draw an army of conscripted ASHAKATARS and professional forces known as KATARS, as well as independent WUHIA drawn from local nobility. The institution of the Five-and-sixty emerged c. 3108 RM following the founding of Saua.

FIVE-AND-SIXTY STATES, the: Pol. The feudal partition of SAUA, with each state overseen by a LANDLORD who controls their own personal army and is answerable only to the DIADON PRIME DARASSIN.

FIVE SAILS, the: His. Org. Historical pirate fleet based in the DRAGON ISLES, named after the FIVE SEAS region in which they operated. The fleets roots lie amongst a group of people who called themselves the SEA NOMADS, who emerged in the nation of SIBBION (later assimilated by the CITIZENRY OF THALI) in c. 3000 RM, but whose leadership became corrupted by a series of depraved new recruits over the coming decades.

By c. 3130 RM the Sea Nomads were no more, replaced by a ruthless and efficient empire of pirates who came to terrorise the Five Seas. It was to this culture that a girl, ZAYANOZA, was born in c. 3275 RM. An able sailor, she rose up the ranks of her ship, THE SIREN'S SONG, becoming its captain by 3298 RM. Within two years she was blockading the harbours of DANNAR, and would go on to become its first Queen under the new name of DHA NAR. For many years, the pirates of the Five Sails continued to ply the waters of the Five Seas, but over time their piracy lessened and by c. 3500 RM they had become the professional marines and merchants of Dha Nar, their ignoble roots abandoned, if not forgotten.

FIVE SEAS: Sea. Collective name for the region between the east of MENISCEA and the west of SAMMAEA, which the seas of LYNNAE, SIPARIA, NARANOR, SAVAEN, and TIVARRA converge to the west and north of the DRAGON ISLES.

FIVE STATES, the: Pol. New name for the BAKHRAN STATES following the appointment of KHAGAN as Lord Potentate in 4002 RM.

FIVE THRONES: see THRONES, FIVE.

FIVE WALLS: Pol. One of the SEVEN-AND-FORTY DISTRICTS of ALMAGEST, built around the ruins of a star fort that was constructed c. 900 RM, before the three cities of EPHEMERIS, AZZII and Almagest truly converged into one.

FIVEFOLD SIEGE, the: Mil. His. Apex of the FOREST WARS that took place between the KORACHANI EMPIRE and THE OLD FOREST from 1485 RM to c. 2800 RM east of the ANATOLA Mountain in 2201 RM where independent armies of the nations of ALMAGEST, AZAZEM, Korachan and PELASGOS attacked the powerful stronghold of a tribe whose records have since been expunged from imperial records, the rubble of the fortress scattered across the plains and the land tainted so as to render it barren.

FJARMAKER: Sup. Rnk. A caste of FIRMAMENTISTS in SABIA possessing talents similar to those of RUNISTS. They use stone menhir circles built on mounds atop powerful LEY points in the snowfields to read possible paths in the future. The heat produced from the SHAPING is usually enough to melt surrounding snow, which explains the otherwise frugal clothing of the Fjarmakers.

FLAESCID CRAB: Fau. Arachniform vermin common to the FLAESCUS and other similar regions of ATRAMENTAL CORRUPTION in KHARKHARADONTIS. They were first recorded by the KORACHANI explorer TAHLOSH in 324 RM, though were not properly examined until much later.

They grow to around 1-ft. long though are typically smaller, living in follicles and feeding on hair-like growths in the fleshy plains of their habitat. They are not only resistant to Atramental corruption, but seem to thrive in regions of such taint. Those that have been removed from their native habitat for research purposes have all died, possibly due to a lack of atmospheric Atramenta. This has made them a fascinating subject for scholars and researchers of the Atramenta, who believe they may find better cures for Atramental Ailments. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

FLAESCUS: also 'St. Tahlosh's Garden'. Geo. Expansive region of ATRAMENTAL TAINT, covering some 70,000 square-miles within the region of dense Atramental taint known as the EYE OF DARKNESS in the c of KHARKHARADONTIS. The ATRAMENTA here affects living creatures, leeching them of strength. While life struggles, the land perversely seems to thrive in some areas of the Flaescus, where it is covered in a thick humus of undecaying bodies – the only nourishment available to living creatures in the area.

As in many places in Kharkharadontis, both fauna and flora are greatly corrupted here, and the land itself can, in place, take on aspects of the flesh that decays around it — with laconically blinking eyes observing trespassers from fleshy lids, or jaws and teeth sprouting obscenely from what should be unliving matter. The most nightmarish of these zones is known as the PLAIN OF FLESH.

The Flaescus was first discovered by the KORACHANI explorer TAHLOSH in 324 RM and many expeditions have since been mounted here, due to morbid fascination with the nature of the region here, and many foreigners' conception of Atramentally Tainted lands comes from the widespread accounts of the Flaescus. Following the canonisation of Tahlosh in 792 RM, the region has been known as ST. TAHLOSH'S GARDEN.

The region has grown steadily, in both size and severity, since its discovery in 324 RM, when it was surveyed as being around 24,000 square-miles.

The region is categorised as EXTREMELY DANGEROUS by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

FLAGEL: Mil. A hafted chain weapon that is popular amongst NÁRTHELI irregulars.

FLAME OF RACHANAEL, the: see URIAH.

FLAME OF SARCOMYR, the: Int. Sup. Geo. Blue flame burning perpetually on the peak of the rugged hill VITTATA in the south west of RAONGEN⁽²⁾. It is shunned by most, and it features in local legends as a place where ancient people were taken to be punished. Today, few people go there, and of those that do some do not return.

Those who have returned were missing parts of their extremities, with smooth unblemished stumps in place of fingers, hands, arms, or feet, as though they had never been. These individuals have no memory of what happened to them and carry themselves irrationally as though they had been born that way, even while they crawl or try to hold a pen with a hand that no longer exists.

FLAMING ROSE, ORDER OF THE: Org. An ascetic order based in TETHYSIA, whose main tenet is that of a dichotomous existence; where a true life is one lived in harmony and balance. Life/death, light/dark etc. are all things they seek to find a balance between. Though there are no connections between them, OTHERWORLDERS and the restless dead are viewed as exemplars by them, as they have achieved a full compromise between life and death.

The order has flourished and disappeared many times throughout history, its most recent reappearance being in 3362 RM, where the ruins of a monastery dating to c. 1000 RM were rediscovered by the MENDICANT LAANAH, who became its last LUMINARY.

The orders' lore believes that its first Luminary was the DEMIURGE TALANTEHUT, known to them as the SHUNNED ONE, who is said to have founded the order after discovering her mortality after the Demiurges' punishment by THE SHAPER. Very few members of the order are privy to this ancient history and most only know of the Shunned One as the orders' founder.

FLAMING SEA, the: Sea. Sea to the west of the SEA OF LETHEA, cut off from the sea itself by the CARCHEMISHI PENINSULA^(1.). Its name is thought to derive from the nearby KURANOG volcano, whose sporadic lava flows have encroached on the sea's western shores. Its waters are often seen steaming or otherwise appearing to be on fire.

The ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR is said to have wandered its shores during his ITINERARY.

FLAMMA: Soc. Pol. PATRICIAN HOUSE in the SARASTROAN EMPIRE most famous for its involvement in KU'KU NAL WRESTLING, particularly its lose ties with champion wrestler the GREAT GARGANO.

FLAUROS: Rel. Mys. In LYRIDIAN religion and myth, one of the NINE

FLAVESCA: 1. Ind. Pol. City-state in the west of THE SURRACH. It is known for its sulphur and iron mines.

2. Ind. Set. Main city of the eponymous city-state in the west of THE SURRACH. It is known for the huge sulphur open-cast mines that surround it. Its main industry, other than the mining of sulphur, is the production of gunpowder and vulcanised rubber and it is one of the more advanced cities within the Surrach (Pop. c. 90,000).

FLEGA: Set. Coastal settlement in the north west of the TEMPLAR STATES (Pop. c. 7,000).

FLESH-ENGINE: Sup. Tec. A form of SICTHAINEN TECHNA, built around a base-form of a HAGHOUER or a LARVA. The fleshy core of the engine is augmented with armoured extremities, and is typically used as a shock troop in battle, to draw the attention of artillery away from more important targets and sow fear and confusion amongst enemy ranks. They are typically employed by the armies of the HIGH-EMPIRE and are commonly crafted in the ATELIERS of the nation of DURCHAA^(1.).

FLESH MARKET: Com. A common sight in regions known for the manufacture of DROSS. Cadavers, both MORTAL and fauna Are brought to such markets and sold in bulk to processors and other parties.

Generally, they are used in the manufacture of dross, though they may be used in the cloning and fleshgrowth industries, as well as in scientific experiments.

FLESHMILL: Sup. Med. Ind. Manufactories that are dedicated to the creation (often through CLONING) of flesh and other organic matter, including organs, which are used in various industries, including the creation of VAT-BORN creatures.

FLESHROOT: Flo. Waxy-leaved plant with tuberous taproot, common in temperate lands north of THE INNER SEA, the plant is noted for its hardiness and natural resistance to the ATRAMENTA, making it a crop of choice in ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED areas. The taproot can be eaten or distilled into the alcoholic beverage known as Florre. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

FLESHTOWER, the: see KHARTEHOGHUA.

FLESHWEAVE SPIRE, the: also 'Zhaggûffre'. Sup. Str. Tower in the c north east of the ETUAN WASTES, in the south west of ETUA. The tower's mundane origins, now lost to time, are buried beneath a grotesque mass of sinewy lattice that stretches desperately toward the heavens, having long ago replaced the structure's metal and concrete heart. These sinews pulse and tremble as unseen innards susurrate, the sound causing the earth around the tower to tremble.

The region immediately surrounding the spire is shunned, with travellers and nomads alike giving it a wide berth. Those who spend too close around the spire can find their own flesh swelling and taking on a lattice-like texture not unlike that of the spire itself.

The region is categorised as $\underline{\text{HIGHLY DANGEROUS}}$ by the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI}}$ Institute of Atramental Studies.

FLESHWRIGHT: Rnk. One who practices FLESHWRIGHTING.

FLESHWRIGHTING: Med. Surgical and TECHNARCANE practice where bodies – be they MORTAL or fauna – are altered. This can take the form of alteration of ones' body, or the growth of organs and body parts which are then surgically-attached to the recipient.

The practice is most common in Parthis and its dependencies, though it is common in other technologically-advanced cultures such as the KORACHANI EMPIRE, the SOCIALIST REPUBLIC OF ALMAGEST, and the REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO. Farther afield, the insular people of MACELLARIA in the south west of Sammaea are infamous for their warped techniques.

FLIDAIS: Fau. Exotic cervid found in the tundra of northern PERGOST and SABIA. Reaching 7-feet long, the males of which grow great antlers that easily measure 6-feet across, the TURAAN people consider the flidais to be a gift of their gods, sent to ELYDEN to guard their lands. The beasts are hunted in moderation by the venhundurs of those lands during the winter festivals and consumed in symbolic communion with their deities. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

FLIDAN: Set. Coastal city in the c east of LOEGRESS^(1.) (Pop. c. 37,000).

FLOATING COURT, the: Pol. The government of the MALANI HENDECARCHY of STHAMAN, ruled over by the HALFBLOOD queen LYSERITH BATOR. The Floating court is constantly in motion, moving from region to region within its own territories; a great caravan of thousands of princes, diplomats, sycophants, aides, assistants and soldiers, accompanied by vast armies and INDRIK and ANTHER mounts hauling palatial tents. Little is known amongst KORACHANI scholars as to why the court is constantly in motion, though it is postulated that it is a cultural trait shared with none of the other Hendecarchies. The Floating predated the already long rule of Lyserith by many centuries, and likely has roots in the pre-Malani state of LARAM^(1.).

FLOKKA: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the west of the TEMPLAR STATES, guarding the border west with TAL ZHAAN⁽¹⁾. It is home to large barracks as well as a small embassy where diplomats from Tal Zhaan sojourn before moving east to the capital of OBYRYTH.

FLORIAN BARDAS: (B. 2989 – D. 3043) Art. ARTALSCELLIAN artist who became renowned in the early fourth millennium RM for his romanticized landscape art featuring the ruins and cliffs of KHAMID, which are responsible for the common public perception of Khamid as a dead land of ruins and flaming cliffs.

FLORIK: Set. Small fortified city in the c-south east of UKHARTH (Pop. 16.400).

FLOROANA: Geo. Badlands region in the c of the BARRIER LANDS known for its PSEUDO-NECROMANCY.

FLOROANAN BODIES: also 'Floroanan Corpses' and 'Floroanan Skeletons'.

Obj. Soc. Ancient practice observed in what is today the BARRIER LANDS, where ATRAMENTISTS would cover skeletons of the recently deceased in mud, placing FOCI⁽²⁾ in joints and eye sockets, allowing them to be controlled by the SHAPER, with the bodies acting as GOLEMS⁽²⁾ of sorts, though they are restricted to acting under the direct influence of the controlling shaper and are not autonomous like golems.

The bodies are named after the place where their remains have been most commonly encountered by extant explorers, but it transpires that they were common in the entire region of northern SAMMAEA south of the SEA OF ESCHATA in the late FOURTH AGE, and were likely involved in the WAR OF SCOURGING before the culture that employed them died out, leaving remaining bodied inert. Some Atramentists continue the tradition today, though they are misanthropes and loners, and their ways are not studied or known to the people of the Barrier Lands as a whole.

FLOSCULLA: Sup. Rvr. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED river in the c west of the UMBRA SOKHAR. Its source was once in the northern face of the MOLOTH KHAMMOTHUL Mountains though it ran dry in c. 2,300 RM after the Atramentally Tainted area known as FLAESCUS increased in size, crossing the rivers' flow. This caused its waters to grow thick, eventually into a tar-like substance that drive over decades under the sun. The river remains to this day, its bulbous expanse cracked and stretching for close to 200-miles.

FLUMINA: Set. City in the c north west of AHRISHEN. Once located at the mouth of river PELADA, Flumina was a major harbour of old Ahrishen. The city has diminished since the retreat of the SEA OF PYREA left it 360-miles from the coast, though the nearby river has ensured its survival (Pop. c. 18,000).

FOCALA: Rvr. River flowing through the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOMS of PALUS^(1.) (where its sources lie along the southern face of the ASHER Mountains) and ALAMUT (where it flows into lake MASTI, where it eventually becomes part of the river SARA.

FOCALOR: 1. Rvr. Marshland in the north of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of ALAMUT, at the lowest point of the ACHUA wetlands.

2. Set. City in the north of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of ALAMUT, HARÉSHK, along the south western shore of lake MASTI. The city has a large church dedicated to ASHKERON, which is surrounded by a large consecrated garden that overlooks the lake (Pop. c. 50,000).

FOCARUM: 1. Ind. Set. Mining conurbation in the c of KORACHAN, comprised of no fewer than 24 separate settlements, mines and quarries in an area of around 10-square-miles. Many of the mines are now spent and have become dumping grounds for waste, scavs and other wasteland itinerants trouble the region. The main city, also named Focarum, is controlled by the KYONI SANCTIFIED ORDER OF THE INQUISITION (Pop. c. 110,500).

2. Set. Principal city in the eponymous conurbation in c. KORACHAN, controlling most trade and mining operations in the region (Pop. c. 50,000).

FOCUS: 1. Sup. In both FIRMAMENTAL and ATRAMENTAL SHAPING, a state of concentration reached that SHAPIRS must achieve before shaping. Inexperienced shapers must spend time concentrating in this way, while more experienced shapers can do so relatively effortlessly while performing other activities. Focus can be lost if the shaper suffers physical pain and mental damage.

When Focused, a shaper is able to view the $\underline{\text{INTEGUMENT}}$ – a visual manifestation of the $\underline{\text{MATERIA OMNA}}$ that is only visible to shapers or some creatures with an intrinsic ability to do so. It is only once Focused and with the Integument in their sight that a shaper can reach $\underline{\text{ATTUNEMENT}}$.

When Focus is lost, a shaper will find themselves in a state of TWILIGHT where they are momentarily dazed. See Vol IV: the Materia Omna.

2. Plr. 'Foci'. Sup. Obj. Item, usually a few inches across, that is imbued with elements or materials that a SHAPER can easily shape. These objects are used across various shaping cultures to help identify the SPHERES that a neophyte shaper is most attuned to. Though their use may aid young shapers to grasp the intricacies of their art, their continued use can stunt the growth of their shaping abilities, with over-reliance on the foci making it more difficult or even impossible to Shape without them. See Vol IV: the Materia Omna.

FODAN SOMA: (B. 3961 RM) Pol. Current prime minister of ATARAXIA.

FOLCHAN: Rui. Ancient KORACHANI colony in the CARCHEMISHI
PENINSULA^(1.). It was established in c. 1217 RM by Korachani troops attempting to reclaim the peninsula during the WAR FOR THE CRADLE. A new TEMPLE OF THE CRADLE was built there at the same time, which welcomed pilgrims who came from far and wide to see the place where the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR was reborn as an OTHERWORLDER.

The colony was abandoned in 1333 RM following years of attacks from KULIGALA.

*FOLLOW THE ORYX TO FIND RAIN: Soc. Saying common along the tropics in the north and south of WESTERN SAMMAEA, most common in the CITIZENRY OF THALI, the VESPERTINE LEAGUE, BELEGOR, EPHATTA, SYNCHTHONITHA, ADHERA. It is often used as a response to something obvious.

FOLLOWERS OF FELLAQISH, the: see FELLAQISH, FOLLOWERS OF.

FOLLOWERS OF THE PATH: Phil. Org. Those who follow the tenets of the PATH OF THOUGHT in SAUA.

FOLOMUN: Ind. Set. UMBRA mine in the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region of LARSHEN in the c north of VAALK. The mines pump and refine raw umbra, which is pumped to the capital in ANAKARRA (Pop. c. 1,600).

FOMENTATION: Med. Obj. Restorative unguent with faint FIRMAMENTAL properties that is made from the waters of the SERUM SEA and used to heal wounds and scars. It is popular in ENDUI and EASTERN LARISH. Prolonged use is known to cosmetically heal scar tissue, though it can weaken the flesh beneath.

FONESA: Rvr. River in the far south east of KAZZAR^(2.), flowing east for 175-miles from sources in the south of the OZZARUN Mountains and the north of the SILMA Mountains, before reaching the coast at the Sea of Eschata via lake BATA.

FOOD CAMPAIGNS, the: Mil. His. A series of campaigns that took place c. 2100 – 2300 where the STEEL LEGION, under the command of the KORACHANI EMPIRE raided nations outside the then-borders of the empire for food due to food shortages propagated by increased life-spans of people and the propagation of the ATRAMENTA throughout its lands.

FOOTWORM: Fau. Worm, reaching up to 10" long, that lives in the mud of salty wetlands across Sammaea. They are of little value though are eaten in areas where little else abounds, though are notorious parasites burrowing into the skin of any creature that stands still in their wetland homes for long enough. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

 \underline{FOR} : 1. Sea. Narrow strait, 5-miles wide at its narrowest, in the south of the $\underline{SEA\ OF\ FOR}$, linking the sea to the $\underline{SEA\ OF\ AZAM}$.

2. Sea. Muddy-coloured sea between the seas of AHAMA and AZAM, in the south west of THE INNER SEA, between the nations of JURRAS⁽²⁾ and VAALK. The sea is accessible by three straits – the STRAIT OF CYKRANOSH⁽²⁾ in the north west, the STRAIT OF DERKAZ in the south east, and the Strait of For in the south. Its distinctive colour comes from the soils washed into it following climate change that accompanied the lowering of the regions' waters over the last 1,000-years.

 $\overline{FORAUTRANT}$: For. Forest on the island of \overline{HAR} FARRASH in the north of $\overline{SEPAHAUNAT}$.

FORBIDDEN BASTION: Mil. Str. Pol. The winter palace of the DIADON in eastern SAUA, in the lush valley that exists between the mountain of ISINU and KARPAROS.

FORBIDDEN WALL, the: Mil. Str. Rui. Expansive wall lying half-buried in the far east of the Zaharan Desert across the south eastern-most reaches of Shazgin, close to the border with Vala in the c south of Western Meniscea. Though fragmented, it is thought to have measures at least 300-miles long when constructed.

It is of a singular black substance, largely weathered and alien in design. Clearly ancient, it is flanked on its northern side by the remnants of a petrified forest.

FORCED MARRIAGE: Soc. A practice where one or more parties are married against their will. Arranged marriages are common in tribal and feudal societies where relations between families are seen as more important than the desires of the individuals involved. It is also practiced between PATRICIAN HOUSES seeking to solidify alliances, and more often than not the opinions and desires of the two young heirs being forced into the arrangement will have no say in the matter.

Though it is impossible to compare a forced marriage amongst nobility with slaving away in a mine for 60-hours a week, the act is still considered as being slavery, with the term conjugal slavery being commonly used. Following the marriage, the bride can look forward to a life of isolation, her role being that of bearing children to continue the house bloodline, and little else.

The practice is most common in the SECULAR REPUBLIC OF PARTHIS, and the HARÉSHK, though it is relatively common amongst the Patrician Houses of the KORACHANI EMPIRE.

FORDONEA: Set. Small city in the south of OPHIUSSA. The city is renowned for its vast fields of flowers and for its perfumeries, many of which operate from rural manufactories and farmsteads outside the city proper (Pop. c. 18,000).

FOREON: Sup. Rnk. Within the art of FIRMAMENTISM a SPHERE whose SHAPERS are adept at exerting force and pressure through thought alone. An uncommon sphere, most practitioners are itinerants who wander the isles of the BROKEN LANDS searching for the ruins of the Seminary of Foreons, which was once a centre of learning for those of their ilk. Foreons are most common in TZALLRACH, where they are influential public figures, comparable to the master architects of other cultures, their abilities used in the aid of public projects. Where available, they are used in warfare to great effect. See Vol IV: Spheres and types of Shaping.

FOREST OF CHAOS: Sup. For. Grotesque forest in the south east of KHARKHARADONTIS, north of lake SARIS. It is noted for its fleshy trees, with whip-like leaves that writhe about, oozing a sickly-smelling sap that attracts animals to their deaths.

The region is categorised as a MODERATE THREAT by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES, though the forest itself is particularly dangerous to travellers.

 $\underline{FOREST\ CRUSADES}\text{: see}\ \underline{FOREST\ WARS,\ THE}.$

FOREST OF FLESH: see CTAAGRU.

FOREST KINGDOMS, the: Pol. Common term used for the collective HENDECARCHIES of MALAN. Though referred to as kingdoms, many of the eleven Hendecarchies have invariably been ruled by different forms of governments at different times, including republics and even autocracies – for instance, AONIA while under the rule of RAMATAR KAN. In the present age, most Hendecarchies are ruled by a form of absolutist government, such as an elected or hereditary monarchy.

FOREST OF PSALMS: Rel. For. Holy forest in the c north west of KORACHAN, known for its many 'LIVING PSALMS' – oak and willow trees with psalms from the BOOK OF RACHANAEL carved into their bark. The forest is a major producer of ink, which is made from tree galls (small growths that appear on the trunks of trees). This ink is used in the writing of CATHADESMS across the INNER SEA REGION.

The forest is protected at all times by the militant arm of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, and there are harsh punishments for those caught harming its trees or disrupting the gall cultivation in any way.

FOREST OF REVERIES: Rel. For. An ancient spiritually-important forest in the c west of SAUA, cossetted by the ORCAMMOR Mountains in the west and MT. MERA in the east.

FOREST WARS, the: also 'Forest Crusades' Rel. His. CRUSADES undertaken by the KORACHANIEMPIRE against THE OLD FOREST, started in 1485 RM in ALMAGEST. The crusades reached their peak around 2200 RM with the FIVEFOLD SIEGE before losing momentum and dying out in c. 2800 RM. The ARCHPATRICIANS of the northern Korachani empire were responsible for the Wars, at the heart of which was the POTENTATE-Domnitor of VARR; WALISOR, BREAKER OF TREES.

The crusades of the Forest Wars petered out towards the end of the third millennium RM due to dwindling resources and funds.

FORGOTTEN DOMAINS, the: Geo. Region in the south east of NORTHERN SAMMAEA, to the south east of KHARKHARADONTIS, west of the FLAMING SEA. It is a generic term of KORACHANI origin used to denote treacherous lands soe 2,500-miles south east of the BLACK FOUNTAIN that remain largely unexplored to this day. The KORACHANI UNDERTAKING that made landfall in HADDURATH in 1262 RM was funded primarily to explore the region following rumours of great resources and riches waiting to be found, but little of value was found.

Rumours abound to this day of the chaotic nature of the region and the mockeries that are made of physical laws there. It beckons many explorers, who go there in search of romantic adventure, yet few if any emerge alive, and those that do are broken by their experiences there.

FORGOTTEN GODS, TEMPLE OF THE: also 'Panthea'. Rel. Str. Temple in the c of TETHYSIA, north of the PERIEDAS Mountain, erected in 3636 RM, dedicated to the largely forgotten pantheon of Tethysian deities. The temple is sacred to those who still believe in the divinity of the forgotten gods, and is heavily protected by templars of their faith.

FORGOTTEN ONES, the: Mys. His. Entities from ELYDEN'S cosmogony, rarely mentioned in present-day texts. What is known of them is mostly from legends and oral lore that has survived in some form from ancient times, many of which bear many similarities to the story of the MESOCHTHONS. Some KORACHANI folklore remembers them as the MES YAMMANA, DEMITHO SHOSHATHANI, NEGADHAISH ALLAI, and the LHAMACTHOI, amongst others.

They are mentioned in passing in certain versions of the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN, where they are referenced in the passage regarding the PRISON CARCERI, which was created by the DEMIURGE VORROPOHAIAH at the behest of THE SHAPER as a prison for them, though the fragmentary nature of the texts has led the passage to be labelled as apocryphal and unreliable by most scholars.

Lost legends label them as slothful beings, reduced to a catatonic state by their torpor and imprisonment by The Shaper. The dreams of their aeons-long sleep seep across the land under which they repose, infecting the landscape as though gripped by the ATRAMENTA.

FORGOTTEN SHRINE, the: Rel. His. Ancient temple ruins in the PERQHUTA region in the east of the HENDECARCHY of HATON, in c north of MALAN, overlooking the GULF OF ELRI. It takes the form of a large temple complex and dates back to c. –1800 RM, and was likely built by descendants of the NAHORITES. It survived the FADING relatively intact, remaining an impressive ruin to this day.

The ruins surround a once-sacred pool, with a destroyed temple at their centre. Today very few people know of the area save hunters, and they know little of its ancient history. The LADY AEGIS is known to have come here at least once, in c. 2075 RM; where she meditated for seven days and nights before finally uniting the FOREST KINGDOMS.

FORGOTTEN, the: Mor. One of the original Two-and-Twenty MORTAL PEOPLES, and the children of the DEMIURGE ABUFIHAMAT (later known as BAPHOMET). Once a prosperous civilisation, they eventually became oppressed to the point of desperation by Abufihamat. A few amongst them began to secretly worship a corruption of Abufihamat that they named Baphomet, whose tenets espoused wanton excess, lust, and greed – all things they wanted under the yoke of Abufihamat.

These heretics were persecuted and slain by the true followers of Abufihamat, though by then the cults' roots had set in deep and its tenets slowly spread across ELYDEN, bypassing borders.

Abufihamat was punished alongside the rest of the DEMIURGES for their hubris and fell from grace, greatly weakened. That, coupled with a tribe that eventually abandoned them for the blameless excesses offered by Baphomet, destroyed Abufihamat, who was replaced by the upstart false idol Baphomet.

Baphomet ignored its children and instead sought the embrace of alien tribes, who it bribed with gold and fecund capriform idols. Growing weak and sickly from their excesses, the children of Abufihamat were allowed to dwindle, surviving only in small numbers that scattered across Elyden in bitterness to be forgotten.

The handful of Baphomet's true descendants that remain are now warped by millennia of bitterness into strange alien beings, with lanky bodies, long digitigrade limbs, and elongated faces with equine and insect features. They live on the fringes of society, in places shunned by civilisation – marshes, wastelands, corrupted places, and barren lands far from the gaze of other mortals, and especially HUMANS, who they utterly hate.

Known only as the Forgotten, they remain now as simple huntergatherers, sullen, aloof and xenophobic, living in large communal tents, as they once did under the auspices of Abufihamat. From the few historical interactions other mortals have had with the forgotten, it is believed that they have difficulty in perceiving detail, including writing and mortal faces, which leads to them having difficulty in distinguishing different people from one another. Their culture has adapted to this, and individuals make use of tattoos and scarification to make them look more unique. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life: Sicthain.

FORII: Lak. Lake in the far east of PNESSA, along the course of the river YAGNOTH PHTHAN.

FORIS: Lake in the c west of the AMMESH, along the course of the river ANTEVALLA.

FORSAKEN MOUNTAINS, the: see KARARTA.

FORCAS: 1. Geo. Island off the south east-coast of ALTHA (2.).

2. Mil. Str. major fortress on the south of the above island^(1.), guarding the south of ALTHA and the entrance into the BAY OF IDABESS^(1.).

FOREST OF PEARLS: Int. Sup. For. Tropical forest dominating the south of TAES, in the south east of MENISCEA that is named for the SOULSTONES that are embedded in the trunks of its trees. It is unknown whether this is a natural occurrence or if they were placed there intentionally in the ancient past, but regardless, the soulstones have an aura that is palpable to SHAPERS. The soulstones are largely ignored due to cultural and religious reasons, though some scattered attempts have been made to profit off them over the years, largely by foreign powers.

FORT DALEDI: see DALEDI, FORT.

FORT INVERGA: Mil. Str. Stronghold of the WITCH-KNIGHTS in the south west of the HENDECARCHY of CHLORIS in the south of MALAN. It is a major fortress, situated close to the cost, not far from the delta of the river SIELL NA, and with access to the sea. It is home to recruiters and champions alike, who launch ships across the DARK SEA REGION to search for new recruits and warriors to join their cause against the predations of the KORACHANI EMPIRE.

FORTRESS OF DERDON: Rui. Arc. Ancient sprawling defensive lines in the c north of ANUBIA. It dates back to the FOURTH AGE, when it was fought over during the WAR OF SCOURGING. It is mostly ruined today, buried and crumbling the north of the MOLACHARI DESERT.

FORTRESS OF ESHEGDA: Rui. Ancient basaltic ruin in the north of the island of CAMARA in the CORAL BARONIES. It is considered the paragon example of the basaltic ruins that pepper the Baronies and FALLAROUR off the south western coast of SAMMAEA, being the largest and best-preserved example. The purpose of these structures, which are misidentified as fortresses, is unknown, as is their age, though they are believed to date back to the THIRD AGE. Many, including Eshegda, include expansive catacombs and crypts, which in many cases are caved in, their secrets as yet unexplored.

FORTRESS OF THE GODS: Mil. Str. Citadel in the west of SAUA, situated along the lowest foothills of the western-facing KOKORO Mountain, overlooking the plains of AHRISHEN and the region of KARROQ, and the only route along the GREAT ROAD to link Saua and Ahrishen.

FORTRESS OF THE NEW EMPIRE: Mil. Str. His. An ancient castle in the north east of AZAZEM restored and appropriated by an unknown party (thought to be one of THE SEVEN, or an influential patrician), and used to train the children of powerful patricians, where they are taught imperialistic-skewed histories and propaganda in the hopes of strengthening the empire's future. The school was founded in 3966 and has trained many who went on to become powerful generals, INQUISITORS, and politicians.

FORUM OF THE DEMIURGES: Int. His. Rui. Leg. Str. Ancient THIRD AGE forum thought to be in the far west of the present-day wastes of KHARKHARADONTIS. It was monolithic in size, comprising 22 individual vestibules that surrounded a truly gigantic domed hall. So large was the structure that various accounts of it claim that clouds would form within it at times, which would, at times when the forum was filled with MORTALS, even rain.

Its true purpose is now unknown, though both its name and the nature of its geometry indicate that it might have been used by all of the mortal peoples, or was perhaps intended as a memorial or cenotaph to honour the DEMIURGES of old. Its exact location is unknown, and the few large-scale expeditions mounted to find it have thus far been unsuccessful.

Though some believe that the name implies the structure was constructed by an indeterminate number of Demiurges, most now believe the name was used as a way of showing the monumental undertaking behind its mortal construction.

The forum is considered by many to be one of the WONDERS OF THE ANCIENT WORLD.

FORUM OF THE SPHINX: Pol. Str. Large forum in the city of HETEPHEROPOLIS in VENTHIR. It is made of bonded clay bricks and mortar, and is noted for its domed ceilings and the thickness of its walls, which give the impression of it being subterranean and hewn from the living earth.

Dating to c. 200 RM it has been added to continuously over the millennia and is now a labyrinthine expanse, with many secret rooms and passages that are used by different people and it is unlikely that every single passage and secret door is known.

FOSET: Set. Coastal settlement in the west of METHUMN, in the HENAKARAIAN peninsula, just south of the city of HEZAZ^(2.). Its main industry is agriculture, most of which is shipped across the Bay of Hezaz^(1.) to feed the city's burgeoning population (Pop. c. 8,000).

FOSSAL: Set. Coastal city in the north west of the VESPERTINE LEAGUE. The city's leaders are known to foster an environment favourable to the arts, and its artisans and craftspeople are renowned, with the art they produce finding its way across the League (Pop. c. 54,000).

FOSSARI: Set. Major city in the east of AZAZEM, renowned for its vast necropolises, many of which supposedly date to before the time of the KORACHANI EMPIRE'S influence in the region. Over the centuries, the city has slowly overflowed into the necropolis that surrounded the ancient city, until the two became difficult to distinguish from one another. This has resulted in oddities such as administrative buildings with the mummified remains of their former clerks interred in niches along their hallways; and palaces converted from ancient sepulchres, amonest others.

Today it is a major industrial centre, with disparate manufactories, many of which have been built over ancient crypts, or which have otherwise incorporated them into their construction. Merchants travelling the Red Route, which passes through the city, buy many of the items produced, selling them further along their travels, spreading them across the INNER SEA REGION (Pop. c. 234,000).

FOTHWYN: Set. Fortified city in the south of KOMMEA, close to the coast, and overlooking the BAY OF BELENUS (Pop. c. 41,000).

FOULA: Rvr. River in the west of GIBEAH flowing north west for 245-miles from sources in the ZOIQUAGO Mountains before reaching its parent, the river KHEBOU at the city of KHUDEA, before reaching the coast at the BAY OF KHATOQ.

FOUNA: Geo. Plains dominating the c of RAONGEN⁽²⁾, comprising grasslands, shrubland and sparse forests.

FOUNTAIN OF VOL, the: also 'Vol'. Str. Fountain in ACTANORS, built over a natural spring in c. –100 RM, and became famed for never running dry. A local legend emerged from this fact, claiming that Actanors (later Ethand) would be safe, as long as its waters flowed.

In 2942 RM the waters of Vol ran dry, and many foresaw the end of Actanors and its culture. Confirming this belief, less than a year later, the capital was moved to the city of Ethand, and the city of Actanors was allowed to dwindle, marking a cultural transition, and what many truly believe was the transition of the empire of Actanors into the KINGDOM OF AETHIOS.

FOUR ANGELS, the: Mil. Common name for four legendary 150-ton cannons employed by the Korachani empire in the defence of its major military areas. They are located in the colony of AMONDOR, the city of KORACHAN, the city of BAAYN, and the city of TAKUH.

FOUR JOURNEYS, the: Mys. In GNOTHI MYSTICISM, a symbolic journey that gnostic monks take during the pursuit of their art, leading them from the four material elements, known as emotions: AIR, EARTH, WATER and ALKAHEST; to the fifth, otherwise known as enlightenment; the BLOOD OF VALA and finally, the DRAGON: True Enlightenment.

FOUR LANCERS, the: Leg. Eschatological myth common in the FOURTH

AGE THYMIEMPIRE. The Four Lancers were symbolic of the four manners in which an empire could fall – corruption, decadence, disease, and barbarism – and were harbingers of the end times. When the empire eventually fell towards the end of the Fourth Age, its people turned to the texts in which the Lancers were featured, with certain political and military figures coming to be associated with them.

The myth largely died with the Thymi empire, though aspects of the Lancers survive in the legends and folktales of various ancestor states such as LIDEA, MHAROKK, and PARAIYA. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

FOUR WIVES, the: also 'the Four Winds'. Rel. Dei. Powers commonly worshipped in Ahrishen as demigods who stand beneath its chief deity, the SKY-LORD. While not corresponding directly with the four generally perceived winds of power (north, south, west, east) the Four Wives do each share traits in common with each of the four cardinal points. Commonly, each of the winds has traits and characteristics and tenets that the people of Ahrishen adhere to. See Vol IV: Gods and Pantheons.

FOURTEEN APOSTLES, the: also 'the Fourteen'. Rel. His. Rnk. The fourteen apostles chosen by the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR during his conquest of the seven nations, which ended with the subjugation of NÁRTHEL in 84 RM. They became the missionaries of the early CHURCHOF THE UNDYING MACHINE and many amongst them would travel across LLACHATUL, SAMMAEA and MENISCEA, spreading Malichar's early teachings. They would later give rise to the orders of ENDOCRINES and EXOCRINES. Alongside the SEVEN CHAMPIONS and the SEVEN-AND-FORTY DISCIPLES, they make up the CHOSEN OF MALICHAR.

FOURTH AGE OF MORTAL LIFE, the: also 'the Fourth Age'. Mys. His. In the mythology and ancient history of ELYDEN, the Fourth of Five ages spanning the mythic history of ELYDEN, as described in the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN. It is characterised by the continued wane and torpor of the DEMIURGES and the fragmentation of the MORTAL PEOPLES, and the continued spread of independent HUMAN cultures and civilisations, no longer tethered by the umbilical of their Demiurge parents.

Warfare between the surviving Demiurges – particularly RACHANAEL and ALLAISHADA, and their respective allies and supporters – dominated this age, and these conflicts escalated into the WAR OF SCOURGING in which many mortal civilisations were destroyed in cataclysmic events, and at the end of which Rachanael was imprisoned in the PIT OF DAEKYN, ending the time of the Demiurges.

Some postulate that a natural calamity hitherto inexperienced on Elyden also contributed to the rapid fall of culture prior to the end of the War of Scourging. The exact nature of this calamity is unknown but the period of Fading between the Fourth and FIFTH AGES saw a rise in sun cults, particularly cults that fear the destructive nature of the sun. Some scholars believe this means the calamity may have been related to the sun.

The period of Fading following the Fourth Age would last until c. -1500 RM, at which point the Fifth – and present – Age was said to have begun. See Vol IV: the Mythologia Elyden.

FOWAR: Sec. Small fortified city in the c north east of KASPIA. Its main industry is cattle-rearing and the manufacturing of hides and leathers, many of which find themselves across the INNER SEA REGION (Pop. c. 13,400).

FRACEDINOUA: Sup. Geo. Atramentally tainted region in the c south west of Romorea^(2.). The earth here is reeks of putrefaction, and is soft and sponge-like, absorbing moisture that by rights should not exist (some have postulated that the moisture in the region is drawn upwards from some deep reservoir.

The region is categorised as a $\underline{\text{MODERATE THREAT}}$ by the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI}}$ $\underline{\text{INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES}}$.

FRANDA: 1. Set. Fortified coastal city in the west of the AMMASHI FREE-ISLES, on the island of SAMMALIM. Its main industry is the cultivation of cotton and grains (Pop. c. 48,000).

2. Set. Settlement and surrounding villages in the north west of KEPHUAAN, situated along the north eastern edge of the SHAYANDI delta. Its main industry is agriculture (Pop. c. 6,000).

FRASHAH: Set. Settlement in the north of ZHARIAH⁽²⁾ (Pop. c. 6,750).

FRATERNAL ORDERS OF THE INQUISITION, the: see SANCTIFIED INQUISITION OF THE KORACHANI EMPIRE.

FREE-CITY OF SIRIPHAS: see SIRIPHAS.

FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS: See PELASGOS, FREE-ISLES OF.

FREE COMPANION: Rnk. Org. Mar. Name of most common mercenaries operating within the WHITE LEAGUE, often abbreviated to simply 'companion'.

FREEMAN: 1. Soc. In the KORACHANI EMPIRE, a HELOT who buys their way out of indentured servitude. Freemen make up a lower-middle class in imperial settlements, and commonly fulfil the role of tradesmen, business-owners and low-key merchants and traders.

2. Rnk. In KHURAUR, the ruler caste descended from the original STEEL LEGIONNAIRE rulers.

FREESTONE: Ele. A type of igneous rock known for its lack of impurities or imperfections. Mythologists claim that freestones are the untainted remnants of the DEMIURGE'S very first creations, though geologists claim they are merely relatively recently recent igneous formations, which explains their relative lack of impurities.

In its most common form freestone is semi-translucent, appearing as a dark glass that barely allows any light through when held to the sun. It can be worked into angled stones that are valued (more for the legend surrounding them than true value) as a raw material for art and architecture. The GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER are renowned for their freestone reserves.

FREKOST: Set. City in the c of KASPIA, along the course of the river VANDAHAR (Pop. c. 41,000).

FREMEN: Soc. Rnk. A caste apart from others in the free land of Khuraur, descended from the Legionnaires that liberated the city from imperial occupation following the signing of the Covenant of Khuraur in 3478 RM. Their history lies with the defection of the regiment of the Steel Legion known as the 'Anvil of Steel', who occupied Khuraur in 3103 RM and later led its people in war known as the BLOOD HETERODOXIES, freeing much land in eastern Tartak and western Karakhas. Bred from the flesh of the occupying Legionnaires, the first fremen were borne from Steel Wombs in c. 3200 RM; a caste apart from their forefathers, able to breed true with humans. The first Vat-Born generation was carefully nurtured, cultivated in the nuances of governance and warfare. For them were selected the healthiest local women, with whom they created the first truly fremen generation, whose descendants would continue to be the rulers of Khuraur, even after its vassalage to Parthis in 3752 RM.

FRITH: Set. Fortified coastal city in the north west of the Templar States. Its main industry is fishing (Pop. c. 40,000).

FROST KING, the: (D. 3222 RM) Oth. Pol. OTHERWORLDLY ruler of the extinct kingdom of SAKKHRIA. His death propagated the collapse of the kingdom, though his name would be remembered as the chief deity of the FROSTBLOOD pantheon, which is worshipped in SABIA (successor to Sakkhria) to this day.

FROSTBLOOD, the: Rel. Dei. The religion and main pantheon of gods in SABIA, though the faith is also found in western KASPIA and PERGOST in smaller numbers. The religion is polytheistic, with each region, city and/or principality taking one deity as its patron, while also observing other gods within the pantheon. Together the gods dwell in what is known as the Halls of the Frost King (a colloquialism for the OTHERWORLD).

The FROST KING is the head of the pantheon; an ascended OTHERWORLDER who once lived as a living god, uniting the various states together into the kingdom of SAKKHRIA before his final death in 3222 RM propagated a civil war that left the land fractures, with no strong claimant to the throne. The religion remained strong amongst the varied people who claimed the ruin of Sakkhria, and the religion would take on a different aspect in each region.

When the kingdom of Sabia first appeared in 3493 RM, it inherited dozens of different versions of the Frostblood, which remain today – each major city and region has its own version of the pantheon, though by c. 3700 RM these had consolidated into the same pantheon we know today, with each city having its own patron and version of its sagas.

Temples and churches of the Frostblood are known for their steep thatched roofs, and even larger structures such as the equivalent of cathedrals have thatched roofs. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

FROSTMARSHAL: also 'Frostmaiden'. Mil. Pol. In SABIA, twelve warlords, each of which is in command of a different region. Each frostmarshal has a different role and his/her troops usually lean towards different battlefield roles. In times of total war, the VITYAZ-THANE unites the frostmarshals under his banner.

FRUHIA: Set. Small fortified coastal city in the south east of OTINTH. Like most Otinthian settlements, little is known about it due to the nations' insular nature (Pop. unknown).

FUDANA: Set. Fortified settlement in the south of NAARETH, along the course of the river ABASHERA. It is a major logging centre (Pop. c. 12,800).

FUGUE: Oth. In the KORACHANI EMPIRE, a name for OTHERWORLDERS with no memory of their previous live, the purpose behind their reincarnation lost. They wander ELYDEN, lost shells, aimless, yearning for insight into their reason for being. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life

FULCAR'S NEEDLE: Geo. Igneous rock formation in the west of ALMAGEST, 20-miles north east of the CITY OF ALMAGEST, The needle has a glass-like sheen, not unlike polished obsidian, and rises for close to 100-ft., making it an important navigational landmark.

FULGOR NOMOS: His. Sup. Org. Ancient FIRMAMENTAL organisation once active in the FAR HEMISPHERE, believed to have served as the governing body of all FIRMAMENTISTS. It faltered late in the FOURTH AGE, possibly under the chaos of the WAR OF SCOURGING, though the later FIFTH AGE authority that rules from the MINARET OF LIGHT has elements that were likely salvaged from its predecessor's tenets.

Despite its apparent ubiquity in the Fourth Age, little is known of the groups' hierarchy and beliefs, though ruins belonging to the group can be found today in INNER CHAUTULA, south western VECTIS, south eastern VALA, and northern IMELKOT.

FULGURA HAIN: (B. 3792 RM). Per. Pol. The present EMPEROR-FACTOTUM of RAONGEN^(2.), who ascended the throne in 3922 RM following the death of his mother Cordjin II. Like most Emperor-Factotums of Raongen and the ancient kings before them, Fulgura Hain is able to prolong his life through the best technarcane and magickal innovations. He is paranoid, rarely, if ever, leaving his quarters, opting instead to act via SHAPER proxies who communicate with him TELEPATHICALLY.

FULUGRANT GLASSLANDS: Geo. Plains in the c of KHARKHARADONTIS, in the south east of the DUNE SEA, where the dunes are thinner and the ground beneath them is fused into mushroom shaped glass pillars from millennia of Atramental lightning-strikes, which are increasingly common the closer to the BLACK FOUNTAIN one gets from this region.

FULUINA: Set. Small city in the south of TATAR, along the southern shore of lake PITIA. It has a large harbour and controls a fleet of river boats that trade along the TIAGAME and DIELEGAME rivers (Pop. c. 14,000).

FULIGIA: also 'POlain of Ashes'. Geo. Area of moraine in the north east of PELASGOS characterised by centuries-old sooty deposits known as CHOLE, from the many manufactories that once dominated the region, most now lie disused, slowly sinking in the soft earth.

FULIGINA: Set. City in the region of SHAAT LOTHA in the c north of THE SURRACH. Its buildings are made from dark stone, giving it a sooty appearance (Pop. c. 38,000).

FULLERE: Set. Small city in the south of CISNERIA (Pop. c. 12,000).

FULMIN: Set. Town in the c of TZALLRACH, along the course of the river BAELLI. It is a stop along the GREAT ROAD trade-route, and offers lodging to merchants and travellers passing through (Pop. c. 20,000).

FUMIFICIA: Set. Small city in the north west of the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT, 40-miles south of the CAPRIZANT Caldera. The city is downwind of prevailing winds from the north and is often covered in smoke from the caldera. Those who can wear masks over their mouths to help against smoke. Those who cannot are prone to coughing and death from prolonged exposure to smoke inhalation is common (Pop. c. 17.300).

FUNERAL CUSTOMS: Soc. Different cultures deal with death in different ways, and many states and people have particular customs. Some transcend borders, either carried by trade or common roots, whereas others are isolated.

Below are some of the more common or interesting funeral customs from across Elyden:

1. KORACHAN: *

2. RAONGEN: Funeral rituals in Raongen are an eerie affair, with mourners employing psychoactive drugs (such as WYRDWORT) and SHAPERS that let them contact the recently dead in the OTHERWORLD. These events are solemn affairs, replete with mourning and the incoherent babbling of those under the effects of wyrdwort.

In ancient times the mourner was sometimes sacrificially killed while in this heightened state of awareness, though the custom is no longer practiced. This was most common in the case of royalty, with the surviving consort being killed as a symbol of loyalty to their spouse.

FUNERARY TOWERS: Rel. Soc. In the mortuary traditions of KORACHAN, an ossuary in the form of a tower, often hundreds of feet high, in which are interred the SKULLS of the dead in niches and family crypts on the inside. The towers are hollow, with many steps and ladders on the inside leading up to the least accessible reaches of the towers.

The towers exist within necropolis complexes that are commonly found in all Korachani settlements of note, and in many cases larger cities will have multiple such-complexes. The towers within a complex are often linked by crypts and tunnels and are maintained and well-guarded against vandalism and theft by CHURCH-funded organisations and the MORTUARY CULT, whose members oversee their overall maintenance.

Korachani funerary customs dictate that the body be reclaimed for use in the manufacture of DROSS. This only leaves the skull of the deceased for the purposes of burial and veneration by surviving family members. For most this means interment in a funerary tower, though those with the means to may have the skull of the deceased decorated – carved, etched, gilded, or covered in filigree or jewellery – and placed in a shrine within a tower or in a private shrine in their home.

Most, however only have the means to inter a skull within a funerary tower, and a short ceremony takes place in the lowest level of the tower around an AGAPE TABLE, where friends and family of the deceased have a feast to celebrate the deceased's life, as the skull – already cleaned and prepared by the Mortuary Cult – is consecrated and the details of the bearer – including their name, date of birth and death and an epithet – are etched onto the skull.

FUNEREAL SODALITIES: Rel. Soc. Org. Independent religious organisation that exists across the INNER SEA REGION in lands where the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE are prevalent.

The Sodalities serve as guilds and unions of sorts to their various members, who form a mortuary cult offering various services including MOURNING for the SPIRITS^(1.) of the recently deceased, SINEATING, and offering DELEGATORY PRAYERS. When mourning, members of the Sodalities wear black robes and conceal their faces behind featureless pewter masks and hoods which lend them a sinister air, causing others to avoid them. Most live solitary lives, and at best keeping the company of other mourners.

The Funereal Sodality works closely with both the Church of the Undying Machine as well as the MORTUARY CULT, though it is not a part of either and survives largely through donations.

FUNGAL FOREST, the: see SOPHAMYK. FUNGUS DEPTHS, the: see JUNCTA. FURAKISH: Geo. Region in the far south east of KHARKHARADONTIS, between the CTUUQ Mountains and the west of ABACARDAT. The region is characterised by hills that descent from the mountains to the east, ranging from desert in the north to savannah in the south, and the various city states and tribes that call it home. The region is characterised by its unique settlements, which are built within natural sinkholes found in the region, with abodes and granaries hewn into the walls, with a communal courtyard uniting them. In the middle of the courtyard is a deep well, used to provide much-needed water for the settlement.

The political status of the region is in a constant state of flux, and varies from unification of the disparate settlements and tribes to full separation, and little contact between then. The death of queen $\underline{\text{MLIRESS}}$ in 3998 RM led to the fracturing of what had for the past decades been a relatively peaceful unification of the tribes. To this day the region remained fractured, and the destruction of the caravanserai of $\underline{\text{CEDANTUQ}}$ in 4000 RM has disrupted trade between the region and Abacardat.

FURAMESE: Ind. Manufactory outside the city of FOSSARI in the c east of AZAZEM.

FURNACE MOHNACRON, the: His. Ind. Rui. Fossilised furnace in the northern expanse of the KHARKHARADONTID desert, 750-miles south of the TARTAKHID border, south of the EGERIAN RIDGE. The furnace is thought to date to the days of the original tribes, and is half buried, encased in stone, its inner workings and archaic machinery immovable.

FURFUR: 1. Pol. Geo. One of three political territories (known as MANSIONS) in the nation of GREST^(1.) in the west of the island-continent of BROR^(1.). It is the northernmost Mansion of Grest and is its smallest and most industrially-active, with vast ore reserves in its east, along the western foothills of the LAHAED Mountains.

2. Pol. Set. Administrative centre of the eponymous^(1,) MANSION in the north of the nation of GREST^(1,) in the west of the island-continent of BROR^(1,). It is coastal and overlooks the south of the SEA OF RAETUMA, though is protected from open waters by a small peninsula. It is known for the monolithic iron statue of the ARCHDUKE ARA YETZIRAH who rules the city with an iron fist. (Pop. c. 283,000).

FURUD: 1. Dem. 'Furud'. Ntn. Sovereign state in THE SURRACH ruled by the SLEEPING KINGS, catatonic conjoined twins. The region is composed of three primary cities (Furud, HUND & ASDULL) and as many as a dozen small towns.

2. Pol. Set. Capital city of the eponymous region and seat of the SLEEPING KINGS. It is one of the more forward-thinking cities in THE SURRACH and is known for its metallurgy and manufactories (Pop. c. 80,000).

FURUQ: Set. Settlement in the south of the JAHADAT STATES, under the control of the city of LOQTUSH (Pop. c. 7,000).

FUSILIER: Mil. Rnk. Long-ranged POWDERGUNNERS common in the military forces across the INNER SEA REGION. The tradition stemmed from the IANISAAR culture of the ARID TRIPTYCH and became entwined with the rising popularity of powderguns around c. 1000 RM. Fusiliers are most commonly highly-trained nobility with adequate equipment based on the needs of the battle or campaign.

FUSSAK: Ind. Ser. Gold mines in the c of IZABAL⁽¹⁾. The mines have a relatively low yield and are controlled by the government (Pop. c. 15,000).

FUZINI: Set. City in the c north west of the TEMPLAR STATES (Pop. c. 37,800).

FYLODOR: Geo. Dead region in the c north of the HENDECARCHY of NHORA, in the north east of MALAN. The land here is scorched as though scarred by some ancient calamity; the rock fused together like dark glass. Bereft of soil, the land here is incapable of supporting life and is covered in a thick blanket of black ooze, with vine-like tendrils holding it all together over the glass-like surface.

FYNDOUR: Rvr. River in the north of LOEGRESS⁽¹⁾ flowing east for 230miles from sources in the VOULLOR Mountains before meeting its parent, the river DRUITHAL. The river flows through the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED land of AEHKAUROLOR for about 15-miles of its course, though this is has little effect on the water's purity.

FYTAS: 1. Lak. Lake in the north of PELASGOS, in the CALDERAN Mountains along the course of the river ISSOS.

2. Set. Settlement in imperial PELASGOS, noted for its sulphur mines (Pop. c. 2,000).

G

G'DARHU: Rui. Neolithic niches built into the base of the CHTHAEITICATH mesa in the c north of N'RAKH.

G'GHARSHANS: Eth. Soc. Nihilistic inhabitants of the KALISANGELID ISLES. They are the lesser descendants of a mighty FOURTH AGE culture of scholars and mystics, who were a homogenised people following millennia of ancient unions between various MORTAL people and HALFBLOODS. They are said to have been wise beyond measure, becoming powerful and rich, eventually descending into nihilism and epicureanism, and were known as the G'gharshans by the dawn of the FIFTH AGE.

Today they are an insular sparse people, ruling over dead demesnes from mighty fortresses, where they waste away their unimaginable accumulated wealth on depravities and other sins unimaginable by other people. Their small population has left them deformed and, in many cases, mentally stunted or twisted. Today they pay hefty dowries to neighbouring demesnes to spread their bloodlines, which they still consider to be superior to those of outsiders, who they shun as ignorant plebs who are only of use as slaves and playthings.

G-P SCALE: see GEKN-PRAQ SCALE.

- GAAN: 1. Sea. North eastern part of the SEA OF BYSSOS, forming the waters between the archipelago of Gaan and the STRAIT OF GATH. Its waters are largely controlled by the city-state of Gaan, after which it is named.
 - 2. Set. Large city-state ruled by the HALFBLOOD tyrant HASHIM. It is situated on an archipelago just south of the ATHORHU region in PARTHIS, that in 3999 RM achieved independence from Parthis under the leadership of Hashim. It has dominated trade through the SEA OF BYSSOS, and its fleet has clashed with that of GATH on many occasions for control of the entrance into Byssos, though it now lies landlocked, with the portcity of ADAG now linking it to the sea (Pop. c. 350,000).
 - 2. Set. City-state in the region of $\underline{ERRATAZ}$ in the desert of $\underline{THAMAAZ}$, in the south of \underline{THE} SurracH. It was once a coastal settlement though following the withdrawal of $\underline{ELYDEN'S}$ seas, became landlocked in c. 3100 RM.

The city is renowned for its bleeding monolith, around which it is built, and is regarded by locals as a deity (Pop. c. 80,000).

- GAARAIR: Sea. Bay in the east of KAZZAR, bordered to the north west by the ODU Mountains, the south west by the Ozzarun Mountains, and the east by the ENGER peninsula.
- GAAZUSH: Rvr. River in the south east of ELEKHID flowing east for 172-miles from sources in the GOROGUOR Mountains before meeting its parent, the river GRELLOR. The fork where the two rivers meet is occupied by the city of EBROVAMM.
- GABAL GARAP: Mar. Mixed martial art common in MENISCEA that originated in the early FIFTH AGE in the extant city of GISHHAR. It was localised around the SEA OF LARISH^(1.) area for many years, though it had started to spread by c. 1200 RM until by c. 1800 RM it had become relatively common across Meniscea.

It combines elements of dance and acrobatics, and since c. 2200 RM a popular variant also trains followers in the use of concealed blades, though this is prohibited in most urban areas. It is practiced by many merchants and their bodyguards, as well as sailors, while those who frequently travel alone are often encouraged to learn it.

GACETEN: Set. Fortified near-costal settlement on the island of ALPHITOMATIA, off the eastern coast of SABAISA. It overlooks coastal cliffs and has withstood centuries of coastal storms and is known for its skilled shipwrights, who build swift, sturdy vessels favoured by Sabaisan traders. Its markets bustle with the exchange of rare spices and silks, and the shimmering blue pearls harvested from below the cliffs – a prized commodity across the Porphyri Peninsula.

Its people are marked by faintly blue-tinged skin, a relic of old IROTHAN heritage (Pop. c. 7,000).

GAD: Set. Fortified city in the c-south east of the tribe of ESSENIA, in the c south west of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER.

GADAGHATI: Set. City in the c of the HENDECARCHY of ATALLUA in the south east of MALAN. (Pop. c. 44,000).

GADDI: Eth. People common in the jungles of WESTERN SAMMAEA, including the WOLD. Their homeland is known for its multitude of small lakes, many of which are obscured beneath sprawling canopies from surrounding trees. The lakes form the basis of their mythology, with gods and demigods based on the shape and character of the lakes.

GAEAL: Myt. His. In the mythology of ELYDEN, the son of the SCION ERES, himself son of the DEMIURGE ARIMASPI. Gaeal would, through various corruptions, become a popular earth-spirit and deity to various cultures through the FOURTH and early FIFTH AGES.

Early Fifth Age depictions of him were eventually corrupted into a SAINT of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE during the early decades of KORACHANI expansion. See Vol IV: Scions.

- GAEFANG: Geo. Mountain-range in the south east of ALMAGEST, around 525-miles long. The range is noteworthy for its relative lack of physical corruption and the granite quarries that dot its foothills. The range is reorganizable by its three wide peaks, from which its name is derived.
- GAELLNYN: Lan. Language spoken in LOEGRESS^(1,), which emerged from the earlier language of PRAETTANIAN following the unification of its descendent states by the warlord TORRVAN in 2588 RM. It was originally a dialect of Praettanian spoken in GLYNNED^(2,), Torrvan's home state, but by c. 2750 RM it had become the only major language spoken in the region, remaining so to this day. See Vol II: Languages.
- GAEOS: Ind. Set. SKAROSIAN ADAMANTINE mining settlement in the region of ADAMATI, north of the STRAIT OF SKAROS (Pop. c. 2.000).
- GÂER KHONA: Set. Wealthy free city in the c of BROR^(1.), between the south of ISESETH and the north of SHAUATAS, dominating trade in the region and serving as a crossroad of culture. It guards the \underline{ADALKH} pass that leads east through the \underline{LAHAED} Mountains (Pop. c. 410,000).

GAESHA: Set. Coastal settlement in the south west of IO (Pop. c. 8,000).

GAETARA: Dem. 'Gaetaran'. His. Ntn. Ill-fated late FOURTH AGE culture that emerged from the ruin of LAET, in what is thought to be south of present-day EREBETH. It is thought to have been destroyed by events of the WAR OF SCOURGING. See Vol III: Extinct States.

GAETARISH: His. Lan. Language of the FOURTH AGE Gaetaran people of northern SAMMAEA. The language is thought to be the predecessor of present-day SAVIUDI, via CHEGRINTISH. See Vol II: Languages.

GALADRAT: Soc. Org. One of the 17 GRAND HOUSES of the NACRE LEAGUE. The House was originally based in MAENMIST though fled the nation in 3959 RM mere months before the nation closed its borders to outside travel and trade, effectively making the House dispossessed. In the years following the closing off of Maenmist and the war that followed (now known as the NACRE WAR), the House has spread across the NACRE ROAD and focuses on sea trade, House Galadrat was partially responsible for the League establishing the new short sea route in the SEA OF AMMASH^(2.) in response to Maenmisti actions. As a result, the House has a large presence in the cities of CYNDARA in HABOT and BAVVERA in NORTHERN SIMBARA.

GAIAT: Set. Basin in the c north west of NAARETH, between the west of the IROTHA and the north of the DYLPHIRA Mountains. It is home to tarragons and other wild creatures, and is largely uninhabited.

GAIJA: Set. Coastal settlement in the far south west of RAONGEN⁽²⁾, overlooking the BAY OF ORAT. Its main industry is agriculture and fishing, with most of its produce going towards the upkeep of the capital (Pop. c. 8,000).

GAIONGN: Set. Major coastal city on the island of IZEAMAR, in the far east of the PANTHEON ISLES (Pop. c. 103,000).

GALABRIA: 1. Dem. 'Galabrian'. His. Ntn. Now-extinct nation dating from the early FIFTH AGE between c. -1500 - 250 RM in what are now CALBIA, KOMMEA, HALEDONIA, and eastern LOEGRESS^(1.). It was powerful during its time, though was eventually destroyed by its own excesses and negligence.

King SCYLAX was a major cultural legend of Galabria, exiled by his upstart brother after abdicating. He found the blade TARTARUCH in c. - 100 RM and won back his home, where he ruled until his death in -38 RM. The blade was lost after Galabria fragmented, its people eventually repopulating what later became the region of PRAETTANIA, out of which would emerge Haledonia, Kommea and Loegress.

Many of its myths and legends were appropriated by its descendent states, and remain in corrupted form to this day. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

2. Set. City in HALEDONIA, overlooking the inland sea of UDANILLA. The city is built on the ruins of a large Galabrian city, its shell forming the backbone of the extant city of Galabria, whose harbours and docks are the pride of Haledonia (Pop. c. 170,000).

GALAMSHAM: Set. Once-capital of PORPHYR, in the east of its territories. It was once coastal, though the coastline has since left it behind, and it lost favour following a change in regime after the intervention of the PRAEDICATE TELEANYARA APEXEIDE, and the capital was moved to BETTYL.

Galamsham has since become a major city to the faith of NYARALA, and is a centre of the faith in the east of Porphyr. It is also a major producer of ARKS OF PORPHYR, and the largest such ships are constructed there, and left to rot under the harsh suns of the region on a flat plateau to the west of the city. The city is very secretive and selective of those it allows within its walls, and foreigners are denied entry completely (Pop. unknown).

GALAN: Set. Settlement in the south west of AETHIOS, in the region of ATHAPEN. The settlement is known for its MONITOR rearers, who train monitors used by military forces that patrol the western border with the UMBRA SOKHAR (Pop. c. 8,000).

GALARIR: Sect. Small city in the c of TATAR. Its main industry is the mining of fine granite, which is used in construction across the nation (Pop. c. 16,000).

GALATA: Lak. Lake in the far north west of AHRISHEN, forming a border with RHAMIA and THE OLD FOREST. The lake is fed by various river with sources in the KARAEHLA Mountains and is itself considered the main source of the river NALESH.

GALATEA: Set. Major city in the north east of RHEA. Legend claims that the city was founded by a peripat SHAPER in c. 700 RM. Centred around a classically-proportioned statue, which some historians claim was once the wife of the shaper, cursed somehow into her current state. The shaper (whose name is now lost) could not bear to leave his wife behind, so began constructing the town around her, ensuring that every door faced towards her.

The inner city remains the same as originally constructed by those early FIRMAMENTISTS and is known for the nuances and fortitude of its architecture. The city has since grown into a wealthy trade-centre, controlling trade in-and-out of the north eastern routes that link Rhea with THETIS.

Between c. 3630 – 3700 RM the city became a hub of the cult of AARU, which has grown to become a major religion in Rhea, though it has not surpassed worship of SAEWAL (Pop. c. 400,000).

GALATIA: also 'Gala'. Sec. Small city in the north east of VAALK, home to AHASUERUS, a renowned EXOCRINE and SET who was believed by his followers to be possessed by the ATRAMENTA. The city was once far larger and coastal, though found itself landlocked in c. 3500 RM, and it has slowly dwindled since then (Pop. c. 14,000).

GALE: Rel. Str. LACHRYMIST monastery in the c-north of THE SURRACH, in the western foothills of the NGHALLEAL Mountains.

GALENDA: Lak. Lake in the east of AHRISHEN forming part of the course of the river SARA.

GALENIC ORDER: Pol. Org. One of the minor SANCTIFIED ORDERS OF THE INQUISITION in the KORACHANI EMPIRE whose agents are focused on the health of its citizens and on keeping pandemics and epidemics in check, mobilising to contain them when they do arise. Whey also ensure that all medical procedures and medicines used within the empire adhere to approved standards set by the Order itself.

It was founded in the city of ALMAGEST in c. 1500 RM to combat the rapid increase in cases of cholera and dysentery that followed the rapid growth of imperial cities as industrialisation became more prevalent. Its LANGUE^(1.) was exiled from Almagest following the WAR OF THE ARTIFEXES, and it soon relocated to SKAROSIA in SKAROS after this, where it remains to this day. The loss of the ILLDISADAI ORDER to SARASTRO following the SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE saw the Galenic Order inherit its roles and tenets in Korachan, absorbing any agents who remained loyal to the empire within its own ranks.

The Order is vital for the smooth running of the empire, though due to its less militant nature it is regarded by The Seven as a minor Order.

GALETE: Mus. Ind. Set. Small coastal city in the west of KORACHAN. It emerged in c. 3300 RM following the retreat of the coastline revealed a dead coral forest which was quarried for its raw materials. The coral was exhausted by c. 3750 RM, leading to the diminishing of the settlement. Its main industry is CAMPANOLOGY, and many of the BELLS used in churches and government edifices in the KORACHANI PENINSULA are made here. (Pop. c. 17,200).

GALETIA: Set. Coastal city in the north west of KHITAI, overlooking the GULF OF VEGATETH (Pop. c. 40,000).

GALIA: Set. Settlement in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of UCHRON, along the BLUE MOUNTAIN. It is part of a trade-route into SAUA (Pop. c. 15,500).

GALIDA: Lake in the c-south east of AHRISHEN, forming one of the sources of the river ARESH^(2.), and leading directly into lake CRENESIA.

GALK: Rvr. River in the north of THE VORANDINE, flowing west for 265-miles from sources in the IAPEGRAN Massif.

GALLATRIS EBUL, FIFTH OF THE ELEVEN: x. Pol. Per. (B. 3877 RM). Fifth of the HENDECARCHS of MALAN and ruler of the HENDECARCHY of MYEIN. Sombre and aloof in character, they enjoy their solitude and work through proxies more than any other Hendecarch, enjoying time in the ARUFON forest, in particular the private woodlands of KOYEE, which are protected by decree.

GALLESH: R_{VT} . River in the east of the emirate of OTHOTEL (1.) in the west of LIMOTH (1.).

GALLIOS: Rvr. Slow-moving river in the south east of the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS, flowing 150-miles east from the foothills of the HELICAR Mountains.

GALLET: Rui. Ancient trade-town and fortress in the south of ERASHA (ERON SOTH, under PARTHIAN rule), and surviving in present-day TRAKIA, to the south of PARTHIS. The town was abandoned following the Parthian subjugation of Erasha in 237 RM.

The ruins of the town served as the foundations of a fortress built by the OPRETIAN people (who, alongside the people of OPHAM, inherited Eron Soth, dividing its lands amongst themselves) in c. 675 RM. The fortress defended the region from the lhaus enclaves that existed in the south. A fortified wall known as the GALLET LINES was constructed along the YOTHSHAMMANEI ESCARPMENT, with Gallet as its centre.

Following the region's defeat against oghur attackers in 729 RM the fortress became a recluse for human refugees though it was eventually taken and destroyed in 731 RM.

GALLET LINES: Mil. Str. Fortified wall some 190-miles long built between 692-7792 RM along the YOTHSHAMMANEI ESCARPMENT in the north west of the DAENED SULRACH in TRAKIA, in the north of SAMMAEA. The wall was constructed by the people of OPRET to defend against the LHAUS enclaves that existed in the south.

Following the fall of the fort GALLET, the walls fell into disuse (the LHAUS enclaves were largely insular and posed no direct threat to the north) and remain to this day, badly eroded and beaten by the harsh winds of the region, reduced to little more than hillocks and concrete mounts.

GALLI: Set. Settlement in the north west of the HENDECARCHY of DERAEIA in the east of MALAN (Pop. c. 6,400).

GALLIA: Ser. Settlement in the far south east of PELASGOS, close to the border with the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS, to the north east of the HELICAR Mountains. It controls the passage of the Red Route from the west and leading to the north with KAVALOIKA (Pop. c. 2,400).

GALLIAN PASS: Geo. Pass between the TEREKION and HELICAR Mountains in PELASGOS.

GALLIMORA: Rvr. River in the north of the TEMPLAR STATES, flowing north east for 460-miles from sources in the THALLEI Mountains before reaching the coast at the BAY OF OMERA (1.). The river's course was around 130-miles shorter in c. 2000 RM, before the shrinking of the Bay of Omera caused the length of its course to increase as the coastline retreated.

GALMAIN: Set. Settlement in the south of NOAVATUR, along the periphery of HA ATH desert (Pop. c. 6,300).

GAMBRAO: Set. Fortified mining settlement in western EREBETH. The city and the entire region are known for their rubies (Pop. c. 4,000).

GAMIA: Set. Settlement in the north west of PELASGOS in the region of CHIREA. It's a producer of food for the larger cities in the region (Pop. c. 1.600).

GAMIGAHUA: Geo. Massif in the c east of THE SURRACH, north of the SALITH desert.

GAMUS: Rvr. Major river in the north of WESTERN SAMMAEA, flowing east and then north east for some 2,000-miles from various sources, before emptying into the GULF OF ESHIRON. It forms a vital part of life in the east of the VESPERTINE LEAGUE, providing water to many settlements and industries.

The river once ran much shorter than it does today, due to the higher sea level of the region, which reached as far west as the east of the VESPERTINE LEAGUE, in what was then known as the BAY OF SABRIYA (1.), which shrank with the waning sea levels, allowing the Gamus to flow farther east. Many farming communities eventually appeared in areas where its mouth once formed, taking advantage of the alluvial deposits left there as the river continues its march towards the expanding coastline

GANANTUR: Geo. Region of sub-tropical scree in the c of SUOR, south of the JHAPARA Mountains and north of the MADHARA Mountains. It is largely uninhabited, though is home to much wildlife.

GANEM KASSAB: Set. Small fortified city in the south of TETHYSIA, along the northern shore of lake RAHAL. It is a centre of trade and serves as a link with LIMOTH^(1.) via the city of LEITH (Pop. c. 17,200).

GANGUA: 1. Geo. Region in the SURRACHI PLAINS in the c of THE SURRACH, famed for the large impact crater in which its capital is built.

2. Sec. Major city in the eponymous region in THE SURRACH. It originated in c. 1000 RM as a mine over the GHAT KHA crater and slowly grew into a prosperous city directly above the mines. The city grew upwards, building high citadels and towers, connected to each other by walkways for ease of access and support. Similarly, its mines led directly down like a taproot, branching outwards to extract as much meteoric iron as possible.

Over time, as the upper reaches of the mines were exhausted, people began moving underground, leading to a class divide – all those concerned with the mining industry, from rich oligarchs to poor workers – moved underground, whereas others, including the metallurgists, remained above ground.

The soil within the crater basin is fertile and covered in farmlands that sustain the city to this day. It is a powerful city-state with a very strong military tradition and metallurgists. Interestingly, there is a powerful, if small religion in the city that worships the meteorite as a deity, which is seen as a chthonic giver-of life – for without the meteorite the city would not exist (Pop. c. 110,000).

GANILLA: Set. Settlement in the c of the HENDECARCHY of HATON in the north of MALAN, in the western face of the JHALOSS Mountains. Its main industry is the mining of jade (Pop. c. 9,500).

GANT: Rvr. River in the nation of OPHAR, in the north of SAMMAEA, flowing north for 175-miles from sources in the far north west of the HOGHSOTHOMON badlands. It is a tributary of the river OPHRA.

GANTDR: Rui. Ancient oghur tomb and temple, carved into the northern face of the south eastern—most reaches of the NGHALLEAL Mountain, just south west of CYHLAGHARR. The mummified body of an ancient oghur prophet was discovered there in c. 1230 RM, though any cults that arose around him have long since passed from memory.

GANTH: Rui. Ruined harbour in the c south west of THE SURRACH, once belonging to the empire of SELAHIM Today it is 90-miles from the coast, and long-since deserted. It was once a major sea-port trading goods west, though today little remains of it save for rusted ships and crumbled buildings.

GAODDEN: Pol. Set. Capital city of LAOD. It is a major stop along the BROKERS' ROAD trade route (Pop. c. 210,000).

GAP OF ASHOM: Geo. Major pass across the c-south east of the MOLOTH KHAMMATHUL Mountains, linking the south east of the UMBRA SOKHAR with the far north of KHARKHARADONTIS. Despite the relative ease with which one can cross the Mountains at this pass, the region is little-used for it leads to the tainted lands of Kharkharadontis.

GAP OF DIEZI: Geo. largely flat expanse dominating the c north of the border between CEHOPHELA in the west and IMEAL in the east, in the c of MENISCEA, running north to south for some 250-miles between the VUGNIAN Ridge in the north and the SACHRAN Roughlands in the south. The Imeali side is guarded by the bastions of HAMANA PITH.

GAP OF EREBH: Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region in the c north west of AKANTHRA, encompassing wetlands in the south and grasslands in the north. It is known for its proximity to the OTHERWORLD and for its ghostly manifestations, which have a reputation for savagery and violent telekinetic activity. The ebb and flow in the ARCANE TEMPERS in the region see the Gap of Erebh stricken by pervasive bouts of darkness, which are referred to as 'the Pall by locals, and which can last for weeks on end.

GAP OF SHADOWS: Geo. Major pass across the MOLOTH KHAMMATHUL Mountains which, in the first millennium of the FIFTH AGE, served as a passage for those fleeing north east from the growing SHADOW IN THE DESERT, into the UMBRA SOKHAR. This mass migration of DEGENERATES and other peoples fleeing the growing grotesqueries of the KHARKHARADONTID desert would lead to the downfall of the SOKHARAN EMPIRE, from the ruins of which extant Umbra Sokharan cities would emerge.

- GAP OF SHUL: Geo. Coastal cleft in the far west of TZALLRACH, overlooking the SEA OF VENTHA. It is named after the ruined city to its immediate south, SHUL.
- GAP OF ST. PRIMASA: Geo. Valley in the east of SKAROS, around the river and lake ULAROS, named after the patron saint of Skaros.
- GAP OF ALGOL: Geo. Valley in SAMMAEA, between the RUADOM and KELACHOT Mountains and the north west of the ALGOL HAREN.
- GAPI: Rvr. River in the west of ESHIR^(2.), flowing west for some 260-miles from sources in the HIGA Mountains, before meeting its parent, the river GAMUS.
- GARA GHATAR: Set. Ancient city in the mountain valleys of the HENDECARCHY of ATALLUA in the east of MALAN that dates back to the time before the unification of the post NAHORIAN states by the LADY AEGIS in 2075 RM, and which is still inhabited to this day. The original incarnation of the city was founded by a warlord who united various mountain peoples together under his banner. In c. 800 RM a large raised platform was constructed, the peripheries of which were reinforced behind walls and towers at regular spaces, behind which residences, businesses, temples, and municipal structures were built.

Today, Gara Ghatar has expanded beyond these ancient confines and the old city is now made up of parks, government structures and is populated by ancient noble houses, many of which claim to trace their ancestry thousands of years. Modern dwellings have spilt over the old walls and surround the city, and are in turn surrounded by terraced fields where hardy potato and tomato crops are grown (Pop. c. 28,000).

- GARAAN: Set. Settlement in the north west of $\underline{\text{HARAPPA}}^{(3)}$ (Pop. c. 8.000). *
- GARABA: Geo. Mountain in the north west of PARAIYA, forming part of the AGOUTRA range.
- GARADA: Set. Settlement in the east of LYRIDIA DHAI, under the control of house LLANA, dedicated to the extraction of UMBRA (Pop. c. 2,200).
- GARAGAR SLATES, the: His. Obj. Brass plates discovered by the KYONI agent VARIAN VYR in his early years of service while exploring temple ruins in the WOLD. He spent the rest of his life researching them, and continues to oversee the translations of the text, which remain largely incomplete due to a lack of a cipher to identify them.
- GARAGIRA: Rvr. River in the c south of METHUMN flowing north west for around 280-miles from sources in the MAR SAHIGH Mountains before joining its parent, the river SAPPARANTI. The river's flow varies throughout the year, with it being weakest in late summer and strongest in early summer and the wet season.
- GARAILI: Rvr. River in the south west of RAONGEN^(2.) flowing west and south for 750-miles from sources in the ZEHINE and CHIAVALLE Mountains, before meeting the coast at the BAY OF ORAT. Downstream of lake RA the river's course becomes dangerous, both wide and very fast flowing, and filled with rapids, making navigation long or across it close to impossible. The river becomes navigable again just upstream from the city AEYUAN.
- GARAKK: Rui. Ruined fortress in the far west of LIDEA, overlooking the mouth of the SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾. It played a vital role in the WAR OF SUNDERING and was a major SARASTROAN stronghold, where various incursions into eastern MHAROKK were launched. It was finally destroyed by KORACHANI SHAPER corps, ending the MHAROKKIN CAMPAIGN.
- GARAIXUR: Set. Major city in the north of the mainland PANTHEON ISLES, alongside the course of the river YEEZ (Pop. c. 82,000).
- GARAL: 1. Geo. Island in the south west of the CORAL BARONIES and home to the city of the same name ⁽²⁾. The island has a very steep coastline and what few settlements exist on it are all located in the few valleys that provide easy access to the shore.
 - 2. Set. Major coastal city of the CORAL BARONIES. Known for its deep natural harbours and small trade with KEPHUAAN and the SHIBBOTHA ISLES. The city lies above a great bridge that spans the natural harbour, beneath which cargo ships coma and go, offloading goods, which are hauled by crane to the citadels above (Pop. c. 59,000).
- GARALIAN: Geo. Reef in the CORAL BARONIES, off the south western coast of SAMMAEA, to the north west of the island of Garal^(1.).

- GARAMIA: Set. Settlement 18-miles north of AMUAR, the capital of BISBUT (Pop. c. 8,000).
- GARAN: Set. Settlement in the south east of ARKOS⁽¹⁾, north of the city of SALPINIX (Pop. c. 8,000).
- GARANDI: Rvr. River in the north west of KEPHUAAN, flowing west and north for 170-miles from sources in the GARDAGHIN Mountains before meeting its mouth at the VEREN ITRUSH.
- GARAP: also 'High-city of Garap'. His. Set. Ancient city built atop even older ASADEAN ruins. Little is known of its earliest history, though records state that the 3 IONIC GOLEMS (2.) were relocated to Garap in -692 RM. It rapidly came to oppose SALOROC by c. -600 RM and in -587 RM the priestly caste known as the IONIC HIERARCHS overtook Saloroc in a bloodless coup, from which they came to rule. In -543 RM Garap was made the capital of Io, and was bestowed the epithet of High-city. Garap was attacked by dissenters in -192 RM in what would become the first conflict of the APOSTATE WARS. Its Hierarchs mostly slain, the city was left half-burnt and hollow, and was never resettled.

In c. -150 a group of FIRMAMENTIST mystics emerged from the GHOLA Mountain, calling themselves the EXARCHS of MIRADOR. During the chaos of the Apostate Wars, they searched the ruins of Garap for knowledge of TULPA that would aid them in the creation of new golems. They finally emerged from Garap in the wake of the Apostate Wars, with knowledge of the construction and animation of golems, allowing them to rise as eventual rulers of Io.

The city's ruins are a popular spot for explorers and tourists, and it forms a common stop along the GRAND TOUR.

- GARAP, STRAIT OF: Sea. Strait that separates the northern SEA OF ETHA from the southern DAARKEN GULF. The strait was dominated by the SALOROCAN city of GARAP until its sacking in -192 RM. Following the rise of KORACHAN in the region first in IO in 212 RM, then in BA'AKH in 634 RM traffic across the strait was taxed by imperial DOMNITORS, though their vigilance was relaxed by c. 920 RM, with trade allowed to pass unfettered across it.

- GARAPPA: Set. Geo. Major agricultural region in the north of HARAPPA⁽³⁾, fed by the delta of the river TENE. Its main industry is the production of musical instruments, including the SUNTARA, the national instrument of Harappa (Pop. c. 27,500).
- GARARIS: Rvr. River in the north of WESTERN SAMMAEA, flowing east from sources in the VESPERTINE LEAGUE into the north of ESHIR⁽²⁾, where it empties into Bay of Eshir⁽¹⁾.
- GARAT: Ser. Fortified coastal settlement in the URTAN LEAGUE, south west of IZABAL⁽¹⁾ (Pop. c. 35,000).
- GARATH: Set. Fortified settlement in the south west of PHYRR, in the south eastern face of the MOROSIGHI Mountains. Its main industry is the mining of the iron that Phyrr is famous for, which is extracted from deep shafts with branching tunnels. Work in the mines is difficult, with most workers dying within 5 years of beginning work in them. Garath is probably the most productive of the many iron mines in Phyrr, and it is well-protected against theft and sabotage (Pop. c. 8.000).
- GARDAGHIN: Geo. Sedimentary mountain in the south west of KEPHUAAN, in the AMMASHI^(1.) Peninsula. Its northern face is known for its water-hewn vertical shafts and deep caverns, most notable of which is the AD NETIR.
- GARDEN OF APAHIR, the: also 'Apahir'. Sup. For. Large tropical area in the far south of AHOPAH, in the south east of WESTERN MENISCEA. Characterised by its fertile red soil, the region is only covered in sparse woodlands. However, the shrubs and plants that grow there are affected by an extreme form of gigantism, allowing to grow as much as ten times the size of examples from elsewhere.
 - It is thought that this fecundity is in part due to FIRMAMENTAL influence, though the region has not been adequately investigated by SHAPERS from the NEAR HEMISPHERE.
- GARDEN OF THE DEMIURGES: Mys. Geo. Mythical location said to have been created by a group of DEMIURGES known as the QUINTUMVIRATE.
- GARDENS OF THE DEMIURGES: Mys. His. In the mythologies of ELYDEN, the Gardens of the Demiurges are regions in the extant world that are thought to be directly created by a specific named DEMIURGE or Demiurges.

Examples include the Garden of the Demiurges, created by the Quintumvirate; Prison Carceri, created by Vorropohalah; Manna Trees, created by Arimaspi; the Soul-engine^(1.) Meharraat and the Minaret of Mallareon, created by Nyarloth; and the region of Alkahest^(2.), created by Urakabarameel, amongst many other unnamed structures.

GARDEN OF DOUN: see DOUN, GARDEN OF.

GARDEN OF KORACHAN: His. Lan. Ancient name for AZAZEM common in the early days of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, used due to the fact that its farmlands were responsible for feeding the growing empire and its armies.

GARDEN OF MHIURVITTAL, the: Int. Flo. Geo. Ancient region in the c south west of SERROK, in a secluded valley to the east of the OMLOUDOCH Mountains. It is dominated by dense virginal rainforest that obscures a far older ruined city thought to date back to the late SECOND AGE.

GARDEN OF ZIACAN: Str. Flo. Walled garden in the c south east of HENDECARCHY of DERAEIA in the south east of MALAN, just west of the ARGENT Mountains. It has ancient origins, dating back to the 15th century RM, and remains a spectacular mountain plateau garden, nestled behind high sandstone walls and watered by deep aquifers. It is famed for its fruit trees and exotic flora from across Malan and beyond. It is guarded by the troops of the HENDECARCH and stealing from its groves is punishable by public execution. Despite this, many have attempted to sneak into its deepest groves over the years, lured by tales of MAGICKAL fruit that can prolong mortal lifespans by many centuries, which some believe is why so many Hendecarchs live so long.

GAREA: Set. Small coastal city in the north of LIDEA, just north west of the city of ZERED. It was founded in c. 3970 RM following the passing of an edict in Zered in 3966 RM that outlawed all non-HUMANS. The next years were dominated by an exodus of other peoples from the city, many of whom settled the small peninsula to the north west, which was eventually named Garea.

A shanty of unregulated buildings, it grew rapidly and soon became a concern to Zered, which criticised its founding, claiming the land on which it was built belonged to Zered. The people of Garea retorted, saying that as a new territory (having been revealed geologically recently in c. 3500 RM) it was open to claims of ownership, which Zered had never done. In retaliation Zered launched various campaigns against its people over the next centuries, though the Gareans had expected such an attack and had fortified their home well, constructing a series of well-defended tunnels under its streets, which were of great use in outmanoeuvring the attackers. Eventually the attacks were dropped, and there hasn't been any open city-sponsored hostility in over 150-years, though it is not unlikely for private groups to foolishly oppose the people of Garea.

Its population is unknown, but some scholars from Zered believe its people may have burgeoned over the past century to well over 50,000 bodies (Pop. unknown).

GARES: 1. Sea. Bay in the far south of the CAMARINAL, in the north of the INTERURBAN STATES.

2. also 'the Marble Court'. Pol. Ser. Capital of the INTERURBAN STATES, which rose to prominence in the TARAHID ANNEXES in c. 2875 RM. Prior to that it was a minor shipping centre, though it later grew into a major harbour and coastal city. The name Marble Court comes from its marble citadel, from which ruled COUNT OTARAN, a KERATIN tyrant (Pop. c. 387,500).

GAREXE: Int. Geo. Region in the south of ELEKHID known for its gigantic inexplicable geometric rock formations that are commonly attributed to ancient giants. The formations appear as though monolithic blocks of stone were dropped from a height and allowed to settle, being slowly eroded and filled out with soil over time.

GARHADDON: His. Nm. Ancient FIFTH AGE territory once belonging to native YARAOMIC PEOPLE. It was situated in the north of SAMMAEA, forming the north west of their ancestral lands in what are today KETESH^(2.), the east of VAALK, and the north west of MHAROKK, until it was taken by KORACHANI armies between c. 250 – 320 RM following their conquest of VALKA, during which time native Yaraomic People were taken as slaves or driven out, forced into ever-dwindling territories.

Like most of Yaraomic history, very little remains of its people's culture today, and the caste of lorekeepers known as the IARAOM GRABBA travel across northern Sammaea searching for ancient artefacts to take to their fortress-library in IARSHUGGAH.

GARGOYLE: Sup. Dre. Fau. Grotesque DREAM-CREATURES that can be found across KHARKHARADONTIS, in greater sparsity the farther from the SEPULCHRAL PALACE one moves. They are most commonly found in around the Palace itself, where they roost amongst its many spires and belfries. They are also found along the passage of the SHADOW MARCH, where they live in rock formations and ruins, terrorising pilgrims.

They are horrid beings of vaguely humanoid appearance, with rock-like hides, lurid animalistic faces, and great enveloping wings protruding from their backs. No two are alike and they are born from the twisted DEMIURGE RACHANAEL and have become naturalised over millennia, and can even survive outside the immediate area around the Palace by his sheer force of will. They prey on small critters as well as solitary pilgrims and other MORTALS that stray too far from crowds, and they take great delight in torturing their victims, prolonging their suffering before eating them (though they do not require material sustenance to survive). Their presence around the Sepulchral Palace is tolerated by guards, and many have been coerced (or bribed) into serving their needs in return for a steady supply of food (usually prisoners or the bodies of pilgrims that die on their way to the Palace).

They often feature in nursery rhymes, and were popularised by the legend of the GARGOYLES OF HAR VHOLLO, in which they are often depicted as keeping guard, defending buildings from those who would venture to close.

GARGOYLES OF HAR VHOLLO, the: Leg. Popular legend in the north of KORACHAN and AZAZEM, from a time when GARGOYLES were far more common and feared than nowadays. It was intended to teach children to be weary of the dark. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

GARIDA: Set. Fortified coastal city in the north west of KEPHUAAN, situated at the mouth of the river GARANDI. It is known for its expansive natural harbour with many inlets (Pop. c. 45,000).

GARNARATH: 1. Geo. Plains in the north west of KEPHUAAN, in the AMMASHI^(1.) Peninsula. The plains are peppered with various remnants of FOURTH AGE structures.

2. Rui. Ancient FOURTH AGE ruins in the c north west of KEPHUAAN, after which its vast northern plains are named $^{(1)}$.

GAROMMA: Set. 1. Major city in the c north of AMMESH. It lies along the NACRE ROAD trade route and has adapted to cater to the many merchants and travellers passing through (Pop. c. 90,000).

2. Major city in the south west of KEPHUAAN, along the course of the river ANDGAR. It is home to a large university, and many individuals who eventually find their way in the COUNCIL OF MERIT studied here (Pop. c. 89,000).

GARR: m. His. Pol. War. Per. (D. 3411 RM) self-proclaimed sovereign of the AMMASHI FREE-ISLES, who in 3392 RM made claims of ancestry and birthright that supported his claim as sovereign over the Free-isles. With the support of a few of the islands and their leaders, he began a campaign to claim them all, leading to a war (now remembered as the GARR FALLACIES in the Free-isles) that lasted until his defeat in a naval battle in 3397 RM in the SANNAL ITRUSH. He remained in control of a small demesne based around the island of ICHLASH, though his territories crumbled following his death, returning to singular island states.

GARR FALLACIES: His. War. Civil conflict that wracked the AMMASHI FREE-ISLES in 3392 – 3397 RM. Named after its chief instigator, the warlord GARR, who claimed to be the true sovereign of the Free-isles through claims of heritage and birthright that few of the island accepted. Nevertheless, he gained enough of a following to pose a threat to the other islands, leading to a civil war that consumed most islands. He was ultimately defeated in a naval exchange in the summer of 3397 RM where most of his fleet was destroyed. He returned to his stronghold on the Island of ICHLASH, still in control of a small sovereign state, though it crumbled after his death, its handful of island territories fragmenting.

GARRAI: Geo. Low mountains in the north west of the KAZZARAN peninsula⁽¹⁾ in the north of SAMMAEA, forming an extension of the larger ODU Mountains and the backbone of the UNARALOTT peninsula.

GARRAM: Rui. Ancient city buried in the sands of the far north west of the DUNE SEA, in the south east of ETUA. Very little is known about the city, and it is believed to date back to the FOURTH AGE. Bass carvings on columns discovered nearby indicate that the ruin may once have belonged to LHAUS.

GARRARU: Soc. Str. Reverse ziggurat-like pits hollowed out of the bedrock in what is now the south of PARAIYA and the north of the UMBRA SOKHAR. The structures are remnants of an ancient culture that coexisted with the Parian culture of the region and are believed by IMPERIAL scholars and explorers to be temples to a deity of the chthonic world. The centre of each garraru is fashioned into a narrow pit that leads down into the caverns that pepper the region. Explorations of the caverns have revealed bones and waste of ancient cultures.

The culture that fashioned these pits has long since vanished, and most now lie ruined, caved-in, though a few remain active, serving now as the centre of some Paraiyan settlements.

GARROS-PISTOME HORIZON, the: Sup. Mys. In occult and mystic studies, an intangible boundary between the MATERIAL PLANE and the OTHERWORLD, with the accompanying hypothesis that this may be traversed through non-supranatural means if the correct conditions are met, much in the same way that SHAPERS have been accessing it for millennia.

Experiments to cross the boundary between the Material and the Other through mundane means have thus far failed, though many still believe it's just a matter of doing so when the ARCANE TEMPERS are just so. The region known as the LIMINAL SHORES is of particular interest to the scholars of the Garros-Pistome Horizon, and a small research station was established there in 3943 RM.

The hypothesis is named after the PARTHISAN scholars OLOM GARROS and TILLA PISTOME, who published their research in a TETHRAN journal in 3371 RM.

GARSHAM THE FALSE: See PARIAH-KING, THE.

GARUDA: Fau. FIRMAMENTALLY-sensitive bird common to the south east of MENISCEA and the north of BROR^(1.). Males are known to display a mane of fire when displaying with other males for mating privileges. Their feathers have fireproof qualities and are used by natives to their habitats, and often used to make cloaks and other fire-proof material. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

GARUR: Rvr. River in the north east of AZAZEM, flowing south from the CHACTHORNYS Mountains into lake RANNO.

GARUS: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the south of SARAGOS. It is guarded by various troops, including cavalry mounted on MONITORS ⁽²⁾.

GASRA: Set. Small city in the c west of HARAPPA (3.). Its main industry is the production of musical instruments, including the SUNTARA, the national instrument of Harappa (Pop. c. 42,000).

GASTEN: Fau. Large species of owl once common to most of LLACHATUL, though is now restricted to THE OLD FOREST (where it exists in many forms) and AHRISHEN. Many cultures have superstitions involving the Gasten, which is seen as a bad omen in the HARÉSHK, LYRIDIA and parts of Ahrishen. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

GASHA: Set. City in the south east of LIDEA, close to the EICLON
BADLANDS. Its people are known to trade with the LACER ENCLAVES to the east (Pop. c. 31,000).

GASHEIA: Set. City in the east of THE VORANDINE, along the course of the river ERAMARDA. It is known for its large bridge that forms part of the main land trade-route of the Vorandine, and on which is its largest market (Pop. c. 37,300).

GATA MATHA: Sec. Small fortified city in the south east of the tribe of OSRIS, in the east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 18,000).

2. Mil. Str. Gate-fortress in the $\underline{\text{HAR\acute{E}SHKI}}$ $\underline{\text{CITY-KINGDOM}}$ of $\underline{\text{CARIA}}^{(4)}$ guarding the pass of Gatan through the $\underline{\text{CARIAN}}$ Mountain⁽²⁾.

GATE OF BAB-ILU: Rel. Str. Huge gateway outside the SEPULCHRAL PALACE of the UNDYING MACHINE in DAEKYN. The word Bab-ilu is derived from the language of one of the degenerate tribes of KHARKHARADONTIS, and is loosely translated as 'gate of god'. The gate is the final obstacle crossed by the PETITIONERS OF THE MACHINE undertaking THE SHADOW MARCH before arriving at the Sepulchral Palace, the enormity of which beckons them from the horizon beyond the Gate of Bab-ilu GATE OF EREBETH: see EREBETH, GATE OF.

GATE OF FALLEN HEROES: His. Art. Bass cliff-side carving in the north western face of the TEREKION Mountain in the c of PELASGOS, dating back to the days of the HADENI civilisation.

GATE OF GARCHUN: Myt. Arc. Mythical city gate mentioned in the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN, which became infamous following an edict that made the district in which the gate was located inaccessible to non-humans and other marginalised people. The gate was the city's only entrance, and the only way of accessing the market from outside its walls, and the edict effectively ostracised half the city's populace.

The hero Heuxeres, believed to be a SCION of SYBARIS, is said to have lifted the gate, carrying it elsewhere, circumventing new laws, allowing all people to pass through it, thus accessing the city.

Scholars now think that the gate is analogous with the old city gates of $\underline{\text{Liot}}.$

GATE OF MOSTATHOS: His. Arc. Gigantic iron door, blocking the entrance into a cavern in the north western face of the CAMMOREAN Mountain in the c north of SAMMAEA, facing the shelf of ANDILUTH. The gate depicts in bass-carvings the ascent of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR to the OTHERWORLD after his sojourn in DAEKYN. The gate's origin is unknown, with scholars and clerks never finding records of an edict proclaiming its construction and it has never been successfully opened despite many attempts by explorers and SHAPERS to do so.

GATE OF OCHIENG: Geo. Spectacular natural window, serving as a marker between the tribes of ILLPHAGOS, JACITTA, and ATEVEGOS, in the west of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER.

GATE, ORDER OF THE: Org. Order sworn to defend trade and traffic in general that passes across the GATE OF EREBETH. The order was created in 2781 RM by merchant houses, magnates, patrician families and ARCHPATRICIANS to safeguard their business and shipping lanes across the Gate of Erebeth, into THE INNER SEA to the east and the SEA OF SERPENTS to the west, and beyond. Early in its history the Order clashed with the TAHALLI and SAGITTARIAN fleets, which until then had formed a trade monopoly across the Gate. Decades of harassment and privateer predation ended in in 2824 RM with the signing of the Accord of the Gate officialising the roles of all parties concerned.

The order is well-funded and comprises a fleet of privateers that guard shipping, and provides guards to caravans and merchant fleets. Its headquarters are in the free-city of SUCHARIIT on the island of NERITA, though it possesses harbours and strongholds across the Inner Sea and the Sea of Serpents.

GATES OF DHAT: Sea. Opposing sides of the small island-continent of ISEA serving as a strait, leading into the inland sea of ADHES. The Gates have been slowly narrowing with the retreat of ELYDEN'S seas, leading to the strait's decrease in size. It is now thought to be under 18-miles wide at its widest point.

GATES OF M'BESSA: His. Arc. Ancient pumice colossi guarding the exit of lake C'KHAMAR into the river SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾. One of the colossi is ruined, and the other remains, facing north, its origins unknown.

GATES OF PURGHA: Geo. Mountain pass along north east face of the PERIEDAS in the c east of TETHYSIA. It is flanked by ancient hewn transoms in the shape of rearing serpents, believed to date back to the THIRD AGE

GATES OF THAR: Arc. Expansive city gate in the east of DEOCHAN, guarding the highway that leads to the BASTION OF STEEL in KHADON.

GATEKEEPERS, the: Rel. Org. Monastic order based in the ISINU Mountains of eastern SAUA who worship the FOUR WINDS, a practice brought to them by the herald SARMAUL of AHRISHEN in c. 2000 RM.

GATEWAY, the: 1. also 'Yo- Darassi'. Int. His. A monolithic bastion and staircase in the mythical land known as the GREEN LABYRINTH in SAMMAEA, that is said to be guarded by creatures shaped by the DEMIURGE NYARLOTH. Beyond the staircase is a rift that links ELYDEN directly with the MATERIAL. The uncontrolled life and growth of the Green Labyrinth is attested to this feature, though little else is known about it.

2. see INFERNAL REST, GATEWAY TO THE.

GATEWATCH: Mil. Enk. Main rank within the KYONI ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION, whose members form a well-trained civil defence force that can be dispatched to most parts of the KORACHANI EMPIRE to help cities that have become stricken by various calamities, either natural or mortal-made.

They are drafted from the ranks of the Order's ACCENSORS and are competent in leading evacuations, training civilians to defend their homes, stalling the spread of fires, and so-on. They are also given specific militant training, which includes how to deal with crowds as well as leading defences and counter-attacks for use in times of war. Following the IRON GUARD, they are typically the first fighting force to come to the help of a stricken settlement, arriving before the imperial armies, which take longer to mobilise.

GATEWAY TO THE EAST, the: see GESHIJAL.

GATEWAY TO THE INFERNAL REST: see INFERNAL REST, GATEWAY TO THE.

GATEWAY OF SUN AND MOONS: Arc. massive stone statue carving that resembles a horned dragon. The statue guards the city of BISMUTH in GNOTH.

GATH: Set. Lighthouse-port-city in the south east of PARTHIS, overlooking the SEA OF GAAN. Gath controls access into the larger SEA OF BYSSOS that lies beyond, its legendary lighthouse guiding ships across the narrow strait.

Following the abandonment of most settlements along the $\underline{\text{ZOHELETH}}$ due to the retreat of $\underline{\text{THE INNER SEA}}$ it became the largest and most active port in Parthis. The Strait itself was heavily fortified by Parthis between 2149-2172 RM, making the strait a veritable fortress. Since then, it became an unmanageable feat to keep the port operating, with Parthis spending a great deal of resources to keep the port functioning. In 3842 RM all attempts at maintenance were abandoned and its intricate system of locks and shipyards were allowed to dry up, subsequently becoming warehouses.

Though it diminished, the city remains large, and is now connected to the sea through the new port of $\underline{\text{EGATH}}$ and remains a vital part of the $\underline{\text{RED ROUTE}}$ (Pop c. 80,000).

GATH, STRAIT OF: sea GATH, STRAIT OF. Sea. Narrow strait dividing the SEA OF BYSSOS from the SEA OF TARAMAR. The strait is formed by the GATHI headland in south eastern PARTHIS and SEDI peninsula in the west of JURRAS⁽²⁾.

As of publication the strait is only just over 20-miles wide at its narrowest point. Records dating back to c. 2000 RM place the strait at over 30-miles wide. The construction of a bridge across the strait, known as the KETESH BRIDGE, has been toyed with for many years, and is currently ongoing, though construction has been stalled for some time.

GATH VALLII: Geo. A cavernous hall in the PRISON CARCERI, said to lie beneath the east of LYRIDIA. The hall is characterised by the plethora of gigantic chains that hang from its unseen ceiling, some of which bear individual links that are the size of large buildings. Most are rusted solid, orange stalactites hanging from them, though a few hang freely, swaying impossibly in the unfelt breezes of Carceri.

GÂTHA: 1. Rvr. Seasonal river in the c north of LLACHATUL, flowing west from the ERESHKIGAL Mountains for 280-miles before reaching the city of Gâtha⁽²⁾, where it meets the river ALLIA, with both disappearing beneath the city into caverns below.

2. Set. Independent city-state in the c north of LLACHATUL, and defacto capital of the DESOLATION OF ASTUDAN, located to the far right of the region, bordering the area known as the BONEFIELDS to the west of TEMUJA. The city originated as a small caravanserai built over the ruins of an ancient stargazing city in c. -100 RM, at the confluence of the rivers ALLIA and Gâtha, before the waters disappear beneath the Desolation.

Gâtha survived for many years as an independent entity, growing rich from its role as middle-man linking the RED ROUTE of the south west with the GREAT ROAD of the east, and its merchant caravans of LODESTONE and other exotic items were once a common site across the north of Llachatul. It was assimilated into the KORACHANI EMPIRE as a colony in 2103 RM, after which it and its satellites became major outposts for the mining of lodestone. After veins were largely exhausted c. 3350 RM, Korachani influence dwindled and the city struggled under the leadership of the INTERREGES, who within less than a decade became corrupt and concerned with trade more than governing.

Gâtha experienced a renaissance of sorts in c. 3750 RM following a short civil uprising that ousted the remnants of the old Korachani caretakers and saw it become an autonomous region once again. As trade increased through its pushing of the so-called Gâthan Road into neighbouring nations it begun to attract adventurers, outcasts, and explorers from far regions, many of whom settled there. Similarly, it attracted a large number of individuals from disparate MORTAL PEOPLES, as HALFBLOODS, SCION-BORN and OTHERWORLDERS. They thrived in Gâtha, as did their various conflicting religions and philosophies, all of which were allowed by law to be observed without hindrance. The city's diversity remains a defining feature to this day as what those who have never been there are likely to know it for.

The city is located in a depression in the surrounding land, rests atop the confluences of the rivers Allia and Gâtha, which both disappear below the city.

Gâtha is divided into 17 loose districts, each with its own characteristics and roles, and the city is powered electricity generated by hydroelectric stations positioned above the various subterranean waterfalls beneath its foundations (Pop. c. 262,000). See Vol II: Extant Realms and Nations.

GATHAMED: Rvr. River in the north east of TAHALL, flowing for 320-miles east from sources in the HARKONNA and DHAKALL Mountains before emptying in the SEA OF MARDEN.

GÂTHAN: Lan. Language spoken in GÂTHA. Its true roots are unknown, though it likely shares a common root with ASIBAIAN, though it has since taken on elements from so many different cultures and languages over the years that is has become a hotchpotch. See Vol II: Languages.

GÂTHAN ROAD: Com. Geo. Major trade-route in CENTRAL LLACHATUL linking the city of GÂTHA in the DESOLATION OF ASTUDAN with various regions, including ALMAGEST in the west, TEMUIA in the east, SABIA and KASPIA in the north, and the OLD FOREST in the south. The route brings iron from farther west, such as ATARAXIA and ALMAGEST, to Temuja, and exotic fruits and fabrics from as far east as MALAN and TZALLRACH into Gâtha and beyond. See Vol II: Major Trade Routes.

GATHANOTHA: Sup. Fau. Dei. Singular aberration that dwells in the wastes of the southern CITRINE PLAINS in the c south of the VESPERTINE LEAGUE, in the c of WESTERN SAMMAEA.

It is likely extraterrestrial in origin and is unnatural and unsettling in form, resembling a floating gigantic bulky capital letter 'T' with tentacles descending from its lowest facets. Its flesh is of an organic stone-like matter (possibly bone or cartilage) and it has no recognisable sensory organs or other appendages of which to speak. Its very presence is a bane to MORTALS and fauna alike, whose thoughts unravel even as far as a mile away, with all sense of the self and cognisance melting away the closer one gets, irrevocably-so after prolonged exposure. Those who have been exposed to it repeatedly or for long stretches become vegetative, their thoughts (or what remains of them) locked in, utterly incapable of reasoning.

The entity is worshipped by uncivilised wretches who observe it as it hovers between bluffs and hills in the distance, safe from harm. Little is known of its origins or what culture or doctrine surround its worship. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

GATHIYA: Rui. Abandoned city in the north west of PARAIYA. It was once a thriving city, but it waned after the capital was moved to SOPORA in 3813 RM and was allowed to die by c. 3850 RM. GATTA: Set. Large caravanserai-kasbah in western KARAKHAS, noted as one of the larger settlements in KARAKHAS to revere ancient traditions. It forms a part of the SALT ROAD and offers hostel and bedding services to travellers (Pop. c. 8,000).

GATTARACH: Ind. Set. Str. Rui. Expansive grain mills in the north of AZAZEM. The site is sprawling with dozens of gigantic metal bell-shaped silos, industrial structures, processing manufactories, storage depos, LANDSHIP yards, and a workers' village where all its workers once lived. The silos and structures are all connected by gantries and walkways, and the area serves as the nucleus to the vast network of artificial canals (collectively known as the AGALLOCH WATERWAYS) that once formed the lifeblood of northern Azazem.

Most of the area is now abandoned, with the majority of grain produced in Azazem being diverted to the DROSS industry, but six of its towers remain in use to this day, with barges from across the north of Azazem still serving them.

A common job in the manufactory sees young men being lowered in baskets inside the towers, where they bang on them with metal poles to loosen grain that has become stuck to the sides. This is one of the more coveted jobs as it is less backbreaking than other work on site, but it is also amongst the most dangerous such jobs – and many careless youths have fallen into the grain only to be swallowed by the mass, losing their lives as a result

ATUN MORATHA: Pol. Set. Ruling city in the tribe of OSRIS in the, c east of MULCIBER, in the eastern face of the GROWING MOUNTAINS. It is a metropolis and most of the population of the tribe is situated there, or nearby in the dozens of smaller satellites that surround it. The city is very religious and the PANTHEON OF OSRA is based there (Pop. c. 210,000).

GAUGMOTHA: Geo. Plains dominating the east of VAALK and the c north of MHAROKK. The region is level and relatively featureless, save for scattered salty formations. The region is known for its lack of life and still air. Marble ruins of past ages abound here, their quality so good that many have been looted for their stone, despite the dangers of sojourning there for too long.

GATUNG: Set. Small city in the region of GENETHAANT in the c east of THE SURRACH. It is a major producer of glass, used primarily in the construction of glasses and telescopes, and mines fine sand in quarries (Pop. c. 15,000).

GAUL: His. Str. Ancient man-made trench in the far north of THE SURRACH in SAMMAEA. One side of the trench collapsed long ago, and exists now as a fragmented steep slope leading down to the concrete wall of the trench, which rises 50-feet at its highest point.

Many settlements can be found along its 15-mile length, with the clear ground at its foot serving as a thoroughfare of sorts, linking them all onto a lose confederacy, the largest of which is the city of MENTA.

GAULT: Set. Fortified coastal city in the Free Land of TRINITANIA⁽¹⁾ northern coast of SAMMAEA, in the far north of KHARKHARADONTIS, overlooking the SEA OF UGOLOTH. It is located close to the southern periphery of the CAMMOREAN SHADOW and forms part of the SALT ROAD. It has great SIPHON ENGINES to protect its territories from the ATRAMENTAL TAINT, allowing merchant caravans to pass through it without hinderance, though it does charge a levy for this privilege, which has allowed it to grow rich over the years (Pop. c. 37,200).

GAUR: 1. Fau. Sturdy pony-sized bovine known for their white hides, characteristic hunched shoulders and recurved horns. They are rare today, and restricted to regions of deep wilderness that have been untarnished by MORTAL hands, largely in c latitudes of LLACHATUL, and the jungles of EASTERN SAMMAEA, where they are semi-domesticated, serving as an important herd animal in rural areas. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

2. His. Arc. Ancient white marble monument in the south west of ALMAGEST. It is considered by most to be a relic of ancient times, attributed to the DEMIURGES of old, and little is known about it safe for its incorruptible surface, which glints under both sun and moonslight.

3. Sec. City in the south west of ALMAGEST, that emerged around the eponymous monument, taking advantage of the fertile land, growing slowly from an oasis way-point along THE SHADOW MARCH into a sizeable city that now forms part of the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 66,000).

GAUSSAMAR: Set. City in the east of SHAUATAS, located on the northern edge of VAKAR wetlands. It is often shrouded in morning mists and is protected against flooding by vaulted structures (Pop. c. 200,000).

GAUTER GRABRES: (B. 87 – D. 149 RM) Mil. KORACHANI general who between 122 RM and the day of his death led the ANTHROPEIDOS CRUSADES. Following his death and the massacre of his armies in 149 RM the crusades were abandoned.

GAVADA: Pol. Set. The capital city of the empire of RAONGEN^(2.). The city is located on the western-most known part of the ancient GREAT ROAD. The city is the only one to exist outside of the even INDUSTRIES (territories) of the empire, and by extension, is the only city not directly in control of one of the seven FACTOTUMS, being governed by the EMPEROR-FACTOTUM instead.

As capital, Gavada receives tremendous amounts of tithes every three months, in the form of food, resources, goods, soldiers, and money, and as a result it is known for its many sprawling storage halls, granaries and well-guarded barracks and silos (Pop. c. 870,000).

GAYODUR: Set. Small coastal city in the c east of the mainland PANTHEON ISLES (Pop. c. 12,000).

GAZAHAN: Rvr. River in the north east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER, flowing south west for 530-miles through the tribes of SALARNA, EATAN, JACITTA, and ILLPHAGOS, before meeting its parent, the river BYSTRA, which is itself a tributary of the river SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾.

GAZARDA: Set. City in the c south of GNOTH, along the course of the river REDEKHIN where it meets lake IAMATI (Pop. c. 32,000).

GAZUL: Set. Coastal settlement in the north east of VENTHIR, to the west of the delta of the river HETHA. It is built atop a mound that was, prior to c. 3000 RM a small island on which was an ancient monument, now long-gone, its origins and purpose unknown (Pop. c. 6,000).

GDUS: Ast. Con. Star in the constellation of CHTHONITHON. See Vol II: Constellations.

GEAFIR: 1. Flo. Gigantic trees common in THE OLD FOREST in the c of LLACHATUL, which form the centre of entire ecosystems, their branches large enough to house established forests of EPIPHYTES (non-parasitic trees that grow on the branches of other, larger trees). The tangled mass of GEAFIR forests is multi-layered, with life occurring on many different levels. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

2. Set. City in the west of THE OLD FOREST, in the region of RAM 'ATHI, built amid a tangle of geafir trees, from which its name is derived (Pop. unknown).

GEAGAS: Set. Settlement in the c south of OPHIUSSA (Pop. c. 3,750).

GEAUA: Sca. Small narrowing sea extending from the south eastern arm of the IALCUS, in the north of ELYDEN, between the north of LLACHATUL and MENISCEA, dominating the north western coast of TISARA.

If the findings of those FIRMAMENTISTS attuned to the motions of Elyden can be trusted, the sea is said to be dwindling as the continents of Llachatul and Meniscea slowly crawl closer towards one another.

GEBER: Set. City in the south east of $\underline{GREST}^{(1)}$ in the island-continent of $\underline{BROR}^{(1)}$ (Pop. c. 40,000).

GEDDIAL: Set. Settlement in the far south east of ZHARIAH⁽²⁾, situated along the ABBI DA'AD peninsula. Its main industry is the mining of raw umbra, which is piped north to the refinery of JAZIBAL (Pop. c. 9,000).

GEDEMM: Settlement in the south west of HABOT, along the course of the river GITTARANDI. It is a major agricultural centre (Pop. c. 8,000).

GEDRISS: His. Arc. Ancient fountain located in the far south east of KHARKHARADONTIS, in the region of FURAKISH. It is monolithic and is thought to have once formed part of a far larger network of aqueducts, which were destroyed in an ancient earthquake. The lands surrounding the fountain have since become ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED, and it now pours black ichor which overflows from the structure, tainting everything it touches, eliciting strange fungal growths from its dried skin.

The fountain is considered by many to be one of the WONDERS OF THE ANCIENT WORLD.

GEDRON: Set. Small city in the c of PARTHIS, to the west of the SIPYLANA Mountains (Pop. c. 18,000).

- GEES: Plr. 'Gees'. Rnk. Administrative title commonly used in TEMUJA, northern HARÉSHK, and eastern AHRISHEN. Gees can be found as administrators, and officials in positions of authority.
- GEHUTH: Lak. Lake in the east of LAASKHA, in the south eastern hills of the ARCANTHEA Mountain, forming part of the course of the river PARRAN.
- GEITRA: Set. Major city in the c north west of AETHIOS, around 25-miles from the river SHIBBOLETH^(3.). It is a hub of the raw UMBRA trade, and umbra SIPHONED from the BLEEDING PLAINS is pumped 100-miles north to the city, where it is processed and pumped to other major cities in the region. It is also a major producer of SHADOWSTEEL, where imported iron is turned into an alloy with UMBRA, that is used in construction and other civil engineering projects (Pop. c. 180,000).
- GEKN-PRAQ SCALE: also 'G-P scale'. Sup. In the study of the ATRAMENTA, a common scale used to measure the strength of Atramental activity in any particular, area. It is commonly used on ATRAMENTOMETERS, which produce a clicking sound that increases in volume and intensity as Atramental activity is detected in the surrounding area. The scale measures Atramental 'events' per second (events in this case being Atramental activity that triggers the devices' instruments).
- GELAH: 1. Pol. Geo. One of the nine territories in the south west of ALAM BETHYL, sharing a border to the west with GNOTH. It lies along the northern POLAR CIRCLE and is thought to be the most populated of Bethylan territories.
 - City in the south west of ALAM BETHYL, in the eponymous territory^(1.).
 It lies along the main trade-route of the nation, and sees much trade, and also leads to the trade-route south into AQUARIIA (Pop. c. 42,000).
- GELERIS: Com. Set. Major city in the south of VECTIS in the south west of WESTERN MENISCEA. It is a major economic centre and a crossroads of trade and travel and is renowned for its many large markets, including a thriving black-market where illicit goods are traded from across Meniscea (Pop. v. 98,000).
- GELHANA: 1. Geo. Valley across the border between the south west of ARKOS^(1.) and I'THANA, named after the ancient nation that once existed there. The valley was once a place of religious significance, where the dead were left to rot. The bodies of the ancient dead (some of them naturally mummified) can sometimes be found here.
 - 2. His. Set. Ancient city in present-day J'THANA. In c. -1100 RM it was known to trade with KANACH and had contact with ACTANORS. The AANTH exodus had an impact on it between -1000 -400 RM, during which time it found itself diminishing. It was eventually overtaken by aanth, with its human population becoming slaves. It later became independent in 2193 RM, by which time it was known as J'thana.
- GELIA: Set. Small fortified city in the south west of KASPIA, along the northern shore of lake ALGIA (Pop. c. 12,000).
- GELICIA: Sea. Bay in the KORACHANI colony of CRASSULA, of the north east of MENISCEA.
- GELLAN: Geo. Region in the south of the HENDECARCHY of HATON in the c north of MALAN. It is an area of wilderness that is divided from the rest of Haton by the NIYAN Mountains and from the north east of AMILLAERE (1.) by dense forest. It is uncivilised and is home to the last major remaining population of ALMAS in Malan, which are relatively isolated, who make little contact with civilised lands without their domains.
- GELORA: Set. Settlement in the c north of AZAZEM, in the region of ALLARIS. It is known for its OLIVE oil production (Pop. c. 6,000).
- GEM OF PERSANEER: see PERSANEER, GEM OF.
- GEMANGH: Set. Large fortified city in the MULL CITY-STATES, close to the river TENASAAR that acts as a border with HOLOLACH^(1.). The city is the main military power in the region, though it also lies along the route of THE WAY trade-route, and maintains close contact with Hololach as a result (Pop. c. 33,000).
- GEMARIS: Geo. Island off the northern coast of ESHIR⁽²⁾, to the north east of the SEA OF AGAIRA.

- GEMILIM: Set. City in the south of ESHIR⁽²⁾. It maintains links with the VESPERTINE LEAGUE via fort LAUK (Pop. c. 38,400).
- GEMIRIM: Set. small city in the c of ESHIR⁽²⁾. Its main industry is the quarrying of clay, which is exported and used to manufacture the pottery containers that the region is known for (Pop. c. 11,200).
- GEMINATE: Med. Name given to those born of a congenital defect in VARU, DANU, and to a lesser extent, surrounding areas. The defects rarely take the same form, though typically manifest as eyes with twin pupils, distorted facial features and rarely, twin mouths (or mouths that are distended, as though partially split into two). Extreme cases were found with traits similar to those of conjoined twins.

Though such beings would be shunned or killed at birth in most other regions, they are celebrated in Varu, where they are sent to EN AADU, to study the FIRMAMENTAL ARTS.

Despite the adoration that's bestowed upon them, few live healthy lives and many die during their studies. Those who survive are typically weak, though rise to positions of power in Varu.

There is speculation that geminates are descended from ancient unions between $\underline{CATACHIS}$ and \underline{HUMANS} , though this cannot be proven.

- GEMMEDRA: Set. Major city in the c of EREBETH. Over the past decades it has exploded in size due to an influx of refugees from the east (Pop. c. 1,000,000).
- GEMOPHAR: 1. Geo. Peninsula in the far north west of OPHAR, protruding north into the INNER SEA, serving as a divider between the GULF OF OPHAR^(1.) in the west and the CAMARINAL SEA in the east.
- 2. For. Woodland in the north of OPHAR, occupying the eponymous peninsula⁽¹⁾. Cork, chestnut and beech trees are the most common.
- GEMS, the: also 'the Three Gems'. Soc. Colloquial name within the KORACHANI EMPIRE for its largest and most wealthy, impressive cities. At one time there were many such cities; BAALBETH and Oress in BA'AKH; HETEPHEROPOLIS and TEIRA in VENTHIR; the CITY OF ALMAGEST in ALMAGEST; MAKHARA and KORACHAN in KORACHAN and ANAKARRA in VAALK, amongst others.

Due to the decline of the empire (such as the SUNDERING OF THE KORACHANI EMPIRE and the eventual loss of Venthir in 3781 RM) and the slow death of ELYDEN most of those cities have since waned, leaving only a few to claim the title of Gem.

Today the Gems are considered to be KHADON, BAAYN, and Makhara.

GENERAL ARANTUR: see ARANTUR, GENERAL.

- GENESSARET: Geo. Small hill overlooking lake KHASAGA AUR and final resting place of the HIGHBORN PRINCE NAPHTALI, in TEMUJA, just north of the GREATTOWN of DUARIAHAHN.
- GENETHAANT: 1. Geo. Fertile, if dry plains in the c east of THE SURRACH.
- 2. Fortified city and central settlement in the eponymous region in the c east of THE SURRACH. Its people are renowned astronomers, who place great importance in the position of the stars, which they believe govern the lives of those born beneath them (Pop. c. 37,000).
- GENETIC MEMORY: a trait observed by naturalists where some creatures inherit memories or mannerisms of their direct ancestors. This is most well-known amongst the MERILLS: one of the original Two-and-Twenty MORTAL PEOPLES.
- GENEVETH: Geo. Scrublands in the west of LIMOTH^(1.), crossing the emirates of OTHOTEL^(1.) and DEITHO^(1.).
- GENMA: Set. Settlement in the north west of KHAMID. It is known for its carob groves, which are used to produce flour (Pop. c. 8,100).
- GENNAN: Set. Small coastal city in the south east of SABAISA. Its main industry is fishing (Pop. c. 15,000).
- GENUREN: also 'Monolith of Genuren'. His. Arc. Large monolith, some 300ft. high in the south east of AETHIOS, carved, in situ, from the pink stone of the region, possibly from a natural rocky pinnacle. It dates back to the FOURTH AGE or earlier and glass artifacts found near its base were attributed to a culture that faltered in the wake of the WAR OF SCOURGING that ended the Fourth Age.
- GEODES: Set. Settlement in the c of the INTERURBAN STATES, producing most of the food consumed in the capital of GARES (Pop. c. 6,400).

GEOLITH: Geo. Sup. Str. Colloquial name for gigantic floating octahedron monoliths that are common in the south of MENISCEA, located in the far east of DANU and over the SEA OF IPERIA.

The monoliths are of artificial origin, dating back thousands of years. They float around 100-ft. above the surface of the ground over well-known LEYLINES. Some are held in a network with runic MAGICK, forming a floating fortress that is known as SPIRAFIR, though dozens of separate formations exist, some drifting aimlessly, others held in place by ancient magicks.

GEPHESOCH: also 'Gypsum Forest'. Geo. Area in the far north of THE OLD FOREST, dominated by gypsum karst formations, tightly packed like a maze, often with razor-sharp edges. It acts as an effective border with the DESOLATION OF ASTUDAN.

GER: Soc. Arc. Traditional TEMUIAN dwelling; originally temporary structures used and carried by nomads; now more permanent with stone bases, wattle-and-daub walls and either thatched or hide roofs. Larger stronger municipal structures, usually of stone and wood are often called gers too.

GERANT: see MALANI TREE RAT.

GERASHEND WEBS, the: Sup. Geo. Pervasive ancient Atramentally Tainted region along the border between the east of MACELLARIA and the west of EPHATTA. The region is named after the pulp-like lattice that forms its greater mass, that covers and binds the surface of the surrounding geology, holding together landforms that should have decayed and crumbled by the passage of time. The place is inimical to all forms of flora and fauna and the air is thick with SHADOWISPS, making it of little value to mortal industries.

The region is categorised as EXTREMELY DANGEROUS by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

GERAT II: (B. unknown) Pol. Current dynastic ruler of the City-kingdom of KETESH. Little is known of him or the dynasty itself, for the dynastic family has for centuries been notoriously reclusive, though most believe that they live lives of decadence, living in the tattered finery of generations past, oblivious to the goings on of the city itself.

GEREMA: 1. Geo. Hills in the north east of SUMA'YA, close to the border with BA'AKH.

2. Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region in north eastern SUMA'YA.

GERENT: Soc. Rnk. In the KORACHANI EMPIRE, the head of a PATRICIAN HOUSE. Not to be confused with the PATRIARCH or MATRIARCH (1.), who is the eldest and most respected member of the House, the gerent is the heart of the House; the core around which the other members revolve—the gerent is usually in charge of House holdings, businesses and ventures and wields the most power in the House, with their beliefs shaping those of other members.

GERENT OF AMBRA: Leg. Myt. Mythic figure in LYRIDIA said to inhabit the ruins of CARCOSA, in the east of the nation. Legends claim that the Gerent was cursed to spend eternity in the ruins, and his ghost is said to haunt it to this day. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

GERESAH: Rui. Abandoned settlement in the west of AETHIOS, in what is now the BLEEDING PLAINS. It was abandoned in c. 2800 RM after the aforementioned ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region expanded beyond its borders.

GERESSA: Set. Major city in the north west of PNESSA, along the southern shore of lake AKASM and the mouth of river EPIPHORA. It is the southern-most major city along the course of the river SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾ and is a major trading centre along the course of the river (Pop. c. 225,000).

GERGEST: Set. City in the north of ETUA. It is amongst the most metropolitan of Etuani settlements and is famed for its large fruit groves, which grow oranges, dates, pomegranates and persimmons. It originated as an oasis and a settlement grew around it, watered y extracting water from deep aquifers beneath the oasis (Pop. c. 40,000).

GERICIA: His. Nm. Early FIFTH AGE culture that dominated the PELASGOSI PENINSULA, west of the BATHAKOL Mountains. It diminished in c. -50 RM following wars with the KORACHANI city-states^(1.), and PELASGOS would ultimately emerge from its ruin decades later.

GERICIAN: Lan. Language of ancient PELASGOS, still spoken in some regions of Pelasgos and the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS, as well as the south of VÂRR. See Vol II: Languages.

GERIGASHA: Sup. Geo. Dre. DREAMSCAPE in the north east of GRARNEÂST, notorious for its MANIFORM BEASTS, which terrorise the area, and which are able to escape into the MATERIAL PLANE for short periods of time in search of prey. The region is patrolled by rangers experienced in hunting the beasts.

GERIN TA': Sec. Small coastal city in the north of KHULL. Situated at the edge of the HYLIN delta, it is a major agricultural centre, providing food to much of the northern coast of the nation. It is known for an ancient arena that has been converted into a grain silo – one of the largest in the nation (Pop. c. 14,000).

GERM-BIRTH: Med. Tec. In advanced nations with access to sophisticated cloning techniques, such as KORACHAN, PARTHIS, and SARASTRO, germ-birth has come to refer to the engineering of UMBRANS, often to the specifications of wealthy and/or influential individuals, such as patricians and magnates who cannot conceive through more mundane means.

GERM-BORN: see GERM-BIRTH.

GEROD: Set. Settlement in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of SYRTIS^(1.) (Pop. c. 6,000).

GERRICA: Set. Coastal settlement in the c south west of HABOT, overlooking the north west of the BAY OF ESSIA (Pop. c. 8,200).

GERRON: Set. Small city in the region of EDALLA in the west of THE SURRACH. It is a major source of food and reed-items in the area (Pop. c. 15,200).

GERUT: Geo. Wastes in the c north west of BROR^(1.), south of the Black Desert of ARUTESH, across the border between the east of the nation of Bror^(2.) and the west of KASIHAAL.

GESHAL: 1. Geo. Large massif dominating the eastern territories of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOMs, most notably the city-kingdom of UCHRON. The range covers no more than 50,000-square miles, including foothills and badlands.

2. Pol. Duchy in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of UCHRON.

3. See. The largest city in the Geshal massif, along the FALLAR highlands, in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of UCHRON. The city is fortified and heavily-guarded on account of its silver mines (Pop. c. 15,800).

 $\underline{\text{GESHEAH}} : \mathit{Set.}$ Settlement in the east of $\underline{\text{GIBEAH}}$ (Pop. c. 6,000).

GESHIJAL: also 'the Gateway to the East'. Mil. Str. Major fortress in the far east of THE OLD FOREST, close to the border with AHRISHEN along the AQARASHA outcrops. It was once a gate for traffic between the Old Forest and Ahrishen, and it commanded a vast network of defensive towers that stretch to the border with the DESOLATION OF ASTUDAN 175-miles distant, though the route has fallen silent due to the regions' xenophobia, with only sporadic trade allowed across it, at best.

GESHTINANNLAN: Set. City in the c of THE OLD FOREST, along the shore of at the point where the river IAGANNATH enters lake Iagannath. It forms part of many KORACHANI legends, though little is known of the truth behind them (Pop. c. 32,000).

GESHTU: Int. Soc. Ancient place of great cultural significance to the people of THE OLD FOREST. Located in the northern face of the NELCHA Mountains, it is a flat platform hewn from the mountainside, facing north. In old myths of the Old Forest (which are largely ignored by its people today) it is the place where the first seven members of the forest tribe were created. Though similar to the creation myths common across all cultures of ELYDEN, there is no proof linking this tale to that of the creation myths of the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN.

GESKIR: Ind. Set. Settlement in the south east of SKAROS, within the western-most reaches of the ANOMOFERROH wastes, its main industry is the extraction of UMBRA. Many of the roustabouts and roughnecks working on its umbra rigs are SKAROSIAN GIANTS – uncorrupted natural MORTAL HUMANS commonly grow to 7-ft. tall (Pop. c. 6,000).

GESSEL, the: Geo. Rough upland region in the east of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of NICADA.

GESSMERAON: Rui. Arc. Ancient colossus carved from the volcanic rock of a now destroyed caldera in the wastes of POURA in the far north of RAONGEN^(2.), along the southern edge of the WHITE SHEET. The colossus takes the form of a sombre, slender seated being, its features, though gigantic, worn from age. The remains of a great metropolis lie at its feet, almost completely erased from records and wasteland alike. Little else is known of this place as there has been close to no imperial exploration of the region.

GETA: Rui. MINTHAN ruin in the c-south east of present-day THETIS, though to date back to c. 2900 RM.

GETE: Geo. Island off the south western coast of the nation of ELAT.

GETH VARGA: Mys. Rui. Ancient ATRAMENTAL conduit located in the south west of the KORACHANI colony of MADOUR. The conduit is thought to date back to the FIFTH AGE, though was already ruined by the time of the FADING. It was made from a rare crystalline substance that acted as a FOCUS^(2.) to nearby SHAPERS.

It has been investigated throughout the FIFTH AGE, though was determined to no longer be functional, though that does not stop upstart shapers from visiting the site and experimenting with the crystals.

GETHEM: Set. Coastal settlement in the north east of the TEMPLAR STATES, overlooking the BAY OF SHERUSALL (Pop. c. 6,200).

GETHIN MAUSOLEA, the: His. Rui. Twin mausolea in the north of PARAIYA, along both banks of the river PAARA, west of the city of BELUAN. Constructed in c. 1800 RM, before the appearance of the KORACHANIEMPIRE in the region, when it was still known as THE PARIA, the mausolea were commissioned by a nobleman (remembered only as Gethi, after whom the monuments are named).

The mausolea are built in the typical Paraiyan style, crowned by octagonal tapering domes, and anyone observing them from the distance would mistake them for great palaces. The larger of the two mausolea lies north off the river and is made of white marble and houses Gethi's wife. The second mausoleum is the final resting place of Gethi and is made of black marble and is much smaller, and is largely hidden from view, so that its larger companion can take centre stage. Gethi designed and built the two tombs after his wife's death and killed himself once both structures were complete, so that he could be buried looking at his wife across the river.

The mausolea are now abandoned and largely forgotten, save by local herders. Despite their age they remain in good condition, though most of their riches have been plundered – with most treasures taken by Korachani troops in 1329 RM and taken to Khadon, where many now remain on display in museums.

GETHSEMA: Set. Major city in the c east of OD MEGINNAS^(1.). It is a major link in the land trade network, linking the central region with the more rural south east. Situated along the course of a river, some 20-miles from the coast, it has become an important centre of trade (Pop. c. 140,300).

GETWAELL: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the east of THE OLD FOREST, overlooking lake TOROTH, along the border with RHAMIA.

GEYISH STERKEM: Geo. Mountain range in the north east of WESTERN LLACHATUL, serving as a border between the north of ALAM BETHYL and the east of the LOST DEMESNE. It is named after the major constellation of STERKEM, which is anthropomorphised in the Bethylan religion of SABIANISM, and is said to be the tomb of fallen deities after they are cast down from the heavens.

GHADRA: Dem. 'Ghadran'. His. Ntn. Historical nation in the far south of SAMMAEA. The nation was annexed by the SYCHTAN PREFECTURES between 3799 – 3822 RM, and the eastern most of its territories were later absorbed by NIZZUM.

The region now known as Ghadra comprises 21 of the 107 prefectures of Sychta, and it is now a vital part of its territories today, controlling many industries and resources, including iron mines. See Vol III: Extinct States.

GHADRAI: also: 'Ghadraian Pillars'. Sup. Geo. Dark ATRAMENTALLY
TAINTED region in the north west of the CAMMOREAN Mountains, forming a natural border between MOAH and ANDILUTH. It is described by explorers as undulating as though breathing, with oily black tendrils bursting from the earth writhing lazily.

The region is categorised as a $\underline{\text{MODERATE THREAT}}$ by the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI}}$ $\underline{\text{INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES}}.$

GHAGRISZH: Mil. Str. Expansive lines of fortifications in the south of KHALHAT, within the region of ATRAMENTAL TAINT known as the DAENED SULRACH^(I.). Little is known of these fortifications by outsiders, but they are believed to be home to legions of the PORCELAIN PHALANX, standing ready against threats from KHARKHARADONTIS.

GHAIYAN: Set. Small coastal city in the south of PERGOST, overlooking the SEA OF USOLESA. Its main industry is fishing and whaling, though it has a proud ancient tradition of SHAPING that its people keep largely to themselves (Pop. c. 12,000).

GHAL RIMMA: His. Ntn. Extinct nation in the north east of EASTERN LLACHATUL, occupying what is now the c and north east of KOMMEA. It emerged in c. 340 RM from the ruin of the earlier state of GALABRIA, which had collapsed about 100-years earlier, in c. 250 RM.

The region established its own religion and unique culture, but these were eradicated following the rise to power of the SCIONIC CREATURE CUNOMAGLIO in c. 1200 RM, whose regime had all traces of the previous culture expunged.

GHALA: Sec. Small fortified settlement in the east of PNESSA. Portions of the settlement are made from the ivory and bones of long-extinct beasts that once roamed across the surrounding woodlands (Pop. c. 6,000).

GHALATTA: His. Ntn. Ancient FIFTH AGE territory once belonging to native YARAOMIC PEOPLE. It was situated in the north of SAMMAEA, forming the north of their ancestral lands in what are today the east of MHAROKK, and coastal areas of HARAPPA⁽³⁾. Indeed, Harappa is a corruption of the word Ghalatta. It is amongst the last Yaraomic territories to be taken by KORACHAN, and was slowly overrun between 750 – 900 RM, during which time native Yaraomic People were taken as slaves or driven out, forced into ever-dwindling territories.

Like most of Yaraomic history, very little remains of its people's culture today, and the caste of lorekeepers known as the IARAOM GRABBA travel across northern Sammaea searching for ancient artefacts to take to their fortress-library in IARSHUGGAH.

GHALLETHA: lit. 'plains of decay'. Common colloquial term in the KORACHANI EMPIRE for lands that have died whilst under Korachani rule; typically, through mismanagement of agriculture or ATRAMENTAL TAINT. These include, but are not limited to:

1. Geo. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED plains in the far south of VÂRR, close to the border with PELASGOS. The plains are grey and riddled with DUSTSTONE formations and the ruins of ancient industries. The region has become particularly inimical to life with mortals and fauna spending prolonged periods of time within its expanse contracting various ATRAMENTAL AILMENTS.

The region has increased in severity over the past decades and has recently been re-categorised as HIGHLY DANGEROUS by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

- 2. Geo. Plains in the north east of NARTHEL, overlooking the ABYSS OF ENESH. It was, until c. 2400 RM, a major agricultural region known for its wines, though only one major producer remains ARALKAL.
- 3. Geo. Wasteland in the north of SARASTRO. The land was once comprised of rugged woodlands in the south of NÁRTHEL but over-exploitation left the region barren, and Sarastro was granted the lands as part of the SARASTROAN SANCTION, though they are largely ignored to this day, their soil barren and lifeless.
- 4. also 'the sky Wastes'. Ast. Located in the SOUTHERN HEMISPHERE, this region of the night sky is named for its dearth of constellations, due to the relatively weak magnitude stars that are found within.
- Sup. Geo. Atramentally tainted wasteland in the west of SUMA'YA, in the north west of the PACHADRON region.

The region is categorised as LEAST CONCERN by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

GHALMAR: Set. Settlement in the c north west of PHYRR. Its main industry is the mining and processing of the rare element known as PARADROSS (Pop. c. 7,000).

GHAMIFATAN: Sec. Small city in the c west of NOAVATUR (Pop. c. 38,000).

GHAMMARA: Set. City in the c south of METHUMN, in the east of the IRAGASH valley. It forms a part of the main inner trade route in the nation, and trades goods found and manufactured in the more arid south eastern territories with the capital, Araroby (Pop. c. 38,000).

GHAN: Geo. Region in the north east of VENTHIR, encompassing the cities of LATUAR, KATLEGO, HAUTIA and TEIRA; known throughout the ARID TRIPTYCH as a hub of spice- and salt-trade.

GHANAIN: Set. Costal settlement in the far north of the BARRIER LANDS, overlooking the BAY OF BEREV. Its main industry is the farming of oysters for flesh and pearls (Pop. c. 5,200).

GHANQI: 1. also 'the Grand Delusion'. Int. Sup. Geo. Dre. Expansive and powerful DREAMSCAPE in the east of QARALAM. It appeared in 3730 RM and over the city of the same name⁽²⁾, engulfing it and all of its people. The dreamscape completely cut off the city from surrounding lands, effectively rendering it invisible to outsiders, and completely undetectable to outside of ONEIROMANCY and astral projection. Its people are stricken by a compulsion that makes them believe that they are nobility, living lives of decadence, where in fact they are diseased and living in wretched squalor.

The region is shunned to this day, and tales of the misguided decrepitude of Ghanqi are famous across not only Qaralam but also surrounding lands.

2. Set. City in the east of QARALAM. Once a prosperous metropolis along the route of the NACRE ROAD, it found itself at the epicentre of a newly-appeared DREAMSCAPE in 3730 RM that effectively removed the city from the MATERIAL PLANE, making it indetectable and impossible to travel to or from outside of through DREAMWALKING and astral projection.

The city exists today in a limbo, its structures decrepit and rotting, its denizens ensorcelled by a strange compulsion known as the Grand Delusion, in which they believe they are the nobility living lives of decadence, where in truth they dress in rags, live in squalor and eat scraps of rotten food.

The Nacre road has since shifted, circumventing the invisible city, though some morbid tourists pay good coin to look into the dreamscape where it is said to still exist, undetectable by mortal eyes (Pop. unknown).

GHARAD: Geo. Desert in the c north of the Barrier Lands, along the path of the TROPIC OF RAH. It is a barren expanse of dust-like soil that received very little rain. When it does rain, however, something spectacular happens, and the entire area explodes into a bloom of colours as tiny flowers grow. The spectacle is short-lived, however, for the flowers typically die within a week of appearing.

GHARAKHLOR, AISLE OF: see AISLE OF GHARAKHLOR.

GHARALL: Set. Small city in the c north of ELEKHID. It is twinned with the settlement ALLATHU, which faces it across the river VHOTHAL. Together they operate a ferry service that allows one of the few crossings of the river (Pop. c. 14,5000).

GHARAMALH: Mil. Str. Major coastal fortress and pirate outpost in the north west of CYHLAGHARR, on the island of BARGHEANN, overlooking the BAY OF SCENEA. The fort is the base of the infamous pirate lord HAYREDHOSS UYHAVEN, and serves as the dock to his ship the KISSAMAYHA.

GHARUM: Geo. Desert in the north of KHARKHARADONTIS, forming the north eastern part of the great DUNE SEA. In 3900 RM Excavator-general LURION TED ASTERIS of the AIWAHAN ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION led an expedition to the region, drawn by rumours of ancient industrial and mechanical ruins, and discovered the so-called MECHANISED COLOSSUS – an artefact shrouded in mystery that is said to have been use to reverse engineer various TECHNARCANE technologies presently used by the Order.

GHASH: Plr. 'Ghasha'. Rel. Rnk. Spiritual leaders in the SOLEYN TERRITORIES who operate independently of the KWEI philosophy and, in theory, are agnostic to any religious and philosophical movements. Over the years they have become the centre of an agnostic spiritualism, now known as GHASHA, that became prevalent between c. 3470 - 3540 RM, to the disgust of fervent worshippers of Kwei, and there has existed a schism between the different beliefs that persists to this day, causing much friction across the Soleyn Territories.

They are comparable to viziers of other nations, and act as advisors to the MAHANTKHAI, and elect a new Mahantkhaj should anything happen to the current one. They are often students of the MATERIA OMNA and the teachings of the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN (or what corrupted forms of it are known to the Solyeni), and, rarely, are SHAPERS, though Soleyn has little in the form of a shaping tradition.

GHASHA: Rel. Phil. Soc. An agnostic spiritualism that originated in the SOLEYN TERRITORIES in c. 3470 – 3540 RM in the city of PASHANI, spreading rapidly to surrounding areas as the teachings of the first GHASH became widely popular. It has since become a rival to the severe philosophy of KWEI and there is a divide in Soleyn between the disparate schools of thought.

It has also since spread to the north of the $\underline{\text{GROWING MOUNTAINS}}$ of $\underline{\text{MULCIBER}}$, and many of its north and eastern territories make use of $\underline{\text{GHASHA}}$ advisors. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

GHASSERAN: m. Per. (D. 1485 RM) Rel. Religious heretic in ancient FIFTH

AGE VAEVECTA^(1.) who was executed for his blasphemous teachings, which included worship of the antediluvian being known as CHIMAERA. His death stalled the spread of this new religion, but it eventually spread into various mystery cults would become the dominant religion of the region following the death of the god-king ISTAR^(1.) and the collapse of Vaevecta.

He remains an important figure amongst the various cults of Chimaera, and is worshipped as not only the prophet of Chimaera, but also its only saint. He was drawn and quartered, and in so-doing, his body was spread across the various territories in which Chimaera is now worshipped.

GHAT KHA: Geo. Impact crater, measuring some 10-miles across, in the c of THE SURRACH, in the north west of the SURRACHI PLAINS. The city of GANGUA is situated atop its peak.

GHATA: Rvr. River in the west of ESHIR⁽²⁾, flowing west for some 285-miles from sources in the HIGA Mountains, before meeting its parent, the river GAMUS.

GHATAN: Rvr. River in the south east of CHTHYRID, flowing north west for 300-miles from the northern face of the RHAECHA Mountains, through the highlands of BRMYIRID before joining up with the river ALLIA. It is the main source of fresh water in Chthyrid, alongside the river NOTHA.

GHATI: Rvr. River in the south east of ESHIR^(2.), flowing east for 210-miles from sources in the HLARIRIS badlands, before reaching the coast at the GULF OF ESHIRON.

GHATREL: Set. Coastal city in the south east of NÁRTHEL (Pop. c. 20,000).

GHAYATTAN: Sea. Shallow waters off the western-coast of the continent of BROR^(1.), encompassing almost 1,000-miles of coastline from KRENN in the north to the coastal plains of QUALTHAS in the south. The waters of Ghayattan are incredibly shallow, rendering the passage difficult for most vessels. Should ELYDEN'S waters continue to drop it is likely the entire sea will dry up.

GHAZHARID AUTOCRACY, the: Pol. Autocratic regime that ruled over the PANTHEON ISLES between c. 1320 – c. 1580 RM. They emerged following a coup against the then-ruling monarchy and ruled the archipelago with an iron fist until their waning influence following a costly and fruitless war with RHEA, which left their coffers empty, their influence diminished. They spent the last of their days holed up in their citadel in the city of TODRRA, living in ignorant decadence until the death of their last surviving member in c. 1630 RM, decades after their rule had floundered.

GHAZIZ: Plr. 'Ghazizi'. Rel. Mil. Rnk. Militocratic religious fanatics within the REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO. They emerged in the decades following the SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE when the REFORMED CHURCH OF SARASTRO was expanding rapidly across its new territories, pushing any remnants of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE north. The Ghazizi grew from the many independent gangs that had appeared in areas where the new religion grew strong, becoming an informal militant arm of the Reformed Church.

They were often found on church-funded ships between 3870 – 3910 RM, preying on the northern coast of the INNER SEA, taking worshippers of the Church of the Undying Machine as SLAVES. Though this activity lessened over the years as their role within the church became more codified. Today, they accompany SARASTROAN-allied pilgrimages of the SHADOW MARCHES, where they act as guards, and they can still be found as adjuncts to individual churches, where they act as guards and bullies, often being regarded as little more than gangers supposedly acting in the interests of the church.

GHEB: Set. Highland settlement in the south of CHTHYRID, along a fork in the river ALLIA (Pop. c. 14,300).

GHELGAR: Geo. Major valley in the c of TEMUJA dominating around 90-miles of the course of the river AIHANE, south east of the region of TOGARMAH.

GHENAN: Set. Settlement in the c east of THE SURRACH, known for its proud hunters and trade in gazelle skulls and other trophies (Pop. c. 26,000).

GHER SHOM: (B. 3934 RM) Pol. NÁRTHELI exile, travelled to CARIA (6.) and was elevated by KING CAERAN to personal advisor in 3993 RM, later becoming the true power in Caria.

GHERA: Geo. Gypsum karst formation in the south west of the WORKNAH Mountains, in the east of VENTHIR. The formation is characterised by its black-stained jagged peaks and ridges, some of which are carved into geometric designs by a long-dead culture. The canyons of HANUH are an extension of the Ghera formation and are known to easily flood following the first rains autumn.

GHILL AMORA: Rvr. Major river dominating the c and north of the TEMPLAR STATES. It its fullest flow it runs for 600-miles from sources in the SIDIRION and THALLEI Mountains, before meeting lake DORRA. The flow of the river lessens greatly in summer, as many of its sources run seasonally run dry, though it does flow all year round.

GHILLIK: Lak. Lake in the c north west of the TEMPLAR STATES, along the course of the river GALLIMORA.

GHOLA: Geo. Mountain dominating central IO, running from the north west to the south east for some 330-miles. It is the main source of the river SHAMAR and SALORA, which flow north.

GHORDADOS: Geo. Rocky headland and coastal highland in the north of the TEMPLAR STATES, stretching south for some 170-miles. Until c. 2000 RM the headland was an island, though lowering sea levels saw it linked to the mainland via a narrow isthmus on which is perched the fortress of DAPRE.

GHORQUMM: Set. Major city in the c of PNESSA, and one of its largest conurbations, straddling both banks of the river IGRROD. It is the largest city in Pnessa and its southern districts are known as an industrial centre and are noted for their many manufactories (Pop. c. 1,400,000).

GHOST: Sup. Rel. Supranatural manifestation common across ELYDEN and documented by all cultures across multiple ages. The definition of a ghost can vary wildly form area to area, though commonly encompasses SPIRIT-like apparitions and otherwise unexplained phenomena.

It is believed that ghosts are linked to spirits and OTHERWORLDERS in some way, though whether these are remnants of dead mortals or manifestations of as-yet unborn spirits remains to be decided, though many believe that there are different forms of ghosts covering both those theses, as well as others. Many ghost sightings are thought to be sightings of supranatural beings, such as OMNAL GHOSTS or possibly little-understood creatures such as CYRION'S GEOMORPHS.

Though much is known about ghosts through ASTRAL PROJECTION and other forms of SHAPING that brings the SHAPER closer to the otherworld and spirits. See Vol IV: the Materia Omna.

GHOST BELLS: see BELLS, GHOST.

GHOST OF THE INNER SEA, the: also 'the Ghost of Korachan'. Int. Law.

His. Purported serial killer active in the INNER SEA REGION, who is believed to be an OTHERWORLDER or some other SCIONIC CREATURE with a long life span, or possibly a legacy mantle that is passed on to successors who continue acting in the same modus operandi.

Killings were first noticed in the city of DEOCHAN in 3499 RM, with bodies discovered missing their livers, kidneys and hearts. The killings continued for seven years, with dozens of victims claimed over the period, and suddenly stopped in 3506 RM. The killings started again around half a century later, with another body discovered outside Deochan in 3555 RM that had had the same organs removed, though no link was noticed at the time, with most people involved in the original investigation having died long before. Killings continued for several years before dying down again. It was only after several such cycles that historians learnt of the patterns, which led to a city-wide manhunt in 3669 RM that brought chaos to the city and saw several innocent people lynched and killed before the investigation was brought under control again. The spree continued until 3674 RM before stopping again, though police forces prepared contingencies for the next 50-years, should the killings start again.

They never did, at least not in Deochan. Nothing happened for over a century, and then killings started once more in the city of KORACHAN. A single spree that saw the bodies of 33 people found, all missing their livers, kidneys and hearts, though it is believed that many more were killed in this way without their bodies being recovered. The killings ended after that spree, though weeks later 5 people were found dead under similar circumstances in KHADON. By then words of the old killings from Deochan had resurfaced and people had coined a term for the supranatural killer – the Ghost of Korachan. Panic struck the nation, and freemen became afraid of leaving their houses alone. Cases of missing people and mysterious deaths became misattributed to the so-called ghost. Even the economy suffered through this period and martial law was enacted across the KORACHANI PENINSULA in 3780 RM to get things moving along again. Copycat murders matching the original MO spiralled out of control, and though they too died out by c. 3790 RM, years after the original killings had likely ended their present cycle.

Decades passed and the populace at large forgot about the events of those few years, and while historians and the Korachani government waited for more killings in c. 3890 RM, nothing happened. A century passed and no such murders came to pass – at least none that were conclusively related to the Ghost of Korachan. Then in c. 3950 RM bodies began to appear in cities in eastern AZAZEM, with each discovery located farther west, including 3 bodies found in AGLAIA and more in northern LAASKHA between 3954 and 3955 RM, where dozens went missing, with bodies turning up in remote areas, indicating that they had been hidden intentionally. This fresh spree earned the killer their current moniker, and word spread across the INNER SEA, where it became embedded in the public consciousness, remaining infamous for decades after the trail went cold.

The killings resumed in 4004 RM, when the body of an influential merchant was discovered in a canal in Khadon, presaging a fresh set of killings that led to renewed fears and increased tensions. Children played singing games with the ghost as a subject, without knowing the centurieslong history behind it. Many larger cities enforced curfews and discouraged people from stepping out after dark, though even with such measures, bodies continued being found in Khadon and, later, in surrounding settlements reaching farther east with every discovery until the publication of this volume, with the latest body found in ZEPHANICHAN in 4006 RM.

Luckily, few alive today know the history behind the killings, or there might be more panic regarding these latest killings. Scholars and criminal historians have attempted to make sense of the killings, noting a pattern of roughly 50 years of inactivity (with some specifically citing 49-years) and about 7 years of killing. Countless theories as to the identity of the killer have been proposed over the years, including that it is an otherworlder of some kind (the most popular opinion), or that they are a monstrous being of strange physiognomy that is dormant for decades and awakes to seek specific nourishment. Others have proposed that the killer is a SCION of KHARANI that kills as part of an unfathomable ritual. Others still believe these killings are not the work of a single being, but that they are the collective work of a secret organisation that are mapped to an ancient preordained calendar of events.

GHOST OF KORACHAN, the: see GHOST OF THE INNER SEA, THE.

GHOST IN THE MACHINE: Tec. Aspect of TECHNARCANA in which a SPIRIT^(1.) is bound to an engine, effectively acting as a regulator and filter through which the engine can accomplish more specific results without constant need of a technologist or TECHNARCANIST to supervise it.

GHOST MOUNTS, the: see LITANI.

GHOST SEED: see BAEROLOLLACH.

GHOST TOWNS: Soc. Settlements that were abandoned after mining was and other industries were stopped typically haemorrhaged people, who fled to other more prosperous regions and settlements, leaving their original homes abandoned. This was often the case in old KORACHANI dependencies that were left to the INTERREGES or DOMNITORS after industries ended following waning resources. In other cases, many settlements were just shut down by the government, with people forcibly moved to other cities where labour was needed.

There are a few outliers scattered about the empire, with a handful of people who refused to move away, still living in these abandoned places with no amenities, postal service, electricity, industry, shops or even churches. Many of them have been degazetted, and have been removed from official maps and documentation and are not considered as settlements by the Korachani government, with their residents left to fend for themselves.

Much of VÂRR and SUMA'YA, as well as many parts of c AZAZEM are noted for their many ghost towns and the disparate people that still skulk around in their shadows.

GHOUD: Ind. Set. Gold mining settlement in the MULL CITY-STATES, in the $\underline{\text{TOLIASOR}}$ Mountain chain (Pop. c. 4,100).

GHOUL FEVER: Med. Flu-like illness with diarrheal symptoms that is common in the lower wards of large cities, particularly where there is inadequate sewage.

It was originally believed to have been caused by al ghuls, leading to a madded genocide of the beings in the city of ALMAGEST in 1166 RM, though it was later found to be caused by contact with untreated drinking or sewage. See Vol II: Diseases and Illnesses.

GHOULISLES, THE: Geo. Largely unexplored island chain comprising four major islands and many smaller ones off the north western coast of THE SURRACH, divided from the mainland by the STRAIT OF KHADRA. In the early days of the FIFTH AGE the island was home to an ancient nation now remembered only as the TRAGIC KINGDOM, which is believed to have died out from a horrific PLAGUE in c. 580 RM, leaving the island uninhabited and blockaded by Surrachi ships for centuries after.

Legends in the Surrach that developed since that time claim that the Ghoul Isles are populated by a considerable number of DEGENERATES or similarly wretched beings, though there is little proof of this due to the cultural fear of the island that persist to this day. Rumours abound of cannibalism, debased magicks, profane religions and worse.

GHOUL REEF: Sup. Geo. Reef off the coast of south eastern OBLEVIS, known for the gruesome ATRAMENTAL TRAITS of its waters, in which the bodies of those who drown do not decay in any observable manner, and also maintain a modicum of motion, with limbs grasping for any living object that moves close as unthinking eyes register the movement.

GHRA: Set. Settlement in the north of CHTHYRID, along the southern bank of the river NOTHA. It controls many settlements to its south, along the scree at the base of the DAGHA plateau, who mine its riches (Pop. c. 19,000).

GHRATH: Set. Settlement in the territories of UKHARTH, in SAMMAEA (Pop. c. 8,000).

GHROND: Dem. 'Ghrond'. Ntn. Coastal nation in the west of BROR^(1.), overlooking the GHAYATTANI coast. Its main industry is cotton farming. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

GHULAN: Set. Fortified city in the west of VIRAHAN, along the course of the river SARA. It forms part of the GREAT ROAD, and is noted for its large market, which is built within a ravelin that was originally located outside the city, but which has since become surrounded by buildings – mostly warehouses and the offices of merchant houses (Pop. c. 48,000).

GHULKULL: (6,320-ft.) Geo. Spire mesa in the c. of ATARAXIA, 180-miles from the coast at the STRAIT OF SKAROS. The spire was the foundation of the old MULL city of ARGHAM, much of which was hewn from its roots, and is thought to be the ancestral home of their kind in the region. Much of the spire has since crumbled following harsh acid rains in the region between c. 2100 – 2800 RM (it was once recorded as standing at 1,720-ft.), and much of its south western foothills are hidden beneath the sprawl of the Ataraxian capital, ARKAM. Its roots have been tunnelled extensively over the years and the vast catacomb complexes of Arkam stretch deep beneath its surface.

GHUTHORA: Geo. Massif in the west of TETHYSIA, within the TURCAR desert in EASTERN LLACHATUL. The region is largely unexplored and is still regarded as mysterious to this day.

GHUZZ: Geo. Limestone mountain-range in the c south west of THE SURRACH, to the south east of the MISHANOS Mountains. The foothills south west of the mountains are riddled with caves, known as CAMERANIA.

GIANT FICUS: Flo. A single tree can cover a huge area, with aerial roots growing to effectively serve as secondary trunks, with some older examples having hundreds of such secondaries. They are endemic to south east MENISCEA though examples have found their way across ELYDEN and many can be found in botanical gardens in cities across the INNER SEA REGION, including the famed MESANIN GOLIATH in the city of ALMAGEST.

GIANT FLEA: see PSULLANT.

GIANT GROUND SLOTH: Fau. Large therops native to the plains of western BROR, weighing up to 9,000 lbs. and measuring around 24-ft. in length. They are characterised by their strong forearms and long claws. Though they are herbivorous, eating plants, nuts and fruits, they are easily startled and quick to attack any beings that come across them. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

GIANT OF KHADON, the: Int. Sup. His. 10-ft. tall humanoid discovered in c. 3166 RM just outside the city of KHADON during maintenance of its vaulted sewers. Thought to have been naturally mummified in the ancient peat bogs on which most of western Khadon is now built, the being is believed to date back to the THIRD AGE, though scholars have this far been unable to unanimously categorise it, with some believing it to be an abnormally large human, and others believing it to be a bulky, misshapen giganri. It remains on display today, at the KHADON MUSEUM OF NATURAL HISTORY, where it has become somewhat of a folk legend, with various deeds and exploits erroneously attributed to it.

GIANT-KING, the: see SANAKHA.

GIANT ROSEWOOD: Flo. Large deciduous trees native to the south west of Sammaea, common to MACALLARIA and EPHATTA. Their bark smells faintly of roses and they can easily grow to 300-ft. in height. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

GIANT SEA OTTER: see SEA OTTER, GIANT.

GIANT SEROW: Fau. Large bovid capriform that is native to west of MENISCEA, specifically the western face of the EGETAKH Mountains, where individuals can grow to well over the size of a horse, with individuals sometimes reaching twice that size See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

GIANT, SKAROSIAN: Eth. People of south eastern SKAROS, noted for their natural size, often growing to 7-ft. tall, retaining proportionality of the average HUMAN. Though they claim giganri blood, this has been disputed by most scholars who have investigated their heritage, though no other explanation has been proffered – to all intents and purposes, they are human, with no foreign bloodlines detected.

They are most common in the region of KIURRA and can often be found amongst the roustabouts and roughnecks that work in the UMBRA RIGS in the area.

GIANT SNAIL: Fau. Cui. Gigantic land snails native to the south east of MENISCEA. They can grow up to 12" long and their meat is eaten across ACHAA⁽²⁾, AURUM⁽²⁾, and IMELKOT. Their shells have traces of metal in them, possibly from proximity to the true meniscus and their meat is rich in iron. They are hermaphroditic and can rapidly take over an area from relatively few numbers. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

GIANT VELVET WORM: see MUHADDAK.

GIANT'S MOUND: Geo. Mesa formation in the c south of AHRISHEN. The solid ground there is home to many small settlements, including the IVORY CITADEL.

GIBAL: Set. Settlement in the c south of VENTHIR, just north of the WORKNAH Mountains. Its main industry is gold mining (Pop. c. 6,200).

GIBBERING WORM, the: also 'Hossoguegt'. Rel. Dei. Wretched alien deity of the ETUANI people buried beneath a DUSTSTONE MONUMENT in the middle of the ETUAN WASTES.

It is unknown to outsiders due to the insular nature of its worshippers, though is considered to be a living, breathing creature. It is a cosmic being, born wholly outside of the MATERIAL PLANE, and is unfathomable to mortals. It is believed to have sought out the dry underworld beneath the Etuan Wastes of its own volition, where it has cocooned itself to serve its millennia-long transmogrification into a supreme deity that will oversee the reign of the people of Etua and possibly all of ELYDEN.

Though none have ever seen it, it is commonly depicted as a corpulent maggot-like worm with 3 sets of human-like arms and a small featureless face with a singular maw. On its stomach is a symbol that is represents the totality of creation – the MATERIAL PLANE, the OTHERWORLD, the DREAMWORLD, the MATERIAL OMNA, everything. Due to this, it is considered to be immeasurably wise, though blind to matters of morality or the desires and needs of mortals themselves. Its name is derived from the sound that echoes from the chthonic world on still nights as it contemplates the universe and all within it.

Little else is known about the mythology that surrounds this creature, and even less is known to outsiders. Rituals to the Gibbering Worm often include large crowds of flagellants that use drugs to induce trances and seizures, through which they are said to commune with their god, evoking a heightened state believed to be akin to that which the worm feels. This is done by consuming the fermented flesh of dust-worms cultivated in the region, which are thought to be related, somehow, to the Gibbering Worm. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

GIBBERING WORM, CULT OF THE: Rel. Religion that whose adherents worship the unknowable entity known as the GIBBERING WORM. The religion is most dominant in ETUA, though some natives of surrounding regions have also turned to the misguided cult, including many within the DAENED SULRACH (1.).

GIBBERING WORM, IDOL OF THE: Rel. Str. Monolithic DUSTSTONE idol in the middle of the ETUAN WASTES in the south west of ETUA. IT serves as a religious waypoint and marker for the resting place of the GIBBERING WORM, the alien deity of the ETUANI people. The structure's brittle nature requires constant maintenance and restoration, and the site is a constant buzz of activity, be it workers, priests prognosticating, or pilgrims flagellating themselves.

GIBBORA: see GIBBORAH.

GIBBORAH: also 'Gibbora'. Mountain, almost 400-miles long, in the south of JURRAS⁽²⁾ that serves as a natural border between it and KARAKHAS.

GIBBORAH PASS: pass in the c south west of the GIBBORAH Mountains linking the south east of JURRAS⁽²⁾ with north western KARAKHAS.

GIBBORIM: a martial GIGANRI caste in GNOTH.

GIBEAH: 1. Peninsula in the far east of SAMMAEA, to the south east of the ROILING SEA, protruding east of the WAELMIGHI rainforest.

2. Dem. 'Gibeahn'. An isolationist nation in the far west of the SAMMAEAN continent, Gibeah lies just north of the equator and is of a tropical monsoon climate, characterised by relatively constant temperatures and rainfall across seasons.

It originated in its present guise in 3878 RM, after a mysterious plague emerged in 3860 RM that only affected HALFBLOODS and OTHERWORLDERS, having a less pronounced effect on those with more human blood, and being most deadly against otherworlders. This decimated its then ruling council, which was made up of septuplet otherworlders, known as the ASTERI, and by 3878 RM only one remained, its mind twisted by the untimely deaths of its peers into a paranoid, delusional tyrant who ruled church and state to this day as a living deity of the CHURCH OF ARAK.

Before this, the region had already become known as a misanthropic state, more concerned with the immediate world than far states and empires, and it had a reputation as being an ally of the ABYSSAL TEMPLARS – a nihilistic death cult that is notorious in the north-east of Sammaea. Few foreigners are allowed into Gibeah today, and those that are merchants whose movements are restricted to the harbours and markets of its ports. Very little is known of the workings of the nation and most of its inner cities are known of only through hearsay and ancient explorations, and most information we have today is likely outdated or outright incorrect. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

GIBEAHN: Lan. Main language of the nation of GIBEAH. It emerged early in the FIFTH AGE from the earlier AKSARAN⁽²⁾ language See Vol II: Language of Elyden.

GIBEL: also 'the Waning City'. City in HADDURATH in the c east of SAMMAEA, some 150-miles south west of the SEA OF LETHEA, on the edge of the HOLLOW DESERT of FARROSH. The city is a major manufacturer of UMBRA, with a great number of SIPHON ENGINES and purification plants dominating its skyline, that pump the processed umbra to major cities around the Lethea.

The city's nickname comes from the expanding DREAMSCAPE of FARROSH, commonly known as the Hollow Desert, which is slowly consuming the periphery of the city and is causing its people to lose their memories. The city was a major metropolis when it was noticed that the expanding dreamscape would eventually reach the city, but the umbra trade was so lucrative that measures were not taken until it was too late.

As people in Gibel age, they are increasingly suffering from amnesia, a direct side-effect of the city's proximity to Farrosh. Even younger people are suffering from this effect and some children are even born without the ability to form long-term memories, preventing them from learning, leaving them in a vegetative state. Such individuals are usually killed once it's learnt that they are unable to advance beyond the level of infants, if even that. As a result, the city has a very large cemetery dedicated to its many euthanised infants (Pop. c. 60,000).

GIBEON: 1. Main currency used in GIBEAH. See Vol II: Currency and Coinage in Elyden.

2. Rel. Set. Temple-city in GIBEAH dedicated to a forgotten deity, possibly one of the DEMIURGES. It is populated by the deformed descendants of those who built it millennia past, though they are ignorant to the place's origins or history. The temple is typical of Gibeahn architecture – pinnacles and blade-like buttresses, once white, now tarnished and grimy. It is carved from the south-facing cliff-face of the BERDERAN highlands in the c of Gibeah.

Discovered during the infamous BERDEN expedition by imperial explorers in 609 RM, the temple was a place of fecund disparity where the veiled priests existed apart from the stunted and deformed neophyteslaves, who toiled under barbaric conditions to maintain the lavish offerings and idols that existed within the temple.

At the time, the temple-city was an independent region that existed outside of the culture and politics of the ELLAN KINGDOMS. Indeed, it was opposed to it in most ways and its followers were known to war with the people of the Ellan Kingdoms over trivial matters. The Ellan Kingdoms were eventually subsumed by the empire of UALLA MIGHA, which ignored the region surrounding the temple, allowing its people to live in their own enclave, where they were free to continue in their misguided worship.

Today the temple-city remains as its own entity, largely ignored by the people of Gibeah, outside of occasional trade. Like Ualla Migha before it Gibeah allows Gibeon to worship its deity, so long as their venerations remain contained and are of no disruption to daily life within Gibeah (Pop. unknown, < 10,000).

GIDIAH: Set. Coastal settlement in the east of ZHARIAH^(2.) (Pop. c. 6,800). GIEDUH: Set. Settlement in the c of AQUARIIA, along the course of the river ZHUSH (Pop. c. 6,000).

GIGANRI: also 'goliath, sûnéanthros'. Plr. 'giganri'. Mor. One of the original Two-and-Twenty MORTAL PEOPLES, and the children of the DEMIURGE URAKABARAMEEL. The giganri, alongside HUMANS, have changed the least since their creation so long ago. They are sometimes referred to as goliaths in KORACHAN, and giants by nations farther east, which have had even less contact with them over the years. They are insular, though individuals can be found scattered in other non-giganri lands, though they are not that common in the INNER SEA REGION. Far more common are their corrupted descendants, the OGHURS, who are thought to be descendants corrupted by ATRAMENTAL exposure in mythic history.

They stand roughly 10-ft. tall, though their limbs are proportionately longer than those of humans, giving them a somewhat lanky gait. Despite this, they are prodigiously strong of both body and mind, with their culture placing a great deal of importance in asceticism and martial perfection and moderation. Their bodies bear signs of an earthly heritage, and their skin is cold and rough to the touch like the granite and marble from which legend (falsely) claims they were shaped. Likewise, their skin can range in colour from alabaster-white to obsidian-black and a myriad of other colours in-between.

Generally, the giganri are morose and quiet beings, likely to be considered slow by other peoples for their reticence to speak that stems from their calculating natures. Little is known of the culture save their extreme asceticism and their devotion to the philosophy of ALCHEMY and GNOSTICISM, lending them a mystical air. It is believed that giganri do not have souls in the commonly understood sense, leaving behind SOULSTONES upon death. This has caused many scholars to call them more primordial beings than other mortals.

The giganri are a rigidly hierarchal culture, and were once divided into castes determined by their skin. Though this ancient practice was ended in a social revolution millennia ago, they still cling to their social hierarchies and social segregation to this day. The NIGRED, of ash-grey to jet-black skin and blood-red eyes, are known for their outgoing personalities — a trait somewhat at odds with the norm for giganri — and they are often found as travellers or diplomats working in foreign nations. The MARAMARI are an off-white colour with green veins and tend to be silent and morose, being pensive and slow to action. The KARNOUS are red-brown and stand taller than others, and were historically chosen to be warriors, often against their will. The AURAE are a merchant caste with no fixed ethnicity. The ALTETH are pale-skinned and rough to the touch and make up the majority of the population of Gnoth, which is their largest-known concentration in all of ELYDEN.

They are amongst the more populous of mortal peoples, after the conspicuous dominance of humans and sundry others, and they are common in the west of LLACHATUL, where their nation of Gnoth is located. Nestled behind the sprawling BLACK MOUNTAINS, the nation escaped the attentions of the Inner Sea for a long time, allowing their culture to mature without the warfare and scrutiny that was more prevalent in the east. See Vol II: Taxonomy and Classification of Life.

GIGANRI MOTH: Fau. Named for its size, this moth has a wingspan of around 1-ft. Its larvae are prized for their taste and level of sustenance they provide and farmed and eaten in much of north western SAMMAEA, where they are most abundant. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

GIGIDEAH: Set. Major city in the c west of GIBEAH (Pop. c. 800,000).

GIGGERAGH: Geo. Expansive stone desert dominating over half of the territories of ETUA, covering some 600,000 square miles in total. The region receives very little rain, and rarely enough to lead to running water, though a deep aquifer that lies beneath it from which settlements and outposts draw water.

GIHON: Rvr. River in the south west of AETHIOS, flowing for 210-miles east from sources in the south of the ANCHIUSA Mountains before meeting its parent, the river SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾.

GIKOR: Set. Fortified coastal city in the north of the independent region of ANAGAR, west of RAONGEN^(2.). Most of the raiding ships that sail north for THE VORANDINE leave from here (Pop. c. 48,000).

GILAM ASH: Dem. 'Gilam Ashan'. Rui. Ruined city and ancient capital of VALKA, at a fork in the river RAANA. The fabled IVORY THRONE was constructed there in -43 RM, and it quickly became notorious for the rituals of bloodletting that surrounded it as defeated enemies of the Gilam Ashan warlord were decapitated, their blood poured onto it.

Following the KORACHANI attack of Valka and subsequent subjugation of its people in 19 RM, the throne went missing. The capital was eventually moved to ANAKARRA in 223 RM following two centuries of KORACHANI occupancy.

GILDASTA: Str. Mansion in the hills south west of SKAROSIA, in the north of SKAROS. The mansion is a winter retreat of PATRICIAN HOUSE TARIFAN, and its grounds are used for hunting game (particularly swine).

GILDED MASK, the: Pol. Obj. The gilded mask worn by the Speaker of the GILDED UNION in METHUMN, who acts as the defacto leader of the Union and the state. The Mask ats back to the early days of the Union and is over 500-years old, and is maintained through great cost and care. It is of a vaulted appearance with multiple hollows through which the wearer's face is visible and it is gilded, granting it a golden aura which many have likened to depictions of the god RAKETH.

GILDED TABLE, the: Pol. Obj. The council table of the GILDED UNION.

It is over 500-years old and bears the marks of hundreds of different ministers.

GILDED UNION, the: Pol. Org. The ruling caste of METHUMN. They rose to power in 3452 RM as a coalition of powerful merchant guilds and trade magnates who came to oppose the rule of the VODARCHS. Collectively known as the Gilded Union, they had grown disillusioned with the Vodarchs' inability to control its distant territories.

Capitalizing on economic discontent and the Vodarchs' struggles, the Gilded Union orchestrated a series of coordinated economic manoeuvres designed to further weaken the Vodarchs' grip over their home. They had also amassed a sizeable private army in the city of ARAROBY, and in 3449 RM seceded from Methumn alongside a handful of other cities and territories, leading to a three-year war from which they ultimately emerged victorious. They moved the capital from HEZAZ to Araroby in 3352 RM, turning it into a thriving centre of trade, culture and commerce.

The Gilded Union ruled as a competent council for well over a century, unifying Methumn under a cohesive government, though by c. 3500 RM many of its departments had fallen to corruption. It also gradually shifted from a meritocracy to a plutocracy, and by c. 3700 RM it had become an autocratic oligarchy, whose members ruled not on merit, but on bribes and corruption. Today the members of the Union are an elite ruling caste who have distanced themselves from the rest of the populace and live in fortified estates away from the lower classes.

During its slow change to the preset-day oligarchy, the Union became more and more secretive, turning Araroby into a fortress. They became paranoid of outsiders, and this attitude slowly filtered down into the nation's people, who themselves became distrusting of outsiders. In 3783 RM they founded the ORINSIAN GUARD, a xenophobic government agency that publicly served to protect Methumni cities and people, but who served as secret police of the Union, policing its cities and highways for foreigners and unauthorised travel.

The Gilded Union takes the form of a cabinet of twelve members, known as ministers, each of which oversees a particular governmental department. The ministers sit around a great GILDED TABLE, and Union sessions are chaired by a Speaker, who acts as a defacto representative of the government. AGGORD BRINI, currently wears the GILDED MASK of the speaker.

GILED: Ind. Set. Diamond mines in the c north of SARASTRO (Pop. c. 6,000).

GILEMASH: Rui. Ancient metropolis in the east of the HOGGOTHA ISZ. It is now buried beneath millennia of landslides and scree in the eastern face of the KARKARMIS Mountains, most of its monolithic stone foundations shattered by earthquakes and the passage of time. Those few that remain intact are crowned by strange tentacle-faced many-armed idols and baleful scripts that have no analogue elsewhere in ELYDEN.

GILGAMAE: Geo. Plains in the far south of LIDEA. They are known for their FOURTH AGE ruins and have been a target for treasure hunters and tomb robbers for centuries.

GILILIA: Set. Coastal city in the north of VENTHIR. It forms a part of the RED ROUTE and trade goods are bought and sold here, and its harbours are busy with cargo (Pop. c. 34,000).

GILKARR: 1. Geo. Island in the SEA OF NUTHEN, to the west of mainland VAALK. The island is considered the western-most part of Vaalkan territory.

2. Mil. Str. Fortress and harbour on the eponymous island (Pop. c. 14,000).

GILLAIR: Set. Settlement in the c north east of KAZZAR^(2.) (Pop. c. 7,000).

- GILLEN: Set. Settlement in the south east of SARASTRO. It forms part of the ARGEAN PIPELINE and processes raw UMBRA from EMI BEN in the north east.
 - It was constructed centuries ago by a cooperative of five $\underline{PATRICIAN}$ \underline{HOUSES} , though it is now controlled exclusively by House $\underline{MORISKER}$, following years of oppressive business moves (Pop. c. 6,400).
- GILLI: Geo. ridge in the north of the nation of BROR⁽²⁾, whose geographic orientation runs north to south, to the LAHAED Mountains.
- GILOR MYANA: Geo. Sheer-sided valley in the EIDOGOTATH in the south of TETHYSIA, named after the brilliant golden sunrises that can be seen from it.
- GIMAND: Set. MULL city in the east of BLACK MOUNTAINS, some 230-miles west of the SEA OF APHOTIS, forming an enclave within the Kingdom of CISNERIA. What little contact that has been made with the city is through imperial (now ALMAGESTI) traders who have marched inland, drawn by strange lights in the mountain. It is unknown if Gimand is a solitary settlement or part of a larger mull nation, possibly with other settlements underground, but it is thought that the people of Cisneria have regular contact with it (Pop. unknown).
- GIMUNG: Set. Major coastal city in the north east of SHAZGIN, overlooking the SEA OF INDIRILL. It is known for its large port and guildhall, in which various guilds operate. It was once a major hub of trade, where overland trade and sea trade converged, though a homogenisation of commerce has seen this influence wane over recent decades. The region immediately surrounding the city is known for its tree-dwelling spiders, whose webs can at times blanked entire woods (Pop. c. 180,000).
- GINANGRA: Pol. Set. Major city-state in MULIEBRA, controlling the north eastern-most reaches of the states. It forms a part of the ISHMMARRAN TRAIL and imports many goods from abroad that find their way across wider Muliebran trade-routes (Pop. c. 89,000).
- GINENDEL, TEMPLE OF: Rui. Ancient temple on a large LODELITH in the north west of ACHAA⁽²⁾ in MENISCEA.
- GINGHAA: Set. Small city in the c. of the nation of DURCHAA⁽¹⁾, along the north western shore of lake THYTHIA (Pop. c. 16,500).
- GIRAYA: Set. Small fortified city in the north west of CUTH. A trade-route exists between it and the caravanserai of CHURRALEI in the south of KREM (Pop. c. 12,000).
- GIREN HEUT: His. Mil. Str. Ancient FOURTH AGE stone fortress in the east of SAMMAEA, in the HENAHABB massif, to the north of the SEA OF LETHEA.
- GIRENEN: Set. Small city in the south east of KULIGALA (Pop. c. 13,000).
- GIRIGOSS: Rui. Arc. Gigantic fountain in the north east of LANTUA, carved from a large monadnock in the THIRD AGE, and watered by deep aquifers. Though the structure is damaged and overgrown today, water still flows from its mouth, serving as a source for a major river.
- GIRIS: Set. Small fortified city in the north west of the tribe of OSRIS, in the east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 18,000).
- GIRRON: Set. Major coastal city in the south east of NAARETH, in the GULF OF VEGATETH. Like many coastal cities in Naareth most of its buildings are constructed on stilts to weather the high tides of the region (Pop. c. 32,000).
- GIRSHA: Geo. Island off the north western coast of DANU, in the north of the SEA OF IDALIA. It was 'discovered' and named by the explorer BOHMIUS.
- GIRSIN: Mil. Str. Fort in SAMMAEAN LYRIDIA, south of lake DOGON. The fort is home to a large number of troops, who patrol the border with NÁRTHEL.
- GIRTHA: Lak. Lake in the c of ALAM BETHYL, forming a part of the course of the river KEGHOK, and a confluence of many tributaries, including the HESSRIL.
- GISHABAL: Arc. Road in the south of VAALK, covering some 200-miles, built over the remnants of a FOURTH or THIRD AGE road made from a concrete-like substance.
- GISHEN IV: (B. 2319 D. 2371 RM) Pol. His. Last king of the HOUSE OF UMATRA in AHRISHEN. He died in battle in 2371 RM while trying to

- quell barony uprisings, leading Ahrishen into its second inter-monarchic period. His son DIERDFAN was exiled to HARÉ SHKA and Ahrishen languished for over a century, with none of its barons unable to amass enough support to secure the kingdom.
- GISHHAR: Set. Major city in the south west of WESTERN LARISH. It is a major industrial area, known for its large ATELIERS privately-owned workshops that specialise in a myriad of bespoke object d'art that are sold across the SEA OF LARISH^(1.) area. It is built atop an ancient FIFTH AGE city that was famed as the birthplace of the martial art of GABAL GARAP, which has since become ubiquitous across MENISCEA (Pop. c. 80,000).
- GISHITEN: Rui. Ancient MERILL ruins that were revealed in the c of the present-day VESPERTINE LEAGUE^(2.) through the disappearance of lake BATHIN in 2315 RM. The ruins are constructed from coral and soapstone, and are likely incredibly old. Various treasures were recovered from the ruin, eventually spreading across the region, bringing wealth to various cities in the surrounding area.
- GISHRU: Rui. Remains of a FIRMAMENTAL temple in the north east of N'RAKH, its origins unknown, though thought to date back to the early FOURTH AGE.
- GISKAR: Sec. Small city in the c of the western territories of SKAROS, to the west of the SEA OF APHOTIS. It forms a part of the RED ROUTE and offers hostelry services to those travelling along the trade-route (Pop. c. 17,000).
- GISTRI: Ser. Fortified city in the west of the HENDECARCHY of AONIA in the north west of MALAN, along the course of the river ARILLIEN. It is relatively close to the border with SAUA, and is a gateway between the two states (Pop. c. 45,000).
- GITHILALAN: Leg. Set. Fabled metropolis in the heart of the RAM 'ATHI region of THE OLD FOREST, considered by KORACHANI scholars to be the heart and 'capital' of the Old Forest, though no records exist of it ever being explored by the Korachani empire. The city is ruled by the OTHERWORLDER NATHA TAMAR, but his secretiveness has become the source of many rumours over the years (Pop. unknown >5,000,000). See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.
- GITHKA: Sea. Deep narrow gulf forming the eastern-most part of the SEA
 OF URAN, serving as a natural border between the south of SAUA and the south west of the HENDECARCHY of Lonar in the south west of MALAN.

 Its northern coast is dominated by the cliffs known as the BLACK WALL.
- GITHKIHIR: 1. Set. Settlement in the west of EZASUH^(2.) (Pop. c. 14,800).

 2. Geo. Pass in the west of EZASUH^(2.), across the THABAT Mountains.
- GITTARANDI: Rvr. River in the south west of HABOT, flowing east for over 280-miles from sources in the SETHIGH Mountains, before meeting the coast at the far south west of the BAY OF ESSIA.
- GIVAH: Set. City in the east of GIBEAH. It is a sprawling port, its ships braving the waters of the ROILING SEA, trading with MULCIBER, and SOLEYN and SUOR. It was formerly an independent city-state, though was absorbed by Gibeah in 3622 RM following decades of close relations. The city is Gibeah's major sea link with the world at large, and it is the base for many trade houses that export luxury items from the region (Pop. c. 480,000).
- GIVVAN: Set. Major coastal city in the south east of NOAVATUR, overlooking the BAY OF TAFAZA. It is a major mercantile centre, and is known for its great portside warehouses and deep harbours (Pop. c. 170,000).
- GLADAGHRA: also 'the Whispering Catacombs'. Rui. An extensive network of tunnels beneath the ancient city of VUMMARA in the west of METHUMN. They are expansive, stretching for around 2-miles, and have hundreds of antechambers, many of which branch off down steep hewn stairs and are known for the eerie whispers that echo through their passageways. The walls are covered with inscriptions in an ancient tongue (possibly from the early FOURTH AGE) that are believed to be epitaphs of the dead whose bodies were looted and taken centuries ago. Today, the catacombs are empty, with many sections caved in and inaccessible, though parties have occasionally ventured into the depths in search of sealed portions.
- GLADIATOR: Mil. Rnk. Arena-warriors common in SARASTRO and VENTHIR, and other regions, though not unknown in other regions, particularly nations along the southern coast of THE INNER SEA. In most places gladiators are slaves, though there exist lucrative private leagues in Venthir with professional gladiators, many of whom are rich.

GLAESWEN: Rvr. River in the c north east of KOMMEA, flowing south west for 470-miles from sources in the BRAT EDRAN and LYRLDRAN Mountains, before meeting its parent, the river GOIRATH at lake ATHUIN. Like its parent, it is known for its rapids and shallow waterfalls that prevent its use for transportation and travel.

GLAGG: Rvr. Foul river flowing for some 3,500-miles, from sources in the east of the ACHARKHARAN Mountain in the c of SAMMAEA. The river is renowned around the HADDURATHI wastes and the city-nation of HISISH for its thick, almost jelly-like waters that slowly ooze east towards the rivers' mouth, far in the FLAMING SEA. When dried, the jelly is somewhat flammable and during dry seasons, its banks have been known to catch fire – one of various sources for the sea's name.

GLAINIS: Set. Coastal city in the east of KOMMEA, in the HOLLOW COASTLINE, overlooking a deep fjord (Pop. c. 28,000).

GLAKIA: Set. Major coastal city in the east of KASPIA, overlooking the SEA OF DAGGERS. Its main industry is fishing, and it has sizeable harbours that are used in trade with nearby nations (Pop. c. 104,000).

GLALLDRA: Set. City in the south east of the SYCHTAN PREFECTURES, in the region of GHADRA. Of all the Ghadran cities annexed by Sychta, Glalldra maintains the closest cultural ties to its roots (Pop. c. 38,000).

GLAN: settlement in the north east of AUEREN in the north of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. It is known for its breeding and training of large sturdy ponies, known as HARROWERS, that are employed in travel across the Growing Mountains (Pop. c. 7,200).

GLAND: Sec. Independent city on the south western-most peninsula in BROR(1.). It is a city of unbridled physical experimentation where those pioneers persecuted from their own lands flee to. It is populated by FLESHWRIGHTS, BIOPSIST, FIRMAMENTISTS, ATRAMENTISTS, and ALCHYMISTS. The city borders a cold marshland that is populated by flora and fauna of all kinds, as well as the naturalised results of their bioarcane experimentations, including strange amphibious half-men (Pop. c. 50.000).

GLANDULAR DISTEMPER: Med. ATRAMENTAL AILMENT that may be contracted by prolonged exposure to feculent regions of ATRAMENTAL CORRUPTION, resulting in a dry cough and dry mucal discharge from the nose and, rarely, the eyes. See Vol II: Diseases and Illnesses.

GLARAN: Set. Small fortified city in the south of KOMMEA (Pop. c.

GLAT: 1. Geo. Small peninsula in the west of LYRIDIA DHAI, overlooking the SEA OF SPIRES.

2. Mil. Str. Fortress on the above peninsula.

GLAUCON: also 'Sea Dragon'. Int. Fau. Poi. Large ICHTHON that dwells in the warm waters of the BATHASHAL OCEAN. Named after their strange biology, they appear to have two large pairs of wings, each ending in 'fingers', that grand them tremendous mobility in the sea. Growing up to 40-ft. long, their main body has a cartilaginous skeleton though their wings are boneless. They prey on smaller animals and are apex predators in any sea they inhabit, though their method of feeding is strange.

Though an apex predator, glaucons have no mouths that we recognise, and they only have one large black eye that bulges from the middle of their forehead. Their wings are each tipped with feeding organs inject paralysing venom into their prey, and they are equipped with minute hooks that help them hold on to their prey, as they paralyse them and begin digesting them while they are helpless, yet still alive. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

GLAURNN: Mil. Str. Fortress in the south west of CYHLAGHARR, in the eastern face of the NGHALLEAL Mountains.

GLEED: Sup. Geo. Large faint ATRAMENTAL sinkhole in the south of VAALK, its coal-like rocks ever-burning. Some small industries have exploited this phenomenon and mine the rocks, which are used as powerful fire-starters and fuel.

GLEIMOUNA: Rui. Ancient ruined pit-settlement in the c north of the FURAKISH region in the far south east of KHARKHARADONTIS. Like many settlements in the area, it is built within a natural sinkhole in the region, with abodes and granaries hewn into the wall, with a communal courtyard uniting them. In the middle of the courtyard is a deep well, originally used for water. However today this well is filled with a feculent slime that can be smelt far beyond the confines of the ruin. A pall of flies, mosquitoes and midges lies heavily upon the ruin, which is shunned.

GLEMA: Set. Fortified city in the north of KOLCHIS, in the region of SHUK RAZHA. Its main industry is the mining of METEORE (Pop. c. 4,200).

GLOAMING, the: Sup. Geo. Expansive region in the far south east of the UMBRA SOKHAR wastes in SAMMAEA, where the sky is covered by insipid clouds beneath which the day is never brighter than twilight.

The region is dominated by the gigantic rock-pillars and stone-stacks of the MEREHIM badlands in which are carved the dwellings of long-since corrupted people. Corrupted river, thick with shadowstuff, snake through the region, rendering it inimical to most life.

The region is categorised as a $\underline{\text{MODERATE THREAT}}$ by the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI}}$ Institute of Atramental Studies.

GLODONT: Set. Major skyport and trade centre in the tribe of DATHOA in the south west of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. The city is the western-most stop of a 1,250-mile-long airship route that ends in KATTAROCHIA (Pop. c. 42,000).

GLOMA: 1. Pol. Smallest of the HARÉSHKI duchies, forming part of the city-state of MEDES. Gloma is alone in being an island duchy, contained entirely in the SEA OF URAN.

2. Mil. Str. Well-fortified citadel situated on a peak on the eponymous island in the $\underline{\text{SEA OF URAN}}$.

GLOMA PASS: Geo. Land bridge in the HARÉSHK connecting the isthmus known as the ANGEL'S WING to the mainland, in the region of CARIA⁽⁴⁾. The land bridge collapsed in c. 3940 RM, following the erosion of the surrounding cliffs.

GLOSSUAHI ORDER: Pol. Org. One of the minor SANCTIFIED ORDERS

OF THE INQUISITION in the KORACHANI EMPIRE, whose agents control the use of language within the empire. It enforces usage of KORACHANI (in both HIGH KORACHANI and LOW KORACHANI forms) within its territories and limits the use and spread of other languages, in particular those of vassal or child states, which throughout history have used their native languages to conspire against their occupiers.

Its agents are licensed to use force when necessary, particularly during times of political unrest, and they commonly destroy libraries within newly-conquered states and as well as sensitive books in foreign languages. They also hunt down demagogues and proponents of native languages, who they label as enemies of the state.

The Order was founded in Khadon c. 50 RM when it became clear that language had become a powerful tool amongst oppressed peoples, and though it never reached the heights of some other Orders, it remains a powerful tool of imperial propaganda to this day, though its role has changed over time. With the borders of the empire relatively stable, its agents are now custodians of the imperial tongue, seeing that it is not corrupted by outside influence, and enforcers of its use, limiting the use of foreign tongues outsider of places of diplomacy and trade. Its agents are a common sight in ghettos and areas of minority foreigner populations, where they keep an ear out for tongues being spoken. This extends to secret languages such as thieves' cant and other argots, which are oppressed whenever encountered, but impossible to fully destroy.

GLUTTAR: Set. Coastal settlement in the north east of VÂRR, overlooking the north of the SEA OF PROPONTIS. The settlement subsists on shellfish, which are common in the region (Pop. c. 6,400).

GLYNNED: 1. Geo. Region in the far north of LOEGRESS^(1,) in north east of EASTERN LLACHATUL. It is known for its fog, vast coastal wetlands, salt marshes, sedges, sparse woodlands and water-logged islands. The region is a major producer of peat that is used as fuel across Loegress.

2. Dem. 'Glynnish'. His. Ntn. Historical region in what are now the north of LOEGRESS^(1.) and the far east of ABATTUR. It emerged in c. 2450 following the collapse of PRAETTANIA a few decades earlier, though never coalesced into a single culture as the regions of ENAELLON^(2.) and MOTTANIA^(2.) had, though by c. 2570 the warlord TORRVAN had emerged in the region of CAELMOR, allying surrounding settlements and taking the maiden ELOEVREN as his wife in 2572 RM, eventually securing the territories and allying them under his banner in c. 2578 RM.

Torrvan made Glynned his base as he move his armies south, though would ultimately make his capital in CAER SIDI^(2.) in 2588 RM. Torrvan moved south over the next decade, ultimately uniting the disparate descendant-states of PRAETTANIA in 2588 RM, choosing the castle of CAER SIDI^(2.) as his capital, where he took queen ARDFAEN of Mottania as his bride. See Vol III: Extinct Nations.

3. Set. Major city in the north of LOEGRESS^(1.). It is at the heart of the region's peat manufacture and once served as the base of the warlord TORRVAN during his conquest of surrounding regions, prior to making the castle of CAER SIDI^(2.) his capital (Pop. c. 67,000).

GNANHA: Set. Small fortified coastal city in the far north of the nation of DURCHAA^(1.), overlooking the SEA OF POLARIS. It is a major whaling outpost and trades in whale oil and meat. The city is largely self-sufficient and has little overland contact with the rest of Durchaa, though maintains a tentative sea trade-route with the Durchaan city of UROTHA, as well as VALBAR^(2.) and PERGOST (Pop. c. 16,500).

GNASSIA: For. Forest in the far north west of SKAROS, north of STRAIT OF SKAROS, in the region of ADAMATI, and source of industry to the city of EDUASIA. The region is famed for its HEIRLOOM production.

GNATHALLO: Sup. Geo. Mildly ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region along the border between the south of KARAKHAS and the north of the UMBRA SOKHAR. The taint is largely felt through its effects on the rocks in the region, with DUSTSTONE formations and avalanches being common.

The region is categorised as a LEAST CONCERN by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

GNIHLAS: Ast. The fifth of seven known PLANETS orbiting the star SOR. Its mean orbital distance from Sor is 430,000,000-miles and has an estimated diameter of 80,000 miles.

It is the first of the OUTER PLANETS and is famed for its 5 layers of expansive concentric rings and its vibrant colours, ranging from mauve, to red, purple, and white. It has two known moons, UKEORS, and ARTHICE, which are locked in orbit around each other. See Vol II: Planets and Satellites.

GNOMATH: Set. Fortified city in the c of GNOTH, in the eastern face of the SOLUN HIGHLANDS (Pop. c. 42,000).

GNOMOS: Set. Small city in the c north of GNOTH that is renowned for its university that studies the history of its GNOSTIC ways, and the many human scholars that live there (Pop. c. 12,000).

GNOSCIA: Set. Settlement in the region of EMPUSA⁽²⁾ in the c north of THE SURRACH, along the IVORY ROAD. It is a place of learning and has possibly the largest written history of the Surrach (Pop. c. 10,000).

GNOSIS: Phil. The concept of spiritual knowledge, often attained through the study of philosophy or meditation. It is common to the mystics of GNOTH, as is referred to in a more pragmatic sense by the PARTHISAN concept of AO.

GNOSTICATORS: Rel. Rnk. Shaper-priests of religious-philosophy of DARESH that is practiced in ARCHAEDON^(2.).

GNOSTICISM: Rel. Phil. Soc. School of religious and philosophical thought that emphasises spiritual knowledge as it can be attained outside of established religions and traditions. In most gnostic teachings the FIRMAMENT and the ATRAMENTA are regarded as a single element, known as the Pleroma.

GNOSTICS: lit. 'anthslach'. see EPISTOLARIES.

GNOTH: Dem. 'Gnothi. Ntn. The GIGANRI homeland, dominating the east of WESTERN LLACHATUL, Gnoth is surrounded by splendid mountain-chains that form a natural wall running continuously from its north western-most borders, all the way to the east; and it has large harbours overlooking the SEA OF SERPENTS as well as the SEA OF MARDEN.

It is known to outsiders as an enigmatic place of aesthetics and monks who practice ancient forms of mysticism that date back to their people's first footsteps behind their DEMIURGE father, DURUTHILHOTEP with whom the giganri have a deep-rooted link: and as Duruthilhotep once grieved and languished over his place in ELYDEN, so do they feel the same.

The Gnothi people are largely insular but accommodating to outsiders and little is known about their land outside of its merchant ports. The nations' roots go back to the FOURTH AGE, and in many ways it hasn't much over the years, though has diminished in size and power. Despite this, It is thought that Gnoth possesses great military strength – Indeed, it has resisted what few attempts have been made against it in the FIFTH AGE, though given the belligerence of some regions in the INNER SEA to their neighbours, it is odd how such few attempts have been made against Gnoth overall. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

GNOTHI LLACHATUL: see WESTERN LLACHATUL.

GNOTHI MYSTICISM: Mys. Form of mysticism that is common in GNOTH, originally set down by the ascetic philosopher ENKIRA when undertaking the FOUR JOURNEYS, a symbolic journey that GNOSTIC monks take during pursuit of their art, leading them from the four material elements, known as emotions: AIR, EARTH, WATER and ALKAHEST; to the fifth, otherwise known as enlightenment; the BLOOD OF VALA and finally, the DRAGON: True Enlightenment.

GNOTHI ROAD: Com. Arc. Main highway within GNOTH connecting its major cities with each other. It stretches for over 3,000-miles from the city of ACHAD in the west to TIPHARET in the east, with a separate road heading north from PLEROMA to ALKAHEST.

GNOTHA: also 'Western Llachatul'. Geo. Common KORACHANI name for the subcontinent that makes up the west of LLACHATUL, west of the STRAIT OF SKAROS, encompassing the lands of GNOTH, TAHALL, OPHIUSSA, AQUARIIA and HOLOLACH⁽¹⁾, amongst others.

GNYATEHUA: Rui. Ancient stone ruins discovered in the WHITE SHEET in the far north of LLACHATUL in 1134 RM by a doomed KORACHANI expedition. Little is known of the ruins, but they are proportions for beings far larger than humans and even GIGANRI and are thought to date back to the SECOND AGE and are possibly created by a DEMIURGE or unknown force.

GO BISAMMAM: lit. 'the Black Desert'. Geo. Large windy dry plains separating VENTHIR from the MOLACHARI DESERT, dominated by regions of fine black sand that are known to blow across the plains in large sandstorms that turn day into night. The region is mostly deserted save for a few ruins that lie scattered, eaten by the crawling sands. When the sands do not blow for long, tough grasses and shrubs manage to survive, attracting particular fauna, though such periods of life are intermittent, broken by the fierce storms that wrack the region.

Occasionally, KHERI nomads wander into the area and some scattered clans of SERAPIS are said to make the region their home. Few oases exist in the Go Bisammam, and the few that do are treasured by the people of Venthir, and have either become caravanserais, are treasures as prized watering holes, or the root of settlements and manufactories.

GOAT, KEVERAN: see KEVERAN GOAT.

GOAT OF RACHANAEL, the: see TOPHAMAEL.

GOBAI: Set. Large fortified city in the c north of AETHIOS. Its primary industry is the study and refining of SOULSTONES unearthed to the north in DAGESARETH. It is a city of universities, scholars, SHAPERS, philosophers, not to mention the technarcanists who put the soulstones to use in archaic engines. It is also heavily fortified and guarded by private armies that serve the magnates that control the soulstone reserves, which are stored there to create artificial scarcity within foreign nation (Pop. c. 80,000).

GOBID: Set. Coastal town in the south east of the TARAHID ANNEXES(Pop. c. 8,000).

GOBLIN TAPESTRIES: His. Obj. Large tapestries commissioned by future emperor TYRIDESH II of PARTHIS in 3056 RM, a year before his accession to the throne when it was clear that his father was reaching the end of his days.

Known as a sophomoric spendthrift, he had himself inserted into the tapestries, which depict him as an outlandish god-like figure on the field of battle, defeating hordes of misshapen enemies that some have likened to goblins, earning the tapestries their nickname.

The tapestries were ridiculed by the emperor's opponents, and many were persecuted and even executed for their open derision, which only served to further ostracise the emperor. The tapestries were eventually removed by his successor following his assassination, though by then they had become infamous and were the lasting memory of a largely ineffectual emperor, and they later became known as the Goblin Tapestries. Indeed, their original name is now forgotten, as are the unfortunate people who were made to craft it.

Parts of the tapestries occasionally resurface in the antiquities market, though it is impossible to verify their authenticity.

GOBYAN: Set. City in the c of CUTH (Pop. c. 45,000).

GOD ADRIFT, the: Rel. Dei. Cosmic deity worshipped by minorities in TAES, that is characterised by its unknowable aspect. It is catatonic and is equated to a dark cloud drifting forever above ELYDEN, its DREAMS bringing about change, which can be both miraculous or cataclysmic. The eerie DESICLAIA monuments that are scattered across the nation are considered sacrosanct and it is common cultural practice to tend to them when travelling and to leave offerings of food or drink at their feet.

The religion surrounding his strange deity was largely obliterated by KORACHANI missionaries arriving in the region in c. 1530 RM, to be supplanted by the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. Since then, worship of the God Adrift has remained as decentralised local mystery cults that are largely made up of the lower classes, with each cult having its own dogma and doctrine, likely corrupted from the PRE-IMPERIAL version of the religion.

GOD-ANCESTORS, the: Rel. Dei. Pol. Deities, rulers, and advisors of the nation of ZAKRON. They are interred within CANOPIC ENGINES – great archaic machines that allow their consciousnesses to survive for millennia after their VESSELS have perished.

GOD-FUNGUS, the: see HADATH.

GOD-KING: Rel. Dei. Pol. The title of the PROPHET KATHISIS after being elevated to godhood in the nation of TETHYSIA. He was reborn as an OTHERWORLDLY spirit in 2137 RM, after which a willing volunteer was found every generation who would be possessed by the spirit and rule as the GOD-KING, who rules from the TEMPLE OF THE NEVERDYING in the capital in LYSITEAS.

The God-kings are referred to by their generation. Currently Tethysia is ruled by the $57^{\rm th}$ God-king.

GOD-KING ASTER: see ASTERI.

GOD-MACHINE: see INTERMINABLE ONE, THE.

GOD-SLAYER, the: see AKACHI.

GOD WHO SPEAKS, the: also 'Raon' and, mistakenly, 'Raong'. Rel. Dei. Chief deity worshipped by the people of RAONGEN⁽²⁾ as well as THE VORANDINE. It is so-named for the visions and prophecies that many of its worshipers experience, and through which the deity is solely known. The first of these visions to be recorded in the FIFTH AGE were experienced between -600 and -500 RM around lake Ra (after which the god and the nation are named).

The interpretation of these visions forms a major part of the religion, with legions of monks, known as OBSERVERS, devoting their lives to collecting and cataloguing the many visions that the people of these regions experience. Indeed, the investigation and verification of the many visions forms an important part of the Raongeni economy.

The God Who Speaks has no physical form and those who receive visions never see anything – they only hear a powerful voice, disembodied, speaking as though hundreds of people – men, women, and children alike – were speaking the same words at the same time. Indeed, so central has the lack of any physical appearance become, that no idols or art depicting the god is allowed.

The religion is not as centralised as many other major religions, and there are few major places of worship outside of the many monasteries scattered around Western Llachatul. Most people revere the God Who Speaks in their own homes, though idols do exist in places of natural beauty or otherwise associated with the deity, such as locations where verified visions have been experienced. The religion has been appropriated by the United Vorandi Council, which came to power in the Vorandine in 3996 RM, and its Exponents have worked tirelessly since then enforcing their laws, known as the Gods' Laws, in an effort to bring unity to the region.

Outsiders believe that the visions and dreams experienced are the product of a torpid DEMIURGE or SCION that is buried in Western Llachatul. Though other scholars counter this, claiming that only locals report such visions – foreigners sojourning in such lands rarely, if ever experience such visions or dreams. See Vol II: Religions and Cults.

GODAN: Set. Small fortified coastal city in the south west of the PARTHISAN colony of IBANNEM^(1.). It is the only city in the colony to be situated on the western-coast, and its harbour is heavily fortified against ABARHALI attack (Pop. c. 16,400).

GODHEAD: Myt. Arc. His. Relics of ancient times; large often marble hand-carved heads thought to be dedicated to ancient deities that rose in the wake of the DEMIURGE'S loss of divinity amongst alienated mortals. Found scattered throughout the UMBRA SOKHAR and parts of KARAKHAS and AETHIOS, these decayed relics have defaced the lands around them through impure energies, causing them to be shunned by present-day mortals. The largest and most infamous of them all is AELLO, THE GODHEAD. They are thought to have been constructed by VALTHAS in the FOURTH AGE and possibly early FIFTH AGE.

GODLESS REALM, the: His. Ntn. Moniker given to the KORACHANI vassal state of VAALTHA (now VAALK, under SARASTROAN vassalage since 3705 RM) in c. 2310 RM. For decades, organised crime had been allowed to fester in Vaaltha, spreading roots across its government as well as the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE and its industries and commerce. The ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR brought loyal church troops down upon the nation in 2309 RM, destroying the city of MEKENA and attacking strongholds of the criminal families. The attacks were successful, bringing stability and order back to Vaaltha, but at the cost of tens of thousands of innocent lives and a rapid wane in the influence of the Church of the Undying Machine there, which was seen by most HELOTS as responsible for the attacks and allowing the corruption of the crime families to spread in the first place.

The name continued to be used until Vaaltha was abandoned by Korachan and it was absorbed by the $\underline{\text{LOW-EMPIRE}}$ of Sarastro in 3736 RM.

GODHEAD OF SIELLA: Rel. Leg. Arc. His. Rumoured tomb and place of repose of the DEMIURGE SIELLA, claimed to be in the deepest forests of MALAN. The Godhead of Siella is a common apocryphal location known of by many around the Inner Sea, though the people of Malan put little stock in such tales, and likely have their own knowledge on such things, which they are unlikely to disclose to outsiders.

KORACHANI scholars debate the existence of the GODHEAD, which features in legends that date to the early FIFTH AGE DARK SEA REGION (particularly in AHRISHEN, LYRIDIA and THE HARÉSHK) as being myth, or a relic from ancient accounts that became corrupted through oral retellings. Many people believe it to lie in the HENDECARCHY of AMILLAERE^(1.).

GODLESS, the: Rel. Soc. Rnk. his. Caste of religious servants in the old nation of ASSEER (present-day ESHIR^(2.)) that first appeared in c. 1320. At the time they were simply individuals who believed that the SABRIYAN STONE that had been discovered in 1209 RM had been sent by the ASSEERI PANTHEON to sort the wicked and greedy from the just and devout, and they decried the power struggle that had consumed their homeland for the past century as a result.

They became ostracised for their beliefs, causing them to turn deeper to their worship and devotion of the pantheon, and by c. 1350 RM people were calling them the Godless as an insult, leading to them dwindle in social standing, slowly turning them a lower class, forced out of their homes into ghettos where they languished together. Their descendants were eventually taken in by the various temples of the Pantheon, where they became servants to the gods and their idols. They embraced the name Godless and took it as their own, claiming it served as a humbling reminder that despite their prayers and sacrifice, mortals could never be alike the gods.

Despite their outspoken defiance of those who wielded the Godstone, the Godless came to enjoy a level of immunity as servants of the temples, and so the uneasy status quo was allowed to continue.

This state lasted until 1923 RM, when the overlord of Asseer, Dreplicate Farisón (by then a feared tyrant whose centuries of using the Sabriyan Stone had given him great powers and a prolonged lifespan) reformed the Asseeri Pantheon, elevating himself to the position of chief deity whilst delegating the dozens of deities in the pantheon to demigods under his rule. This allowed him to finally rid Asseer of the Godless caste, who were rounded up and executed ruthlessly within a few days of the reforms taking effect. Few, if any, escaped these actions and the religion suffered in the wake of their culling.

GODOS: Set. Small city in the south west of the tribe of ASSAGOS in the east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. The City is renowned for its ROC tamers, and it has a lucrative trade in roc eggs which it sells to wealthy or foreigners at great profit (Pop. c. 15,400).

GODS' GRAVEYARD, the: see LPAAZASASHAT.

GODS' LAWS, the: Law. Code of laws introduced by the UNITED VORANDI COUNCIL to THE VORANDINE, following its usurping of the previous coalition council in 3996 RM. The laws are based on the interpretations of visions and DREAMS by the Vorandi people, which have been attributed to an unknowable deity known as the GOD WHO SPEAKS, with little effort to disguise their use for propaganda intended to further the goals of the Council and to quell the individual cultures that were common in the Vorandine until its forced unification a decade ago.

The Laws are upheld by an expansive policing force that is operated by the United Vorandi Council, which are seen by most as being oppressive, intent only on quelling 'dissident' beliefs, rather than truly maintaining order.

GODS' WOUND: also 'Nerkala'. Int. Myt. Geo. Said to be one of the last of the DEMIURGE NERGAAL'S creations following his estrangement from THE SHAPER in ELYDEN'S mythohistory. Located in the far east of CUTH, in the eastern-most reaches of the MO-ORASSIM Mountains, the God's Wound is a spring, said to flow with the blood of the Demiurge. A fortress was built atop the spring in c. 2853 RM by the WORD BEARERS, who control access to it to this day.

It is visited by pilgrims of the TWIN CHURCHES OF CUTH, who immerse themselves in the waters formed by the pool, which are red from chemicals in the surrounding rocks.

GODBSORN, the: also 'Asicthai'. Myt. Mor. Common name within CENTRAL LLACHATUL and particularly in the KORACHANI EMPIRE for those beings who were created directly by the actions of the DEMIURGES, rather than having been created in two-and-twenty pods of seven (known as the Two-and-Twenty SICTHAIN, which include HUMANS).

Various accounts within the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN, show that many Demiurges felt closer with the godsborn than with the seedborn, for they had created them themselves, rather than being bound to them by their FATHER by their hubris. Most famed is ARIMASPI, who was perhaps the most prolific of the Demiurges, having created beings as diverse as the EELYOUHNS and AIKLAHS, to whom he felt a far greater bond than the VAPULIM he was burdened with.

They are often compared and contrasted with the so-called SEEDBORN (or the ASICTHAIN) – Two-and-Twenty MORTAL PEOPLES whose creation was ordained by THE SHAPER in the form of the IMMORTALS^(1.), but whose birth was pained and premature due to the Demiurge's hubris. The two disparate people as said to have lashed in a great war in mythic ages, known in contemporary texts as the CHILDREN'S WAR. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

GODSCION: see SCION.

GODSHOME: Lan. Ntn. Throughout the free lands of the east, a common name for TETHYSIA.

GODSLAYERS, the: Org. Secular organisation that emerged from an earlier agnostic political group founded in 1748 RM in PARTHIS. The Godslayers are a mercenary force who dedicate themselves to the eradication of organised religion, particularly the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, whose treatment of Parthisans during imperial occupation there between 463 – 967 RM caused much suffering. They served readily in the war against TARTAK after Parthis was freed, though their most infamous action was during the siege of the TEMPLE OF FILADELFIA in VAALK in 2903 RM, in which the temple was destroyed, its treasures looted, funding their actions for centuries to come.

Following KORACHANI persecution, their headquarters were moved from Parthis to the city of AAMINA in KAZZAR^(2.) in c. 3148 RM. They took to the atheism of their adoptive home well, and over the years became increasingly influential, becoming rulers in 3562 RM. It is believed that in their history the Godslayers have killed many SCIONS and otherworlders, and hundreds of thousands of their supporters.

GODSMEAD: also 'halfador'. Mys. Bev. A form of mead brewed in the west of NORTHERN SIMBARA from a specific variety of honey produced by bees that harvest pollen from a unique flower, known as HALFADEL, whose roots grow in soil that is steeped in the blood of an ancient fallen god (believed to be a DEMIURGE by some scholars).

The drink has a bittersweet flavour and is thicker than normal mead. Drinking it quickly and in volume can lead to a minor psychedelic experience, which is attributed to the divine origins of the mead. Visions experienced under the influence of godsmead have been interpreted as divine whispers by some, though in general they are not considered as anything other than a physical reaction to chemicals introduced to the body.

GODSMEN: Law. Org. Policing force in THE VORANDINE governed by the UNITED VORANDI COUNCIL. The Godsmen are responsible for upholding the will of the council under the pretence of bringing order to the disparate regions of the Vorandine, which in many areas are still reeling from the forced unification of their homeland.

The Godsmen also have the task of scouring libraries and archives across the Vorandine for ancient historical records predating the arrival of king VORAND, resulting in increased tensions in many regions.

GODSPAWN: see SCION.

GODSTEARS MOUNTAIN: See DORÉSAI.

GODSTONES: 1. Int. Mys. Obj. Powerful artifacts created by some DEMIURGES during their ACTS OF SHAPING that created ELYDEN and her landforms and the flora and fauna that inhabit her. It is thought that each godstone was imparted with a small mote of a Demiurge's essence, and through the transference of this essence, their work in that sphere was rendered easier, similar to a FOCUS used by SHAPERS.

Passages from the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN indicate that the godstones may also have been used by SCIONS and the first MORTAL shapers to perform acts of creation on their behalf.

The Godstones feature in many region's legends and myths, though they often go by different names. Despite their widespread appearance in local legend, there have been very few verified documented instances of any of these artefacts being discovered in the modern world.

2. Rui. Arc. Unrelated matted iron monuments in JURRAS^(2.). Their origin unknown; they were worshipped by the pastoral people that lived in the area before the KORACHANI conquest in 403 RM, where their veneration was abolished by the ICONOCLASTS^(1.). Most godstones remain, though any link with past worship has been expunged from the memories of those who dwell there. They are often confused with the SIMULAEKA, which are divine idols of a far more sacred nature.

GODSCLOAK: see DIVINIFUGUE SUIT.

GOELLEND: Geo. Sinkhole in the north east of the VOULLOR Mountains, in the east of ABATTUR. The sinkhole is overgrown with shrubs and trees and little of the hollow is actually visible, though it leads to an network of vertical shafts and caves that are quite expansive. A wretched smell emanates from the sinkhole, and the only exploration that has taken place there has been through the aid of softsuits for no mortal can stomach the fetid odour for long.

Despite various explorations taking place between 3220-3360 RM, following the cave's rediscovering by Abatturi explorers, only a handful of the shafts have been fully investigated due to their depth and size. Strange scuttling noises can be heard from the deepest levels, though their source, whatever it may be, remains elusive. A handful of eyewitness accounts have described pale-skinned black eyed reptiles in the depths though nothing concrete has been documented.

The sinkhole has been largely forgotten today and few local maps even indicate its location.

GOETH: 1. His. Nm. Ancient FOURTH AGE empire in the c of LLACHATUL, encompassing what are today the north west of THE HARÉSHK, the LEVANTINE region of southern AHRISHEN, as well as the east of LYRIDIA and TAMAR. Goethan ruins are common in the above regions, and many present-day cities are built atop the ruins of its ancient cities.

- 2. Eth. Ethincity in the c of LLACHATUL, encompassing the north west of THE HARÉSHK, the LEVANTINE region of southern AHRISHEN, as well as the east of LYRIDIA and TAMAR.
- 3. Geo. Western area of THE HARÉSHK, encompassing the states of EDICULE^(1.), PALUS^(1.), ALAMUT and the LEVANTINE region of AHRISHEN, as well as the east of LYRIDIA and TAMAR Its people share a common cultural identity, and are descended from the ancient FOURTH AGE empire of Goeth, and, more recently, the FIFTH AGE nation of GOETHA. Despite scattering over the borders of different nations. They are united by their belief in the prophesied leader, known as the HEIR OF GOETH.
- GOETHA: His. Nm. Early FIFTH AGE nation that in 807 RM united with HARA, founding the state of HARÉ SHKA.
- GOETHAN: His. Lan. Now-extinct language that was spoken by the mid FOURTH AGE empire of GOETH. Many extant languages of the south east of CENTRAL LLACHATUL ultimately emerged from this language, including AHRISHENI, BAATANISH, and VIRAHANI. See Vol II: Languages.
- GOETHAN ORDER: Sup. Org. Law. HARÉ SHKAN order established in c. 940 RM to oppose the growing influence of FIRMAMENTISTS and their allies within their homeland. The order became an official policing force of the region in 974 RM, though was disbanded with the change in regime that replaced Haré Shka with the HARÉSHK.
- GOETIAN BLUE: Obj. Dye and pigment that is common in THE HARÉSHK and the LEVANTINE region of AHRISHEN. Made from a mix of woad and ground blue glass, it has been used around the DARK SEA for millennia.
- GOGOAL GATE, the: Arc. Tec. In the catacombs of the PARTHIA APEX in TETHRA, PARTHIS; an archaic TECHNARCANE doorway that is never opened and always guarded by the PALATINES^(2.) of the Parthia Apex. Some believe an OTHERWORLDER or SCIONIC creature may be imprisoned behind the door, though few are those who can say for sure.
- GOIRATH: 1. Rvr. Major river dominating the c and south of KOMMEA. It is known for its many tributaries that begin in the highlands of the HOLLOW COASTLINE and converge, winding their way south to the BAY OF HARURHOTA across rocky terrain, and much of the river's course is unnavigable due to rapids and waterfalls.
- 2. Set. Major city in the c of KOMMEA, on the bank of the above river⁽¹⁾. Little is known of this city save that is built on uneven rocky ground and that its foundations are built atop great unseen arches beneath which are cisterns and hollows that most of its people are unaware of (Pop. c. 220,000).
- GOJAN: Geo. Young mountain-range running for almost 2,500-miles in a south western direction to the east of the SEA OF LETHEA, serving as a border between the south west of NOAVATUR and the north of MNEMON. To their south is the sheer coastline known as the CLIFFS OF BERDEN.
- GOJIDHU: Set. Coastal settlement in the c of PERGOST. It is largely known as the old capital of the ELDRIAN empire, though is today much diminished, surrounded by the concrete ruins of the brutalist palaces of the ORREX dynasty (Pop. c. 5,000).
- GOLATH AGG: (B. c. 2000 2647 RM) Oth. Arr. Patrician-gentile of ALMAGEST. Renowned HALFBLOOD artist, who rose to prominence in c. 2340 RM, before disappearing three centuries later. His works are noted for their grotesque and suggestive nature.

GOLDBARK: see SÖRR.

GOLDEN MAP, the: His. Car. Ancient map, thought to have been Atramentally-preserved, depicting the INNER SEA and the north of LLACHATUL. It is named for the colour of the vellum on which it is made, and is thought to date back to the FADING following the FOURTH AGE.

GOLDEN MOUNTAIN: see KOTHA ICHOLLIGHA.

GOLDSTREAM, the: Myr. Rvr. In the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN, a great nourishing river created by the DEMIURGE ARIMASPI to water his manifold creations and children. If the river truly exists, its location is unknown, though it is more likely to have become corrupted by the passage of time, rendering it unidentifiable. It is sometimes confused with the river SHIBBOLETH^(3.), which is attributed with the eponymous Demiurge, which Arimaspi is said to have been close.

GOLDTREE: see SÖRR.

GOLDWATER: Bev. Colloquial term in the KORACHANI EMPIRE for ale or beer or what equates such beverages, depending on the raw materials available to brewers. See Vol II: Beverages.

GOLEM: 1. lit. 'Living Machine'. Also 'Sicthainen techna'. Med. Tec. Engines of war that marry TECHNARCANA, ATRAMENTISM and FLESHWRIGHTING to create hulking humanoid creates with fleshy cores encase in mechanical bodies. These VAT-BORN creatures (more advanced, complex forms of STEEL OGHURS) are made of a form of SHADOW IRON that makes them extremely tough, though their upkeep and creation are incredibly expensive, far more so than that of STEEL LEGIONNAIRES. Due to the specialist nature of their construction, there are only a handful of manufactories scattered throughout the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI EMPIRE}}$ that are capable of constructing these golems, the largest of which was in DURCHAA (1.). Other manufactories were in ALMAGEST, PELASGOS and VENTHIR, each specialising in different forms. Outside the empire, PARTHIS was the only noted region with the means and purpose to construct such beings, though today Durchaa and Almagest - both of which are no longer part of the empire - are still thought to be capable of constructing golems.

Generally, golems are large constructs varying in height from 8 – 20-feet, depending on their design; and weighing between 8,000 – 30,000 lbs. The SOHBAL FERROLLI, Steel Oghurs and TALOS engines are all a variety of SICTHAINEN TECHNA.

- 2. Mys. Tec. In IO, a form of CREANT made through ancient techniques handed down from religious patriarchs known as EXARCHS for ages. They bear little resemblance to the TECHNARCANE golems of the modern age, which are far more sophisticated creations.
- GOLDEN AGE OF MYMEREA: His. Historical period in the east of EASTERN LLACHATUL following the signing of the MYMEREAN ACCORDS in 2996 RM, between HALEDONIA, LIMOTH^(1.), the PANTHEON ISLES, TETHYSIA, and THETIS, bringing an end to massed piracy and SLAVERY in the region. KOMMEA entered the Accords later, in 3189 RM, following the rise of its monarchy.

This ushered new trade and political alliances that brought a newfound prosperity to the region, which is said to have lasted until the withdrawal of Tethysia from the Accords in 3523 RM. Most political commentators believe that the region is now in a period of decline, much like most other regions of $\underline{\text{ELYDEN}}$.

GOLDEN CRESCENT: also 'Golden Sickle, the'. Pol. Geo. Lan. Common name given to the nations surrounding the SEA OF ETAGIRIA, including ZATAUR, AKACHA, ILLAKRAR (3), ZAKRON, KHAR NADUL, HANNAH, QARALAM, SHEZALIAH, and ZHARIAH (2). The region shares many cultural elements, including various overlaps in language and artistic and architectural styles, most of which are due to a shared cultural heritage dating back millennia.

The name originates from the yellow crescent that featured first in the ancient heraldry of the region and later the flag of the AKHSARAYAN empire, which remains in the extant flags of Zakron and Illakrar⁽³⁾.

GOLDEN EWE, ORDER OF THE: Soc. Org. Esoteric society in the western reaches of the ETAGIRIAN REGION, primarily in the lands of ILLAKRAR, KHAR NADUL, ZAKRON, and YSACYITHAIA. Publicly, it is a social alliance between powerful individuals that originated in c. 3620 RM in the city of EURARA, though there are many theories as to the true nature of the group, including that it is a network for the rich and powerful to gain more money and power, a forbidden cult that petitions ancient spirits for power, or other more nefarious pursuits. None are fully correct. In truth, the Order serves little material purpose and is a seen as a diversion by most who attend, with lots of ritual, pageantry and symbolism married together in obtuse rites that serve no true purpose other than to occupy the times of those with too much time to waste.

GOLDEN SICKLE: see GOLDEN CRESCENT.

GOLET: 1. Rvr. Seasonal river in the c north of LIDEA, flowing from sources across the JAELLAN plains and the north east of the ORIAN Mountains.

2. Geo. Canyon system in the c north of LIDEA with one main length around 90-miles long. A calcified ridge up to 15-feet wide runs along the midspan of its cliffs, creating a natural mezzanine, perhaps a remnant of when the river flowed constantly. Many settlements lie along its span, the ridge acting as a thoroughfare, across which many bridges have been raised. Calcite and garnet prospecting are common in the dry-season; the flooding of wet-season rendering mining impossible.

GOLETH: also 'Death'. Ast. Con. Constellation in the NORTHERN HEMISPHERE. See Vol II: Constellations.

GOLHEDON: Soc. Rnk. In KORACHANI-controlled CARCERI, a class of clerk responsible for the tracking and recording of slain SHAPERS. Traditionally, their roles involved collecting the skulls of dead FIRMAMENTISTS and inscribing their name, offence and method of death on them (though in reality a golhedon rarely carried out any of the above duties, entrusting them to his underlings; a practice that became increasingly popular as the caste grew wealthier towards the end of the AVÉNETHI ORDER'S tenure there). The skulls were placed in special rooms (called a GULGOLETH) where they remain to this day, numbering in their hundreds of thousands.

The practice is an offshoot of the more common Korachani custom of scrimshawing or filigreeing the skulls of the dead.

GOLORHIR: Set. Small city in the south of EZASUH^(2,), along the foothills of the THABAT Mountains (Pop. c. 20,000).

GOLYDIS: Set. City in the c of OPHIUSSA (Pop. c. 42,000).

GOMANATHU: Set. Town in the east of the small nation of KETESH (Pop. c. 6,000).

GOMELA: Geo. Rocky region of undulating hills in the south of OPHIUSSA. The region is noted as being of great beauty, and of few notable resources, so has been largely ignored by the industrialisation of the nation, though is known for its vineyards and production of OPHIR^(3.) liquor.

GONLEA: For. Boreal forest in the region of ON POUR^(1.) in the north west of RAONGEN^(2.). It reaches north to the southern-most edge of the WHITE SHEET and east to lake TAHONG.

GOODFAITH: Soc. Lan. Common greeting in TEMUJA.

GOPH: Rui. Mil. Str. Ruined fort dating back to c. 900 RM in the far east of TRAKIA. The fort once overlooked the SEA OF BYSSOS, which in those days reached as far inland as the fort, in the form of a narrow gulf.

GOR: Rvr. River in the c west of PORPHYR, flowing west for 780-miles from sources in the RYKK Mountains before meeting the coast of western Porphyr, at the SEA OF LETHEA.

GOR'KHAN: Geo. Ridge in the JAELA Mountain in the north east of SARASTRO.

GORADACH: 1. Pol. His. One of the seven ORIGINAL KORACHANI cities, to the north west of the peninsula.

2. Rui. Abandoned city in the c north west of KORACHAN, in the SUEVRAN BASIN in the north west, along the course of the river ENDRACH. It was once coastal and one of the original seven tribes, and was abandoned following the retreat of the seas.

GORAKANDRA: Set. Coastal city in the south east of SUMA'YA, named after an OTHERWORLDER of local myth. The city and its environs are one of the few fishing areas in Suma'ya (Pop. c. 13,600).

GORAN: Geo. Area in the south of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of DANILAT, covered in scenic ruins of palaces and cathedrals from c. 1900 RM — the earliest known structures erected by GOETHAN people following its re-settlement in the FIFTH AGE.

GORANTUR: Set. Fortified city in the north west of the tribe of SALARNA, in the c north of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 26,000).

GORC BADAL: Set. Major city in the c south west of CHEIRA, and capital city of the seventh prefecture of Cheira (Pop. c. 39,500).

GORDESA: Set. Settlement in the c east of EREBETH (Pop. c. 8,000).

GOREMAIDEN: Myt. Name sometimes given to the SCION KHAR'ILLAE in antiquity. It has resurfaced in the past decades in mystery cults that have appeared in NORTHERN SAMMAEA dedicated to her.

GORGELAN: Rvr. River-system in VÂRR, made up of many steep-banked rivers, the largest of them the river EGGOS, which flows east along its southern border, into the SEA OF SPIRES. Like most of Vârr, the region is now barren after uncounted centuries of industry, its land grey, the waters of its rivers largely lifeless.

GORGER BEETLE: also 'Gorger Grub'. Fau. Large insect relatively common in KHARKHARADONTIS due to their natural resilience to ATRAMENTAL TAINT. They grow to just under 1-ft. in length and are famed for their voracious grubs, which have become common around the INNER SEA REGION, possibly having made their way there along the SHADOW MARCH centuries ago.

They spend most of their lives in a larval form, which eats almost constantly until it pupates into its adult form, which is lacking a mouth and exists only to find a mate and reproduce, after which it dies. Females live long enough to lay eggs in dark humid areas. They favour Atramentally tainted lands, in particular those regions where the land has been corrupted into flesh, such as the FLAESCUS, where they engorge themselves, attracting opportunistic predators that feed on them.

Desperate pilgrims undergoing the SHADOW MARCH have been known to cook and eat the grubs, though they cause mild sickness. Some people indigenous to Kharkharadontis have learnt how to cook them, removing certain glands from them before grinding them up into a paste with herbs and spices, before being made into patties or sausages. They have also become a more common sight along the route of the Shadow March, where they feast on the flesh of fallen pilgrims who are left behind.

They have become a persistent pest in agricultural lands around the INNER SEA Region and farmers must be vigilant to stop entire crops from being eaten. They are a blight in dross manufactories and have become a nemesis to the MORTUARY CULT. Some dross manufactories have converted to using the grubs as part of their mix, to varied effect. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

GORGO: Ser. Small city in the north east of AYAD. Its main industry is the cultivation of exotic fruits, most of which are exported east (Pop. c. 11,000).

GORGON: 1. Lak. Lake in the south west of PELASGOS, in the region of IRTHA. It is fed by the river ABERIA, which flows west from the BATHAKOL Mountains.

2. Pol. Soc. Famed PATRICIAN HOUSE based in the main peninsula of the CITY OF ALMAGEST. It is a major industrial power in the nation, controlling various iron mines, foundries, manufactories, and shipyards. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

GORGON HOUSE: Str. The ancestral home of PATRICIAN HOUSE GORGON^(1.) dominating the upper storeys and penthouses of an entire block in the central peninsula of the CITY OF ALMAGEST. The house is famed for its stark architecture and use of gold gilding and basalt, and it has a large glasshouse in which are kept exotic animals and plants from across ELYDEN.

GORIA: 1. Rvr. River in the c of AHKA, flowing north for 442-miles from sources in the west of the TOLIASOR and SOTTHEA Mountains before meeting its parent, the river AMALTHEA.

2. Rvr. Wetlands along the course of the eponymous river in the c of AHKA, covering some 850-square miles.

GORKA: Ser. City in the south west of KORACHAN, north of the SEA OF ENGARA (Pop. c. 29,200).

GORLAN: Set. Settlement in the north of LOEGRESS⁽¹⁾, along the course of the river DRUITHAL. It is a major agricultural centre and is surrounded by miles of bucolic farmlands (Pop. c. 7,300).

GORMAKHIA: Set. Small coastal city in the north east of ANANTHUL, overlooking the border with SABAISA (Pop. c. 16,300).

GOROCZHAN: Set. Fortified coastal city in the far south east of the OKKHAMI peninsula (2.), in the nation of OKKHAMI. It originated as a failed KORACHANI colony in c. 2820 RM, when the peninsula was divided in two and the south eastern-most part was an island known as KHURTAE, and was largely uninhabited. Coastal settlements were raided for slaves by the invading empire, but the colony was abandoned within a decade, and the slaves maintained it, and the name, originally Gorachan, became corrupted, and it slowly grew into a prosperous city.

Following the wane of the SEA OF KHURSA, the city was regraded, with new structures moved closer to the coast, and the harbour relocated multiple times. Today it is the only major settlement in the headband of Khurtae and is centre of governance in the region (Pop. c. 48,200).

GOROGUOR: Geo. Mountains in the east of SAMMAEA, forming a border between the nations of ELEKHID and CHEIRA.

GOROLAVARTUR: m. Mys. His. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, a SCION of the DEMIURGE SYNCHTHONITH, thought to have died in the rainforest of PNESSA. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

GORONN: Set. Small coastal city in the north west of the TEMPLAR STATES (Pop. c. 14,000).

GOROR: 1. Sea. Bay in the far east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER, forming a western part of the BRINE SEA.

2. Pol. Soc. Tribe in the far south east of MULCIBER, in the GROWING MOUNTAINS, in the north east of SAMMAEA. It is one of three tribes with a coastal presence, and has the shortest coastline of the three, at around 170-miles. The tribal territories are made up of the drainage basin of the river MMITH.

3. Pol. Set. Ruling city in the tribe of Goror, in the far east of MULCIBER, in the east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS. The city lies along the banks of the river MMITH (Pop. c. 48,000).

GORORI: Geo. Rocky region forming an extension of the BAKHRAN Mountains in the west of the BAKHRAN STATES, forming a border with the SIX CITIES. The region is known for its harsh northern peaks and its shallow decline to the south into the HEHABAAN wastes.

GOROSHONNAR, the: also 'the Suture'. Int. Sup. Geo. Aerial LACUNA⁽²⁾ just to the north west of the desert of ANTHAR, in the far east of METHUMN in the AMMASHI⁽¹⁾ peninsula of south western SAMMAEA, that drifts lazily above the ruin of EKACARAX.

The lacuna was once a link to the ATRAMENTA, that in c. -200 ruptured, leading to a massive outflux of ATRAMENTAL energies that was second only in severity to the BLACK FOUNTAIN itself. This led to the death of dozens of surrounding cities, including the metropolis of EKACARAX, and spelled death to many cultures and people that dwelt beneath it for many centuries, until in c. 340 RM, the rupture began to heal itself, leading to the scar forming above the desert now commonly known as the Suture.

Despite this, the region remained ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED for many centuries, and people never returned to the region, even as the corruption eventually diminished, leaving many ruins.

The feature itself is beautiful to behold, and shimmers in an iridescent sheen that ranges from green to purple, and which is thought to change with the ARCANE TEMPERS. The Suture can be seen around a mile overhead above the Anthar desert, and can be seen from many miles around, and serves as a navigational tool to travellers today.

GOROXTUR: Geo. Island in the c east of the PANTHEON ISLES.

GORRA: (11,420-ft.) Geo. Highest peak of the GORRAN Mountains, within the nation of BASSORAH⁽²⁾.

GORRAN: Geo. Mountain in the east of SKAROS, around 450-miles long, bordering THE OLD FOREST. The mountain's western-face was rich in various mineral deposits, including iron, copper and tantalum. The mines and quarries that proliferated the region were exhausted c. 2800 – 3100 RM, leaving the western face of the mountain a wasteland.

GORRHASH: His. Ntm. Late FOURTH AGE nation that emerged from the ruin of the OLYAMMYAD EMPIRE in what are now AZAZEM and KORACHAN. It lingered into the first centuries of the FADING, but is believed to have faltered by c. -1800 RM. See Vol III: Extinct States.

GORRHASHI: His. Lan. Now-extinct language spoken by the late FOURTH
AGE nation of GORRHASH. It emerged from the earlier OLYAMMYAD and became the root of modern KORACHANI, amongst other languages. See Vol II: Languages.

GORROS: Set. Farming region in the c of TAMAR comprised of four separate settlements (Pop. c. 52,800).

GORRUDO: Geo. Large prismatic spring and associated geysers in the c of VALBAR⁽²⁾, in the region of ESZALA. Though it is very close to the city of KIGATHAL, it is not considered to be dangerous.

GORSAN: Rvr. River in the c north of BASSORAH^(2.).

GORTU: Set. Small city in the south west of SERROK. It is located in the region of KRALVISSRA, and is known for its expansive coal-mines (Pop. c. 12.000).

GOSASHANA: Sup. Geo. Region of faint ATRAMENTALLY TAINT in the c of ESHIR⁽²⁾.

The region is categorised as a LEAST CONCERN by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

GOSOTH: Set. Fortified coastal city in the south east of the emirate of OTHOTEL(1.), in the south west of LIMOTH(1.). It is located close to the mouth of the river GALLESH and is a major producer of beans and legumes (Pop. c. 14,750).

GOSPELS OF THE FOURTEEN: Rel. Vol. Third volume of the BOOK OF
RACHANAEL. They were penned by the followers of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR following his mortal death and eventual rebirth as an OTHERWORLDER.

GOSPELS OF GNOTH, the: Vol. Phil. Populist and far-reaching GNOTHI text, reaching as far east as VENTHIR and TETHYSIA. Originating in c. 1800 RM in the city of SAHIVAN, the texts spread outside of Gnoth, carried by missionaries of the FOUR JOURNEYS. The century following the first spread of the texts outside of Gnoth was rife with religious conversion and persecution of said missionaries by many governments, particularly in the KORACHANI EMPIRE, which was quick to ban the texts and outlaw those spreading them across the empire.

Today, Gnothi missionaries continue to spread the teachings of the Gospels of Gnoth, both within and without the INNER SEA, spreading west, into the VORANDINE, and south west beyond the SEA OF ORRIDA and the western-coast of MENISCEA.

GOSPELS OF SPURINA: His. Rel. Vol. Heretical pamphlets published by the heretic Spurina who was eventually captured by the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE and executed for treason and spreading blasphemies.

The gospels took the form of close to a hundred single page pamphlets that were distributed across markets and ports in VÂRR between 2854 – 2866 RM, from where they spread further across the INNER SEA REGION. They attempted to part the veil that the Church had cast over the true history of ELYDEN, explaining the tale of the DEMIURGES and their role in shaping the early history of the MORTAL races, and dispelling the propaganda surrounding the UNDYING MACHINE that had been allowed to fester unchallenged for close to three millennia.

The KORACHANI GOVERNMENT, the Church, as well as various orders within the SANCTIFIED ORDERS OF THE INQUISITION worked tirelessly to stop the spread of the pamphlets and apprehend the parties responsible for their creation, eventually apprehending a single man, known only as Spurina, in NOUVATAI in 2866 RM. He was executed following weeks of torture, by which point it had been revealed that he had been working alone, printing the pamphlets in an abandoned warehouse in Nouvatai for over a decade. It is unknown where he learnt the history of the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN, though no physical evidence was ever discovered and he never admitted to anything, not even under duress.

The Gospels were instrumental in teaching an ignorant populace the truth of the world, and despite the Church being successful in quashing their spread and neutralising those who were found in possession of them, whispers of the Demiurges continued to be felt around the Inner Sea Region for many decades later. The Gospels were also responsible for a minor schism within the Church of the Undying Machine, with some high-ranking priests thinking that censorship of religious expression was too difficult a task, but the predominant belief that the laity needed to be 'protected' from the true history of the world prevailed, and remains so to this day.

GOSPODI: Rnk. Title in AHRISHEN, roughly analogous with lord or master.

GOSSAMER FICUS: Sup. Flo. Large variety of fig tree that is common in the south of MENISCEA. It is named for its glass-like leaves that refract light through them like a prism. The trees are known for their vast canopies and the aerial roots that hang down from them, and for the rainbow patterns that surround them when direct sunlight strikes their leaves. They are most common in ZOHAK, VARU, and the south of SABAEA, and are well regarded, often forming a part in those regions' mythologies. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

GOSTAKIS: 1. Sea. Large bay in the north of the SEA OF SERPENTS, forming part of the coasts of the east of OPHIUSSA and the south west of TAHALL

2. Set. Coastal city in the east of OPHIUSSA, serving as a major harbour to the capital of DRAK LON. It controls river traffic up and down the river

 \underline{INA} and operates a fleet of transport barges between it and the capital (Pop. 48,000).

GOSTEA: Set. Fortified settlement in the prefecture of HOLICHRIS in the c north east of HOLOLACH^(1.), overlooking the MULL CITY-STATES (Pop. c. 2,300).

GOTOROS: Rvr. River in the c south of PORPHYR, flowing south from sources in the far east of the RYKK Mountains and the c of the POROPHOSSYR Mountains for 650-miles before meeting lake RESKOKH, which in turn leads to its parent, the river.

GOTSAR: 1. Geo. Island off the eastern coast of VARR.

2. Mil. Str. Harbour and fortress on the eponymous island $^{(1)}$ off the eastern coast of $\underline{\text{VARR}}$, guarding the entrance to the harbours of the capital, $\underline{\text{NOUVATAI}}$.

GOTTARUSH: Set. City in the north of HOGGOTHA ISZ, famed for its throne, which is made from a large GREATSHELL shell (Pop. unknown).

GOUSON: Geo. Badlands in the south of PARAIYA.

GOYA: His. Geo. Historic endorheic basin in the ROMOREA^(1.) rift valley. In 3821 RM it was flooded alongside other endorheic basins, by the Kingdom of Romorea^(2.), creating the artificial inland sea of HASAAZ ARAAT.

GOZZA: Geo. Island off the northern coast of KAZZAR⁽²⁾. It is largely unpopulated, and is known in Kazzar and TATAR for the ruined early FIFTH AGE CHIWENOOL fortress known as GRUHVIID.

GRABRES' MONUMENT: Mil. Arc. Art. Marble pillar monument outside the city of KHADON in KORACHAN, dedicated to general GAUTER GRABRES who led the ANTHROPEIDOS CRUSADES between 122 - 149 RM, where he was killed in action by a halfblood SHAPER.

GRAIAIN ANOINTING: Soc. A coming-of-age ritual observed in CEHOPHELA dating back to the height of the old SEPU religion. It in, children of the aged between 12 and 13 are submerged in the river MISED by elders of Sepu. Whilst in its waters they are said to be visited by nature spirits known as WINJI, who leave their blessings behind, after which the children are regarded as being adults.

GRAMARYE: Mys. A form of occult teaching that is common in tropical regions in the north east of SAMMAEA, including CHEIRA, ELEKHID, GIBEAH, KHITAI, NAARETH, SOLEYN, and SUOR. It is believed to be a relic of ancient mysticism that was prevalent in the THIRD AGE, possibly established by DERUWEIDS and VAPULIM in response to the increased prevalence on the FIRMAMENTAL and ATRAMENTAL arts. Like LEY magick, it taps into the lambent energies stored in ELYDEN, possibly from the FIRST AGE OF SHAPING when the DEMIURGES, working at their peak, shaped ELYDEN and crafted their true-born children.

It is a subtle form of mysticism that seeks to empower the individual, granting insight into the world unseen (MATERIA OMNA), and is a dying art. Its practitioners were hunted to near extinction during the EGRET CRUSADES, and few survived who could pass on its secrets to younger generations. It is now mostly prevalent in rural communities in the tropical rainforests of WAELMIGH, and has largely died into obscurity in other lands, remembered as an extinct form of mysticism rather than as a thriving art. See Vol IV: Other Forms of Mysticism.

GRAMMATER: Dem. 'Grammatan'. Ntn. Nation in the far south of SAMMAEA, along the southern POLAR CIRCLE.

The nation is known around the INNER SEA REGION is known for its acceptance of OCCULTISM, which forms a major part of Grammatan culture, from everyday life to warfare and politics. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

GRAMREA: Set. Settlement in the c of GIBEAH (Pop. c. 8,000).

GRAN: Set. Settlement in the c of the tribe of RAOSI, in the north of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. It is known for its granite quarries (Pop. c. 5.000).

GRAND ARENA: Str. Gam. Large sporting arena in THETIS, PARTHIS, built in a neoclassical style. It is home to the largest ENGINE RACING circuit in the PARTHISAN EMPIRE and can seat over 85,000 spectators.

GRAND ARMOURY: His. Mil. Ind. Str. Large military storage facility in the city of TARKUSH in AZAZEM. It exploded on the 4th ASHTALEN 3704 RM during the WAR OF SUNDERING. It remains unknown if this was an accident or the result of enemy sabotage, but no perpetrators were found. The explosion left half the city destroyed and it took many months for KORACHAN to recover from the loss. The armoury was later rebuilt, and remains in use today.

GRAND ATELIER, the: His. Tec. Clo. Str. Once-major CLONING ATELIER in the south of MHAROKK. Built in 2966 RM, it was, during its peak in c. 3350 RM, the largest and most advanced cloning atelier in the KORACHANI EMPIRE, and was responsible for the inception of hundreds of generations of STEEL LEGIONNAIRES and tens of thousands of individual clones over the years, as well as HAGHOUERIN.

It was attacked by LIDEAN forces on the 2nd of RACHALEN 3705 RM, during the MHAROKKIN CAMPAIGN of the WAR OF SUNDERING. A handful of small elite Lidean teams penetrated deep into southern Mharokkin territories, leading to vicious fighting breaking out outside the facility, with the small regiment of the IMPERIAL ARMY and PROVINCIAL BATTALIONS that were stationed there doing what they could to repel the attack, unleashing the very creatures they were defending on their foes.

When it became clear that the defence would fail, the remaining imperial forces, including a small squadron of Steel Legionnaires, made the difficult choice to destroy the facility and all its birthing vats to prevent them from falling into enemy hands.

The facility was never rebuilt, though rem ours persist of strange creatures living in the wilderness surrounding its ruin, possibly descended from haghouerin that were cloned there.

GRAND BAILIFF: Org. Rnk. Head of the WHITE BANK.

GRAND DELUSION, the: see GHANQI.

GRAND FORUM, the: Soc. Str. Massive public hall in the city of Tethra in Parthis. The structure is massive and takes the form of two wide intersecting arches of white marble, which offer a vast enclosed space that gives the impression of an exterior space due to its four open sides. The interior is filled with gardens, fountains and tiered platforms that offer a safe and beautiful place for people to enjoy.

It is open to everyone, and people use it for a variety of functions, including as impromptu markets, concert venues, a meeting place, or a soap box where people can lecture to people on any subject. It is also home to various cenotaphs, monuments and tombs, where the lives of influential Parthisan people are celebrated.

GRAND HARBOUR: Sea. Bay in the south of KHAR NADUL, located to the west of the peninsula of KHU ENDAT.

GRAND HOUSES: see LEAGUE HOUSES.

GRAND KNIGHT UNSHACKLED: Mar. Pol. Rnk. The ruling title of the KNIGHTS OF THE SUNDERED SHACKLE. The present Grand Knight Unshackled is CHANDAN TODR.

GRAND MARKET, the: Str. Part of a major overhaul of the inner districts of the city of ARGEA envisaged by the OVERCOUNCIL and started in 2231 RM, the Grant Market was to be a multi storey structure surrounding a large plaza that was to serve as a hub of culture, commerce and administration alike. Only half-finished before a change in administrative direction saw works halted, it soon attracted a lower class of people who squatted in its unfulfilled bowels, attracting crime and disease. An attempt to demolish it in 2623 RM was met with resistance by thousands of occupants, and after months of conflict, plans for it were eventually abandoned, with the distinct allowed to rot.

It remains today, a blight on the streets of western Argea, and is still known as the Grand Market.

GRAND MASQUERADE, the: Phil. The philosophy of the sodality of the BOMOLOCHUSES. They disseminated their beliefs within their performances and anecdotes, which were imparted upon those who watched them before the sodality was eradicated in 3924 RM.

GRAND MISRAH, the: Str. Gigantic amphitheatre that sits in the western districts of the city of KHIRITT, in the south of PHYRR. It is a massive structure made up of brutalist tiered grandstands that seats over 500,000 people. Citizens, workers and slaves are regularly herded into the Grand Misrah, where they are compelled to attend rallies and ceremonies led by the IMPERIARCH. It is also used for public executions of state enemies and occasional blood sports intended to boost manufactory worker morale.

The amphitheatre is a symbol of the Imperiarch's absolute power, and the events held here are grandiose displays of military might and ideological indoctrination. It is whispered amongst slaves that its foundations are lined with the bones of those who have opposed the regime: a grim reminder of the price of defiance in Phyrr.

GRAND OSSUARY, the: Rel. Soc. Str. Large necropolis in the south east of the city of AGLAIA (2.) in the north west of AZAZEM. It is renowned for being both the largest and the oldest FUNERARY TOWER in the KORACHANI EMPIRE, and originated some 3 millennia ago. It has been in constant use since then and is believed to house tens of millions of skulls, and many thousands of full remains in familial sepulchres and crypts.

The original thick stone-walled tower originally stood around a mile outside Aglaia⁽²⁾ though is today well within its south eastern bastion and now stands in the centre of a sprawling labyrinthine structure that is made up of hundreds of long corridors whose walls are lined with niches in which lie the skulls of the dead. Custodians drafted from the MORTUARY CULT guard the edifice and man its offices.

The offices of the Grand Ossuary are themselves voluminous, with a vast filing system that can, in theory, trace the location of every remain deposited within the Ossuary. Despite the meticulousness of the system, most of the remains in the Ossuary are millennia old, with no living descendants with memory of who the bodies and skulls once belonged to, leaving them forgotten and gathering dust. The Ossuary itself is disorganised, with many niches having collapsed, with skulls littering the floor, and ancient crypts having been broken into and looted centuries ago.

Anyone can gain entry into the Ossuary via appointment, given that they can provide a name and date of death that matches the records. Despite this, it is not difficult to falsify the information to gain entrance and explore the depths.

GRAND PRIOR: Mar. Rnk. Head of the WHITE LEAGUE, who also sits on the ruling council of the WHITE BANK.

GRAND REPOSITORY, the: Str. Library and repository of artefacts in the ancient city of TARTAK. Originally acquired through the spoils of war, they later became archaeological discoveries and purchases. The repository was destroyed in 417 RM during the siege of Tartak, and what treasures remained were plundered by KORACHANI troops and taken to KHADON.

GRAND TOUR, the: Int. Soc. Traditionally, a trip of THE INNER SEAS' most affluent cities and interesting historical sites, generally undertaken by young members of the upper-classes as a form of rite of passage for young princes and PATRICIANS. See also the ORRIDAN CIRCUIT, which is a similar custom common amongst those of WESTERN LLACHATUL and north western SAMMAEA.

GRANDIA: Set. Settlement in the north west of HABOT (Pop. c.).

GRANDMASTER also 'Grandmistress'. Mil. Rnk. Heads of each of the SANCTIFIED ORDERS OF THE INQUISITION. They are typically elected by and from eligible high-ranking members within the Order following the death (or rarely, the abdication) of the incumbent Grandmaster. Once elected, the Grandmaster is in absolute control of all the Order's assets and its members, and is answerable only to the COUNCIL OF SEVEN, the CONSULITE and the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR himself.

The exception to this is Grigorian Order, which is organised into TRIUMVIRATE, each of which is led by a TRIUMVIR..

GRAOSAR: Set. City in the north west of PORPHYR (Pop. c. 37,000).

GRAPHOMISSA: Rel. Rnk. Nuns who spend their days writing the CATHADESMS that are sold at CATHADEMACHI in territories that worship one of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE.

GRARNEÂST: Ntn. Nation in the south of WESTERN SAMMAEA, to the east of SYNCHTHONITHA. Climate/terrain *

It emerged from the latter alongside HAÏRAMAL and MEHDRA in 3817 RM. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

GRAROW: also 'City of Ashes'. Rui. City in the north west of the DESOLATION OF ASTUDAN. It was razed to the ground in a KORACHANI crusade in c. 2600 RM. It is now buried, though the bones and rusted weapons of its people still litter the countryside around the old ruin.

GRARRD: Sec. City in the south east of CYHLAGHARR along the banks of the river SATRYAN, that is known for the high-number of hydrocephalic birth defects and the raw, usually untrained ATRAMENTAL abilities that some such individuals display. The city is ruled by a caste of these hydrocephalic SHAPERS, many of which are incapable of unaided physical activity due to their weak bodies, but whose Atramental skills mark them above others. The city is alone in Cyhlagharr in that its leaders are not autocrats, but the most regarded of these shapers (Pop. c. 38,000).

GRASH: Geo. Hilly region in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of MEDES. It is an extension of the eastern CARIAN⁽²⁾ Mountains.

GRASSLANDS FEDERATION, THE: Geo. Expansive region in the south of SAMMAEA, to the east of the SEA OF KRIHIEK, made up of thousands of extended family groups that populate the grasslands of BIOUYISH.

GRATH: Ser. Coastal city along the north western coast of KHITAI, made up of cliffside- and pillar-dwellings connected by dozens of stone bridges. Khitai is well-known for such settlements and Grath is the largest and has become a major link between NAARETH, and is known for its many embassies and consulates and is the base of Naarethi governance in the region. As a result, it is one of the least insular of Khitai's cities (Pop. c. 492,000).

GRATIN IV: (B. 3966 RM) Pol. Current Patriarch (ruler) of ACHERA (1.).

GRAVE OF THE TIMELESS GUARDIAN: Rui. Ancient tomb in the far west of the VARASI region of NÁRTHEL.

GRAVI: Geo. Mountain range in the south west of SAMMAEA, crossing the border between METHUMN in the west and PHYRR in the east. It is known for its PARADROSS deposits, which are mined by Phyrr.

GRAVID WASTES, the: Int. Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED stone desert in the far south east of KHARKHARADONTIS, to the west of the WALL OF HAVEKH. It is relatively featureless but for the egg-like growths that pepper the region, from which are born grotesque beings of the earth. The region was only described once by explorers during the KHARKHARADONTID UNDERTAKING, and have not been studied in detail since, so very little is known about it.

GRAVITIC PATH: see GRAVITIC WAVE.

GRAVITIC WAVE: also 'Gravitic Path'. Sup. Invisible waves common in the FAR HEMISPHERE, particularly within approximately 1,500-miles of the TRUE MENISCUS that allow matter to levitate, and flow along set paths between established points.

Over time, SHAPERS have mapped these waves and have learnt to harness the powers of these waves, using FOCI⁽²⁾ to allow larger objects to use the waves, allowing them to create a frictionless form of transport between these set paths. Vehicles known as SKYSKIFFS are relatively common in the south west of MENISCEA and are a vital link between many cities and the various LODELITH settlements that are scattered around the continent. VACUUM AIRSHIPS also make use of gravitic waves to facilitate their movements.

The paths these gravitic waves take slowly shift over time, though shapers can anchor them, allowing the waves to be more effective for the purpose of transportation.

GRCAUTH: Geo. Massif in the east of CYHLAGHARR, forming a natural extension of the larger GRCAUTHAIRM massif to the west. The massif is ancestrally a place where young OGHURS from surrounding regions would perform their transitory quests.

GRCAUTHAIRM: Geo. Massif dominating the entire c north of the CYHLAGHARRI peninsula, around 64,000-square-miles in area. It serves as a major boundary within the nation dividing the largely arid south from the rocky elevated north.

GREAT ARSENAL: His. Mil. Str. Historical foundry on an island surrounded by canals in the city of TEIRA, VENTHIR, where cannons and hand cannons were once made. Founded in c. 1300 RM, it would go on to become a major weapons and ammunition manufacturer in the Kingdom of Venthir, and by c. 3500 RM it had become the foremost manufacturer of modern artillery in the DARK SEA REGION.

It was severely damaged on the 12th of AKORALEN 3703 RM by a malfunctioning piece of artillery whilst testing, during a period of increased output to support the VENTHIRI/SARASTROAN WAR. The explosion led to a chain that tore through the manufactory that left half of it in ruins, and the rest of it unable to continue operating. It was abandoned soon after and production was moved to other industrial centres around Venthir.

GREAT ARTIFICER, the: Mys. His. Common epithet by which the DEMIURGE NYARLOTH was once known.

GREAT BEAR: also 'daegaren' Fau. Large bear common to temperate regions of CENTRAL and EASTERN LLACHATUL. They are the largest bears known in Elyden and have hunched shoulders covered in tough matted fur, backs that slope down to their smaller hind legs and flat faces covered with callouses. They have large ranges and are solitary outside of mating season and raising cubs.

They are known for their cantankerous demeanours and are avoided by most people, being considered very dangerous. The yare also known to sometimes wanders into TEMUJA. * See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

GREAT BROR DIVIDE: Geo. Main continental divide in the continent of $BROR^{(1.)}$.

GREAT CENSUS OF 2474 RM, the: Int. His. Pol. Soc. Census in the KORACHANI EMPIRE, taking 3 -years to complete and a further decade to compile by the MINASTERIA OF TITHES. This census took place during the height of the Korachani Empires dominance around THE INNER SEA and provided a great deal of information to the government, primarily for the purposes of taxation.

GREAT COUNCIL OF THE PLAINSLEAGUE, the: Pol. Org. Gathering of rulers and representatives from the free nations of LLACHATUL that convened within the CHAMBER OF THE PLAINSLEAGUE of TEMUJA beneath the CRYSTAL PALACE in DUARIAHAHN in 4006 RM to discuss the movements of the KORACHANI EMPIRE and the imminent threat of war.

GREAT CULLING, the: Mys. His. Historical period within the KORACHANI EMPIRE during which SHAPERS were culled by the VÁMAN ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION – where they were rounded up and either forced to train to get a licence to continue practising, or otherwise being detained in suitable prisons, or executed if they proved to be too much of a liability to public safety.

The period began in c. 1310 RM when the idea of various $\underline{\text{MINASTERIA}}^{(2)}$ to oversee the licensing and training of shapers had become standardised and was fully ratified by the $\underline{\text{COUNCIL OF SEVEN}}$ following a calamity in which a shaper died in a $\underline{\text{MAGICKAL}}$ conflagration that claimed the lives of many bystanders.

Thousands of shapers were apprehended and others fled as exiles during this period, and by the time it ended in c. 1345 RM, the education and licensing of shapers had become standardised across the empire, with its descendent states continuing the tradition to this day.

GREAT DESERT, the: see GO BISAMMAM.

GREAT DIVINE UNDERTAKING, the: Myt. His. In the mythology and mythic history of ELYDEN, the act through which THE SHAPER crafted the SEA OF CHAOS into the FIRMAMENT and the ATRAMENTA and the MATERIAL PLANE between; and later the Two-and-Twenty DEMIURGES and their respective MORTAL children. See Vol IV: the Mythologia Elyden.

GREAT FAR SEA: see BATHASHAL OCEAN.

GREAT GARGANO, the: m. (B. 3923 RM) Gam. Per. Popular GIGANRI sporting personality who takes part in KU'KU NAL WRESTLING. One of a handful of non-HUMAN wrestlers, he grew up as a slave though was bought a PATRICIAN from HOUSE FLAMMA who saw in him the makings of a champion.

He was trained and slowly rose through the echelons of local contests, steadily making his way towards the Imperial Invitational, to which he first won entry in 3978 RM, winning it three years later. Uncharacteristically boastful and ostentatious for a giganri, his size and theatrics have earnt him a massive following, making him one of the richest and most influential sporting personalities in the INNER SEA REGION. He was awarded his freedom by the state in 3984 RM, after having won a further two times, and became a partner of House Flamma, going on to manage various Ku'ku Nal Wrestling arenas across the SARASTROAN EMPIRE, though his love of wrestling eventually saw him return to the arena in 4004 RM and he continues to fight to this day.

GREAT LIBRARY, the: Str. Library in DUARIAHAHN, TEMUJA. It contains a repository of ancient lore and knowledge, much of which was oral and transcribed by loremasters onto scrolls.

GREAT PYLON OF MUASTRI: Rui. SALRIDEAN^(2,) ruin in the north west of LLACHATUL, beneath the WHITE SHEET, overlooking the SEA OF SUDUNIR. It takes the form of a monolithic basalt pylon, thought to have been a temple of the ancient Salridean people. Parts of it protrude from the ice today, though it is thought that miles of temple-complexes lie buried beneath the surface.

GREAT RESULT, the: see SIMEIAN.

GREAT ROAD, the: Com. Geo. Major trade-route dominating CENTRAL LLACHATUL linking the nations of AHRISHEN, VIRAHAN, BAATAN^(1.), TEMUJA, MALAN, TZALLRACH, SAUA, the HARÉSHK, TAMAR, and LYRIDIA. It is a remnant of a far older and larger trade-route that crossed from present-day GAVADA in the far west of Llachatul, all the way around ELYDEN'S NORTHERN HEMISPHERE to ARSCAL in the south east of MENISCEA, and many regional trade-routes follow paths established by this ancient route.

The Great Road is ironically less far-reaching than the imperial $\underline{\text{RED}}$ ROUTE, and though no city lies along the direct path of both routes, offshoots of the two do serve to link them together – primarily in Lyridia, as well as via $\underline{\text{RHAMIA}}$ and Ahrishen.

The Great Road cycles goods manufactured across Central Llachatul and beyond throughout its course, bringing much-needed resources as well as exotic items to distant cities. It also serves as a source of information and gossip, which filters across nations and borders to distant settlements that may not directly lie along the route of the Great Road, via local trade and travel. See Vol II: Major Trade Routes.

GREAT SADNESS, the: Geo. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED sandy desert in the north of KHARKHARADONTIS, to the east of the DUNE SEA. It is named after its primary effect on mortals travelling through it, who feel a great sense of melancholia which worsens to suicidal urges the longer one spends within it. Some people who travel inside simply lose the will to live and lie down to die of starvation. This phenomenon was first noticed during an expedition that took place in 531 RM from the UMBRA SOKHAR, where multiple members of the expedition were forced to be left behind.

It is categorised as $\underline{\text{DANGEROUS}}$ by the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF}}$ ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

GREAT SAMMAEAN TRIAD: Geo. Common term given to the expansive mountain-chains that dominate the central regions of the SAMMAEAN continent. Thought the number of formations are near innumerable, they are commonly broken down into three distinct regions – the ACHARKHARAN, SHAKHURAN and KARKARMIS Mountains, more commonly known as the WORLD'S CROWN, the WORLD'S THRONE, and the WORLD'S SCEPTRE, respectively.

GREAT SLAUGHTER, the: Pol. His. Political event in the early history of XYRPHAAT⁽³⁾ that followed the collapse of the XYRPHANI EMPIRE in 3685 RM. Xyrphaat fragmented into dozens of rival states within decades of its founding due to conflicting interests and an inability to maintain a centralised government. Relations between these states soured, and as tyrants and warlords took control of them the region became embroiled in a long period of conflict that lasted from c. 3740 – 3780 RM, leading to the death of millions. During this time, borders shifted, territories were absorbed and lost and new states were formed, changing the political landscape of Xyrphaat into something that might be recognisable to someone today.

There are many regions across Xyrphaat that were once the site of bloody battles that have since been reclaimed by nature. Others remain littered with the bones of thousands of people, and are shunned to this day, believed to be cursed.

GREAT SHAPER, the: see THE SHAPER.

GREAT SHAPING, the: also GREAT DIVINE UNDERTAKING, THE.

GREAT SIMULAEKON: Soc. Arc. Paragonic iron icon in JURRAS⁽²⁾, after which all other smaller yet similar icons known as SIMULAEKA are named in the religion of the JURRASI SYNHOD⁽²⁾.

GREAT STRUGGLE, the: Soc. His. Eth. Common term for the cultural and personal challenges faced by the YARAOMIC PEOPLE of northern SAMMAEA. Their ancestral lands were appropriated by Korachani colonists within the first centuries of the rise of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, beginning with the conquest of VALKA in 19 RM and ending with the successful siege and sacking of their greatest and last city in KEKELIB in 933 RM, after which they dwindled, becoming slaves to their conquerors or scattering to the wildernesses, where they lost touch with their heritage over the centuries as they struggled to survive.

Their quest to regain their heritage is known as the Great Struggle, and it has marked their lives in the modern world, and their kindreds are known for their lorekeepers (IARAOM GRABBA) who scour their old territories for fragments of their history in the hopes of rebuilding their identity, which has been marred by millennia of Korachani corruption that has altered, excised, or buried their history, warping it into a grotesque shadow of what it once was.

GREAT SYNOD: Pol. Org. The direct government of AHRISHEN, concerned with the day-to-day running of the Kingdom. Its members are elected from the 17 territories of Ahrishen and rule from MAHSERTH for a period of 4-years each.

GREAT TECHNARCANE SYMPOSIUM: Tec. His. Exhibition of culture, technology and industry in KEPHUAAN that took place in 3825 RM. It saw exhibitors from across the AMMASHI^(1,) peninsula attending, showing technological and technarcane innovations and marvels, kickstarting a technarcane revolution in the nation, leading to it becoming one of the more technologically-advanced states in the peninsula, remaining so to this day.

The exhibition took place in a great cast iron and plate glass structure outside the capital HALAGAA, which has since been converted into an arboretum where exotic plants and trees are kept.

GREAT TITHE, the: Rel. Common name for the rampant pressganging of helots and slaves that takes place across the KORACHANI EMPIRE by the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE to serve as PILGRIMS along the SHADOW MARCH.

GREATER ADJUTANT: Fau. Large avian scavenger that is often found in garbage wastes and other forsaken lands rummaging for scraps. They are common across civilised lands across the south of LIACHATUL and the north of SAMMAEA. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

GREATER NICODEMIUS: Geo. Largest of three islands making part of the ISLES OF NICODEMIUS, around 300-miles off the southern coast of OKKHAM.

GREATSHELL: Fau. Large THEROPS bearing similarities to a tortoise, but around the size of a horse and far heavier. They were native to savannahs of SAMMAEA, though are now thought to be extinct.

GREATTOWN: Lan. Set. Term used in TEMUJA to describe a large urbane settlement, synonymous with the word city (though, being a sparsely-populated nation, Temujan cities are invariably smaller than those in more industrialised regions, such as the KORACHANI EMPIRE or other lands). Younger generations have begun calling DUARIAHAHN a city, against tradition.

GREEN CHAPEL: Rel. Str. Holy site in the far north east of THE OLD FOREST. A moss-covered chapel to unknown divinity, possibly a forest-deity. Its floors and stairs are hewn from the bedrock of the area and its walls are woven from living trees.

GREEN DESERT, the: see AERUGINIA.

GREEN LABYRINTH, the: Mys. Geo. Mythical land that is said to lie beyond the mountain of ACHARKHARA in distant south western SAMMAEA. The land is said to be fertile and verdant, a labyrinth of forests and tangled growth where life runs rampant and the taint of the ATRAMENTA is unfelt. There is little empirical evidence for the place and the origins of its existence are thought by most scholars to lie in the wishes and hopes of the ill-treated people of the KORACHANI EMPIRE.

Despite this, some respected FARSEERS and others with extraordinary abilities maintain that such a place exists.

GRED: 1. Mil. Str. Major sea fort on the eastern-most tip of the ITARAN^(1.) peninsula, guarding the entrance into the SEA OF ADAMASTOR^(1.). It belongs to CENGUISSE and is home to a large part of its navy.

2. Set. Major coastal settlement in the south west of SAMMAEA, in a CENGUISSAN exclave on the tip of the ITARAN^(1.) peninsula. It emerged from the fort of the same name^(1.) in c. 3680 RM and has grown steadily since then, becoming a metropolis and one of the nations' most powerful and well protected and armed cities (Pop. c. 273,000).

GREEN WELL, the: see KYCEOLAN^(1.).

GRELEM: Set. Coastal settlement in the south west of AZAZEM, overlooking the BAY OF BASILEA^(1.).

It is a relatively recent settlement, having been founded in c. 3230 RM on a newly-revealed rocky coastline in the wake of expanding coastlines following the dwindling of ELYDEN'S Seas in the early 4th millennium RM (Pop. c. 4,400).

GRELLOR: Rvr. Major river in the south east of ELEKHID, flowing east for 685-miles from sources in the GOROGUOR and NARAVASH Mountains, before meeting the coast at the ROILING SEA. Its delta forms part of the XEXILIB mangrove.

GREMASH: Set. City in the c south of RHINOCOLOURA, along the course of the river ABBEN, close to a fork where it meets the river SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾ (Pop. c. 42,000).

GREMOREM: Set. Coastal city in the west of GREST^(1.) on the south east of the island of MBAST. It is believed to be the only settlement of note on the island (Pop. c. 38,000).

GRESS: 1. Lak. Endorheic lake in the c of HOAMM. The lake was once a large bay, forming the north western-most part of the SEA OF ARTA, though the diminishing of ELYDEN'S seas left it landlocked by c. 3600 RM, its waters salty. The narrowest point of old bay of Gress was home to the infamous BRIDGE OF VALAMIR.

2. Rvr. River in the south of \underline{HOAMM} , flowing for 30-miles from the above lake into the \underline{SEAOF} ARTA.

GREST: Dem. 'Grestin'. 1. Ntn. Nation in the west of the island-continent of BROR^(1.). The nation is of a temperate climate and its southernmost reaches are known for their cool wet winters, and it is famed in Bror for its diverse wildlife and southern forests.

It was founded in 3263 RM as a monarchy headed by the house of IUNITAT, who emerged victorious from a three-decades-long civil war that ended in the death of its predecessor state of AHAGGAD and the razing of the old capital in NEYEM, with the new capital moved to SCELD. The monarchy was eventually undermined and supplanted in 3781 RM by the three HE'ELAN ARCHDUKES — descendants of the ancient SCION ORIAS YETZIRAH who once subjugated all of Bror under his rule. They divided the land into territories known as MANSIONS, each of which came to be controlled by dukes and their personal cults, many of which had been active in Grest for centuries, hiding in the shadows.

Under the leadership of the Archdukes, Grest has become a land of fanaticism and dark OCCULTISM. Its people have pioneered a form of TECHNARCANA that utilises the enslaved SPIRITS⁽¹⁾ of the dead in place of LARVAE, whose timeless whispers and wisdom provide the dukes and their cultists with knowledge and secrets that give them the upper hand against their foes.

The people of Grest are fanatically religious, with each worshipping a DAIMON – a patron spirit from the OTHERWORLD that is called upon in times of need. Most adults carry a self-made holy text that collects many important texts from the holy HE'ELAN WRITINGS that have been personally annotated and illustrated, making each one unique to its bearer. These documents are almost the equivalent of a passport or licence in other lands, and to lose this book is considered a great disgrace, bringing dishonour upon the individual. As part of their dark occult indoctrination, the people of Grest are highly xenophobic, reserving a seething hatred of HALFBLOODS, who they consider to be blasphemous and unclean. These they hunt and torture in merciless crusades, which often reach into the FAR WORLD.

Of note are the armies of Grest, which are decentralised, beholden to their dukes. Soldiers bear the sigil of their duke (which are in turn derived from those of various DAIMONS) proudly upon their equipment and as brands on their very flesh – a true mark of loyalty, and a conduit for the foul MAGICKS of their leaders. These sigils are said to bestow upon them the protection of their duke and daimons.

Grest and its people are avoided by most other Brori people, who they consider to have taken on the worst traits of DALLIAMORAAN culture. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

2. Pol. Geo. One of three political territories (known as MANSIONS) in the nation of GREST^(1.) in the west of the island-continent of BROR^(1.). It is ruled by the ARCHDUKE JURASAMA YETZIRAH and is the largest Mansion of Grest and is home to its largest cities.

GRESTIN: Lan. Main language spoken in GREST⁽¹⁾. Like most languages in the island-continent of BROR⁽¹⁾, it is descended from the ancient language of the DALLIAMORAAN EMPIRE, though it is perhaps one of the closest to this original tongue, with its rulers, the HE'ELAN ARCHDUKES', being intimate with ancient MAGICKAL texts that had been outlawed in the latter days of the empire. See Vol II: Languages.

GRETHEL: Lak. Lake in the c north west of ALAM BETHYL, forming a part of the course of the river HESSRIL.

GREY CITADEL, THE: Pol. Str. Seat of power in the ETHERI city of MIHARAST in the UMBRA SOKHAR. It houses many ancient relics and reliquaries of the etheri people, and even etheri nomads who would otherwise not set foot in a permanent settlement are said to make a pilgrimage to the citadel at least once in their lives to look upon the relics.

GREY JACKAL: Fau. Fiery-tempered jackals common to the plains of south western MENISCEA. They are semi-domesticated in DANU, VARU and ZOHAK, where they are employed by shepherds and other rural workers to protect them and their flocks from predators and banditry. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

GREY FOREST, the: Lan. Pol. Common vernacular in the KORACHANI EMPIRE and ALMAGEST for KOLCHIS, though more specifically used in reference to the MARINVYAAL Forest. The name was first used millennia ago, when the forests' extent was far larger than its present borders.

The name is believed to be a reference to the months of darkness and twilight that are experienced in Kolchisi winter.

GREY MERCHANTS: Com. Org. Secretive caste of traders common across the GREAT ROAD. They have outposts and warehouses in most major cities along the road, and are even found in the cities of the HIGH- and LOW-EMPIRES, where they marry into powerful merchant and PATRICIAN HOUSES of their host regions. They are very powerful though few know the full extent of this power or indeed how individual grey merchants are linked with the organisation as a whole.

They originated in Ahrishen, and still maintain a local trade-route, known as the GREY ROAD, that links the nation to RHAMIA, and the east of the OLD FOREST. They are named for the grey robes they once wore, though changing fashions means this is rarely the case anymore, though recently some amongst their numbers have been wearing the robes in an attempt at reviving the tradition. They are generally identified by the pewter medallions they wear bearing their seal, and are members of the SIRIPHAGAN ALLIANCE.

GREY ROAD, the: Com. Geo. Trade-route that originated in AHRISHEN in c. 2100 RM, and which today stretches west into RHAMIA and the east of the OLD FOREST, serving as a link between the RED ROUTE of the INNER SEA REGION and the GREAT ROAD of CENTRAL LLACHATUL.

The Grey Road is maintained by the GREY MERCHANTS, a secretive cast of trades who originated in Ahrishen in c. 1990 RM to take advantage of the Great Road that passed through their territories. They grew in influence and power, gaining control of many stretches of the AHRISHENI WATERWAYS, later branching out to land trade. They are notoriously secretive and are recognised by the pewter medallions they carry – showing their licence to trade by the Ahrisheni government. See Vol II: Major Trade Routes.

GREY STAIRS, the: Geo. Stairs hewn into lowest part of the ASHER Mountains in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of PALUS^(1.). Built on a large scale, and flanked by cave-like antechambers, the stairs lead to ruined hollows and atria of a dead proto-Haréshki culture.

GREY TOMBS, the: Geo. Rugged area in the north of STOLAS, south of the REGHAN Mountains and east of the VOROCH hills. The area is dominated by remnants of ancient DUSTSTONE formations, mesas and relatively few fertile areas (most notably the WAILING FOREST).

GREY WIGHT, the: Leg. VÂRRAN legend, dating back to the early days of the FIFTH AGE, and possibly borrowing elements from FOURTH AGE history. The legend follows the titular Grey Wight, a disgraced knight of KEHUAGH as he travels ELYDEN seeking redemption and a conclusion to his story. The legend is episodic different editions contain different stories, few of which are certain to date back to the origins of the story. One thing all tales have in common is the lack of a name and the unknown event that caused the knight to be disgraced. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

GREYHALL: Str. Fortified hall in the east of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of NICADA, where the kingdom's leaders meet.

GRIFFIN: Fau. Creatures of the DEMIURGE ARIMASPI, noble yet savage. They display traits of both eagles and lions, and by extension the AIKLAHS and EELYOUHNS, and are guardians of Arimaspi's GOLDSTREAM. Their bodies covered in intricate RUNIC scarification, said to be the source of their strength.

Rarely seen nowadays, they are thought by most to be extinct or otherwise to be creatures of myth and legend, though they can still be found in small numbers on the island of Isea and, in lesser numbers, in the west of the island-continent of BROR^(1.). They were once common in temperate regions, favouring cliffs and rocky terrain, particularly in the c and south of LLACHATUL. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

GRIFFIN, BASILICA OF THE: Rel. Str. Basilica in the city of SKAROSIA noted for its marble clerestories, great verdigris-encrusted dome, and the two gigantic bronze griffin couchant that flank its famed bass-carved bronze door.

The griffin statues were animated by the ARCHSHAPER NOMRA DHISS during the WAR OF THE ARTIFEXES in the defence of the city, where they wreaked havoc on ALMAGESTI forces.

GRIFFIN COLOSSUS, the: Arc. Large bronze griffin statue in the city of MALADAE in CEHOPHELA. The colossus is believed to be the ur-example of the now-ubiquitous stylistic griffin statues that have become synonymous with Cehophela. It dates to c. 2630 RM and is now a pale green, the centuries of oxidisation discolouring it.

GRIFFIN OF KORACHAN, the: 1. Soc. Accepted by most as an emblem or mascot of the city of KORACHAN, the GRIFFIN is a ubiquitous sight, appearing in statues, heraldry and designs across the city.

2. Art. Arc. Specifically, an aluminium statue off the coast of KORACHAN, just out of the Korachani harbour, heralding visitors into the city. Once positioned on a small rock, the waning sea level has left it landlocked today.

GRIFFINSTOWER: Pol. Str. Main citadel and palace of CARIA^(6.) in the HARÉSHK.

GRIGORI ZAHHAK: (B.303 – D. 391 RM) Pol. Founder of the Grigorian
Sanctified Order of the Inquisition.*

GRIGORIAN ORDER: Mil. Pol. Org. In the KORACHANI EMPIRE one of the SANCTIFIED ORDERS OF THE INQUISITION, tasked with rooting out and extinguishing evil in all its forms. Its members are less specialised than those of the other orders and are often part of the first line of defence, with other orders called in to investigate specific cases. They are master trackers and investigators.

The Order names itself after the HIGH QUAESTOR GRIGORI ZAHHAK, who founded the Order in 358 RM in the city of TAHIL in VAALK upon the command of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR. The founding of the Grigorian Order marked the first common usage of the term Sanctified Order of the Inquisition and propagated a time of growth, with various other orders, many now extinct, founded in its wake.

The order was later moved to the city of KYDONIA in 1263 RM, where it remained until the SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE, after which it was moved to KHADON, to be at the heart of the empire, where it could better respond to threats. During this move the GRANDMASTER of the Order made the decision to divide it into three distinct LANGUES(1.), spread across the empire. The other two Langues are found in SINITAS and the colony of TAVVADRA(2.), and each is ruled by a TRIUMVIRATE of the Order, replacing a Grandmaster.

The Grigorian Order is the most 'domestic' of Inquisitorial Orders, and its chief concern is the search for evil (by definition: any threat to the empire) within Korachan. As a result, it is the most widespread Order within the empire, boasting the highest members, with outposts in most imperial settlements. The Sundering of the Empire that saw Korachan torn apart by a civil war in 3705 RM was seen by many within the Order (and many more without) as a failure on the Grigorians' part, and since then its Triumvirs have become increasingly fanatical and taciturn in their actions, out of a yearning to prevent further political calamities from happening again. Due to this, many of its members carry a form of guilt or bitterness over their predecessors' inability (or unwillingness) in preventing the Sundering. To its credit, the Order is recognised as having prevented various conflicts and schisms since then, including a heretical plot by dissident PATRICIANS in 3822 RM, known as the EDUASIAN PLOT, that had come very close to reaching fruition.

The Order is highly hierarchal, with many ranks and positions, some shared between other Orders, and other unique to the Grigorians. These include the WATCHERS⁽²⁾, who are the rank and file agents and investigators of the Order; and SEERS⁽³⁾, who are SHAPERS that surveil the empires' people; and less common ranks such as the QUAESTORS⁽²⁾, OVERSEERS, and HIGH QUAESTORS. It makes great use shaping and TECHNARCANA to track and survey perceived threats to the empire, and its agents are amongst the best interrogators of the all the Orders.

The Order's emblem takes the form of three interconnected circles, representing vigilance, perseverance, and mercilessness towards their foes – all traits the Grigorians hold in high regard.

The Grigorian Order is alone in that it is ruled by a council of its three most respected Overseers and High Quaestors, which is known as the Triumvirate. The Order's three present Triumvirs are KOLROKH HANNO, KALEN PENSETTAR IV, and NUALLA INEN ARGHAAV, who have each ruled since 3992, 3979, and 4001 RM, respectively.

GRIIN YADGMA: Int. Str. Geo. Scientific borehole in the CHATHADHAA area of northern DURCHAA. Drilling began in c. 3980 RM and continued near constantly over the next 20-years, reaching a depth of around 50,000 ft. in 4001 RM, before stopping due to technical problems caused by drilling into soft stone at such depths.

While drilling was suspended, SHAPER attachés consultants on site detected incredibly dense and dangerous SHADOWISPS (umbrekha) began emerging from the hole, leading to the site becoming corrupted. It was evacuated in the summer of 4002 RM and though the plan was to construct SIPHON ENGINES there before returning, the site remains abandoned.

Today, those travelling close to the site claim they can hear otherworldly wailing, as though coming from the hole, which lies abandoned, open to the elements.

GRIM MANIKINS: see SURROGATE MOPPETS.

GRIMAINA: Set. Fortified settlement in the west of KAZZAR, along the southern shore of lake FANAGORA (Pop. c. 6,200).

GRIMOIRE HALKOTA: Vol. Religious text important to followers of the DEMIURGE KHARANI and his scions, particularly KHAR'ILLAE. Most rites common to the religion can trace their origins to this text, the original of which is thought to be a series of six codices thought to date back to the dying days of the THIRD AGE.

 $\underline{\textbf{GROMMET}}\text{: see }\underline{\textbf{OCCLUSION}}.$

GROMORA OF KORACHAN: (B. 3971 – 4007 RM). Rel. EXOCRINE who travelled around THE INNER SEA, stopping in each settlement she passed, sermonising the words of the UNDYING MACHINE and his prophet; the LADY MAELARTA. She carried the CIRCLET OF THE LADY around her waist.

GRONT: Geo. Mountain forming a small branch of the far larger NGHALLEAL Mountains in the c north east of THE SURRACH.

GROTESQUE: also 'Grotteschi'. Sup. Mor. Imperial vernacular used to describe any creature believed to not be of NATURAL BIRTH, including CLONES (including PALINGENETIC), DEGENERATES, HAGHOUERS, GOLEMS, UMBRANS, etc. It is more commonly used in a derogatory way for VAT-BORN creatures with particularly mishappen features.

GROVE, the: Org. Expansive private enclosure to the north of the CITY OF ALMAGEST, along the western-most expanse of the SUPHLATUS, owned by the OKKSHILT PATRICIAN HOUSE. The enclosure is walled and is home to old growth forests that have been largely cut down in the rest of coastal ALMAGEST.

The enclosure is walled and is home to a vast tract of old growth forest – the last remnant of ancient forests that have long since been cut down by the industries of Almagest.

It is famed not for its nature reserve, but for its prestigious clubhouse that has been present there for upwards of three centuries. The clubhouse is exclusive to male members who are of a particular social station, and new members can only be invited by three existing members. Current and past members include members from the cognoscenti and MTELLIGENTSIA, as well as Patricians, magnates, politicians and industrialists from across Almagest, and it is extremely protective of its secrecy, with several measures used to prevent non-members from accessing it.

Many conspiracy theories surround the club, likely due to its very secrecy, and include theories that its members are secretly DEMIURGE worshippers, or that they form an alliance with the most powerful individuals from across the INNER SEA who secretly work together to achieve an unknown goal.

GROWING CLEFT, the: see CRESCIVIA.

GROWING MOUNTAINS, the: Geo. Also MULCIBER. Expansive mountain-range in the north east of SARASTRO, stretching for 2,800-miles, from the south of ARKOS (1.), where it runs south east, ending along the south western coast of the ROILING SEA. It is home to fractured tribes of Mulciber, each of which possessed a tract of the rocky regions of the mountain, including its foothills and lowland regions. It is known for its frequent earthquakes and volcanic eruptions, hence the name.

Between 3200 – 3700 RM Sarastro conducted multiple raids across the mountain-range, many of them launched from ETIEL in IO.

GRRGAN REEF: Geo. Expansive reef off the western-coast of the CYHLAGHARR, in the SEA OF IMERRIL. It is around 130-ft long and prohibits entrance into the Sea of Imerril from the north or west, forcing ships to enter from the south and south west.

GRUAIMIN: also 'grue'. Pir. 'gruaimin'. Fau. Mor. Diminutive bipeds living in the many hollows found in the SALKHAN Massif in AHRISHEN and similar isolated areas, primarily temperate regions of LLACHATUL. They are around 4 – 5 ft. tall, though are hunched, giving them a more diminutive appearance. They have tanned skin that is covered in thin fur, primarily on their backs. Their faces, while humanoid, have traits akin to those of rodents or bats, and they have long rat-like tails. They have human-like hands that are capable of wielding weapons and tool to various effect.

They live in lose tribal structures and are of a rough stone age mentality, and have a primitive language comprised of simple words, clicks, whistles and intricate hand gestures. Shy and tentative creatures, they crave shelter and the cover of darkness. They are known for their trembling or shivering, which is not related to them feeling cold, but which is a thought to be a condition related to their metabolism.

Some periods of Ahrisheni history were characterised by the capture and enslavement of the creatures, mostly as objects of entertainment though some recorded instances of domestication are known. Presently the practice is not common in Ahrishen, though the creatures are sometimes captured and sold in SAUAN markets to this day. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

GRUAIMIN KING, the: Leg. Folk tale common in AHRISHEN, BAATAN, VIRAHAN, and west of SAUA and north of the HARÉSHK. Though many iterations exist, most share the same core of a GRUAIMIN who was banished for trying to steal an apple from a HUMAN town. Eventually it rises to power in the caverns of northern Ahrishen, becoming a ruler of thousands of its kin. Under his command, the gruaimin attack the human town, killing its people and looting it before burning it to the ground, burning all the apples with it. The gruaimin king grows old, rich and powerful, but dies still craving an apple. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

GRUDRRAN: Set. Coastal city in the c of the PANTHEON ISLES, in the east of the region of KARAXHANES (Pop. c. 38,000).

GRUGAMA: Mil. Str. Major fort in the north of IZABAL^(1.), guarding the waters that lead to the capital of Izabal.

GRUHVIID: Rui. Early FIFTH AGE CHIWENOOL fortress on the far south of the island of GOZZA in the far north of KAZZAR⁽²⁾ GRYPHOSS: Geo. Mountain in the c north west of GNOTH.

GUARDIAN TOTEM: Soc. In the SYCHTAN PREFECTURES, a totem that is chosen by an individual when they come of age, usually from amongst the ancient idols that are unearthed along the DREGLANDS during times of low tide. The totem becomes a guardian of sorts, which serves as a shrine in their home that they pray to. After death, the idol is repurposed and becomes a headstone, bearing honorifics.

GUARDIANS OF THE FOOTPRINT: also 'D'haid Maraka'. Org.

Organisation of disparate individuals that operates in the west of DHAT, specifically where it protects the region known as ARIMASPI'S FOOTPRINT. Known to be a place of primordial virginal beauty relatively untouched by mortal hands across all five ages, it is safeguarded from harm by diligent members of the Guardians of the Footprint, who are partially funded by the government of Dhat, though most funding comes from benevolent benefactors from across Isea and beyond.

The guardians are volunteers from across the island of Isea, though some members hail from distant shores. There is no shared demographic other than a desire to keep the region safe from outsiders and those who would seek to exploit or corrupt it. Indeed, members come from a variety of peoples, particularly vapulim and godsborn who owe their existence to the DEMIURGE ARIMASPI. Many are also SHAPERS, or otherwise those with a respect for history and the natural world.

There is little in the form of strict organisation, and members vary from militant to scholarly, with most falling somewhere in between. Most must know how to survive in the wilderness for it is expected of them to trek across the periphery of the park region with little outside support.

- GUARDIANS OF THE GROVES, the: Org. Group of dedicated volunteers in the city of FELATHRI in the AYAD who guard its many orchards and help to maintain them. The members are female and many amongst their numbers are members of the royal family.
- GUARUSH: Set. Settlement on the island of HAR JAKALL, in the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT, 525-miles north east off the coast of mainland (Pop. c. 8,500).
- GUATH ARUGTHO: Rel. Obj. Major LITHOGLYPH marker in the c north of THE OLD FOREST, north of the EPITRACHON Mountain. It is a part of the VALKAI pilgrimage around the OLD FOREST.
- GUAZADEAH: Set. Major coastal city in the c of GIBEAH. It is known for its vast harbours and ports, and most of the nickel exports of Gibeah leave the nation from here (Pop. c. 74,000).
- GUBOKHRATAR: Set. Small city in the far east of BANT, in the c of the CARCHEMISHI PENINSULA^(1.), in the east of SAMMAEA (Pop. c. 13,000).
- GUELEAPH: Set. City in the south of the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT in the north west of SAMMAEA, at fork where the river JEL HARATH meets its parent, the river JEBED DHUSH. It is a military centre in the nation. And many high-ranking members of its military are born there (Pop. c. 50,000).
- GUEN: Sea. Bay in the west of KAZZAR, to the east of the BAY OF RIPAA, forming a part of the greater IGUZZEN lagoon region.
- GUGGOTHA: 1. Myr. A great behemoth in the myths of ancient GERICIA.
 2. Tec. Veh. Ind. His. One of the three so-called THREE BEHEMOTHS gigantic crawling vehicles designed for industrial scale open caste mining. Guggotha was the third to be manufactured, and was commissioned by a VÂRRAN mining consortium, with construction completed by HOUSE BARATHIN in 3160 RM.

It was put to good use and slowly crawled across its industrial landscape over the next centuries, falling into disuse in c. 3800 RM with the Interregnum's departure from Vârr. It was allowed to rot after this and was looted for parts over the subsequent decades, with little remaining now to distinguish it as the mining behemoth it once was.

GUIDESTONES: see WITAN.

GUILD TREATY, the: Pol. His. Treaty signed in MAKHARA in 1073 RM standardising guild activities across the KORACHANI EMPIRE. This led to the unification of many industries which ultimately strengthened industry and trade across the empire. Following the Guild Treaty, many so-called

- guild pacts arose, uniting merchants, industries and artisans into various sanctioned groups.
- GULA: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the south of VENTHIR, guarding the border south with SARAGOS.
- GULDUND: Geo. Dune fields in the south east of KHULL, cossetted to the south and east by the IMRARKHAL plateau. The region is noted for its sparse white shrubs and relative in hospitability. It is home to the temple of KHITUL.
- GULGOLETH: lit 'place of skulls'. Soc. Str. Ossuaries belonging to the AVÉNETHI SANCTIFIED ORDER OF THE INQUISITION during its stay in the upper levels of the PRISON CARCERI, where the skulls of executed witches were kept and maintained by a GOLHEDON.
- GULLAETHA: also 'the Sand Gardens'. Geo. Sandstone rock formations in the c of NAARETH, along the course of the river TULAR.
- GULNESS: Set. Settlement in the c south west of KOLCHIS, in the eastern foothills of the $\underline{BAND}^{(2)}$ Mountains (Pop. c. 5,000).
- GULZAR: His. Rui. Oas. Neolithic ruins carved from hardstone of the BALGED region of BA'AKH. Built around an oasis, it is a common stop for DHAMATEAN nomads, who continue to leave offerings in the overgrown place.
- GUNDUAHIR: Set. Small fortified city in the c of KAZZAR^(2.) in c south of the OZZARUN Mountains. It originated in c. 800 as a caravanserai within SETTARAN lands and prospered into the rule of the ALCHIARAN DYNASTY, though was heavily damaged in the 29th century following major earthquakes in the region. It lingered for years, eventually remerging as a link in local trade, and it remains so to this day (Pop. c. 14.000).
- GUNGUNNAR: Geo. Mountains in the far south east of SAMMAEA, serving as the western-most border of the SARASTROAN colony of IPSISSIMA^(1.). The mountains are very old and weather-beaten, their crags rounded and glossy.

GUNKNIGHT: see COHORT.

- GULAM: Rvr. River in the north of VENTHIR, flowing east for 375-miles from various sources in the JAELA Mountains, before meeting the coast at the BAY OF DAVKA.
- GUPRA: Ser. Small city in the north west of the mainland PANTHEON ISLES. In recent history, the city has become well-known for its frequent changes in government, with 5 different changes in regime in the last two decades. This had had an adverse effect on the city, with many people moving away to smaller satellite villages on the mainland, or to nearby islands (Pop. c. 13,400).
- GURI: 1. His. Geo. Historic endorheic basin in the ROMOREA^(1.) rift valley. In 3821 RM it was flooded alongside other endorheic basins, by the Kingdom of Romorea^(2.), creating the artificial inland sea of HASAAZ ARAAT.
 - 2. Geo. Island in the above body of water in the north of ROMOREA⁽¹⁾. It is home to the SHRINE OF MILAD II, where KING MILAD II is laid to rest.
- GURKA: Pol. Set. Capital of ADHERA. The region surrounding the city is prone to earthquakes, and parts of the city have been felled various times throughout history, with the worst quake hitting in 3254 RM devastating the city, after which it was mostly rebuilt.
 - It was once a major trade-city in the now-extinct nation of RAMIS (Pop. c. 231,600).
- GURON: Int. Rui. Rusted metal monument in the north west of AHKA. It is thought to date back to the THIRD AGE, and is believed to have been constructed by ancient SHAPERS. Its purpose is unknown, and the archaic writings on the bass-carvings at its base are so-far undeciphered.
- GURON HAAS: Geo. Rocky region in the north west of AHKA. It is thought to be one of the few last territories of the BALAUR.
- GUSARETH: Set. Settlement in the south west of KOLCHIS, in the south eastern foothills of the BAND⁽²⁾ Mountains (Pop. c. 6,300).
- GUTHA: Rel. Dei. An ancient deity with a provenance amongst early mariners and pirates, Gutha was a demigoddess of the sea who was worshipped by early FIFTH AGE cultures in the south west of SAMMAEA. Early depictions represented her with 3 pairs of arms and a fishes tail in place of legs, though this aspect seems to have been forgotten by c. 500

RM, replaced with a more typical mortal physiognomy. She was said to embody individuality and enterprise, though as the coastal communities that worshipped her were assimilated by larger powers, she was largely forgotten by the end of the 1st millennium RM.

Worship of her saw a resurgence in the 4^{th} millennium RM within the so-called GUTHEE CULTS – whose descendants would go on to form an organised crime racket in the city of ITARA that would eventually spread to all of NORTHERN SIMBARA by c. 3420 RM. Her worship was eventually culled with the eradication of the Guthee Cults in 3794 RM. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

GUTHAOCH: Sup. Geo. Dre. Major DREAMSCAPE in the c north of THE OLD FOREST, attributed to the TREE OF AGEN, which lies at its heart.

GUTHEE CULTS: His. Org. Mystery criminal cult prevalent in SIMBARA for much of the 4th millennium RM. Its members formed a well-connected organised crime network that by c. 3600 RM had spread across all of Simbara, and whose members were responsible for smuggling, racketeering, and bribery on an industrial scale.

Named after GUTHA, an archaic sea demigoddess embodying individuality and enterprise, the cults first emerged in the city of ITARA in c. 3390 RM. The descendants of these early worshippers would eventually form a criminal racket that by c. 3420 RM had spread across SIMBARA. These Guthee Cults would go to severely undermine the Simbaran economy over the coming centuries, until their final eradication in 3794 RM following decades of systematic retaliation by the government. Strongholds scattered across a dozen different cities were raided simultaneously, with no quarter given, largely nullifying their leadership across all Simbaran territories, effectively ending their reign of organised crime.

Despite their well-publicised eradication, rumours persist, particularly in rural areas, of a resurgence over the past years. Authorities have thus far ignored these rumours, and many believe that this inaction may exacerbate the situation, should the rumours prove to be founded.

GUTHEN: Rel. Dei. God worshipped in MHAROKK, its name evolved from the original deity known as NUTHEN^(2.). The arrival of KORACHAN to Mharokk in 2693 RM, saw the worship of Nuthen abolished in favour of the true UNDYING MACHINE, and later became corrupted into Guthen, which became an acceptable from of worship of the Undying Machine in Mharokk in c. 3100 RM in the guise of a SAINT created by propaganda of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE.

GUTTER SAINTS: Sol. Rel. A common term used in the KORACHANI EMPIRE for low-born people to whom miraculous acts have been attributed by their communities, but which have gone unrecognised by the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. Many of these personalities have been elevated to the status of community heroes, being regarded as saints in all but name, with shrines being built in their honour. Many of these so-called gutter saints effectively become patrons of their communities despite the Church's disregard for their deeds, often due to their low social standing.

Efforts have been made by the church to quell the idolatry of these figures, but its agents and ICONOCLASTS^(2,) are unable to penetrate the deepest slums, which are fiercely guarded by their residents, who are distrustful of outsiders.

GUTTERBIRD: Fau. Common name in KORACHANI for feral pigeons that are seen as pests in most KORACHANI cities. They are similar yet larger and more repugnant than the domesticated rock pigeons they evolved from. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

GUTTERTALK: also 'Low Korachant'. Soc. Lan. Derogatory term for LOW KORACHANI, a KORACHANI language spoken by work-slaves and HELOTS. Interestingly, it remains prevalent in the underworld of the CITY OF ALMAGEST. See Vol II: Languages.

GUYEN: Set. City in the c north west of AHRISHEN (Pop. c. 29,000).

GWYDEMAR: Set. Small city in the c east of Loegress^(1.). (Pop. c.).

GYALTSA: Set. City in the west of CYHLAGHARR, flanking both banks of the river NURIA. The city is known outside Cyhlagharr for its slaver-tradition, and its merchants travel south into THE SURRACH to sell their slaves (Pop. unknown).

GYNOCRACY OF MULIEBRA: Pol. Org. The governing force of the freecity of MULIEBRA and its satellite states. The government is a remnant of an ancient order that existed in an ancestor city that existed before the founding of Muliebra.

GYPS: Fau. Giant vulture native to the dry plains north of the NGHALLEAL Mountains in the south of CYHLAGHARR. The birds grow to have a wingspan of 12 – 15-ft. and were often trained by falconers. Though the tradition has largely died out, it survives in the region of YGRALLA. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

GYPSALA: Set. Small coastal city in the c east of SABAISA. Its main industries are its steel foundries (Pop. c. 13,500).

GYPSUM FOREST: see GEPHESOCH.

GYPSY KINGS, the: Pol. Rulers of the city of HAPANTHA in the c east of THE SURRACH. Their entourage is known as the ITINERANT COURT due to their nomadic nature. They spend most of the year travelling around the and eastern basins of the Surrach, from the SURRACHI PLAINS in the north west to the INOTARHL basin in the south east, visiting most major cities along their circuit to the city of Hapanth, which is largely abandoned in the long dry months, but explodes with an influx of people in the few short wet months, when the river TADESSA come alive with flood waters. The Gypsy Kings return to the city where they open the yearly gladiatorial combats that draw competitors from around the Surrach.

GYRE CORE: His. Sup. Tec. Ancient ARCHAEOTECH that is kept by the AIWAHAN ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION in its fortress-repository known as the VAULT OF VAURNOS. An attempt was made to steal it by Parthisan spies in 4001 RM, but these attacks were silently rebuked under the steely vigilance of SORAYA VINDEX, and news of the event never spread beyond members of the Order.

Little is known of the object or its provenance, though it is believed to be important or otherwise powerful, given its history.

GYRFALCON: Fau. Medium-sized raptor common to CENTRAL LLACHATUL, including TEMUIA, SAUA, AHRISHEN, LYRIDIA and MALAN. They were once relatively common in lands west and south of there, though the pollution of the INNER SEA REGION has pushed them farther away. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

GYRGYLLA: Set. Major city in the c east of CYHLAGHARR, along the banks of the river SATRYAN. It is known for its large arena, known as ACAMAS' FIELD, which hosts gladiatorial games that are popular throughout Cyhlagharr. This is most famed such arena in Cyhlagharr and sees a lot of tourism from other cities, and has many balconies that are owned by oghur nobles, including the royal box owned by ACAMAS II himself (Pop. c. 50,000).

GYSTAR: Soc. Pol. One of seven ruling CLANS in CISNERIA, whose emblem is the bear, who embodies perseverance and hunger, and is a guardian to men. The other clans are BERMION, DISLMA, HOMMAL, KRAKYR, KRISLOR, SKULFUR.

GYTRACH: Fau. Large mastiff growing to 40 inches in height and weighing as much as 350 pounds. The dogs have incredibly powerful forequarters and a strong muzzle, commonly black. They are bred in the KORACHANI EMPIRE as guards and attack hounds. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

GYUYODUR: Set. Settlement on the island of VHOPRA, in the BHALASSIAN ARCHIPELAGO⁽²⁾ in the east of the PANTHEON ISLES. Its main industry is the quarrying of silver and sulphur (Pop. c. 5,000).

GYZHA: 1. His. Nm. Late FOURTH AGE culture native to the south west of LLACHATUL, east of the PARNASIAN Mountains. Though its people died out by the end of the FADING of the Fourth Age, their ruins remain, giving their name to the region of Gyzha in the REPUBLIC OF ELAT (1.), becoming an independent nation in 3762 RM.

2. Dem. 'Gyzhan. Ntn. Nation in the far south west of LLACHATUL, situated south of the PARNASIAN Mountains, and east of ELAT and south of AYAD. It is comparatively small, and predominantly made up of coastal plains and sparse woodlands. Wind from the SEA OF DURAHRAT moves inland, carrying moist air with it, making the plains of SCANSCIALA lush and perfect for raising crops.

Named after FOURTH AGE ruins scattered across the Scansciala, Gyzha has, since its settlement by EZASUHI^(2.) immigrants after their arrival in the peninsula in 3133 RM, been a centre of agriculture and husbandry, which it remains to this day, supplementing its shipbuilding industries.

Gyzha declared its independence from the Republic of Elat following the signing of the peace treaty that ended hostilities with Korachan in 3762 RM. This forced Elat to march its armies against Gyzha, though the simultaneous secession of one of the Elatian TRIPARTITE MONARCHS was too much for Elat to cope with, and it was forced into ratifying the claim to independence of the two other regions later in the same year.

Situated between the other two newly-formed nations, the ensuing decades were difficult to Gyzha – Elat was still bitter at losing over half its territories, and Ayad became insular, its armies facing south. Gyzha was weary of its neighbours moving against it and it fortified its lands, establishing a well-trained army that remains one of its defining points to this day, alongside its elite mercenary forces that are expert marines and serve as guards on ships based in the ORRIDA.

As a result, the PENTATAEL religion which was common to its ancestral lands, lost favour in Gyzha, and the five aspects of its pantheon became replaced instead by the singular entity known as KENGRAD. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

H

HA-AL: Geo. Stone desert in the south of THE SURRACH, north of the STRAMINEA Mountains. Fragmented LHAUS ruins from the FOURTH AGE can be found here, though there is little of worth in the wastes.

HA'ADDARA: Set. City in the far north west of BA'AKH founded by gold prospectors in c. 3710 RM, who settled the region after finding it in an abundant land (though not rich in gold as they had hoped). It rapidly abandoned its prospector roots and has grown steadily into a prosperous city. Today it is known for its many shrines, chapels, and churches, and it trades west with LIDEA (Pop. c. 41,000).

HA'DDHOTHAT: Sup. Geo. Vast region of ATRAMENTAL WASTE in the highlands of MO-ORASSIM, across the border between KREM and the deserts of RTHEI in the far north west of THETIS. It is noted for its duststone formations and SHADOWISPS that can travel far on prevailing winds.

The region is categorised as $\underline{\text{DANGEROUS}}$ by the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI}}$ $\underline{\text{INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES}}.$

HA ATH: Geo. Artificial dust-basin in the c of NOAVATUR, created through deforestation and mismanagement of crops through the 2nd and 3rd millennia RM. It is expansive, covering some 70,000 square-miles, and is home to many ruins and abandoned quarries and logging camps, from its more industrious days.

Its soil is now sterile, little more than dust that is no longer anchored in place following the deforestation of the region. Dust storms are common, and there is little wildlife at all, with most indigenous life either destroyed or forced to the west and north from through the movements of ancient industries.

HA MAZA: Sec. Major city in the c north east of NAARETH. The city is divided into many quarters, including a large central expanse that is famed for its verdant boulevards and fountains, in which dwell nobility and relatives of the matriarchy (Pop. c. 160,000).

HA PHA: Geo. Expansive massif in the north of RAONGEN⁽²⁾, bordering the WHITE SHEET.

HA SAWEL: Set. Coastal city in the south west of KREM. It is known for its daring sailors who hunt TALASOMEDS in the waters of the IAPETAN and BALIMAN Seas (Pop. c. 30,000).

HAAB: Set. City in the east of THAMAAZ, in the far south of THE SURRACH, in the north west of SAMMAEA. It is the southern-most of the major city-states of Thamaaz, and exists only due to the great spring atop which it is constructed.

Its waters are kept clean by the constant vigil of an exclusive caste of ATRAMENTISTS who are the law keepers and tyrannical rulers of the city and its satellites. Shaping is prohibited under their rule and allowed only amongst a select few with close ties to the rulers (Pop. c. 52,000).

HAAD: Set. City in the region of SIN JEMMA in the c south of THE SURRACH known for its cattle. Its people are known to be tight-lipped, and are amongst the few Surrachi people to be unaccommodating to outsiders.

This is believed to stem from centuries of rule under a tyrannical regime that has restricted freedom of speech (Pop. c. 50,000).

HAAEL: Set. Settlement in the c north east of GNOTH, along the GNOTHI ROAD (Pop. c. 6,000).

HAAG HAAD: Geo. Mountain in the south east of THE OLD FOREST, forming a natural boundary with the artificially-created VARRACHON Mountain and the lands of north western VÂRR.

HAAGEN: 1. Geo. Long low rough mountain over 600-miles long, forming the north western-most part of the GROWING MOUNTAINS. The mountain is named after the HAAGENI people who lived there in the first centuries of the FIFTH AGE.

2. His. Ntn. Ancient nation in the north east of SAMMAEA, in what is now the south west of SARASTRO, the north of MULCIBER, and the north west of ANUBIA. See Vol III: Extinct States.

HAAGENI: Eth. The people of HAAGEN, an ancient nation that survived until c. -400 RM between the OTINDHUR and KHO HAGAR mountain in the south of SARASTRO. The HAAGEN Mountains are named after them as is the mythic creature known as HAAGENTI.

HAAGENTI: Fau. 1. Named after the HAAGENI people that once populated the lands north of the HAAGEN Mountains; a creature the body of a bull, and the torso, arms and head of a human (with bull-like features) and large black feathered wings. It features in the mythology and ancient history of nations in the ARID TRIPTYCH and is regarded as a guardian and ward against disease.

It is also considered a creature symbolic of the dichotomy perceived by many cultures (as evidenced by the FIRMAMENT and the ATRAMENTA, light and dark, etc). It is commonly featured in many mythologies around ELYDEN, particularly those of SARASTRO, where it is associated with the deity HAGE. The many depictions in art around cultures around SAMMAEA, lend credence to belief that the depictions of Haagenti may be based on a now extinct creature that existed in ancient times known as the LAMMASHU.

They are said to be creatures of the DEMIURGE ARIMASPI, considered by most to be creatures of two worlds, children of the air and earth, yet belonging truly to neither.

Soc. Common heraldic device in KASPIA, alongside the WINGS OF TAHIRA, commonly employed by nobility and its elite AUROCHS RIDERS. also 'the Winged Bull'. Ast. Con. Constellation in the NORTHERN HEMISPHERE, reaching across the equator See Vol II: Constellations.

HAAGENTI METEOR SHOWER: Ast. Prolific meteor shower associated with the comet VALASHNA, that is at its peak in the middle of ASHTALEN. The meteor shower is named for the constellation of HAAGENTI⁽²⁾, which it most commonly passes through.

HAAKH: also 'the Levelled City'. Set. A large city in the region of ADA in the c of THE SURRACH that was levelled by an earthquake in 2904 RM. Survivors and refugees scattered across the SURRACHI PLAINS, with some integrating with neighbouring settlements and others remaining nomadic to this day, refusing to allow themselves to be put into their ancestors position ever again. The remnants of the city were ignored, left to rot.

Today most of it is overgrown, buried, covered in scrub, with only small echoes of the old city remaining. Many have explored it since then, and MORACHANI archaeologists have emerged from the area with vast treasures, though it is not without perils - tremors are common and caveins often follow them; chthonic beasts now dwell there; and it is said that the descendants of those few who remained there following its destruction haunt the region, little different to DEGENERATES.

HAALALLIME: f. Pol. Per. (B. 3971 RM) Present Queen of FALLAROUR and great Granddaughter of King HAALDOS. She inherited the throne following her mother BAHALALLA'S death in 3988 RM, when she was only seventeen. Many within the court of Fallarour as well many more without opposed her ascent to the throne, believing it would have been better for a regent to rule in her stead while she studied, but she was vehement. A life of being the subject of derision, condescension and doubt made her strive to exceed not only her commenters' expectation but also her own. Today, she is regarded as being a competent leader by many of her former detractors, though she has become a cold figure, having distanced herself from the people and her council.

She inherited a realm that was increasingly expectant of a war (one largely of its own design) over the SHIBBOTHA ISLES, which remain contested with the CORAL BARONIES. Her rule has been characterised by an increase in naval construction and the training of marines and sailors has become a priority. On her command, mighty TWIN-HULLED DHOWS patrol the waters around the SHIBBOTHA ISLES, intercepting SCYLLARETHI patrols.

HAALDOS: m. His. Pol. Per. (D. 3858 – 3933 RM) The first king of the ISLAND KINGDOM of FALLAROUR. He was one of the 118 barons that outlived king TARUSTAN III of the CORAL KINGDOM. While his peers squabbled and fought amongst themselves for the throne, Haaldos secured a series of islands in the north west of the Kingdom, biding his time. By the time the kingdom had divided into the CORAL BARONIES he had successfully founded the Island Kingdom of Fallarour in 3889 RM, which remain to this day, ruled by his great granddaughter HAALALLIME.

HAALDOS II: m. His. Pol. Per. (B. 3891 – D. 3949 RM) Son of King HAALDOS and the second monarch of FALLAROUR, who acceded to the throne in 3933 RM, following his father's death. He was succeeded by his daughter BAHALALLA in 3949 RM. He is remembered now as an instigator of already existing yet largely inconsequential enmities between Fallarour and the CORAL BARONIES, which increased throughout his rule and into those of his descendants, leading to the state of cold war that exists today amid territorial claims over the SHIBBOTHA ISLES.

HAALUANKA: His. Obj. Sword of VAALKAN legend, which was purported to make its wielder invulnerable.

HAAMU: Set. Settlement in the Kingdom of ROMOREA⁽²⁾. Its main industry is iron mining (Pop. c. 7,500).

HAARANO TH: Set. Mountain-top city in the hinterlands of the far west of PNESSA, between lake AKASM^(1.) and the GULF OF SAURIAR, and close to the border between the east of NOAVATUR and the far east of the KHARKHARADONTID desert, along the eastern face of the OEIKITH Mountains.

An ancient city left to ruin in c. 300 RM, the present-day city of Haarano Th was founded upon the ancient foundations in c. 1200 RM, and is partially hewn from the natural buttresses and arches of the cliffs in the region. It is now inhabited by the descendants of ETHERI nomads who settled the region c. 1000 RM, becoming their own people and existing largely independent of Pnessa.

Despite its population, the city remains a shadow of its original incarnation, which was said to be a multicultural metropolis of great scope. Today it exists mostly to mine raw UMBRA, which is piped south to EVUT (Pop. c. 60,000).

HAARAZHAL: Sct. ETHERI enclave in the south east of the UMBRA SOKHAR wastes, The enclave is built within the labyrinthine roots of a dead ATRAMENTAL tree; its skeleton gigantic and grotesquely shaped.

The $\underline{SALT\ ROAD}$ is documented as reaching this far south in c. 2950 RM, at which point $\underline{SIRIPHAGOS}$ became very powerful. The route south did not last long though, but some customs from the north remain and the descendants of Siriphagan merchants can still be found here.

The settlement is thought to date back to c. 2700 RM, when it was part of the LIEGELANDS OF LAKERTHA. When the Liegelands were forcibly taken by HAZORIN armies in 3298 RM, Haarazhal was left behind, becoming an independent city (Pop. c. 7,500).

HAARU: His. Arc. Ancient idol in the c east of the UMBRA SOKHARI wastes made out of a single block of SUNSTONE – a clear crystal with gold veins. The idol is the focus of a sun cult known as HAARUANISM that is prevalent amongst the ETHERI nomads and other natives of the Umbra Sokhar region.

HAARUANISM: Rel. Sun-cult prevalent in the UMBRA SOKHAR. Perhaps due to the general lack of sunlight in the Umbra Sokhar, many ETHERI nomads and other MORTALS venerate a faceless idol known only as HAARU, which represents the sun and its power over life and death.

There is a growing conflict amongst those who cling to the old religion of <a href="https://example.com/et-nc-state-ed-nc-stat

HAARVUH: Set. Settlement in the north east of ELEKHID. Its main industry is the mining of lapis (Pop. c. 6,000).

HAASA: Ind. Set. Mining settlement in the south of MECHABET, along the northern face of the DUMACHA Mountains. Its main industry is the mining of iron (Pop. c. 4,800).

HABAKK'S SWORD: (19,420-ft.) Geo. Needle-like pillar in the far west of VÂRR, 8-miles from the border with KORACHAN. The formation is distinctive and visible clearly in the east at least as far as CARILLAR.

HABAKKEN: Rvr. Fetid wetlands in the north east of IO, south of the city of HABAKKUK, along the course of the river SEROSH.

HABAKKUK: 1. Pol. One of the principalities in the north of IO, halfway along the southern coast of the SHADOW SEA. Comprised of a handful of coastal settlements, the principality, dating back to c. 2500 RM, formed a trade-route between NÁRTHEL and BA'AKH, with traffic remaining constant throughout its history. Many of the principalities' towns were abandoned following an outbreak of ATRAMENTAL PLAGUE originating in Ba'akh in 3632 RM, leaving the principality crippled; a tragedy from which it never truly recovered, leaving many of its settlements empty.

2. Set. City in the north of Io, along the banks of the river SEROSH. It was left depopulated in c. 3650 RM after a large outbreak of ATRAMENTAL PLAGUE that originated in the wetlands of HABAKKEN, after which the empire largely abandoned the region to fend for itself. It has slowly recovered, though remains much smaller (Pop. c. 32,000).

HABAL: Set. Settlement in the north east of BA'AKH, in the region of ELOTTUAKEI. People here venture into the tainted regions in SOFTSUITS and gas masks to capture the gasses, which are vital in the technarcane industries. It is built atop the ruin of an ancient FIFTH AGE YARAOMIC settlement, which was known as IABBAL (Pop. c. 6,800).

HABASHAM: Set. Major city in the far south of PORPHYR, at the pass crossing the POROPHOSSYR Mountains. It is an important city, linking west and east of Porphyr together, and is a major hub of trade and travel, and is known for its large inns and hostelries (Pop. c. 825,000).

HABASSA: Set. Small city in the south of the tribe of OURANASSA, in the far south west of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 13,000).

HABATZ: Lan. A common toast in SARASTRO and VENTHIR when drinking or eating in company.

HABBACHAN: Set. City in the west of KORACHAN. Its main industry is FLESHMILLING, and it has a major manufactory that is indirectly responsible for the employment of most people in the city (Pop. c. 40,000).

HABBAD: Geo. Expansive ridge forming the south western border of GNOTH with SEDISIA. Its western-face is known for its violent lightning storms due to cold storm clouds from the north approaching warmer air in the east of Sedisia, brought north across winds over the SEA OF ORRIDA from SAMMAEA.

HABBAR: His. Set. Ancient settlement in the c-south east of AZAZEM, abandoned in c. 1200 RM.

HABBAR KOHIR: Set. Coastal city in the south east of GYZHA (Pop. c. 45.000).

HABBARAD: Rui. Abandoned city in the south east of SUOR, abandoned following the effects of the EGRET CRUSADES.

HABBARO: Set. City along the banks of the river SHAMAR in the c south west of SARASTRO, very close to the border with IO. The city is situated along the path of THE SHADOW MARCH and is known for its many hostels which fill up whenever the March passes through (Pop. c. 20,000).

HABBAS: Set. Settlement in the DAGHAR CAVES region of lake DRACONA in the far south of LYRIDIA, along the STRAIT OF NÁRTHEL. It is populated by people displaced from DACIA and NÁRTHEL who established an independent settlement there, outside of the confines of any larger power in the region (Pop. c. 1,200).

HABBOT: dem. 'Habbot'. His. Ntn. Historical kingdom in the AMMASHI^(1.) peninsula in the south west of SAMMAEA, in what is now extant HABOT. It rose in c. 2650 RM after the warlord KERELL rallied various homesteads and small city-states to defend against increasing marauding groups that emerged in the lawlessness that followed the fall of the nation of Ammash^(3.) in c 2550 RM. A cult of personality emerged around the warlord, who became monarch in 2654 RM, becoming the primogenitor of its royal dynasty.

In 3743 RM the tyrant of AHAFRAT married into the ruling dynasty of Habbot to save what remained of his land after its western territories were absorbed by the AMMASHI COALITION in 3743 RM. This brought the remaining territories of Ahafrat under the control of Habbot, though the monarchy faltered soon after. The rapid increase in territory saw political and economic dynamics shift, leading to the ruling dynasty losing power to the growing merchant caste, which continued to gain power and supporters over the years, leading to the royal family being delegated to figureheads in 3835 RM, by which time shifts in languages saw the region known as Habot. See Vol III: Extinct States.

HABBRI: Set. Major coastal city in the west of RHEA, overlooking the SEA
OF PYTHEA. It is known for its shipyards and aluminium foundries (Pop. c. 82,500).

HABBUR ABUIT: also 'the Craven Throne'. Pol. Rui. Abandoned throne in the wastelands of the BITAMMAN Desert, in the north west of the VESPERTINE LEAGUE. The throne is made of an unknown metal of incredible hardness, and is now calcified and half-buried, with any structure that once surrounded it long-gone. Atop the throne is a mummified MORTAL body (likely HUMAN), in mouldering mustard-coloured robes that should by right have decayed completely long ago.

The throne is thought to date back to the early FOURTH AGE, and the body that sits upon it is believed to be an ancient despot known as Habbur Abuit, after whom the throne is now named. He was known as an accomplished SHAPER and a misanthrope, whose extreme views led to the demise of his people.

HABERUH: Ast. Set. OBSERVATORY-CITY in the far north east of AQUARIIA (Pop. c. 38,000).

HABIR: Set. Small fortified city in the north west of BA'AKH, overlooking the border with LIDEA. It originated as a SARASTROAN fortress built soon after the SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE, intended to guard against KORACHANI-occupied Lidea, though as diplomacy between the two empires held up over the years, the need for a fortress diminished, and a settlement grew around it, which now trades north with Lidea (Pop. c. 14.400).

HABONRA: Set. Settlement in the region of SISKIN, in the c north of THE SURRACH. It is known for its woody red wines (Pop. c. 9,000).

HABOT: Dem. 'Habot'. Ntn. Nation in the AMMASHI^(1.) peninsula in the south west of SAMMAEA. It is of a hot climate in the north, which cools to a warm temperate in the south, with long wet winters and dry summers. Its terrain is characterised by savannahs, scrubland and sparse woodlands in the south, to bordering mountains and highland regions in the north that are peppered with stony deserts.

It emerged in c. 3835 RM from the collapse of the monarchy of HABBOT, which began when it appropriated the remaining territories of AHAFRAT following the marriage of its ruler into the royal family. This brought about the unforeseen rise of a merchant class that rapidly siphoned power from the royal family, putting more influence in the hands of its people. This saw the royal family grow weaker with each passing generation until it was eventually relegated to figurehead status in 3835 RM. Today the region is ruled by an ANAGURAM, who is appointed through a complex election process that is meant to discourage corruption and bribery. Once elected the Anaguram rules for life. The present Anaguram is ZUTRAS, who was elected in 3981 RM.

It is known for the mysterious black idols that dot its landscape, which are ancient relics tens of thousands of years old, possibly dating to the THIRD AGE">HIRD AGE, that the ancestors of local people knew well to avoid. Their extant descendants barely acknowledge them at all following hundreds of generations of trepidation and they are simply ignored today, allowed to decay in isolation.

By c. 3940 RM, the anarchic religion known as the MASQUERADE OF THE LAUGHING GOD had made its way to Habot from SIMBARA, though thanks to the vigilance of the militant arm of the LAZANIST faith there, it never became as popular as other regions, though it remains a source of unending trouble for the government. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

HABRANT: Ser. Small city in the east of AZAZEM. Its main industry is the bottling of mineral water, which is sold across the empire and beyond via the RED ROUTE, whose merchants take it with them across the INNER SEA REGION (Pop. c. 15,000).

HABZ GINATH: Rui. Expansive region in the c north east of ESHIR^(2.) that is dominated by abandoned and ruined settlements that were abandoned and left to ruin between c. 3300 – 3700 RM, followed the continued retreat of the GULF OF ESHIRON, specifically the disappearance of the BAY OF SABRIYA^(1.). The region was known for its many small fishing villages, most of which suffered greatly in the wake of bays dwindling, far from any fresh water sources, they were allowed to rot, with many people abandoning their ancestral homes. Many more refused to leave, choosing to spend the rest of their years in the same area. Their descendants lingered for a handful of generations, though by c. 3700 RM the region had been effectively deserted, its old ports and boathouses crumbling. Today many of the old structures still remain, though they have been reduced to foundations and rotting wood in most places, shunned by the civilised world and reclaimed by nature.

Ginath was the name of the largest settlement in the region, and habz is the native word for 'abandoned'.

HACAT: Rui. Abandoned town in the ARTUL AKAEL in ALMAGEST. Its church, the BLACK CATHEDRAL was a popular destination to pilgrims, who flocked to see the incorruptible body of ST. SAASTA, though following its sudden corruption in 2653 RM, the church lost credibility and was allowed to rot by the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. Hacat was allowed to decay in the wilderness, defenceless against the opportunistic DEGENERATES and SCAVEN of the region, which have looted the place of all valuables, leaving the settlement a skeleton of rusted girders.

HACHA NUR: Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTAL WASTELAND in the south of the region of ASCORYCA in the south east of CYHLAGHARR. It was formed in 1178 RM, during the height of the war between Cyhlagharr and CHEGRINT, by a shaper who failed to control their powers, resulting in a massive ATRAMENTAL explosion that devastated the region, killing all present there. The explosion played a large part in ending the war and the region is shunned today.

The region is categorised as a MODERATE THREAT by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

HACHALIAH: Set. After the so-called PALACE OF STEAM AND RUST fell into disuse (following, perhaps, the death of the river SINA c. 2700 RM), it was allowed to decay, its workers cast out into the lands surrounding it, penniless, without homes. Over the years they plundered the ruin, creating a shanty town beneath the palace, in the deepest gorge of the Sina canyon, drawing water from deep aquifers and wells (Pop. c. 80,000).

HACHEM: m. Pol. Per. (B. 2493 – 2576 RM) King of the Republic States of TISARA, who acceded the role of figurehead in 2515 RM following the assassination of his aunt SHIRAT, the last true feudal queen TISHANNA^(2.).

HADAAL: 1. Rui. Ancient town in the west of BA'AKH (present-day north western SUMA'YA). It was the only significant settlement constructed beyond the SHIBOTHA mountain and appeared in c. -820 RM. It originally acted as a gate between DHEA and the NAAHI city-states, serving caravans that made their way across the GAZHAN valley between the nations. The area was rife with LACER and the town was home to many mercenaries serving the merchants that travelled through it.

An increase in lacer attacks in c. -450 RM left the town isolated from the rest of $\underline{\rm DHEA}$ for some decades, though as the conflict subsided in c. - 300 RM, the settlement re-emerged, its people battered but not broken by over a century of conflict with the creatures. The settlements' government had largely broken down in the absence of the Dhean confederacy, with various warlords taking power, though order was restored over the next decades through contact with the city of $\underline{\rm ALBA}$.

Following a massive Atramental outbreak in DHAMATEA that left the region crippled, Dhea saw an influx of refugees trying to enter its cities. Hadaal was such a place, and as it became apparent that the DHAMATEANS were carrying ATRAMENTAL DISEASES with them, the city refused them entry. The Dhamateans, angered and embittered by their misfortunes besieged the city in -98 RM. The attack failed but the damage was done; the Atramental disease had spread into its walls and within a year it was abandoned, razed to the ground, its dead burnt in a bid to contain the spread of the taint.

Hadaal was never rebuilt – the trade-route was abandoned; the NAAHI people had by then disappeared, replaced by the nation of LIDEA, with which there was no trade. The ruin of Hadaal was cleansed of taint and a great monument to THE TERATHA constructed by the ADUMBRAESKI atop the tombs of the unnumbered dead.

2. Rel. Str. A large platform in the north west of SUMA'YA, built in 628 RM from the ruin of a town and great idol that once stood there. The platform was constructed in preparation of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR'S arrival there in 633 RM from which he spoke to hundreds of thousands of Ba'akhi natives.

The platform is gigantic, truly a feat of engineering, and was built from the shattered remains of a monolithic stone idol that was destroyed by ICONOCLASTS(2) of the MONEHAN ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION who were exploring the region in c. 550 RM. The idol was the last remaining stronghold of the native BA'AKHI religion known as following 40-years of conflict with IMPERIAL immigrants. The platform was constructed from the remains of that idol; once a strident statue that was reduced to boulders of rock, each carved into bricks by Ba'akhi slaves, onto which they were forced to etch prayers and oaths of loyalty to the Archpotentate Malichar; a humiliating act of tyranny.

The construction of the place took place over three years and was a sign of the Korachani empire's affluence at the time, summarily discarded after the Archpotentate's arrival, allowed to fall into ruin where it is now visited by pilgrims undertaking THE SHADOW MARCH, where they each kiss the platform on which the Archpotentate stood seven times seventy times, before making camp on the platform.

Much of the area has now caved in, the DUSTSTONE on which it was built having eroded in the millennia following the platform's creation, revealing hollows beneath it in which many small chapels and ossuaries have been constructed; in honour of those who died during the Shadow March.

The region is now home to mercenaries serving pilgrims undertaking the Shadow March east into ASOA, defending them against the predations of the LACER ENCLAVES that inhabit the SHIBOTHA mountain.

HADAD: Geo. Plains in the east of BISBUT, crossing the border into the north east of PARTHIS, just south east of the KANDIAN highlands. The region is replete with wetlands and river, which flow slowly to the south east coast of the peninsula.

HADAK: Geo. Peak bog in the north east of VALBAR⁽²⁾. It is frozen in permafrost for most of year though it is dug in large quantities in the summer months by the people of OLBRI⁽²⁾.

HADAL: also 'the City of the Abysm'. Set. Ancient city that sits unopposed in the highland plateau of ILLAKRAR in the south west of QARALAM.

It was built by the half-breed descendants of AIKLAHS millennia past to oversee an important trade-route and path of pilgrimage, both of which are now dead. What they lead to is unknown and attempts to trace their path have so-far been unsuccessful (Pop. c. 15,500).

HADAMAPH: Set. Small coastal city on the island of HAR JAKALL, 435-miles north east of the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT (Pop. c. 15,500).

HADAR: 1. Mil. Str. Fortress in the north east of LIDEA along the CON peninsula. It was built in c. –300 RM, to house a regional council. It was taken by the KORACHANI EMPIRE following its occupation in 911 RM where it became the hereditary seat of house RIUFAN; ARCHPATRICIANS of great influence in the region.

2. Set. Fortified coastal city 5-miles north west of the above fortress, appearing in c. 2750 RM, after the fortress^(1.) became landlocked following retreating coastal waters. The city is now home to one of HOUSE RIUFAN'S largest shipyards and warehouses (Pop. c. 35,000).

HADARMIEL: Set. Major coastal city in the c south of SATARIEL. It guards the entrance into the inland sea of MELEN and is home to a major port and harbour (Pop. c. 120,000).

HADASHIN: Geo. Mountainous region in the north of SAUA, and source to many rivers, including the TAIROKO wetland forest, which itself is a major source of the river ACHI.

HADASSALON: For. Verdant region dominating the northern border between the east of IO and in the south west of SARASTRO, covering some 35,000 square-miles and reaching as far south as lake SAEB. Although the MOLACHARI DESERT is relatively close (just over 400-miles), the many rivers and lakes in the area allow the woods to thrive. Myrtle, carob, oak and palms are all common in the area.

The forest was heavily logged by the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI EMPIRE}}$ during c. 3000-3300 RM, due to overlogging in other more established imperial nations, though unlike many other forested regions that were logged to extinction, Hadassalon remained thriving, its many fruit-bearing trees of more profit to the surrounding cities than their wood.

HADDEN: Set. Fortified settlement in the west of the tribe of AUEREN, in the far north of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. It is surrounded by lands contested by AETHIOS and AUEREN and is now part of the war, its people embroiled in the conflict for decades (Pop. c. 2,000).

HADDORA: Set. Settlement in the c north west of the tribe of ASSAGOS, in the east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 3,000).

HADDURATH: 1. Geo. Plains to the south of KURNUGIA in the east of SAMMAEA, overlooking the SEA OF LETHEA. Until c. 750 RM the plains formed the heart of the Haddurathi empire⁽³⁾, with its eldest and most powerful cities located there. The northern-most part of the plain was covered in thick lava flows following the eruption of KURANOG in c. 760 RM, leaving the region destroyed, buried beneath feet of ash and flows of glass-like lava.

2. Sea. Strait in the north west of the SEA OF LETHEA, serving as a division between the FLAMING SEA in the north west and the LETHEA, to the south east.

3. His. Ntn. Now-extinct empire that dominated the lands west of the SEA OF LETHEA in the EASTERN SAMMAEA in the early days of the FIFTH AGE of mortal life. The nation was in decline when first KORACHANI explorations of the area began, and an eruption of KURANOG in c. 760 RM left its heartlands devastated, precursing its eventual fragmentation over the next decades. The salination of the BITTER SEA caused by the lowering of sea-levels throughout the continuation of the age only served to exacerbate the decline of the region.

Today its lands are populated by scattered savannah nomads, who occasionally form incursions against neighbouring lands, including ABACARDAT to the south and BANT to the north. They live in stone stepped cities ruled by powerful SHAPERS who are adept at wielding the ATRAMENTA against the waxing corruption of KHARKHARADONTIS. Though are not a united people, they revere as a deity an OTHERWORLDER who wears its flayed skin as a robe. See Vol III: Extinct States.

HADDURATHI: Lan. Language that appeared in c. -500 RM in the HADDURATHI EMPIRE^(3,), though which is largely spoken today in stunted form by the savannah nomads that populate its ruin^(1,). The language would become the basis for the later KULIGALAN and BANTISH tongues that emerged to the north, both of which were influenced by KORACHANI, due in no small part to colonists and missionaries in the later 1st and early 2nd millennia. See Vol II: Languages.

HADEA: His. Nan. FIFTH AGE kingdom that existed in the east of EASTERN LLACHATUL, in what is today occupied by LIMOTH (1.) and the peripheries of surrounding nations. It emerged from the collapse of its parent state, the empire of PHOL EGEDDA, in c. 1060 RM, and quickly became renowned for its industrious nature, though collapsed in 1154 RM following the IRON CATASTROPHIES that saw iron deposits in much of EASTERN LLACHATUL became corrupted, leading to a decline in its economy, which was dependent on iron mining.

Its economy collapsed, leading to the deposing of its monarchy amid the chaos of starvation. The Kingdom fractured in two after this, leading to decades of strife as these splinter kingdoms further fractured into increasingly smaller states that would, in time, lead to the rise of Limoth in c. 1463 RM after the effects of the Iron Catastrophies had subsided.

The nation is today remembered for its great colossus, the construction of which encompassed most of the timeline of the short-lived kingdom, its construction completed in 1151 RM, just a few years before the effects of the Iron Catastrophies were felt there. It is known today as the HADEAN COLOSSUS, and to many it is the only known usage of the name Hadea, which has otherwise fallen into obscurity. See Vol III: Extinct States.

HADEAN: His. Lan. Now-extinct language spoken by the ancient FIFTH
AGE HADEAN people of EASTERN LLACHATUL. See Vol II: Languages.

HADEAN COLOSSUS: also 'the Folly of Hadea'. His. Arc. Ancient colossus known amongst historians as the Folly of Hadea, on account of its construction encompassing the entirety of the short-lived kingdom of HADEA – from its inception in c. 1060 to 1151 RM, just 3 years before its eventual downfall.

The colossus is now situated in the west of LIMOTH^(1.), which inherited most territories lost by Hadea, and has since become a mascot of sorts to the Limothan people. Today a local legend claims that the nation will persevere so long as the colossus remains intact. So far it has survived various earthquakes and wars.

HADEN: Dem. 'Haden'. Eth. Late FOURTH AGE culture, prevalent in what is now the north of PELASGOS and the south of VÂRR, its most populous areas having been the shores of the PROPONTIS and SEA OF SPIRES. It is believed to be descended from the older Fourth Age OLYAMMYAD EMPIRE.

Its people had a prevalent cult of knowledge, at the centre of which was the mysterious deity MIMIR. All that remains of the culture are ruined temples and other stone structures, scattered across Pelasgos. Many Pelasgosi settlements have been built on the sites of old cities, their remnants now buried.

Most extant Pelasgosi people are descended from the Hadeni. See Vol III: Extinct States.

HADESH: Geo. Rocky region covering some 120,000 square-miles in the c north east of TETHYSIA. It is home to many granite quarries and gemmines.

 $\underline{\textbf{HADHA TOO}} \text{: } \textit{Set.} \textbf{Settlement in the south east of } \underline{\textbf{CHEIRA}} \text{ (Pop. c. 6,000)}.$

HADHAR: Pol. Set. Independent city-empire in the TIAMOLDORAN CITY STATES, to the south east of BROR^(1,), just beyond the foothills of the OROGEN Mountains. It stands as the seat of the Conclave of the City States.

Little is known of the city to outsiders, though it is considered a to be a great metropolis built atop a fabled THIRD AGE city. It is also a direct antipode of the GNOTHI capital of BISMUTH (Pop. c. 1,334,000).

HADHUR NEB, LIBRARY OF: Int. Rui. Tec. Ancient subterranean temple-complex in the west of ANANTHUL, in the far east of SAMMAEA, forming a part of the PRISON CARCERI. Situated within the CHAMBER OF LAMENTS, the Library of Hadhur Neb is a sprawling labyrinth of chapels and repositories hewn from the deep earth of the region, much of which is now collapsed and buried beneath old silt-deposits. The complex is thought to link with the Prison Carceri.

Exploration of the site has revealed corroded clockwork automatons, rusted beyond all recognition. Whatever they once guarded is now either lost or rotten, any treasures likewise lost.

HADIDAU: also 'the Iron Fist'. Mil. Org. Martial discipline within the KORACHANI EMPIRE that appeared c. 3400 RM. It was originally taught by those with knowledge of shaping, and many of their techniques are still taught to adherents, including the Sight, and other spheres of knowledge normally only taught SHAPERS. HADIN: Rui. Deserted city in the east of SUMA'YA. Once a major manufacturing centre, the city was abandoned following the KORACHANI retreat from BA'AKH after three centuries of wane under the custody of the DOMNITORS. Today, its silent foundries and rusting chemical foundries are empty, nothing more than crumbling ruins surrounded by ghost towns and farmland that has been reclaimed by an ailing nature, a reminder of what industry once existed in the region.

HADIR: Mil. Str. Fortress in the c-south east of the PARTHISAN colony of ABDAKROS^(1.) on the island of IRUGNA^(1.). It guards against potential attacks from the MALEFACTOR HORDES.

HADIREA: Set. Fortified coastal city in the SARASTROAN colony of IPSISSIMA^(1.). It is the largest harbour in the colony, and is known for its sheltered ports and shippards, where vessels undergoing the long journey from the colony to the INNER SEA can be maintained. It lies around 12-miles north of the southern POLAR CIRCLE (Pop. c. 29,000).

HADIT: 1. Sup. Arc. Grotesque metal monument in the c north east of AHKA, between the river AMALTHEA and the river GORIA. It is curved and lithe, and its once-smooth surface is putted and oxidised from exposure to the elements. The monument's base is covered in fossilised bones, many of which are unidentified, and the air around it is alive with the buzz of unnumbered insects, due to which it has been shunned.

2. Set. Settlement in the north of AHKA, along the course of the river AMALTHEA. It is known for its caravanserai that cater to caravans travelling along the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 11,000).

HADON: His. Rel. Dei. Ancient PELASGOSI god of the dead, which also served as a psychopomp, guiding newly deceased souls through their voyage of the OTHERLIFE. There is evidence that shows he may have been an otherworlder, though this cannot be verified.

HADON BATTA: His. Rel. Ancient region in the c of present-day TZALLRACH, thought by some to be a fabled GARDEN OF THE DEMIURGES. Presently a plain, it is around 5,000-square-miles in area and is filled with thousands of stone spires and minarets, most now ruined and toppled. The region is of little value to most and is home to a great variety of flora and fauna.

HADRA: Rvr. River in the c of BISBUT, flowing for over 375-miles from sources in the KANDIA Mountains before emptying in the SEA OF TARAMAR.

HADRAMAOUT: Set. Major city in SABAEA, in the west of MENISCEA. It was once coastal, though found itself landlocked in c. 3450 RM. Since then, it has been connected to the coast through an intricate system of lochs and canals. It is a stop along the EGETAKHAN ROAD (Pop. c. 119,000).

HADYIN: Set. Small city in the c-south east of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES (Pop. c. 13,500).

HAEAGH: Dem. 'Haeaghi'. Set. City in the c north of AHRISHEN, populated by descendants of ARESHI immigrants fleeing there millennia past (Pop. c. 32,000).

HAEGORN: also 'the City of Angels'. Set. Originally the tomb of an ancient OTHERWORLDER known as Govadelek, its body beautifully fossilised in the granite rock of the c south of NARTHEL. The tomb became a site of pilgrimage to the ADHERENTS OF THE REPENTANT in the early FIFTH AGE. By c. 750 RM the site had grown into a small town, little more than a cloister to the faithful. In 950 RM it was visited by the ILLIDRAE Sarosh, who claimed to be a descendant of Govadelek. Sarosh came to be worshipped as a living god by the Adherents of the Repentant. A fervent ascetic, he spent his days meditating, never eating, until by c. 1300 RM he had become a living mummy, where his body remains to this day, occasionally visited by what few Adherents of the Repentant remain.

Haegorn became a staging post for Venthiri armies during the WAR OF SUNDERING, allowing them to march south into SARASTRO. The city grew in influence after the SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE, particularly after the old capital, DACIA, was lost. Haegorn later became a major city in the south east of Nárthel, and remains one of its largest cities to this day, forming a vital part of the RED ROUTE, serving as a hub of culture and trade, as well as serving as a political centre and home to VENTHIRI diplomats and governors. Many believe it will become the new capital should the Nártheli vassalage to Venthir continue (Pop. c. 1,230,000).

HAEL: Ast. The first of seven known PLANETS orbiting the star SOR. Its mean orbital distance from Sor is 35,000,000-miles and has an estimated diameter of 3.200 miles.

It is the first of the INNER PLANETS, and is rocky, bereft of water due to the proximity with which it orbits around Sor and there is no reason to believe it has any life due to the extreme conditions on its surface. It has no known moons. See Vol II: Planets and Satellites.

HAELEN: Cal. In the KORACHANI CALENDAR, the eleventh month of twelve, comprising 30-days. It is named after the PLANET HAEL and is considered the second of three months of summer. See Vol II: Months and Lunar Cycle in Elyden.

HAELINA: Geo. Island off the north eastern coast of KAZZAR⁽²⁾. It is largely unpopulated though has some small coastal communities.

HAEMACOLYTE: also 'Blood Servant'. Mys. Med. Tec. Rnk. A form of HAEMONCULUS common in the KORACHANI EMPIRE created and employed as servants across many TECHNARCANE and BIOMECHANICAL professions. The blood of the creator is often used in the manufacturing of these creatures in an archaic process that links the two together, similar to the classical creation of haemonculi.

HAEMAGOGUE: Rel. Rnk. Temple priests in KARAKHAS who are in charge of the COMING-OF-AGE RITUAL of TORATAP HALKHIR amongst other roles.

HAEMICHAN: Set. Sole surviving settlement of note in the region of HAEMICHOR in the north east of VÂRR. The settlement was once a centre of the logging industry in the area and remains now, largely uninhabited, clinging to life (Pop. c. 2,000).

HAEMICHOR: Geo. Spent forest in the north of VÂRR, exploited to death by c. 3200 RM. The entire region – encompassing 15,000 square miles of the hills south east of the VARRACHON Mountain – is now little more that hardened tree stumps and dusty earth peppered by the ruins of wood mills and settlements that were abandoned hundreds of years ago following the abandonment of the region.

HAEMONCULUS: n. 'Haemonculid', Plr. 'Haemonculi'. Mys. Med. Tec. Rnk.
Artificially-bred beings originally crafted through ALCHYMICAL processes, which have since been improved through TECHNARCANE and biomechanical methods.

The practice of breeding haemonculi emerged in MHAROKK in around 740 RM, and rapidly spread across the INNER SEA from there, leading to the CHEMISTERS' WAR in 816 RM, in which various groups engaged in a WAR OF SCOURGING with each other over claims of ownership over manufacturing processes. The original creation of haemonculi was a highly ritualised affair, using a base of organic matter, chemicals and UMBRA, brought together by SHAPING. Later attempts made use of artificially-grown foetuses that are created from biological matter donated by the intended owner of the haemonculus, to whom the artificially-created being bonds with once it is incepted. The strongest bonds exist between donors and haemonculi that have been created from a partial liver transplant.

Today, haemonculi are bred for servitude, warfare, and study purposes, amongst others, and are often augmented through the application of ORTHOSES and other implants to aid in their selected roles. The CLONE troopers of the STEEL LEGION are examples of highly advanced haemonculi, whose complex biological manufacture; followed up with rigorous ATRAMENTAL augmentation, advanced orthosis and psychological indoctrination; is the pinnacle of the art of haemonculi manufacture.

Their physical appearances vary wildly and they range from child-like in size to muscle-bound lummoxes. Of note are their facial features, which, regardless of body-type, appear old beyond their years, and who often have features similar to those of the donor. They are often hairless, with dark veins easily visible beneath their pale skin. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life: Asicthain.

HAFFALIN: m. Per. (B. 3269 – 3321 RM). Pol. His. The last sultan of the ZARALL DYNASTY in SHAZGIN. He came to power following the assassination of his cousin ZARALL III, though died heirless.

HAFIZMERAI, GUARDIAN OF THE DEEP WOOD: (B. unknown) Sup.
HUMAN male, powerful FIRMAMENTIST with abilities tied to the SPHERES of humamism, avanism and dowerism. He rose in THE OLD FOREST in c. 1200 RM, and was prevalent in the south where he stood up against the advances of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, awakening swathes of the forest to oppose its armies. Their largest clash was in 1917 RM, at the Siege of Ottegaah where he defeated a full STEEL LEGION by raising the earth around the Ottegaahan citadel, and burying the legion beneath the resultant avalanche. Hafizmerai was never seen by imperial forces again though it is believed that he remains, guarding the so-called Deep Wood of RAM 'ATHI.

HAGAAT: Geo. Basin plain in the north east of SARASTRO, close to the border with VENTHIR. The region is known for its gold and has been the source of much conflict over the years.

HAG ATA: Rui. Arc. Granite pillars scattered across the west and north of ALAM BETHYL, crafted by elder MORTAL races thousands of years ago. Many of them are now toppled, their ruins littering the southern slopes of the AZAKKALIN Massif, though a region remains around the ATA hills, where they are preserved in better condition. Where intact, they are spectacular, rising for 150 – 200 feet, their once-smooth sides now pitted and corroded. Little is known of their origins or what culture created them or what their original purpose might have been.

HAG WITCH, the: see SWERTHA, WITCH OF BLADES.

HAGAGH: Set. Fortified settlement in the south west of the MULL CITY-STATES, close to the river TENASAAR that acts as a border with HOLOLACH^(I.) (Pop. c. 7,000).

HAGAR: Set. Small cliffside settlement in the west of SARASTRO, overlooking the sea of TIAMA situated at the mouth of the BLACK RIVER. The settlement is renowned for its EARTHWRIGHTS and FERREAR (Pop. c. 11,000).

HAGE: His. Rel. Dei. Ancient SARASTROAN deity, with the form of a winged humanoid with the hind limbs and horns of a bull and four digits on each hand. It was a multifaceted deity, symbolising both femininity and masculinity, warfare and family and above all, omniscience. It is believed that its form was drawn from that of HAAGENTI. Beneath him ruled a court of forty-nine divine judges who oversaw all matters of mortal and OTHERWORLDLY life.

With the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR'S appearance in Sarastro in 339 RM, many icons of Hage were destroyed by the ICONOCLASTS^(1.), though Malichar, enlightened in his new form, saw it fit to leave the grandest idols and sacred area intact and declared in 340 RM that Hage was an incarnation of the UNDYING MACHINE (many speculate this was a means of placating a populace that was not as supportive of his new regime as he would have had commentators believe). Slowly Hage became corrupted by the Imperial clergy into the Undying Machines' brother, and by c. 700 RM he was openly worshipped as a proxy of the Undying Machine, so long as his adherents owed the Undying Machine and the Korachani church fealty.

Following the SUNDERING OF THE KORACHANI EMPIRE in 3705 RM and the schism within the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE that led to the appearance of the REFORMED CHURCH OF SARASTRO it returned to worship of a deified version of Hage as part of a triptych that replaced Malichar as a religious figure.

HAGESH: Rui. Ruined city in the east of SABAISA, east of the US'HUT Mountains, overlooking the BAY OF BERITH. It is half-disappeared, like a sandcastle half-collapsed. It has been the subject of many artists' works over the past millennia and the tale of its fall is highly romanticised and fictionalised versions of it are commonly known across the INNER SEA.

HAGGAD: also 'the God-fungus'. Int. For. This peculiar fungus-like anomaly festers within the heart of c RAONGEN^(2.). Shrouded in mystery and local myth, this grotesque growth is rumoured to trace its lineage back to a cutting from the ancient TREE OF AGEN, which by extension means it was taken from the flesh of the DEMIURGE ACHAIAH. According to legend, one of her devoted DERUWEIDS embarked on a mission to propagate awareness of Achaiah's existence. In pursuit of this enigmatic goal, the cutting was meticulously interred within a shrine, only to succumb to an insidious and voracious metamorphosis.

The growth's texture is reminiscent of flesh melded with mushroom that exhales a putrid aroma of death. Its lifecycle is an enigma shrouded in unsettling patterns: it burgeons with unnerving rapidity, only to wane and retract during summer's heat, then mysteriously rejuvenates and expands once more when the weather becomes more clement. Its insatiable hunger for vitality devours all living beings, flora and fauna alike, that dare to obstruct its insidious path. Dark tales persist, suggesting that the cutting's descent into tainted soil forever tainted what trace of Achaiah's essence it carried.

For daring ALCHEMISTS, the lure of the growth's macabre flesh holds an undeniable allure. Curious experiments, most notably in the INCEPTION of HAEMONCULI and other artificial entities, have harnessed its regenerative properties to evoke haunting results. Nearby cities are famed for their alchemical institutions, where the fungus is studied. Most famous is the citadel of SHAONG.

HAGHOR: Plr. 'Haghorin', lit. 'bestial being'. Mor. Fau. In taxonomy, a haghor is considered similar to a mortal, but with the distinct difference of having been created entirely by a DEMIURGE rather than being a corrupted from of IMMORTAL due to the Demiurges' hubris during their shaping of ELYDEN.

The haghorim share more in common with their Demiurge creator than the mortals do with the same Demiurge, and their forms are more fantastical and varied than the mortals, who largely share similar morphologies. ARIMASPI was famed amongst his siblings for giving live to many haghorim, including AIKLAHS, EELYOUHNS, and VISUNDS, amongst others. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

HAGHOR -I'ARIMASPI: Fau. KORACHANI name for the see BEAST OF ARIMASPI.

HAGHOUER: Plr. 'haghouerin'. Also 'shadow-beast'. Sup. Fau. KORACHANI word for artificially-made creatures (UMBRANS) that are created through an archaic marriage of TECHNARCANA and ATRAMENTISM. They are often made as beasts of burden or for use in warfare, and are also designed to be pets and exotic beasts, though ultimately their roles are as varied as their forms are diverse. They are either made to bespoke designs, or mass produced, either being made from scratch or by taking particular animals and warping their forms. Either way they are slowly grown in VATS within ATELIERS and manufactories.

HAGKOR: Set. Settlement in the south east of TEMUJA known for its glass quarries in the Plains of LAES (Pop. c. 3,200).

HAGLACH: Set. Settlement in the prefecture of HOLICHRIS in the c east of $\underline{HOLOLACH}^{(1.)}$ (Pop. c. 4,000).

HAGRA: Geo. Desert mesa caravanserai in the north east of TETHYSIA, in the south west of the TULKHIN savannah. The caravanserai is carved into a large mesa and though it is abandoned following the death of the nearby trade-route, it is often used by nomads and other travellers.

HAGRADEA: Set. Major city in SARASTRO, commonly known as the SLAVER capital of the Sarastro, where most slaves who eventually find themselves scattered around the empire are originally bought and/or sold. The city is large though mostly flat, sprawled across many miles of lake shore, its harbours and slave-markets dominating its architecture.

The city was born in c. -600 RM during a tumultuous time in SAOSTANA. Conflict with the NATHI KINGDOM had dominated the last decades, and Hagradean slave-raids against the north and south came to dominate its culture and it rapidly became a slaving capital in SAMMAEA, if not all of Elyden. By c. -400 its predation on the HAAGENI nomads of the region had led to their virtual extinction as a people. Later, during the APOSTATE WARS that engulfed IO between -192 and -128 RM it singled out the merchant-city of TYROPOEA and its environs and preyed on its people. Under imperial rule Hagradea became part of THE SHADOW MARCH, evolving over the years to cater to the thousands of pilgrims that pass through its gates every year, with caravanserais and voluminous chapels and shrines designed for the masses who cross in en-route to KHARKHARADONTIS.

Today it is home to the mercenary force known as the $\underline{PRAETORS OF}$ \underline{TEUTAR} and it is a major city along the course of the $\underline{SALT ROAD}$ (Pop. c. 1,700.000).

HAHAN: Set. City in the c of KRENN. It is as a melting-pot of cultures from surrounding regions and is known for its large market, around which the city itself revolves. Indeed, it originated as a caravanserai many centuries ago (Pop. c. 61,000). HAHAR: Set. Major city in the south west of AMMESH. (Pop. c. 303,000).

HAHEIA: Set. Small city in the north of ANUBIA. It is a stop along the RED ROUTE, linking Anubia with SARASTRO in the west, and has many hostels and inns, catering to the many travellers that make their way across its borders (Pop. c. 11,300).

HAIDAR: Mor. Last known living EELYOUHN.

HAIDU OKHE: 1. Sea. Lan. KORACHANI term for the INNER SEA.

2. also 'the Inner Sea'. Ast. Con. Constellation in the NORTHERN HEMISPHERE. KORACHANI legend maintains that its current name was coined after an ancient clairvoyant first viewed the INNER SEA from high and noted the similarities. See Vol II: Constellations.

HAII: Pol. Set. Capital-city in SEDISIA (Pop. c. 1,200,000).

HAILIAR: Rel. Str. Shrine in the c north west of VENTHIR, forming part of THE SHADOW MARCH. The body of ST. BHEMAH is interred in the shrine, which is guarded by templars.

HAIMOTH: Geo. Steep-sided volcanic area in the c of KARAKHAS, covering over 200-miles. Most of the peaks are dormant, but small earthquakes and rumblings are not uncommon around the peak known as MT. OROROTH, the last major eruption of which was in c. 2000 RM.

HAÏRAMAL: Nm. Nation in the south of WESTERN SAMMAEA, to the east of SYNCHTHONITHA. Climate/terrain *

It emerged from the latter alongside $\underline{GRARNE \hat{A}ST}$ and \underline{MEHDRA} in 3817 RM. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

HAJDUK: Mil. Rnk. Castle-guard and elite foot-troops in the HARÉSHK.

HAJJAHAN: Set. Major city in the c south of the SULTANATE OF
ABACARDAT, located at the edge of the seasonal endorheic lake KEBETT
(Pop. c. 90,000).

HAKARIM ELSHIFFRA: m. Pol. Per. (B. 3901 RM) Present MUTTAHARCH of the NADI'RAH KHAMSAL.

HAKARSAD: Int. His. Tec. Ancient TECHNARCANE engine, thought to date back to the FOURTH AGE. It is rusted solid and its original purpose is unknown

HAKEGOTHA: Rui. Overgrown ruins in the north western periphery of the fog-shrouded jungles of WAELMIGH, in the north west of CHEIRA, around 40-miles from the border with PNESSA. The ruins are barely visible beneath the weight of vegetation that engulfs them, though what remains of them are black and covered in carved pictographic symbols that echo similar markings found farther north, in RHINOCOLOURA, ETHISTONITH and the GROWING MOUNTAINS OF MULCIBER.

HAKGHAR: Set. City in the MULL CITY-STATES, in the TOLIASOR Mountain chain. It is known for its limestone mines (Pop. c. 34,000).

HAKKA: Geo. Mountain-range in western LLACHATUL, which alongside the HARKONNA Mountains acts as a border between GNOTH and TAHALL.

HAKOR: Set. Small coastal city in the south west of THETIS (Pop. c. 13,400). *

HAKRAT: Rui. Abandoned city in the c-south east of TARTAK. The city was overwhelmed by the ATRAMENTAL WASTELANDS of HOTUTAER in c. 3280 RM.

HAKUR: Mil. Str. Fortress in KHAMID, to the north of the SEA OF IANA, north of the capital of IAHNEF. Together with fort INBET, it guards entrance into the bay.

HAKURAM: For. Sparse woodlands in the far north west of VENTHIR, noted for its walnut, myrtle, OLIVE and poplar trees.

HAL HALAT: Geo. Long escarpment forming a border between the north west of LYRIDIA and the south west of AHRISHEN, around 200-miles long. Its incline is sudden at first, which alongside the QANAM HALAT, makes is a natural deterrent to travel between Lyridia and Ahrishen.

HALA: Set. Settlement in the UHLSAAT region of c ARKOS⁽¹⁾, known for its salt-pans (Pop. c. 7,800).

HALABBAR: Set. Settlement in the c north west of SARASTRO, along the north western shore of lake SILEB. It is located in the LAXARTHA region, which is the only major source of coal in Sarastro, and as a result its main industry is coal mining (Pop. c. 5,400).

HALAD: Lak. Expansive depression in the south east of ROMOREA⁽²⁾ forming a part of the greater Romorean^(1,) rift valley. The depression forms an endorheic basin, the central-most parts of which are covered in salt flats, indicating the region was long ago underwater.

HALAEON: m. Myr. His. Pol. War. Per. Ancient human champion and father of the 2nd generation scion SALLON. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

HALAGAA: Pol. Set. Major city and capital of KEPHUAAN, located in the north of the nation in the AMMASHI^(1.) peninsula. It emerged as a major city prior to the rise of Kephuaan, as part of its predecessor state KAPHAAR, and became important for writing the first draft of the legal text that would go on to become the AMMASHI TREATY. The Treaty was signed in 3594 RM in the neutral city of RAMINA, though Halagaa remained an important cultural city, and was renowned around the Ammashi peninsula as the birthplace of the Treaty.

To this day, so many years after most surrounding states have forgotten the spirit of the Treaty, it remains home to many diplomats and expats from across the peninsula and it remains true to its cosmopolitan roots (Pop. c. 487,000).

HALAIA: Set. City in the c of SKAROS. It is a major industrial centre (Pop. c. 40,000).

HALATIA: 1. Ind. Geo. Expansive salt-stone mines in the east of PARTHIS, in a rocky region of the c south of the ZOHELETHI Basin. The mines have been continuously used since c. 2780 RM, and are expansive and sprawling, stretching for miles from the main entrance, around which a large city is situated.

2. Ind. Set. City and centre of the above salt-stone mines, in the c south of the ZOHELETHI Basin in the east of PARTHIS. The city is only partially located above ground, where a large market and stone-working yard are found. The majority of the city is located underground, where large mechanical pumps circulate air and fresh water for the inhabitants.

Much of the city is made from disused portions of old mines, some of which date back to c. 2780 RM and are expansive. The largest such chamber, used now as a square and market, is over half-a-mile long and many-tiered, with rooms, business and apartments carved from the stone (Pop. c. 200,000).

HALCYON: 1. Fau. Raptor indigenous to TETHYSIA and the far east of LLACHATUL. The bird is its national creature, and is believed to be a guardian of the weak. The HALCYON-PRIESTS of Tethysia are named after the bird.

2. Set. City and religious centre in the north west of HALEDONIA (Pop. c. 230.000).

HALCYON: Geo. Island off the south western coast of SATARIEL, to the north west of the SEA OF GEAUA. It is widely considered to be a place of natural rugged beauty – picturesque rock formations covered in mosses and thick grasses. The people of Satariel acknowledge the beauty of the island and have left it uninhabited, making travel to it punishable by death. The island was once at least partially inhabited as its highest point is crowned by the ruins of a mighty coastal fortress that legends claim is the resting place of the HALCYON SWORD.

HALCYON DAIS, the: Pol. Obj. Throne in HALEDONIA.

HALCYON-PRIEST: Mil. Rel. Org. Hospitaller priests in TETHYSIA, sonamed after the Tethysian national BIRD^(1.). They are part of a sect of the cult of AARU.

HALCYON SWORD: Leg. Obj. Apocryphal object from the legends and histories of SATARIEL, believed to have been wielded by an ancient champion that is now buried on the island of HALCYON. The existence of the sword has never been proven, and ancient laws prohibiting travel to the island has made it difficult to conduct research on sword's history.

HALCYON WATERS: Sca. Shallow waters off the eastern coast of the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT, just south of the city of WAHHAD. The coastline and waters are particularly beautiful and have been the subject of Sepahaunati art and literature for centuries.

HALDATA: Geo. relatively uncorrupted dry region in the east of the UMBRA SOKHAR wastes in SAMMAEA. It is home to the city of ONEIRACHAN, amongst others.

HALDUA: Geo. Shallow sea off the south east coast of THETIS.

HALDUAN SEA: see HALDUA.

HALEB RHOTHL: Set. Major city in the south of TZALLRACH. It is known for its wide thoroughfares that are shielded from the tropical sun by great red awnings, as well as its large military presence.

It was originally an ISURAN colony, established in c. 2200 RM, due to rich copper reserves there, though was abandoned by c. 2900 after the depletion of its quarries and effects of the seas' waning in the area. Its ruin was later taken over by the KREMI, and it then defected to TZALLRACHI rule in c. 3510 RM.

It was once a coastal city, known for its cavernous harbour and the overhanging cliffs that protected it, on which were stood its palaces and temples, overlooking the GULF OF THAATA. Today it is 6-miles from the coast, its old harbours now a necropolis (Pop. c. 200,000).

HALECHEN, MARTYR OF THE BELL: also 'St. Halechen'. m. Per. (B c. 1989 – D. 2022 RM) Mus. Chief BELL-ringer of the then newly-completed BASTION OF STEEL in KHADON, KORACHAN.

He was killed defending the bastion from an infiltration attempt by what may have been an assassin. He was later canonised, becoming a saint of the, and patron to CAMPANOLOGISTS.

HALEDONIA: Dem. 'Haledonian'. Ntn. Eastern-most nation in LLACHATUL, east of HARITH and south east of KOMMEA. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

HALF OGHUR: Mor. The offspring of OGHURS and MORTALS, most commonly HUMANS. Of note is the city of AN SIMEIA, which is populated by a race descended from half-oghurs now known as SIMEIANS, and the nation of DURCHAA, where they are relatively common, particularly in the cities of DAALKATH, DHAUGOSH, and Durchaa⁽²⁾. Members of the ruling HUS caste of Bastros are descended from ancient half oghur unions, though have bred amongst themselves for centuries and consider themselves a people onto their own. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life

HALFADEL: Flo. A variety of Asphodelus that is endemic to the HYPAMARA region in the west of NORTHERN SIMBARA. The plant is said to grow in soil seeped in the blood of an ancient felled deity, and bees pollinate the plant, producing a strong honey that is used to make a mead known as HALFADOR, or GODSMEAD, that is commonly drunk in the region and which grants imbibers hallucinations.

HALFADOR: see GODSMEAD.

HALFBLOOD: Also 'ANTHROPEIDOS'. Oth. Those who can trace their ancestry back to an OTHERWORLDER ancestor. Typically, a halfblood has one MORTAL parent, usually HUMAN, and another parent of otherworldly blood. This could either be an older generation halfblood or an otherworlder. The halfblood child of an otherworlder and mortal is typically referred to as a 1st generation halfblood, and their child with a mortal is a 2nd generation, and so on. It is very rare for a 1st generation halfblood to be born to their otherworldly sire, and through an unexplained quirk of otherworlder physiognomy, their halfblood child will be gestated by their mortal partner, be they male or female.

Halfbloods typically inherit both physical and esoteric traits their otherworldly ancestor, though these become less pronounced with each passing generation. Typically, by the 7th or 8th generation the halfblood is considered to be a mortal and only has a few subtle hints to its heritage – more distant generations than this will most likely not even be aware of their heritage and would be indistinguishable from their mortal lineage, whatever it may be. Some otherworldly sires might be known for their strong bloodline, with traits inherited by descendants far beyond the 8th generation, though the opposite might also be true.

There are many recognised halfblooded houses within the KORACHANI EMPIRE, some of which are relatively powerful, though most halfbloods know little of their progeny and exist as outcasts in their own societies. Scholars speculate as to the origins of many lineages or houses of halfbloods, and many believe that those who share common traits can trace their ancestry to the same parent otherworlder; the so-called PRIMOGENITOR of their kind.

An uncommonly known but well-recorded fact is that a 1st generation halfblood (that is a halfblood directly sired by an otherworlder) can be born to a male mortal. This is a part of the alien lifecycle and gestation process of otherworlders, which is still not fully understood. Upon copulation, a womb-like organ (known as a STARWOMB) begins to grow within the stomach cavity, in which a foetus gestates. In such cases, the starwomb is expelled following the birth. The male body is not adapted for giving birth, and many such pregnancies either end in the death of the mortal parent following complications, or stillbirths, or otherwise require an incision made through the abdomen to deliver the child.

Despite this being a well-recorded (if rare) part of the otherworldly lifecycle, halfbloods are rarely born to male mortals, and the act carries a social stigma in many cultures, including matriarchal and patriarchal societies. Of note is the nation of TISARA, where mortal fathers of halfbloods are treated with respect, with the birth itself being considered a great honour. The fathers being given the best medical care possible during such pregnancies, resulting in the highest successful birth rate of male-borne halfblood pregnancies across ELYDEN. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

HALGAD: 1. Set. Settlement in the north west of KEPHUAAN, in the north of the plains of GARNARATH^(L). Its main industry is the manufacture of opioids (Pop. c. 5,300).

2. Set. Small coastal city in the west of METHUMN, in the ZERESAN FLATS, overlooking the BAY OF HEZAZ^(1,). The city was founded in c. 3560 RM around the recently exposed wreck of a sunken ship and expanded from there (Pop. c. 16,000).

HALGDAGGR: Sup. His. Set. Ancient OGHUR metropolis and conurbation, the basis of which appeared in c. 500 RM as SLAVERS and nomads settled the river ORGDA. Through the work of the Great king Acattas the region prospered, becoming a stronghold to oghur pirates and privateers, with many outlying settlements appearing close by. The city continued to grow, reaching its peak in c. 900 RM, by which time it was referred to as the conurbation of Halgdaggr, its many satellite towns having been consumed by its sprawling districts. In 941 RM oghurs returning from OPRET brought with them a prize for the city's ruler; a SIMEIAN ALCHEMIST said to be the leader of an enclave that was toppled in Opret. The ruler, a cousin of Acattas, accepted the gift and kept the alchemist as a slave, teaching it the intricacies oghur language and their own research into alchemy.

The slave was long-lived and outlived three owners, becoming a powerful figure amongst the court slaves of Halgdaggr, though its loyalty was disproved in 1008 RM when the city and dozens of square miles of surrounding territory were destroyed by a massive alchembral explosion, the cause of which was attributed to the slave. The explosion tainted the whole region, leaving the conurbation Atramentally-Afflicted, its populace either dead of sickened. Crops withered and the waters of the Orgda flowed black for generations. The region has since been shunned by oghurs and it was directly responsible for their distrust of Atramentism.

HALHUL: Set. Fortified city in the far north west of LYRIDIA. The city was opened up to trade with the north in 3989 RM, and trade is slowly growing with AHRISHEN alongside the city itself, which is expected to become one of the largest cities in Lyridia in the future (Pop. unknown).

HALICA: Set. Town in the FREE ISLES OF PELASGOS, overlooking the isles of the BROWN WATERS (Pop. c. 9,500).

HALIDOMA: Set. Major city in the south of KULIGALA, in the CARCHEMISHI PENINSULA^(1.) in the east of SAMMAEA. The city is a known for its large temple dedicated to the worship of the NEPHILIM, which is the main religion of the peninsula. Life in the city revolves around the church and caters to pilgrims from across Kuligala, and the maintenance of the many temples, shrines, monasteries and seminaries that proliferate (Pop. c. 180,000).

HALIR: (3,520 ft.) Geo. Treacherous peak around midway along the MARCHOSLIOS Mountain, between the HARÉSHKI CITY-STATES of EDICULE^(1.) and PALUS^(1.). The peak is renowned for its carved eastern face, its features weathered and corroded, though clearly depicting an elongated HUMAN face.

HALITHEA: Geo. The south east coast of TAHALL. It was once known for its shallow waters and lagoons, though the diminishing of ELYDEN'S seas have left the region landlocked, little more than an expansive salt-pan, peppered with life-defying salt lakes. In the past, the sea of Halithea saw much traffic to and from THE INNER SEA and as a result of the sea's waning in recent centuries, the place is now littered with the rusting hulks of tankers and other vessels that ran aground. Must such hulks are now little more than skeletons – their metal taken years ago by SCAVENGERS that now roam the area, trading salt with the north.

HALIRA: Com. Set. Trade centre in the north west of VENTHIR. It was little more than a small caravanserai prior to the WAR OF SUNDERING, though it was used as a staging post for Venthiri armies ahead of marching across the KOROR Mountains into SARASTRO the settlement grew after peace came to the region and it now controls the NATHI ROAD across the mountains, allowing trade to flow between the two nations (Pop. c. 38,500).

HALISSAR: Set. Fortified coastal city in the far west of TATAR, guarding the entrance into the BAY OF EDDISA^(1.) (Pop. c. 40,000).

HALL: (B. 2562 – 2646 RM) Pol. Regent of TEMUJA following death of the LEGEND MAGHORA. He oversaw the creation of the HALLAN LINES in the DUIÁRHI Mountains in the south of Temuja, which were instrumental in the struggle against the barbarians that dominated the decades of his rule. It is only because he ruled after the great Legend Maghora that he is not remembered with more respect; a shame for he was a great leader and a fitting one to walk in the shadow of so great as Maghora.

HALL OF ANCESTORS, the: Mil Str. Tower in the city of ADAIA, in SAUA. It is known for its large mausoleum, where past DIADONS are laid to rest, and the elaborate festival and rituals that take place here at the death of the current Diadon.

HALL OF CHAMPIONS: Str. Ancient temple at the peak of MT. KU'KU NAL in the south of BA'AKH, where prospects wishing to become wrestlers in the KU'KU NAL WRESTLING tradition must travel to before they can begin their training. Those who are able to reach the temple sojourn there for two days, recovering their strength and partaking in a ceremony where they are granted a leather cowl that they must take to the arena where they wish to train. Upon completion of their training, they must return to the temple to give up the cowl, after which they adopt a persona in which guise they will perform. Any wrestlers who die in the arena are buried here, and are regarded as heroes of the REFORMED EMPIRE by those who follow the sport.

HALL OF DOMINION: Str. Large baroque contemplative hall in the grand palace in TEIRA, VENTHIR. Renowned for its central hall in which stands the so-called SPHERE OF DOMINION; an ancient and beautifully ornate artefact depicting ELYDEN as a globe; the earliest-known object to do so. The item was discovered by the Venathi empire in c. 300 RM in the GO BISAMMAM desert, after which it was moved north to the hall. It is believed to date to FOURTH AGE and some have attributed its construction to the ILLIDRAEN.

The hall is heavily guarded by SICTHAINEN TECHNA and only a handful of scholars have ever been allowed inside, and then only after the permission of the STRANGLER-QUEEN, so the many relics it contains have only been seen by a handful of individuals, most of them now dead. The ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR, alongside the HIGH CONSULITE, entered the Hall in 2236 RM after an invitation by Queen Hetepheres, who accompanied them. Some believe her fascination with biomechanical ORTHOSES is an attempt to sunder her mind from the sphinx collective due to the secrets she has learnt in this hall.

HALL OF THE HENDECARCHS: also 'Palace of the Twelve'. Pol. Str. An impressive hall in the city of AMILLAERE⁽²⁾, in the c of MALAN, where the HENDECARCHS convene every five years to discuss matters of state under the guidance of the LADY AEGIS and the HIGHBORN LESSOR KOIOS.

When not in use by the Hendecarchs, the Palace is used by envoys and diplomats to petition their Kingdoms' causes under a council of 121 councillors who speak on behalf of the Hendecarchs.

HALL OF LUMINARIES: Str. Hall within the GREAT LIBRARY in DUARIAHAHN, TEMUJA, where the present LUMINARY (1.) sits.

HALL OF MARTYRS: Str. Large hall in the west of ALAM BETHYL hewn from the rocks of the BLACK MOUNTAIN where the mummified cadavers of fallen ascetics of the UNION OF THE FIERY HAND are venerated.

HALL OF PATRICIANS, the: Pol. Str. Most major IMPERIAL cities and capitals have a hall of patricians where representatives from the various PATRICIAN HOUSES based in the city and its environs gather to discuss matters of worth to them. Specific examples of such halls can be found

1. Pol. Str. Hall of Patricians in $\underline{AGLAIA}^{(2.)}$, capital of \underline{AZAZEM} . Under its government, a representative of each PATRICIAN HOUSE gathers there every 3-months to vote on matters of importance to the ruling government. It is famed for its large domed vestibule in which is contained the statue known as THE LAMENT OF ST. EARTA.

HALL OF SAINTS: Pol. Rel. Str. Politico-religious structure in the capital of CISNERIA, VELVERDA. It is famed for the granite statues of past CHILD-MONARCHS and, if they are ever recovered, their bodies, following their pilgrimage into the BLACK MOUNTAINS. The hall is a place of pilgrimage and is considered a holy site in Cisneria.

HALL OF SOULSTONES: Int. Soc. Phil. Str. Gigantic repository in the capital of BISMUTH in GNOTH. It is heavily fortified and has crypts that extend deep beneath the city and lake IAMTI. The hall is a repository of the $\underline{SOULSTONES}$ of generations of $\underline{GIGANRI}$ who lived and studied in Gnoth, amongst them well-regarded philosophers, and scholars spanning thousands of years. The hall is sacred and very few people are allowed to enter, and even then, at the behest of the ARCHIGENITORS.

HALLAN LINES, the: Mil. Str. These defensive walls, which measure just under 120-miles long, were ordered built by the LEGEND MAGHORA of TEMUJA in c 2530 RM and completed by the Regent HALL in 2610 RM as a countermeasure against the increasing barbarian attacks at the time. The walls were 4-ft. high and six wide, running along the DUIÁRHI. The Hallan Lines were used to good effect in the spring of 2790 RM, when a force of ranged troopers was able to keep a far larger barbarian force at bay until reinforcements arrived. Nowadays, the lines are largely forgotten and lie mostly in disrepair, with only scattered sections still intact.

HALLAS: Geo. Wastes in the far west of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES, crossing north into the south western border of ANUBIA. The region is covered in smooth windswept rocks that are home to the seasonal flow of the river ATEIGHA and its tributaries.

HALLOWED CITY, the: Pol. Set. Major palace in the c of CEHOPHELA. It stands now as a massive edifice - itself a city with a population of thousands within the capital city, MALADAE. It was built at the behest of the TAQUELLANE EMPEROR between 1133 - 1272 RM. Over 100,000 artisans and millions of forced rural labourers from the LOWER CITIES. The city is walled and its population serves the imperial family, either directly as servants, dignitaries, courtiers, or guards, or indirectly, producing food and selling goods needed for the Hallowed City to operate. Most who live within its grey pylon-like walls never leave the city and inherit their positions, with some families proudly tracing their lineages to its first inhabitants, over two millennia ago.

It is known today for its lack of electricity. Indeed, anyone lucky enough to step inside any one of its four gates would be forgiven for thinking they stepped back in time, for even the garb of its clerks and factotums is classical in appearance.

The palace is sparsely-built with compounds, royal residences and offices scattered between gardens and parks, most of which are exclusively used by the royal family and their visitors. Of note is the so-called MERIDIAN TEMPLE,

It is built on top of a powerful ley, and the positioning of its walls and building and many of the materials used in its construction serve to promote the Arcane Tempers. It is unknown if the Taquellane Emperor was a shaper, given his insular nature, but this indicates he at least had an interest in the magickal arts (indeed, many scholars believe was not only a shaper, but an incredibly powerful one).

HALLS OF HEARING, the: Pol. Str. Great chamber in the SAUAN capital ADAIA, where the FIVE-AND-SIXTY LANDLORDS and their representatives can meet under the guidance of the DIADON PRIME.

HALLUX: Geo. Headland to the south west of EPHATTA, overlooking the SEA OF MERCUVIA. A series of islands, known as the ELEMITES, form an extension of the headland, stretch to the south into Mercuvia.

HALNI: Rvr. Expansive bog in the south west of EASTERN THANO, and a

HALOLAN: also 'the Saltlands'. Geo. White desert in the north of VENTHIR covering almost 4,000 square-miles west of the STIGHO WALL. The place is almost entirely devoid of life, though half-buried bleached ruins of a past culture indicates that the region was not always so. Nomads are sometimes forced to enter the region, and those who are known to travel the WHITE ROAD are easily-recognised by their distinctive garb - multi-layered robes that leave no portion of their skin exposed to the harsh light of the region.

It is thought that the desert in unnatural in nature, possibly ATRAMENTAL in origin.

HALON: Cur. Main currency in CUTH and KREM. See Vol II: Currency and Coinage in Elyden.

HALONTH: Rui. Abandoned open-cast colliery in the south west of PELASGOS, abandoned in c. 3320 RM after decades on diminishing yields. It is guarded by imperial troops to dissuade opportunists from mining what coal remains.

HALLAREQ: Set. Dominant city in the region of HANNASTRA, in the c of THE SURRACH, along the banks of the river HANNA (Pop. c. 42,000).

HALYAR KHO-MENET: Fir. Edu. Str. Org. FIRMAMENTAL college located in the north east of KOMMEA, in the foothills of the HOLLOW COASTLINE. It was founded by king ABBARUD, the first king of a united Kommea.

KHAMIDIAN by birth, he ensured that the college espoused the ancient Khamidian shaping traditions, which it continues to do today, over 900years after its founding. Many of its resident SHAPERS and scholars are of Khamidian heritage, and the college not only serves as a place of Firmamental learning, but also as a repository of Khamidian and Kommean history, particularly the historical links between the two. IT is believe by some that the college contains a hidden annex that maintains ties with the MINARET OF LIGHT in MENISCEA.

HAMA: Set. City in the south east of LYRIDIA, in the far south east of the region of ESTIA. Most of the city's populace is made up of descendants of the HARÉSHKI diaspora who settled there in c. 3325 RM. It forms a part of the GREAT ROAD and is amongst the most modern and forwardthinking of Lyridian cities (Pop. c. 47,300).

HAMAAR: also 'the Stone Crag'. Rui. Mil. Str. Old early FIFTH AGE stone citadel built along the table hills of MENKA in the far east of MHAROKK, overlooking the waters of northern MHARKA(1.) Though once a powerful fort, little remains of it now save crumbled foundations and an echo of what once was.

HAMAD: Geo. One of many mountains forming part of the MENEFIR mountain-chain, dominating the c of LANTUA, where it serves as a border between it and western $\underline{ACHAA}^{(2.)}$ and the south of $\underline{AURUM}^{(2.)}$.

HAMADA: Set. 1. Small city in the c west of AMMESH, along the north eastern coast of lake RALIA. It is an agricultural centre and most of its population is scattered across many small rural communities that are each centred around a fortified citadel. The city itself was once walled but they were outgrown long ago, though parts of them survive scattered across different districts, forming walls of other buildings or as freestanding relics (Pop. c. 18,200).

2. Small fortified city in the far north east of AMMESH, between the Igusighi Trethigh Mountains (Pop. c.

HAMADID: Set. Small city in the south west of TARTAK. Its main export is carved ivory from PHYLACTER hunting (Pop. c. 20,000).

HAMADIN: (D. 3928 RM) Soc, Mil. A well-regarded AHRISHENI general who was pivotal in fending off KORACHANI attacks during the SCOURGE OF WITCHES. Many monuments, triumphal arches, and statues are now named after him, as are various streets, buildings, streets, and palaces. He is known by the nickname that was bestowed upon him by the people of Ahrishen – the BASTION OF AHRISHEN.

HAMAGIA: Set. City in the c-south east of AETHIOS, along the north western-most shore of lake NURAS. It is a place of relaxation, where the ABUNA and others of wealth retreat to in spring to enjoy heated baths (Pop. c. 28,000).

HAMAIADON: Geo. Major mountain chain in the inland portion of SERROK, in the east of SAMMAEA. It dominates the north east of the nation, slowly sloping downwards to the south west, effectively sundering the nation in half. There are two highland passes along its midspan -ETURED in the north and MURET in the south, allowing access across it in the dry months - flooding from snow-melt and storms render the passes unusable for much of the year, however.

HAMAJAYA: Set. Settlement in the c north of CHEIRA (Pop. c. 7,000).

HAMAL: Oth. Type of HALFBLOOD whose blood is a good coagulant and healing agent. Most HOUSES of this bloodline have been hunted into extinction or slavery, where they are interred within HEART ENGINES where their blood is slowly collected. The one remaining free house is based in TETRA in PARTHIS and is relatively well-known, but very influential within the body-editing industry that is prevalent there. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

HAMALL: Set. Settlement in the south of TAHALL, close to the city of BARATALL. It is a major source of food for the metropolis (Pop. c. 10,000).

HAMAN: Sea. Bay in the east of CUTH, leading to the salt plains of BRAGGAY.

HAMANA PITH: Mil. Set. Major city in the far west of IMEAL, guarding the GAP OF DIEZI – the easiest crossing across the border between it and CEHOPHELA in the west. The city itself is a marvel of military engineering, cossetted behind concentric lines of bastions, redoubts and demi lunes that stretch for hundreds of miles to the south (Pop. c. 320,000).

HAMANDA: Set. Settlement in the far north west of METHUMN, along the course of the river HELAGHILRA. Its main industry is agriculture (Pop. c. 6,000).

HAMARAN: Sct. Small city in the north west of ABACARDAT, in the east of SAMMAEA. It was once a coastal city, existing along the northern shores of the BITTER SEA, and was known for its fishing, but found itself isolated from the sea with the waning of the SEA OF LETHEA which left the Bitter Sea landlocked and highly salinated, leading to the death of most of its marine life. The emergence of FAHR'S PLAGUE in 2136 RM saw the city, like many others in the region, decimated.

The city would likely have been abandoned had it not been for the appearance there of the otherworlder $\underline{\text{JAHINN}}^{(1)}$ in c. 2140 RM, which led to a religious revolution that would in turn lead to the emergence of the Sultanate of Abacardat farther south in 2326 RM.

Today the city is a place of pilgrimage amongst those who worship the original Jahinn and the salt cultivated there is used in religious rituals across Abacardat and the Jahadat States (Pop. c. 18,000).

HAMARIKA: Rel. Soc. A sacred ritual performed by holy figures in MALAN during eclipses of the IVORY MOON, believed to strengthen the connection between the MORTAL PLANE and the OTHERWORLD. Little is known of this ritual to outsiders, though the Sarastroan traveller

HAMARTIA: Gco. Desert in the east of the UMBRA SOKHAR wastes, in SAMMAEA. The desert is characterised by grey dunes composed of ground down DUSTSTONE from the surrounding areas, and has grown in recent centuries to encompass what was once the great endorheic river-system of ERIDANA.

HAMASADANDARA: Rvr. Major river in the c of PERGOST, flowing south for close to 1,000-miles from sources in the DANTIS Mountains. Its delta is large, and empties into the BAY OF OMONIA just below the northern POLAR CIRCLE.

HAMASHSHI: Cui. Common street food in VENTHIRI cities, particularly HETEPHEROPOLIS, hamashshi typically consists of ground offal, mixed with grains (usually barley) and vegetables, tightly packed and cooked in a camel spleen. The contents of the spleen are typically served in hollowed out hardbread that soaks up the juices as the meal is eaten (usually on the move), by the end of which the bread has softened enough to be eaten.

HAMAWE: Set. Coastal city in the south west of TZALLRACH, overlooking the TORRENT OF KARROCK. It is known for its fleet of fishing trawlers that ply their trade south (Pop. c. 33,000).

HAMAZOR: Mil. Str. Major coastal fortress in far south west of IO and home to much of its naval fleet.

HAMEOUR: Set. Settlement in the west of TAAN AN. Its main industry is the mining of SERPENTINE, and it is the largest such mine in the region, with large fortified storage yards there the raw mineral is stored prior to being worked (Pop. c. 7,000).

HAMET: Geo. Small mountain-range in the c north of NÁRTHEL.

HAMITHA: Set. Settlement in the c of KORACHAN (Pop. c. 6,800).

HAMLLAN: Set. Fortified settlement in the c of MHAROKK, south of the SOLON HIGHLANDS. It is known for its salt mines and the chapel that was constructed in an abandoned part of the mines a centre of the region's military forces (Pop. c. 9,000).

HAMMA: Pol. Set. Main city of AMMESH, in the AMMASHI^(1.) peninsula, in the south west of SAMMAEA. Though many foreign ambassadors call it the capital of Ammesh, this is not entirely true for Ammesh is made up of around two dozen distinct demesnes, each governed by its own city, though Hamma is considered a neutral city where diplomats and envoys from the other demesnes convene to discuss matters of political importance to the entire region.

It is the western terminus of the NACRE ROAD and is very wealthy as a result. It has a long history and was also the capital of the ancient FIFTH AGE nation of Ammash⁽³⁾ until 1877 RM, when it was moved to TAMMANA. The city dwindled after that, forced to fend for itself though it later became a central stronghold of the AMMASHI COALITION, becoming a major political centre following the change in regime in c. 3759 RM (Pop. c. 880,000).

HAMMAB: Set. Settlement in the south east of AYAD (Pop. c. 8,200).

HAMMADA: Set. Small coastal city in the south of KEPHUAAN, overlooking the BAY OF COMMARA^(1.) (Pop. c. 12,800).

HAMMADARA: Set. Major coastal city in the south west of HABOT, overlooking the north west of the BAY OF ESSIA, just south of the mouth of the river MEDDERANDI. It is the largest city in Habot, and is known for its harbour and prosperous ports, and controls large-scale agriculture in the river delta to the north (Pop. c. 1,317,000).

HAMMAI: Geo. Volcanic ridge in the east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER forming a border between the tribes of ITTRA and DRAKAINA in the north and ASSAGOS in the south, to the west of the HALLASI wastes in the north west of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES. The ridge is prone to earthquakes and is some 200-miles long. It is home to many ROCS.

HAMMAR: Sec. Coastal settlement in the south west of AMMESH (Pop. c. 10,000).

HAMMARI: Set. Coastal settlement in the west of AMMESH. Its people are known for their fishing (Pop. c. 8,000).

HAMMAT: Set. Coastal settlement on the island of CYNAKRIA, in the south east of AMMESH (Pop. c. 6,500).

HAMMER DEEPS, the: Sup. Geo. Deepest expanse of SÛR GHATHI vaults, thought to be ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED. It's depths are flooded and believed haunted. Those disgraced in Sûr Ghath are sent there in exile to repent for their transgressions.

HAMMER OF HERESIES, the: Rel. Obj. Ornate SHADOWSTEEL hammer crafted by VARRAN smiths in 2132 RM. The hammer has existed as a potent relic since then, carried by leaders of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE. during the various CRUSADES and scourges of the east.

The Hammer was in possession of the Almagesti arm of the Church during the War of the Artifexes in 3014 RM and remains in its possession to this day. When not in use the hammer is held in an ornate repository in the Cathedral of Hatala in the far south of Almagest, where it is visited by those undertaking The Shadow March.

HAMMINA: Ser. 1. Settlement in the south west of AMMESH, in the foothills of the BORRAGHI Mountains. Its main industry is the mining of quarry, and it controls vast tracts of land that have been dedicated to its extraction on an industrial scale (Pop. c. 8,600).

2. Mil. Str. Coastal fortress on the island of IANLET in the south of KEPHUAAN. Its fleet guards the waters of the western LEPHET.

HAMMINGHEN: 1. Geo. Peninsula in the south east of LLACHATUL, forming the southern-most expanse of the nation of CUTH. It stretches for around 600-miles into the waters of the SEA OF BALIMAN.

2. Geo. Long narrow mountain-range running from north – south in the south of $\underline{\text{CUTH}}$, dominating the peninsula of the same name^(1.).

HAMMNAL: Set. Major city in the c east of IZABAL⁽¹⁾. It is known for its gladiatorial games, and the industry is a major one in the city, with successful fighters becoming incredibly famous and wealthy across Izabal and beyond (Pop. c. 122,000).

HAMMOLEKETH, THE HIGH: (B. c. -1000 RM) His. Rel. Oth. Priestess of SHIBBOLETH: a HALFBLOODED high-priestess and founder of the TEMPLE OF SHIBB in present-day VENTHIR; a cult dedicated to the DEMIURGE SHIBBOLETH. Born c. -1000 RM she was a simple acolyte in NATH (the civilisation that predated the VENATHI EMPIRE that would later give rise to Venthir) who served a deity or power whose identity is now lost.

In the dying days of the Nathi city state, c. -200 RM, she opposed the religion she once served, forsaking the deity and leaving the state under exile. She returned 200 years later, around the time of the birth of the KORACHANIEMPIRE, and erected a small temple dedicated to Shibboleth, after which the strait dividing Venthir from TZALLRACH was later named. Gaining many followers from the hopeless tribes that managed to survive after the fall of Nath, she continued adding to the temple even as the Shibboleth cursed through her.

She remains in the temple, her body unageing, guarding its altar a single guardian to a gigantic edifice.

HAMMON: 1. Sea. Narrow bay, 80-miles long in the south west of CUTH, leading from the SEA OF BALIMAN to the city of Hammon⁽²⁾.

2. Set. Heavily fortified city in the west of CUTH, overlooking the SEA OF BALIMAN. It is one of few Cuthi cities to trade with the west, particularly with VENTHIR, TZALLRACH and KHAMID. It is known for its large city walls which have large pylon-like towers overlooking both land and sea, as well as its dockside markets, where goods from the west are sold.

The city now known as Hammon exists about 35-miles south of the original city, which is now lost to the jungles of Cuth. It is a major harbour, trading goods from the west, which are sent overland to DIMYA to be traded east (Pop. c. 50,000).

HAMMUIANDI: Rvr. River in the south west of the SAMMAEA, flowing south west for around 615-miles from sources in the far west of the SASTAKAUR Massif, before meeting its parent, the river HELAGHILRA.

HAMMURAD: Rui. Expansive ruins to the south of the KOGILIR plateau in the south west of GREST^(1.). It is believed by many scholars to be one of the first major VALTHAS cities in ELYDEN. It was once a sprawling metropolis, though little of that ancient place now remains above the level of ruins, though a part of the central city remains inhabited by what are possibly remnants of unions between ancient valthas and HUMANS; a twisted and wretched breed.

HAMMURASTA: Set. Small city in the east of SARASTRO, along the course of the river SEMARAH (Pop. c. 19,000).

HAMNEITH: Int. Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED lands in the north of BA'AKH. The region was once a major producer of UMBRA, centred around the old MANUFACTORY city of AHLAKSISH, though its industries were abandoned in c. 2550 RM after the spread of corruption could not be controlled. What siphon engines existed there are now dormant, the flesh-like growths of the land slowly spreading over them.

The region is categorised as $\underline{\text{HIGHLY DANGEROUS}}$ by the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI}}$ $\underline{\text{INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES}}$.

HAMOR ABBI: Mil. Str. Ziggurat-fortress in the far north western face of the HAAGEN Mountain in the south of SARASTRO. The fortress has stood on the west of the MOLACHARI DESERT since c. 1000 RM and remains in use to this day, where it overlooks the nation of ARKOS⁽¹⁾.

HAMORUH: Set. Small city in the c south west of ELAT (Pop. c. 18,000).

HAMSHEN: Geo. Large plains in the north west of VENTHIR, between the KOROR Mountains and the BAY OF KALAUN. It was once a fertile region, though the slow desertification of ELYDEN has seen it dwindle over the centuries, and some newly-emergent ATRAMENTAL CORRUPTION has been documented in its centre, known as the NANAEL.

The region is categorised as a LEAST CONCERN by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES, but Atramentists are keeping a close eye on it for development.

HAMUDI: Set. Settlement in the south east of the JAHADAT STATES, under the control of the city of ZUHAL. It is known for an ancient religious site that (stands ruined on a hill outside the settlement (Pop. c. 6,000).

HAMULAR: Set. Major city in the north of THE SURRACH. It is known for its proud monarchy and for its ROYAL FUNGUS that is endemic to the region (Pop. c. 90,000).

HAMVAH: 1. Set Coastal settlement in the south west of the AMMASHI FREE-ISLES, on the island of TARIAN. Its main industry is the cultivation of cotton (Pop. c. 6,500).

2. Set. Settlement in the north east of $\underline{\mathsf{HABOT}}$, in the $\underline{\mathsf{VAIAMMESHI}}$ valley. It controls a mountain pass south east across the $\underline{\mathsf{MOROSIGHI}}$ Mountains (Pop. c. 6,000).

HAN: Ser. Coastal settlement in the south east of AQUARIIA, facing south across the estuary of the river ALLAMAR. It is known for its reed gatherers (Pop. c. 5,000).

HANAKHA: Set. Settlement in the north west of LAASKHA, appearing in c. 3600 RM in the wake of the loss of the BAY OF IMMERUTH. In appeared in response to THE SHADOW MARCH moving west and is dominated by caravanserais, hostels and shrines (Pop. c. 4,000).

HANALI: Rvr. River in the west of KORACHAN and tributary of the river SUARA. It flows for 110-miles from the western foothills of the RUTHUNODA.

HANANA: Set. Settlement in the west of KARAKHAS known for its cattle, which is bred for food and their hides, which are sent to KERMES, 20-miles north west (Pop. c. 5,000).

HANAP: Set. Fortified settlement along the IVORY ROAD in the region of LLARON in the c west of THE SURRACH (Pop. c. 6,800).

HANAR: Set. City in the north of TATAR, in the c north west of SAMMAEA, overlooking the AGAIRAN SEA. It was once a major harbour, but is now landlocked, its once thriving docks abandoned and overtaken by a sprawling shantytown. It is a major industrial centre today (Pop. c. 43,000).

HANAS: Set. Coastal settlement in the south of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES. 7Its main industry is fishing (Pop. c. 6,000).

HANAT: Set. Settlement in the south of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of ALAMUT, near the mouth of the river SARA, where it harvests clams and other seafood (Pop. c. 9,000).

HAND OF NERGAAL: Rel. Obj. Religious artifact uncovered in the caverns of TILLAYAN in the c of KARKAUTH (present day CUTH) in 2236 RM. It became the object of veneration to the Karkauthi people, and the CULT OF NERGAAL was resurrected there without them fully knowing its history.

HANDMAIDENS OF THE SKY-LORD: Rel. Org. Religious order in AHRISHEN, made up of virgins who devote their lives to the SKY-LORD. They dress in blue and wear thin blue veils that cover their faces, on top of which are halo-like crowns. They tend to the shrines of the Sky-lord and offer him prayers on behalf of his other worshippers.

HANNAH: Dem. 'Hannahan'. Nm. Nation in the south east of SAMMAEA, north of the SEA OF ETAGIRIA. It is of a warm temperate climate, with wet winters in the south and dry hot summers in the north.

Between 3932-3941~RM it was the target of massed SERAPI incursions from the south east of Hoggotha Isz against its north western territories, which were successful in annexing a large portion of its land, including the vast network of military fortifications now known as IOBHOLPHOSS. Since then, the people of Hannah have had to maintain a stoic vigil of their north western borders, defending them from the constant threat of serapi incursion.

Its people worship a pantheon of spirits that are thought to be a corruption of the deities of the FOURTH AGE YASHMINI empire.

The nation is also prone to ATRAMENTAL TAINT – both of its land, as well as its people – and AEPATHY and other congenital defects are relatively common here. So common are they that a cult of mutation worship has arisen, where those so-blessed are seen as holy. Its holy men are known to submerge babies in UMBRA to encourage mutation. Most grow into weak wretches but some gain the desired traits, becoming living saints, which brings great honour and prestige to their families. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

HANNO: Set. Settlement in the north of ELEKHID. It is known to be a religious city, where SHURANISM plays a vital role in day-to-day life (Pop. unknown). HANDS OF THE DAMNED: Soc. Rel. In KORACHAN, the souls of those who upon death are not recognised by the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE to be worthy of acceptance by the UNDYING MACHINE are said to remain in limbo. Prints of their left hands are made on long parchments, and their sins listed, to help the soul find its way. Many cities in the empire have repositories beside them where thousands of such parchments are left hanging above professional prayers, usually widowed women clad in black, who spend their days praying for the eventual safe passage of the prayers.

HANEHOTH: Set. Major city in the west of ISESETH. It was once the seat of power of an ancient empire, and the heart of the city is filled with ruins and ancient structures, including its great cliffside amphitheatre (Pop. c. 770 500)

HANIGAR: Geo. Plains in the c of VIRAHAN.

HANNA: Rvr. River in THE SURRACH flowing south for 700-miles from sources in the NGHALLEAL Mountains, before emptying into lake IGRAAL^(1.).

HANNAI: Sea. Narrow bay in the north of the SEA OF GEAUA that serves as a border between the south of SATARIEL and the north of ABATTUR.

HANNAIFAR: Also 'the Twin City'. Set. City in SATARIEL situated on two sides of the BAY OF HANNAI. The southern part of the city is the only Satarian territory to be situated on the LLACHATULI continent, as the city's culture has adapted much of TISARAN and ABATTURI culture. As a result, the city is wildly different on different sides of the bay, resulting in its nickname. It was once coastal though is now some miles from the coast (Pop. c. 100,000).

HANNAN: Rvr. Wetlands in the north of J'THANA, and the c of BARATHEA^(1.) along the western-coast of lake C'DATA.

HANNASTRA: For. Sparse forest in the c east of THE SURRACH, to the south east of the SURRACHI PLAINS. Its dominant city is HALLAREQ.

HANOTRA: Set. City in the west of PORPHYR, to the north of the capital in BETTYL, where the cliffs of ASKARNA meet the plains of the METET BANAN (Pop. c. 42,000).

HANUH: Geo. Canyon-system in the south of VENTHIR, west of the GHERA formation, of which the canyon is a geographical extension, known to easily flood following the first autumn rains.

HAOH SAYON: Set. Expansive metropolis in the far south east of LLACHATUL in the south east of IACIO. It was, at its peak in c. 430 RM, a city of over 1-million bodies, serving as a hub of trade, where goods from west and east arrived before being traded away. Its harbour was monolithic and its warehouses were unrivalled.

In 247 RM, after laws were passed giving the KARKAUTHI kings divine right to rule over the lands of ARRETOY, the kingdom descended into a civil war that only ended in 453 RM, with the secession of the greater part of Arretoy from Karkauth. Karkauth retaliated, sending its armies into Arretoy, but the conflict would drag on into a war of attrition, in which Haoh Sayon would itself become a powerful independent city-state in 273 RM that was able to largely avoid the conflict.

The eventual lowering of sea-levels led to its eventual downfall, and what was once a great metropolis and hub of trade and cultures dwindled greatly. Sea trade likewise diminished in this time as harbours and ports around ELYDEN found themselves landlocked. It would be many centuries before new ports were built and sea trade reappeared on a large scale, by which time Haoh Sayon was miles from the water, a shadow of its former self.

Its drydocks were converted to markets and caravanserais as its mercantile tradition lingered on, and to this day, the ancient drydocks are still used for the buying and selling of goods from west and east. The currency of the entire east of Llachatul originated here and is known as the HAON (Pop. c. 28,000).

HAOJAQ: Set. Fortified settlement in the north west of the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT, west of the IQEKHABRA Mountains. It is accessible across the Mountains through a seasonal pass. When the pass is closed in winter months, contact with the rest of the nation. Remains possible but travel time is greatly increased. The settlement is known for its caravanserais and hostels that house merchants and other travellers in winter (Pop. c. 5,000).

HAOL: Geo. Highland region in the north of MHAROKK, sloping gently down towards the coast to its east.

HAON: Cur. Major coinage that is prevalent in EASTERN LLACHATUL, spanning most nations between the ARGENT Mountains and the ROTTING MOUNTAINS, including RHEA, SURUTUR, IACIO, THETIS, and LIMOTH^(1.). It originated millennia past in the once-major harbour of HAOH SAYON, and spread from there through the movements of its merchants. See Vol II: Currency and Coinage in Elyden.

HAOS: Geo. Dre. Large cave-system in the c east of LYRIDIA DHAI, beneath the PLALEPH Mountains. It is a large and intricate system with many narrow passages and large stalactite-filled chambers and flowing river from the TULIAI above.

Parts of the cavern are noted by SHAPERS and ONEIROMANCERS to act as amplifiers to DREAMS and the DEMIURGES memories and were exploited by the KORACHANI EMPIRE during its occupancy of the region, though they are now abandoned, shunned by most save for inquisitive oneiromancers.

HAPAMALA: Soc. Burial practice in VALA, where the dead are buried in clear resin that serves as a preservative, allowing the body to remain visible and uncorrupted for millennia after death. The practice serves as a division between social classes, with the poor unable to afford such burials, and the rich creating lavish shrines at the centre of which are the goldenframed blocks of AMBER within which lie the bodies of their ancestors.

HAPANTHA: Set. Semi-permanent settlement in the c east of THE SURRACH, situated along the course of the seasonal river TADESSA. It is ruled by the so-called GYPSY KINGS, who spend most of the year travelling with their court and followers across the east of the Surrach, from the SURRACHI PLAINS in the north west to the INOTAHL BASIN in the south east.

The settlement is near-abandoned during the dry months, with only the elderly and certain industries remaining there until the wet season, which brings with it water and an influx of nomads and merchants from hundreds of miles around.

Hapantha is most well-known for its arena sports, which attracts competitors and spectators from across the Surrach (Pop. c. various - 180,000 at the height of events).

HAPAX: Set. Independent city in the east of THE SURRACH. It is known for its CYNOSIATY, which originated there in c. 3580 RM. Despite the arid location of the city, it is well-watered by deep aquifers that are exploited by wells across its major crossroads. The entire region is noted for its hard sandstone (Pop. c. 26,400).

HAPHAEL: Rvr. River in the north west of GNOTH, flowing south for 45-miles from sources in the VAGNOSTAN Mountains, before meeting its parent, the river MARAGA, at the city of BASILIDIA.

HAPHSHETH: Soc. Prison in the city of NEKIR, in the west of KHULL. The prison also serves as the headquarters of the KHULLAN INQUISITION, which was ejected from EMEK TA' in 3012 RM after a vote the previous year by the ETERNAL ASSEMBLY to strip the Inquisition of some of its power.

The prison was greatly expanded into a mighty fortress over the next centuries, and now looms over the city below. Its status as prison is diminished today, but it continues to be used as a dungeon where enemies of the Inquisition are tortured and held.

HAPOT: Set. Settlement in the west of GNOTH, in the region of ALKAHEST. It is known for its iron mines (Pop. c. 3,500).

HAQ VAND: Set. City in the c north west of CHEIRA (Pop. unknown).

HAQABAR: Set. Settlement in the c-south east of CHEIRA (Pop. c. 5,750).

HAR: Set. Expansive walled city in the south east of the HENDECARCHY of MYEIN, in MALAN, situated along the course of the river LAUL EGLEA. It is the biggest city in Myein and forms part of a trade route along the well navigated river, and its barges and longboats are a common sight as far south as EGOTHAN (Pop. c. 500,000).

HAR BAQRI: Geo. southern-most of the four major islands forming the archipelago of SEPAHAUNAT.

HAR BROQA: 1. Geo. Island 6-miles north of the mainland of the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT, and controlled by same nation.

- 2. Set. Coastal settlement on the above island. Its main industry is the production of unguents and perfumes used by those who tend to the idolons of the church of SYBARR (Pop. c. 5,000).
- HAR DISAQ: Geo. Small island in the north of SEPAHAUNAT, off the eastern coast of HAR QALAM. The island is noted for its native coastal tern population
- HAR DOHAQ: Geo. Island off the north west of the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT.
- HAR ERABH: Set. Settlement in the south west of the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT in the north west of SAMMAEA. It was an island but as sea levels decreased it became landlocked and part of the mainland (Pop. c. 10,000).
- HAR FARRASH: Geo. One of four major island forming the archipelago of SEPAHAUNAT.
- HAR GHAQAR: Rel. Str. Sybarri temple on the island of HAR FARRASH, to the northern mainland of the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT in the north west of SAMMAEA. It was once an island itself, though found itself part of the larger island in c. 2500 RM following the lowering of sea levels in the area. The temple is inhabited by ascetics of the religion, who spend most of their days in a drug-induced stupor to help them seek enlightenment.
- HAR JAKALL: Geo. northern-most of four major islands forming the archipelago of SEPAHAUNAT.
- HAR QALAM: Geo. One of the four major island forming the archipelago of SEPAHAUNAT.
- HAR SITTAR: Rel. Str. Monastery of the NIGHT SISTERS in the north west of the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT. Once an island Off the north western coast of Sepahaunat, it is now part of the mainland due to the lowering of sea levels in the past millennium. Originally chosen for its seclusion, the monastery remains isolated and remains under the aegis of the Night Sisters to this day.
- HAR-RSI: see PROPHET OF THE EMPYREAN.
- HARA: 1. Dem. 'Haran'. His. Eth. Ancient ethnic group that emerged in the early FIFTH AGE in CENTRAL LLACHATUL. Today, the haran people make up a large part of the populations of the HARÉSHK and the north east of TAMAR.
 - 2. His. Set. Ancient early FIFTH AGE city-state that dominated the area occupied by present-day north eastern TAMAR, the far south of the LEVANTINE, and the north west of what is today CITY-KINGDOMS OF THE HARÉSHK. It emerged from the union of the disparate barbarian states of HÁRR, the ERKI and the VARL in c. -1050 RM to the west of the SEA OF DERAEA. Between 438 and 807 RM it was ruled by the TRIARCHY.

The idyllic climate and favourable harbours of the Deraea allowed Hara to prosper, eventually uniting with $\underline{\text{GOETHA}}$ in 807 RM, giving rise to the nation of $\underline{\text{HAR\'e}\,\text{SHKA}}$.

- 3. His. Set. Ancient city and capital of the realm of Hara⁽²⁾, precursor to the extant HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOMS. A period of civil war in c. -875 RM saw the place looted by AAMAGHI armies which moved the capital farther south. The region's expansion east to more resource-rich lands saw the city of Hara further diminish until in c. -710 RM it was left as little more than a ghost-town. Around a hundred years later a new settlement appeared around 350-miles south-east, adopting the name. It would later become the city of HARAK⁽²⁾.
- HARA KOHIR: Set. City in the north west of AYAD (Pop. c. 28,000).
- HARAB: 1. Mil. Str. Fortress in the north west of ATARAXIA guarding the pass north into AQUARIIA.
 - 2. Geo. Mountain pass between the TOLIASOR and BLACK MOUNTAINS, along the border between AQUARIIA and ATARAXIA.
- HARACIA: Dem. 'Haracian'. His. Eth. Ancient people that populated the region now known as VAALK during the early FOURTH AGE, predating the SAMMON culture that would later emerge there. They left few ruins behind, but the most notable of their relics was thought to be the large citadel known as the MOLOSSUS, in present-day c Vaalk.

Little is known of the Haracian people, but it is believed that they died out in a great genocide that occurred towards the end of the Fourth Age, prior to the WAR OF SCOURGING.

- HARADH: Set. Coastal city in the KORACHANI colony of MADOUR. The city's harbours are busy with the SLAVE trade, with slaves brought there from AHRISHEN and other lands outside of the empire's borders (Pop. c. 20,000).
- HARAEL: Geo. Mountain in the south of WESTERN MENISCEA, forming an extension of the larger MENEFIR Mountain-chain. It acts as a border between the north east of AURUM⁽²⁾, and the north west of IMELKOT.
- HARAG: Rui. Ruin in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of NICADA.
- HARAHADDI: Sct. Settlement in the north west of IACIO. Its main industry is ALUMINIUM mining (Pop. c. 5,000).
- HARAHI RIDGE: Geo. Karst ridge forming an extension of the southern-face of the BLACK MOUNTAINS. in the north of ATARAXIA. The southern part of the ridge is forested and regarded as a place of great beauty.
- HARAK: 1. Sea. Bay in the east of the SEA OF DERAEA, in the HARÉSHK. It is named after the nearby settlement of Harak.
- 2. Set. Large walled caravanserai in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of NICADA⁽¹⁾, serving as a local trade hub. The settlement is constructed on the apex of a treacherous overhang facing the SEA OF DERAEA. (Pop. c. 6,000).
- HARAKH: Soc. Pol. Bus. PATRICIAN HOUSE and one half of the HARAKH & ARDEN POWDERGUN manufacturers based in PELASGOS. See Vol II:

 Patrician Houses.
- HARAKH & ARDEN: Ind. Mil. Major powdergun manufacturer, based in PELASGOS. Based around an alliance between PATRICIAN HOUSES HARAKH and ARDEN, both of which are based in Pelasgos. Their rifles are used throughout imperial armies and are amongst the most popular rifles around THE INNER SEA.
- HARAKAI: also 'the Red City'. Com. Set. Major mercantile city in the c south east of LAOD. It is a major stop along the BROKERS' ROAD trade route, and serves as a crossroads of cultures from across MENISCEA(Pop. c. 710,000).
- HARAM: Set. Settlement in the c south west of THETIS, along the course of the river TSAMETITH (Pop. c. 5,800).
- HARAMET: Set. Coastal city in the south east of THETIS overlooking the SEA OF HALDUA. Its main industry is shipbuilding and repairs (Pop. c. 43,000).
- HARAMIS: Set. Small scholar-city in the north east of THE SURRACH, noted for its order of historians, who are eponymously-named (Pop. c. 18,000).
- HARAMIS, ORDER OF: Org. Order of classically-trained historians from the city of HARAMIS, in the east of THE SURRACH. They are famous around the region, and beyond and their library is amongst one of the best-stocked of northern SAMMAEA.
- HARAPPA: 1. Geo. Mountain-range, around 500-miles long, forming the north eastern peninsula of MHAROKK, flanked to the south by the BAY OF MHARKA^(1.) and the north by THE INNER SEA. The northern face of the mountains is known locally and amongst various scholarly circles around the KORACHANI EMPIRE for the cave-systems and the undecipherable scripts carved onto their inner-most walls. They are believed to date back to the early days of mortal life within ELYDEN, though little else is known about them. The scripts are known as the HARAPPAN MARKS.
- 2. Geo. Peninsula in the north of Sammaea, protruding north into the Inner Sea, on which the Mountain of Harappa⁽¹⁾ is found.
- 3. also 'Demesne of Harappa'. Ntn. Comprising the north west of the Harappan peninsula⁽²⁾, the Demesne of Harappa is dominated by the Harappan Mountain chain to the south and dry grasslands to the north. It is a relatively new nation that separated from MHAROKK in 3754 RM after years of ongoing strife in the region centred around the city of NUTHACHAN, after which it became a vassal of the REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO. A large portion was appropriated by Hoamm in 3822 RM, centred around the city of SKEIN. Nuthachan itself later defected from Harappa to become a foreign territory of the KORACHANI EMPIRE in 3916 RM. A large portion of Harappa would be lost to HOAMM in 3822 RM, centred around the city of SKEIN.

The demesne has little in the form of natural resources, though it is valued for its production of coffee, which is consumed in countless cafes across the $\underline{SAMMAEAN}$ coast of the $\underline{INNER\,SEA}$. The capital of \underline{TOTH} is a major port that is busy with merchant ships that travel across the Inner Sea and beyond.

Being so close to Korachan (and with the exclaves of Nuthachan and Skein touching its northern borders), Harappa is hotbed of political tension between the HIGH- and LOW-EMPIRES, and the region has been unstable for some times, with shadow-wars between gangs loyal to various factions a commonly-known secret in its larger cities, such as HARASS and Toth. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

HARAPPAN MARKS, the: His. Undecipherable scripts carved onto the inner-most walls of caverns deep in the HARAPPAN^{1.)} Mountains. They are believed to date back to the early days of mortal life within ELYDEN, though little else is known about them.

HARASH: Geo. Cliff-sided escarpment in the c of THE SURRACH, forming the eastern part of the GHUZZ Mountains.

HARASS: Set. Settlement in the north of the HARAPPA⁽³⁾. It is known for its vast tea fields and manufactories and the unseen gang warfare between HOAMMI and Harappan factions. It also forms part of the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 166,500).

HARAST: Lak. Lake in the c north of GNOTH, along the course of the river NEPHOT.

HARAT CHLO: Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED area in the c-south east of THE SURRACH. It appeared over the course of just a few years in between 3681 – 3684 RM, devastating many settlements in the region that operated a major SOULSTONE-mining operation. The largest of those cities, ZAAZUASH, remains to this day, though it is an eerie place, shrouded in fog, the earth waterlogged, its people covering themselves in heavy tarps and gas masks to survive.

The region is categorised as a $\underline{\text{LEAST CONCERN}}$ by the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI}}$ $\underline{\text{INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES}}$.

HARATAMAH: Set. Settlement in the north west of the JAHADAT STATES, under the control of the city of MARABAIJA (Pop. c. 6,000).

HARATHA: Geo. Smooth valley dominating the north of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of NICADA, HARBIDA: Geo. Mountain-range in the far south east of LYRIDIA, forming the southern-most part of the CARTIGA Mountains, extending south into the north east of TAMAR. The hills to the west of the mountain were rich in granite though the KORACHANI EMPIRE mined the resource to depletion, leaving behind many mines and quarries in its wake.

2. Geo. Geo. Island off the north western coast of DANU, to the north of the SEA OF IDALIA. It was 'discovered' and named by the explorer BOHMIUS. The island is believed to have been named after the Lyridian Mountain of the same name^(1.).

HARBINGERS, the: Org. A sect of priests within the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE who act as heralds to mass. Traditionally, they stand on pulpits on the roofs of the great imperial edifices, calling to the faithful.

HARDSUIT: Tec. The epitome of personal body armour, encompassing the height of TECHNARCANE artifice and metallurgy - the hardsuit not only protects its wearer, but also augments them; enhancing their strength and endurance. Worn as a sophisticated bulky suit of full-plate, the hardsuit is a made up of many layers, the first of which is a simple linen suit over which is a heavier padded layer that serves as soft armour and a form of protection against the weight of the armour that lays on top. Around the padding is worn a complex baldrick of thick treated leather and metal bands, which serve as a skeleton atop which the true armour is later placed. The bulk of the technarcane machinery that powers the suit is usually worn at this stage, above the baldrick - UMBILICALS from the technarcane engine are connected to OCCLUSIONS in the wearer's skin, from where they can pump treated UMBRA to strengthen the wearer, effectively merging armour and wearer as one. A sophisticated pneumatic system serves as muscles and tendons atop the baldrick skeleton, and finally thick SHADOWSTEEL attached, one plate at a time, by slaves and serfs.

As can be imagined, hardsuits are incredibly expensive, their manufacture a complex feat that brings together components and machines that are produced in disparate manufactories in civilised lands across the $\underline{\text{INNER SEA}}$.

Originating in their crudest form c.1500 RM around the time when POWDERGUNS became developed that could negate the heaviest armour of the time, hardsuits continued to evolve alongside the development of modern weaponry, with armourers trying hard to craft armour that stayed a step ahead of weaponry, with the earliest versions of the modern iteration appearing in c. 3000 RM, and they featured heavily in fighting in major conflicts such as the ARTIFEX WAR and particularly the SUNDERING OF THE KORACHANI EMPIRE, the latter of which was to be the last major conflict in which hardsuits played a central role.

Only a handful of nations and powers had powderguns that were capable of negating hardsuits (most of them around the Inner Sea), so their production remained viable for many centuries and they played a vital role in colonial expansion. Even today, where cannons and artillery are capable of decimating entire units of hardsuit-clad troops, or where SHAPERS can crumple their machinery with but a thought, they continue to be used in particular theatres of war, such as sieges, close quarter fighting and city-fights.

Lighter versions of hardsuits, known as halfsuits, are also common, with lighter armour that covers a lesser percentage of the body, which is also useful in specific scenarios.

HARÉ SHKA: His. Ntn. Now-extinct nation in the c-south east of LLACHATUL that gave rise to the present-day nation of the HARÉSHK in 2893 RM See Vol III: Extinct States.

HAREKH: His. Pol. First king and ruler of HARÉ SHKA.

HAREM CONSPIRACY, the: Pol. His. Event that took place in 3288 RM in SHAZGIN, where the harem of the ZARALL SULTANATE revolted following months of planning, destroying the royal court from the inside and killing various members of the sultanate, including SULTAN ZARALL III and his viziers. The harem attempted to instate its own government but was ousted mere weeks after the coup, with most members being either killed in the fighting or later executed. The closest living heir of Zarall III, HAFFALIN, was instated in his place following the quelling of the conspiracy.

HARÉSHK, CITY KINGDOMS OF THE: Dem. 'Haréshki. Ntn. Nation in the south of CENTRAL LLACHATUL, situated between the nations of TAMAR, LYRIDIA, AHRISHEN and SAUA, overlooking the SEA OF URAN. It is of idyllic climate and is characterised by a rocky landscape, particularly in the CARIAN peninsula^(2.), and verdant valleys and plains that have been taken over by well-managed farmlands, with many small woodlands between them.

Founded in 2893 RM after the conquest of the warlord KHAD over SA'WEHI invaders, the Haréshki City-kingdoms are a remnant of an ancient feudal system that features heavily in works of chivalrous fiction from across LLACHATUL, a fact which is likely to blame for the skewed perception of the region. Where most picture knights, damsels, balaurs and other mythical beasts, the truth is now far less romantic.

What were once feudal fiefs are now regions controlled by workhouses, with their owning magnates owing fealty to the HIGH-KING. The romanticism of the past has been forsaken for the wonders of industrialisation offered by the west, though a strong heraldic tradition remains, identifying the various merchant houses, manufactories, workhouses and magnate households of the region.

The region is divided into eight kingdoms, each of which is ruled by a monarch. Collectively, the eight City-kingdoms are ruled by the Highmonarch. This is traditionally the King of Caria⁽⁴⁾, who is currently the High-king CAERAN IV. Each of the kingdoms is made up of various duchies, each of which is ruled by a Duke or Duchess; which are in turn divided into counties, each of which is ruled by a Lord. Most counties are further divided into estates, which are overseen by knights, patricians, and magnates. Curiously, there exists a second court, known as the SHADOW MONARCHY, that operate in parallel to the High-monarchs' court, which is headed by the next in line to be High-monarch. This allows for alternative opinions on the governing of the realm.

The silting of the STRAIT OF NÁRTHEL over the past centuries has all but stopped trade flowing from the west, keeping lands to its east technologically stunted. Parts of the Haréshk have forged a desperate alliance with KORACHAN, which has fractured the nation as others oppose this 'deal with the devil', believing that it will lead to the ruination of their idyllic land, which has thus far been fortunate in avoiding any ATRAMENTAL TAINT of note. See Vol III: the Nations of Elyden.

HÁRESHKAN: Lan. Language spoken in the HARÉSHK.

HÁRESHKI BASIN, the: Geo. Drainage basin formed by various continental divides in the continents of LLACHATUL and SAMMAEA, including parts of the LLACHATUL and the EASTERN SAMMAEAN DIVIDES. The basin comprises parts of the east of Llachatul and the north east of Sammaea, and all rivers within it drain directly into the DARK SEA. Nations and territories that are at least partially within the Haréshki Basin include: THE HARÉSHK, KHAMID, LYRIDIA, MALAN, NÁRTHEL, TAMAR, TZALLRACH, and VENTHIR, amongst others.

HARETH: Set. Settlement in the north of LOEGRESS^(L), at the fork where the river FYNDOUR meets its parent, the river DRUITHAL. It is a major agricultural centre, and is surrounded by miles of well-tended farmlands (Pop. c. 8,000).

HARHAI: also 'Temujan Death Worm'. Fau. Poi. Large worm-like creature native to the upland regions of the south east of TEMUJA, the north east of SAUA, and parts of western MALAN, including the HENDECARCHIES of CYRENIA and AONIA. Individuals can grow to about 6 – 10-ft. long, with a 9 – 12-inch-long spike on their 'forehead' that is used to lance and paralyse their prey, which are usually swallowed whole. Despite their well-documented size legends abound of gigantic examples.

The paralytic venom is harvested by AONIAN hunters in Malan, where it used to tip projectile weapons used for hunting and in warfare. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

HARHOM: Set. City in the north east of TAHOMIA, in the east of EASTERN MENISCEA. It is located close to the ruin of VIARACHAN, the original KORACHANI colony from which Tahomia emerged (Pop. c. 28,000).

HARIAR: Set. Fortified settlement in the west of the tribe of NUNEA, in the south east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 3,000).

HARIB: Set. Settlement in the c north of MHAROKK, known for its carob sweets. It forms a part of the RED ROUTE, where its traditional sweets are sold to travellers (Pop. c. 8,000).

HARIID: Rvr. River In the region of HA ATH, in the c of NOAVATUR, flowing south west for 550-miles from sources in the IQUAHAITH Mountains before reaching the BAY OF HALIIM Am in the north west of the SEA OF RTHAS. The region of Ha Ath is barren, reduced to a dust basin by centuries of clear cutting and quarrying, and the river now cuts a sheer lifeless course through the impacted dust.

HARINA: Set. Coastal city in the north eastern coast of KAZZAR^(2.), at the northern-most tip of the ENGER peninsula, guarding entrance into the BAY OF GAARAIR (Pop. c. 44,000).

HARIOGOR: Set. Settlement in the west of the tribe of ORIM, in the far west of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 2,500).

HARISS: Set. Fortified settlement in the north of KOLCHIS, in the region of NOLKOSH. Its main industry is METEORE mining (Pop. c. 6,700).

HARITH: 1. Rvr. Expansive wetlands in the north of the nation of Harith^(2.) in north east of EASTERN LLACHATUL fed by aquifers and the ADHUMLA river that flows through them from the PERIEDAS and ARGENT Mountains in the west. The region is very fertile and teeming with life, though the conditions are not suggestive to the building of settlements.

2. Dem. 'Harithan'. Ntn. Nation in the north east of EASTERN LLACHATUL, to the north east of TETHYSIA. It broke away in 3592 RM following years of religious war, which ended finally in the signing of the COVENANT OF PEACE that saw it became an independent state with its own religion. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

HARKONNA: Geo. Mountain in GNOTH, serving as a border between TAHALL and Gnoth.

HARMACHIS: Geo. Lan. Imperial name for the south east TAMARAN coastline, named after ST. HARMACHIS, patron of seafarers.

HARORIN, CAVES OF: Geo. Major geological system dominated by sinkholes, mesas, steep valleys and caverns, in the c east of ELALLIA, in the c of SOUTHERN SAMMAEA.

HAROSHETH: Set. City in the east of JURRAS⁽²⁾. After KORACHAN destroyed the city of JURRAS⁽³⁾ and took control of the region, it took over the city of SAMARIS, renaming it Harosheth, and setting it as its capital.

It remained capital until 3143 RM, when the INTERREGES were left there following its abandonment of the nation. The interreges were in turn deposed in 3167 RM, and Harosheth became capital to a free Jurras for the first time, and became the seat of power to the JURRASI SYNHOD until its later vassalage to PARTHIS.

Independence was to be relatively short-lived, as the struggling nation entered into trade agreements with Parthis in 3651 RM, becoming its vassal officially in 3703 RM amid political turmoil in Korachan that would lead to the SUNDERING OF THE KORACHANI EMPIRE 2-years later.

The capital was moved from Harosheth to KETHRA in 3704 RM, though Harosheth remains an influential and powerful city to this day (684,000).

HAROTRARA: Rvr. River in WESTERN LLACHATUL, flowing west for 240-miles from sources in the ZEHINE Mountains along the border between RAONGEN^(2.) and the south west of THE VORANDINE before moving north into the latter, where it empties into the BAY OF NURCYA.

HAROVA: Set. Fortified city in the c north of MHAROKK, 40-miles south of the border with VAALK. It is known for its manufacture of spices, including saffron, which are a major part of Mharokkin cuisine (Pop. c. 20,000).

HARP, ZIROL: Mus. Obj. Bulky string instrument with 49 strings that is almost exclusively played by SHIE, whose two pairs of arms allow them a wider range of motions needed to play the instrument effectively. It is played sideways across the lap, and the strings are plucked with the tips of the fingers. Its origins are unknown, though it remains most common today in CENTRAL LLACHATUL.

HARPA: Geo. Salty endorheic lake in the south of LYRIDIA, and remnant of the now dry STRAIT OF NÁRTHEL.

HARPY: Sup. Mys. Mor. A corrupted primitive form of AL AKHI, harpies can be likened to humanoid vultures. They have keen eyes, seeing particularly well during dusk and dawn, and hunt at those times. Though incapable of flight, their forelimbs have feathers, with razor-sharp edges they use when attacking prey. They are common in CHTHYRID and the north of KORACHAN and, increasingly, in VÂRR, though are not native to those regions – they were brought north by Korachani explorers returning from expeditions to KHARKHARADONTIS between c. 1300 – 1500 RM, and escaped, slowly spreading to those lands.

Many have adapted to subterranean lives, where they crawl in caves and catacombs, using little energy, eating decayed flesh and fungi. Most of these subterranean harpies, colloquially called crypt harpies in the Korachani empire, have lost their feathers and have developed pale, near-translucent, skin. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

HÁRR: Dem. 'Hárran'. His. Ntn. Ancient early FIFTH AGE barbarians whose settling of the region of HARA, alongside the ERKI and the VARL, would later lead to the birth of the CITY-KINGDOMS OF THE HARÉSHKI. The Hárran are thought to have come from the north east of present-day Haréshk, in what would have been ISHIDEN before the WAR OF SCOURGING. See Vol III: Extinct States.

HARRARA SUR: Mil. Str. Great fortress in the north of KORACHAN in the south east of the ADALLA Mountain, surrounded by lava fields. The fortress is a prison to ASICTHAIN, HALFBLOODS and OTHERWORLDERS, and a repository of their heresies.

HARRAS: Set. Settlement in the c north of KARAKHAS, 40-miles to the west of the capital in DEKANA. It forms a part of the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 13,000).

HARREFA: Set. Small fortified city in the south east of the BARRIER
LANDS, to the far east of the VANNAKORDOR Mountains (Pop. c. 18,200).

HARROD: Set. Settlement in the north west of the tribe of ITTRA, in the c of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 2,000).

HARROS: also 'the Bear'. Ast. Con. Constellation in the SOUTHERN HEMISPHERE. See Vol II: Constellations.

HARROW: Ast. Con. Constellation in the NORTHERN HEMISPHERE, often referred to as a bear. The name is used by most KORACHANI nations and originated in ancient PELASGOS. See Vol II: Constellations.

HARROWER: Fau. Breed of large tough ponies used by the people of AUEREN. They are adept at walking in the unstable foothills of the $\underline{\text{GROWING MOUNTAINS}},$ and are used by both military and civilians across $\underline{\text{MULCIBER}}.$

HARRUA: Set. Settlement in the south of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of CARIA^(4,). The city is known for its interesting construction: it is built almost in its entirety on the leeward side of a steep steer-topped hill to guard against the year-round winds that constantly assail it. Its streets are long and parallel to each other, following the elevation of the hill, and they are connected by various steep stepped alleys. The main temple complex of the city has a long tunnel that leads to the windward side of the hill that serves as ventilation and access (Pop. c. 6,200).

HARRUS: For. Dry sparse forest in the north east of SAMMAEA that forms a border between the north east of SUOR, and the west of NAARETH.

HARSHAKIRA: Int. Arc. Obelisk of glass in the middle of the basin of SATAR in the north of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. The obelisk is some 200-ft. tall and is made of clear glass and is known to attract lightning from nearby storms, even attracting the storms towards it. The obelisk was once worshipped by nomadic HALFBLOODS, but encroaching mortal activity drove them away and they have not been sighted by locals since c. 920 RM. Today, the obelisk is ignored by most, though remains as a dominant feature in the basin, visible for many miles around.

HARTOUMIAN: Eth. Native people of KHAMID, who repopulated the region early in the FIFTH AGE. MENISCEAN migrants mingled with them between -1000 and -750 RM, bringing with them FIRMAMENTAL traditions, to which the people of Khamid are still closely-associated, with many ill-informed people thinking that Khamid is the location of the TRUE MENISCUS.

 $\underline{HARUBADA}$: Set. Major coastal city in the south west of $\underline{EPHATTA}$, in the south west of $\underline{SAMMAEA}$ (Pop. c. 130,400).

HARUN: Set. Settlement in the south west of NÁRTHEL (Pop. c. 8,000).

HARURHOTA: Geo. Large bay in the north east of EASTERN LLACHATUL dividing the south east of KOMMEA from the north of HALEDONIA.

HARUSPEX: Noun. 'Haruspicy'. Mys. Diviners who are able to tap into the MATERIA OMNA and the OTHERWORLD using ancient forms of mysticism outside of the realms of commonly-accepted methods of SHAPING. Their methods allow them to read auguries within the entrails of sacrificed animals.

The practice is ancient, and one of the most primitive forms of divination employed by MORTALS. It was once very common around the Inner Sea, particularly in what are now KORACHAN, PELASGOS, LYRIDIA, and LYRIDIA DHAI, though has not been mostly supplanted by the more regimented use of shaping. Today, practitioners of haruspicy can be mostly found in rural areas, and slums in larger cities, though there are a large number of charlatans who take advantage of those who seek the aid of haruspices. See Vol IV: Other Forms of Mysticism.

HARVII: Mil. Str. Fortress in the far north of ELEKHID, guarding its northern-most territories from threats from MULCIBER.

HASAAZ ARAAT: Sea. Artificially-created narrow sea in SAMMAEA, south of the SEA OF ESCHATA in the ROMOREAN^(1.) rift valley.

It was the result of an ambitious civil engineering project carried out by the young Kingdom of Romorea $^{(2.)}$ in 3821 RM, where 10-mile long canal was dug south east from the Eschata, linking to it a series of endorheic basins (primarily the \underline{GOYA} , \underline{GURI} , \underline{HUGHA} , and the \underline{ITOS}) that lied below sea level. Many settlements, ruins, and ancient sites were flooded and now lie beneath the surface of the Hasaaz Araat.

Today the Hasaaz Araat has allowed many settlements to appear along the waters' edge, in areas that would have otherwise been in a depressed basin incapable of supporting life.

HASAD: Set. Settlement in the north west of PNESSA (Pop. c. 5,000).

HASALLAR: Set. City in the south of HOGGOTHA ISZ, south of the ACHARKHARAN Mountains. It is one of few stable serapi cities in Hoggotha Isz, and it is known to trade west with SIMBARA and south with AKANTHRA (Pop. c. 38,000).

HASANEN: Rvr. Picturesque waterfall in the c north west of AHRISHEN, famed for its hexagonal rock formations.

HASARAL I: (1416 – 1479 RM) Pol. His. The last king of HOUSE TANDENDER in AHRISHEN. His rule was largely uneventful and he is remembered as the king who ended decades of relations with SA'WEH.

His death in 1975 RM left the House without direct heirs and the throne passed to a distant cousin of partial HARÉ SHKAN ancestry, MUNTER OF UMATRA, marking the end of the House of Tandender.

HASARAT: Set. Settlement in the c of SUMA'YA, known for its breeding of MONITORS⁽²⁾ (Pop. c. 7,500).

HASEPHA: Set. Coastal city in the south east of GNOTH, and home to one of its largest harbours in the INNER SEA, and its main sea link to foreign nations (Pop. c. 48,000).

HASHARAN: Rel. Deity in the YAGHUKLI PANTHEON that is worshipped by various peoples in the BARRIER LANDS. Hasharan is the result of centuries of local tradition corrupting worship of the UNDYING MACHINE brought by KORACHANI missionaries and exocrines in c. 1440 RM in the wake of the discoveries made by the PELASGOSI explorer SIPARON in the region. Fanatics of Hasharan crawl on their bellies as a form of penitence, some of them spending years in this decrepit state. The tradition stems from a mistranslation from Korachani missionaries millennia ago, and it became a focal point amongst some worshippers of Hasharan. See Vol IV: Gods and Pantheons.

HASHATH: Geo. Massif in the north east of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES. It tapers to the west, and at an elevation of around 1800 – 2100-ft. its western-face is near unassailable, with sharp crevices and buttes serving as aeries and rooks to various types of birds, including ROCS.

The Hashath massif is said to be the birthplace of a bull-blooded scionic creature whose presence is claimed to be responsible for the relative barrenness of the region and features in local legend.

HASHEL: Geo. 200-mile stretch of mountains and coastal cliffs in the north east of EASTERN LLACHATUL, dominating the south of CALBIA^(1.). They are characterised by monumental structures, such as carved monoliths, that protrude from the cliffs, as though they were buried there eons past.

HASHI: Mil. Str. One of three major fortresses in the east of SAUA (the other two being the KOTIO and the NAITO), serving as a defence along the eastern border from MALAN. Built during a time of unease between the two states, the fortresses are still manned though they have not been modernised to the most recent theories of military engineering. It is the largest of the three forts and now guards a trade-route east into the HENDECARCHY of AONIA in western MALAN.

HASHIB: Set. Settlement in the c west of AHRISHEN. The city dates back to c. 2400 RM and was originally a tidal island, though the retreat of the SEA OF PYREA left it landlocked, perched on a hill, though the region around it remains wet, particularly in summer (Pop. c. 4,200).

HASHIM I, TYRANT OF GAAN: (B. unknown) Oth. Pol. HALFBLOODED PENUMBRIST and ruler of the city-state of GAAN since 3999 RM. They manipulated unrest from increased military presence in the region to rally the populace and, with their own personal troops and a great number of mercenaries, pushed the PARTHISAN administration out of the city, after which they have been fighting diligently to maintain their independence.

HASHIR: Set. Small city in the south west of AHRISHEN. It is a centre of INDRIK breeding(Pop. c. 14,200).

 $\underline{HASLA\;ERSYL}\!{:}\;\mathit{Set.}$ Small city in the c of \underline{OKKHAM} (Pop. c. 13,500).

HASOTLEPH: Sea. Sea in the south east of TETHYSIA, forming a large natural harbour around which many small coastal fishing settlements can be found.

HASSABRY: Set. Small city in the west of RHEA, to the east of the DORLEIDON Mountains. Its main industry is iron-mining (Pop. c. 12,000).

HASSAOS: Set. Small city in the west of PNESSA (Pop. c. 15,000).

HASSARAK: Sct. City in the c-south east of TARTAK, along a fork between the river KHARAD and AALARAD. It is a minor producer of UMBRA, which is used to convert to fuel for the ambulants that cross its borders when plying their trade across the SALT ROAD (Pop. c. 32,000).

HASSIMRA: Set. Fortified coastal city in the north of IO, overlooking the south of the SEA OF SÛN. The city is politically tense due to its proximity to the capital of SALOROC (Pop. c. 42,000).

HASTA: Set. City in the east of CHTHYRID (Pop. c. 41,200).

HASTANAL DAGGASH, the: Mil. Str. Major fortress constructed by the DEMIURGE RACHANAEL early during the Demiurges' tenure over the MORTAL RACES, before bitterness fully engulfed him. The fortress is a testament to the sheer power and scope of his original creations and sprawls for dozens of miles in all directions. It was once the central stronghold of his children, the PLAGI, guarding their northern-most domains. Today it is broken, mostly reclaimed by the lifeless sands of the DUNE SEA of KHARKHARADONTIS, though is still monolithic, its broken spires and cracked domes drawing awe from those few who have seen it.

After many years of use as a fortress, around which a large city had grown, Rachanael began expanding the fortress, adding expansive crypts and large towers. Within, he placed those he looked upon with favour, promoting them to positions of power and influence. Thus, slowly it became a prison to the powerful, and many plagi flocked to it to never leave. It was within its confines that the plagi became xenophobic and aversive to sunlight. Under Rachanael's aegis, the plagi of Hastanal Daggash forsook the divine claim of the other Demiurges, who they were led to believe were lesser brethren of Rachanael, unworthy of the name Demiurge.

The place became a prison to not only the plagi, but to Rachanael himself who sank deeper into his anguish and bitterness, from which he would emerge only before the onset of the events that led to <a href="https://doi.org/10.1081/j.cours.c

HÂT: Lak. Lake in the south of the HENDECARCHY of DERAEIA in the east of MALAN. It is the larger of two lakes forming a part of the river ENDULLI and is home to various small mountain settlements, the largest being KOPHIS.

HATADA: Set. Small city in the east of CUTH, built atop the ruin of an ancient early FOURTH AGE tower constructed by the people of MOTANTA (Pop. c. 16,000).

HATAKON: Set. Small city in the c of NOAVATUR, along the eastern edge of the SUZHASHAL ID plains. It was once a major depot of timber cut down in the region and had a population of c. 80,000 at its peak, though as the jungles decreased in size, so too did the city (Pop. c. 47,500).

HATARA: Set. Fortified coastal city in the far south west of Vaalk. It is a major stop along the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 41,700).

HATAYOON: Geo. Island around 200-mile off the south western coast of CUTH. Though uninhabited today, an attempt was made to colonise it by the KORACHANI EMPIRE in c. 1525 RM. The colony, called SAMUCHAN, did not last long, and its ruins remains on the island today, visible to ships as they pass by it.

HATEDYAR: For. Geo. Dense forest in the c west of GIBEAH, to the south of the river KHIORRER.

HATH: For. Sparse forest in the east of THETIS. It is a remnant of a far larger forest that once dominated most of the coastal region of EASTERN LLACHATUL many thousands of years ago, as artefacts recovered from ruins of the region can attest to. The forest dwindled before the FADING of the FOURTH AGE – a precursor of the increased desertification of the region over the past millennia.

HATHAMOTH: Geo. An ancient expansive canyon system in c of the MOLOTH KHAMMOTHUL Mountains in SAMMAEA. The canyons are largely hidden by the dust dunes created by broken down duststone formations in the area, though their presence indicates that the region was once dominated by an ancient river system that dried up eons past.

Various caves in the canyons and the surrounding area are said to lead to the so-called $\underline{\text{CHAMBER OF STARS}}$ in the $\underline{\text{PRISON CARCERI}}$.

HATHKEPA: Int. Rui. Ancient mud-brick pyramid found on the island of KHEMET, believed to be one of the earliest KHAMIDIAN pyramids. Despite its brittle materials the pyramid remains largely intact, its casing stones long since removed or fallen. The area around the pyramid is thought by some scholars to be a FIRMAMENTAL LACUNA, helping to stall the rate of decomposition. This is correlated by the presence of a calcified body in the heart of the structure; thought to be an ancient king.

HATHOR: Set. City in VIRAHAN, situated along a fork with the river SARA and VARON. It has a long history, dating back to the early years of the Kingdom of AHRISHEN, in c. 100 RM (Pop. c. 31,500).

HATHRA (the Sow): Rel. Dei. In TEMUJAN SPIRITUALISM, the TUTELARY SPIRIT of fertility, femininity, womanhood and care. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

HATHTIS: Set. Lapis lazuli mine in the south east of KHAMID, south west of the NEFERATH Mountains (Pop. c. 8,000).

HATHURAN: 1. Rvr. River in the west of THE SURRACH in north western SAMMAEA that flows for 850-miles south west from sources in the MISHANOS and THISATHON Mountains before emptying in the BAY OF BHAAD.

2. Geo. Region in the c west of THE SURRACH, surrounding the eponymous river and controlled by the city of ADA.

HATO MEDICER: 1. Int. Ast. Sup. Fau. Planet-like astronomical object discovered in 3276 RM orbiting around the sun SOR, known for its highly elliptical orbit, making it unobservable for centuries.

It is named after the eponymous^(2.) SCION, who was exiled from ELYDEN by his aunt TALANTEHUT. Some claim that the two are the same, though there is no way or verifying this.

2. Myt. His. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, a SCION of the DEMIURGE ARIMASPI who is described in the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN as:

"...a being of grotesque form. A medusa, bearing various traits and features common amongst mortal animals, such as wings, tentacles, segmented limbs and body, all of which exist out context of their true design. A nightmare, anathema to mortals and their ilk...'

It was an agent of destruction revelling only in the wanton death of mortals and the destruction of their lands and belongings. It was eventually exiled by its aunt Talantehut, condemned to forever roam the skies of ELYDEN, never able to return to the MATERIAL PLANE. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

HATOKR: Geo. Large plains dominating the west of CYHLAGHARR, covering 50,000-square-miles of land. The grasslands are relatively featureless and flat, sloping gently towards the coast of the SEA OF IMERRIL from the foothills of the NGHALLEAL Mountains. The north east of the plains end at the AGRNN SOUND and their western-most reaches are at the contested border with EREBETH. The region is home to most Cyhlagharri farmlands.

HATON: Pol. Eighth of the HENDECARCHIES of the FOREST KINGDOMS, located in the north of MALAN. Its capital is the city of BETHAR, and it is ruled by the HENDECARCH Archlector MAGNUS SÖVIREN.

The Kingdom is dry and of a cool temperate climate, though its coastal areas, bordering the GULF OF ELRI are damp, seeing lots of rain. In the west, the region of BEGAPHLIA is notable for its springs and geysers. It is also home of the HIGHBORN LESSOR KOIOS of Malan, a renowned dignitary and aide of the LADY AEGIS.

HATORIN: Ind. Set. Crystal quarry and mines in the c west of $\frac{\text{HOLOLACH}^{(1.)}}{\text{(Pop. c. 1,000)}}$.

HATRAS: Set. Settlement in the prefecture of SONTADRIS in the far south east of HOLOLACH^(1.), close to the border with the MULL CITY-STATES. The settlement is known for its clay and pottery (Pop. c. 5,200).

HATRAT: 1. Rvr. Delta of the river DASALL in the east of TAHALL.
2. Set. Settlement in the east of TAHALL, known for its shipyards (Pop. c. 9.000).

HATRATH: Set. Settlement in the c south west of LYRIDIA, specialising in the growth of grapes and wine-production for use in the rituals of the AUGURS. Consumption of wine is forbidden outside of religious festivals and the town has a sizeable wine vault, where large amounts of wine is stored for use in such feasts. The settlement originated as a TROGLODYTE stone-hewn dwelling in c. 900 RM, though was abandoned following flooding in 1700 RM. It was later repopulated, by a mixed populace in c. 2000 RM (Pop. c. 7,800).

HATRIA: Geo. Island off the southern coast of the PARTHISAN colony of NISSA^(1.), to the south of CUTH.

HATSHATHIID: Rvr. River in the south west of NOAVATUR flowing east for around 500-miles from sources in the GOJAN HIGHLANDS, before meeting the BAY OF KZANADEM, in the west of the SEA OF RTHAS.

HATTAMAGHAZH: Set. Coastal settlement in the c south west of NOAVATUR (Pop. c. 7,000).

HATTARA: Set. Coastal settlement in the south east of \underline{AYAD} (Pop. c. 6,000).

HATTEL: Lake in the c north of AZAZEM, fed by the river EPHANOSH.

HATTION: Set. Settlement in the south of IZABAL⁽¹⁾. Its main industry is the production of OLIVES and olive oil (Pop. c. 6,000).

HATOUM: His. Ntn. Late FOURTH AGE culture that existed in lands now occupied by present-day KHAMID, who would largely die out during the WAR OF SCOURGING. Their descendants would become the ERKI barbarians.

HATTRE: Set. City-state in the far east of THE SURRACH, known for its dealings with the nomads of the YOTHSHAMMANEI escarpment. The city guards the pass of SURRA west into the Surrach and is known for its trade yards (Pop. c. 60,000).

HATU: Sup. Flo. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED CENTURY PLANT forest in the north west of N'RAKH, bordering the eastern banks of the river SHIBBOLETH^(3.). The place is a tangle of grotesque century plants, believed by some to have been corrupted by the ATRAMENTA into a single entity that lies heavily on the land, its roots rotting the earth, poisoning the very air. The area is shunned by most, and the 110-mile stretch of the SHIBBOLETH that flanks the region is travelled quickly.

The region is categorised as a LEAST CONCERN by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

- HATUR: 1. Geo. Isolated island off the s coast of SURUTUR, in the s of the SEA OF KRYMEA forming part of the SPICE ISLES. It was 'discovered' and named by the VENTHIRI explorer BOHMIUS in 1524 RM and was uninhabited at the time.
- 2. Set. Small city on the above island $^{(1)}$. Its main industry is the production of cinnamon. (Pop. c. 12,500).

HATUTH: Set. Settlement in the west of ANDILUTH, north of the SHAROTHAN Ridge. It is the main source of trade with MOAH to the south west (Pop. c. 7,500).

HATYÉ: 1. His. Ntn. Historical nation in the north west of NORTHERN SAMMAEA that rose in c. 1100 RM following the conquests of the warlord MMKORO (1.). The empire spread across what is now the north east of the BARRIER LANDS. It struggled following his son's rise to power and abolishment of hundreds of deities from the YAGHUKLI PANTHEON, which he replaced with a singular pantheon of his own design. This ultimately led to his death by quartering in 1169 RM at the hands of religious extremists. With Mmkoro dead, the old pantheons were restored, and the empire soon fragmented into a series of cities and small states. See Vol III: Extinct States.

2. Rui. Ancient FIFTH AGE city in the north of the BARRIER LANDS. It was home to the warlord MMKORO^(1.) and in c. 1100 RM became the centre of his short-lived empire. After the empire collapsed in c. 1170 RM the city waned in size and influence. The later retreat of the coastline saw it dwindle further until it was abandoned in c. 3100 RM. Its ruin remains to this day, forgotten by most.

HAU: Pol. Major noble household in RAONGEN⁽²⁾, based in the city of PRAESHENG⁽²⁾. The household has been the ancestral ruler of Praesheng⁽¹⁾ for 600 years, and it is based in the Hau Citadel, which dominates the skyline of the city, and which over the centuries has incorporated various manufactories and other industrial structures.

HAU'MA: Geo. Cavern system in the far north west of the NARAHASAPHAEL Mountains in the north of LLACHATUL. The caves are expansive, and in many parts their walls are frozen into a slick sheen, making travel through them difficult, if not outright dangerous.

The caves are thought to lead to the CHAMBER OF TEARS in the PRISON CARCERI, though have not been extensively explored due to the inimical terrain.

HAUDAUG: Set. Coastal settlement in the far south east of CHEIRA, along the peninsula of XENIA. It is a major fishing centre (Pop. c. 6,000). HAULA: Mil. Str. Large mountainside fortress in the south east of KHURAUR, built into the north western side of a pass in the KELACHOT Mountain. The fortress protects pilgrims undertaking THE SHADOW MARCH along the pass, as well as protecting the area from ETHERI predation.

HAURU: For. Sparse tropical scrub forest in the south west of PORPHYR.

HAUSHA: Lan. Ancient language spoken by the LHAUS of KHALHAT, thought to date back to the early lhaus empires of the THIRD and early FOURTH AGES. It is exotic and has remained largely unchanged for millennia due to the insular nature of the lhaus and their sedentary culture. It is highly technical and has many words that describe very specific subjects. See Vol II: Languages.

HAUTIA: 1. Com. Set. Prosperous city in VENTHIR, once situated at the mouth of the river MAPHANI^(2.), in the inlet of a narrow bay, some 50-miles from the true coast. The city is known for its trade in exotic goods and the many brothels and other sybaritic pleasures on offer there. Its harbours are teeming with entertainment of all sorts, catering to the naval traders, merchants and fleets that often lay anchor in its bays (Pop. c. 650,000).

2. Sea. Body of water in far east of the DARK SEA, serving as a border between the open sea and the BROKEN LANDS.

HAVAK: 1. Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTAL region in the north east of VAALK, covering the foothills north west of the ARIS Highlands, known for its ATRAMENTAL LACUNAE. The air there is incredibly thick, the sky appearing dark and distant, with sunrises and sunsets a deep violet-red. The region is pitch-black at night, though stars above appear as violet pinpricks that flicker or pulse.

A lake was constructed to dam river flowing from the region which would otherwise join with the river RIPARIS, which feeds many settlements downstream.

The region is categorised as DANGEROUS by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

2. Rvr. Dam and artificial lake in the north east of VAALK, built in c. 2000 RM to dam the flow of river flowing north west into the river RIPARIS.

HAVAKI: Set. Major city in the east of SEDISIA (Pop. c. 80,000).

HAVATH: Soc. Tribe in the far south east of MULCIBER, in the GROWING MOUNTAINS, in the north east of SAMMAEA. It is one of only three coastal tribes in Mulciber, and borders the nation of ELEKHID. Its people are expert mariners and are, possibly the most culturally different of all of the tribes of Mulciber, and they openly trade with the people of EBURUL, as well as Elekhid. It is a known base of the AHHAS, who control the city of USUTH.

HAVELRA: f. Myt. His. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, a SCION and the first Daughter of the DEMIURGE DURUTHILHOTEP. Her birth was preordained by her father, whose acolytes wrote extensively about her before her mystical birth directly from the FIRMAMENT under a halo of light above her father.

She was kindly and had a kinship with the Firmament that few others could understand, and even her father is noted as having said during a sermon atop the great ROSTRUM OF ANGH ITIS 'she is closer to the Light than I could hope to dream'. Over time she became alienated from her siblings and her father's followers, who either grew embittered by her birthright or put much more reverence in her than she was comfortable with .

She left her homeland early in the FOURTH AGE, espousing the Firmamental philosophy of VALLIRIEN, or Light's Love, across all of ELYDEN, though she met violent criticism in some lands, where she is believed to have eventually been slain. Towards the end of the FOURTH AGE she, alongside the remnants of the IFIRMIANS and their descendants, the so-called immortals, rebuilt the Firmamental monument known as the MENISCUS, giving access once more to MORTALS to shape the Firmament.

The MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN names her as one half of the divisive MOTHER AND FATHER OF CREATION prophecy, with the other being the scion AZER^(2.) and she was killed by him after the two met following a lifetime of trying to prevent the prophecy from coming to pass. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

HAVETH: Set. Settlement in the c of PARTHIS, along the course of the river ESHMUN. It lies along the RED ROUTE and caters to the many merchants and travellers that cross it (Pop. c. 6,000).

HAWAN: Rui. Ruin in the south east of MHAROKK, just west of the MENKA table hills. The ruin dates to the early days of the FIFTH AGE, where it is thought to have been a sizeable settlement.

HAYANA: Set. Fortified coastal settlement in the c south of CUTH, along the western-face of the HAMMINGHENG peninsula (Pop. c. 20,000).

HAYAVAR: Fau. Grotesque animal common to temperate regions of SAMMAEA thought to have arisen during the FOURTH AGE from exposure to ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED regions over many generations.

Today they breed true and are dull of colour, and largo of body with hulking shoulders and brutish heads, not dissimilar to those of warthogs, but with flat bony protrusions on their chins used to dig through earth for tubers. They are of matted fur which makes good rope.

They are unruly and difficult to domesticate, and their flesh is of a particular taste that does not sit well with HUMANS, but it is not harmful to them. They are largely solitary and are the bane of farmers, so they are hated creatures.

Though not native to the region, they are also found in the south of WESTERN SAMMAEA, in northern SYNCHTHONITHA, north western GRARNEÂST, southern NASTAL, and north eastern BELEGOR. It is thought that they were introduced there by immigrants from the north millennia ago. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

HAYREDHOSS UYHAVEN: (B. 3966 RM) infamous CYHLAGHARRI pirate lord, known to most mariners as the Scourge of the Inner Sea. An OGHUR of noble descent, he is the first cousin of KING ACAMAS, and became a mariner at a young age, serving aboard a slave ship as an apprentice, earning his stripes. A natural at sea and with the charisma that his family was famed for, he became a captain of his own ship in 3985 RM, and began conducting slave raids in the CAMARINAL SEA, earning the enmity of dozens of coastal communities.

In 3989 he was granted a formal letter of marque, making him a privateer captain of the Cyhlagharri crown. His attacks became more brazen following his appointment, and he became commodore, in command of seven ships. By 4002 RM he was in control of the entire Cyhlagharri privateer and slaver fleet – numbering hundreds of ships in total, terrorising the INNER SEA and its peripheries. He is thought to be responsible for hundreds of thousands of captured slaves every year and the loss of millions of bits in dozens of nations' economies.

Many nations, including the TWIN EMPIRES, as well as PARTHIS and ALMAGEST and others, have bounties on his head, though he is known as somewhat of an escape artist, having evaded capture on no less than five separate occasion, which is no small feat given the size of oghurs. He is based in the heavily defended coastal fortress of GHARAMALH, though is rarely to be found on land, preferring to command his fleet for the fortress-ship KISSAMAYHA.

HAYSHAB: Set. Small city in the north of the JAHADAT STATES, in the east of SAMMAEA, and capital of one of the twelve States (Pop. c. 17,800).

HAYYAL: 1. Myt. A great behemoth in the myths of ancient GERICIA.

2. Tec. Veh. Ind. His. One of the so-called THREE BEHEMOTHS – gigantic crawling vehicles designed for industrial scale open caste mining. Hayyal was the second to be manufactured and was sent to the plains of central LAASKHA, where it became a major producer of raw iron, operating to this day, slowly crawling across the land, tearing at the topsoil with its long neck and rotating maw.

A shrine was constructed on its back in c. 3400 RM, which has become a focal point for the many technologists, engineers and mechanics who tend to the gargantuan machine.

HAZABOS, the: Geo. Grasslands in the c south of the KAZZARAN^(1.) peninsula.

HAZAROT: (B. 3922 – D. 3982 RM) Pol. Prince and former ruler of the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT, in the north west of SAMMAEA. He was succeeded upon death by his daughter, princess JEMMAHALA.

HAZGORGOR: Int. Flo. A specific monumental tree in the east of the HENDECARCHY of AONIA in the north west of MALAN. It was exploited in the past, its core hollowed for its hard wood and replaced with archaic machinery millennia ago, though the tree itself remains alive in spite or (or perhaps because of...) the machinery. There were once three such trees, though its two siblings did not fare so well, and are now grey and fossilised, lying abandoned. The fate of Hazgorgor may be the same if people do not intervene.

A small order of caretakers exists in the area, guarding the tree from harm.

HAZOR: Dem. 'Hazorin'. Set. Storied city in the south east of RHINOCOLOURA, based around an ancient citadel in the east of the DOTHEGAR Mountains. Hazor has roots in the early days of the FIFTH AGE and was a major fortress where natives fought against the KORACHANI colonists that were invading lands to the north east, in the region of UGOSTAUTH, between c. 390 – 420 RM. Following this the city became a centre for both culture and military and stood apart from the growing ERINATI state in the north.

It grew wealthy from mining valuable ores in the southern-face of the DOTHEGAR Mountains and its unsurpassed natural defences made it easily defensible, and by c. 750 RM it had dominated lands south of Dothegar, as far away as BIRAMA'S NEEDLE, around which it constructed a major fortress that today lies in ruins.

As Erinakh Laur expanded to the north between 1400 - 600 RM, it would slowly exert political pressure on Hazor, which in 1720 RM became the capital of one of three prefectures of the nation though by c. 2400 RM, Hazor had grown so powerful that it excised itself, effectively becoming an independent region, though on paper, it remained one of three prefectures of Erinakh Laur. In 2483 RM it formally declared its independence from the other prefectures, which were unwilling to risk open war with the more powerful prefecture.

In 2965 RM it was visited by an OTHERWORLDER calling itself NEANDER, who gained a vast following amongst the city's upper echelons, rising to power in 1001 RM, where he ruled until his death in 3462 RM. Hazor served as the capital of the empire of NEANDARA, after Neander united the 3 prefectures of Erinakh Laur under his banner in 3211 RM following a lengthy civil war. Hazor was to remain capital until the unrest following his death led to the fracture of its lands, after which Hazor would survive as an independent region on the peripheries of what would become Rhinocoloura.

In 3739 RM, 36-years after Rhinocoloura was able to orchestrate the capitulation of ETHISTONITH, Hazor was also absorbed by the $\underline{\text{KHANATE}}^{(2)}$ after years of political marriages and influences finally paid off.

In 3808 RM the city of Hazor was attacked by seven pale otherworlders, who hunted the remaining members of the HALFBLOOD house of Neander across Rhinocoloura like animals. They appeared without warning and acted without provocation, stoically murdering all descendants of Neander they could find. It is unknown if any escaped, and if they did, they surely fled far from Hazor or Rhinocoloura. After weeks of conflict in the region, the mortals and halfbloods unable to wound, let alone slay any of the attacking otherworlders, the seven attackers disappeared without word, and nothing is known of their purpose in Rhinocoloura, or the reasoning behind their attacks.

Today, Hazor remains a powerful city in full control of the surrounding region, its armies forming a major part of the Rhinocolouran military forces (Pop. c. 280,000).

HAZORISTRANISM: Rel. Religion implemented by the TYRARNON leaders of HAZOR following their overpowering of the city-state in 3808 RM. The religion is a form of deification of OTHERWORLDERS and their direct progeny, specifically the Tyrarnons, with gigantic platinum idols and temples erected in their honour. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

HAZZAR: Mil. Rnk. Rank within the WHITE LEAGUE, similar to lieutenant. HAZZATH: Rvr. River in the c of ALMAGEST, flowing south for 275-miles from sources in the THAURIR Mountains, before meeting its parent, the river DANUR.

HE'ELAN ARCHDUKES: Mys. Pol. Org. Occult group with presence in many BRORI⁽¹⁾ nations, and also the ruling caste in the nation of GREST⁽¹⁾ since 3781 RM, though the group was a pervasive presence there for many centuries before that.

Its members are OCCULTISTS who are united by the tenet that the descendants of the SCION ORIAS YETZIRAH are the rightful rulers of Grest, with some going so far as to say all of Bror^(1.). Many claim direct ancestry from Orias Yetzirah, which they use to legitimise their claims.

The group first appeared in the city of NEYEM in c. 3300 RM under the leadership of JURASAMA YETZIRAH, a self-proclaimed descendant of Orias, possibly in response to the sacking of the city and the moving of the capital to SCELD. There, they worked in the shadows for years, adapting the ancient occultist HE'ELAN WRITINGS to their purposes. They contacted the OTHERWORLD and communed with OTHERWORLDERS, gleaning forbidden knowledge from the gestating SPIRITS^(1,1) of the dead. They used their knowledge to manipulate events and people in Grest to their advantage. Her scionic blood made Jurasama unnaturally long-lived, and she was calculating and conniving, biding her time as her followers grew old and died. She eventually found two others of her bloodline – ARA and IEBESH YETZIRAH – and indoctrinated them into the ways of the He'elan Writings, and by c. 3500 RM were calling themselves the He'elan Archdukes.

By c. 3600 the Archdukes had amassed a large following across Grest, with underground mystery cults appearing in most cities. With a decentralised leadership, most of these cults adapted the teachings of the Archdukes, with many of them corrupting their tenets for selfish gains, their occultists turning to darker rituals with which they enslaved spirits to their cause.

Jurasama moved the main cell of the cults from Neyem to Scaled, where she orchestrated the downfall of the NULUM dynasty in 3781 RM, which culminated with the deposing of the monarchy and the elevation of the Archdukes to positions of power in Grest. The cults emerged from the shadows across Grest, ousting what governments had survived the death of the monarchy, bringing most of the land under the yoke of the Archdukes.

Jurasama and her peers instilled the populace with their occultist beliefs, rapidly corrupting the nation to a land of fanatical zealots beholden to dark teachings, whose leaders subjugated spirits known as DAIMONS to their twisted causes. They enslaved these spirits into technarcane engines to power their industries and cities while they enforced the teachings of the He'elan Writings across their lands. By c. 3830 RM the He'elan Writings had become so pervasive that most people now carry personalised holy texts on their persons that have been personally annotated and illustrated, making each one unique to its bearer. These documents are almost the equivalent of a passport or licence in other lands, and to lose this book is considered a great disgrace, bringing dishonour upon the individual.

HE'ELAN CULTS: My. Pol. Org. Mystery cults that were prevalent in GREST^(1,) between c. 3500 and the rise of the HE'ELAN ARCHDUKES in 3781 RM. Following this the Archdukes legitimised their belief system and the mystery cults were brought out of the shadows, where they slowly corrupted all aspects of life in the autocratic nation into the darkly fanatical dystopia of today.

The cults now serve as regional administrative councils, with each one headed by a He'elan Duke that in turn answers to the three Archdukes in a form of neofeudalism.

HE'ELAN WRITINGS, the: Mys. Rel. Vol. 1. Mystical DALLIAMORAAN scriptures penned between c. 700 – 950 RM by fanatics of the SCION ORIAS YETZIRAH. The writings were banned for their extremism and dark occult rituals, though were later adapted by the HE'ELAN ARCHDUKES and corrupted to their purpose, eventually seeing them rise to the position of rulers of GREST^(1.), which they rule with an iron fist to this day.

The writings have since become a unifying religious text that every adult in Grest copies, crafting a personalised version that they carry around with them as a form of personal mantra. These are also known as He'elan Writings^(2,).

2. Rel. Vol. Personalised holy texts that all adults carry with them in GREST. Part of the coming-of-age ritual when an individual reaches the age 17 is the crafting of a personalised version of the He'elan Writings⁽¹⁾. Often hand-made, though usually written on blank booklets sold by the church itself, individuals copy certain passages, parables and litanies into their pages, adding personalisations, annotations, marginalia, and so-on. Some people devote a great amount of time and effort into making their copies works of art, and some fanatics take great pride in the size of their copies, which in some cases can be so big they must be carried on one's back. There are museums in the larger cities of Grest that display the Writings of deceased individuals.

These documents also fulfil a role similar to that of passport or licence, and to lose this book is considered a great disgrace, bringing dishonour upon the individual.

HEART VENERATION: Int. Soc. Common practice in the FOREST KINGDOMS of MALAN, where the hearts of the dead are removed from their bodies and mummified. These are either buried close to home in dedicated gardens scattered throughout settlements, or which are encased in resin and placed in a reliquary, which are placed in home shrines for veneration. These can remain in houses for many generations building up over time in dedicated shrines where a family's ancestors are paid their respects on particular feast days. Those with the means to may build impressive shrines and temples in their own homes that serve as focal points for prayers.

The practice is most common in the HENDECARCHIES of NHORA, DERAEIA, and eastern AMILLAERE^(1.) and STHAMAN, and are not as prevalent in CYRENIA and AONIA.

HEART OF THE VOLUTE: Rel. Str. The headquarters of the state religion of NAARETH: the CHURCH OF THE VOLUTE. It is built in the side of a sheer cliff in the LATHMM plateau in the north east of Naareth, and is topped by a gilded dome. It is home to the interred body of the founder of the Temple, EISHETH, who continues to spawn DRONES for the church. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

HEADNAL: Geo. Dry rocky plains in the west of ANANTHUL. The region is largely uninhabited.

HEART ENGINE: Tec. In TECHNARCANE disciplines common throughout the industrialised world (including the SOCIALIST REPUBLIC OF ALMAGEST, the KORACHANI EMPIRE, the SECULAR REPUBLIC OF PARTHIS, and the REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO) a TECHNARCANE engine at the heart of which is a mortal host, commonly a LARVA or SHAPER. The host body acts as a link between the outside world and the machine, allowing time for quick calculations and other cogitations that would otherwise be impossible without the mortal host. More often than not the host is a shaper, either VAT- or WOMB-BORN, whose innate abilities are amplified exponentially by the engine, which requires an external fuel source and operators. SARCOPHAGI are a relatively common example of heart engines used in important structures as a means of defence against supranatural attack.

Though similar to IRON MANTLES⁽²⁾, and TECHNACHI, the three can be distinguished in a few ways that are commonly understood within the fields of technarcana:

A heart engine is a more extreme form of technachi, often encasing a mortal body (be it vat- or womb-born) within a technarcane engine that can at times encompass entire rooms and, which by default, is immobile and commonly catatonic.

A technachi is generally a series of orthoses or grafts based around a vat-born creature or a clone of artificial origin, bred and incepted specifically for the task at hand, and will, more often than not, perform like an automaton with little personality or individual characteristics.

An iron mantle normally takes the form of orthoses or technarcane grafts or a harness or HARDSUIT applied to a sapient womb-born mortal with an individual personality and full mobility. See Vol II: Technarcana.

HEART OF KHAR'ILLAE, the: Leg. Mys. Obj. In many legends and myths across ELYDEN, the mummified heart of the SCION KHAR'ILLAE, kept as a reliquary following her death in the SECOND AGE. The Heart was kept as a relic and passed on from culture-to-culture. It was lost for much of the FOURTH AGE, though was recovered during the WAR OF SCOURGING, and remained in the north of SAMMAEA, changing hands between groups various times since then. Today it is held under lock-and-key by the REFORMED CHURCH OF SARASTRO in MHAROKK. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

HEART, MIND, AND BLADE, ORDER OF THE: Org. Law. Warrior-monks common in both pre- and post-Imperial VÂRR. The most fervent followers of the martial-deity SOLUM, they live monastic lives which are devoted to the perfection of the mind and body, as well as blade-making skills. They are considered the knights of Vârr.

The order rose c. 1000 RM from the already well-established religious orders of Solum, and remained a powerful martial body following Vârr's abandonment of Solum (enforced by its KORACHANI rulers) in 2012 RM in favour of the UNDYING MACHINE, their martial talents recognised by the STEEL LEGION, where they were used as elite auxiliaries in battle. During the time of the INTERREGES, beginning 3412 RM, they became caretakers sharing powers of leadership with the Interreges, and following their retreat in 3791 RM, they became lawkeepers.

HEART OF SAMMAEA, THE: Arr. Epic written in LIDEA in 775 RM, detailing an expedition up the river SHIBBOLETH^(3.) into the heart of the SAMMAEAN continent.

HEARTLAND: His. Lan. Colloquial name for the Korachani empire, and following the SUNDERING OF THE KORACHANI EMPIRE in 3705 RM, the HIGH-EMPIRE OF KORACHAN.

HEARTPOME: Flo. Fruit of the rare BEAMMIN tree, that resembles a dark pulsing heart, roughly the size of a palm. Its flesh is stringy and drips with a thick red juice that tastes earthy and has remedial traits that refresh and energise those that consume them, though are difficult to digest. In antiquity they were eaten by nobility and royalty, and were for the most part kept out of the reach of common folk, which served to mythologise the fruit's properties.

The fruit formed part of an ancient myth in the ARID TRIPTYCH, whereby it was gifted to mortals by ancient deities as reward for their worship. This is likely corruption of a far older parable from the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN, in which the heartpome was stolen from the DEMIURGES by a group of MORTALS who were then punished for their deeds.

HEAT BLADE: Tec. Wea. Heavy powered blades made of a composite layered metal that is ATRAMENTALLY-treated to maintain a relatively sharp edge whilst being exposed to extremely high temperatures. In battle the blades are heated by an external power source and glow white-red with extreme heat, allowing them to penetrate thick armour and flesh with equal ease. They are of particular effectiveness against armoured vehicles and bunkers, though cannot be wielded effectively quickly.

The necessary external power source and weight of the blades means they are typically only wielded by shock troops equipped with HARDSUITS, or individuals who are of above average strength such as OGHURS, certain HALFBLOODS, or modified MORTALS. They are most often seen in the hands of vehement DESOLATI, as well as in the ALMAGESTI armed forces.

HEBA: Rvr. River in the east of the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT. The city of WAHHAD is situated along its banks.

HEBACHAN: Ind. Set. Largest open-cast colliery in the nation of KORACHAN, in the HERESIAN PLAINS. It is known for its huge mining vehicles and its legions of OGHUR slaves (originally VAT-BORN to be stronger and more obedient, though they have been breeding true for about 1,200 years now and are considered a race onto their own).

The mine's origins date back to c. 2900~RM after decades of prospecting in the region after quarries and mines elsewhere in the empire began to run dry. It has grown steadily since then, and continues to be the main source of coal to the empire (Pop. c. 18,000).

HEBARANT: Set. Fortified city in the prefecture of TERECHANT^(1.) in the far east of HOLOLACH^(1.), close to the border with the MULL CITY-STATES (Pop. c. 17,500).

HEBAT: Geo. southern-most foot of the ARGENT Mountains, south of the CHARA PASS, forming the south eastern-most lands of TZALLRACH. The region is rocky and incredibly old, marked by treacherous terrain and weathered granite cliffs and canyons.

HEBEK: Set. Major city in the c south west of KHULL. It is a centre to the KHULLAN INQUISITION and serves as a stronghold and recruiting ground for the group. It is famed for its labyrinthine cistern, which is made up of several large vaulted chambers that are connected to each other by narrow tunnels (Pop. c. 280,000).

HECATOMB: also 'City of Sacrifice'. Set. City in the TWILIGHT STATES, known for its religious fanatics and the wholesale ritual sacrifices that take place there, either of livestock or willing individuals, who are normally burnt alive in honour of their sleeping deity (Pop. c. 32,000).

HECHALOT: Geo. Jagged mountain range in the c of GNOTH.

HECHARI: Mil. Rnk. Elite foot unit in TZALLRACH. Individuals serve as leaders of conscripted troops.

HECUBAH REX: Myt. Leg. Cultural hero from the ancient myths of ELYDEN, featuring in the legends of many late FOURTH AGE and Early FIFTH AGE cultures. Little is known of this ancient legend other than the LLACHATULI myths that surround him dating to the early Fifth Age. His tomb is believed to live beneath the WHITE SHEET, in the north of the nation of RAONGEN⁽²⁾, though the exact location has never been ascertained. Many believe that he shares the same roots as the NORTHERN PALADIN. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

HEDAH: Mil. Str. Citadel built in AZAZEM through KORACHANI aid in 340 RM. It was attacked and sacked by LAASKHAN separatists 1123 RM, and ultimately abandoned and never reclaimed following the civil war of AZAZEM that was propagated by the so-called PARIAH-KING in 2979 RM. Rumours abound that the defeated Pariah-king can be seen haunting its decrepit ruins.

HEDASHAAT: Set. Small coastal city on the island of CYNCER^(1.) in the south of the CORAL BARONIES, off the south western coast of SAMMAEA. The settlement emerged around a shipyard and, it I renowned for the distinctive TWIN-HULLED DHOWS that it makes, which are a common sight in the shallow waters of the Baronies (Pop. c. 18,200).

HEDDA, PASS of: Geo. Pass crossing the south of the BELLEPHARA Mountains, linking the east of SAGITTARIA^(2.) and the south of ALTHA^(2.).

HEDERO OF YIIMA: His. Myt. Leg. Ancient hero common in VAALKAN and other SAMMAEAN myths who wielded the sword TARTARUCH until his death in c. -800 RM. The sword itself is believed to be far older than that. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

HEDIAL: Rel. Set. Holy city in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of ALAMUT. The city is renowned for its large church dedicated to the ASHKERON (Pop. c. 11,500).

HEDRAL IDRAVAYN: x. Pol. Rul. Per. (B. c. 3300 RM) ruler of the Autocracy of PHYRR since c. 3380 RM, who bears the title of IMPERIARCH. An ancient being of murky KERATIN and PLAGI ancestry, their body has been almost completely replaced with all manner of ORTHOSES and TECHNARCANE augmentations that have increased their size and form into that of a bio-mechanical abomination. They rule with a – literal – iron fist, and no-one in Phyrr, not even their closest lieutenants and TECHNARCHS, can dare defy their will or even hope to comprehend their cyclopean and, quite possibly, graft-addled, thoughts and desires.

Their obsession with orthoses was responsible for a techno-cultural revolution in which Phyrran Technarchs and nobility attempt to replicate the often deadly procedures, altering their own bodies and replacing organs and limbs with technarcane substitutes. This has given rise to a pervasive CULT OF PERSONALITY at the centre of which is the Imperiarch, who is worshipped as a living saviour. See Vol II: Rulers.

HEDU: Arc. Rvr. Bridge crossing the river SHIBBOLETH^(3.) at the city of HOSETA, in the nation of AETHIOS.

HEGANUSH: Rel. Set. Temple-city in the MARKED PALL^(1.) in the west of KHARKHARADONTIS, and home to the largest temple dedicated the deity known as the Marked Pall^(2.) (Pop. unknown).

HEGEMON: Pol. Soc. Rnk. One of the noble ranks and titles in the empire of RAONGEN⁽²⁾, falling beneath the FACTOTUMS⁽²⁾ and above the ORGANIZIERS. They command many manufactories and large swathes of land, with most INDUSTRIES (territories under the control of a Factotum) typically being divided between anything from 3 – 12 Hegemons, depending on the size of the Industry.

HEGEUMAR: (B. c. 3570 – D. c. 3608) Mil. Pol. Warlord who in c. 3600 RM united various disparate people who survived the collapse of the nation of AHINA in the north west of THE SURRACH, eventually forming the nation of SAVIANA, taking the name of the region – SAVIUD, and adapting it. Born in the city of FARKAS, he was a charismatic if brutal leader, but was killed in c. 3608 RM, beginning a tradition in Saviana that continued until its eventual downfall in 3796 RM at the hands of the coalition that would lead to the formation of the SIX CITIES.

HEGHAQ: Set. Coastal settlement in the far south east of CHEIRA (Pop. c. 5.000).

HEHABAAN: Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTAL WASTELAND in the north west of SAMMAEA, in the region of the SIX CITIES. It is approximately 4,200-square-miles in area and its effects are largely unknown outside of the elite shapers who study its effects, though it is known to have corrupted many groups of indigenous people into WRITHENS, who continue to live within its borders attacking the city of NEKHARAAL.

The region is categorised as a $\underline{\text{MODERATE THREAT}}$ by the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI}}$ Institute of Atramental Studies.

HEHOREI: Rui. Abandoned city in the west of VALBAR^(2.). It was once coastal, along the southern coast of the BAY OF SIBBRI, which retreated with the lowering of ELYDEN'S seas over the last millennia. The shells of abandoned whaling stations litter the landscape around the ruin.

HEHRET: Set. Settlement in the east of KHAMID (Pop. c. 7,500).

HEIR OF GOETH: Leg. Rel. His. The prophesised leader of the GOETH region in the c of LLACHATUL, as written in seven quatrains by the heretic URGOR in c. 2350 RM before his excommunication from the ASKHERONI faith. The Heir of Goeth is said to be a strong-willed HALFBLOOD who will unite the people of Goethan. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

HEIRLOOM: Bev. Popular port drink commonly made in SKAROS and exported across the KORACHANI EMPIRE. Its main centres of production are the cities of MYSIS and TRAISIA in the north east of the region of GNASSIA. See Vol II: Beverages.

HEJAENEA: Set. City in the far north of the prefecture of EROSENEA^(1.), in the north of HOLOLACH^(1.). It is fortified and home to many military forces that guard Hololach from the west (Pop. c. 41,000).

HEKA (THE MAN): Mys. In TEMUJAN SPIRITUALISM, the TUTELARY SPIRIT of the FIRMAMENT and SHAPING. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

HEKAL: Geo. Glacier in the far north of GNOTH, in the SOLUN HIGHLANDS.

HEKALOTH: 1. Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region in the far south east of SUMA'YA. It is a relatively recent area or corruption and is named after the city of Hekaloth⁽²⁾ that was already present there. SIPHON ENGINES were brought there from ruins to the north and restored and put to use, cleaning the region around the city.

2. Set. Fortified settlement in the far south east of SUMA'YA. SIPHON ENGINES were brought there in c. 3750 RM to reduce the ATRAMENTAL TAINT surrounding the city and converting it into processed UMBRA that's sold (Pop. c. 4,600).

HEKARTI: Set. Coastal settlement in the far west of ALMAGEST, in its territories east of the BLACK MOUNTAIN. The city is one of ALMAGEST'S major slaving centres, taking slaves from the west and sending them east across the APHOTIS to the CITY OF ALMAGEST (Pop. c. 4,750).

HEKAS: Mil. Str. Coastal fortress in the far north west of ALMAGEST, in its territories east of the BLACK MOUNTAIN the fort overlooks the SEA OF ADUM, and is the launching point of slave raids north into ALAM BETHYL.

HELACIA: Set. Small fortified city in the far south east of ALMAGEST, in the south eastern foothills of the GAEFANG Mountains, close to the border with THE OLD FOREST. Its people are trained in forest warfare and expect attack from the east, though this has not come in many generations. Its professional woodland rangers are well-trained and experts in tracking, trapping and hunting and they are hardy folk, uncaring of the forest superstitions of most (Pop. c. 18,000).

HELAGHILRA: Rvr. Major river in the south west of SAMMAEA, flowing south for over 1,000-miles from sources in the southern face of the SHAKHURAN Mountains before meeting the coast at the BAY OF LRITHA. It serves as a border between the south east of ADHERA and the north west of PHYRR for an 18-mile stretch before moving south into METHUMN.

HELANA: Set. Small city in the plains of SARGOTH in the c of KARAKHAS. It is a major producer of food, with its volcanic soil known for its great fertility. It forms a part of the RED ROUTE and it has become a vital stop for merchants to resupply with provisions for the road (Pop. c. 10,000).

HELDIRETH THE HALF-HAND: (B. 3969 RM) Mys. Sup. Notorious KORACHANI ARCHSHAPER known for his mastery of the ATRAMENTA and for his withered hand. Born the son of a wealthy merchant house, he could have had the arm replaced with an ORTHOSIS or operated on, but refused, stating that it served to remind him that he was so much more than just the mortal vessel that housed him.

HELDROMM: Set. City in the north of ELEKHID (Pop. c. 45,000).

HELEKAS: Set. Settlement in the north east of the tribe of TATRAS, in the c south of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. It is known for its goatherds (Pop. c. 2,000).

HELELETH: m. (D. c. 1800 RM) Mys. Per. Luminary figure form GNOTH, whose writings and teachings regarding the BLOOD OF VALA remain important in GNOTHI MYSTICISM to this day. A GIGANRI of humble upbringing, he studied in BISMUTH and remained there as an aesthete, teaching others until his death at the venerable age of 300, which is old for even a giganri. A statue dedicated to him can be found outside the monastery of AUDIAN in the west of Gnoth, where he is said to have sojourned for a decade in c. 1750 RM.

HELGARA: Set. Coastal settlement in the south west of HABOT, overlooking the north west of the BAY OF ESSIA (Pop. c. 8,000).

HELICAR: Geo. Mountain-range in the southern mainland of the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS.

HELIEN: Set. Coastal settlement in the south east of ZHARIAH⁽²⁾ in the region of ABBI DA'AD. It is a major part of the UMBRA industry in the region (Pop. c. 7,200).

HELINAR: Sec. Coastal city in the north of KAZZAR, to the west of the ODU mountains (Pop. c. 28,500).

HELINOT: Geo. Dry highland plains in the tribal territories of ALLAKAT, in the c of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. It is known for the ancient pyramid-like objects found there, known as MYTHOLITHS, that form the basis of the region's religion.

HELIOGRAPHY: also 'Sunwriting'. Soc. Tec. The process of taking still pictures through a process that uses bitumen as a coating on glass or metal which hardens in relation to exposure to light. When the plate is washed with oil of lavender, only the hardened, dark part of the image remains, creating an image.

The art originated in AZAZEM c. 2800 RM and rapidly spread throughout the KORACHANI EMPIRE where it became a pastime amongst the PATRICIAN-classes as well as a necessary part of bureaucratic life, essential to certain record-keeping.

The first recorded heliograph dates back to 2821 RM, and was taken in the city of KORACHAN. The heliograph of a vivisected OTHERWORLDER, with various LOCUMNI, BIOPSISTS and HAEMONCULI standing behind it. In fact, the heliograph had given birth to a cult known as the MARTYR'S TEARS around the turn of the third millennium, with advocates of the otherworlder admonishing its martyrdom. The nameless otherworlder has since become a patron saint of the downtrodden and is known only as THE MARTYR.

HELIOLATORY: Sox. Phil. Rel. Religious or cultural practice where the sun is venerated, often as a deity, or a deific object. This practice has taken many forms over various ages in disparate locations across ELYDEN, and there is not thought to be a single common link, so it is likely a case of divergent beliefs that took root in the wake of the DEMIURGES' torpor.

The independent cyclical nature of this form of worship indicates an intrinsic link between the mortal races and the sun, though what form such links took differs from culture to culture. Many scholars postulate that the sun with its giving of light and warmth is a giver of life and that the mortal races have a fundamental instinct that draws them, in some form or another to it, which would explain the many different religions that have formed with the sun as its nucleus. In some other cultures, this worship takes a dichotomous form, with the sun also taking a harsh aspect that embodies the taking of life - such as droughts, extreme heat.

The Demiurge Nergaal was the main proponent of the sun and embodied the wanton fickleness of its domains; with one extreme being fertility, strength and prosperity; the other Plague, drought and disease. A strong Cult of Nergaal remains active in the nation of Cuth, and many other solar religions. Can be found in nations As diverse as GIBEAH, KHAMID, RHEA, PARAIYA, TZALLRACH, and VÂRR, amongst others. Ironically, one of the few cultures to offer little regard to the sun is the KORACHANI EMPIRE, though it is likely that the UNDYING MACHINE, in its millennia of influence over Korachan caused the empire to shun the sun; indeed as the architect of the SHADOW and propagator of its growth, it would likely have been Rachanael's purpose to stymy the strength of the sun and, by default, the FIRMAMENT and the LIGHT UNDYING that was (and remains) symbolic of the strength of the sun. see Vol IV: Religions and Pantheons.

HELIOPARNASSUS: Geo. Mountain-range in the south of LYRIDIA, measuring 350-miles long. The mountain is positioned north of the salty lake that were once the STRAIT OF NÁRTHEL. Earthquakes are common in the area and landslides into lands below.

Following the SVATHI migration north with KORACHAN'S occupation of NÁRTHEL in 85 RM, the region around and north of the Helioparnassus mountain became their homes; where they would diminish into the caste now known as TROGLODYTES.

HELISSOS: Rvr. River in the south of LYRIDIA with its mouth in LYRIDIA DHAI, flowing for 600-miles west from the southern-face of the KYTHI Mountains and the northern face of the HELIOPARNASSUS Mountains before emptying in the BAY OF BYTRA. Prior to the arrival to the region of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, the region around the river was fertile and home to many settlements. Imperial abuse led to its poisoning by c. 1350 RM, though in the years since its departure the river has recovered and cities that once stood abandoned have returned to life.

HELIX: Sup. Mys. Lan. Colloquial term in the free lands of the east, used synonymously with FIRMAMENT. In the Inner Sea Region, it is often used in a derogatory way by those who oppose FIRMAMENTAL SHAPING, though it is used by some SHAPERS and ONÉSIMUS in a more affectionate manner. The term is thought to be derived from the HELIX TREES that are common in MALAN, the growth of which is heavily influenced by the Firmament.

HELIX OF ATHARHUA: Int. Myt. His. Arc. Strange structure in the c north of Kaspia, in the east of the Taghairm plains, thought to date back to the First Age. It is a gigantic natural feature that takes the vague shape of a helix, as though the land was pinched and pulled upwards by a gigantic hand. Its creation is attributed to an unknown Demiurge, though little is otherwise known about it and it is shunned by the people of Kaspia, and various myths and legends have come to surround it over the years.

HELIX TREE: Flo. Tree common in the HENDECARCHIES of AONIA, DERAEIA, CHLORIS and MYEIN in MALAN. These trees are known for their two, sometimes more, main trunks, which curl around each other in the form of a helix, with branches connecting the two in a labyrinth of wood. As saplings they emerge from their seeds with distinct hypocotyls (Seedling stalks) that are already split into two or sometimes three, which slowly grow with the tree into their distinctive helix shapes.

They are very long-lived and can grow to huge sizes. Their weeping sap is also valued as a curative to FIRMAMENTAL fatigue as well as for its mundane properties. The trees are very close to the Firmament and can easily be SHAPED by TREIS WOOD, when properly treated, is a superb firmamental focus and continues to channel the Firmament for some after death, though this property diminishes with time. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

HELIXLIGHT: Sup. Supranatural phenomenon observed in areas where the FIRMAMENT holds sway, such as areas surrounding Firmamental LEYS, LACUNAE or areas of FIRMAMENTAL TAINT, usually in the FAR HEMISPHERE. Regions where Helixlight is common include TULURKRYPH^(1.), ACHAA^(2.), VARU, and DANU, though they are not unknown in other regions.

HELIARCH: also 'Defender of the Helix'. Mar. One who practices the martial art of HELIARCHY.

HELIARCHY: Mys. Mar. Unique form of martial art common in parts of MENISCEA that utilises SHAPING and study of the FIRMAMENT in tandem with more traditional marital study. It is most common in AHOPAH and surrounding regions and its practitioners are typically well-regarded and respected, forming a cate onto their own within their respective societies. See Vol IV: Other Forms of Mysticism.

HELLEDRAN WALL: Geo. Large ridge in the c of KHARKHARADONTIS to the north of the FLAESCUS, roughly 300-miles north west of the BLACK FOUNTAIN. It is characterised by jagged black peaks protruding from the soft parched earth of the region.

HELLIA: Geo. Drc. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED DREAMSCAPE in the c of KHARKHARADONTIS, south east of the SEPULCHRAL PALACE, known throughout KORACHAN as a place of absolute corruption, where nightmares are made manifest and flora, fauna and land have become a single entity, inseparable, grotesque. These chaotic physical conditions are made possible due to an ATRAMENTAL LACUNA in the region that in turn weakens the material plane to make it more susceptible to the DREAMS and nightmares of the UNDYING MACHINE. The region is home to a sect of crazed SET known as HELLIONS, who seek to be as close to the Atramenta and the UNDYING MACHINE as they can by experiencing the worst of its effects. Their largest settlement in Hellia, if such it can be called, is UBOTE, and it is filled with those exhibiting Atramental corruption of the mind and flesh.

The region is categorised as EXTREMELY DANGEROUS by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

HELLION: Sup. Rnk. In DAEKYN, a caste of extremist SHAPERS who seek to be as close to the ATRAMENTA as possible by living in one of the most inimical places in ELYDEN; the wasteland known as HELLIA, from which their name is derived. The trek through the KHARKHARADONTID desert serves to whittle the weak from the strong, those who survive arriving in Daekyn with bodies that have been wracked by the SHADOW; something they revere as divine gifts. The best amongst them find the SEPULCHRAL PALACE in Kharkharadontis, and become servants there.

HELLOG: 1. Rvr. River in the western mainland of the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS, flowing south west for 140-miles from the TEREKION Mountains before flowing into the waters of the BROKEN SEA. The city of HELLOS lies along its banks.

2. Lak. Lake along the path of the eponymous river.

HELLOS: Pol. Set. Capital of the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS since the destruction of LIVYATHA in 3708 RM. Historically, the city was instrumental in leading the Free-Isles to their independence. Today it is a major economic centre, and is famed for its large market that sees trade from across the RED ROUTE being sold on its stalls and shops (Pop. c. 1.070.600).

HELMINTH: His. Ntn. FOURTH AGE empire that dominated the east of WESTERN LLACHATUL, thought to have been made up of HUMANS, GIGANRI, and VAPULIM, amongst others. Its ruins can now be found in extant GNOTH, eastern RAONGEN^(2.), and AQUARIIA, and present Gnothi culture is thought to have emerged from the vacuum left in its wake. See Vol III: Extinct States.

HELOT: also 'work-slave'. Soc. Law. Most common class within the KORACHANI EMPIRE and the REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO, forming the bulk of their workforce.

Though not quite slaves in the traditional sense, they are far from citizens and can barely be considered to be free. Most live their entire lives in meagre cramped apartments within the manufactories and workshops they work in, rarely-if-ever leaving. Those who are allowed to leave do so under the purview of their employers and have little free time to spend away from their work.

Imperial law allows helots to buy their FREEDOM, though it is a lengthy process. The manufactory-home that serves as home to helots have their own churches, COMMISSARIES and bars, where the work-slaves spend what free-time they have, squandering their meagre wages back into the pockets of their owners.

A single adult (considered to be between 14-16 years old) who lives an austere life, saving as much of their earnings as they can, will take at least a decade to buy their freedom. If they accomplish this, they must then face the realities of freedom – paying for lodging and finding a respectable job. Most FREEMEN continue to work in the manufactories despite their freedom, and others turn to a life of crime or becoming itinerant wanderers outside the cities. Those who are lucky enough to have developed skills during their life as a work-slave might go on to seek apprenticeships under the aegis of craftsmen and experts.

HELOWHART IDOL, the: Int. His. Arc. Ancient edifice in the south eastern foothills of the LAHAED Mountains, in the western wastes of the DOMAINS OF SHAUATAS. The structure is of a lattice-like texture and is twisted and winding, giving it a natural appearance, though it is almost certainly artificial in origin, possibly the work of a SCION or DEMIURGE of old.

HELVAN: Geo. Terraced, broad-shouldered sandstone valley dominating the c-south east of KHURAUR, forming the northern-most part of the GAP OF ALGOL. Its grey soil is fertile, and its river sediment is collected and used as fertiliser in some areas. Its shoulders are carved into temples and other cliff-face structures that date back to possibly the early FOURTH AGE. Though time seems not to have ravaged the carvings on these structures, they depict the history of the region in pictograms known as the HELVAN CARVINGS.

HELVAN CARVINGS, the: His. Art. Carvings in the hewn monuments of the HELVAN valley in the c of KHURAUR. said to date back to the early FOURTH AGE. Scholars have recorded the carvings, which are in pictographical form and without a recognisable language.

They depict what is assumed to be the ancient (possibly early ELLORAN) history of the region, amongst various panels showing daily life; the more sinister recording of large groups of people praying, then killing themselves in mass-sacrifice before a large figure who in following panels kisses each in turn, raising the fallen people who are seen from that panel onwards following the leader-figure like shadows. The lack of a translatable language prevents common means of interpretation, though divination and other mystical means have indicated a great melancholy pervading the area, and the influence of a great creator, perhaps one of the DEMIURGES.

HELVIARN NOCTAMDE: m. Pol. His. Per. (B. 3405 – 3477 RM) Second and last emperor of ALMAGEST, who acceded the throne following his father ANDIRONICOS NOCTAMDE'S death in 3462 RM. He was considered weak by most political observers, and known to ignore the advice of his SENESCHALS^(1.). He was shamed into acceding in 3475 RM by his closest seneschal VERANELE ROISDAN (who many now believe was acting in their self-interest) following a disastrous winter campaign in VALBAR that his seneschals had strongly opposed, but he was heirless, and the move plunged the nation into chaos, forcing the seneschals into forming a hexarchy in 3476 RM.

HEMAH: Rvr. Major river in the east of BROR^(1.) flowing south east for hundreds of miles, from sources in the far north of EMENRIST, before meeting its mouth at the coast of eastern Bror, along the border between the DOMAINS OF SHAUATAS in the west and MOSTUE in the east.

HEMANAT: Set. Fortified city in the c of the SULTANATE OF ABACARDAT.
Its proximity to the border with the JAHADAT STATES allows it to maintain close ties with the peoples, and it conducts much trade with the states.

Hemanat remained a stable region following the outbreak of FAHR'S PLAGUE in 2138 RM, which left the west of Abacardat decimated. It enforced a quarantine on the west, stopping people from travelling east from there, which led to the continued decline of the west. Over the next century, Hemanat would establish new settlements along the course of the river SYASHAN and, in particular, lake JEHADA, after which the Jahadat States would take their name in 2294 RM. By then, the power centre had shifted from Hemanat to the Syashani cities as they grew in number and influence, and eventually Hemanat itself would become an independent city in 2187 RM, later becoming part of an Abacardat that was recovering from the plague under the emerging religion of the JAHINNID FAITH (Pop. c. 40,000).

HEMATALAL: Leg. Set. Fabled SIDHE city in the north west of THE OLD FOREST, said to be close to the TREE OF AGEN. Its people are the caretakers of the Tree, tending to it and keeping it free of disease (Pop. unknown). See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

HEMATOPHAGY: Soc. The consumption or hunger for blood. Commonly called vampirism. The cause may be psychological or verifiable.

HEMAVAR: Rvr. Large river in HOLOLACH^(1.), flowing for c. 500-miles along the border between the prefectures of Hololach^(2.) and BROTRIS, from its source in the ESHAMIL Mountains before meeting the SEA OF MARDEN, 60-miles west of the capital. The river's source is a known ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region (VALLAR), though the taint is mild and largely dissipates along the length of the course, and the nearby refinery of NAHRLLA further reduces its influence.

HEMAYANA: Pol. Geo. One of the seven INDUSTRIES of RAONGEN^(2.), located in the south west of the empire. It is perhaps the most military active with several regiments dedicated to quelling CALLOW HORDE incursions. Its capital city is ORICALCHA.

HEMESH: Set. City the north of CUTH, to the west of the MO-ORASSIM Mountains. The city is built in an area rich in history, particularly that tied with the DEMIURGE NERGAAL. The site on which the city's main temple is constructed is said to have been the spot where Nergaal was wounded in combat against his brother ASHTERATH in the so-called WAR OF POXES, where his blood spilt across the land in a flood of crimson. The Temple claims to contain reliquaries containing the Demiurges' blood locked in labyrinthine catacombs beneath the surface. In honour of the divine links of the city, a great idol was erected there in 3379 RM in honour of Nergaal. The Idol remains, though is damaged and partially sunken in the sort earth, though continues to loom above the city, its eerie visage and twin-pair wings casting their shadow over its midday market (Pop. c. 45,000).

HEMMARASHEL, LIBRARY OF: Int. His. Rui. Leg. Ancient Library in the north west of present-day SATHAII, constructed between c. 200 and 320 RM by the THERASHIAN DYNASTY. It was gigantic in size and housed a library that was unrivalled across ELYDEN at the time, and also served as a public forum where groups and organisations could meet under the watchful eye of the empire's policing force.

None now know what led to the library's destruction, but accounts from c. 750- RM state that it had already been destroyed, the wealth of its records ruined alongside it.

Though ruined and largely overgrown, it is now considered one the WONDERS OF THE ANCIENT WORLD. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

HEMMEL: Cur. Main currency of KHAMID, first minted in 3785 RM. It takes the form of hexagonal chits which are scored along an axis, making it possible to split each chit into six parts, making it a base-six currency. See Vol II: Currency and Coinage in Elyden.

HEMMUI: Set. Coastal settlement in the far north of the BARRIER LANDS (Pop. c. 8,000).

HENAHABB: Geo. Massif in the east of SAMMAEA, to the north west of the SEA OF LETHEA, forming a border between the south of MNEMON and the north west of BANT.

HENAKARAIA: Geo. Peninsula in the west of METHUMN, jutting out into the SEA OF MERCUVIA, serving as the main division forming the BAY OF LRITHA.

HENDECARCHS, the: also 'the Eleven'. Pol. The rulers of the eleven FOREST KINGDOMS OF MALAN: SIANUSTARIL, THE REGENT, OF AMILLAERE (1.); LYSERITH ONÉSIMUS, OF STHAMAN; ANARGUL XYLIA, OF CHLORIS; MIALAD ONÉSIMUS, OF LONAR; GALLATRIS EBUL, OF MYEIN; PHARANDEAL TANUIT, OF AONIA; MANESKARKON ZARRÉ, OF CYRENIA; ARCHLECTOR MAGNUS SÖVIREN, OF HATON; XENADUS VELTHUR IV, OF NHORA; ULLISANDRA ONNERI, OF DERAEIA; and SVIZIA OF THE CARALL, OF ATALLUA.

HENDECARCHY: Pol. The ruling governments in the FOREST KINGDOMS of MALAN. There are eleven Hendecarchies, one for each of the Forest Kingdoms (Hendecarchies), each ruled by a HENDECARCH, over which presides the LADY AEGIS as an absolute figurehead.

Typically, the Hendecarchs are allowed to rule their respective territories in however way they see fit and have little say in the politics of the other Forest Kingdoms, though every four years the Hendecarchs convene in the PALACE OF THE TWELVE in AMILLAERE under the leadership of the Lady Aegis to discuss important matters of state. Envoys of the Hendecarchy are often sent to the Palace of the Twelve to petition their Hendecarchs' desires.

HENGE OF MOONS: Rui. Ruin in the region of HEADNAL in the c west of ANANTHUL. It takes the form of three concentric circles of standing stones, greatly damaged, many of which are missing, buried or otherwise shattered. Little is known of the area's history or of who may have constructed the circle, though it is thought to date back to the early years of the FIFTH AGE.

HENIAH: Rvr. River in the north east of ZHARIAH⁽²⁾, flowing south east for 700-miles, before meeting its terminus at the SEA OF ISTHIS.

HENIGAR: Geo. Rocky valley in the north west of VIRAHAN, forming the southern part of the SALKHAN Massif.

HENNA: 1. Flo. Flowering plant that has historically been used as a cosmetic since ancient times. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.
2. Soc. Art. Body art employing the resin of the aforementioned plant, to craft intricate though non-permanent designs. In many cultures these are seen as wards and protections from evil spirits. This likely stems from the days of the DEMIURGES where various members of the MORTAL tribes wore such designs.

HENPHIS: Set. Small coastal city in the west of KHAMID (Pop. c. 17,000). HENSHIN: Geo. Long ridge in the west of RAONGEN⁽²⁾, running north-south for some 420-miles. It is known for its rocky hills and stone formations and the hills surrounding it are a source of fine granite.

HENTHA: Geo. Escarpment in the south west of PELASGOS, south of the region of IRTHA, running for c 55-miles, and is an extension of the south western-most part of the BATHAKOL Mountains.

HENUTSHEF: Geo. Expansive lapis lazuli quarry and adjoining settlement in the south east of KHAMID, south west of the NEFERATH Mountains (Pop. 8,000).

HEON: Rui. Abandoned MANUFACTORY in the south western mainland of the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS.

HEPT: Cur. Common coinage within the KORACHANI EMPIRE. See Vol II: Currency and Coinage in Elyden.

HEPTARCHY: Pol. Leadership of seven, specifically, it could refer to:

1. Government of VAALK (at the time VAALTHA) from 759 RM to 2309 RM. Though Vaaltha had been under KORACHANI control since 19 RM, the administration was failing to serve distant parts of the nation, such as the far east, so its territories were divided into seven, each overseen by a governor appointed by THE SEVEN in KHADON. The seven governors convened (usually by proxy) in the capital of ANAKARRA to enact policy, though by 1231 RM the Heptarchy was permanently residing there, and the seven districts fell under the rule of their subordinates, changing the government from a localised one to a highly centralised one.

This had a negative effect on the nation, with increasing crime in areas far from the capital. Over the coming centuries the Heptarchs came to be appointed from within the Church of the Undying Machine, which had grown greatly in influence in Vaaltha. This meant that the nation was effectively ruled by the Church itself. Imperial Minasteria such as the Censors and Iconoclasts⁽²⁾ received greater funding and Vaaltha became the centre of their operations across the entire empire.

This led to Vaaltha becoming more radicalised, with the Church of the Undying Machine there having a level of autonomy unseen in Korachan. Despite this, crime was allowed to grow unfettered in the east. Trade with MHAROKK waned and the IRON GUARD struggled to keep order in cities such as VORACHAN and KYDONIA. Worst was the city of MEKENA, which by 2012 RM had been allowed to fester of its own will as the Heptarchy continued to ignore the ailing cities in the east. Between 2260 – 2309 RM black-market goods manufactured in Mekena spread to the rest of Vaaltha and across the INNER SEA. Its crime houses began to exert their influence on both the Heptarchy and the Church, which became corrupt. Their tithes to the empire waned in volume and frequency, earning the attention of The Seven in Khadon.

In 2309 RM, following months of deliberation, the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR himself led an attack on Vaaltha, ordering the destruction of Mekena and all who happened to be there at the time. Various criminal strongholds were targeted, including monasteries and imperial churches, leading to mashed innocent deaths.

Order was brought to Vaaltha, and the Heptarchy was deposed, replaced with new governors as the old system was abolished. This also left the Church of the Undying Machine weakened in the region.

HER HOLINESS ASTIASSA IX: (B. 3979 RM) Rel. Pol. An albino, like all her predecessors, she is ruler of state and church in SURUTUR, and the head of the YALOLIAC REGIME. Born to cousins in a long line of ordained incestuous marriages, she is weak of body and said to be an UMBRAPHAGE.

HERABAD: Set. Settlement in the east of SKAROS. Its main industry is the mining of salt. Most of its abodes and structures are now underground in the cool climate-controlled old chambers. Of interest are the buried bodies unearthed in early mining works in c. 3360 RM, which are believed to be mortals from the FIRST AGE preserved in the salt (Pop. c. 7,000).

HERABAT: Set. Coastal city in the east of SEPAHAUNAT, just 7-miles south east of the capital TAZAYIL, serving as its harbour (Pop. c. 44,000).

HERALD, the: Mys. In eastern mysticism, one of four figures, alongside THE AVATAR, THE SEER and THE SENTINEL, that form part of an eschatological myth that is said to bring about the end of the FIFTH AGE.

HERALD CITY, the: see MHURZIM.

HERALD OF SHADOW: Rel. Rnk. Though the ARCHPOTENTATE

MALICHAR was truly the SENTINEL OF SHADOW and its champion, his central role to the early growth of the KORACHANI EMPIRE meant that he had little time to spend on advocating the tenet of SHADOW.

Starting in 1753 RM, every 30-years the Archpotentate would choose a champion from the ranks of the UNDYING MACHINE'S most devout worshippers to bear the title of Herald of Shadow. This person would be a pure-blooded KORACHANI of able body and mind, taken from the noble households (sometimes DESPOSYNI, particularly during the time of the DESPOSYNI RULE). The definition of pure-blooded in this context has been open to interpretation, particularly in years when Malichar was absent for the choosing of a new herald.

Over the years, the dozens of Heralds of Shadow would go on to propagate the imperial faith, advocate its government, further its causes and, above all, act as a symbol to the people of Korachan across continents and millennia. Individual Heralds would also perform various vital functions and ceremonies on behalf of the Archpotentate, acting as his proxy.

Heralds typically serve until death or until they are no-longer physically capable of continuing with their duties, at which point another is chosen. There have been 82 Heralds as of 4007 RM and the incumbent Herald, PATRICIAN-PRINCESS INNANA, was chosen in 3996 RM.

HERATTA: Set. Settlement in the south west of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES. It lies within the IMYRI TRADE-ZONE and is a major source of stone in the area (Pop. c. 8,000).

HERET: Set. Settlement in the c of DURCHAA^(1.), along the eastern shore of lake THYTHIA (Pop. c. 3,900).

HERCOLOBA: See. Major coastal city in the north west of CECOPHELA. It has an expansive shipbuilding and shipbreaking yard, which services vessels from across the SEA OF IALCUS, GULF OF VALUS, and the SEA OF POLARIS. It is famed for its blood-red coastal cliffs and the pinkish-red granite on which it is built (Pop. c. 2,300,000).

HERCOLOBA, COLOSSUS OF: Rui. Early FOURTH AGE colossus on the island of SEDNA off the north western coast of CECOPHELA. It is made from the pinkish-red granite that the region is famed for, and is around 80-ft. tall, attributed to precursor culture from which Cecophela would later emerge. It has been in a dilapidated state for the past millennia, and is largely ignored by the people of HERCOLOBA.

HERCULE: Soc. Pol. One of the earliest PATRICIAN HOUSES that appeared around the INNER SEA, in c. 150 RM, in the east of AZAZEM. It was one of six Patrician Houses that in 243 RM seceded from the KORACHANI EMPIRE and formed the REPUBLIC OF LARATHUKH^(2.). The republic was attacked by Patrician Houses that had remained loyal to the empire, and it was toppled in 271 RM, and four of the six Patrician Houses died with it, including House Hercule. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

HERCYNEA: 1. Geo. Craggy spine-line mountain in the north of LAASKHA, to the west of the EHRANDEAN Massif.

2. For. Dark forest in north of $\underline{LAASKHA}$ made up struggling hollow-trunked trees, many of which are dead.

HERE: Geo. Highlands in the nation of ANANTHUL, to the north of the expansive EMSUT ZHALCA Mountain-range.

HEREMIAL: Set. Fortified city in the far south east of THE OLD FOREST, in a level highland basin between the VARRACHON, HAAG HAAD and VAERN Mountains. The city is known for its heavy defences due to its proximity to VÂRR and RHAMIA, and a sect of secretive scholars who study the effects of torpid DEMIURGES on the MATERIAL PLANE, including the DREAMSCAPES that develop around them over time. (Pop. c. 160,000).

HEREMITE: Phil. Erudite contemplatives who live in the south east of THE OLD FOREST. They wear white robes, often topped with vision-inhibiting crowns; symbolic of their inner-search for true enlightenment. The AMBER LANTERNS that are often seen in the Old Forest are their creations.
 The city of HEREMIAL is ruled by a caste of scholars descended from the HEREMITES.

HERENSUEGE, THE SPAWN OF ASHTERATH: x. Myt. His. In the mythology and ancient history of ELYDEN, a brutal draconic SCION of the DEMIURGE ASHTERATH that has terrorised lands in and bordering the KHARKHARADONTID desert since the THIRD AGE. It is a large emaciated draconic creature with decayed leathery wings, serpentine body and long arms and has become a paragon of destruction and greed and features in many oral ETHERI accounts of the UMBRA SOKHAR and other legends in lands including AETHIOS.

It looked upon its fathers banishment from ELYDEN and transformation into the DAWN STAR with barely concealed disdain, and vowed never to succumb to such weakness. It devoted the rest of its life to studying $\underline{\text{ATRAMENTISM}}$ and secret magicks that even the Demiurges had little knowledge of.

Its delving into forbidden magicks saw its body slowly wither as its mind grew in strength and it is now desiccated as though it had been mummified whilst still alive. It has grown laconic over the millennia and in most accounts is depicted seated on a <a href="https://schar.edu/sh

Deranged, and drunk on power, the scion sits in a torpid state, looking upon the shale desert, and its subjects as they bring it tributes. Exiles, WEIRDLINGS, pariahs, and DEGENERATES all, many of them SERAPIS, they wander the region of Jaka, their bodies wracked by the foul ATRAMENTAL winds that wrack the region, bringing blood offerings from their victims to the catatonic mummy that reigns from the THRONE OF ASHTERATH. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

 $\underline{\text{HEREOT}}$: Set. Fortified coastal city in the of south west of $\underline{\text{OTINTH}}$ (Pop. c. 40,000).

HEREPIS: Set. Coastal city in the far north of ALTHA⁽²⁾. It originated as a fishing village and though fishing is still its primary source of food, it has secured an alliance with SUCHARIIT and has many offices and consulates, with hotels and restaurants to cater to diplomats who holiday here (Pop. c. 40.000).

HERESI: Com. Set. Trade city in the c east of KORACHAN, in the once-wetlands of SERAH, north of the GULF OF LEMAS. The city is a crossroads of trade where the RED ROUTE meets the SULPHUR ROAD, and it cultivates the oils of the Serah, drying it for use as fuel in the steamers that travel the rivers and coasts of the area. It is home to the MINASTERIA^(2.) of ANAMNRIIN.

The city was founded in c. 1050 RM following the expansion of the delta of the river ICHORIA in the wake of retreating coastlines (Pop. c. 67,100).

HERESIAN PLAINS: Geo. Large basin dominating the north east of KORACHAN. The plains are noted for their scrublands and sparse scattered woods that are populated by small herds of AUROCHS. Of note is the FOREST OF PSALMS, which dominates its northern-most reaches (and is once thought to have covered the entirety of the basin; the BRAHANI WASTES, in its east, as well for the course of the river CHANI, a tributary of the river ICHORIA.

HERESIARCH, the: (B. 3918 – 3965 RM) Rel. Xenophobic PATRICIAN-chaplain responsible for the deaths of as many as thirty-thousand innocents in the hinterlands of north eastern KORACHAN between the years 3958 and 3964 RM. He was apprehended in the summer of 3964 RM by INQUISITORS from the GRIGORIAN ORDER and was sentenced to death the next year. His head was removed and the body was buried and chained in an unspecified chapel in one of Korachan's northern provinces, where it remains to this day. The whereabouts of his head is unknown.

HERET ODU: Geo. Large geyser in the north of KOLCHIS, in the region of NOLKOSH.

HERITAGE ASSEMBLY HALL: Art. Arc. Soc. Famed concert hall in the KORACHANI city of MAKHARA. Originating as an assembly hall in c. 900 RM where public meetings could take place, it burnt down in 1223 RM and was rebuilt as a far larger concert hall, though kept its original name.

It was rebuilt again after being sold in 1992 RM, though has remained largely unchanged since then.

Over the years it has hosted various artists and singers, including the famed LAASKHAN prima donna RAAMALA ITALLI.

HERKALL: Geo. Highlands in the c south of KHULL, adjacent to the artificially-created EFFLUX OF RASHAPH.

HERO OF A THOUSAND BATTLES: also 'Temeleuch', 'Sandan', and 'Melkarth', amongst others. A culture hero common to many mythologies and histories of various cultures across ELYDEN, some of them now dead, others still extant. The Hero of a Thousand Battles takes on many forms and names based on the culture of origin, though typically he (or she) is a legendary warrior, often a SHAPER. The Hero of a Thousand Battles might be a fictionalised version of a real culture-hero (such as the LEGEND MAGHORA in TEMUIA), though the true origins of the Hero are unknown, lost to history, though scholars postulate that their origin may lie in the dawn of the time of the MORTAL races, in the FIRST AGE OF MORTAL LIFE.

HERODOT: Sec. Town in the south east of PELASGOS, 45-miles from the border with the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS. The town was once a centre of the arts and possessed a coastal amphitheatre that overlooked the SEA OF SPIRES. The amphitheatre is now located some miles outside the present incarnation of the town, and due to the lowering of ELYDEN'S seas is no longer on the waterline. It is ruined, with little of beauty or value remaining (Pop. c. 14,000).

HERODOTHS, the: His. Mor. In the distant past, a race of MORTALS (believed to be HUMANS or descended from humans) who, disillusioned by the actions of the DEMIURGES following their consignment to the mortal plane and the stripping of their divine powers, fled their homeland. Various theories exist as to the nature of this diaspora, with some speculating that they travelled south west into far SAMMAEA, or north west beyond TAHALL. Others believe that their tale is little more than parable. Nevertheless, the story is generally perceived to be thus:

By the time of their punishment, the Demiurges had learnt that their abilities to SHAPE the natural world were determined by the number of true followers they had, and a Demiurge without worshippers could die. Where other mortal races followed their Demiurge blindly, the Herodoths understood that they were little more than fuel to the greed and desires of their immortal primogenitors. They forsook the Demiurges and retreated into the hinterlands of the fashioned world, where it is said the Demiurges' hands failed to reach the raw matter of the material world. These lands are thought to be sketches compared to the finished landscapes of the settled regions of Elyden, raw and unfinished.

HEROES' CROSSING, the: Int. Soc. Cam. Extremely difficult endurance race that takes place every 5-years in the VESPERTINE LEAGUE and NASTAL that spans around 25,000-miles. It draws on the cultural history of the Vespertine League, where messengers would run from city-state to city-state with news and communiques from their neighbours, and whose work was vital in keeping the League connected. More specifically, it draws on the apocryphal legend of the champion KAMARKA who in c. 3220 RM is said to have run hundreds of miles from state-to-state to warn them of an approaching marauder force. His selfless actions allowed the Vespertine cities to mount a defence, successfully defeating the attackers.

The first Crossing took place in c. 3300 RM and has remained a constant in the region since then, rarely missing an event.

The Heroes' Crossing is not for the faint of heart. The race typically takes between 450-500 days to complete, with most competitors running 50-miles in a day, though tactics differ in such a gruelling race. Competitors are responsible for their own food and water though can employ allies at select waystations who can resupply them, though they cannot accept any help when running and must complete the circuit wholly on foot, whilst hitting all of the predetermined waystations. The route traverses harsh, inland continental terrain that varies from arid savannahs and deserts in the north, to hot humid tropical climate in the south in which one can find rocky outcrops, plains, and woodlands. The region is known for its hot daytime temperatures and cold nights, with little shelter or respite for the racers. Water sources are scarce, making dehydration a constant threat.

The route passes both inhabited and uninhabited lands, with the most settled regions found around the waystations, which are often large cities and strongholds within the League, and the less settled areas dominating the south eastern route. The cities provide the only opportunities for reliable rest, resupplying, and medical assistance, though the aid on offer is limited when taking into account the amount of time racers eventually spend along on the road. Between these waypoints, racers must navigate perilous landscapes teeming with natural dangers such as sandstorms, venomous creatures, electrical storms, flooding, and rough terrain. The vast, open stretches of land can be disorienting, with many racers losing their way and adding days or even weeks to their journey.

Beyond natural hazards, competitors must also contend with the psychological toll of isolation and exhaustion. The mental strain of the race is immense, as racers push themselves to the brink of their physical limits, often battling hallucinations, despair, and the temptation to give up. Death and injury is a harsh reality of the Heroes' Crossing, and there hasn't been a single race in its near 7-century history that did not end with at least a few deaths.

Despite the perils, the Heroes' Crossing continues to attract hundreds of participants from across the Vespertine League, Nastal, and beyond, each drawn by the challenge and the promise of glory.

Winning the Heroes' Crossing is a feat of unparalleled endurance, and those who complete the race are celebrated as heroes in their own right. The victor is awarded a villa in one of the waystations and a stipend through which they can live out the rest of their days in relative comfort, but most importantly is the CROWN OF KAMARKA, a leather circlet the value of which lies not in its material worth but its cultural relevance. An individual who has won the Crown remains a celebrity in the Vespertine League for the rest of their lives, and many often spend their days travelling across the League, speaking of their experience, living off of the hospitality of their hosts.

Accusations of cheating and sabotage plague most races with some competitors stashing supplies in various locations along the route, which is discouraged, but not strictly against the rules; with others making use of mercenaries who hamper or outright assassinate rivals in the most isolated stretches of the race. The sheer length of the course makes it difficult to enforce the rules across its entirety and most competitors do follow an honour system and do not take kindly to cheaters. Many competitors who win under suspicious circumstances do not live long or fruitful lives as a result of this, which also serves to deter future competitors from employing unscrupulous methods.

HERONTEA: Set. Ward in the city of KHADON, from where the DIGERATI rose to power.

HEROPHO: Set. Fortified settlement in the far south east of the HENDECARCHY of CHLORIS in the south of MALAN, and the centre of a thriving granite quarrying region. The main settlement has a population of around 2,000 people, whose dwellings surround an ancient hilltop fortress. The rest of the population is scattered in the mining settlements and towns in the surrounding regions, operating dozens of granite quarries there (Pop. c. 6,000).

HERPETA: Set. Settlement in the region of HITHRA in the north of THE SURRACH. Its main industry is coal-mining (Pop. c. 5,900).

HERRU: Mil. Str. Fortress in the west of KHAMID, overlooking the SEA OF PHARESES⁽¹⁾.

HERTURI: Pol. Soc. Bus. PATRICIAN HOUSE in the KORACHANI EMPIRE known for being a member of the ATROPI HOUSES. Its ancestral home was the city of ILLMNEM and following its abandonment, the House is now based in the CAMASSIAN STRONGHOLD, with smaller cells across AZAZEM

Its main role within the cooperative is the acquisition and correct treatment of carcasses purchased from the $\underline{MORTUARY\ CULTS}$, which are processed and used in the manufacture of \underline{DROSS} . See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

HERUU: Set. Small city in the south west of the BARRIER LANDS, in the SEKUIAN Expanse. Its main industry is the manufacture of jewellery – specifically objects made from the rubies mines in the surrounding region (Pop. c. 14,000).

HESARR: Set. Fortified settlement in the west of VENTHIR, in the eastern foothills of the AHSET Mountains. Venthiri legends claim the settlement is built atop an ancient witches altar with roots in the ancient NATHI kingdom (Pop. c. 3,800).

HESAS: Rvr. River in the east of VENTHIR, flowing south from sources in the SHANA Highlands^(2.), into the river MAPHANI^(2.).

HESHA: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the south of ROMOREA (2.) overlooking the border east with HOGGOTHA ISZ. Incursions from SERAPIS are not uncommon, and the guards of Hesha are amongst the most resilient in all of Romorea.

HESHEREMA: Dre. Myt. Mys. The KORACHANI word for the DREAMWORLD. There is little mention of the Hesherema in pre-imperial myths and ONEIROMANTIC lore, and it became more prominent as the KORACHANI EMPIRE spread across the INNER SEA and encountered other people's traditions.

HESHIACHAN: Set. Major coastal city in the south of LAASKHA, at the mouth of river SAARATAPARR. It is a major centre of manufacturing and is home to the MINASTERIA^(2.) of COGNITARIIN. A scrap city, known as EREKAAN, has appeared on the other side of the bank (Pop. c. 700,000).

HESIA: Rui. Ancient FOURTH AGE city, located in the c-south east of THETIS. It was once coastal, though the retreat of the SEA OF ERUTHEA has left it landlocked, some 35-miles from the present coastline. Its people were masterful engineers and experts of water management, and they were famed for their great cisterns and aqueducts, the latter of which stretched to the north for many miles, and parts of which can still be found, albeit in ruin. The extant city of IROTUR continues this tradition and is well-known for its own vaulted cisterns, which have allowed it to become the metropolis that it is today.

HESIGH MAR: Geo. Badlands region in the north of HABOT, to the south of the MAR SAHIGH Mountains and the north west of the EKAGHI Mountains.

HESIR TA': Set. Mining settlement in the east of KHULL. Its main industry is quarrying of hematite and azurite, which are used to make red and blue pigments, respectively. The industry has been working continuously since the time of the SORCERER-KINGS (3.), and it is the largest city in the region, serving as an administrative centre to all surrounding quarries (Pop. c. 13 400)

HESON: Mil. Str. Major fort in the north of AETHIOS, guarding the SOULSTONE quarries in the DAGESARETH region.

HESPER: Set. Coastal settlement in the north east of OD MEGINNAS^(1.). Its main industry is fishing (Pop. c. 8,200).

HESPERA: 1. Geo. District in the CITADEL MOUNT of DUN SVARR (later CATACHIS), in present-day ARKOS^(1.); notable for being the birthplace of the eponymous gardens that appeared in c. 1375 RM.

2. Soc. Str. Flo. Hanging gardens in ARKOS^(1.) characterised by loggias hewn from the cliff-faces of natural mesas and spires, and hanging vines. The Hespera gardens first appeared in 1374 RM in the district of Hespera^(1.), in DUN SVARR, originally as an ornamental device to bring colour to the rocky mounts, though as aqueducts and pumping technologies were innovated, the gardens became invaluable in providing the populations of the mounts with food.

By 1600 RM they had become widespread in all of the CITADEL MOUNTS, with most palaces maintaining their own decorative Hespera gardens while the lower mounts saw more functional varieties.

HESPERIUS, PROLOCUTOR-GENERAL OF NOACHIS: m. Pol. Alc. Per. (B. 3969 RM) Ruler of NOACHIS in VÂRR from 3992 RM. Hesperius was an accomplished ALCHEMIST, blending TECHNARCANE skills with more esoteric arts believed to have been learnt during a sojourn in the south

HESSAR: Set. Agricultural settlement in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of PALUS^(1.). It is a major farming community (Pop. c. 2,200).

HESSRIL: Riv. River dominating the north west of ALAM BETHYL, flowing south east for 780-miles from sources in the AZAKKALIN Massif, before meeting its parent, the river KEGHOK. HESTA: Pol. Duchy of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of UCHRON.

HESTOS: Set. Small city in the north east of CHANDOS, overlooking the far south of SKAROS (Pop. c. 18,000).

HESUS: Lak. Major lake in the c of MENISCEA, which links to the SEA OF SIABA, via the course of river CEMER.

HESYCHASTIC TEACHINGS: see HESYCHASM.

HESYCHASM: Int. Mys. Sup. His. Ancient mystic traditions and teachings that espouses divine stillness and serenity, through which a MORTAL can theoretically attain 'divinity', with the term divinity in this instance meaning a state utterly above and beyond what mortals can hope to achieve with material training – immortality, omnipotence, omniscience, and so-on.

The teachings date back to the THIRD AGE, in what is now the ARID TRIPTYCH, and were believed lost in the mid-FOURTH AGE, until the trusted SAOSTANAN advisor SATHEP used them while undertaking a spiritual quest in the SHAMAL desert. He returned to SAOSTANA in 176 RM a changed being, emaciated, skeletal and desiccated, his cranium bearing a large hole through which he said his spirit^(1.) had departed his body in a ritual of self-trepanation that he claims granted him immortality and great magickal power – something his people, after being subjected to his rule for over 4-millennia cannot refute.

Over the years, he imparted parts of the Hesychastic Teachings to his acolytes, known as ARCHIDOXES, who through his generosity became powerful ARCHSHAPERS in their own right, rising to positions of authority within Sarastro.

HETARIS: Set. Small city in the south of the tribe of LINARIS, in the south of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. It is a major source of wood, including some exotic varieties, that are exported via the SALT ROAD (Pop. c. 12,000).

HETAT: Set. Small city in the north east of BANT, in the north east of the CARCHEMISHI PENINSULA^(1.), in the east of SAMMAEA. It emerged from an iron-mining boomtown in c. 3830 RM, and though its mines are still in use, today its main industry is primarily metallurgy, and it is known for its iron foundries (Pop. c. 16,300).

HETEPHERES THE STRANGLER, QUEEN OF VENTHIR: Pol. Rel. SPHINX and fierce paranoid ruler of the nation of VENTHIR since 201 RM. She is descended from the NATHI sphinxes and is believed by many scholars to be amongst the last few members of her race (certainly the most infamous), though the creatures' reclusiveness and her slaying of her kin makes this impossible to prove.

The first known record of her existence is in the VENATHI EMPIRE in - 3 RM, where she ostentatiously entered the city of TEIRA under the light of the IVORY MOON Siella. By then the Nathi sphinxes become the victims of a series of genocidal wars at the hands of the Nathi empire, and by c. -309 RM they had been all-but destroyed. It is thought that Hetepheres was born early in this time of conflict and came to Teira bearing the bitterness and anger of her people, carrying the last memories and hive-thoughts of her kin with her, which may explain her later madness. Records from the time indicate that she offered the humans of Teira redemption of their 'sins'. A cult of personality appeared around and by c. -1 RM she had become espoused as a living-deity and a symbol of her races' martyrdom.

Followers of Hetepheres would travel across the region, disseminating her word, sermonising anyone who would listen. But Teira was but one city amongst dozens, and it was the cities of VENATH and MERAKHI that remained the most influential. Many opposed this new cult, and in 8 RM an army of her opponents marched against Teira, seizing it and capturing a great deal of her followers. Most were slain with the others exiled to the west and south. Hetepheres left the city and settled the ruins of ENAATH with what remained of her followers. The abandoned ruins were franticly rebuilt and fortified over the next years, with an exodus of people from surrounding cities flocking to her, and by 18 RM Enaath had burgeoned into a fledgling city known as HETEPHEROPOLIS. Despite the persecution of her followers in Teira, the two cities later became allies, forming a new powerbase that the western cities of Venath struggled against.

Over the coming decades mystery-cults began to appear in most Venathi cities. Those that were discovered were destroyed by the Venathi government, but their popularity was undeniable and by c. -50 RM the cults were an open secret and had become an unofficial religion in the region, deep-rooted in Teira, Hetepheropolis and TAAR AL (later known as TAAROM). It was amid this rise in her cult that Hetepheres disappeared after a large sermon at her main temple in Hetepheropolis in 57 RM. This would lead to her deification and the official funding of the CULT OF THE SPHINX later that year. In subsequent years the church would grow to such strengths that it brought about the unification of the regions' people and the subsequent birth of Venath as a true nation in 64 RM.

The Venathi empire's growth was explosive and by 132 RM it was in control of present-day SARASTRO, NÁRTHEL, TARATI⁽¹⁾ and NAARETH. But its expansion had been too rapid, and its ruling ASANATE struggled to maintain its borders. The death of its ruler LABAISINGH THE STRONG in battle against TZALLRACH in 151 RM fractured its government. That, coupled with the growth of the KORACHANI EMPIRE to the west would leave the Venathi empire ruined by c. 170 RM. The region was allowed to crumble, its once-proud cities fell into strife and decline.

It was only the return of Hetepheres in 194 RM that stalled this decay. The reappearance of the sphinx-goddess renewed the hopes of her beleaguered people, and her armies conquered cities that remained loyal to the Asanate. Her worship became near-universal amid the remnants of the Venathi empire and her power and influence waxed exponentially. The capital in Venath had been struggling against a slowly retreating coastline for centuries and in 201 RM Hetepheres renamed the region Venthir, and had the capital moved to Hetepheropolis, which by then had become the largest city in the region.

Her rule was harsh out of necessity. The region as still unstable after decades of chaos and law had to be enforced. Martial law restored order and trade to the region, which served to further unite the cities. The Korachani empire continued to expand, taking IO in 212 RM, and declaring war on Sarastro soon-after. Disillusioned by the realities that beset her people, Hetepheres became insular, secreting herself deep within her ODAH-chambers in her temple-complex in Hetepheropolis, leaving the handful of rulers she had not slain following her rise to power to rule on her behalf. In 232 RM they attempted to warn her of the Korachani empire's war against Sarastro, but she denied them audience, leaving them to cope with the threat of war alone. In 233 RM they sent reinforcements into Sarastro, realising that if Sarastro were to fall Venthir would be next to draw the attentions of Korachan. This was in direct contradiction of her laws.

This war continued unbeknownst to her for decades and it was only in 318 RM, when an imperial lictor infiltrated her temple-complex and spoke with her, telling her of the war and of the Asanate's defving her edicts. She emerged from her chamber, slaying slaves, servants, and generals alike. Following this, she ordered her armies to withdraw from Sarastro against the urges of her advisors. Upon their return she strangled her generals and their families. Hundreds lay dead in the palace, its floors slick with blood. This act earnt her the moniker of 'Strangler-Queen', which she propagated in a bid to spread fear. The awe this instilled in her people was palpable and the next years were dominated by the erection of colossi, temples and other idols in her name - a constant reminder of her presence, though she herself had retreated into her lead-lined templecomplex once more. Outside Venthiri borders, Korachan took Sarastro in 339 RM, with the earlier withdrawal of the sphinx's armies partially to blame. Imperial pressure on Venthiri borders increased, until in 359 RM, when events took a sudden change.

The details behind Queen Hetepheres' abdication of Venthir to Korachan are buried beneath millennia of history and are likely buried on purpose. What is undeniable from imperial records is that the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR, alongside a massive retinue of his loyal followers, entered Venthir early in 359 RM on a diplomatic visit. Staying in her palace in Hetepheropolis, he and his diplomats were treated to displays of Venthiri armies on parade and other propagandist shows of strength. Hetepheres emerged from her solitude and spoke with Malichar on occasion, even appearing publicly, drawing the crazed admirations of her people, despite her haggard appearance. During a tour of the nation late in the year, Malichar spoke with her alone in the ruins of the ancient settlement of MAPHANI(3), sowing what are believed to be the seeds of corruption that would take root 2-years later when Hetepheres unceremoniously prostrated herself before him and his armies, effectively handing Venthir over to Korachan. The monument of SYMARI was constructed in honour of the occasion, its monolithic height dominating the horizon of the south of Venthir.

Though it remained largely autonomous and she remained its regent, Venthir was accountable to Korachan. PATRICIAN families flowed into Venthir, bringing with them TECHNARCANA and imperial beliefs and practices. The imperial administration was fully established in Teira in 376 RM within the monolithic ACROPOLIS OF CAUR, an edifice built in true imperial design with its grand granite-and-steel architecture contrasting with the local structures. Teira became the centre of imperial influence in the region, though Hetepheropolis remained the heart of Venthiri culture. Relations with Sarastro and NÁRTHEL were reestablished, with trade flowing steadily in-and-out of both regions. Venthir prospered.

The Cult of the Sphinx was allowed to remain, though in a controlled form and as a sub-cult of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, which advocated her as a prophetess of the imperial Church from c. 380 RM, following years of religions tension. Hetepheres herself remained a recluse though was forced by imperial law to make public appearances, where it was revealed that she had become obsessed with technarcana and ORTHOSES - her retinue of advisors and politicians replaced with technarcanists, alchymists and ATRAMENTIST sycophants - her face hidden beneath an archaic stylised technarcane mask. By 575 RM the PATRICIAN HOUSE of ASHURA had risen to full power in Venthir, taking on the role of administrator, slowly becoming a hereditary monarchy that took on the title of ADONIS. Hetepheres became a cultural symbol and the custodian of Hetepheropolis, though her rule there became dark and whimsical, life for its people cheap. She would round up poor and rich alike, and pit them against each other in gladiatorial fights designed purely to sate her bloodlust. During all this she would continue to dabble in the art of technarcana and every public appearance brought with it a new ORTHOSIS - less flesh, more machine; her lifespan increased through artificial means. Few know the true reason for this, though the mysterious disappearance of a sect of scholars in 995 RM led many to believe that she was attempting to create a barrier, separating her thoughts and DREAMS from those of her kin in distant lands (sphinxes are renowned for their hive-consciousness and the ability to communicate through dreams with one another).

In 1402 RM, following a 9-year conflict that arose between technologists and ecclesiasts following the SECULAR DISSOLUTION of 1393 RM, Hetepheres had thousands of her opponents slain (their bodies displayed outside her palace in Hetepheropolis) and advocated the art of technarcana openly. A technocracy was established in Teira and the region to become a hub of technarcane arts, with colleges and manufactories increasing over the coming centuries. Seven days following her victory against the ecclesiasts in Venthir two ancient sphinxes arrived outside her palace demanding an audience, admonishing her bloodthirsty rule, blaming her for the slow degradation of their species. She killed the two, taking their skulls and wings as trophies which adorn her throne to this day. This exacerbated her obsession with technarcana and her desire to sunder her thoughts form those of her kin. In 1593 RM construction was completed on a gigantic engine deep beneath her palace, its engineers all entombed within the engine itself. None who now live know is full purpose. Hetepheres withdrew from the public following this and disappeared for centuries, emerging suddenly in 1905 RM.

Where once she had been a being of unbridled grace and savage grace, now she was a changed thing, twisted and wretched, unrecognisable save for the savagery with which she attacked technarcanists and technologists without provocation. With her armies she obliterated her nations' main industries and by 1921 RM its technarcane colleges had been destroyed, its scholars killed or exiled (with the survivors eventually founding the nation of SARAGOS). The most knowledgeable were sworn beneath her aegis and remained only as her own personal cadre to support her growing technarcane needs.

Her careless actions obliterated the golden-age of Venthir, whose wealth was the sole reason it managed to survive the ensuing centuries. Its many metropolises dwindled and strife slowly took over, with starvation spreading to its larger cities. Law broke down and the nation became a shadow of its former self.

In the years since that time her appearances became fewer and fewer; and over the next 2,000-years she was seen in public little over a dozen times, almost all appearance of which saw her attacking sects or groups or cities with her loyal technarcane armies before retreating into the shadows of her temple.

Leadership of Venthir became the sole responsibility of the Adonises of House Ashura, though Venthir would never recover from its sphinx-queen's destructiveness and apparent invulnerability. During this bitter fall, Hetepheres remained in her palace, brooding, dreaming in solitude.

In 3781, after decades of struggling to hold on to the region, Korachan abandoned Venthir to the Adonises, who finally became a royal house after centuries of being little more than stewards. Hetepheres had little role in this or the centuries of independence that followed, remaining a recluse who toyed on the people of Hetepheropolis.

HETEPHERES'S CROWN: (17,075-ft.) Geo. Highest peak of the SHENA Mountain in the c of VENTHIR.

HETEPHEROPOLIS: (once ENAATH) Set. Largest city in VENTHIR, located in its north west. It is the seat of power to QUEEN HETEPHERES. It emerged in 18 RM, and went on to become one of the largest cities in VENATH, before the collapse of the region in 151 RM.

In 194 RM Hetepheres returned to the region after being missing for decades of and established a new capital there, from where a cult of personality grew around her, eventually becoming the CULT OF THE SPHINX. The city is home to a powerful mystery-cult dedicated to the technarcane arts, which were famously outlawed in all Venthir by Hetepheres in 1921 RM who became paranoid about the power such technarcanists began to amass, leaving only those who tended to her own increasing addiction to powerful technarcane ORTHOSES.

The city is a sprawling mass of sand- and limestone structures, accented with verdigris-encrusted domes, which connect to each other in an intricate network of tiered-streets, hewn bridges and rooftop markets beneath which operate shallow wide dross farms for which it is famed. It is a major link along the eastern RED ROUTE, and its markets are filled with goods and produce from across the INNER SEA REGION (Pop. c. 2,020,000).

HETEROCHROMIA: Soc. Med. Term used for different colouration of the irises within an individual. In many legends those with heterochromia are thought to have OTHERWORLDLY blood, with one eye rooted in the MATERIAL PLANE and another in the Other. The condition is harmless and is quite common amongst the successor states of the ELDRIAN empire – including SABIA, KASPIA, and PERGOST.

HETHA: 1. Geo. Massif in the c of TARTAK, around 300-miles long and 85 wide, known for the rich marble deposits found at its feet. Ancient quarries and mines abound on its northern face, many of them clearly from past ages as weathering and vegetation are testament to. To its north lie the hills of the KARAME and in its south west is the eastern-most expanse of the ancient ANDILUTH, once sunken beneath the SEA OF BYSSOS.

2. His. Pol. Ancient culture that rose c. -200 RM and dominated the region of ROVAST in what are now the north of TARTAK, the south of JURRAS^(2.) and the east of KARAKHAS. In -87 RM council of Hetha opposed the growing autocracy of the region, leading to schism that saw Hetha divide in two and people migrating north into what would then become Jurras.

HETHA GHUR: Geo. Highland region in the north of THETIS. It's eastern-most reaches form part of the border with TETHYSIA, and it is noted for its alien succulent plants, including the AMATHIS and CYAMIS, that are largely unknown outside the region, and which thrive in the arid environments of its south western face.

HETHI: Set. Settlement in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of ALAMUT, situated along a wide, slow-moving bend in the river SARA, which its vessels fish (2. 6,200).

HETHRA: Rvr. River in the east of VENTHIR flowing for 725-miles east from the SHENA Mountains before emptying into the SEA OF HAUTIA.

HETO: Set. Settlement in the west of the tribe of LINARIS, in the south of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. Its main industry is ADAMANTINE mining (Pop. c. 7,400).

HETTA OF ABJURA: (B. 3961 RM) Pol. One of four ruling TETRARCHS of JURRAS^(2.), based in the city of ABJURA.

HETURA: Set. Caravanserai in the north of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of EDICULE⁽¹⁾, serving the trade-route north west into AHRISHEN. Since the appearance and growth of the city of NAISKA to the north, Hetura has dwindled, with many of its merchants moving there instead (Pop. c. 1,900).

HEUXERES: m. Myr. His. Per. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, a SCION of the DEMIURGE SYBARIS. He is mentioned in the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN as having carried the GATE OF GARCHUN to a new location to allow people ostracised by a new law forbidden their passage through it to use it once more. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

HEX: Mys. The result of ritual of HEXCRAFT, which manipulated the MATERIA OMNA in ways it was not intended to be, thereby making this form of mysticism inherently dangerous and distrusted. See Vol IV: Other Forms of Mysticism.

HEXCRAFT: Mys. Alternate form of MYSTICISM that debases and corrupts the very rules through which the MATERIA OMNA works. Where the act of SHAPING allows SHAPERS to use the Materia Omna to achieve supranatural results, hexcraft instead warps the Materia Omna in unnatural ways to achieve powerful results that go against the laws of nature. This is dangerous and the individual performing the HEX risks great mental and physical injury as well as irreparable damage to the hexed object, person, or the area where the hex was created, ultimately leading to material instability in which unnatural or grotesque effects occur.

Indeed, large hexes have backfired in the past creating regions of strange physical properties where individuals experience synaesthesia, water burns, gravity is inverted, or energy is created, transferred, or destroyed with disregard to the laws of nature.

As a result, hexcraft is typically frowned upon and tends to be outlawed in most civilised cultures, with practitioners forced to work in the shadows or forced to the peripheries of society where they can work in relative peace.

Hexes can be seen through ATTUNEMENT, though some shapers may have difficulty in seeing them without practice. Little is known of its roots, though passages in the Mythologia Elyden do make reference to a base form of mysticism that some take to be hexcraft, though there is no consensus on this. It is believed that the first acts of hexcraft were performed by the VALTHAS under the tutelage of the DEMIURGE TALANTEHUT, though there is little evidence to support this.

Of note is the nation of JOAPHASAR, which late in the 3rd Millennium was embroiled in a war with CEHOPHELA. In 2921 RM, desperate for a means of victory, it resorted to a great hexcraft ritual, which was intended to debilitate its foes in Cehophela. Instead, the ritual backfired, leading to the complete obliteration of the capital of IRIUD, the destruction of surrounding farmlands, and the death of most of its population. The act served as a very real example of the inherent dangers to hexcraft, causing most civilised nations to double down on this form of mysticism, though others saw the power of what it might accomplish, and instead took the event as an excuse to study its secrets in more detail.

Today, Hexcraft is practiced openly in few lands, though the governments and militaries of many nations continue to study its use under controlled conditions. See Vol IV: Other Forms of Mysticism.

HEXWOOD: Sup. For. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED forest in the south west of MAENMIST, located along a powerful LEY. The forest is situated atop a deep gorge and series of badlands, making navigation in the region difficult. The forest is dense and unnatural in growth, with branches connecting multiple trees, some across the deep chasm separating it, which his dense in fecund growth.

The region is categorised as $\underline{DANGEROUS}$ by the $\underline{KORACHANI}$ $\underline{INSTITUTE\ OF\ ATRAMENTAL\ STUDIES}.$

HEZAZ: 1. Sea. Small enclosed bay to the south of the larger BAY OF LRITHA, in the west of METHUMN.

2. Set. Coastal city in the west of METHUMN, in the south of the ZERESAN FLATS. It is named after the bay^(1.) in whose deepest inlet it was founded in c. 3920 RM. The city was funded by YEGGISH merchants looking for a sea-route through which to sell their wares. Yegg was a thriving city some 900-miles south east that thrived on the looting of a vast necropolis. Throughout the dying centuries of the FIFTH AGE OF MORTAL LIFE Yegg grew rich selling the object d'art and other riches to far nations with an interest in such things, though as the world's decay exacerbated at the end of the age, the city began to fail, leaving Hezaz without benefactors (Pop. c. 328,000).

HEZERA: Set. Settlement in the south of the island of HAR BAQRI off the north western coast of SEPAHAUNAT in the north west of SAMMAEA (Pop. c. 8,000).

HEVRA: Set. Small city in the c south of KHULL, along the course of the river UPINIS (Pop. c. 17,900).

HIADAST: Set. Coastal settlement in the north east of mainland SKAROS, overlooking the SEA OF APHOTIS. It is an industrial centre, with many small manufactories outside the city proper, making bespoke objects and parts used throughout the KORACHANI EMPIRE (Pop. c. 8,000).

HIAL: Set. PELASGOSI settlement in the WEEPING PLAINS, east of the SEA OF CYPRIA⁽¹⁾, abandoned in 3721 RM following the growth of the ATRAMENTAL FEATURE. It was once a productive manufactory that supported various satellite mining settlements, which are now deserted. The city struggled for decades as the tainted plains expanded, utilising SOFTSUITS and employing SIPHON ENGINES to help nullify its effects, though an earthquake in 3719 RM left the siphon engines destroyed, the city defenceless against the Atramental taint. After a few years of struggle, the city was abandoned and allowed to rot.

It is thought that outcasts and scavengers have populated the remains of the city, possibly resurrecting its industries, though this is little more than rumour at this point.

HIALIA: Set. City in KORACHAN, west of the GULF OF LEMAS. It has been home to the ORDER OF MALICHARIAN SISTERS since they were relocated there from ARGEA following the SUNDERING OF THE KORACHANI EMPIRE in 3705 RM (Pop. c. 29,500).

HIBERNIA: Set. Coastal city-state in the far east of Pergost, in the REHEMAZI peninsula in the far north of LLACHATUL, overlooking the GULF OF VALUS. Ruins surrounding the area, including toppled lighthouses along the frigid coast, attest to a great past, perhaps when the climate this far north was warmer.

The physical city-state is far larger than its population would otherwise suggest, again perhaps attesting to a past far greater than its present and it is the largest known settlement ever encountered by imperial ships this far north east, 'discovered' in 3453 RM.

The city is considered independent from Pergost, with its own government but the two are considered close allies and most foreign states consider them a single entity. Whenever a conclave of the Federation is called for, Hibernia will usually send an envoy to Ostoyan, out of respect for the alliance (Pop. c. 60,000).

HIDDEN CITY, the: 1. see CAMORRA.

2. see AN SIMEIA.

3. Pol. One of the SEVEN-AND-FORTY DISTRICTS of ALMAGEST, renowned for its isolation – no single road or passage leads directly into or out of the district and it is only accessible on foot from a few secluded skyways and rooftop causeways.

HIDDEN RIVER, the: see TAHUDUN.

HIDMUL: Set. Settlement in the c of VENTHIR. Its main industry is the cultivation of cotton (Pop. c. 8,000).

HIDUR: Rui. Ruined city once belonging to HRIDAN. It was abandoned in c. 2000 RM following the collapse of the small nation and its assimilation by AZAZEM.

HIDUSTHUNÉ: f. Sup. Per. (D. 4004 RM) Powerful SHAZGINI shaper who spent the latter decades of her life orchestrating guerilla attacks on Ossielan strongholds west of the EGETAKH Mountains. Following years of successful raids into Ossiel, she was killed by the forces of the ARCHZEALOT ZILETRA, and her body added to the famed PYRAMID OF ZILETRA – the first to grace it in some years.

HIDYL: Set. Small fortified city in the west of ALAM BETHYL, in the territory of ESAUN^(1.). It is the last settlement of note along the route that leads to the HALL OF MARTYRS (Pop. c. 12,000).

HIEMAL: Sup. Rnk. Caste of SABIAN SHAPERS devoted to the cold and snow, commonly used to keep mountain passes and longhouses safe. Their working conditions are harsh, and they traditionally serve a ten-year term before retiring. Their base is in the COLDPEAK, a citadel in the Metun Kor mountain.

HIERARCHS: see IONIC HIERARCHS.

HIERODULE: Pol. Rnk. Male leaders of the Church of the Volute in Naareth, who are responsible for choosing new Matridules through the RITE OF THE VOLUTE.

HIEROGOGUE: Mil. Priests who march alongside the legions and irregular forces of the KORACHANI armies, blessing warriors and weapons before battle and consecrating acquired territories in the name of the UNDYING MACHINE.

HIEROGOTH: Pol. Local rulers in VÂRR between c. -300 - 500 RM. Historically, they were powerful figures; artificers who, through their mastery of metalworking (symbolic of their mastery over the world and its mysteries), also enjoyed divine privilege as emissaries and priests of their god, SOLUM, who ICONOCLASTS^(1,) would later make a saint of the UNDYING MACHINE. Over time their religious significance lessened and they became regional leaders, akin to feudal lords of other cultures; with their king the ANAX-LORD.

Between c. 100 – 500 RM they were subjected to KORACHANI propaganda by imperial dogmatists and EXOCRINES, who slowly steered consecutive Anax-lords towards Korachani culture, ending in c. 1000 with the full annexation by imperial DOMNITORS. The HIEROGOTHS maintained their regional rule, though were subjugated by many imperial ideals they did not agree with. Many defected, either funding independent states farther north (resulting in the majority of the RHAMIAN city-states), outside the jurisdiction of the Domnitors, or being executed as traitors. Those who remained under the Domnitors were forced to defer to the imperial religion and marry into PATRICIAN HOUSES who came to rule the regions in their place. When the Domnitors departed in 3412 RM they left a temporary governing force in the form of the INTERREGES, under whose rule the Hierogoths were granted some leeway, which was further increased with their abandonment in 3791 RM.

HIEROGRAM: Soc. Rel. Obj. Wrought iron pendants made and worn by the HIEROGOTHS of VÂRR and their followers that bear the symbol of SOLUM. Following imperial dominance in Vârr and the conversion of Solum into a saint of the UNDYING MACHINE, the pendants came to be worn by any, including KORACHANI immigrants into Vârr, as a means of integrating their cultures.

HIEROMARTYR: Rel. Adulated religious figures of TETHYSIA, whose selfless lives of prayer and contemplation elevates them to the status of saints, living or dead. The practice of austerities often leads to their deaths, where great temples are erected around their bodies. These sites become places of spiritual power to the mystics and priests of Tethysia, who claim to draw power from them (this may be latent powers of SHAPING, though the source of such powers remains in dispute).

HIEROMONARCHS, the: Pol. Official rulers in RHEA after the death of the AURADIAN DYNASTY in c. 3192 RM. Following the religious uprisings in the region at the time, the priests gained control of the fragile throne and rose to power. The first priestly monarch, MALIKAN of DHERBA, instated many laws and decrees, most of which remain in place today and which form an integral part of Rhean law and culture.

The Hieromonarchs moved the Rhean capital to MARECHOTTAY in 3183 RM, where their rule became increasingly powerful. In the north the COURT OF DREAMS gained a large following and in 3327 RM they opposed the Hieromonarchs, leading to 15-years of war that ended in 3242 RM with the Hieromonarchs withdrawal from Rhea, which fractured the nation in two – Rhea in the north and IACIO in the south, where the Hieromonarchs maintain their status and following to this day.

HIEROMONK: Rel. Pol. Religious leaders in PORPHYR, who oversee the construction of the ARKS OF PORPHYR, and the rituals that have arisen around them. They are amongst the most powerful and influential individuals in all of Porphyr. They became the rulers of the now-extinct nation of ZOLOK in 1378 RM, supplanting an ancient monarchy that had stagnated for centuries, and remained a powerful cultural force, after Zolok gave way to Porphyr in 1607 RM.

Today they are overseers of the worship of the Arks of Porphyr.

HIERONÉSIMUS: Sup. Rnk. Historically, in KHAMID and what are now the BROKEN LANDS, a caste of PHAROANTS who once fulfilled a role similar to that of high-priests; their abilities with the Firmament and standing within the Firmamental community making them powerful and respected figures.

HIEROPHANT: Rel. Rnk. The priests of the ORDER OF THE TAELLANNIR in LOEGRESS^(1,1), who saw to the needs of their living-deity, THE TAELLANNIR, and were the first to decipher her cryptic words following her miraculous live transmutation into an OTHERWORLDER, bypassing death, in 3139 RM.

For hundreds of years, they served her and acted as priests, until her abandonment of her people in 3919 RM, after which they became stewards of the AETHERIAL THRONE, ruing on her behalf.

HIEROPHANT, SOLAR: Rel. Rnk. Leaders of the AUREATE FELLOWSHIP, the state religion of METHUMN. They oversee all major rituals of the church and serve as deans of the various temple-schools around the nation.

HIFAYA: Set. Small city in the c south west of VENTHIR, along the southern bank of the river TEIRIS. It is an industrial centre (Pop. c. 5,400).

HIGH-ASSESSOR: Mil. Rnk. Low commanding rank within the SANCTIFIED ORDERS OF THE INQUISITION, denoting the leaders of the ASSESSORS. A High-Assessor is in command of as many as 21 Assessors and may have various adjuncts under their jurisdiction, and answers directly to an ASSESSOR-GENERAL.

Due to their role, High-assessors are privy to the local happenings and current events in their assigned territories through the actions of their assessors, and are able to filter this information to their own superiors for further investigation and analysis, as needed.

HIGH BASRETH, UNIVERSITY OF: Edu. Str. Major university of naturalism in the CITY OF ALMAGEST.

HIGH-BLOOD: Soc. Lan. Pol. Colloquial term within KORACHANI cities used in reference to the PATRICIAN, magnate and merchant-prince classes – generally in reference to those born into freedom. The term is often used by worker-slaves and HELOTS in a derogatory term.

HIGH-CITADEL OF KHADON: His. Pol. Str. PRE-IMPERIAL name of the BASTION OF STEEL in KHADON, KORACHAN. Originally constructed in 106 RM on a bluff some miles outside the city, the modern city came to envelop it. A beautiful imposing structure of white marble, it displayed the architectural advancements of the day, with studded iron girders and buttresses framing polished white marble and stained-glass skylights. Truly, it was a product of the city-states' wealth.

The citadel served as the home of the ruling family of Khadon until 9 RM, when the newly-rise ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR moved the capital to Khadon; the rulers of Khadon having sworn fealty to him some years earlier, becoming his closest aides and administrators. They donated the palace to Malichar, who set about constructing the Bastion of Steel in its place.

HIGH-CITY, the: see AELGHILLA.

HIGH CITY OF REDEER: Set. City in the region of CAESURA in the c of THE SURRACH, known for its high-caste of Atramentists who specialise in Oneiromancy researching DREAM-TAINTED lands. Its members are known to undertake expeditions to the tainted lands of SOMNIAL, to the north east of ETUA (Pop. c. 33,000).

HIGH-CONSTELLAR MUDELESTI: m. Pol. Per. (B. c. 3921 RM) Personal CONSTELLAR to the LADY AEGIS since 3962 RM. Rumours abound that their relationship is more than professional, though few would dare speak so in public. Regardless of the mutterings of the unwashed masses, there is a degree of speculation amongst the high courts of the HENDECARCHIES that the Lady has favoured the KOLCHISI envoy over others

HIGH CONSULITE, IMPERIAL: Pol. More commonly-known as the CONSULITE, the regent and second-in command to the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR in KORACHAN, rules from the BASTION OF STEEL in KHADON.

HIGH DEL: Cur. Currency of the AUTOCRACY OF OTINTH. Very little is known of the currency and few coins have made their way into the world at large due to the insular nature of Otinth and its refusal to trade with the world market. As a result, they are valuable on the collectors' market. See Vol II: Currency and Coinage in Elyden.

HIGH-EMPIRE OF KORACHAN: Pol. Following the SUNDERING OF THE KORACHANI EMPIRE in 3705 RM, the official name given to the part of the empire that maintained control of its territories north of the INNER SEA, including the KORACHANI PENINSULA and various vassal states, including AZAZEM, PELASGOS, SKAROS, and VÂRR, amongst others.

The term High-empire is rarely used in day-to-day life and is restricted to political and other official capacities, with most people simply using the name Korachan or simply the word empire.

HIGH-INQUISITOR: Atr. Rnk. Org. Well known rank within most of the Orders of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION OF THE KORACHANI EMPIRE, originally appearing within the ARÂTHUAHI ORDER soon after its founding, but eventually being adopted by others, leading to the ubiquitous use of the term Inquisition as a colloquial term for the Orders.

High-Inquisitors forgo direct work in the field in exchange for a leadership role in which they exert their control over a particular territory or base and all agents within it. They typically surround themselves with individuals from various imperial organisations, each of whom are experts in their chosen field, serving as advisors and adjutants.

HIGH-KING: also 'High-monarch'. Pol. Title of the ruler of the CITY-KINGDOMS OF THE HARÉSHK, based in the city of CARIA^(6.). The current High-king is CAERAN IV.

HIGH-KING's GUIDE TO HOLLOWAYS: Voc. Rnk. One of many fanciful antiquated positions in the expansive royal court of THE HARÉSHK. Unlike many others, the High King's Guide to Holloways is an important role, and its bearer spends their days travelling CARIA (4) and the rest of the City kingdoms, cataloguing its many thoroughfares and HOLLOWAYS, noting any changes, repairs that may be required, or updates to routes that might be needed. The title goes back millennia and is a coveted one in Caria, and though not hereditary, having a parent or grandparent as the Guide to Holloways greatly increases one's chances of following in their footsteps.

HIGH KORACHANI: see KORACHANI, HIGH.

HIGH-MARSHALL: Mil. Rnk. Rank within the TEMUJAN military.

HIGH-MASTER OF THE PLAINSLEAGUE: Mil. Rnk. In TEMUIA, title of the ruler (or KHAN) or the elder of the GREATTOWN of DUARIAHAHN, who sits at the head of the Table of the PLAINSLEAGUE. The present highmaster is YESUGHAN.

HIGH-QUAESTOR: Rnk. Pol. High ranking members of the GRIGORIAN ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION. They are senior officers who oversee large regions of the EMPIRE, coordinating the activities of multiple units and agents across those territories. They maintain complex networks of spies and informants, and by necessity have close links with other High Quaestors within the empire.

HIGH TEMPLAR KNIGHT: Pol. Rnk. The ruler of the city of OBYRYTH and effectively the chairperson of the council of TEMPLAR KNIGHTS^(2.) who oversee the coalition of TEMPLAR STATES. The present High Templar Knight is FARASKER APHEMA.

HIGH-TEMPLE OF TERATHA: Rel. Str. Temple and centre of the DHEAN faith known as THE TERATHA. The temple was constructed in the Dhean city of ORA (3.) in c. -905 RM following the rise in popularity of the religion that was brought about by the penning of the BOOK OF TERATHA in -943 RM by the HALFBLOOD LARA. The temple was destroyed and looted by CONTHIAN armies in -813 RM, with the book and other relics (amongst them the body of Lara, who died in -831 RM) thought stolen or destroyed.

HIGHLY DANGEROUS: Sup. The second-most harmful class used by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES to categorise regions of ATRAMENTALLY TAINT. Travel within areas designated as highly dangerous is discouraged, even by those making use of SOFTSUITS, TECHNARCANE protection, or MAGICKAL shields. Exposure to highly dangerous Atramentally tainted areas is often debilitating if not outright deadly, and it's impossible for mortals to spend any prolonged period in such an area without eventually dying to the effects. Even with the protection afforded by the aforementioned artificial aids an individual is unlikely to survive prolonged exposure to highly dangerous Atramental taint.

Few unprotected settlements are located in highly dangerous Atramentally tainted areas, and those that are, are invariably guarded by multiple SIPHON ENGINE arrays and people travelling outside may still need to wear softsuits.

HIJIRIT: Set. Small city in the south east of PHYRR. It once formed a part of the busy NACRE ROAD trade-route, though when MAENMIST closed its borders to outsiders in c. 3960 RM it left the route sundered in two, with Hijirit becoming the easternmost stop in its western portion of the trail. The NACRE LEAGUE, by then a close ally of the Phyrran IMPERIARCH and their TECHNARCHS, appropriated the city, converting its warehouse into military depots and bases for its forces, becoming an important staging ground for its attack on Maenmist in the early days of the NACRE WAR.

Today the city is surrounded by decades-old artillery emplacements, many of which have fallen into disuse as the front line has slowly moved east, as well as craters and vast areas levelled by Maenmisti bombardments. Despite its importance, the city has waned since the outbreak of the war, with many people choosing to move west as refugees, with those remaining benign drafted into the war effort in some way or another, either producing food for troops, working in military manufactories or being drafted as soldiers (Pop. c. 18,000).

HIKARE: 1. (B. 2052 – 2136 RM) His. Pol. A NOMARCH from the city of LUCCITARIA in TZALLRACH, who in 2073 RM began a political campaign to unite the four states (KHUN^(2.), LURIUM^(2.), MOETIA^(1.), and NADAIRA^(2.)), arranging marriages between the families of the ruling ONARCHS. In 2093 RM he was successful in uniting the four Onarch families through marriage and political relations – with him as husband of the to the Moetian princess. Using his power, he secured the support of the other Onarchs and in 2101 RM he was declared king of a united CHARATH – renamed CHÂR MATHI, of which he was the first ANARCH. He ruled until his death in 2136 RM, and created a stable foundation and values on which Tzallrach would flourish for close to two millennia.

2. Art. Arc. Gigantic Sphinx statue in the east of TZALLRACHI named after the eponymous king, though likely dating back to the early mortal ages and possibly created by a DEMIURGE. The sphinx was monumental in size, no less than 8-miles long.

HIKMA: Set. Small city in the far south of LIDEA, along the course of the river SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾. It is known for its caste of wise men who devote their lives to asceticism in the name of the UNDYING MACHINE (Pop. c. 13.000).

HILAAH: Set. Small city in the c-south east of PNESSA, forming part of a national trade-route linking the interior of Pnessa with the more populated west (Pop. c. 15,000).

HILAQR: Int. Geo. Geometric maze-like structure in the c. of the RASALAGH badlands to the north of AQUARIIA, in the south west of ALAM BETHYL, in the territory of BOTHUAR^(1.).

The maze is labyrinthine and filled with hewn bridges, tunnels and dead ends. It is expansive, covering some 200-square-miles, and its source is unknown.

HILARRA: Rvr. River in the north of AQUARIIA, flowing south for 420-miles from sources in the BLACK MOUNTAINS, before meeting its parent, the river ISARRA.

HILASMA: Set. Coastal settlement in the west of THE SURRACH in the region of DAYLAM. It gathers ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED water from the NAMEGHA and distils it into a lubricant used in technarcane engines (Pop. c. 15,000).

HILEOTRA: Mil. Str. Coastal fortress in the PANTHEON ISLES, in the east of LLACHATUL. It is the largest of many academies where mercenaries and marines are trained to escort merchant vessels across the archipelago, and it is also used as a base for part of the Pantheon Isles' navy.

HILL OF THE BLOOD MOON: (6,380-ft.) Geo. Rocky hill to the west of the city of Parvis in eastern KARAKHAS.

HILL OF SWORDS, the: Rel. Soc. Generic term for a religious custom common in the KORACHANI EMPIRE and, to a lesser extent, other regions where the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE is the dominant faith. The SWORD is a potent religious symbol to members of the Church of the Undying Machine and is also considered a sign of virility in the empire.

Swords were also used as markers of the dead – appearing in cemeteries as headstones and monuments, often in stylised form. The discovery of DROSS has since led to slow disappearance of cemeteries as bodies are now repurposed for use in the dross industry, though the tradition of swords as markers of the dead remains. Some settlements will designate a hill as a location where the dead will be honoured, with swords being used as memorials or markers.

Most will contain a few dozen swords, but a rare few have become infamous for the sheer number of swords that have appeared there over the years. There are two notable Hill of Swords' – one outside KHADON in KORACHAN, and another outside AGLAIA^(2.) in AZAZEM – each of which has thousands of swords of all size and material – some rusted, or oversized and useless, some concrete and others in the form of temples.

HILLACHAN: Rui. Abandoned city in the c of KHARKHARADONTIS, 15-miles north of the SEPULCHRAL PALACE, in the c north east of SAMMAEA. It is possibly the most well-known city of the now-abandoned KINGDOM OF THE HOLY LAND OF KHARKHARADONTIS, which was a failed colony engineered in c. 2800 RM by HOUSE AMBTOR, with aid from the KORACHANI EMPIRE. The city was founded in 3036 RM, at a time when the Kingdom was already in steady decline and it lasted barely 20-years, being abandoned in 3055 RM after an ATRAMENTAL disaster left most of its protective SIPHON ENGINES destroyed, and its people corrupted beyond chance of rescue. This was to be the final blow to the venture, and House Ambtor abandoned the Holy Land in c. 3060 RM. No attempts were made to reclaim the city from the ATRAMENTAL TAINT and it was allowed to decay, a harsh signal to pilgrims undertaking the SHADOW MARCH.

Some PILGRIMS claim to have met the descendants of the city's survivors, still lurking in the ruins, though such claims are disputed by scholars, who maintain that no mortal can survive for any length of time in the region, let alone populate it. There is speculation that the ruins were resettled by plagi some centuries ago, though there have been no official expeditions to the ruin to date to ascertain this.

HILLS OF THE ANCESTORS: Rel. Geo. Hilly region in the c of AHRISHEN, where many ancestral burial mounds, cairns and standing stones are found. Though the place is ancient and hasn't been used in millennia, it is still revered by Ahrisheni priests, the land there is considered sacred.

HILEN: Ind. Set. Mining conurbation in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of EDICULE^(1.), in the eastern face of the SACHAR highlands. The mines produce primarily marble and fine-quality limestone (Pop. c. 6,400).

HILOII: Set. Major city in the c east of PNESSA (Pop. c. 80,000).

HIMERAN: His. Pol. Soc. Historic mercantile PATRICIAN HOUSE that, alongside the houses of KYDOR, LYCTUS and MELIA, was a major political presence in TARATI⁽¹⁾, originating as a puppet of the governing body in c. 1100 RM and becoming part of the ruling TETRAN by c. 1300 RM. The Tetran was overthrown by dissidents called THE AVATARS in 3013 RM, with their leaders executed and their followers expelled from the small nation. The house remained active in PELASGOS and VÂRR following the fall of the Tetran, though eventually dwindled, dying out in c. 3800 RM in the wake of hardships experienced following the SUNDERING OF THE KORACHANI EMPIRE in 3705 RM. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

HIMET: Mil. Str. Fortress in the north west of THE OLD FOREST.

HIMMILCAR FERDOUS: m. Mil. Pol. Per. (B. 3911 RM) GRANDMASTER of the VÁMAN ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION since 3973 RM. Born into a FREEMAN family with a long history of service to the KORACHANI EMPIRE, he exhibited exceptional intelligence and a strong sense of duty from a young age, as well as an aptitude for the ATRAMENTA, where he studies to become an ANAMNREAR. He rose within the ranks of the Order, spending most of his days as a paladin within the ORDER OF THE SEPULCHRAL PALACE, where he earnt many commendations, eventually becoming a High Warden before being elected to Grandmaster.

He is known for his aloof, somewhat quirky personality, and his extensive ORTHOSES and TECHNARCANE modifications (many of which were acquired during his tour of duty within the SEPULCHRAL PALACE, and which are believed to greatly enhance his strength and fortitude). Indeed, he cares little for the petty squabbles of other grandmasters or the aspirations of his lessers, and considers everything, including his own life, as secondary to the protection of the UNDYING MACHINE, and the sanctity of the imperial government, through which the dominance of the Atramenta can continue.

High ranking members of the order claim that Ferdous began receiving visions of the Undying Machine during his years protecting the Sepulchral Palace, which have guided his hand ever since. Ferdous is also known to possess one of the largest private collections of Atramental tomes and artifacts. His personal library is said to contain forbidden texts and ancient knowledge that only he can access.

HIN PASRA: Set. City in the c-south east of SURUTUR, along the course of river EHIBEL (Pop. c. 40,000).

HINARAD: Set. City in the west of LHACCIDA. It forms a part of the ISHMMARRAN TRAIL and caters to the many merchants and travellers that cross through it (Pop. c. 52,500).

HINDAN DEEP, the: Sea. Large lagoon in the south west of WESTERN SAMMAEA, to the north of the SEA OF AXONIN along the sea border between BELEGOR in the west and LIEVTHRA in the east.

The sea is interesting in that it is incredibly deep. It is largely lifeless, and what marine life is found there is almost invariably trapped there after having getting lost from the barrier shallows to the south. In antiquity its depth served to divide neighbouring peoples who were already isolated across the land due to the difficult terrain to the south of the TALENTARI Mountains.

Local legends claim that its deepest reaches (as yet undiscovered despite various deep-sea diving expeditions) are home to the soft-stoned ruins of an ancient coastal empire. Rumours of sunken treasure fuel intermittent interest in its waters, and many have died over the years in the fruitless pursuit of these riches.

HINDESSEL: Myt. Leg. His. Str. The labyrinthine fortress of the DEMIURGE

ASHTERATH, who created it following his epiphany during the tale of ASHTERATH AND ACHAIAH. Consumed by guilt over his actions, he withdrew from the world deep in the fortress, which he populated with dragons and other scaled aberrations. there, he fell to ennui and grief, allowing the SCION TALMESH to defeat him and steal the Dawn Crown.

He later emerged, consumed with a deep hatred of his brother RACHANAEL who had abused him for many years. From Hindessel he amassed a great army and marched to his brother's lands, beginning the DRAGON WARS.

Following his defeat and banishment at the hands of his sister TALANTEHUT, the fortress was allowed to fall into ruin. Most of its denizens died without his aegis, but some escaped, populating the lands of Sammaea, their descendants remaining there to this day.

HINGIL: Sea. Bay to the west of the BRINE SEA, separating the tribe HAVATH in the south east of MULCIBER from the nation of ELEKHID. The bay is the estuary of the river POTHA.

HINNOM, THE VALLEY: Geo. A great valley that leads to the SEPULCHRAL PALACE in DAEKYN, from the south west, and is generally unseen by those undertaking THE SHADOW MARCH. After the DEMIURGE RACHANAEL'S imprisonment in the Pit of Daekyn, he was dragged by his spiritual son, the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR, through the Valley of Hinnom atop to the rise Tophel, atop which the LEADEN THRONE and later the Sepulchral Palace were created.

HINOL, ROYAL HOUSE OF: Pol. His. Ruling HALFBLOODED family of ZHARIAH^(1.) from 2733 RM until its ousting amidst civil reforms in 3913 RM.

The House fractured when king IAQRASHON III died in 2917 RM, leaving two legitimate heirs — his twin son IAQRASHA and daughter IAQRADENNE. Though Iaqrasha was the true heir, with the line of succession normally passing to a male heir, his sister nevertheless believed that she, being older, deserved the throne.

The kingdom erupted into a bloody civil war that lasted for almost thirty years, which ended only with the brother's defeat in 2939 RM and the coronation of his sister as the queen of Zhariah. His followers and armies were forced to bend the knee to her, though they never accepted her as the rightful ruler and in 2941 RM they exiled themselves, moving west into the SHAROOK Highlands, where they established a base before moving farther west, eventually subjugating the nation of QARALAM, where a new sultanate was founded.

The border between Qaralam and Zhariah remained a hotbed of military activity with the two nations rarely at peace for long. This state lasted for centuries until the two eventually reached an accord in 3223 RM, though Zharian fundamentalists saw this as a sign of weakness and turned on the House of Hinol. This Fundamentalist group would grow over the next centuries, eventually leading to another war that would see the kingdom fractured, its southern territories slipping away to give rise to the nation of Shezaliah in 3502 RM. The House of Hinol proved resilient, surviving this, but limped onwards for the next centuries until it was overthrown in 3913 by an anti-monarchist movement.

Some survivors escaped, finding refuge in the MALANI HENDECARCHY of LONAR as political refugees. They established themselves over the next decades, becoming influential in the kingdom, with the princess marrying into the royal house of Lonar in 3961 RM. Her son, the shaman MIALAD, came to power in 3979 RM following the death of her husband the Hendecarch and rules Lonar to this day.

Zhariah descended into anarchy and collapsed into separate warring states that were eventually reunited by the warlord RHOZHADEN into a new Zhariah that he continues to rule today.

HINTA: Set. Settlement in the east of AZAZEM, along the RED ROUTE, linking the east of Azazem to KORACHAN (Pop. c. 16,000).

HINTA HAQ: Set. Settlement in the south of CHEIRA. Its main industry is silver mining (Pop. c. 6,300).

HIOTAL: Ser. Small coastal city in the west of SERROK. It is relatively recent, having appeared in c. 3700 RM after the waning of the BAY OF RADABAD. Its main industry is fishing (Pop. c. 14,000).

HIPASTA: Set. Fortified coastal city in the south of the emirate of OTHOTEL^(1.), in the south west of LIMOTH^(1.). Its main industry is fishing (Pop. c. 8,600).

HIQARAST: also 'Bearer of the Keys'. Rel. Dei. Major deity in the region of THAMAAZ in THE SURRACH. The god takes the form of the mummified body of a preacher or prophet and is worshipped as a holy idol. Hiqarast is kept in a large temple and is held under constant guard.

In life Hiqarast was considered a prophet and visionary, bringing a philosophy of thought to the people of the Surrach that was utterly alien. He preached of a singular god, cold and hard as metal and just as strong. He was deified upon death and his teachings became corrupted by local sensibilities and over many years he became the god he preached. See Vol IV: the Gods and Cults.

HIQMET: Set. Settlement in the western mainland of the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT, in the north west of SAMMAEA. It is a major producer of raw iron and is known for its large iron mines (Pop. c. 10,000).

HIQOL: Lak. Endorheic lake in the south east AHRISHEN, forming part of a small endorheic system alongside lake ASHIZ, which is linked to lake MASTI through the artificial LAGOT canal⁽²⁾.

HIR: Set. Coastal settlement on the island of HIR RADA in the north of FALLAROUR, off the south western coast of Sammaea (Pop. c. 6,000).

HIR RADA: Geo. Island in the SHIELD ISLES archipelago in the north of FALLAROUR, off the south western coast of SAMMAEA.

HIRDIS: Geo. Large area of geysers and bubbling mud pools in the south of VALBAR⁽²⁾, in the region of ESZALA. The region is considered harmful and dangerous to mortals, who give it a wide berth.

HIRIM: Geo. shallow valley in the north of WESTERN SAMMAEA, crossing the border between the east of the VESPERTINE LEAGUE and the west of ESHIR^(2.). It serves as the drainage basin of the river GARARIS.

HIRINA: Pol. Soc. One of the earliest PATRICIAN HOUSES that appeared around the INNER SEA, in c. 150 RM, in the east of AZAZEM. It was one of six Patrician Houses that in 243 RM seceded from the KORACHANI EMPIRE and formed the REPUBLIC OF LARATHUKH⁽²⁾. The republic was attacked by Patrician Houses that had remained loyal to the empire, and it was toppled in 271 RM, and four of the six Patrician Houses died with it, including House Hirina. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

HIRMEN: His. Rui. Monuments in AHRISHEN comprised of a series of standing stones. They were commonly built in neolithic Ahrishen c. -600
 300 RM, and though there are no longer a part of extant Ahrisheni culture, they remain respected parts of its history to this day.

HIROHIM: also 'the Child Catcher'. Leg. Folk tale and legend common in the KORACHANI PENINSULA, and parts of eastern AZAZEM and western PELASGOS, primarily used as a cautionary tale to children to keep them away from unsafe areas.

The Hirohim takes the form of a tall, slender figure, obscured beneath a long coat and wide-brimmed hat, wielding a long man catcher that is used to round up children that have strayed from their homes. Children caught by the Hirohim are never seen again, with most parents having their own version of what fate befalls them – including being sold into slavery, prostitution, or sent to the military.

The tale does have roots in reality, as PRESS-GANGING is common in many areas of the Korachani empire, and children are not always exempt from capture. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

HIROR: Rvr. River in the north east of AZAZEM, flowing south from the KENACHUA Mountains into lake RANNO.

HIROTH, DESPOT OF BAESHA: m. (B. 2875 – 3189 RM) Sup. Pol. Per. The first regent of IO following the signing of the SARASTROAN SANCTION in 3103 RM. He ruled for 86-years until his unlikely death at the hands of an escaped slave, which has since become a legend to slaves of Io. He was an accomplished Penumbrist and was a sadist, taking great pleasure in the suffering of others. BAESHA became the centre of new constructions as great monuments and temples were erected in the honour of SATHEP THE RISEN and himself.

HIRQABA: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the far south west of the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT. The fort is the base for the western armies of Sepahaunat and guards its western border from foreign attentions.

HISISH: Set. Ntn. Large powerful city-nation in the east of SAMMAEA, just west of the SEA OF LETHEA and south of the FLAMING SEA. It lies along the eastern bank of the river GLAGG. Its corrupted jelly-like waters are at their thickest near Hisish, where they have a tar-like consistency. The tar is cut out in 'blocks' and the hollows left in their wake are slowly filled in over time, replenishing the source. The blocks are used as fuel for TECHNARCANE engines and distilled for use in ATRAMENTAL DISCHARGERS that power the city and are used in the HEART ENGINES in which its guardian Atramentists are inhumed (Pop. c. 230,000). See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

HISPIDIA: For. Scrub forest in the c north of THE SURRACH, south of the region of SABBOQUA.

HISSA: Set. Fortified city in the north east of KOLCHIS, in the region of SHUK RAZHA. It forms a part of the meteore industry in the region (Pop. c. 42,000).

HISTA: Geo. Peninsula in the north west of SKAROS, between the SEA OF APHOTIS and the BAY OF DALMA, covering some 200 square-miles. It is dominated by large tapering rocky pillars.

HISTER: Set. City and surrounding iron mines in the c south west of the nation of DURCHAA^(1.) (Pop. c. 40,000).

HIT PHATHARLOSS: Geo. Coastal hills dominating the eastern coast of PORPHYR for 750-miles. This is the region where the ARK-BUILDING culture of Porphyr is at its strongest.

HITAN: Fau. whale-like creature, common in the Iapetan Sea. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

HITHRA: 1. Geo. Region in the north of THE SURRACH, just south of EREBETH. It is relatively fertile and lightly wooded across most of its reach.
2. Set. Major city-state in the far north of THE SURRACH, along the banks of the river MEGREZ, overlooking the south of EREBETH. It was once a centre of gold-mining, though the mines were spent by c. 2220 RM, by which time coal was discovered in the vicinity. The region grew wealthy from its industries and maintains that wealth by selling coal to more industrialised nation to the north. (Pop. c. 100,000).

HITTA: 1. Dem. 'Hittan'. Ntn. Kratocratic state, and one of the so-called BLOOD STATES, that emerged from the south west of MHAROKK and far east of KARAKHAS in 3914 RM, following years of unrest in the region surrounding the actions of the popular SERAPI warlord SHAR SURYAH beginning in 3893 RM, when he became Kratocrat of the city of Hitta⁽²⁾. He would later go on to claim all of Mharokk through sheer force of personality by 3920 RM, though his assassination in 3928 RM left the region in disarray. Mharokk was reclaimed by Korachan in 3930 RM following a short war with SARASTRO, with the Hittan territories claimed by his son and heir, SHAR SURYAH II, who remains in control today.

Sarastro claims Hitta as an official dependency, though the state considers itself to be independent, as is reflected in the design of its flag, and it resists all Sarastroan attempts at wresting control from the warlord. Indeed, most foreign states recognise its independence.

There are little resources of note in the region surrounding the citystate, though the city itself is known for its well-trained army and, though its territories have no natural boundaries of note to aid in its defence, it is heavily fortified, with the city of Hitta well-defended and many towers and redoubts protecting its settlements and farmlands from attack. See Vol III: the Nations of Elyden.

2. Pol. Set. Capital city of the above state, first claiming independence in 3893 RM following the actions of the SERAPI warlord SHAR SURYAH. Its merchant-princes have leveraged favour with Siriphagos, leading to it becoming a major stop along the SALT ROAD, with its wines finding their way for sale along the trade-route (Pop. c. 312,800).

HITTAN CREOLE: Lan. Creole language spoken in HITTA, based on MHAROKKIN, with many loanwords and expressions from KARAKASHI. It emerged in c. 3920 – 3950 RM, though it continues to develop to this dat. See Vol II: Languages.

HITTIA: Set. Major city in the far south of SABIA, along the south western shore of lake ELIGIA (Pop. c. 73,500).

HITULA: Rvr. River in the east of BROR^(1.), flowing west for over 250-miles from sources in the LAHAED Mountain. The river ends in the NIUH valley, falling as a 300-ft. waterfall into a vertical cavern below falls.

HIULCITA: Set. Coastal settlement in the east of SARAGOS, overlooking the BAY OF NADA. It is built around a deep cleft leading down to the bay (Pop. c. 10,000).

HIUTA: 1. Geo. Island off the southern coast of SURUTUR.

2. Set. Coastal settlement and surrounding plantations on the eponymous island $^{(L)}$ in the south of SURUTUR. known for its cultivation and preparation of cinnamon (Pop. c. 3,500).

HIWOTA: Set. Fortified coastal city in the west of TZALLRACH (Pop. c.32,000).

HIYUSTSYL: Set. Small city in the c north of OKKHAM (Pop. c. 17,500).

HIOVATAT: (B. 1855 – D. 1941 RM) Sup. Pol. ONÉSIMUS THANE exiled from SABIA who would annex lands to the east of the DESOLATION OF ASTUDAN in 1893 RM, founding the nation of FARIS.

HLADEL: Set. City in the south of the HENDECARCHY of AMILLAERE^(1.), in the c of MALAN (Pop. c. 70,000).

HLARIRIS: Geo. Badlands in the south east of ESHIR (2.).

HMARUON: Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region in the wastes west of ANDILUTH, in the DAENED SULRACH. The terrain is grey and lifeless, covered in DUSTSTONE formations.

The region is categorised as a $\underline{\text{MODERATE THREAT}}$ by the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI}}$ Institute of Atramental Studies.

HMMEN REGIME: Pol. Org. Ruling government of PNESSA since 3959 RM. The regime has its roots in a halfblood caste, known as the TYRANON and AGORNONS, which were influential members of House NEANDER in the city of HAZOR in RHINOCOLOURA. In 3469 RM they were exiled from the city, and some fled south east and settled the north of Pnessa. Over the coming years, their agents infiltrated this region, fomenting distrust of the ruling house of CAIA amongst the populace. The region is quickly corrupted by their words.

In 3493 RM their efforts culminated with a coup of the northern cities that essentially sundered Pnessa in two, with the north becoming known as the NEANDERINE CITIES.

The regime itself emerged in the city of IRMM, in c. 3925 RM, solidifying itself as a ruling power in the north, which begins rallying people against the Caian monarchy. By 3948 RM the regime had amassed a fanatical following around the Neanderine Cities, and was vocal about its opposition to the Pnessian monarchy, causing Pnessa to mobilize its armies. Minor skirmishes along the borders culminate in the Battle of Bellauan Ridge in 3948 RM. Skirmishes continued over the coming years along the contested border between the Neanderine Cities and Pnessa.

In truth, the Hmmen regime had operatives in all major Pnessian cities and was working in the shadows to overthrow the monarchy. This eventually bore fruit in 3959 RM, with an overnight revolution that overthrew the Caian monarchy. The royal family was executed alongside its direct relatives and supporters.

The Hmmen regime was formally established in Pnessa after this, becoming an Authoritarian Socialist state, with most industries and organisations coming to be controlled by the government. The Hmmen regime retains control of Pnessa, with the TRYPTARCH – an absolutist ruler who oversaw the collapse of the monarchy – ruling to this day since its establishment almost 50-years ago.

HMMEN REVOLUTION: Pol. His. Political revolution that took place in PNESSA in 3959 RM, during which agents and sympathisers of the HMMEN REGIME overthrew the CAIAN monarchy in Pnessa overnight following years of planning. The Hmmen regime continues to rule Pnessa to this day and its leader is the TRYPTARCH, an enigmatic individual who oversaw the rise of the regime and orchestrate the revolution.

HMORMAI: Set. Fortified settlement in the north west of CYHLAGHARR, to the north of the SEA OF IMERRIL (Pop. c. 6,000).

HOADA: Set. Settlement in the south east of the city of HOAMM (Pop. c. 5.750).

HOALAN: His. Set. Ancient city in the north of SAMMAEA, in the south east of present-day TRAKIA, along the northern bank of the river SISARA. It grew into a prosperous port in c. -200 RM in what had once been occupied by the late FOURTH AGE nation of ERASHA, whose ruins were appropriated by the city-state of ALATEA, which by -100 RM moved its capital to Hoalan, which became a great influence and presence in the west of the SEA OF BYSSOS.

In c. -75 RM the merchant-kings of Hoalan grew powerful, ousting the pervious rulers, though their greed would prove to be their undoing and their territories had fractured by c. 220 RM. The city of $\underline{\text{OLNNAD}}$ would appear close to its ruin in c. 1100 RM, with some of its first structures made with stones reclaimed from the old city.

HOALI: Rvr. River in the c of KORACHAN, flowing for 120-miles from the southern hills of the PSALDA hills, before emptying into the LEMAS.

HOAMANA, the: Rel. Dei. Multi-faceted pantheon of HOAMM, which appeared in c. 1100, replacing the KORACHANI CULT OF LIFE AND DEATH, which by c. 1350 RM had become little more than a mystery-cult amongst its high merchant-classes. It is thought by some scholars that the Hoamana is possibly contiguous with ancient Demiurges. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

HOAMM: 1. also 'City-empire of Hoamm'. Dem. 'Hoammi'. Ntn. Nation in the far south of the KORACHANI PENINSULA, which has the distinction of being one of the closest nations to KORACHAN to have never been directly under the empire's control. Originally a Korachani prison-colony, Hoamm is now a nation straddling two continents, controlling not only its territories along the southern-most point in the Korachani peninsula and a small part of northern SAMMAEA, forming an exclave within the DEMESNE OF HARAPPA (3).

The Dichocratic empire was founded in 2856 RM, where the twin sons of the dead monarch Eread II reached an agreement after a year of conflict, and their descendants rule Hoamm to this day. Like their ancestors, the people of Hoamm maintain trade centres across many cities across the INNER SEA, and the emblems of their merchant-houses are a common sight amongst the harbours and ports across the Inner Sea.

The empire is characterised by its island-capital – the capital and original Hoammi territory, south of ARTALSCELLIA. Originally a large conurbation that covered the majority of the island, the city expanded towards the coasts as the waters of the Inner Sea receded, leaving its interior an abandoned wasteland covered with layers of ruined structures. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

2. Set. Main city and conurbation within Hoamm^(1,), forming the majority of the City-empire of Hoamm (Pop. c. 790,000).

HOAMM: Lan. Language spoken in in the DICHOTARCHIC EMPIRE OF HOAMM. It emerged from the LOW KORACHANI that was spoken on the KORACHANI EMPIRES' prison colony of Hoamm, and is now the official language of Hoamm, and is also spoken in ARTALSCELLIA. See Vol II: Languages.

HOAMMI WOLF: Fau. Scavenging canines found in the south of the KORACHANI PENINSULA, known for their large size. Primarily scavengers, they were hunted to extinction in KORACHAN millennia past, though survive in small numbers in HOAMM, after which they are named. They are victims of poaching and a thriving black market trade, where individuals find themselves across Korachan and beyond, often appearing in circuses. They are naturally timid and are tortured into a feral state to entice audiences. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

HOANALL: Geo. Peninsula in the north west of HOAMM, overlooking the northern waters of the ENGARA.

HOARI: Rvr. River in the c of KORACHAN, flowing for 130-miles from sources in the PSALDA hills and emptying in the SERAH marshlands.

HOATA: Geo. Island 32-miles south off the southern coast of mainland HOAMM

HOAVA: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the north of HOAMM, overlooking the road north east into the south of KORACHAN. The fortress is part of a far larger series of trenches and fortifications measuring around 100-miles long, close to the border with Korachan.

HOAZZ: Set. Major city in the east of PNESSA. It is a military centre in the region and is responsible for most patrols along the border with ELEKHID (Pop. c. 100,000).

HODABR-AGHTUL: Geo. Massif in the south west of the mountains of LABR-AGHTUL, on the east of CHEIRA. The massif is known for its ancient and elaborate rock-hewn necropolises in which was found the body of the otherworlder HAR-RSI in 3621 RM, which would lead to the founding of the CHURCH OF THE PROPHET OF THE EMPYREAN in c. 3650 RM.

HODEL: Set. City in the north east of PNESSA (Pop. c. 37,000).

HODONAAH: Set. Small city in the c north of GNOTH along the southernmost shore of lake ZURVAN (Pop. c. 16,000).

HODROK: 1. Geo. Cave system in the south east of the territory of MAHEN in the east of ALAM BETHYL, in the western foothills of the BAND^(2.) Mountains around 60-miles from the coast with the SEA OF ADUM. The caves lead to the labyrinthine depths of the PRISON CARCERI.

2. Geo. Pass across the $\underline{BAND}^{(2)}$ Mountains linking $\underline{ALAM\ BETHYL}$ in the west with $\underline{KOLCHIS}$ in the east. It is little-used today and parts of it have fallen into disuse.

HOGGOTHA ISZ: Dem. 'Hoggotha Iszzan'. Ntn. Geo. Expansive realm in the c of SAMMAEA, encompassing the majority of the WORLD'S CROWN mountains (the ACHARKHARAN, SHAKHURAN and KARKARMIS Mountains), and surrounding lands, mostly to their south and west. It is amongst the most inhospitable mundane regions in all of ELYDEN – despite not being under the thrall of either the FIRMAMENT or ATRAMENTA, it is nevertheless a desert, most of it highland, and extremely arid.

The Hoggotha Isz is populated by scattered MORTAL tribes, most of them SERAPIS. There are rumours of a more unified serapi culture centred there, though this is refuted by what few KORACHANI expeditions that have ventured into the land, which have thus far only revealed insular warrior tribes with little in the form of high culture. Their unifying feature is an overarching belief in a COSMIC SELF-DEVOURING SERPENT, that some believe may be a corruption of worship of the DEMIURGE ASHTERATH^(2.).

The region is separated from the north by the KHARKHARADONTID desert, but its southern-most territories lead directly to neighbouring nations, such as SIMBARA and MAENMIST, amongst others. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

HOGGOTHA ISZZAN BURIALS: Soc. Widespread burial practices common in the south east of the HOGGOTHA ISZ and the south west of KHARKHARADONTIS. Life expectancy in Kharkharadontis was always low, particularly amongst the young and newly-born. Various MORTAL peoples came to mummify their young dead as a sign of their love and respect for these young victims of their harsh environments. This included stillbirths, and those who died of ailments such as AEPATHY.

Originating with early FIFTH AGE PLAGI and ETHERI cultures in western Kharkharadontis, the practice soon spread to SERAPIS, LACERS and other denizens of the Hoggotha Isz, whose traditions would evolve, with the mummification of leaders and warriors also becoming common over time. Black rock-cut tombs pepper foothills in the south west of Kharkharadontis and Hoggotha Isz, where the practice became most prevalent.

HOGHSOTHAMON: Geo. Ancient fold-mountain region in the south of the TARAHID ANNEXES. The name is derived from an ERUTOEAN legend of the underworld. The mountains are greatly weathered and relatively level though dominated by undulating steep valleys and folds stretching west to east. The region emerges from the south of the ASSOGHAQUA highlands in the north and stretches to the south west and south east and for over 800-miles, covering an area of 200,000 square-miles.

The region is relatively dry though the rainy season sees water pool between its many valleys, leading to a short explosion of life. The inner region of the Hoghsothamon (known as Inner Hoghsothamon) is ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED and though its interior is largely unexplored, hoary ruins can be seen through the mists that cover the land.

The region is categorised as DANGEROUS by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

HOGRI: also 'Hogri Geysers'. Geo. Foul region in the far south east of the BARRIER LANDS that is below sea level and is known for its sulphurous geysers and polychromatic chemical pools. The entire area is shunned, though is often visited by nomads and merchants travelling there due to its picturesque beaty. Some have sighted grotesque humanoid amphibians that lurk by the pools and geysers on night when both moons are new, though there is little evidence to support these claims.

HOGUAS: Set. Ruling city in the south west of the tribe of TATRAS, in the c south of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 130,000).

HOIZA: Set. Fortified city in the far south of PNESSA, in the region of SIMEANAGH. Its main industry is logging (Pop. c. 12,000).

HOLAYRA: Set. Major fortified coastal city in the south east of ALAM BETHYL. It is the capital of the territory of TABERCIL⁽²⁾, and is heavily fortified against slavery and predation from the south. It is one of the larger Bethylan cities and lies south of the northern POLAR CIRCLE.

Its roots lie in and constriction of a major fortress there in c. 3480 RM, where people for miles around would seek shelter in the event of a pirate raid. Eventually the fortress' response to such attacks became so good, that incidents decreased, allowing people to settle down in more sedentary lifestyles, and by c. 3540 RM a shanty town had appeared at the fortresses' base, which continued to grow, becoming the new capital of Tabercil^(2.) in around 3820 RM (Pop. c. 112,500).

HOLAVAR: Rvr. River in the west of HOLOLACH^(1.), forming a border between it and the MULL CITY-STATES. The river flows for 300-miles from its sources in the HOLIASOR and ESHAMIL Mountains before meeting lake LO HOLVAN.

HOLHOMM: Set. Fortified settlement in the far east of PNESSA (Pop. c. 6.000).

HOLIASOR: Geo. Mountain-range in the south of HOLOLACH^(1.), bordering the northern coast of THE INNER SEA. The mountain-range is picturesque, comprised of hundreds of fjords, lakes and winding rivers moving towards the coast. The fjords are thought to have been created by glacier movements in the distant past, indicating the region was once located in a much colder climate. The range in often shrouded in mists carried north along the INNER SEA from the warmer south, that remain trapped within the fjords often for days at a time.

HOLICHRIS: 1. Pol. One of eight prefectures in HOLOLACH^(1.), controlling the c east of the nation, between the hills of HOLOMAR in the west and the TOLIASOR Mountains in the east. Its controlling city is Holichris^(2.).
2. Set. City in the c east of HOLOLACH^(1.) and centre of the eponymous prefecture (Pop. c. 33,200).

HOLLAMEA: Pol. Set. Major city and capital city of KOMMEA, located in the north of the nation, overlooking the coastal cliffs of the western HOLLOW COASTLINE. It is a vertical city with many steep stepped roads, where the rich live in penthouses overlooking the SEA OF AKRY and the poor live in crowded tenements whose bowels are tunnelled from the bedrock itself.

It is dominated by the ancient PALACE of the DONAGERS, where its monarchy has ruled since the rise of the AUTUMN DYNASTY. The city grew rapidly following the kingdom's vassalage to TETHYSIA, and it is now home to many offices and consulates of the southern power. Though it is coastal it has little direct contact with the shore, which is locked behind near vertical cliffs. A few passages to the coast have been constructed, and a small yet busy deep harbour has been built there, but most trade arrives to the city by land (Pop. c. 1,200,000).

HOLLOW: Soc. Lan. Derogatory term used to describe present-day MERILLS.
The name refers to the way an individual merill's thoughts are trampled into submission by the overburden of memories and knowledge passed down by their ancestors through GENETIC MEMORY. This tends to manifest itself in clouded and nonsensical behaviour.

The name is ironic as the merill is far from hollow: rather it is imbued with the memories of a thousand generations of ancestors, leading back to the FIRST AGE OF MORTAL LIFE.

HOLLOW COASTLINE, the: Geo. Colloquial name given to the mountains, coastal highlands, and hundreds of coastal fjords and islands that dominate the northern and eastern coasts of KOMMEA, including the BRAT EDRAN, LYRLDRAN, VAELDRAN, and WENDRAEN Mountains.

The region is sparsely populated, though is conversely also home to the nations' most populous cities, including the capital, $\underline{HOLLAMEA}$. It also forms a major part of the regions' mythologies, and is home to some of the lakes known as the $\underline{SEVEN\ MAIDENS}^{(1.)}$.

HOLLOW DESERT, the: also 'Farrosh'. Geo. Dre. This DREAMSCAPE is situated some 200-miles south west of the SEA OF LETHEA in HADDURATH. The dreamscape was first recorded by KORACHANI explorers in c. 2945 RM, when it was little more than 60-square-miles in size, though has steadily been expanding since then, increasing to some 8,000-square-miles by c. 3800 RM, leaving nothing but an unnatural nothingness in its centre that is difficult to describe and leaves those observing it unsettled and unhinged.

Ancient texts and passages from the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN have led contemporary scholars to believe that a slumbering scion is buried beneath the epicentre of the Hollow Desert, whose body is soaked in the waters of Lethea, explaining the nothingness of the dreamscape above the scion is DREAMING, but the amnestic waters have rendered its thoughts to nothingness, which is reflected in the shape of the dreamscape.

HOLLOW PRINCE, the: Per. Derogatory name given to an individual in KOMMEA who claimed to be the prophesised SCION RICFREID in c 3900 RM. Though there was vocal opposition to the claim, the government feared what might happen should it prove to be true.

For decades he was treated like a messiah, elevated to a figurehead of the nation, giving speeches and rallying the people, however over time as various parts of the prophecy failed to materialise, people began to turn against him, until 3921 RM, when he and his remaining loyal followers were exiled. He settled in the city of $\underline{\text{CALBIA}}^{(2)}$, where he later established the new state of Calbia⁽¹⁾.

The name Hollow Prince emerged soon after his appearance in c. 3900 RM and was used by his detractors, but it only came into widespread use once the prophecies surrounding the legendary character of Ricfreid failed to come to pass. The name remains in use in Kommea today and is typically the only way in which the figure is now remembered.

HOLLOW KINGDOMS, the: Pol. His. In the history of ELYDEN, a neolithic culture that rose from the FADING of the FOURTH AGE in what is now AHRISHEN. Seeing divinity in the geometrically perfect menhirs that remained intact from the previous age, the people of Ahrishen became builders of stone circles and barrows; the centres of growing pastoral communities that became known as the BARROW-FIEFS. But few were those who ventured near the ruins of the old cities, claiming them haunted by the spirits of the dead. These ruins collectively became known as the Hollow Kingdoms.

A man rose to prominence c. -200 RM who defied the wisdom of Barrow-fief's rulers and explored the ruins. The man who emerged had become an erudite who later became known as the REGENT TAUAM, who claimed to have been visited by a powerful OTHERWORLDER who was said to have guided his path since then. The Regent Tauam united the BARROW-FIEFS, destroying the fear generated by the Hollow Kingdoms.

HOLLOW MOUNTAIN: also 'the Eye of Nergaal'. Geo. Mountain pass in CUTH between the ERES IRKALLA Mountain to the north and the HAMMINGHENG Highlands to the south. The route passes through a large hollow in the limestone rocks of the region which form a gigantic window, which is sometimes referred to as the Eye of Nergaal by those who pass through it.

HOLLOW ONE: see SHELL.

HOLLOWAY: also 'Sunken Path'. Int. Soc. Geo. Roads or paths that over many centuries have become sunken, taking the form of rounded ditches. In some places, such as the KHADAN ROAD, continued use has turned certain holloways into artificially-made canyons with steep sides.

Many regions of ELYDEN contain holloways dating back to the earliest days of mortal life, showing which regions have been settled and travelled over time.

Many of the largest highways linking major cities in Elyden are millennia old and take the form of holloways, including some of the more commonly travelled routes of the RED ROUTE or the SHADOW MARCH, amongst others.

HOLMA: 1. Rvr. River in the west of Ahrishen, flowing west and north for 122-miles from various sources, including the HALHALAT and QANAM HALAT Mountains, and the BARROW HEATHS, before meeting its parent, the river ARESH^(2.).

2. Lak. Lake in the region of DEMERAL in the c west of AHRISHEN, along the course of the river ARESH^(2.).

3. Set. Small city in the c of AHRISHEN, appearing after the retreat of the SEA OF PYREA, in the region of DEMERAL. The city is surrounded by wetlands and marshes and its only reliable link to the rest of the nation is across a bridge that crosses the marshes and leads to dry land, 2-miles south east. The city is known for its asparagus and rice production (Pop. c. 12,000).

HOLOLACH: 1. Dem. 'Hololachi'. Ntn. Kingdom in the south east of WESTERN LLACHATUL along the northern coast of the INNER SEA, Hololach is a land divided from the east by the TOLIASOR Mountains that dominate its eastern borders and the HOLIASOR Mountains along its southern coast, both of which are extensions of the BLACK MOUNTAINS. Known to the KORACHANI EMPIRE colloquially as the CLOUDY COAST, its south is characterised by violent storms as moist warm air from the sea meets warm dry air from the mountains.

Large parts of the kingdom are affected by subtle ATRAMENTAL TAINT, which has become a resource to the Hololachi people. This is most notable in the north of the kingdom, where nightmares are tangible, taking the form of twisted blackened formations.

Hololach is largely separated from the eastern reaches of the Inner Sea, which has allowed it to forge its relations with the west – $\underline{AQUARIIA}$, $\underline{EZASUH}^{(2)}$, \underline{ERBETH} , \underline{GNOTH} , $\underline{SAGITTARIA}$, and \underline{TAHALL} . As a result, Hololach is not as industrialised as the states of the eastern Inner Sea.

The land is ruled by the VARPULIS – the hereditary title of an ancient HALFBLOODED dynasty, who is recognised as a divine being and treated as the highest judicial, religious and political authority in Hololach and all its territories. The Varpulis is chosen by the reigning VOLATA from members of the royal bloodline.

Hololach is divided into eight prefectures, each of which is ruled by a DOCENT(2.): an elected SHAPER of great worth and practitioner of the Varpulis' divine teachings. Each prefecture comprises a capital city and many satellite settlements, though the kingdom also has a large nomadic population of itinerants known as the EVORADI, which do not owe fealty to any of the prefectures, though who do acknowledge the right of the Varpulis, who has granted them certain freedom of movement throughout Hololach. They travel the land in a long circuit that can take as much as a decade to complete, in caravans of hundreds of individuals. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

2. Pol. One of eight prefectures in Hololach $^{(1.)}$, and home to the capital city of Hololach $^{(3)}$.

3. Pol. Ser. Capital city and seat of the VARPULIS in the nation of the same name⁽¹⁾. The city became capital in c. 3500 RM after the old capital of TROPIS was moved there by the then Varpulis. The city is known for its canaled districts, and is a common trade partner with LAASKHA, selling ornate crystal artefacts and truffles for which it is famed in return for copper and bronze, which are scarce there (Pop. c. 920,000).

HOLOLACHI: Lan. Language spoken in HOLOLACH^(1.). It is descended from the DAIMALAN language of its predecessors and uses the same script, and it is similar to early pre-KORACHANI AQUARIIAN. See Vol II: Language of Elyden.

HOLOMAR: Geo. Rugged scrub plains leading up to the ESHAMIL Mountains in c HOLOLACH^(1.).

HOLON: Set. Settlement in the west of the BAKHRAN STATES in the west of THE SURRACH (Pop. c. 10,000).

HOLOTHAN: 1. Pol. His. Historic city-state and conurbation in the north of present-day TRAKIA, between the regions of HOGHSOTHAMON and ULLUÍANNA, renowned for the towering natural monoliths that surround it and the THRACIAN OGHUR slave trade that once revolved around it. Though often disfigured, Thracian oghurs are immensely strong - both of will and body. To break their minds, the oghurs are captured and forced to pull the monoliths (sometimes carrying them on their backs, or hauling the larger examples in groups on chains). The process is merely an exercise in subduing them until they are better-receptive to commands, at which point they are trained and sold. This practice earned Holothan the enmity of the OGHUR nation of CYHLAGHARR and clashes between the two are not uncommon. Its veterans are experts in trapping and battling oghurs and they are sought-out by the WHITE LEAGUE (who have had a presence in the city since c. 2400 RM) whenever battling oghurs. As a result, a large barracks dedicated to the training of troops is present outside the city walls, with a large White League CHAPTER (2.) present there, also.

Holothan trades local produce, including but not limited to $\underline{\text{UMBRA}}$ and rare salts, with the east.

After the KORACHANI EMPIRE'S abandoned the TARAHID STATES to the INTERREGES in 2974 RM, the influence of the White League increased over the city, though its power waned in c. 3200 RM as the nation of TRAKIA coalesced.

2. Pol. Set. Present-day capital of the nation of TRAKIA, known for the WHITE LEAGUE fortresses located there. It became capital in 3213 RM (Pop. c. 780,000).

HOLRIS: Set. Small settlement in the prefecture of SONTADRIS, in the far south of HOLOLACH^(1.) (Pop. c. 2,000).

 $\underline{\text{HOLVAN}}$: Rvr. Wetlands in the prefecture of $\underline{\text{HOLICHRIS}}$ in c north eastern $\underline{\text{HOLOLACH}}^{(1)}$, along the southern shore of lake $\underline{\text{LO HOLVAN}}$.

HOLY APPARITION, SANCTUARY OF THE: Rel. Str. Fortified church in the north east of PELASGOS, on a hilltop just under a mile west of the city of MALICHARICHAN. The location where the church would later be built was the site of a miracle in 93 RM, when a young shepherd had a vision of a ghostly figure astride a pale horse. Interpreted as being the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR, who at the time was believed to be dead, the site became a site of pilgrimage to many, and a large monument was constructed there in 128 RM. Following his ITINERARY and his return to KORACHAN, the Archpotentate Malichar came across the site by chance while mounted on a white horse. He blessed the monument before continuing to the capital, and a large sanctuary was built around the monument. It survives to this day and greets thousands of pilgrims every year.

HOLY AMMUNITION: Int. Rel. Mil. Obj. The Militant nature of the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE has seen their proselytisers and operatives gain prominence amongst their nations' respective militaries.

One common aspect of military practice that they are known for is the blessing of shells and bullets, amongst other projectiles. These holy projectiles are highly-regarded by troops regardless of any effect they may have, and the tradition continues largely for the purposes of morale and tradition. There also exists a tradition of painting artillery shells with religious iconography.

So important are these objects within their respective militaries that in some cases individual shells have gained status of relics, with shrines being built around them. These shrines are often constructed atop ambulants and tanks to accompany armies as they march, have become an important part of their respective military forces, boosting morale and steeling the fervour of soldiers.

HOLY BLOOD, BASILICA OF THE: Rel. Set. Large BASILICA in the south west of VENTHIR, constructed in 1474 RM in honour of pilgrims massacred by technologist forces in 1453 RM on the same spot; an act which in 1455 RM led to the passing of the STATUTE OF RIGHTS. It has become a major stopping point amongst pilgrims undertaking $\underline{\text{THE}}$ $\underline{\text{SHADOW MARCH}}$ and a large shanty town has appeared around it to cater to their needs (Pop. c. 17,400).

HOLY CODEX, the: Rel. Vol. Religious textbook within the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE that includes the duties and responsibilities of the myriad different ranks and titles of its members. The codex is constantly updated with developments within the ranks of the clergy and is on hand should it need to be consulted by church members.

HOLY CITY, the: Soc. Lan. In the KORACHANI EMPIRE, common vernacular used in reference to the city of KORACHAN. The title comes from the city's history and its status as the home of the Imperial faith; where the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR toppled the last remaining adherents of the TEMPLE OF LIFE AND DEATH in -2 RM before instating the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE in its place.

HOLY CITY OF KESHEL: see KESHEL.

HOLY FATHER: also 'Holy Mother'. Rel. Rnk. Name of the head ABUNA in the HOLY REPUBLIC of AETHIOS. The current Holy Mother is Allara.

HOLY GYNOCRACY OF NAARETH: Dem. 'Naarethi'. Ntn. Most commonly-recognised name for the nation of NAARETH, in the north of SAMMAEA, occupying the above peninsula, noted for its matriarchal society. Present-day Naareth owes a lot to its KORACHANI subjugators, though perhaps the largest contributing factor was the exiled AETHIOSI princess EISHETH, who founded the CHURCH OF THE VOLUTE there in 1002 RM.

Before this time, Naareth was little more than a series of city-states with little ties to each-other, other than the FOURTH AGE ruins on which their settlements were built. This was the ABERANNI empire, which fell in the Fourth Age, leaving behind a legacy of interconnected stone cities and expert mariners, for which Naareth remains known today.

The vacuum left by the collapse of the Aberanni empire allowed different people, many of them descended from the failed empire's freed slave caste, to resettle the Naarethi headland. Most were already skilled at farming and fishing and they were able to subsist to the crumbs left by the fallen empire, and lives in this way for many years, occasionally having to fend off attacks from chorsairs raiding coastal settlements. These people continued worshipping the different regional elemental deities that were left by the fallen empire.

One city, NAARTH, became powerful during this time, exerting its influence on many cities around it, particularly to the south. The name of the city would soon become synonymous with the surrounding land, though a growing power to the north – the VENATHI empire – kept it from growing too much.

The growth of Venath brought a new religion to the region – a CULT OF PERSONALITY surrounding its Queen, HETEPHERES the sphinx. The religion soon spread to Naarth and surrounding lands, becoming popular by c. 60 – 70 RM, replacing the antiquated elemental beliefs of Aberan.

With its religion gaining strength in Naarth, the Venathi empire would soon slowly expand its borders south. The city of Naarth was annexed by Venath in 121 RM and surrounding lands soon followed. The Death of LABAISINGH THE STRONG in 151 RM saw a decline of the Venathi empire and it would eventually collapse in 162 RM following years of uncertainty. Naarth became an independent state, using what remained of its armies to secure the surrounding lands, as far south as the northern face of the IROTHAN Mountain.

It was into this land that Eisheth founded her religion. A princess exiled from Aethios in 993 RM following a coup in which her family was deposed, she spent years wandering Sammaea before coming to Naarth from ANUBIA. She stumbled upon a ruined angelic colossus when she was close to starvation in 999 RM. Soon after this she was blessed by finding food and water and she survived – a miracle she attributed to the statue. With her remaining followers, she began worshipping the colossus as a deity for saving her and eventually erected the temple that would become known as the HEART OF THE VOLUTE in 1002 RM, founding the CHURCH OF THE VOLUTE there. The religion of THE VOLUTE^(1.) spread across the Naarethi headland, steadily supplanting the Cult of the Sphinx.

The years following her founding of the church prompted a major physical change in Eisheth: her body began to mutate and, over many years, far beyond the span of normal mortals, she became a corpulent creature barely recognisable as human – the grotesque embodiment of the church she had founded. She became the centre of the religion and came to be known simply as $\underline{\text{THE VOLUTE}}^{(2)}$.

This change, coupled with the rapid spread of the church eliminated all other religions in Naarth, and a large temple was constructed in Naarth. This served to further unify the region, allowing Naarth to expand as far south as the SEA OF ORMA.

However, the growth of the church, coupled with the physical change of Eisheth saw the tenets of the church become corrupted. Distinction between the founder and the church waned, and by c. 1280 RM, the object of veneration became Eisheth, or the Volute, as she had by then become universally known. Worship of the angelic idol had all but died out, replaced by worship of Eisheth.

Religious movements saw the Volute become the leader of Naarth, unifying state and church in 1340 RM, though by this point the Volute had become so corpulent and distanced from the material plane, that she was incapable of making decisions alone. The caste of HIERODULES and MATRIARCHS came to rule in her name, and in 1341 RM the first Arch Matriarch was elected as head of the church, and given the PELVIC CROWN, and the name Volute became forevermore synonymous with the ascended form of Eishath.

Naareth grew under the unification of the church and the Arch Matriarch's leadership, and the appearance of the Matriarchal caste saw a change to its social hierarchy, with women attaining a more prominent role, becoming household leaders and breeders, from which the matriarchal noble bloodlines would evolve.

The region was invaded by the KORACHANI EMPIRE in c. 2490 RM, following its conquering of KHITAI in c. 2430 RM, eventually falling in 2532 RM following years of naval and land battles, though in the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR'S absence its rule there was tenuous at best. Hundreds of temples were toppled and Matriarchs slain. MATRIDULES were married into PATRICIAN HOUSES as was customary following imperial subjugation, but the Matridules were unruly, educated to be leaders and generals, and they did not take well to their new lives of imperial wives. Many killed their husbands in frustration or themselves in protest, further vilifying the Church of the Volute in the eyes of the imperial occupiers. Fights between policing forces and rioting locals were common and they would often end in blood.

Within a few years, the worst of the civil unrest was quelled and industrial operations – including deforestation, mining and fishing – were begun in earnest. Consequent decades were productive, with the city of Marachan (now Maarch) being a major port, where produce was shipped to the heart of the empire. This continued for some centuries, though the empire's grip on Naareth would slowly loosen over time.

With the aid of SARAGOS, Naarethi nationalists were able to hinder Korachani rule. This was during a tumultuous time in Korachani history, where the Archpotentate Malichar had been missing for centuries. Ruled by DESPOSYNI regents who often squabbled amongst themselves, undoing the work of their predecessors, many foreign territories were lost. Following increased unrest in areas of Korachani influence and an exodus of imperial citizens and Patrician Houses, the imperial governors abandoned Naareth to self-rule in 2825 RM.

It took years for the nation to re-stabilise, though with the aid of Saragos, it was able to re-establish itself as a power. Industries that were started by the Korachani occupiers were continued, albeit at a reduced scale. By this time, Korachan had been absent from Khitai for centuries, and its abandonment of Naareth brought the two nations together. Naareth would exert a great deal of influence on Khitai, in 3132 RM it would absorb the latter as a vassal, which it remains to this day.

Those who remained faithful to the Volute were able to keep the location of the Heart of the Volute hidden from the Korachani occupiers at great personal cost. With Korachan departed, temples were rebuilt and worship of the Volute was re-established, despite the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE becoming popular amongst those who'd become indoctrinated to the Korachani way of life. The Church of the Undying Machine made no effort to save its interests in Naareth, and it waned in power, though it does remain in a corrupted form worshipped by a few (notably those of Korachani blood descendants from imperial settlers).

Beginning in c. 3250 RM, the empire launched a series of CRUSADES against the north east of Sammaea. This included Naareth, which was one of the regions hardest hit by this so-called EGRET CRUSADE, which targeted lands outside of Korachan. Funded by patricians and the Church of the Undying Machine in a bid to expand private lands, plunder and take slaves, these crusades lasted until c. 3500 RM and were a constant menace to the people of Naareth, whose northern coast was left devastated, resulting in its population migrating inland and farther south, which remains true to this day. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

HOLY LAND OF RACHANAEL: Pol. His. Ntn. Colony established by the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE in the south west of present-day OTINTH in 777 RM. It established the capital of SATACHAN by c. 800 RM, from which it launched many slaving raids into surrounding lands and would later go on to found the TEMPLARS OF THE MACHINE as its military, members of which would raid the surrounding lands for slaves and resources.

In 1183 RM tensions between Satachan and the independent city of EVHRAN escalated into war, embroiling the region for decades. In 1241 RM the city of Satachan was besieged and eventually destroyed, alongside its cathedral, which was the heart of the colony. The war was soon lost by the colony, whose people fled east back to KORACHAN allowing VETHRANDA to expand into the void.

HOLY MAST, the: Rel. Obj. The mast of THE SERAPH— the merchant vessel that the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR captained before his discovery of the SCRIPTURE OF SHADOW. The mast survives to this day and is kept as a relic in the BASILICA OF THE HOLY MAST in DEOCHAN.

HOLY MAST, BASILICA OF THE: Rel. Str. BASILICA of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, located in DEOCHAN, KORACHAN. It is the repository of the HOLY MAST – a part of THE SERAPH, which was the ship the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR captained before his discovery of the SCRIPTURE OF SHADOW. The mast is intact and is encased behind a baroquely-decorated glass panel, and dominates the chancel. The basilica is visited by many pilgrims travelling along the SHADOW MARCH.

HOLY ORDER OF THEREON: Rel. The organised religion in CISNERIA based around the worship of the SCION THEREON as a deity. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

HOLY PRECINCT, the: Rel. Set. The heart of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE in ELYDEN, located within the city of KHADON in the nation of KORACHAN. It is to all intents and purposes a small city within the larger city, with residential areas, businesses and small industries, though the majority of its structures are dedicated to the monolithic institution that is the Church of the Undying Machine. It is walled and access to it is heavily guarded, and is famed for the stark brutalist beauty of its architecture and parks.

HOLY PRECINT, ARCHIVES OF THE: Str. Private library and archives belonging to the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, located in the HOLY PRECINCT, within the city of KHADON. It is famed for its voluminous and deep archives, in which all manner of objects and books are placed, many of which are declared heretical by the church.

HOLY RELIQUARY, BASILICA OF THE: Rel. Church in the city of ADEPEP in LAASKHA, where the body of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR is kept on display, embalmed and ATRAMENTALLY-preserved. The body was taken north following Malichar's mortal death in 212 RM and ended up in PEACHAN in KARAKHAS, where a basalt sarcophagus was made for it, before it was moved north across the INNER SEA, eventually settling in Adepep.

The basilica is a major part of the SHADOW MARCH and thousands of pilgrims go to view it every day.

HOLY REPUBLIC: Pol. The government of the nation of AETHIOS, as formally acknowledged by foreign nations since 3817 RM following a reorganisation of its nine states by the ABUNA, who gained power after its independence from SARASTRO in 3810 RM.

HOLY SHADOW: see SHADOW, HOLY.

HOLY STATE OF HAGRADEA: Pol. His. In 2746 RM the EDICT OF NICAEA reversed many of the damages caused by the SECULAR DISSOLUTION, forcing the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE to give up much of its land, leading to tumult in much of the KORACHANI EMPIRE.

This exacerbated already-high tensions in SARASTRO and in 2783 RM, HAGRADEA and MORULAURGO (cities where the Church of the Undying Machine had been dominant) declared their independence and formed the Holy State of Hagradea, at the heart of which was the Pontificate-general Marzhus.

The months following this time saw the Sarastroan EMIRS⁽¹⁾ exile the allies and sympathisers of the Holy State's leader, the Pontificate-general Marzhus, were executed and exiled in their thousands, the latter either moving to the newly-formed state, or fleeing south into the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER or the deserts of ANUBIA.

In 2787 RM the Holy State attacked $\underline{FARAVAR}$ after it initially refused to abdicate Sarastro and join it, resulting in its eventual joining of Hagradea, leading to the fracturing of Sarastro in two – Korachani-led Sarastro in the north and the Holy State of Hagradea controlling lands south of the $\underline{KHO\ HAGAR}$.

This schism-state survived until 2974 RM, which was the year of SATHEP'S return to full power and his subjugation of all Sarastroan people, which brought singular rule to the region once again.

HOLY STONE, the: see AGOR.

HOLY SWORD, the: Rel. Obj. In the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE and many of its offshoots, the name given to the sword TARTARUCH that is wielded by the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR.

Today, the Holy Sword is a potent religious SYMBOL, adopted by the religion as a symbol of the strength of the Archpotentate Malichar, and it is used as an icon across nations where the Church of the Undying Machine is the dominant religion. It is also considered a sign of virility in the empire, and many wear a pewter sword necklace which is said to garner the protection of Malichar.

- HOLY SWORD, CHURCH OF THE: Rel. Str. 1. Common name within lands where the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE holds sway, referring to the sword TARTARUCH that is wielded by the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR, which went on to become a powerful religious symbol through his exploits over the years. Specifically, the name can refer to any of the following churches:
- 2. A large church located in the city of HERESI in the east of KORACHAN. It is known for an adjacent shrine where a simple facsimile of the HOLY SWORD is venerated by pilgrims of the SECT OF THE HOLY SWORD.
- 3. A church in the city of NYARDOR in the west of AZAZEM. It is partially hewn from a cave, and both its altar and the large icon of the HOLY SWORD are hewn from the living rock around it.

HOLY SWORD, SECT OF THE: Rel. Org. Sect of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE that emerged in c. 2500 RM and became officially-recognised by the church in 2523 RM. Its followers revere the HOLY SWORD as a divine object and the font from which the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR draws his strength. This differs from the standard teachings of the Church of the Undying Machine, where the Holy Sword is merely a symbol of the divine might of the UNDYING MACHINE and the Archpotentate Malichar, though it retains enough of the tenets of the main religion so as not to be deemed heretical.

HOLY WATERS, the: see ASSITISI.

HOMAII: Mor. Small grotesque ASICTHAIN, which look like human babies, with red skin, long thin limbs and bulbous heads and stomachs. They are carnivorous and dwell in certain ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED forests in KORACHAN and the west of VÂRR, preying on unsuspecting travellers. They are largely immobile, and live sedentary lives, springing into life when they sense nearby prey. They are sapient, and though concepts of art and culture are alien to them, they do communicate with one another and have a vague hierarchy with the oldest mobile member of a group being the 'leader' orchestrating attacks on prey.

They have not been well-studied though it is thought that untreated bites from homaii may lead to the victim degenerating, becoming physically similar to them - though the difference in stature singles them out, and they will be victimised by the group and likely killed and cannibalised. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life: Asicthain.

HOMARRAC: Set. Coastal settlement in the east of KORACHAN, known for its crab fishing (Pop. c. 7,750).

HOMATRA: Set. Settlement in the c of THE VORANDINE, to the far south of the plains of BOTH RATHO. Its main industry is agriculture (Pop. c. 6,400).

HOME OF THE DEAD: see AMANTHEA.

HOMEAT: Set. Fortified settlement in the south west of GIBEAH. Its main industry is nickel mining (Pop. unknown).

HOMMAL: Soc. Pol. One of seven ruling CLANS in CISNERIA, whose emblem is the polar fox, who embodies cunning, and is a guardian to politicians. The other clans are BERMION, DISLMA, GYSTAR, KRAKYR, KRISLOR, SKULFUR.

HOMMARA: Set. Small city in the region of NAGARHI, in the west of AMMESH. Its main industry is the cultivation of cotton (Pop. c. 14,200).

HOMREA: 1. Geo. Long hill forming the northern part of the HOLIASOR Mountains in the south of HOLOLACH^(1,).

- 2. Pol. One of eight prefectures in $\underline{HOLOLACH}^{(1.)}$, controlling the southern hills north of the $\underline{HOLIASOR}$ Mountains from the $\underline{SEAOFMARDEN}$ in the west, to \underline{TORMEA} in the east. Its controlling city is $\underline{TOLIRANEA}$.
- 3. Set. City in the c south of HOLOLACH^(1.) and old centre of the prefecture of Homrea (now TOLIRANEA) (Pop. c. 15,000).

HONEAN RIDGE: Geo. Basaltic escarpment in the east of OPHIUSSA.

HONEYWOOD: see SÖRR.

HONGAN: Sca. Reef off the south western coast of CUTH, just north of the island of OAACH.

HONITUCH: Geo. Scrubland in the south of the DESOLATION OF

ASTUDAN. What trees grow here are stunted and crippled against the winds that howl through the Desolation. The foliage becomes denser and greener the closer to THE OLD FOREST one moves.

HONOMARIA: Set. Coastal city in the south east of PERGOST, in the region of MENNOM. Its main industry is commercial seal hunting (Pop. c. 12,000).

HONORIA BASILEUS: (D. 124 RM) Pol. His. Per. Member of the BASILEID DYNASTY who became BASILEUS (queen) of AZAZEM 122 RM, under the yoke of KORACHANI vassalage. Her machinations led the entire Dynasty into revolt against their Korachani overlords, with events growing into a civil conflict in the city of BASILEA in 123 RM.

The conflict escalated over the next year, with the city becoming a hotbed of close quarter fighting as Korachani troops clashed with the Basileid forces in palaces, temples and granaries. The Basileids were defeated early in 124 RM, with much of the royal family dying in the conflict. Honoria and her closest cohorts were imprisoned until the decision was made to move the capital from Basilea to AGLAIA (2.) later in the year. She was taken to the new capital following its inauguration and executed, with the remnants of the Basileid Dynasty forced to prostrate themselves before the CONSULITE.

HONOUR GUARD: Mil. Rnk. Generic term used in reference to elite guards entrusted with the protection of palaces, royals and emperors throughout ELYDEN. More specifically, the term may mean something else in other nations:

1. War. In VAALK, elite troops and palace guards to the HEPTARCHY. They wear golden armour with red details. In an age of augmented troops and TECHNARCANE innovations, the Vaalkan honour guard are proud to be pure-HUMAN without ATRAMENTAL augmentation or ORTHOSES. In the tradition of their history, they are the best of the MAORATE'S guards, fearsome warriors who devote their entire lives to the perfection and study of warfare in all its facets and are unparalleled in the REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO.

HONOURB: Mil. Rnk. Military rank in TZALLRACH, its members famed for their lion-mounts and devastating charges. Though they were traditionally equipped with lances and long-hafted cavalry axes, today they carry and gunblades and their mounts are augmented through TECHNARCANE and SHAPING.

HORANAK: Pol. Set. Capital of SABAEA. It lies along the EGETAKHAN ROAD trade route and links it with the VALARI ROAD that crosses the southern expanse of SHAZGIN (Pop. c. 7,340,000).

HORARIA: Set. Small city in the c of CISNERIA (Pop. c. 14,000).

HORASTAS: Rvr. River in north of LIMOTH^(1.), flowing south for 830-miles through the emirates of UKOLIST and DEITHO^(1.), from sources in the KOTHA ICHOLLIGHA and PEREIDAS Mountains, before meeting its parent, the river ATROTHA^(1.) at the border between Deitho and Limoth^(2.).

HORATHACHARTH: Mil. Str. Twisted corroded iron fortress in the far south east of the FLAESCUS, the fleshy earth of the region throbbing obscenely at its base.

HORDE-KING, the: (D. 584 RM) Pol. His. DEGENERATE warlord who emerged in the region of the UMBRA SOKHAR in c. 580, filling a vacuum left by the collapse of the SOKHARAN EMPIRE around two-centuries earlier. He united disparate degenerate tribes together alongside marauder and scavenger clans, and swept across the Umbra Sokhar, pillaging settlements as they went.

His death in 584 RM from aepathy left the horde leaderless and it later fragmented, consuming itself over the next decades. The remnants settled the region and would go on to mingle with other people, including refugees from KHARKHARADONTIS, and would alter found the great cities of CATAFLAQUE, KADOTA, and TLATHAT.

HORDRI OF ELMIAD: f. Pol. Per. (B. 3951 RM) LADY OF THE CABINET of VALBAR⁽²⁾, representing the state of VEDOTER.

HOREKHAH: m. His. Per. (D. 3758 RM) Mil. Pol. KHAMIDIAN champion who opposed the KORACHANI colonisation, of his land. Starting in c. 3719 RM he began opposing the already waning Korachani government, and secretly orchestrated various guerilla attacks on imperial convoys over the next years, leading to the eventual abandonment of the region to the DOMNITORS in 3721 RM, after which he continued applying pressure upon the Korachani caretakes. His actions were instrumental in the eventual withdrawal of the Domnitors in 3781 RM, though he died a few decades before the formation of the republic council from which the elected Pharoant JENDAYA DET would form a new monarchic dynasty.

A MONUMENT to his exploits was erected outside IAHNEF, and the Independence Day festival is celebrated in front of the colossus.

HOREKHAH, COLOSSUS OF: His. Arc. Monument dedicated to the champion HOREKHAH, outside of the city of IAHNEF in KHAMID, whose actions were instrumental in leading to the eventual abandonment of the KORACHANI EMPIRE from the region – first in 3721 RM when it left the region in control of the DOMNITORS, and again in 3781 RM when the government was handed over to the PHAROANTS, bringing independence to Khamid after seven centuries of colonialist rule.

The statue, shaped in the form of an ancient Khamidian colossus, is the site of the annual Independence Day celebrations, and is well regarded to this day.

HOREMARA: Rwr. Ephemeral river in the c north of THETIS, flowing south after rare rains in the west of the KOTHA ICHOLLIGHA and the east of the HETHA GHUR Mountains to the north. It flows south for a maximum of 550-miles at its peak, ending in the endorheic basin in DHAUDACAA, sometimes forming a lake, known as ANETHA, which brings life to the surrounding area, but which has a short life, lasting a few weeks at most.

HORN OF PLENTY: Mys. Obj. Ancient cornucopia attributed to the DEMIURGE ARIMASPI, which was gifted to the EELYOUHNS in the THIRD AGE. It was last documented in the mid FOURTH AGE, and is currently thought lost or destroyed in the south of SAMMAEA.

HORNED CHARGER: See AREN, RUNE OF.

HORODOPTA: See. Small city in the north west of OKKHAM (Pop. c. 14,750).

HOROLOGY: Voc. The study of time and manufacture of time-keeping devices, such as clocks and watches. Simple timekeeping devices include water clocks, that count the passage of time as a measure of volume that escapes from a vessel; hourglasses, that count time as a measure of falling grains of sand; or sundials, that measure the passage of the sun in the sky, telling the time based on the position of the suns' shadow relative to a calibrated arm.

More advanced timekeeping devices include watches and clocks, which were developed in the $\underline{\text{FIFTH AGE}}$ across $\underline{\text{ELYDEN}}$ between c. 1800-2200 RM and continue to be used to this day.

HOROM: Geo. Island in the THARACASSAN WATERS, and part of the PANTHEON ISLES, under the rule of LIMOTH^(1.).

HORRIN'S BLIGHT: Int. Sup. Flo. Dangerous ATRAMENTAL fungus found in the east of KHARKHARADONTIS and other equatorial tropical regions of eastern SAMMAEA. Spores are carried in the wind and land on leaves and other food sources, causing mutation in animals that eat them. Most creatures that eat the spores die, their bodies sprouting new spores, continuing the spore's life cycle but a rare few survive, their bodies and minds irrevocably changed and tortured, defying any means of taxonomical categorisation. Such aberrations are incredibly dangerous and, can traverse tens of thousands of miles in the search of food. They can cause untold damage if they ever reach civilisation and are not stopped in time. In many cases they are incredibly resistant to damage, and their extremities need to be neutralised to debilitate them.

The fungus is highly valued in CLONE and FLESHWRIGHTING industries, where the spores and their effects are studied and their mutagenic properties harnessed for use in various industries. Many HAGHOUERIN and UMBRANS owe their roots to this fungus, for instance.

The fungus was first documented by the naturalist HORRIN in a Kharkharadontid expedition sent to explore the FOREST OF CHAOS in c. 1600 RM. He discovered the remnants of a previous expedition from a few decades earlier with which all contact had been lost, finding the notes of its chief scientific officer, which suggested that had started to understand the traits of the spores. The expedition was killed in the process. Horrin's own expedition suffered various setbacks and many of its members and porters were killed by what he believed to be porters who had ingested the spores. His findings formed the basis of most future research. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life: Racharin.

HORRIN: m. his. Edu. Per. (B. 1565 – D. 1651 RM) Naturalist and explorer who documented the ATRAMENTAL spores later named HORRIN'S BLIGHT. He was immortalised in a statue dedicated to him that now sits outside the IMPERIAL COLLEGE OF FABRICATE INCEPTION in TEREKON.

HORRIPILATIA: Geo. Grotesque land in the far north of the KHARKHARADONTID desert, just west of the border with PNESSA. The region is expansive, covering over 65,000 square-miles, and is renowned for its strange appearance. The earth here is homogenous, and though contours exist, the land is smooth, noted for its gigantic gooseflesh-like protrusions, each between one and two yards wide. In the centre of each such protrusion is a stiff lash-like 'tree' reaching some 10-ft. high.

These odd flora, if such they can be called, remain largely uncatalogued by MPERIAL scholars, and are known to cause severe tinnitus to anyone approaching them. This is followed by severe nausea and vomiting of blood.

The region is categorised as DANGEROUS by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

HORROR: Lan. Fau. Dre. Common name given to the supranatural creatures that can take shape in DREAMSCAPES, which are more correctly known as ONEIROI. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

HORROWHYRST: Set. Small city in the north of CEGANE located in an ancient crumbling caldera. It was founded many years ago by a child-ruler, though most of its ancient history was expunged when it became a part of Cegane (Pop. c. 14,000).

HORSE GATE, the: also 'Umma'. Arc. One of seventeen major gates in the RED WALL in SAUA. The Horse Gate is one of the southern-most gates, controlling access along the GREAT ROAD between the HARÉSHK and Saua. This is arguably the busiest of the Walls' Gates, given its location along the major trade-route.

HORSETAIL: Flo. Archaic plant that is found in some regions of the SAMMAEAN continent, such as the wetlands of ATHORHU in PARTHIS, and ATUGUR in LIDEA. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

HORSETAIL DOVE: Fau. Dove with a distinctive fanning tail, from which it derives its name. The bird is common in AHRISHEN, TEMUJA and SAUA. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

HORSCH: 1. Rvr. River to the south of the BAND Mountains⁽²⁾ flowing for 150-miles south east, before joining with its parent, the river APTER.

2. Geo. Name given to the \underline{BAND} headland (1.) by the people of \underline{ALAM} \underline{BETHYL} and $\underline{KOLCHIS}$.

HORSI: Mil. Str. Fortress in the south of the island of PHARU in KHAMID. The fortress guards the entrance into the BOILING SEA.

HORTA: Set. Fortified city in the far north east of SKAROS, along the northern bank of the river ULAARA, close to the border with BASSORAH. It forms a major stop along the RED ROUTE and has representatives from most of the merchant houses that are included in the SIRIPHAGAN ALLIANCE. As a result, It has many inns and is famed for its auction yards and markets (Pop. c. 41,000).

HORTULANI, the: Org. Order of gentlemen gardeners that was founded in VÂRR in 3875 RM. Largely made up of FREEMEN and PATRICIANS with a respect and love for the natural world (some of them from industrialist HOUSES that had a hand in the deforestation of their home).

They travel to around Vârr, attempting to restore fecundity to areas where the natural world has been destroyed by industry and ELYDEN'S slow death. The work is hard and the soil in many places has turned to little more than dust, nullifying their efforts. Elsewhere, the people of dying settlements have become distrustful of outsiders and oppose their attempts to restore their lands to life.

Where they can, they employ SHAPERS with an affinity for nature and flora, whose abilities can speed up the recovery of wasted regions by decades. Some have become shapers themselves specifically so that they can better care for the remaining natural lands of Vârr.

The influence of the order has spread the land of its founding, and small chapters of the Hortulani can now be found in PELASGOS, KORACHAN, as well as ALMAGEST.

HORÚK: Soc. Pol. Ruling house in KOLCHIS, based in the city of ILLPACK.
The Horúk bloodline is said to be descended from the ancient KIRI deities, and though outsiders doubt this, the legend is enforced by its members and the Kolchisi people all accept it as truth. Their supposed divinity may be a reference to one of the Two-and-Twenty DEMIURGES or one of their SCIONS, though there is little evidence to support this despite the houses' beliefs. The LORD-CONSTELLAR of Kolchis is elected from eligible members of house Horúk HOSAMAAR: Rvr. River in the c of HOLOLACH⁽¹⁾, flowing south west through the prefectures of HOLICHRIS and BROTRIS for 260-miles from lake LO HOLVAN, before meeting with its parent, the river RUAVAR.

HOSCHRA: Set. City in the prefecture of HOLICHRIS in the c of HOLOLACH^(1.), along the course of the river HOSAMAAR. It also forms a link in THE WAY trade-route, with merchants crossing it on their way between AQUARIIA and the MULL CITY-STATES (Pop. c. 12,300).

HOSEOT: Pol. Set. Ruling city in the tribe of ESSENIA, in the south of MULCIBER, in the GROWING MOUNTAINS. It is known for its religious fanatics who undertake the painful and dangerous ritual of FOOT BINDING in honour of their deity NEPHTHALONT (Pop. c. 140,000).

HOSETA: Set. City in the c north west of AETHIOS, at the confluence where the river NARRATI meets the river SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾. The river is too wide, and its span too erratic to be crossed by a bridge, and the city operates an extensive system of pulley-based barges to span its two sides (Pop. c. 35,000).

HOSHAYAR: Set. Major city in the west of the BARRIER LANDS in the north of SAMMAEA. It is a major trade centre, though lies off the IVORY ROAD. Once coastal, it now maintains a link to the BAY OF ESHIRON via an expansive system of canal locks (Pop. c. 80,000).

HOSIPEL: Rui. Abandoned city in the c-south east of NÁRTHEL. Until c. 2200 RM the city was one of the largest in Nárthel, though it slowly dwindled following the death of surrounding regions such as ARARAH and LUQARAH.

HOSOSH: 1. Geo. Large wooded valley in the north east of TZALLRACH, stretching over the border into the HENDECARCHY of CHLORIS in MALAN.

2. Rvr. Wetlands in the north east of TZALLRACH, along the course of the river BAELLI covering some 2,599-square-miles.

HOSSOGUEGL: see GIBBERING WORM, THE.

HOST, the: Mys. His. Rel. The stone-like hollow body of the DEMIURGE NYARLOTH following his construction of the SOUL-ENGINE⁽¹⁾ late in the THIRD AGE, and the successful transmigration of his essence into it by his acolytes the SEPTS.

His body was discarded by the Septs, who devoted themselves to worshipping the GHOST IN THE MACHINE, but the majority of IROTHANI came to worship the body, rather than the contents of the engine, leaving Nyarloth weak and in a state of torpor within the Soul-engine. The Septs knew the error of this idolatry and tried to persuade the people that their god was interred in the machine, but the irothani did not listen, continuing to worship the body, which they called the Host. This resulted in a civil war that tore the irothani empire asunder, bringing to an end one of the largest and most long-lived mortal empires in ELYDEN.

The body is now lost, believed to lie somewhere in the jungles of $\underline{\text{WAELMIGH}}$ in $\underline{\text{CHEIRA}}$ after being moved north by its worshippers millennia past, following a $\underline{\text{PLAGUE}}$ wiped out the majority of its worshippers.

HORTARU: Set. Fortified settlement in the north west of Kingdom of ROMOREA⁽²⁾. It lies along the course of the IVORY ROAD and has many markets and storage yards, and is known for its large fortified minaret that stands over a vast subterranean granary (Pop. c. 7,500).

HOTAZAK: Set. Major coastal city in the west of VARU, and headquarters of the ORDER OF THE MENISCUS (Pop. c. 800,000).

HOTH: Set. City in the south of CHTHYRID (Pop. c. 11,500).

HOTHAGHOL: Geo. Region in the south of the headland of KHITAI in NAARETH, the north east of SAMMAEA. The region is known for its twisted inhospitable terrain that is composed primarily of oxidised metal. These metal fields make up around 1,000 square-miles to the east of the BAY OF KITTA, the tidal waters of which are responsible for the oxidisation of the area.

The place is a lifeless wasteland, pitted and worn by the elements, its shores dominated by stained scabrous flakes and tainted orange-brown waters. Very little life is known to exist here.

HOTHATH: Pol. His. Lost imperial colony founded in c. 1000. No records exist of it today, other than its name, mentioned in passing in official documents from the day.

HOTHRA: Set. Small settlement in the prefecture of BROTRIS, in the west of HOLOLACH^(1.) (Pop. c. 2,400).

HOTOCHTHIA: Set. Dre. City in the east of Granneâst and forming one side of the 'corridor' Dreamscape of Osculata, alongside the city of Dethure. Due to the fast travel between the two cities afforded by the dreamscape, the two share a close connection, and they have become a vital part of the nation's trade inner trade route (Pop. c. 83,000).

HOTRA: Com. Set. Small city in the west of the PARTHISAN colony of VARTA⁽¹⁾, 200-miles west of the main city of Varta⁽²⁾. Trade with LATUROLL is common, and it has several inns and caravanserais where merchants can rest (Pop. c. 15,400).

HOTUTAER: Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region in c-south east of TARTAK, responsible for the taint of the river KHARAD. The wasteland was first recorded in c. 3250 RM and rapidly expanded north, overwhelming the cities of HAKRAT and AGDAL by c. 3280 and 3088 RM.

The north of the region is flanked by 5 fortresses, spaced 20-miles apart from each other, each of which bears a large array of SIPHON ENGINES, whose sole purpose is to stall the region's advance north.

The region is categorised as $\underline{\text{DANGEROUS}}$ by the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI}}$ $\underline{\text{INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES}}$.

HOU LATANI: Rui. Ancient stone temple in the south of the desert of VACIVA in the east of ROMOREA⁽²⁾.

HOUDA: Set. Small fortified city in the north east of LIDEA, close to the border with BA'AKH. It is known in the region for its order of guardians who patrol the border (Pop. c. 14,750).

HOUGAN: Rel. Rnk. A caste of spirit-masters in ANUBIA, who revere the dead the desert has claimed, undertaking solitary vision-quests where the desert speaks to them in the voices of the dead, granting them wisdom and knowledge. They are traditionally occultists and shamen with the ability to commune with SPIRITS. They are solitary beings, though tend to originate from nomadic families rather than urban areas.

HOUSAR: Set. Coastal settlement in the east of VÂRR, overlooking the north of the SEA OF SPIRES (Pop. c. 2,200).

HOUSE, HALFBLOOD: Soc. Oth. Not to be confused with PATRICIAN HOUSES.

Common name within the KORACHANI EMPIRE for HALFBLOODS of apparent shared descent. Few halfbloods choose to use the word, though those that do see it as a title not unlike those of royal dynasties. Some Houses are scattered, fragmented, their members solitary and unknowing of their assumed heritage, where others thrive in the infamy of their House, enjoying a fame or notoriety not unlike that of a Patrician House.

HOUSE, PATRICIAN: Soc. Pol. The extended family of a particular PATRICIAN⁽¹⁾ bloodline, common across the INNER SEA REGION, including the SOCIALIST REPUBLIC OF ALMAGEST, the REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO, the KORACHANI EMPIRE, and the SECULAR REPUBLIC OF PARTHIS.

Patrician houses form the undisputed upper echelons of the social structure of the Inner Sea Region and control most private trade and industries, though in most cases they are beholden to their rulers and must pay large tithes (the burden of which is often carried by the helots, indentured workers, and slave under their control), and must supply troops to their governments in times of war, much like a feudal system. Patrician houses set fashion trends, and most literate people come from their ranks. Many patrician houses are centuries if not millennia old and have ancient traditions and customs, many of them idiosyncratic or anachronistic. Members of ancient houses often believe that they are better than more recent ones, and they make sure to show it, but in truth most ancient houses are deeply in dept and living their twilight years off of waning generational wealth, whilst living in crumbling millennia-old citadel and wearing moth-eaten finery.

Most large patrician houses have standing armies made up of private forces, that can range from slave troops, to paid helot or indentured forces, to well-equipped and trained elites, with some houses favouring one over the other and other houses having a mix. Typically, young members of the house – second sons and daughters, cousins, and so on – will be sent to military schools before returning home to serve as officers for their family's armies. Archaic laws, particularly in Parthis and KORACHAN, state how many troops a house can field based on its holdings and size, and as a result many houses inflate the size of their holdings to justify fielding larger forces, though the more powerful houses flaunt their corruption openly in massive armies that rival the military power of smaller nations. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

HOUSE OF THE DIELOTS: Str. Large hostelry in the city of ETHAND in the north east of AETHIOS. It serves as a hub to DIELOTS, who in their travels of north eastern SAMMAEA often return to the House, bringing news of the world at large, and filling the annals of its halls with new knowledge to educate their peers.

HOUSE VODUS: Pol. Org. One of the three riling factions of AEONAS, with the others being the SILDELK RING, and the PEOPLE'S COALITION.

HOUSE WARS: Soc. Disputes between the different PATRICIAN, HALFBLOOD and DESPOSYNI houses that have escalated into open warfare throughout the reign of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR, particularly during the era of the REIGN OF THE EMPTY THRONE.

HOUSEHOLD: Soc. In NAARETH, the term used for the classical eusocial kindreds and family groups. Today the term is largely synonymous with settlement or city, though it has cultural connotations that the former terms do not have. Each Household is led by a MATRIARCH, from whom most members are descended, or at least related to, in the case of larger households.

HOUSHNAM: Geo. Dry plains in the south of the BARRIER LANDS to the north of the VANNAKORDOR Mountains, bordered by rocky ridges and escarpments. It is home to most of the ruby deposits of the Barrier Lands.

HOUSHOLD, THE: Int. Org. Law. Major organised crime syndicate that operates primarily within the nation of KORACHAN, but also within the KORACHANI EMPIRE as a whole, including its various dependencies.

Based in the city of ZEPHANICHAN, it has existed there for millennia, since the unification of the seven original CITY-STATES of KORACHAN by the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR led to the overthrowing of the thenruling royal house. What few members of the royal house of Zephanichan were not slain slowly regrouped in the shadows of the city, establishing lock warehouses along the course of the river CHANI, from where they gradually spread across the newly-united Korachan as a legitimate warehouse and transportation business that today has a presence in every major Korachani city, and beyond.

Depite this legitimate business being genuinely profitable, this is merely a front for possibly hundreds of independent criminal endeavours maintained by The Household, including arms trafficking, drug trafficking, fencing, fraud, gambling, loan sharking, money laundering, prostitution, racketeering, and smuggling, amongst others.

Many influential Korachani PATRICIAN HOUSES are said to be wholly under the control of The Household, with many others believed to be partially involved, with some even claiming that its influence even goes as far as THE COUNCIL OF SEVEN in KHADON.

Though originally the goals of The Household were to regain the royal status and social power it had before the coming of the Archpotentate Malichar, this goal has since been replaced by the simple accumulation of wealth and power, though some cells within the organisation maintains a desire to return to the days of the monarchy, now remembered only through legend and ingrained myths within The Household itself.

Fully initiated members of The Household are referred to as BRAGGADOCI.

HOWLING GHOSTS, the: Wea. Name given to the frosty winds that howl through the highlands of northern PERGOST, said by some to echo with the spirits of the dead.

HRABAN THE CURSED: Myr. Leg. In the mythology and legends of ALMAGEST, SKAROS, LAASKHA, AZAZEM, KORACHAN and PELASGOS (thought to have originated in Pelasgos as a corrupted form of an ancient HADEN myth), the belief in a legendary male figure cursed by his own greed and lust to forever be without that which he craves most. Hraban takes the form of a plague-ridden bird-headed man, his body covered in sores and welts and other curses of the flesh. He rides a chariot drawn by throngs of emaciated men and women, all victims of his excesses and bigotry in life. He wanders the land, an itinerant loner, giving rides to those who would risk his attentions. For his services he demands a price of flesh – seven ounces. The flesh he takes is a vain attempt to restore his own body to beauty and in the process taste again the pleasures of the flesh, but no matter how many people he helps, how much flesh he collects, he is cursed to forever wander the land, undying, yet far from alive.

The sign of Hraban (the silhouette of a cart) is a common-enough sight in imperial cities north of $\underline{\text{THE INNER SEA}}$, where it is used to mark the house or flesh of men and women convicted of carnal crimes. Such people are often referred to in a derogatory fashion as Hraban. See Vol II: Legends and Folktales.

HRAEFAN: Rel. Dei. Demi-goddess of death in LYRIDIA, AHRISHEN and the HARÉSHK. She is associated with ravens and change through death, and is worshipped out of fear rather than reverence and is paid tribute to by those who have recently lost a loved one or who are close to death. As a deity, she is comparable to the TEMUJAN tutelary spirit known as SUCCUL THE RAVEN. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

HRAEFANA: Rel. Set. Holy-city and western-most settlement of note in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of EDICULE^(1.). The city is dedicated to the EPONYMOUS demi-goddess of death and is renowned for its black granite temples (Pop. c. 15,000).

HRAS: Set. Settlement in the west of GNOTH, in the region of ALKAHEST. It is known for its iron mines (Pop. c. 3,000).

HRIDAN: 1. Geo. Area within the wastelands of ALMAGEST, known for its extremely brittle DUSTSTONE formations and sinkholes. It covers an area of around 900 square-miles, and is filled with a honeycomb of caverns, most of them too small for humans to travel, though still home to a plethora of life, mostly nocturnal.

2. Dem. 'Hridan'. Ntn. A small nation in the present-day far east of Almagest, that peaked between c. 1500 – 2000 RM following the DEMIURGE RENAISSANCE. The RENAISSANCE CRUSADES in c. 1050-1100 RM across the nations of the KORACHANI EMPIRE against scholars and artists led to a great many people fleeing north into ALMAGEST and what would become HRIDAN, which would go on to become a haven to artists, scholars and free thinkers. Its capital was SICAN, which is now buried in dust fields, claimed by collapsed DUSTSTONE formations in 1962 RM, a fate which many of its larger cities also experienced, eventually leading to its collapse and absorption by Almagest in 2002 RM.

3. Geo. Plains in the north west of AZAZEM. The short-lived free land of HRIDAN^(2.) was named after this region, as some of its people originated from here.

HRIDANEM: Rvr. Polluted river in the west of AZAZEM. It's waters were once the centre of the DROSS industry in Azazem, though they were left irrevocably polluted, and it was left abandoned by c. 2500 RM.

HRIMA: 1. Geo. Ancient mountain forming the north eastern coast of KASPIA. They are low and crumbling, known for their rockslides and earthquakes. They are the subject of many epics and poems in Kaspian literature, and are noted for the beauty of their jagged peaks and frozen waterfalls.

2. Geo. Canyon-system in the east of \underline{KASPIA} , around the crumbling eastern slopes of the Hrima mountain.

HROKAZ: Int Flo. The only tree of significant size to be found in the region of STOLAS. Its trunk is huge, its two forking branches bare, of sickened grey bark, barren. A community of AL AKHI rook in its hollow shell, which is regarded as an ancestral relic; a remnant of ancient times when their DEMIURGE father maintained a measure of respect and power. The priests of MERKABH congregate here, as this is where their main festivals are held (Pop. c. 1,200).

HRUNDU: also 'Hrundu, the Desert Lord. Rel. Deity within the KATHIAN pantheon of the TETHYSIAN religion of KATHISIS. He is regarded as a demigod or patron of the desert and those who travel through it in Tethysia, and THETIS. The entity is possibly a relic from an ancient culture that predated the people of eastern LLACHATUL. As god of the desert, whose tears are said to create the seasonal rains and inundations that Tethysia is known for, Hrundu is very powerful, wielding control over life and death. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

HRUNDU, TEMPLE OF: Rel. Str. Temple in the TURCAR desert in the west of TETHYSIA. The place is a retreat for monks who dedicate their lives to the worship of HRUNDU THE DESERT-LORD.

HRYG: 1. Pol. Duchy of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of NICADA.

2. Set. Fortified settlement in the north east of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of NICADA. It is known for its barracks and is a centre of Haréshki armies, and forms a part of the GREAT ROAD – seeing trade to and from SAUA (Pop. c. 41,300).

HRYG RIMS: Geo. Long rocky crest running south west on the southern face of the GESHAL massif in the HARÉSHK.

HU: (B. 3079 – D. 3147 RM) Mil. General who united the FIVE THRONES of SA'WEH, becoming the first DIADON of a united SAUA. His death let the relative peace of his rule shattered, leaving Saua in a brutal civil war for a decade, until his sun HUATA emerged victorious in 3156 RM.

HUAGH: Ind. Set. Small city in the north of AHRISHEN along the course of the river SAVEST. Its main industry is the manufacture of wool, and it is known for its ancient 10 large waterwheels that still provide power to the textile manufactories (Pop. c. 17,200).

HUARANAT: Set. Town in the south of SKAROS, some 190-miles south east of BALAAM, north of the EKALSCA Mountains. It emerged in c. 3500 RM from the ruin of an earlier MANUFACTORY that was located in the same area that had been abandoned centuries prior and its people are descendants of explorers who unearthed ALAASI ruins in the area (Pop. c. 3,800).

HUARAR: also 'City of the Gate'. Set. Fortified city built in the midspan of the LADON defensive lines in the south of JURRAS⁽²⁾. The titular gate feeds trade north to Jurras and south to TARTAK and it is a major stop along the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 100,000).

HUARSAENTHIT: Soc. Rel. Geo. Bone-pit in the c of VAALK afflicted by the ATRAMENTA. The charnel mounds that fill the deepest reaches of the pit are granted a twisted semblance of life, writhing as though with an intellect of their own. The pit is said to date back to at least c 1500 RM, and hasn't been used in centuries, though the bodies do not decompose.

HUATA: (B. 3109 – D. 3171 RM) Pol. His. Son of HU, and the second emperor of SAUA. He rose to power following 9-years of civil war after the death of his father in 3147 RM.

HUDEA: Set. Settlement in the c north of LIDEA, along the canyon of GOLET. The city's main industry is calcite mining, and gems acquired this way are often sold to merchants travelling the SALT ROAD which passes farther north in ZERED (Pop. c. 12,800).

HUECHTA: Set. Small city in the north of SERROK (Pop. c. 14,000).

HUESTAN: Rvr. River in the far east of RHINOCOLOURA, flowing east for 325-miles from sources in the ZELET BADLANDS, before meeting lake ABANA.

HUGHA: His. Geo. Historic endorheic basin in the ROMOREA^(1,) rift valley.
In 3821 RM it was flooded alongside other endorheic basins, by the Kingdom of Romorea^(2,), creating the artificial inland sea of HASAAZ ARAAT.

HULDAH, THE PROPHETESS: (B. unknown) Rel. His. ELDRIAN peasant girl who in c. 1500 RM had a vision of an angel in a pool and who subsequently spent her life looking for her, finding her finally before collapsing in front of a frozen mere in the north of the TAGHAIRM plains.

The WHITE ANGEL TAHIRA bestowed renewed life upon her, and she came to be worshipped as a prophetess of Tahira. As it became apparent that she did not age, she was elevated to the status of living saint, who wields great power and prestige within the CULT OF TAHIRA.

HULICITTA: Geo. Flo. natural cleft deep cleft in the east of the OCHEASER scrublands in the south west of the PARTHISAN colony of VARTA⁽¹⁾. It is unknown to most but those few who have stumbled upon it have been greeted by an oasis of fig trees and other feculent growth.

HULKA: Set. City in the east of VÂRR, along the courses of the river DALARIA. It was, during the KORACHANI EMPIRE'S tenure there, wealthy and relatively populous (the census of 2794 RM revealing a population just under 750,000 people), enjoying under the leadership of the DOMNITORS a healthy logging and woodworking industry that provided luxury items and furniture to the empire's INTELLIGENTSIA and wealthiest PATRICIAN families via the Red Route, which continues to pass through the city, whose harbours are full of ferries that transport the caravans east down the Dalaria and across the PROPONTIS into LYRIDIA.

The forests that once dominated the north of Vârr were exhausted by c. 3000 RM, which began a period of slow decline for Hulka. Though it still exists it is now a shadow of its former self, its woodworkers still expert artisans, though struggling now to acquire timber; either at inflated prices from RHAMIA or through great toil through its own mercenary loggers, who acquire timber at great risk from KARKATAN in the south east of the OLD FOREST.

Outsiders postulate as to why the wooded region of NUMEN, the borders of which are not 150-miles south west of Hulka, are ignored. Though Vårran's have shunned the place since c. 2000 RM when the remnants of Numen, until then logged heavily, were abandoned (Pop. c. 74,000).

HUMAM: Sup. Rnk. Within the art of FIRMAMENTISM, a SHAPER of weeds, roots, wood and leaves and other plant-matter. See Vol IV: the Materia Omna.

HUMAN: PIr. 'humans'. Mor. One of the original Two-and-Twenty MORTAL PEOPLES, and the children of the DEMIURGE AVRAHAM the Pale King. Humans are unique in that they are the only mortal race that can freely breed with other Mortal peoples, leading to many various half-breeds and creatures (like MULLS for instance). None truly know the origins of this trait, though it is believed to lie within the nature of their father, Avraham.

Humans were abandoned by Avraham following the appearance of the AZOR (descendants of unions between humans and his self-born SCION AZER), whom he regarded far more highly as superior creatures. Humans were later adopted by the Demiurge RACHANAEL, who had by then forsaken his own children, the PLAGI, and went on to spread across Elyden, where they would proliferate, far outnumbering any of the other mortals. By the FIFTH AGE. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life: Sicthain.

HUNA: 1. Pol. Geo. One of the nine kingdoms of ELALLIA, located in the north west of the nation.

2. Pol. Set. Major coastal city and capital of the kingdom of $Nuna^{(1)}$ in the c of ELALLIA (Pop. c. 287,200).

HUNAINA: Sec. Small city in the c north of KAZZAR. It is a major producer of Thyme and other herbs (Pop. c. 15,000).

HUND: Set. City in the region of FURUD in THE SURRACH known for its recently-opened iron-mines (Pop. c. 11,500).

HUNDRED SPIRITS, CHAMBER OF A: Rel. Str. The largest TUTELARY Temple in TEMUIA, located in the GREATTOWN of DUARIAHAHN. It is the only known temple in all of Temuja where the entirety of the tutelary spirit pantheon is represented under one roof, their uncounted manifold statues and idols filling its halls and chapels.

HUNDRED STREET ROAD: Arc. Set. Enclosed street in the CITY OF
ALMAGEST covering many miles, almost all of which is enclosed, either by arcades, glass ceilings, bridges, or entire superstructures, giving it the appearance of a tunnel, which is lined with doors and windows, making up residences, storefronts, and industries.

Part of its length is made up of original now-regraded streets, part is old buildings with walls torn down, and much is tailor-made to protect merchants travelling to the harbour from the east from the elements. Many consider it their backyard, with thousands of homes and apartments leading to its vaulted expanse. There are few air vents or skylights, and the steady stream of CONVEYORS all contribute to dubious quality of air along the street.

HUNDRED TOWERS, the: see LADON.

HUNT: Set. Coastal settlement in the east of CHEIRA (Pop. c. 3,000).

HUNTER'S BELT, the: Ast. Con. Constellation composed of three stars in a roughly straight line forming the belt of the constellation NEPHILIA. See Vol II: Constellations.

HUNU SARAQ: Set. City in the c north of CHEIRA. It is the centre of an expansive colliery region (Pop. c. 47,400).

HUORORI: Set. Small city in the region of BHAAT LOTHA in the c of THE SURRACH (Pop. c. 12,400).

HUQ MENDA: Set. Small city in the c of CHEIRA, situated along the floodplains of the river YAGNOTH PHATHAN. It is known for its reed cultivation, which is used in the production of various reed-items (Pop. c. 13,000).

HURA: 1. Geo. Region in the east of JURRAS⁽²⁾, considered to be the ancestral homeland of its PEOPLE. The city of AKORIS has roots in the early days of the FIFTH AGE and there are ruins of ancient settlements in what would have been the coast c. 5000 years ago, facing the SEA OF AZAM.

2. Lan. Ntn. Native name for $\underline{JURRAS}^{(2)}$. The word means me or us. The word is etymologically linked with the word Huran, which is the name for the native people of \underline{Jurras} and northern \underline{TARTAK} .

HURACH: lit. 'ash place'. Geo. Area covering some 1,000 square-miles in the north of KORACHAN, composed of thick deposits of Ash and pumice, miles thick in places and compact like soft stone. The effects of water erosion on the surface here has resulted in many spectacular features and formations. The ash is resultant from the many manufactories that once existed in the region and many past volcanic eruptions of the peaks of the FATUACH mountain-range, most of which are now dormant.

HURAN: Eth. The people of JURRAS^(2.) and TARTAK, dating back to c - 1000 RM, originating in the region of HURA in the east of the nation. The Hurans are thought to possess faint KERATIN blood dating back to those days, though this generally only manifests in the faint red tint possessed by their skin.

HURAPUR: Geo. Mountain-range in the SOLEYN TERRITORIES, forming a rim around the north of l. PURRI, dividing Soleyn from the harsh terrain in the north in ANUBIA.

HURAUK: Set. Settlement in the north west of KHURAUR (Pop. c. 14,200). HURBAHET: Set. Coastal settlement in the south of Thetis. Its main industry is fishing (Pop. c. 7,300).

HURD: m. Mys. His. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, a SCION of the DEMIURGE ARIMASPI, of unknown maternal lineage. Where his father is noble, Hurd embodies all that is savage and unforgiving of the wild realms, and his violence is fabled in many parts of WESTERN SAMMAEA. Without mercy, he revels in the torture and death-throes of his prey. He is rumoured to be alive in the depths of the WOLD rainforest, where he grows slowly in strength under the patronage of the region's savage inhabitants.

Elsewhere, in more civilised lands, a few mystery-cults of misguided bigots are thought pay him fealty, foolishly feeding his destructive nature with their misplaced devotions. A large semi-secretive cult dedicated to Hurd is known to be active in the north of KHURAUR. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

HURHEKH: PIr. 'Hurhekhin'. Mys. Rnk. In KARAKHAS, a caste of spiritualists who undertake ritual communion with ARAKHAMÉ through the drinking of the Blood-rains that often occur in the area. After consecration by a priest the blood is drunk by the Hurhekh, who chants at length as the fluid works its way through his body. To most, the blood induces vomiting and nausea, though the Hurhekhin are slowly inured to its effects over time, though their skin grows darker as a result, with red patches akin to birthmarks appearing on it. These mark them as holy beings and they are respected in Karakhasid society.

HURIL GATE, the: Mil. Str. Gate leading into the old quarter of the city of NEITH⁽²⁾ in the north west of the HENDECARCHY of STHAMAN in the c of MALAN. Originally constructed from two QHIANIOR trees into the form of a gate and surrounding living wooden walls. One of the trees was destroyed in a lightning storm, and remains now as a blackened stump. The remaining tree has been reshaped by BRANCHBRAIDING over the centuries into the form of a gate.

The gate itself was once the only entrance into the city, which slowly spilled over its old walls, few sections of which now remain and lie largely forgotten. The gate, however, remains an important part of life and serves as the headquarters of the trade taxation department of the city, around which is a large market, its awnings made from branchbraided trees to provide cover from rain and sun.

HURINA: Set. City in the c west of the nation of DURCHAA⁽¹⁾, along the course of the river VARAGOD. It is a major producer of UMBRISKA, and its refineries are amongst the more modern in the nation. The city dammed the river Varagod in 3932 RM and uses its water to generate much of its electricity for in the refineries (Pop. c. 38,000).

HURRA: Set. Settlement in the c east of JURRAS⁽²⁾, situated along the course of the river EURRTOS. Its main industry is agriculture (Pop. c. 6,200).

HURSORYAN: Geo. Major area dominating the c and south west of CYHLAGHARR. It is in the rain shadow of the NGHALLEAL Mountains and is very dry, with few settlements of note. Geologically, it serves as a link between the Nghalleal Mountains in the south and the GRCAUTHAIRM massif in the north east.

HURTHALLACHOS: Mil. Str. Pitted iron fortress in SAMMAEA, just south west of the KURNUGIA Mountain. Its origins are unknown, though its roots are believed to lie in the long-since fragmented PLAGI empire, after which it was adopted by the early FOURTH AGE empire of HADDURATH. Its sand-blasted black-iron walls are scabrous, twisted and rotten, its decayed corridors echoing with an ancient melancholy.

The fortress was populated by successive states and loose unions of ETHERI led by tyrants and demagogues for over 700 years, from c. 200 RM, though the last such counties had disappeared by 905 RM, and its halls remain empty to this day, the corpses of its last guards all that remains of the fleeting etheri nation.

HURULLINDAR: Geo. Valley in the south west of KHULL, close to the border with the VESPERTINE LEAGUE. It lies to the north of the badlands of SULLUKUR.

The Valley is home to dozens of ancient tombs that carry certain design elements similar to those of the ancient https://hypogeal.courts, indicating that they might date to the time of the ancient FIFTH AGE nation of LIN_GOOL. They are empty today, and if they once contained riches, they were looted long ago.

HURUSH: Set. Small city in the west of the SYNHODOS PLATEAU in the c of JURRAS^(2,). The city is a centre of mineral and ore refining and collects stone, granite, iron and copper from mines around it. It is known for the skills of its metallurgists and stonemasons, and sells object d'art to merchants on the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 14,500).

HUS: Pol. Rnk. Ruling caste of the city and region of BASTROS, in the SASTAKAUR Massif in the c south west of SAMMAEA. The Hus are HALF OGHURS, and their size and strength, coupled with their generational control of the ancient step wells and deep cisterns of the city, have made them the defacto rulers for centuries. They are tyrants and few dare to openly challenge them, particularly those who would refer to them as half oghurs, for the Hus are descended from ancient half oghur unions, possibly dating back as far as a millennium, and since then have bred amongst themselves, so now consider themselves a people onto their own.

HUSGAPIA: Set. Fortified city in the c west of AETHIOS, at the eastern periphery of the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED BLEEDING PLAINS. It is home to ATRAMENTAL SHAPERS who study the effects of the plain and work towards stopping its advance (Pop. c. 28,000).

HUSHAOT: Med. Set. PLAGUE city in the north east of VAALK. By 3905 RM it had become a huge shanty-city where those from other settlements around Vaalk who had either contracted or survived the plague were collected and abandoned, guarded from escape from the outside (Pop. c. 29.000).

HUSS: Mil. Rnk. Military title in AHRISHEN, VIRAHAN, and BAATAN that is attained through prowess in battle. The title can be attained by any individual, regardless of prior social standing and bestows nobility, including the granting of land and other privileges. In battle the huss are organised into regiments known as HUSSARS and are often mounted – one of the few mounted units in the Ahrisheni military.

HUSSAD: Eth. Rnk. Nomad caste common to the north of SAMMAEA, particularly MHAROKK and LIDEA. They are a thought to be descended from the far older NAAHI empire, where they were noted for their riding skills. See Vol II: the Nomads of Elyden.

HUSSAR: Mil. Rnk. Noble mounted regiment in the AHRISHENI military that's composed of those who have attained the rank of HUSS.

HUSTHAT: also 'the Solid Sea'. Geo. Salt flats in the far south east of the TARAHID ANNEXES; known as the Solid Sea due to the optical illusion it presents to those walking over it, melding land and sky into one sea-like mass. The salt flats are what remains now of the coastal shelf of the SEA OF BYSSOS that, alongside THE INNER SEA, has been slowly shrinking in size, retreating north, leaving the shelf exposed. The salt flats are harvested, the salt gathered into stacks dozens of feet high, where they are transported to the docks in VULKA for shipment to other nations.

HUTA: Set. Coastal settlement in TERIA, overlooking the BAY OF BHAAD (Pop. c. 17,000).

HUTTERATH: Sup. Geo. Expansive region of ATRAMENTAL CORRUPTION in the c of SAMMAEA, dominating the western-face of the KARKARMIS Mountains, in the c north west of HOGGOTHA ISZ. It is riddled with duststone formations, and earthquakes and landslides are common, which are felt in the north of Hoggotha Isz.

The region is categorised as a $\underline{\text{MODERATE THREAT}}$ by the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI}}$ $\underline{\text{INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES}}$.

HYACHA: Rvr. River in the north east of AQUARIIA, flowing for 535-miles from sources in the BLACK MOUNTAINS, before meeting its parent, the river ISARRA.

HYADUH: Set. Settlement in the north east of AQUARIIA (Pop. c. 7,000). HYDARA: Set. Small city in the c south west of SABAISA. Its primary HYDARA: Set. Small city in the c south west of SABAISA. Its primary industry is the mining of iron and quartz (Pop. c. 17,000).

HYDOR: Set. Coastal settlement in the south west of AQUARIIA (Pop. c. 8.000).

HYDROS: Lak. Lake in the north east of PELASGOS in the foothills of the CALDERAN Mountains. and along the course of the river EGGOS.

HYRETH: Set. Settlement in the south east of KOLCHIS (Pop. c. 6,200).

HYENEA: Wea. Katabatic wind blowing north from highland regions of c KHARKHARADONTIS into the DUNE SEA OF KHARKHARADONTIS. The winds carry cool air from the uplands, leaving morning dew on the dunes, allowing specialised life to thrive there.

HYLA: Mil. Str. Cliff-top fortress in the south east of GNOTH where foreign criminals who are deemed to be a threat to Gnoth and its way of life are imprisoned. There is some degree of controversy surrounding the prison, and some of those who are aware of it oppose it, as it goes against what may Gnothi scholars consider to be the rights of sentient beings. HYAR: Set. Small city in the nation of DACIA, along the SHADOW MARCH. It is known for its leathers and tanning (Pop. c. 27,200).

HYNDR: Set. Rock-UMBRA mine in the c south west of CYHLAGHARR in the region of KAYHIKH (Pop. c. 2,000).

HYPAMARA: Geo. Rocky upland region in the west of NORTHERN SIMBARA, known for the HALFADEL plant that grows there.

HYPASPIST: Oth. Soc. Pol. Type of HALFBLOOD HOUSE, the members of which are renowned for their strong constitution, tough bodies and stoic natures. Though far from unified, their physical characteristics are strong and do not dilute down generations as other houses tend to, so their hypaspists are easily recognisable. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

HYPNOST: Sup. Rnk. A SPHERE of ATRAMENTISM whose SHAPERS manipulate wakefulness and a beings' sense of lethargy in various ways.

HYPOGEUM: Plr. 'hypogea'. Soc. Str. An underground structure or complex, often used for burial or religious purposes. Specific uses of the word include:

1. Specifically, the cities and structures of the people of CHTHYRID are known as hypogea. They are built underground, but close enough to the surface that they can use skylights, giving them access to natural light for their dwellings and greenhouses, as well as shafts that control the flow of air.

HYRCAL V: (B. 3065 – D. 3120 RM) also 'the Craven'. His. Pol. King of PARTHIS who inherited a weak nation and was forced to give up part of TARTAK.

HYRCANIA: Set. City in PARTHIS, located in the wetlands of ATHORHU. The city's emblem is the wolf, a sigil that is recognised throughout Parthis (Pop. c. 230,000).

HYSPERO: Geo. Island off the eastern coast of OBLEVIS.

HYSTAR: Geo. Massif in ALMAGEST.

HYTHRIA: 1. Geo. Peninsula in the south east of YSACYITHAIA.

2. Set. Major port in the south east of YSACYITHAIA, in the southern-most tip of the above peninsula. It is a city of deep canals and locks, and its streets are laid out to a strict grid pattern, and are dominated by steps that lead up to its central plateau, which commands amazing views of the surrounding seas. The city is rumoured to be the centre of a pervasive secret society that permeates all aspects of life in Ysacyithaia that is not openly acknowledged but which is accepted by most (Pop. c. 88,600).

HYTIOEN: Rvr. River in the east of THANOS, flowing south into the SEA OF POLARIS.

HUHSAN: Set. Settlement in the c south of the territories of ETHISTONITH in RHINOCOLOURA. It is a major course of granite in the region (Pop. c. 3,800).

HUNATH: Set. Coastal city in the south east of ARERAQTH, at the tip of a long narrow peninsula, overlooking the west of the SEA OF SUDUNIR (Pop. c. 78,000).

HUYL STONE, the: Int. His. Str. Ancient vine-covered stone pylon on the far south of the KALI ANTEN rainforests in the c south of CARNYNGA. It is thought to have been a tomb, though any bodies or riches it once contained have long-since been looted. Its walls and deep chambers are covered in ancient writings that have been deciphered by scholars. Amongst depictions of daily life and the gifts of a seven-tiered AFTERLIFE (matching the number of tiers on the pylon), are curses upon those entering the structure.

The Pylon is constructed from a singular block of green-grey stone and is considered to be the southern-most boundary of the Kali Anten rainforest.

HURA: Set. Small fortified coastal settlement in the north of OPHAR, at the base of the GEMOPHAR Peninsula^(1.) (Pop. c. 5,000).

HUYA: Sct. Settlement in SUMA'YA, whose main industry is iron mining. It is one of the few industrious regions left in Suma'ya (Pop. c. 4,800).

HYENAS, the: Mil. Org. Mercenary force trained in ZHARIAH^(2.). They are characterised by their distinctive tattoos that record their exploits and victories, and are a prominent military force in the south east of SAMMAEA.

HYLIN: Geo. Delta of the river UPINIS, in the north of KHULL. Its lands are fertile and are home to seasonal farmlands in which rice, barley and grains are grown.

HYPNEROTOMACHIA: see DREAM QUEST.

HYPOGEAL COURTS: His. Pol. Org. Ancient early FIFTH AGE councils that were prevalent in the west of the EHRENISIAN COAST, in what are today the far north of the Vespertine League, and the north west of KHULL. Named after the ancient subterranean chambers their people rediscovered following their re-emergence from the FADING, the courts became powerful local governments that were partially responsible for the consolidation of the regions' disparate people into the cohesive state of LIN GOOL between c. -900 and -800 RM. Though local Hypogeal Courts remained to oversee the prefectures of Lin Gool, a new court was constructed beneath the city of RESEBEK in c. -760 RM from where a centralised national government would convene throughout the existence of the nation of Lin Gool.

Little is known of the origins of the hewn chambers that were appropriated by the Hypogeal Courts, but they are thought to be ancient, possibly dating to the THIRD AGE. They are thought to have been made by people who were cast out of their parent culture, possibly due to divergent religious beliefs.

The coming of THERASHIAN armies in c. 125 RM would be the beginning of the end of self-rule in Lin Gool, and by c. 130 RM the Therashian empire had subjugated Lin Gool, eliminating the Hypogeal Courts.

Today, most Courts are ruined and overgrown, with many of them lost and forgotten. A few, like the one in Resebek and another outside the city of PIRA TA', remain in use and serve as a reminder of the region's ancient history.

HYRAM ZOARCH: m. Tec. Per. (B. 3951 RM) High-ranking member of the AIWAHAN ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION. Hyram's official title is of High-TECHNOCLAST, and it is in this capacity that he scours the empire of heretical technologies. He is also a TECHNARCANIST of the highest order, and is renowned for his exceptional skill in reverse-engineering ancient machinery that has been put to good use within the Order.

He discovered the lost SPIRE ENGINE in 3986 RM and deciphered its secrets over the next decade – a find that has bolstered the Order's effectiveness and which continues to reveal its secrets to this day.

HYULL: Set. Major coastal city in the north of JURRAS⁽²⁾, controlling Jurrassi sea trade in the western reaches of the SEA OF TARAMAR (Pop. c. 140,300).

T

I'KHITTA: (B. 3973 RM) Pol. Queen, and one of three current rulers of the J'THANAN Triarchy.

IAANDA: Geo. Island off the far northern coast of KAZZAR⁽²⁾. It is largely unpopulated, and is neglected by the Kazzaran government.

IAARIISTUN: also 'Lucent Shoals'. Int. Sca. Stretch of sea off the far northern coast of Kasihaal in northern Bror (1.), stretching to beyond the north of the equator. These waters are famed for the luminescent microorganisms that live on the water's surface, and which emit a faint light when agitated, for instance through the water's motion or the passing of a nearby ship. This results in the foam along the crests of waves producing itts own light, which is most notable at night.

IABBAL His. Ancient FIFTH AGE YARAOMIC settlement in the territory of EREDATA, in what is today the settlement of HABAL, in the east of extant BA'AKH. It was one of few Yaraomic settlements of note, and was overtaken by KORACHANI forces in c. 600 RM during their conquest of northern SAMMAEA.

IACIAN: Pol. His. Ancient name for IACIO. In c. 300 RM it was a region of the new state of ARRETOY, though by c. 490 – 580 RM, it became independent, adopting the name of Iacio by immigrants in 598 RM, when it formally seceded. It was later reabsorbed by a newly-christened Rhea in 1373 RM, when the name Iacian came to represent the lowland regions that were slowly increasing in size as the coastlines retreated. The name is not used today.

IACIO: Dem. 'Iacian'. Ntn. An independent nation since 3242 RM, Iacio is located to the south east of LLACHATUL, overlooking the SEA OF MIROVEA. Like many other coastal states, much of its land has been exposed through the waning of ELYDEN'S seas, and almost half of its present-day territories were submerged as recently (geologically speaking) as 1500 RM. The coastal jungles of SARADI INAT are a peculiar feature, unique to this part of Elyden – a vast bleached coral reef revealed by the waning seas, and is today overgrown with tropical creepers and epiphytes.

Iacio is ruled by an ancient case of religious rulers known as the HIEROMONARCHS. Originally the rulers of RHEA, they fled to Iacio (then a part of Rhea), where their most ardent followers were, leaving the north weakened and their main political opponent – the COURT OF DREAMS – with the upper hand. This led to a period of war that lasted for 15-years before the Hieromonarchs declared Rhea lost, and consolidated their strength within their strongholds in Iacio, where they remain supremely powerful to this day.

Today Iacio is a major producer of Aluminium and rubber and embraced industrialisation more than its neighbours. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

IACTOMM: Set. Small city in the far north west of ELEKHID (Pop. unknown).

IADARA: Mil. Str. Fortress in the south east of KARAKHAS, guarding the TOSLETHI UMBRA PIPELINE from attack.

IAESA: 1. Lak. Lake in the c of GNOTH, along the course of the river NEPHOT.

2. Set. Settlement in the c of GNOTH, at the confluence of the river NEPHOT with the eponymous river (Pop. c. 8,000).

IAGANNATH: 1. Rvr. Expansive river in the c of LLACHATUL flowing through THE OLD FOREST and the nations of ALMAGEST and SKAROS for over 1,900-miles from sources in the UMBRALA and HAAG HAAD Mountains, before emptying in the BAY OF DALMA, which is a part of the SEA OF APHOTIS. Major lakes along its course are lake Iagannath⁽²⁾, SAPARTAH, and VANEFATH.

2. Lak. Large lake in the c of THE OLD FOREST along the course of the river Iagannath^(1,). Much of its northern reaches are covered by the RAM'ATHI forest which stretches south from its northern shore for around 50-miles to the island of DRIOPAN.

IAGRAAT: Sec. Major industrial city in the c north west of XYRPHAAT. It is a stop along the course of the SOVEREIGNS' ROAD trade-route, specialising in repairing vehicles and technarcane engines (Pop. c. 116,000).

IAHNEF: 1. Rvr. Marshes in the west of KHAMID, dominating the mouth of the river ARAX.

2. Set. Major city 25-miles inland from the mouth of the river ARAX in KHAMID. It is a trade-port and the current capital of Khamid, and remains the largest present-day conurbation in all of Khamid. It emerged from a conurbation in region of NEHRENHAT in c 700 RM following the rise of SAPET BESAYT in the area. (Pop. c. 1,045,000).

IAHTHEN: lit. 'THE DARK FOREST'. For. Forest in the c north east of GIBEAH, covering some 30,000 square-miles to the east of the ABYD CARGI badlands. It is shunned by most locals, though a lucrative business exists to those willing to harvest the DARKWOOD of its trees and trades with the west. ABYSSAL TEMPLARS in the area export this wood to the KORACHANI EMPIRE either across the ROILING and IAPETAN SEAS, into the east of VENTHIR; or through Templar-controlled routes across the Anubian desert into eastern SARASTRO.

The area occupied by the forest is a small ATRAMENTAL siphon, from which its name is derived. The Iahthen is known to be a dark place where the sun rarely shines at its brightest and life is never at its fullest, as evidenced by the stunted trees and wildlife in the area and the number of stillbirths experienced even as far as 100-miles from its borders.

IAISHA: Dem. 'Iaishan'. Ntn. Nation in the north west of MENISCEA, east of the GULF OF VALUS. It is a place that was struck by a calamity in the past, resulting in frigid mummies (human and angel) – a result of a FIRMAMENTAL disaster. adherents of the repentant. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

IAKTHORIS, TOMB OF DESUMUZ: Int. Arc. His. Pol. Mausoleum of the warlord DESUMUZ, in the hinterlands of eastern RAONGEN^(2.), not far from the territories of the CALLOW HORDES.

IALADEHA: Geo. Major prismatic hot spring in the region of SCORIA^(1.), in the south west of ANUBIA.

IALAS: Set. Logging settlement in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of ALAMUT (Pop. c. 1,500).

IALCUS: Sea. Sea in the north of LLACHATUL, above the MALANI HENDECARCHIES of CYRENIA and NHORA. Though south of the northern POLAR CIRCLE, its waters are nevertheless cold, from currents carried south from the polar region.

IALCUS BASIN: Geo. drainage basin formed by various continental divides in the continents of LLACHATUL and MENISCEA, including parts of the LLACHATULI DIVIDE. The basin comprises parts of the north east of Llachatul and the north west of Meniscea, and all rivers within it drain directly into the SEA OF IALCUS.

Nations and territories that are at least partially within the Ialcus Basin include: ABATTUR, KASPIA, MALAN, PERGOST, SATARIEL, and TISARA.

IALDA: Cur. Major currency in SAMMAEA, and possibly the oldest known currency in the known world. It has its roots in the THIRD AGE OF MORTAL LIFE, and is used across the south, south west and south east of Sammaea, and has made its way through trade to other regions, including the INNER SEA. It is thought to date back to an ancient, now largely-forgotten LHAUS empire in what are now barren lands in the c of Sammaea, travelling south through trade, where it gained a major foothold, remaining popular amongst the SIMBARAN empire, which has great influence in the region Coins are polygonal in shape, with 6 and 12 sides. See Vol II: Currency and Coinage in Elyden.

IALDABAOTH: x. Myt. His. In the mythology and ancient history of ELYDEN, sixth of the Two-and-Twenty DEMIURGES, whose children were the LHAUS, who became as obsessed with prolonging their lives as their Demiurge parent, and they would go on to become competent kladai in their own right.

They originated the art of KLADOS, and created six iterants into which it divided its essence in a bid to cheat death.

Their only known \underline{SCION} is \underline{NEBRO} . See Vol IV: the Two-and-Twenty Demiurges.

IALLASAN: Geo. Dry grass and scrubland in the south of JURRAS⁽²⁾, west of the LLURAN WASTES.

IALO ABGAN: Geo. Plains in the north of TAL ZHAAN, in the north of SAMMAEA.

IALTRA: Set. Small coastal city in the east of OPHIUSSA overlooking the BAY OF GOSTAKIS^(1.)(Pop. c. 13,000).

IAMTI: Lak. Lake in the c west of GNOTH along the course of the river NEPHOT.

IAMUN: Geo. Mountain-range in the KORACHANI colony of TAVVADRA in the north west of SAMMAEA. The Mountains form an extension of the far larger SANTOREAN Mountains.

IANA: Sea. Largely-enclosed sea in the west of KHAMID, surviving unchanged since before the days of the CATACLYSM in 101 RM. The Iana is home to many small fishing communities; its deep waters remaining relatively fertile where other seas have diminished.

IANADA: Lak. Small lake in the c west of AHRISHEN, along the course of the river PELADA.

IANAKA: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the east of ALTHA^(2,) guarding entrance into the BAY OF DALATH^(1,).

IANALAR: Set. Small city in the c south west of KOLCHIS. Its main industry is iron mining (Pop. c. 17,200).

IANATHIA: 1. Geo. Island off the eastern coast of the PARTHISAN colony of EZHIRAYA⁽²⁾.

2. Mil. Str. Major coastal fortress in the west of the above island^(1.) off the eastern coast of the PARTHISAN colony of EZHIRAYA^(2.), guarding sea routes leading into the ATHAMNI WATERS.

IANESS: Set. Conurbation on the island of LIVYATHA in the west of the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS. Its farms are famed across PELASGOS and their soils are fertile thanks to the volcanic MT. METHOSS, which lies less than 16-mile to the north east (Pop. c. 31,300).

IANHAN: Rel. Religion common to the region of the SIX CITIES of THE SURRACH. The CHURCH OF RAHANA began to change following the rise of stargazer cults in DAATH centuries past, with two of its more prominent saints, AAT and SAVAT (commonly associated with the IVORY and BLOOD moons, respectively), began to grow more popular, with others finding their domains changing to match the characteristics that had been given to the main constellations.

Today the religion of Ianhan is considered a duotheism – dominated by Aat and Savat, which embody opposing traits. Like Rahana, most individuals have a patron constellar, equivalent to a saint that is a personification of a particular constellation. Divination through the reading of stars (known as OROMANCY) is a common religious practice, as is the need to communicate with otherworlders.

Ianhan is the state religion of Daath and is rarely seen elsewhere. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

IANLET: Geo. Island in the BAY OF LEPHET, to the south of KEPHUAAN.

IANNARA: 1. Geo. Archipelago protruding south from SEDISIA, separating the SEA OF DURAHRAT from the larger SEA OF SERPENTS. The archipelago appeared following the lowering of sea levels between 2000 – 3000 RM, and continues to grow to this day, absorbing islands as the seas continue to lower.

2. Geo. southern-most expanse of the $\underline{\text{VARRUTH}}$ Mountains in the south west of $\underline{\text{SEDISIA}}$.

LANTHA: Geo. Expansive amethyst cave-system in the c south of THE SURRACH, in the stone desert of CARNETABAEL. The caves were discovered by KORACHANI explorers in 2392 RM, not long before the abandonment of its colonisation efforts in the region, possibly explaining why the caves were not explored further. The native SAVI people were aware of the caves, though largely ignored them, on account of them featuring in underworld myths of the region.

The caves are expansive, and are carved by natural processes from ancient volcanic stone in which can be found amethyst geodes, crystal caverns of colossal size, and deposits of quartz and iron impurities. The quartz was fashioned into wondrous sculptures by the XANTHIC empire, most famous of which are the amethyst skulls with pointed craniums, which appear in private collections from time-to-time to this day.

IAOSHA: Set. Small city in the c south west of RAONGEN⁽²⁾, in the JIANNAN Hills. Its people are known as aesthetes, using shaping and technarcana to help them become more receptive to the visions and DREAMS of the GOD WHO SPEAKS (Pop. c. 12,500).

IAPEGRA: Geo. Expansive massif dominating the north west of THE VORANDINE. Its southern-most expanses are known for ancient iron mines and quarries that are thought to date back to the FOURTH AGE. The regions surrounding these mines are known for their reddish and oxidised rocks.

IAPET: Myr. Leg. In VENATHI (and, later, VENTHIRI and TZALLRACHI) myths, the son of a union between a god and a mortal woman who sailed south east, disappearing in search of his divine father. The IAPETAN SEA is named after him. See Vol II: Legends and Folk Tales.

IAPETAN: Sca. Sea to the south of the TORRENT OF KARROCK, bordered by the nations of TZALLRACH, CUTH, NAARETH, SARAGOS, and VENTHIR. It is known for its high tides and is named for the legend of the divine-born son IAPET who sailed south east in search of his father.

IAPETAN ALLIANCE, the: Pol. Coalition formed between TZALLRACH, KREM, RHEA, and IACIO, following increased coastal attacks by the ABYSSAL TEMPLARS in c. 3740 RM from Sammaea across the IAPETAN SEA. Together, the Iapetan Alliance patrolled their respective waters and attacked vessels belonging to the Templars. These actions continued for the next 50 years, until the waning influence of the Sorcerer-kings over the Abyssal Templars, after which their attention returned to their neighbours.

Despite this, the Iapetan Alliance remains to this day, patrolling the coastal waters against piracy and coastal threats.

IAPETAN BASIN, the: Geo. Drainage basin formed by various continental divides in the continents of LLACHATUL and SAMMAEA, including parts of the LLACHATULI and the EASTERN SAMMAEAN

DIVIDES. The basin comprises parts of the east of Sammaea and the east of Llachatul, and all rivers within it drain directly into the IAPETAN SEA. Nations and territories that are at least partially within the Iapetan Basin include: ANUBIA, MULCIBER, NAARETH, SARAGOS, SARASTRO, TZALLRACH, and VENTHIR, amongst others.

IAPETAN CURRENT: Sea. Warm surface ocean current flowing north into the IAPETAN SEA from the MIROVEAN GYRE.

IAQRADENNE: f. Pol. Per. (B. 2875 – D. 2964 RM) queen of ZHARIAH following a civil war in which she challenged her twin brother IAQRASHA for the throne after the death of their father IAQRASHON III.

IAQRASHA: m. Pol. Per. (B. 2875 – D. 2959 RM) The first sultan of the IAQRASHAN SULTANATE in QARALAM. He was a prince of the House of HINOL of ZHARIAH⁽¹⁾ whose father, king IAQRASHON III, died in 2917 RM. Being the eldest son, he was the legitimate heir, but his twin sister IAQRADENNE, being the eldest of the two, made a claim for the throne, leading to a civil war that dragged on for around 22- years, ending with his defeat and eventual self-exile west into QARALAM in 2941 RM, after which his armies swept west across the nation, sacking the capital in ELHUMBRA, and founding a new capital in ECUMENA where the Sultanate thrived.

His hatred of the Hinol dynasty festered throughout his rule, and it shaped the cultural outlook that Qaralam would take towards Zhariah⁽²⁾ over the next millennium well into the present day.

IAQRASHAN SULTANATE: Pol. The ruling caste of QARALAM since its conquest of the region in 2942 RM. They moved west from what is now ZHARIAH⁽²⁾ and sacked the capital city, then ELHUMBRA in late 2942 RM, eventually founding a new capital in ECUMENA. The sultanate is named after the Zhariahan prince IAQRASHA, who exiled himself and his followers after losing a civil war with his sister over the empty throne left by their father's death in 2917 RM

IAQRASHON III: m. Pol. Per. (D. 2917 RM) King of ZHARIAH^(1.) whose death in 2917 RM left the House of HINOL in chaos, his twin children – prince IAQRASHA and princess IAQRADENNE – went to war over the empty throne, with Iaqrasha being the legitimate heir, but his sister, being older, wanting the throne. Iaqrasha was defeated after a 22-year war. He exiled himself west into QARALAM in 2941 RM, while his sister took over the mantle of ruler in Zhariah, continuing the line of the House of Hinol.

IARAOM BASSHA: see YARAOMIC PEOPLE.

IARAOM GRABBA: also 'lorekeeper'. Soc. Rnk. Lorekeepers within the YARAOMIC PEOPLES of northern SAMMAEA, whose culture had been largely extinguished during the KORACHANI expansion into their territories during the Ist millennium RM.

Today, they exist in two distinct forms – as keepers of culture and history within the few remaining Yaraomic kindreds, where they meet up with their fellows from other kindreds, passing on their findings to each other; or as solitary itinerants who travel clandestinely between borders collecting any splinter of pre-imperial history, poetry, and art, that they return to the fortress library of IARSHUCGAH, hidden within the western foothills of the HARAPPAN⁽¹⁾, where their culture is slowly being rebuilt.

They have slowly reforged a lavish hodgepodge mythohistory that borrows from what they know and marry it with over a hundred generations of bitter oppression and burial, and the myths, legends and religions of their oppressors. This is known as the <code>IUN IARAOM MAHTA-the Yaraomic Telling - a very personal mythology, history, and culture that together form the backbone of the Yaraomic identity. This culture is passed down via secretive oral traditions that have ensured its survival over the years. Ironically, the core to this culture survived largely through the accounts of the <code>MHAROKKIN</code> exile <code>SUDERA</code>, who lived for many years with the Yaraomic Peoples, and whose extensive diaries were discovered years after her death.</code>

The Iaraom Grabba also serve as the main celebrants of the so-called GREAT STRUGGLE that extant Yaraomic Peoples spend their lives experiencing, which is a major part of their culture.

IAROTH: Rui. The base of an ancient ruined tower that stands on a rise on the lower foothills of the south eastern CARTIGA Mountain overlooking what is now the scrubland of the ET ARA. Little is known of its origins or history, though written records of the region, dating as far back as the birth of the AMNATHI KINGDOM in c. -1150 RM, always mention the place as being a ruin, with some accounts of a great granite idol in the form of a terrific horned head once lying half buried in the scree at the foot of the hills the tower was once perched on, though any signs of such a stone idol cannot be found.

IARSHUGGAH: His. Edu. Soc. Str. Hidden fortified library in the western foothills of the HARAPPAN^(1.) Mountains, in the east of MHAROKK that is used by YARAOMIC lorekeepers known as IARAOM GRABBA, as a repository for ancient artifacts from Yaraomic history in the hopes of reconstructing their culture. Reclaimed from an ancient FOURTH AGE fortress whose outer structure is now shapeless, but whose deep tunnels and catacombs make for the perfect base, its exact location remains unknown to the Mharokkin government.

The fort has become a base to many itinerant lorekeepers, who travel across northern Sammaea, spreading the history of the IUN IARAOM MAHTA – the Yaraomic Telling – amongst their people even as they search for new treasures. Most prominent of their findings were the journals of the MHAROKKIN exile SUDERA who spent over 50-years living with the Yaraom in around 950 RM. They were rediscovered in 1340 RM in TAKUH and form the backbone of the Yaraomic Telling and the legend of the coming of the KING-WHO-WASN'T.

IART: Set. Settlement in the c north of CHEIRA. Its main industry is the quarrying of coal (Pop. c. 2,800).

IARUS: Geo. Mountain in the c-south east of ALMAGEST, close to the border with THE OLD FOREST. It is home to the famed STELLARIUM OF IARUS, which is still in use today.

IARUS, STELLARIUM OF: His. Ast. Str. Classical observatory and stellarium in the north of the IARUS Mountains in the c-south east of ALMAGEST. Built in c. 1400 RM, it remains in use today, taking advantage of the dark skies provided by its mountainous location. The stellarium itself is large and its movements mechanised, showing the movements of the PLANETS and more distant stars, and has been updated many times as new astronomical advances have been made. The present structure is largely modern, built atop the more ancient structure, whose vaults and libraries remain in use, though many chambers are thought to have been walled off in c. 2200 RM.

IASH HOZHI: also 'the Game of Kings'. Gam. A board game for two players common in OTINTH, SEDISIA, and the PARNASIAN STATES. The board is made up of many separate squares (the exact number varies from board to board, though it is usually 7 x 7 squares), said to represent different domains of nations. Each player starts with 7 builders and uses them to populate the boards, with certain actions providing new builders or warrior, the latter of which can be used to destroy enemy builders or warriors. The game ends when a player has populated every square, or when a player concedes.

The game can often be seen being played around town squares by elderly men. See Vol II: Games and Pastimes of Elyden.

IASHANDEN: Rvr. River in the east of THE VORANDINE, flowing east for 324-miles from sources in the hills of the LUGENT forest in the far south east of the SMYURMA Mountains, before emptying into lake TAHONG.

IASSIR: Set. Fortified settlement in the far south east of KAZZAR, close to the border with the BARRIER LANDS, along the course of the river FONESA. Its main industry is the cultivation of thyme and production of a thymol-based perfume, which is popular amongst the nobility of PARTHIS and its colonies and dependencies. Its old walled city is surrounded by workshops where the herb is dried and distilled, and farther afield it is surrounded by miles of fields where thyme is grown (Pop. c. 9,200).

IAT: Set. City in the north of KETESH. Where Ketesh is a sybaritic city, its roots tightly buried in the pleasures of excess, lat is a more pragmatic place, working hard to keep Ketesh alive; its peoples serving the main city-state, providing food, materials and resources, dealing with foreign cities in its quest for exotic goods (Pop. c. 90,000).

IATH: m. War. His. Per. (D. c. 1800 RM) mid-FIFTH AGE champion in the east of SOUTHERN SAMMAEA in what is now AKACHA, whose sword FAERTH^(1.) grew into the fabled Sword-tree of Faerth^(2.).

IATULKAN: Geo. Southern ridge of the OHBOKHAR basin in the north east of KHARKHARADONTIS. It is noted for the thousands of hewn caverns that are found in its southern-face, known as the $\underline{\text{IATULKAN}}$ $\underline{\text{VOIDS}}.$

IATULKAN VOIDS: Geo. Arc. Soc. As many as 20,000 hewn caverns in the southern-face of the Iatulkan ridge in the north east of KHARKHARADONTIS. There are few clues as to what beings or culture was responsible for them, though only a few of the hollows have been penetrated. It is thought that they go into the earth for miles if not more, though to what purpose remains to be determined.

IAUBHOZLI: Rui. Ancient ruins in the c of the REALM OF THE MARKED PALL, believed to date back to the Third Age. they are expansive and, though largely buried beneath the MHUGREH WASTES, their high minarets remain remarkably well-preserved, despite their age.

IAUKTAH: Set. Small coastal city in the west of the PANTHEON ISLES, overlooking the LIMOTHAN CHANNEL (Pop. c. 15,000).

IAVALA, TREE OF: Sup. Flo. Monolithic tree stump in the region of BEKIAMFOR in the north of ENDUI, MENISCEA. The tree stump is famed for its crystalline nature – a trait acquired over millennia of existing in the shadow of the TRUE MENISCUS. The tree is now the focal point of a twisted FIRMAMENTAL cult that worships the ossification of the mortal body through exposure to the Firmament.

IAZIPAA: His. Str. Ancient pylon on the island of LATRAS in the MAIDEN ISLES. It is made of a strange metallic substance with a dull sheen, not unlike burnished brass with a greenish tinge and slight transparent surface. Remains such as crockery and minor ornaments made from the same substance have been found in the area and are often taken by locals who reappropriate them.

IBAIYA: Com. Set. Famous hostel and caravanserai in the north west of the SULTANATE OF ABACARDAT. It caters to travellers from all directions and is well-respected, with a history dating back centuries, to when it was a coastal fortress offering safe passage to travellers across both sea and land.

IBAL SABBRIN: m. (D. 3689 RM) Per. QARALAMI explorer. In 3657 RM he travelled to the ELHUMBRA and stayed there for close to a year. He wrote a book about it which still serves as our main source of information about the anarchist city to this day, though many scholars now claim it is outdated or simply incorrect today.

IBAL ZHAAN: Set. Fortified city in the north east of the small state of TAL ZHAAN^(1.). It is close to the border with the TEMPLAR STATES, and sees much traffic crossing the border, including trade (Pop. c. 48,000).

IBANNEM: 1. Set. PARTHISAN colony in the far east of MENISCEA, close to the region of ABARHAL. Founded in 3903 RM, it is famed for its production of LODESTONE, which is exported east to Parthis.

2. Set. Capital city of the eponymous⁽¹⁾ PARTHISAN colony in the north east of MENISCEA, founded in 3903 RM. It is the region's largest port, overlooking the BAY OF TIRGATOA, and is the chief harbour linking the colony to Parthis (Pop. c. 62,000).

IBBLIS: also 'City of Despair'. Sup. Set. City in the TWILIGHT STATES. It is the only current source of iron ore in the Twilight states, and has steadily grown in size, power and decadence over the past decades as other sources have been consumed. Unfortunately, the city is positioned above an area of ATRAMENTAL INFLUENCE that renders the sky dark, the air cold and musty, and influences the moods of those who live there, seemingly sapping any sense of joy and pleasure. As a result, the people of Ibblis (or at least those with the means to) fill their lives with increasingly powerful stimuli in an attempt to elicit any emotional response. Its nobility, wealthy from the iron industry, have grown particularly depraved in their tastes and are renowned across the Twilight States (Pop. c. 40,000).

IBEDIA: Rui. Ruined city in the VÂRRAN PLAINS, in the centre of VÂRR.

Abandoned in c. 1040 RM during the tumultuous time known as the ONEIRIC SCOURGE, the city was once a hub of trade and a crossroads of culture in Vârr and it weathered decades of oneiric activity during which agents of the SOMNIARECHI ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION scoured the surrounding region, destroying new DREAMSCAPES and stymying the growth of existing ones. Despite their efforts, the city could not be saved and it slowly succumbed to increasing oneiric activity that wracked havoc with the sleep of residents and which spawned hundreds of fearsome oneiroi (dream creatures and nightmares) upon the city and its inhabitants. The city was eventually forced to evacuate, and the Order cleansed the region, though it would never fully recover, and the city remains ruined to this day, claimed by inimical dreamscapes.

IBELIN RIDGE: Geo. Ridge forming the northern-most part of the KOKORO Mountains in the south east of AHRISHEN and the south west of VIRAHAN. In antiquity the ridge formed the border between Ahrishen and SAUA, and the crumbling remnants of the original iteration of the RED WALL can still be found there. The ancient wall was once famed for its seven brick towers, which are themselves ruined, but for the easternmost one, which was toppled, its bricks used in the construction of the settlement of IPHIGENA^(2.) in Virahan.

IBEZUIL: Rvr. River in the north east of ELEKHID flowing east for 320-miles from sources in the YANAVASH Mountains, before meeting its parent, the river VHOTHAL.

IBHAH: Fau. Mor. Large OGHUR-like creatures, indigenous to the east of KASPIA, the UNCLAIMED LANDS and the MALANI HENDECARCHY of CYRENIA. They are of limited intellect and are regarded as little more than beasts by most people and though they can be individually outsmarted, groups of them roaming the countryside can be a menace, posing a danger to travel and trade along the GREAT ROAD. They are closely related to oghurs and likely share common ancestors, after which they spread across ELYDEN.

The creatures are trapped and sold in markets in the MALANI city of MOROIA and surrounding regions, and they are then sold as slaves to Kaspia, where they are used as beasts of burden. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

IBILISIN: Set. Small fortified coastal city in the SARASTROAN colony IPSISSIMA^(1.), located in the far south east of SAMMAEA, just north of the southern POLAR CIRCLE. It is built atop the ruin of a native settlement that was destroyed in c. 3720 RM and remains a major city in the colony of Ipsissima, its mines producing large volumes of iron which are shipped back to Sarastro (Pop. c. 16,400).

IBIN: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the south of TARATI^(1.) guarding the passage of the RED ROUTE south into ANUBIA.

IBITTER: Int. Str. An artificial breakwater in the BAY OF PELLARIG^(1.) in the south of PHYRR, about 2-miles off the coast of Pellarig^(2.). The breakwater was constructed in c. 3944 RM and is made from the remains of hundreds of scuttled ships, many of which are ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED from previous testing, prior to being covered in concrete. In many places the rusted remnants of the hulls can still be visible, protruding from the concrete. The breakwater has become a breeding ground for strange and mutated marine life, adding another layer of danger to the nation's coastal waters.

IBLAKUTH: Set. Settlement in the c west of OTINTH. Like most Otinthian settlements, little is known about it due to the nations' insular nature (Pop. unknown).

IBLIS: 1. Geo. The c south western region of LYRIDIA, known to be both its most populous area and that with true cities, rather than TROGLODYTIC enclaves. It covers some 30,000-miles, some of which is mildly ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED.

- 2. Sup. Set. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region in the south of the above region⁽¹⁾. The taint seeps upwards from a sinkhole situated in its c. which is believed to lead to the PRISON CARCERI and withers flora and fauna in the area, and SHADOWISPS are common, sometimes floating dozens of miles away in the hot air that rises from the sinkhole.
- 3. Geo. Narrow sinkhole in the c of the above region, thought to lead to the PRISON CARCERI Due to the ATRAMENTAL TAINT in the region the hole hasn't been explored much, though the air around it is unbearably stale a trait commonly linked with Carceri.
- 4. Geo. An expansive cavern in the PRISON CARCERI, 100's of miles across. It is thought to lie somewhere beneath the c of LYRIDIA and is named after the region above it, the populace of which is largely unaware of the gaping hollow that exists beneath. It is characterised by its relatively low ceilings (though as high as 100-feet in places, the roof of this cavern is always visible in the persistent half-light of Carceri) and the massive snake-like roots that hang from the ceiling like stalactites or protruding from the floor in mockery of trees. Others penetrate both ceiling and floor and dominate large portions, like strange living columns.

None know what manner of flora is to blame for roots buried so many miles beneath ELYDEN'S skin, though their flesh is harvested by the ROPOHAII that call the region home as food.

IBMAT: Ind. Set. Lapis lazuli mine in the south east of KHAMID, south west of the NEFERATH Mountains (Pop. c. 6,000).

IBORRA: Set. Coastal settlement in the north west of SAGITTARIA (Pop. c. 8,400).

IBRAGA: Set. Major city in the east of SEDISIA (Pop. c. 400,000).

IBRAOBAL: Lak. Seasonal lake in the south east of KHARKHARADONTIS, to the west of HADDURATH. It forms seasonally following heavy rains and snowmelt to the north. It is not uncommon for the lake to not form for consecutive years.

IBRAOBALI BASIN, the: Geo. Endorheic drainage basin formed by various continental divides in the continent of SAMMAEA, including parts of the KHARKHARADONTID DIVIDE. The basin is located in a part of CENTRAL SAMMAEA, and what rivers are located within it led to inland lakes or sinks – primarily the OSMIDROSS region.

Nations and territories that are at least partially within the Ibraobali Basin include: BANT.

IBRI: Mil. Str. Fortress in the east of KHAMID, 15-miles south west from the border with MALAN.

IBRIM: Set. Settlement in the c of SARASTRO. It lies along the course of both the SHADOW MARCH and the RED ROUTE, and is known for its amphitheatre-shaped markets (Pop. c. 6,400).

IBUZHITH: Geo. Basin in the east of ELEKHID and valley through which the river NUBBIOR flows east on its way to the coast of the ROILING SEA. It was home to the city of ENESH, which in 3409 RM became capital to the new kingdom of Elekhid. The fertile basin and its river were vital to the prosperity of the region in its first decades and the eastern-most reaches of the WAELMIGH there were felled to make room for many cities and factories, many of which survive to this day.

IBYSITUS PIT, the: Rel. Geo. Place of religious importance to the people of ETUAN. The crater is deep, and the rumblings of the GIBBERING WORM are more pronounced here than elsewhere, and the dust that blankets the crater's base vibrates with deep susurrations that rile the worshippers of Worm into a frenzy. Warriors have been known to come here before battle, working themselves up into a fervour.

ICHABAB: Set. Settlement in the far east of RHINOCOLOURA. For centuries it has been known for its monocerous hunters, the horns of which are sold at great profit to the pharmacological industry and scholars, who seek to study them to learn more about their healing properties and natural resilience to the ATRAMENTA. As a result, Rhinocolouran monocerouses have been hunted to near extinction and only remain now in small numbers in the sparse rainforests of ABATH, and the karkadanni who dwell there are known to go out of their way to protect them (Pop. c. 8,000).

ICAH: Rel. Set. Temple-city in the north of HANNAH, in the c south east of SAMMAEA. It is dedicated to the entirety of its spirit pantheon (Pop. c. 100,000).

ICAS: see 'MAW, THE'.

ICAUNA: Set. Small city in the east of Tisara (Pop. c. 8,200).

ICE PRINCESS, the: also 'Isatz'. Pol. A DERAEIAN princess in MALAN, stillborn in 2793 RM to the HENDECARCH Striisa. She was so beautiful that Striisa did not have her buried or embalmed but had her placed instead in a block of perfect FIRMAMENTALLY-preserved ice, where her body would never diminish in beauty. She was called Isatz in honour of her cold beaty, and was placed in a specially constructed citadel known as the TEMPLE OF ISATZ in the north of Deraeia.

Thirteen hundred years following her preservation, the body of the Ice Princess remains untouched by time, an incorruptible saint, patron to those without the strength to speak or defend themselves. The HIGHBORN LESSOR KOIOS made the pilgrimage to the Temple of Isatz in 4007 RM.

ICELELO: Geo. Heavily vegetated island off the western coast of SAMMAEA, forming a part of the PREPOTENCY OF THREPHO. It is uninhabited, possibly due to the fecund idol that stands at its centre, known as ATARGATIS, which is shunned and feared by those who know

ICEPEAK, the: Geo. Frozen peak in the ALCAAN Mountain in the UNCLAIMED LANDS. The northern peaks of the area are covered in small caves, many of which are home to the mummified remains of ascetics.

ICHAS: Set. City in the north east of the XETEAN STATES in the south east of SAMMAEA, overlooking the SEA OF LERAMUGH. Little is known of Ichas save for the heathen idol that looms above its buildings, its twinpair wings casting a shadow over the city (Pop. unknown).

ICHISS: Set. Coastal settlement in the far west of the mainland PANTHEON ISLES (Pop. c. 6,000).

ICHLASH: Geo. Island in the AMMASHI FREE-ISLES. It was the stronghold of the warlord GARR, whose claims of sovereignty over the islands led to the civil war now known as the GARR FALLACIES that ended with his defeat in 3397 RM.

ICHOR: Med. Psychoactive drug that is mined in the heart of the MARROWLANDS in the south east of SAMMAEA.

The drug is a known prolonger of life and humans who regularly take it are known to life healthily up to 200 – 250-years. In this respect it is the sole known such substance that defies the ELLUNUR PARADOX. Its other main use is a stimulant, enhancing sensitivity to the Materia Omna, serving to give SHAPERS enhanced potential.

Its use is pervasive across the south east of Sammaea, and is rampant amongst the upper classes, though it is used across ELYDEN by nobility and ruling classes, and is the major contributor (aside from SCIONIC heritage) to the longevity of the ruling classes across Elyden.

Mining and refining of the drug falls under the jurisdiction of the SULTANATE of QARALAM, and reserves are controlled to create artificial scarcity, driving up demand, and prices. The trade of Ichor has made the sultanate of Qaralam incredibly rich and influential across Elyden, and its military is well-funded and is geared towards defence of its territories and merchant caravans and fleets.

A raw form of the drug is given to SLAVES, turning them into braindead drones that serve the ruling sultanate without question. See Vol II: Drugs and Addictions.

ICHOR WELLSPRING: Sup. Geo. rare supranatural feature, common in both hemispheres in relation to the NULLAMBIT, common in regions of FIR. and ATRAMENTAL TAINTED. The wellsprings result in a thick sticky pungent substance oozing from the earth, with no discernible source. The ichor may be used as a resource in areas where it is recorded close to civilisation, including poisons, healing salves, and as an ingredient in various technarcane processes. See Vol IV: Supranatural Features.

ICHORIA: Rvr. River in VÂRR, dammed by the STEEL CATARACT and other dams in the early days of the KORACHANI dominance in Vârr. The river was dammed to control its flow and as a means of powering the many manufactories, quarries and mines that had sprung up downstream.

The river gained a deserved reputation for the filth and pollution that tainted its waters, though this was lessened somewhat during the dominance of the INTERREGES and again improved further under the rule of the REGENT-KINGS, though it remains polluted, most settlements close to its waters forced to seek alternative means of irrigation.

ICHORIPHANT: Rel. Rnk. Priests of KARAKHAS. They were once bloodacolytes of KHAR'ILLAE, though after the arrival of the KORACHANI EMPIRE in Karakhas and its conversion to the imperial faith in the first century RM, the title was retained by ministers of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, though the church there was quick to adopt many blood-rituals that were common in the region to appease the populace.

Originally embodying the belief that worshippers consuming the blood of sacrificed animals symbolically consumed the blood (ichor) of their deity Khar'illae, the ichoriphants now maintain that Khar'illae, as a saint of the UNDYING MACHINE, condones the belief that suffering leads to enlightenment, and that everything has its price, and that the price of true faith and spiritual fulfilment is a blood-toll.

The Ichoriphants demand a small blood-price from the followers of Khar'illae, in return for her benefactions. This practice is not fully allowed by the Church of the Undying Machine, though it has gone on for so long, and the act become so engrained within the acts of faith in Karakhas that it is allowed to survive.

ICHRON: Set. Coastal settlement in the region of EDALLA in the far west of THE SURRACH (Pop. c. 7,900).

ICHRUOR: Int. Rvr. Infamous ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED river known for its thick blood-like waters, that flows throughout the south west of KHARKHARADONTIS in the centre of NORTHERN SAMMAEA. It has various sources, all of them unnatural and ATRAMENTAL in origin, and at its longest stretch it flows for some 3,000-miles, making it one of the longest rivers in ELYDEN. It ends in an endorheic basin within the EYE OF DARKNESS, where its blood-like waters coagulate in a foul lake that crusts over, attracting vermin and insects from miles around. The region is shunned by MORTALS, though is largely harmless.

ICHRUOR FALLS: also 'Blood Waterfalls'. Geo. Cataract in the south west of KHARKHARADONTIS in the centre of NORTHERN SAMMAEA, forming a part of the course of the river ICHRUOR. Falling for around 40-ft., the falls churn the blood-like waters into a fine mist that attracts vermin and insects such as the bloodflies and mosquitos, that infest the surrounding region.

ICHTON: Rui. Ghost-town in the north east of JURRAS⁽²⁾. It was once a major fishing port, though with the shrinking of the SEA OF FOR and its dwindling coastal life, its livelihood was destroyed and the place was left to rot some five centuries past, where it remains now 2-miles from the current shore; a rotten shell of city, its metal plundered, deserted.

ICON OF DOLRUTH: Rel. Soc. Arc. Upper-most copula in the BASTION OF STEEL, in KHADON, KORACHAN. In it is imprisoned an entity known only as Rimmon, said to be the untiring king of a forgotten land conquered by the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR centuries past. Legend claims that Malichar encountered and defeated the king with the aid of the SCRIPTURE OF SHADOW early in his rule; the name of his home expunged from records as the king's power is said to lay in his homeland.

Rimmon spends its days rotating the cupola, so that the gaze of Malichar can fall upon the entirety of his empire. Even after the downfall of the empire and the subsequent ruination of the Bastion and its contestation at the hands of various agencies and groups, the Icon of Duluruth remains in one piece, its prisoner working without cease or hope of end.

ICON OF THE EMPEROR: Arc. large metallic statue in SAGO, in the west of VENTHIR. The statue takes the form of a proud Venthiri SPHINX in a crested headdress, standing upright, its wings outstretched, as though taking flight. The statue is ancient, dating to before the rise of Venthir, and possibly even the VENATHIEMPIRE before it and there is no context for the eponymous emperor. Some postulate that a link might exist between the statue and QUEEN HETEPHERES, though such beliefs are little more than conjecture.

ICONIUM: Rui. Old city in the north east of VAALK. It was one of the first KORACHANI colonies there, though was allowed to die out following the slow retreat of the coastline.

ICONOCLAST WARS, the: Soc. Pol. Rel. War. His. A period in the history of the KORACHANI EMPIRE between c. 1370 – 1460 RM that was characterised by a rise in the worship of heretical and heathen deities and idols, brought about by increased contact with non-imperial cultures through trade and travel, leading to an increase in cultural and religious osmosis. Social classes and castes that until then had been relatively isolated from the world outside the imperial heartland were exposed to new cultures and beliefs, many of them for the first time, leading to an unprecedented growth in heathen cults and proscribed sects, first close to imperial borders, but rapidly moving towards its more established heart in the Inner Sea, eventually reaching the Korachani peninsula itself.

The threat that these new heretical cults posed to the stability of the empire could not be understated, and various groups, amongst them the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, the ICONOCLASTS⁽²⁾ of the MORÉHAN ORDER, as well as the ARÂTHUAHI, GRIGORIAN, and KYONI ORDERS of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION all began to counter these perverse new cults.

Led by the zealous actions of the Iconoclasts, their retaliatory efforts reached a crux in c. 1450 RM, leading to a decade of tense fighting within imperial cities as they clashed with heretic groups that never stood a chance against them and were quickly whittled down. The heads of tens of thousands of heretics were displayed above city gates and town squares as a symbol of what awaited those turning away from the imperial faith.

The Church of the Undying Machine was quick to capitalise on this, establishing new centres of indoctrination, that would soon become standardised as the SOCIETY OF RACHANAELI INDOCTRINATION, that taught children of the values of the Korachani faith even as it villainised all other faiths and cultures, ensuring that the events leading up to the Iconoclast Wars would never be repeated.

ICONOCLASTS: 1. Rel. Org. A largely autonomous wing of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE that appeared soon after the rise of the religion within the KORACHANI EMPIRE, and whose growth was exacerbated by the spread of the Korachani armies into neighbouring lands and resulting clash of cultures, which its EXOCRINES abhorred, in turn leading to the emergence of the iconoclast caste in c. 100 RM.

Its members were concerned with the elimination of idolatry both within and without the empire, and their crusades peppered imperial history, but over the years their stance on idolatry became more extreme, with various well-established imperial traditions, such as celebrating feasts of patron saints and the veneration of saintly relics being not only frowned upon but also challenged at time, causing increasing friction with the church's ruling bodies.

High-ranking iconoclasts who found their actions stymied by church edicts opposing their more fanatical persuasions splintered from the church and splintered from the church and formed a new sect in c. 430 RM, effectively taking all iconoclasts with them. They continued their iconoclasm over the next decades, until they were eventually excommunicated by the church in 463 RM.

Free from the constraints of the church, they continued in their crusade unabated, eventually evolving into the MORÉHAN ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION, which was formally established in the city of NOUVAR in 498 RM, after which it became a fully distinct entity, sloughing off most of its link with the church, where it eventually began focusing on heathen practices.

2. Pol. Rnk. Rank within the MORÉHAN ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION that continues the tradition of its forebears^(1.), persecuting those they deemed to be practicing idolatrous beliefs and practices both within and without the empire.

They Iconoclasts are the most populous rank within the Order and form a backbone of fanatical individuals who descend upon marked settlements, temples, structures, or relics that are deemed to be in contravention of Order's tenets, with the intent of destroying or confiscating them. Individuals marked by the Order are captured or executed as deemed necessary.

The term Iconoclast has become synonymous with the Moréhan Order and the name is often used interchangeably with the official name.

ICONODULES, the: Rel. Org. An organisation within the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE in the KORACHANI EMPIRE that is devoted to revealing reliquaries to the masses. Its members travel throughout the empire in large caravans, moving from church to church in the equivalent of an ecclesiastic carnival, with demagogues and preachers and religious oddities in tow.

ICOVELLEAS: Set. Coastal city in the north of TISARA. It is famed for the large tiered fountain that is consecrated to the goddess ANDRASTE (Pop. c. 38,000).

ICRATHIANDA: Geo. Expansive reef in the south of the PANTHEON ISLES.

ICTERA: Sec. Small fortified city in the north of ETUA, in the southern foothills of the ABOSHATHOT Mountains, at the foot of MT. RHADAMANTHOUS. Its people operate great quarries where they extract sulphur from the surrounding hills (Pop. c. 12,000).

ICTERIA: Rui. Ruins in the north west of VAALK. Once a thriving settlement, the arrival of the KORACHANI EMPIRE in Vaalk in 19 RM saw many of its people leaving rural communities for the larger cities that had adopted the early CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, leaving it a ghost-town by 300 RM. By c. 1000 RM it had become a small refuge for ATRAMENTALLY-AFFLICTED CENOBITES who failed their tests of faith in the YO-LABRYS, and remains so to this day, harbouring many cenobites who are incapable of continuing in their work in honour of the $\underline{\text{UNDYING}}$ MACHINE.

IDABESS: 1. Sea. Bay in the south east of SAGITTARIA, dividing the peninsula of BHATHAIA, form the far south of ALTHA^(2.).

2. Mil. Str. Fortress in the south east of SAGITTARIA, overlooking the SEA OF DANAEL and the BAY OF IDABESS^(1.).

IDADAL: Sct. Fortified settlement in the region of NEYSHABUR in the south east of SARASTRO known for its UMBRA-extraction facilities. It was besieged by VENTHIRI armies on the 9th of RACHALEN 3703 RM during the WAR OF SUNDERING, before KORACHAN became involved in the conflict. Its industrial importance meant it was already well-defended, and it withstood a (Pop. c. 34,500).

IDAIONAL: Cal. In the KORACHANI CALENDAR, the third DAY OF THE WEEK. See Vol II: Month and Lunar cycle in Elyden: Calendars.

IDALIA: Sea. Sea off the western coast of DANU, to the south west of WESTERN MENISCEA.

IDALLA: Geo. Island off the southern coast of DANU, in the south west of the SEA OF IPERIA. It was 'discovered' and named by the explorer BOHMIUS in 1526 RM.

IDAN: Rui. Ancient coastal HAAGENI city that appeared in c. -1100 RM atop which the city of TYROPOEA later appeared. Idan was the largest concentration of Haageni people and maintained regular trade with the city of AGUR, across the DAARKEN GULF, and by c. -800 had become their only significant city outside of the city of IRAM, which had by then allied with the CITADEL MOUNTS. The discovery of ancient religious texts and 3 dormant Ionic GOLEMS^(2.) in the KHO HAGAR mountain in c. -730 RM brought prosperity to the region, so-much so that a new religion – known as THE VOID – appeared there, spreading north to Saloroc c. -700 RM. The unity that the golems brought to the region attracted the attentions of SALOROC, which in -693 RM attacked the city, conquering it and subjugating its people, taking them north as SLAVES, and moving the Ionic texts and the golems north to the city of GARAP. Idan was left ruined, though its coastal location and natural harbours ensured that within 100 years, it was resettled by the Salorocan people and christened Tyropoea.

IDANAPH: Set. Major city in the c of the mainland of the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT, in the north west of SAMMAEA. The city serves as a link between the otherwise isolated cities west of IQEKHABRA Mountains and the more populous east and is known for its markets and caravanserais (Pop. c. 138,000).

IDATH: Set. City in the c of CEHOPHELA, north of SEDALLIA (Pop. c. 14.800). *

IDDEAH: Rvr. River in the east of BANT, flowing south for 290-miles from sources in KELLOIL Mountains before reaching the SEA OF LETHEA.

IDDEN: 1. Set. Slum-city in the west of LIDEA, which rose in c. 2950 RM after the construction of the DAM OF AESAPIA in AETHIOS in 2943 RM caused the death of many small settlements along the SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾ in Lidea. The survivors of the settlements collected east of the Shibboleth and founded Idden. Though the dam was destroyed by a KORACHANI offensive in 3017 RM and the flow of the river Shibboleth returned to normal, Idden survived as a slum town growing exponentially throughout the next centuries until reaching its present size, where it survives though the crafts it sells along the SALT ROAD (Pop. c. 190,000).

2. Arc. Bridge in the above city^(1.), crossing the river SHIBBOLETH^(3.).

IDDIR: Set. Small fortified city in the c north east of the BARRIER LANDS, between the FLOROANAN Badlands and the BASHA Highlands. It is one of few cities in the Barrier Lands that continues the ancient tradition of manufacturing the creants known as FLOROANAN BODIES. The process is complex, with ATRAMENTALLY-sensitive materials used to cover skeletons, which are manipulated by SHAPERS, effectively turning them into primitive golems^(2,) (Pop. c. 17,000).

IDDIRA: Set. City in the c of the Barrier Lands, in the north west of NORTHERN SAMMAEA, along the route of the IVORY ROAD, and largest of the AIGOKHERAN trade-cities. The city is large and thriving with trade from the Ivory Road (Pop. c. 50,000).

IDEOS: Set. western-most settlement in SAGITTARIA. It was coastal until 3700 RM, though is now around a mile from the shore, its fishing industry forgotten, replaced now with wine-making (Pop. c. 4,400).

IDIPAR: Int. Rui. petrified city in the south east of SAMMAEA, thought to be a remnant of the THIRD AGE. It is now located within the territory of the SARASTROAN colony of IPSISSIMA^(1.).

IDLEON: Sup. Rui. Strange twin-faced basalt idol, half buried in the south of the dust dunes of the HAMARTIA desert in the east of the UMBRA SOKHAR wastes. The idol is a craven relic of ancient days and its eyes inexplicably weep a resin-like substance that has slowly collected at the base of the idol, pooling into a strange reddish AMBER. The air about it is rife with a nauseating buzzing that penetrates the thoughts of mortals who wander too close.

IDMHAT: Set. Coastal city in the east of KHAMID, overlooking the RED ISLES. It is the main Khamidian regulator of lapis lazuli exportation and controls prices and supply for trade west into INNER SEA REGION (Pop. c. 50,000).

IDOAZA: Set. City in the north of TZALLRACH, along the course of the river BAELLI. It is known for its irrigated streets and river-side canals, and forms a part of the GREAT ROAD trade-route (Pop. c. 50,000).

IDOL OF BAPHOMET, TEMPLE OF THE: Rel. Str. Ancient ruined temple in the north east of RHINOCOLOURA, near the confluence where the river SARADAR meets the river DAKHAN. The temple was constructed in c. -450 RM by nomads who decades earlier had found the IDOL OF BAPHOMET, thought to have been lost for centuries.

IDOL OF CYNOSURE: Int. Arc. Brilliant white monument in the c east of THE SURRACH, to the south west of the GAMIGAHUA massif. Its brilliance is so much that some scholars believe that it may be under the influence of the Firmament.

IDOL OF THE FALLEN: also 'Dumsant'. His. Obj. Relic in the region of FERATORA in TETHYSIA. Supposedly it is the body of one of the PROPHET KATHISIS'S disciples, known as Dumsani, who was mortally injured while defending the Prophet at the GATES OF PURGHA in 1562 RM. He was carried south east, where he finally died, surrounded by admirers. The body is incorruptible, though was encased in a gold-plated obsidian statue-sarcophagus and enclosed in a great guarded temple that was erected around it in 2310 RM, where it remains to this day as an important religious site in Tethysia.

IDOL OF KHREMOSI: Soc. Arc. Gigantic SPHINGIFORM STATUE outside of the city of HETEPHEROPOLIS in VENTHIR. Commissioned in 3782 RM, after Venthir gained its independence amid a productive period during which many monuments were erected celebrating the unshackling of Venthiri culture, it was completed over 20 years later in 3804 RM, it is an imposing sight that greets all travellers arriving to the city of Hetepheropolis. It is named after the small hill on which it is built.

IDOL OF RIDERA: Myr. His. Obj. Bone idol, rumoured to be carved from the thigh-bone of the dead DEMIURGE ABUFIHAMAT. KHARKHARADONTID legends variously mention a bone icon of varying properties, with most accounts depicting the thing as cursed; a siphon of the ATRAMENTA. Despite the widespread knowledge of the icon, no evidence exists proving its existence. Varying accounts name the objects' place of origin as the workshops of LUSTHIS, the ancient city-state of TA'HALU, and the municipalities of AXSUAH, amongst others, most of which are only known through anecdotal evidence.

IDOL OF THE SKY DEITY: see SKY DEITY, IDOL OF.

IDOL OF THYM: His. Obj. An ancient relic of the SOVEREIGNTY OF THYM and ancestral crown of its ruler. It was found in the plains of BASTI in the north of MHAROKK in c. 500 RM. It changed hands various times since then and is now part of the personal collection of QUEEN HETEPHERES, currently on loan to the MUSEUM OF PAST AGES in HETEPHEROPOLIS.

IDOL OF ZINNOBRA: Arc. Rui. Metallic green idol in the south east of THE SURRACH. The idol is some 60-ft. tall and depicts a four-armed humanoid, its features pitted and worn, though its feet are polished, possibly from the millennia of veneration by nomadic people of the INOTAHL basin.

IDOLATRY, ARKOSIAN: see ARKOSIAN IDOLATRY.

IDOLATRY, KARGAMAN: see KARGAMAN IDOLATRY.

IDOLATRY, MKISIH: see MKISIH IDOLATRY.

IDOLS, the: Rui. Arc. Ancient obsidian idols, carved from the bedrock of c KASPIA. Most are now damaged beyond recognition though one stands proud, its features rendered in stark contrast when snow on and around the idol.

IDOLS, KARGAMAN: see KARGAMAN IDOLS.

IDOLUM: also 'the Moaning City'. Set. Settlement in the east of THE SURRACH. It is known for the strange moaning sounds that fill the air, particularly subterranean areas – both natural and man-made. Local legends claims that the city is perched above a deep cavern that connects to the underworld. Some scholars outside the region maintain that this is evidence of the sheer reach of the PRISON CARCERI, the middle of which is considered to be in VÂRR, over 5,000-miles distant (Pop. c. 20,000).

IDOLON: Rel. Obj. Holy figures in the religion of SYBARR that is prevalent in the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT. These figures are treated like living reliquaries – they spend their days in gilded glass cases as the object of veneration and are kept in a persistent euphoric state through the administering of opiates. Each major settlement in Sepahaunat has at its centre such a figure, which is guarded at all times. The death of an idolon is seen as a time of mourning and the following months, if not years, are dominated by the singular search amongst petitioners of the faith for a substitute. To be chosen to be an idolon is a great responsibility and an honour to the chosen petitioner's family.

IDOLUS: Sec. Shipbreaking settlement in the far south east of PELASGOS (Pop. c. 3,500).

IDOWME: Set. Fortified settlement in the c north of TZALLRACH, along the course of the river BAELLI. Its main source of income is the trade upand down-stream of pig iron, much of which is also traded with merchants passing the city while travelling the GREAT ROAD.

The city emerged in c. 3690 RM from a simple caravanserai, which continued to grow as more people and caravans passed through it (Pop. 115,000).

IDREGA: Geo. Massif in the west of THE VORANDINE, forming part of its expansive coastal highlands.

IDRIIS: Dem. 'Idriisian'. Ntn. Small nation on the island of ISEA, situated between DHAT, IRORA and DATEPHA. The nation emerged in c. 2600 RM from the chaos that followed the collapse of the earlier TYRANNY OF ZAYIID in c. 2400 RM. Named after a political area of Zayiid, the Idriis of today grew from various independent territories that emerged in the wake of the older empire's collapse.

Its people are devout followers of ABACINISM, a religion that emerged in Dhat in c. 1200 RM but whose roots lie in Zayiid where the woman ABACINIA was martyred in c. 900 RM. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

IDTTRA: Set. Small city in the c of SAGITTARIA, and one of the first ports to appear after the diminishing of the SEA OF TROIA^(1.). Nevertheless, its harbours would by c. 1500 RM become landlocked anyway. The city diminished after that, though remains to this day as a major producer of food (Pop. c. 15,000).

IEBESH YETZIRAH: His. Rel. Pol. Per. One of three He'ELAN ARCHDUKES
– the rulers of the nation of GREST^(1.). She rules the MANSION (territory) of SITRI^(1.) in the south of Grest, and commands 32 legions of troops who all bear her SIGIL.

IEDALKA: Geo. Wetlands in the south of the PARTHISAN colony of EZHIRAYA^(2.), in the east of MENISCEA, overlooking the inland SEA OF NIUTHRA.

IEGGON: Set. Settlement in the c south of SUMA'YA, and one of few remaining industrious regions there (Pop. c. 9,000).

IEHOVA: m. Myt. His. Per. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, a SCION and son of the DEMIURGE AVRAHAM. Allusions are made to both ALLAISHADA and NEITH being his mother, with the latter considered most likely through corroborative study of the various volumes of the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN and external apocryphal texts.

He was an almighty warrior, leader, and priest and was martyred in combat with ASHTERATH. He was elevated to a cultural hero by early humans, and became central to early tales and parables from which later legends and myths would emerge, many of which had forgotten his true origins. By the FOURTH AGE he'd been largely forgotten and there are no known extant analogues that are openly worshipped or recognised today, and he is believed to have perished by the FADING.

He had little affection for his half-sister TERATHA, who was cosseted by their mother, making her naïve and blind to the harsh realities of the world. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

IETRATH: Set. Major coastal city in the east of SEDISIA. It is the largest city in Sedisia and is surrounded for miles around by the terraced fields needed to sustain its population. It is a major diplomatic centre in Sedisia, and most foreigners travelling to the nation enter its borders through its harbours. As a result, it has many embassies and consulates for most foreign nations across the SEA OF SERPENTS and the INNER SEA (Pop. c. 1,400,000).

IETRENT: Set. Major fortified coastal city in the south of SEDISIA, overlooking the BAY OF TASHI, at the mouth of the river MASKHARDA. It is the major harbour of Sedisia and most foreign trade arrives in the nation through its ports (Pop. c. 800,000).

IEVII: Set. Small city in the south of PNESSA. It is known for its farming of MONOCEROUSES, which is very difficult and time-consuming. Their horns are used in medical recipes for which Pnessa has become famous (Pop. c. 18,000).

IEVINII: Geo. Ridge in the south east of PNESSA.

IFARAIYA: Set. Settlement in the north of HARAPPA (3.). Before the separation of Harappa from MHAROKK in 3754 RM it was an agricultural centre, though following escalating tensions between the REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO and the foreign territories of KORACHAN and HOAMM in the north of Harappa, the region became a militarized zone. Today it remains under military control (Pop. c. 135,000).

IFIRMIAN: Plr. 'ifirmians'. Mor. One of the original Two-and-Twenty MORTAL RACES, and the children of the DEMIURGE DURUTHILHOTEP, and the first mortal people to ever SHAPE the FIRMAMENT, with the aid of their father and his SCIONS. They are now known as the IMMORTAL (2) guardians of the TRUE MENISCUS – the PRIME LACUNA of the Firmament in ELYDEN. They are the most proficient Firmamentists in ELYDEN and are thought to be the closest in design to the original immortal races, whose gestation was last to be interrupted by the creations of the Demiurges, resulting in the birth of the imperfect mortal races.

They were left devastated by the WAR OF THE SHATTERED PROPHECY and their numbers never recovered. After the war they retreated to the protection of the True Meniscus, where they became known as the immortals.

They are a slender people, tall, and of long tapering heads, and they are unlikely to communicate with others without dire need. They are most characterised amongst outsiders by their short sleep cycles and their inability to DREAM, though perhaps most of all by their cheating of death – the result of an ancient SECOND AGE ritual known as the TAMING OF THE SPIRIT, that saw them excluded from the common mortal trait that saw the SPIRIT transmigrate from their mortal vessels after death. Instead, every ifirmian bears a SOULSTONE within their chest that allow them to survive for centuries after death.

They are rarely seen outside of the lands surrounding the Meniscus and are thought extinct by most insular people, though the scholars of Meniscea know better. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life: Sicthain.

IFRAHAL: Rel. Str. Org. Monastery in the north west of NÁRTHEL, flanked by the NACHI Mountains.

IGGSOTHOS: Geo. Large canyon-system dominating 125,000 squaremiles of the north western region of the DESOLATION OF ASTUDAN. The area acts as a natural border between ASTUDAN and SABIA and, to the north, it peters into a narrow stretch of land that leads to the region of VARSTA.

IGIDAR MOUSSAIN: (B. 1799 – D. 1870 RM). SURRACHI explorer whose fabulous adventures and exploits, most of them apocryphal and likely conjured following his death, have informed popular culture in the Surrach, and they are now collected in oral form and are well known there. Today, printed translations of his adventures have appeared in the INNER SEA REGION, where they are popular in PARTHIS and ALMAGEST, amongst other places.

IGIDER: Set. Settlement in the c of VAALK, north of the city of TAHIL (Pop. c. 5,000).

IGLSONG: Set. Settlement in the south west of RAONGEN^(2.). Its main industry is the mining of OMNATITE, which is processed in the city of SINVERU in the south east (Pop. c. 8,200).

IGRAAL: 1. Set. Seasonal endorheic lake in the c east of THE SURRACH, in the north of the SURRACHI PLAINS. It is fed by seasonal river that flow from the surrounding basins, especially during the wet season between KORAHALEN and SATAVALEN.

2. Rvr. Wetlands surrounding the above lake (1.).

IGRAHORA: Rvr. River in the south of PNESSA, flowing north west for 1,200-miles from the far north west of CHEIRA from sources in the OKKHAM, OBRAGHATUL, and SINDHARRA Mountains, before reaching the coast at the GULF OF SAURIAR. It is one of the more fertile rivers in Pnessa and there many farms and settlements along its banks, though it is prone to flooding, meaning bridges are only possible upstream of the city of DOAHMII.

IGRAOU: Set. Settlement in the c south east of PARAIYA, in the MEGHA region. Its main industry is agriculture, and it grows varied crops, including rice and legumes (Pop. c. 5,200).

IGRASIA: Sca. Polar sea in the north of LLACHATUL, in the far north west of RAONGEN⁽²⁾ territories, in the northern POLAR CIRCLE. Most of the sea is covered in the WHITE SHEET, which contracts in summer, revealing more of the inlet, and expands in winter to almost completely encompass it. The White Sheet covers an expansive basin in the nation of Raongen, effectively blocking the flow of river water from reaching the Sea of Igrasia, serving as a dam that has created lake TAHONG.

The shoreline of the Sea of Igrasia has been a point of contention amongst scholars for many years, with the nearby presence of the White Sheet, causing no two depictions to be identical. The monolithic weight of the White Sheet pushing down on the land surrounding the sea has caused a major depression in the land, as much as 1,400-ft. below sea level, warping the actual coastline.

IGRASIAN BASIN: Geo. Drainage basin formed by various continental divides in the continent of LLACHATUL, including parts of the LLACHATULI DIVIDE. The basin comprises parts of the north of Llachatul, and all rivers within it should drain directly into the SEA OF IGRASIA, though its mouth is covered by the WHITE SHEET, effectively turning the basin into an endorheic one, with water collecting into lake TAHONG and other valleys. The basin and the sea itself have been warped by the sheer weight of ice that pushes down upon it, creating the EIGGID DEPRESSION, which in some places is now some 1,400-ft. beneath sea level.

Nations and territories that are at least partially within the Igrasian Basin include: RAONGEN^(2.), and THE VORANDINE.

IGREDDAH'S STEPWELL: His. Str. Massive helical stepwell in the east of AHOPAH, possibly dating back to the height of the ancient FIFTH AGE kingdom of VAEVECTA^(1.), in c. 1200 RM. It has seven distinct staircases winding down the tapering pit, following aspects of the golden ratio. It has been abandoned since the fall of Vaevecta in c. 2100 RM and now lies in disrepair, overgrown, many of its blocks held together by roots and vines, though it remains a magnificent sight to any who happen to stumble upon it.

IGRES: Set. Small city in the c north east of KARGAMA, to the north east of the ONCETHMUS hills. Is main industry is the mining of brimstone, after deposits were found in 3893 RM, which resulted in a boom that saw the settlement triple in size within the span of a few years (Pop. c. 13,250).

IGROII: Set. Small city in the c of PNESSA (Pop. c. 14,000).

IGRROD: Rvr. River in the c of PNESSA flowing south for 1100-miles from sources BELLAUAN RIDGE and the LIRAQAM Mountains, before meeting the coast at the GULF OF SAURIAR.

IGUSIGHI: Geo. Mountains in the south west of SAMMAEA in the AMMASHI^(1.) peninsula. It acts as a border between TAAN AN in the north and AMMESH in the south.

IGUZZEN: Geo. Large lagoon in the c north west of SAMMAEA, dividing the western KAZZAR⁽²⁾ from the north east of TATAR. It has shrunk somewhat over the past centuries, though remains sizeable. It has two main entrances, to the north east and south east of the island of JERR⁽¹⁾, both of which are controlled by is corsair fleets, which are in turn allies of the Tataran government.

IHAIK: Set. Major city in the c of KAZZAR^(2.), along the course of the river VETAGAME. It is a centre of the Godslayer culture in Kazzar and serves as a major recruiting grounds for the group (Pop. c. 127,000).

IHATHUS: Geo. Headland in the far north east of KARGAMA. Waning sea levels between c. 3400 – 3600 RM caused a vast level shelf to emerge from beneath the sea, which remain today as a salty plain with little of value. What few settlements exist here make a living from panning the region for salt.

IHEDROUR ITRUSH: Sea. Large lagoon off the south western coast of SAMMAEA bordered by the SHIBBOTHA ISLES in the north, the SHIELD ISLES in the west, and the CORAL BARONIES in the east. Its waters are shallow and known for their many sandbanks, reefs and atolls, most of which formed over the past centuries as sea levels have slowly lowered across ELYDEN. Should sea levels continue to lower, it is possible that the lagoon may find itself enclosed by larger land forms, eventually becoming an endorheic lake or disappearing entirely.

Despite changed to the climate and sea depths over the years, the region remains relatively clean and a hub of sea life. Fishing and other industries reliant on the sea are very common in bordering lands, forming the backbone of most economies.

IHIMUAH: Set. Settlement in the west of ZHARIAH^(2.) in the region of KHINCHIR to the east of the SHAROOK Highlands. Its main industry is the mining of beryl, including morganite (Pop. c. 9,000).

IHOTHA: 1. Geo. Flat island off the north eastern coast of TETHYSIA, in the north east of EASTERN LLACHATUL.

2. Geo. Vast saltpans in Tethysia, 50-miles south of the Bay of Sirens. The area covers over 1,000 square-miles of Tethysian coastline, stretching almost 200-miles along the coast, just east of the Iron Fields. The saltpans were found by Rhean immigrants in 1603 RM, and appear to date back to another Age. Scholars have postulated as to size of a city or civilisation that necessitated such expansive saltpans; the few ruins that dot the area bearing few clues to the riddle.

3. Set. City that rose c. 1850 RM as a small salt-making community in the eponymous region^(2.) in TETHYSIA. The settlement grew into a city over the centuries, where it trades the finest sea salt with the free nations of the east. Its massive salt caravans are a common sight along the GREAT ROAD, travelling to MALAN (Pop. c. 29,000).

IHRMEN: Rui. Ruins in the c of AHRISHEN, 10-miles from the river SAVEST. Prior to the SEA OF PYREA diminishing this was the westernmost port of note in the region, though it was abandoned in c. 3700 RM, following many years of struggle after it became landlocked.

IHSAL: Ind. Rui. Abandoned flint quarries in the c of VIRAHAN.

IHSONGHA: Ind. Rui. Gigantic open-cast lead mine in the west of the nation of DURCHAA^(1.), to the north east of the MARMARA MASSIF. It was one of the largest lead mines in ELYDEN, though decreasing yields, increased cost of maintenance, and political instability in the region, saw it abandoned in c. 3470 RM.

The largest of the pits still contain some ore, which is exploited by opportunists and scavs who often clash with the Durchaan guards stationed there in their search for scraps to trade.

IHTAL: Set. Large city in the region of NEYSHABUR in the south east of SARASTRO known for its UMBRA-extraction facilities. It is a major stop along the SALT ROAD, before it heads across the northern reaches of the MOLACHARI DESERT on its way east to ANUBIS (Pop. c. 6,000).

IHULANO: Sec. small city in the west of BANT, in the west of the CARCHEMISHI PENINSULA^(1.), in the east of SAMMAEA. It forms part of the IHULANO UMBRA LINE, which pump raw umbra to the capital in THAO, and it provides guards and patrols that guard the length of the lines (Pop. c. 14,400).

- IHULANO LINE, the: Sup. Ind. Pipelines in the west of BANT, pumping raw umbra some 450-miles long, from EZUGHA in the west, to the capital in THAO, in the east.
- IHUMESH OF COTHON: (B. 3948 RM) Pol. Current ruler of the republic of COTHON, and one of three rulers of the TRIPARTATE UNION OF LYRIDIA DHAI, alongside SEMMARA OF TERARA and BILLAL OF VEPAR.
- IIMONOPHIS: m. Myt. Phil. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, a SCION of the DEMIURGE NYARLOTH and an unknown scion of ALLAISHADA.

He was often depicted in contemporary artwork as wielding a spear with a heart impaled on the shaft, and accounts from the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN paint him as being an empath forced into taking up arms to defend his people, the IROTHANI. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

IJERITH: Sec. Major city-manufactory in the north west of PHYRR along the course of the river HAMMUIANDI, to the south of the region of VEGHAKIR. Life there is dominated by its manufactory, which rises like a great pylon of steel and concrete, where the relentless pace of production defines every aspect of life. Its inhabitants are a mix of indentured workers, overseers, and rare free citizens, all bound to the ceaseless rhythm of the city's industrial heartbeat. It is known for producing heavy machinery, crucial to the IMPERIARCH'S war efforts.

The skyline of Ijerith is dominated by towering smokestacks that perpetually spew thick plumes of ash into the sky, casting a permanent haze over the city. The streets are lined with utilitarian, concrete buildings, their facades stained by decades of soot and grime (Pop. c. 100.000).

- IJORTH: Set. Small city in the c south west of PHYRR (Pop. c. 15,500).
- IKADARA: Set. Small coastal city in the west of TAAN AN, overlooking the water of the SAKEN ITRUSH (Pop. c. 14,300).
- IKADRIA: Geo. Island in the BAY OF LEPHET, to the south of KEPHUAAN. Its western coast serves as the easternmost extent of the smaller BAY OF LEPHAINA.
- IKAIONAL: Cal. In the KORACHANI CALENDAR, the fifth DAY OF THE WEEK. See Vol II: Month and Lunar cycle in Elyden: Calendars.
- IKARA: Lak. Lake in the c south east of AMMESH, forming a fork where the river ANKINT meets its parent, the river EKYANTI. It is snaky and its waters are deep, forming in the deep valley between the URARAGHI, MEL SAGHI, and NAGHIGH Mountains.
- IKARESH: Set. Industrial city in the east of TAAN AN, in the ATRAMENTALLY-TAINTED region of ZENEGE RES and is situated along the course of the AQUEDUCT OF CREPHITHISS. It is a major manufacturer of UMBRA, pumping raw UMBRA west, where it is processed. The city is largely made up of roughnecks involved in the umbra industry, and it is protected from the ATRAMENTAL forces of the region by a series of rudimentary SIPHON ENGINES (Pop. c. 24,000).
- IKASARA: Set. Settlement in the west of HABOT, in the eastern foothills of the SETHIGH Mountains (Pop. c.).
- IKAT: Ast. Star, associated with the SCION KHAR'ILLAE. The star is recorded as having disappeared in 3712 RM, and the identity of the OTHERWORLDER supposedly born from its death is unknown.
- IKATH: (B. 1761 2195 RM) Oth. OTHERWORLDER and, later, imperial saint.
 In the history of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, he was a respected exocrine and ICONOCLAST⁽²⁾, though died his final death mysteriously while preaching in the LASCAR⁽¹⁾ region of LAASKHA.
- IKATHIA: Rel. Set. A holy city and a major part of THE SHADOW MARCH in north western LAASKHA, built around the final resting place of the imperial hero and OTHERWORLDER IKATH, who was buried there in 2195 RM. The city is also home to the SECT OF REIHELLIAN OBSERVANCE, Despite the lack of resources in the area, Ikathia flourished in the centuries following its founding, supported by the weight of foreign merchants making their way to and from the town to support the pilgrimages.

Ikathia dwindled following the $\underline{\text{DISSOLUTION OF THE HIGH-EMPIRE}}$, though some faithful remained, despite $\underline{\text{LAASKHITE}}$ opposition (Pop. c. 220,000).

- IKATHAIN HEADLAND: Geo. Headland, around 500-square-miles to the west of the city of IKATHIA in the north west of LAASKHA. The headland was once covered in a dense redwood forest known as ORRMAKISH, stretching to the north into SKAROS. Mismanagement of resources during the KORACHANI EMPIRE'S reign there in the first millennium RM saw the forest consumed by industry, leaving the headland barren, its soil slowly leeching into the BAY OF TAANHA.
- IKH KHOT: Rel. Str. Mountainside monastery of THE SILENT WORD in the north eastern-face of the DUIARHI Mountains in c south of TEMUJA. Though not as isolated as the similar monastery of IKH SURA, it remains cut-off from Temuja as a whole.
- IKH SURA: Rel. Str. Mountainside monastery of THE SILENT WORD in the TENGAR roughlands west of the EROCH MAER in western TEMUIA. The monastery is perched atop a sheer volcanic plug and is known for its isolationism.
- IKHRA: m. Myt. His. Per. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, the SCION of the DEMIURGE KHARANI. The keratin of FANES, just south of present-day KARAKHAS, claimed descent from Ikhra, who features to this day in the myths of Karakhas, KHURAUR, and the UMBRA SOKHAR as a roguish character. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.
- IKOLAPHACH: Ser. Small fortified city in the south east of OTINTH. Like most Otinthian settlements, little is known about it due to the nations' insular nature, though it is thought to be a base for military forces that patrol the contested region of ATILIPHO and the unclaimed area of ARROKAN (Pop. c. 15,000).
- IKOTROD: Rel. Ser. Fertile region in IMELKOT famed as being the birthplace of the prophet BENA. It was originally made up of low-lying rainforests though these were cut down in the middle FIFTH AGE to make room for pasture and farmlands, which remain in use today.
- $\underline{\text{IKRADA}}$: Set. Settlement in the west of $\underline{\text{TAAN AN}}$. Its main industry is the mining of $\underline{\text{SERPENTINE}}$ (Pop. c. 5,800).
- IKRAMMA: Set. City and surrounding villages in the north west of KEPHUAAN, along the course of the river SHAYANDI. Its main industry is agriculture (Pop. c. 28,000).
- IKRAMOS: Set. Coastal settlement on the island of CYNAKRIA in the south east of AMMESH (Pop. c. 7,800).
- IKRAPH: Set. Coastal settlement in the south east of the AMMASHI FREE-ISLES, on the island of MEDDIAN. Its main industry is the cultivation of cotton (Pop. c. 8,000).
- IKRAPHAL: Set. Fortified coastal city in the far south west of KEPHUAAN, located deep in a bay not far from the CORAL BARONIES. It is a centre of fishing in the region and is known for its large port, where merchant vessels trade south with the Baronies and FALLARAUR (Pop. c. 45,000).
- IKRAPHARA: Set. Coastal settlement in the south east of HABOT, overlooking the north of the SEA OF AMMASH^(2.) (Pop. c. 10,000).
- IKRARA: Set. Major city in the c south of HABOT, to the south of the EMMIGHI Mountains, overlooking the BAY OF ESSIA. It not only controls the only major pass across the mountains but also has a large port, and it sees a lot of trade passing through its territories (Pop. c. 110,000).
- IKRASAR: Mil. Str. Large coastal fortress in the south of HABOT, at the end of the peninsula of IKRASARIA, guarding the entrance into the BAY OF ESSIA.
- IKRASARIA: Geo. Long peninsula in the far south of HABOT, closing off most of the BAY OF ESSIA from the greater SEA OF AMMASH⁽²⁾ to the south.
- IKRAVA: Sec. City in the south west of AMMESH, close to the coast of the north westernmost part of the BAY OF TIRIL. It was once coastal though found itself landlocked following the waning of ELYDEN'S seas (Pop. c. 37,500).
- IKRAVON: Set. Settlement in the c north west of HABOT. Its main industry is the mining of SERPENTINE (Pop. c. 4,750).
- IKUAI DARBOW: lit. 'Seven Devils'. Geo. Chain of seven island off the northern coast of VAALK, north east of the SEA OF BASSANDER. The islands are black and thought to be the remnants of an ancient volcanic peak that is now extinct. The individual island are themselves named after seven devils of VAALKAN legend.

IKUAIONAL: Cal. In the KORACHANI CALENDAR, the seventh DAY OF
THE WEEK. It was removed from the MACCABEAN CALENDAR in 995 RM to streamline the calendar, which now has 6-day weeks, which more easily fit into its 30-day months. See Vol II: Month and Lunar cycle in Elyden: Calendars.

IKUHZEHAUN: Pol. Set. Capital of the nation of ZATAUR, in the far south of SAMMAEA. It is home to its ruling council, known as the VIGESIMAL COURT (Pop. c. 728,000).

IKUR TA': Ser. settlement in the c south of KHULL. It lies along a crossroads and serves as a hub of trade in the region (Pop. c. 7,400).

IKYRIA: Geo. Island off the north western coast of SAMMAEA, west of the KORACHANI colony of TAVVARDA.

ILAGABAS: Set. City in the c north west of the tribe of CHRIL, in the c west of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. It is named after an ancient ALLUCITAN mythological figure and it thought to be his final resting place. Today it is known for its loremasters, who record the exploits of the champions from across Mulciber (Pop. c. 23,400).

ILAHA: also the City Suspended. Int. Set. Fabled city in the far south west of Western Meniscea, perched atop the highest expanse of the Chorhyst Phenomenon, overlooking the Sea of Aseer. The city is famed for its frankly unsurpassed views, and attracts wealthy travellers from across Elyden, who are willing to pay handsomely for the privilege of looking upon on the sea from miles above, atop a continent that is peeling towards the sky.

The settlement originated as a hermitage for ascetic FIRMAMENTISTS millennia past, though fluctuations in the ARCANE TEMPERS made prolonged settlement of the region impossible in c. 2200 RM. Centuries later, during a lull in the Tempers, people resettled it, drawn by the views, despite occasional earthquakes and by c. 3800 RM a tourism industry had emerged, with pilots operating skyskiffs to the settlement from cross Meniscea and beyond.

Those who spend years in the area are more likely to develop STONE MANS' DISEASE (Pop. c. 2,000).

ILAN BOHMIR: Flo. lit. 'tree of life'.' A sacred tree, located in a treacherous ravine in the LAMEDUA badlands in the west of VÂRR. Preceding the rule of the HIEROGOTHS and the ANAX-LORD by at least a millennium, the tree was the centre of a powerful fertility cult embodied by the Ilan Bohmir. Its seed is barren, yet its pulp is restorative and when applied as a salve to wounds, disinfects and speeds up healing. The dichotomy of its fruit (incapable of creating life, yet fortifying that already existing) is possibly the source of the tree's religious significance.

Following the arrival of the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI EMPIRE}}$ to the region, the tree was allowed to rot, though it remained alive, if dormant. Its exact location is now lost, thought by many to signify the death of the tree, though explorers continue to search for its whereabouts.

ILASIMA: Rvr. Marshes in the far east of MHAROKK, created from silt deposited by the river SHIBBOLETH^(3,). Until as recently as c. 3300 RM the entire region was submerged.

ILDABAOTH, BANE OF SKAROS: (B. 187 – 221 RM) Sup. A powerful DICHORI, amongst the first such beings to rise to power in the KORACHANI EMPIRE, with some scholars maintaining that his powers came from the CODEX OF THE TAL 'IBA. He rose to power in 211 RM, rallying many criminals and dissidents (including many FIRMAMENTISTS newly outlawed by the young Korachani empire) to his cause, and used the unrest of the period as an ally in his attack of the throne. His actions brought a decade of conflict to SKAROS, which stalled its commerce and growth in a time already stymied by the absence of the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR. It was only through the intervention of interested merchant-patricians in ALMAGEST and LAASKHA that his terror campaign was ended, in 221 RM, with his death at the hands of a contingent of KNIGHTS FERROUS. His followers dispersed following his death, though the scattered groups continued to disrupt trade in the region for some decades.

ILEID: Geo. Island off the south western coast of WESTERN SAMMAEA, in the COTRIAN ISLES, forming a part of the ISLAND STATES OF IRY.

ILEUS: Geo. Island off the south western coast of WESTERN SAMMAEA, in the COTRIAN ISLES, forming a part of the ISLAND STATES OF IRY. It is the southern-most island of the chain.

ILIM: Set. Coastal settlement in the north west of ROMOREA⁽²⁾, overlooking the northernmost part of the Sea of HASAAZ ARAAT. Ilim and the nearby city of ILLIM share the same roots, and their name both emerged from a now abandoned tower that preceded them (Pop. c. 5,000).

ILIMNILL: His. Ntn. Now-extinct nation in the south of SOUTHERN SAMMAEA, in what is now north western YSACYITHAIA, MULIEBRA, and the south east of ELALLIA.

ILIQUDH: Geo. Highland coastal cliffs in the east of TRAKIA, overlooking the western coast of the SEA OF BYSSOS. The view from the cliffs is spectacular and they are home to many small coastal towers that stand vigil over the sea.

ILKHAI: Set. City in the west of the TARAHID ANNEXES, deep in the badlands of the HOGHSOTHAMON, south of the ASOGHAQUA Mountains. The city is fortified against attack from the west and is known for its mercenaries and scholarly traditions. Many advisors in the Tarahid Annexes, PARTHIS, OPHAR and the INTERURBAN STATES studied here. It is the western-most major city in the Tarahid Annexes, and has been a part of the PARTHISAN ROAD since c. 3960 RM (Pop. c. 20,000).

ILKHEN: Rui. Ancient ruined city in the c of AHRISHEN. The city was one of the first affected by the diminishing of the SEA OF PYREA in c. 3000 RM and was abandoned within a century. Its structures have mostly disappeared in the ensuing years with only tell-tale signs of the thriving city that once was. The region is ignored today and the main trade road that once passed through it has moved south.

ILLADRA: Set. Settlement in the region of IRRIGUEN in the c-south east of AHRISHEN. It is one of three major settlements involved in the production of tobacco in Ahrishen, much of which is sold to merchants crossing the settlement via the GREAT ROAD and the GREY ROAD (Pop. c. 4.800).

ILLAEL: See. Small fortified city in the north east of IO, along the traderoute east, into SARASTRO (Pop. c. 17,000).

ILLAETH: Set. Mountain-city in the south of HENDECARCHY of HATON, in the north of MALAN, on a peak in the southernmost part of the JHALOSS Highlands, where it meets the EGLAENT Mountains in the west and the NIYAN Mountains in the east.

The city began life in c. 1200 RM as a citadel overlooking the valleys of the Jhaloss, though the discovery of fine iron in c. 2100 RM led to a boom from which a major iron mine was later established, its deep vertical shaft being used for centuries to haul up iron. It remains a thriving city to this day, and is home to many shapers and metallurgists (Pop. c. 60,000).

ILLAGHE: Mil. Str. Large fortress in the ILLIGARHI Mountains in TEMUJA, overlooking the border with KASPIA; and the DOUN to the east and the LILTHAOST to the north.

ILLAH: Pol. Set. Capital city of GRAMMATER in the far south of SAMMAEA (Pop. unknown).

ILLAHA KABBRAL: Pol. Current speaker of the Republic of KHALHAT.

ILLAHN: Set. Only GREATTOWN in the ILLIGARHI Mountain in TEMUJA.
The greattown stands above the main source of the river AIHANE, its ornate stone arches lifting the greattown above the many springs and rivulets at flow south east, giving it an elevated view of central Temuja (Pop. c. 100,000).

ILLAKRAR: 1. Geo. Highland plateau, forming the inland region of a peninsula jutting out in the SEA OF ENTARI in the south west of QARALAM, stretching into the south east of HANNAH, in the south east of SAMMAEA. It occupies some 50,000-square-miles of land to the north west of ZATAUR. Its southern-face is steep, affording it natural cover from the Zatauri empire, though the north is shallower, containing most routes into the land (though few offer easy travelling).

2. Dem. 'Illakraran'. His. Ntn. Historical FIFTH AGE empire that occupied what are now southern Illakrar^(3,), south western AKACHA, and the north of the XETEAN STATES. A great civil war tore the empire asunder, eventually leading to the nation's banning of direct SHAPING. It was a rival of the neighbouring the AKHSARAYAN empire. See Vol III: Extinct Nations

3. Dem. 'Illakraran'. Ntn. Extant nation in the south of the GOLDEN CRESCENT region of south eastern SAMMAEA. It is of a cool temperate climate known for light winter rains and cool summers.

Its territories encompass parts of the earlier FIFTH AGE empires of AKHSARAY in the north and the Illakraran^(2,) empire in the south.

It is known for its powerful merchant hegemons who control trade south into the southern-most headland of south eastern Sammaea. See Vol II: Extant Realms and Nations.

ILLAMRACH: Rvr. River in the north west of KORACHAN, flowing west for 350-miles from sources in the RHAECHA and AKAGHA Mountains, before meeting its parent, the river ENDRACH. The river was negatively affected by industry on the region and extraction of water from aquifers, leading to it occasionally running dry.

ILLANCAN: also 'Tree of Life'. Flo. Solitary tree in the north of the BITAMMAN Desert. The tree somehow survives in an area with no known water or FIRMAMENTAL or ATRAMENTAL influence of any kind and features in the legends and myths of neighbouring people as a holy tree.

ILLANT: Set. Settlement in the south of the HENDECARCHY of CHLORIS in the south of MALAN. (Pop. c. 8,200).

ILLAREGH: (B. unknown - D. 3712 RM) His. Oth. Pol. HALFBLOODED ruler of RHINOCOLOURA from 3618 RM to his death of natural causes in 3712 RM. Of red-skin and claiming OTHERWORLDLY heritage (a claim that was never refuted but also never proven, other than for his unnatural longevity), he first appeared in the settlement of MELAKAB, claiming he would unite the struggling prefectures of Rhinocoloura. He was successful in 3618 RM after years of war and ruled until 3712 RM, leaving a dynastic KHANATE⁽²⁾ that rules Rhinocoloura to this day.

ILLASAN: Geo. Dry region in the south of JURRAS⁽²⁾, bordering the north east of TARTAK.

ILLASRAAH: Rvr. River in the far east of BANT, flowing west for 350-miles from sources in the KELLOIL Massif, before meeting the river IDDEAH.

ILLATASA: Set. Major city in the east of NORTHERN SIMBARA (Pop. c. 332,000).

ILLATH, TEMPLE OF: Rel. Str. Temple in the south of ANDILUTH, in the northern face of the CAMMOREAN Mountains where the CAMMOREAN PARABLES were discovered.

ILLATHUR: also 'Sovereign-militant'. Pol. Undead ruler of OSSIEL. Thought to be an OTHERWORLDER, whose rebirth into the MATERIAL PLANE was wrought with difficulties, possessing its deceased MORTAL body rather than being reborn as an otherworlder. Through sheer will Illathur is able to keep the body from fully decomposing, though it remains unnerving to look at and be around.

It is less aloof than other otherworlders though conversely has little value for the matters of flesh, and as such has not sired any HALFBLOODS. It is an accomplished shaper, though these abilities are thought to be innate rather the result of following any known magickal disciplines.

They have taken on the title SOVEREIGN-MILITANT and serve unilaterally, though are served by a cadre of seven ARCHZEALOTS who carry out their commands and lead their armies and crusades.

ILLATHURIA: also 'the Necropolis City'. Pol. Set. Capital of OSSIEL and throne of ILLATHUR since c. 2450 RM (Pop. c. 180,500).

ILLATRA: Set. Small fortified city in the south west of ANUBIA, appearing as a caravanserai over a large oasis in c. 1100 RM. The city was ruled by a powerful SHAPER who disappeared in 3852 RM, leaving the city leaderless. Since then, it has waned in size and power, with the wide-domed towers of the shaper remaining empty to this day. It is a major producer of resin pottery (Pop. c. 15,000).

ILLAVINA: Set. Fortified city in the north west of SKAROS, forming a part of the main UMBRA pipeline in the nation. Many of the ranger troops that patrol the length of the pipeline are based in Illavina (Pop. c. 27,000).

ILLAY: Set. Fortified settlement in the east of KOLCHIS, along the western bank of the river DOERIA. It is close to the border with ALMAGEST and its citizen levy is well-trained in scouting and patrolling the border from outside attention.

ILLAR: Set. Settlement in the north of the HENDECARCHY of CHLORIS in the c of MALAN. Its main industry is the mining of iron (Pop. c. 8,000).

ILLCHRIS: Set. City in the c south of HOLOLACH^(1.), along the course of the river Ruavar, in the c of the prefecture of BROTRIS. It is the largest city in Hololach (Pop. c. 1,479,000).

ILLDISADAI ORDER: His. Pol. Org. A historical ORDER OF THE SANCTIFIED INQUISITION in the KORACHANI EMPIRE whose tenets revolved around the importance of water and sanitation, particularly in arid territories of the empire.

The Order was founded in ARGEA in 497 RM to deal with water shortages and it soon became a major power in the empire's southern territories, whose agents built and repaired wells, dams and cisterns, and whose troops guarded such structures, particularly in regions of wilderness. Over time its role expanded to control water rationing, where needed, as well as controlling pollutants being pumped into rivers by the ever-increasing number of manufactories across the empire.

As cities began to grow in size and diseases such as cholera and dysentery became more common due to lacklustre sanitation, the Order also began to take an interest in health and sanitation, studying diseases and increasing awareness of hygiene amongst the empire's population.

Following the SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE it remained in Argea under the control of the LOW-EMPIRE, after which it became known as the NADI'RAH KHAMSAL.

ILLEAN: Geo. Dry coastal area comprising 80-miles of coastline along the west of the DAARKEN GULF, along the south east of BA'AKH and north eastern SUMA'YA. The region is known for its shallow canyons and clefts, and sun-bleached ancient corals, attesting to a time in recorded history when the entire region was submerged.

ILLECEBRIA: Geo. Region encompassing most of the south western-pointing peninsula in the HARÉSHK. Noted for its beauty; green rolling hills, coastal cliffs and rugged knolls. Historically it was home to the capital of the HARÉ SHKAN feudal kingdom in what is now CARIA^(6.).

ILLHACH: Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region covering over 5,000 square-miles of land in the east of the HENDECARCHY of STHAMAN, in MALAN. The region is nestled between the north eastern foothills of the USSIKA Mountains and lake KOLIAN and it is a morass of fleshy roots that give way to hollow twisted trunks characterised by tendril-like branches that are sensitive to vibrations in the ground and slowly writhe in response to passers-by and even strong wind.

 $\underline{\text{ILLHAN}}\text{: }\textit{Set.}$ Small city in the north of $\underline{\text{TEMUJA}}$ (Pop. c. 11,800).

ILLHATEG: Mil. Str. Citadel in the city of AELGHILLA, in the north east of TETHYSIA.

ILLHREN: Set. Settlement in the c north west of AHRISHEN that mines a rich vein of SOULSTONES not far from the region. The area is heavily guarded and is home to scholars and MYTHOGRAPHERS who study the pearls (Pop. c. 10,000).

ILLI ALIEL: Set. Coastal city in the south of MEHITIEL. It is a major stop along the EGETAKHAN ROAD (Pop. c. 75,000).

ILLIA: Sea. Small bay in the east of KAZZAR⁽²⁾, in the south west of the SEA OF ESCHATA.

ILLIAN: For. 10,000 square mile forest in the east of NÁRTHEL, flanking the river NAHUM. The forest is pure and virginal and once covered most of eastern Nárthel, though IMPERIAL logging has reduced its size exponentially. Logging is now restricted by agisters and only charter-holding PATRICIAN HOUSES are allowed to log there, under strict supervision. The region is dominated by HOUSE KARDAAR.

ILLIAR: also 'House of Illiar'. Tec. The oldest extant HOROLOGISTS in KORACHAN, the House of Illiar, to give it its full name, was established in 3199 RM as a simple watch mender in the city of NESSUL. Since then, it has gone on to become one of the more prestigious horologists in Korachan, if not the INNER SEA REGION entirely.

Its watches are famed for their precision and mechanical ingenuity, and it is famed for its signature watch, which has 22 complications, including moonsphases, chronographs, and times of sunset and sunrise.

ILLIDRAE: Plr. 'illidraen'. Mor. One of the original Two-and-Twenty MORTAL PEOPLES, and the children of the DEMIURGE ALLAISHADA. Their ancestral lands were known as AMARILLA. Of alabaster skin, dark hair and feathered wings growing from their backs, they are likened to angels by the ignorant and those who would deify them, though they are far from perfect – both physically or morally.

They are beings of compassion so pronounced that they must resort to asceticism and meditation to control their emotions. Due to their natures, they tend to devote their lives to single pursuits, which they perfect, becoming experts in their chosen fields. They claim to find solace and comfort in the repetition of the known, giving them a respite from their psyches, which are quickly overstimulated by others.

Though often regarded as angelic, ancient sources describe them as possessing an otherworldly, almost grotesque beauty that unsettled the other mortal peoples, possibly contributing to their isolation.

The race was whittled to near-extinction during the WAR OF SCOURGING that led to the FADING between the FOURTH and FIFTH AGES, and the remnants of the species dispersed early in the Fifth Age, living out the end of their race's days as solitary eremites in forgotten temples and ruins. To many, they are indeed extinct though scholars maintain that scattered individuals have survived, their natural longevity and asceticism a bulwark against death and decay. Aside from a curious outlier, in the form of the TIRODAESHI nomads of EASTERN LLACHATUL, illidraen are unable to bear offspring with other mortal peoples. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life: Sicthain.

ILLIGAME: Rvr. River in the east of KAZZAR^(2.), flowing east for 110-miles from sources in the south of the OZZARUN Mountains, before meeting the coast at the BAY OF ILLIA, in the south of the SEA OF ESCHATA.

ILLIGARHI: (lit. Northern Rim). Geo. Mountain to the north of TEMUJA, forming its northern border with KASPIA and SABIA. Translated from the old tongue, the name means literally – Northern Rim.

ILLIGI: Set. Small city in the c west of SARASTRO, along the banks of lake SAEB. It forms a part of the SALT ROAD (Pop. c. 15,200).

ILLIM: Set. Small coastal city in the north west of ROMOREA⁽²⁾, overlooking the northernmost part of the Sea of HASAAZ ARAAT. Illim and the nearby city of ILIM share the same roots, and their name both emerged from a now abandoned tower that preceded them (Pop. c. 12.500).

ILLIMUGH: Geo. Vast region covering almost 30,000 square-miles in the north east of EASTERN LLACHATUL, in the far northeast of TETHYSIA and the c south of LOEGRESS⁽¹⁾.

It is noted for its rivers, tough woodlands, and the many natural stone monoliths that pepper the area, most renowned of which is the gigantic ACTURA. The region is believed to have once been a part of the vast forests of Angmehen, but were cut down in past ages to make way for farmlands, which were slowly reclaimed by nature in the FADING.

ILLIOS: Set. Settlement in the north of PELASGOS, close to the banks of the river ISSOS. It has a long-standing tradition of book-binding and of record-keeping, and it is known for its large repository or census records pertaining to the nation of Pelasgos, amongst other information going back to the first years of KORACHANI influence there (Pop. c. 105,500).

ILLIQ: 1. Geo. Island to the north east of ZHARIAH⁽²⁾. It is relatively featureless and is largely uninhabited.

2. Mil. Str. Small $\underline{ZHARIAHAN}$ fortress in the north west of the above island⁽¹⁾.

ILLIROR: Geo. Dry plains dominating the north western reaches of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES. The entire area is peppered with half-buried ruined colossi, their double-paired wings worn down by the elements, their origins and purpose forgotten. The largest such colossus is known as the ANGEL OF KWEI, and is located over 450-miles to the south east, some miles outside the city of IMYRI.

ILLITH: also 'City of Angels'. Set. Stone-carved city perched over a massive unnatural overhang in the north east of TULURKRYPH⁽²⁾, in the south west of MENISCEA. Large portions of the city are hewn from the very bedrock, and it is famed for its three gigantic angelic caryatids, after which it is named (Pop. c. 23,000).

ILLITHAMÉ: Oth. In the classical school of thought, illithamé were considered the good OTHERWORLDERS (with the AEHARI their opposites). For centuries, classical scholars believed that otherworlders fell into one of two (and very rarely both) classifications: the black and white, or evil and good.

The truth of the matter is, unfortunately far more complex, which proves that the world is less likely to neatly categorise things than us mortals. Indeed, few otherworlders admit true knowledge of their own purpose and many are hollow things, distraught by a purpose than mortal belief has convinced them they should have, that they simply do not feel.

It is unlikely that we will ever truly decipher the mysteries of the otherworlders, and as such the false belief that they are here to guide the true or punish the wicked remains a dominant one amongst most folk.

ILLMNEM: Rui. Abandoned city in the south west of AZAZEM. The city was once a major harbour, though was abandoned in c. 3375 RM following the lowering of sea levels left the city landlocked amid a flat tidal plain, and it is now over 25-miles from the coast. Most of its structures have deteriorated and little remains of most dwellings, with only the metal and concrete husks of its old dry-docks and manufactories remaining today.

It was the ancestral home of HOUSE HERTURI, which is now based in the CAMASSIAN STRONGHOLD.

ILLOKHA: Set. Settlement in the c south west of KARAKHAS. Its main industry is the mining of FREESTONE (Pop. c. 6,000).

ILLON: Pol. Region and duchy in the south of PALUS(1.), the HARÉSHK.

ILLOR: Mil Str. Fortress in the c south of PERGOST, guarding the main entrance into the capital city of OSTOYAN.

ILLOU: Ind. Set. Settlement in the c north of PARAIYA, in the north of the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region of ILLURATH. Its main industry is the extraction of raw UMBRA, which is piped over 220-miles to the south west to SOPORA (Pop. c. 8,000).

ILLPACK: Set. One of few permanently settled areas in KOLCHIS, commonly believed to be its capital by KORACHANI scholars. Situated in its western territories, flanking the river VANDHAR, Illpack is home to the Kolchisi ruling house; the HORÚK (Pop. c. 215,000).

ILLPHAGOS: Soc. Pol. Tribe in the far west of MULCIBER, in the GROWING MOUNTAINS, in the north east of SAMMAEA. It shares its western border with RHINOCOLOURA, with which it trades along the SALT ROAD. In the history of Mulciber, the people of Illphagos were fierce warriors who hunted shapers, particularly FIRMAMENTISTS, and fed on their flesh. This tradition is now long-gone, replaced with a people who employ shaping in their everyday lives. A call back to their bloodthirsty tradition is a more recent custom where bakers let their blood atop leavened bread, in tribute to NEPHTHALONT. The blood is considered blessed, and those who consume the bread are protected by their deity.

ILLRAP: Set. Small city in the region of FLAVESCA in the c west of THE SURRACH. Its main industry is the production of gunpowder and firearms (Pop. c. 15,000).

ILLSHAÉ: Oth. Myt. In the mythology and ancient history of ELYDEN, the name for ILLITHAMÉ, or angels.

ILLUNAGH: Ser. Settlement in the c of METHUMN. Its main industry is SERPENTINE mining. The landscape around Illunagh is marred by dusty quarries and the rhythmic sounds of digging echoing through the air. Serpentine from Illunagh is considered the purest found across the AMMASHI^(1.) peninsula and items made from it is highly sought after for its aesthetic appeal and its use in protective amulets, which believed to ward off evil spirits (Pop. c. 9,300).

ILLURATH: Sup. Geo. ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region in the c north of PARAIYA, to the north east of the URAYA Mountains. The taint is relatively mild, and manifests largely in a density of raw UMBRA, which is mined in various areas.

The region is categorised as a $\underline{\text{LEAST CONCERN}}$ by the $\underline{\text{KORACHANI}}$ $\underline{\text{INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES}}.$

ILLURBED: Lak. Lake in the west of ABATTUR, along the course of the river ADSULLA. It was originally much smaller lake, but was turned into a reservoir with the damming of the Adsulla in 3892 RM. The reservoir supplies the capital, Lailla, with drinking water and crude hydroelectricity.

ILLURCAUL: 1. see SOULSTONE.

2. also 'the Soul Pearl. Ast. Con. Constellation in the SOUTHERN HEMISPHERE. See Vol II: Constellations.

ILLUSORY CITY, the: see DYANOOTH.

ILLUTIA: Set. One of three major settlements involved in the production of tobacco in the region of IRRIGUEN in c-south east AHRISHEN (Pop. c. 7,200).

ILLUVEN: 1. Set. One of three major settlements involved in the production of tobacco in the region of IRRIGUEN in the c-south east of AHRISHEN (Pop. c. 8,800).

2. Rvr. Canal in the c south of AHRISHEN, forming part of the AHRISHENI WATERWAYS, linking lake GALIDA in the north west with lake PASIDEA in the south east. It is around 9-miles long and has 4 major locks.

ILLYRIA: Sup. Geo. Fantastical badlands region in the c north of VECTIS, in the south east of WESTERN MENISCEA, noted for its large crystalline formations that form a long branching spine over the more expansive MATRIS Hills. The area is FIRMAMENTALLY-ACTIVE and is dangerous for mortals to spend long periods of time in.

ILONA: 1. For. Shrubland and sparse woodland in the east of PELASGOS, south of the BATHAKOL and east of the TEREKION Mountains.

 also 'the Windy City'. Set. Settlement in PELASGOS. It was the site of massive FOURTH AGE siege, after which it was left a blasted ruin for many years.

The area was resettled in c. 200 RM following the arrival of the KORACHANI EMPIRE in Pelasgos, where it thrived for over 2,000 years along THE RED ROUTE. It was during this time that the so-called THEODOLITE OF ILONA was created.

The city collapsed in 2303 RM, after DUSTSTONE caverns that riddled the city's foundations collapsed, leaving the city a ruin. It was abandoned after this, though was later resettled once more following the nearby construction of a guard tower in c. 2890 RM intended to guard the passage of the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 2,700).

ILONAN PASS: Geo. Mountain pass in the c of PELASGOS, linking west with east. The route passes between the south of the BATHAKIOL Mountains and the north of the TEREKION Mountains.

ILORHA: Geo. Peninsula in the east of VÂRR that divides the SEA OF PROPONTIS from the SEA OF SPIRES. The peninsula is sheer-sided and is controlled by the PROLOCUTORS, who many political commentators believe will soon make a play for independence.

ILOTEPHO: Rel. Rui. once-royal burial grounds of the KHAMIDIAN PHAROANTS; was mostly destroyed in the CATACLYSM, though remains on the island of KHOHER. It is a place of pilgrimage to those who still follow the old dynastic religion.

ILOXENRA: Set. Independent enclave in the north east of the CITIZENRY OF THALI. The eschatological cult known as the SLAVES OF SENESCENCE appeared there in c. 3880 RM, growing rapidly in power over the next decades, until by c. 3930 RM their members had infiltrated most government offices there, effectively taking control. In 3932 RM it broke free from its parent empire and remains an independent state to this day though it has waned greatly in power and influence whilst under the control of the cult. The city is largely ruined today, with little efforts made to restore or repair old structures, which are allowed to crumble. Many people moved away in the years since the cult took control, causing its infrastructure to fray further, leading to starvation and overall deplorable conditions.

The able-bodied are drafted into a militant force that is known for its archaic rusted slab-like plate armour and cannon-like handguns, who are known as MEN-OF-RUST. Squads of these Men-of-Rust raid surrounding lands, pillaging and taking slaves to help sustain the city.

The Citizenry of Thali occasionally mounts counter attacks against the city, but it has surrounded itself with mighty fortresses made of successive layers of bastions and curtain walls that have made it largely impenetrable (Pop. c. 91,000).

ILRORDORITUL: Int. Sup. Wea. Fantastical sky portal suspended over the c-south east wastes of the UMBRA SOKHAR, to the north east of the MOLOTH KHAMMOTHUL Mountains. The supranatural feature appears as a whirlpool some 200-ft in the air, from which emerge dark snake-like appendages that hang down, almost touching the ground. They hang inert most of the time though have been observed to writhe and lash out wildly for short bursts, before hanging limp again.

The land surrounding the portal is rich in mineral resources, though what few attempts have been made to claim them have invariably ended in failure. The tentacles hanging from the portal seem to have an aversion to movement and spring to life whenever something moves close enough.

ILTANI: Lak. Ephemeral endorheic lake in the south east of VENTHIR. It is fed by seasonal rivers and forms for between a few weeks to a few months every year. It has occasionally, following heavy rains, for instance, overflown into the IAPETAN SEA. It is situated in a coastal basin that was once a bay, but which dried up following the waning of ELYDEN'S seas some 500-years ago and is salty as a result.

ILURRO: Sea. Bay in the south east of VÂRR, in the far north of the SEA OF SPIRES, dividing the ILORHAN peninsula from the SEA OF PROPONTIS.

ILMENIA: Set. Coastal city in the north of the TARAHID ANNEXES known for its expansive MANUFACTORY and the crypt-dwellings of its workers (Pop. c. 31,000).

ILVENIA: Ser. Coastal settlement in the far east of the TEMPLAR STATES, overlooking the west of the BAY OF VIAMA. Appearing to capitalise on the retreating sea levels of TRISKETHIA, it emerged in c. 3870 RM as a fishing settlement, though a port was later constructed there, giving cities in the east of the States access to sea travel.

The settlement is thriving despite being surrounded by a wasteland, and is likely to continue growing in the coming years (Pop. c. 9.500).

ILWETH: Sec. Small coastal city in the north west of KOMMEA. An ancient ruined fort lies just north west of its borders, possibly dating back to the FOURTH AGE. It is famed for the size of its foundations, indicating that it would have been truly gigantic when intact. Little remains of it today (Pop. c. 14,000).

ILYERA: Ser. Small city in the c south of OD MEGINNAS^(1.). Its main industry is copper mining (Pop. c. 18,000).

ILZA: Ser. City in the c of LIDEA in the north eastern foothills of the ORIAN Mountains. It has existed since antiquity as a community of goat herders, though it became of economic importance in 1904 RM, when brown coal was discovered there amid explorations of the region by PATRICIAN-funded prospectors. Since then, it has been a major source of the substance for both the HIGH-EMPIRE and, following the SUNDERING, also the LOW-EMPIRE, though there have been periods when yields have stopped as old reserves were used up, before new mines quarries were founded.

Today the area surrounding the city is a wasteland of pits – most disused and reclaimed by shrubs and creepers, with others belching dust and smoke as machinery tears at the surface of the earth, searching for coal. Brown coal quarried here is now used across SARASTRO (Pop. c. 130,000).

IMAALA: f. Myt. His. Daughter of the SCION TALLAS⁽²⁾, who attempted to reform her father, who was a sadist who saw no value in mortal lives. Despite her efforts, she died a martyr at the hands of Tallas, and is now largely forgotten. She is known to have had 13 daughters, many of whom feature as champions and heroes in various regions and cultures of EASTERN LLACHATUL.

Her followers and the cult that emerged following her death eventually died to plague. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

IMAGA: Lake in the south west of GNOTH, forming part of the course of the river MARAGA. Local legend claims that an ancient sanctum lies at the bottom of the lake, flooded millennia ago.

IMAGIFER: Pol. Rnk. In the KORACHANI EMPIRE, a rank of clerk that specialises in the illuminating of manuscripts, many of which eventually considered works of art. Their eyes and hands are often enhanced by ORTHOSES, similar to those of the DACTYLID scribes.

IMAMIAH: Mil. Str. Large fortress in the north east of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of UCHRON, occupying a rough highland area overlooking the BLUE MOUNTAIN, bordering SAUA.

IMAMN: Plr. 'Imamni'. Rel. Rnk. Spiritual leaders in AETHIOS, often SHAPERS, though not exclusively. They see trees as holy objects which embody the spirit deities of AETHIOSI ANIMISM.

IMARTHAM: Ser. SARASTROAN city situated in the far east of the nation, in the craggy western foothills of the KHO INNOR Mountain, about 70-miles from the border with VENTHIR. The city was once a centre of trade though was superseded by the PRINCEP'S CITY, 200-miles north west in c. 1600 RM. Now, the city subsists mainly on trade from passing pilgrims and the exportation of its fine granite, as well as the dangerous trade of roc eggs that are sold as exotic pets and foods to the wealthy in Sarastro and Venthir (Pop. c. 71,000).

IMASSLI: For. Forest in the south west of MALAN, crossing the border between the north of the HENDECARCHIES of CHLORIS and the south west of STHAMAN. I it largely made up on new growth forests after old growth trees were felled throughout the FIFTH AGE. Despite this, it remains a healthy region, filled with various kinds of flora and fauna. The river SIELL NA crosses through it, though its course has mostly been reworked by mortal hands with few trees found close to its banks.

IMBRIA: Geo. Expansive badlands region in the c-south east of CEHOPHELA, stretching for around 2,000-miles. It is dominated by mesas, rocky pillars, and dark volcanic plugs, which taper to the north, forming a shallow valley that leads to the SEA OF INGALAT. The vast territories to the south of Imbria, between it and the EGETAKH Mountains, are prone to earthquakes.

IMEAL: Dem. 'Imeal!'. Ntn. Large nation in the c north of MENISCEA. Its eastern-most reaches are mountainous and its c is a highland plateau with the rest noted for being made up of cold to temperate forests. Its culture is aggressive, and many of its settlements end in the suffix -mana.

The collapse in c. 3710 RM of the XYRPHANI EMPIRE, allowed Imeal make attempts at expanding its own territories into the fragmented city states, but it made little progress due to internal strife within its own court following the worsening health of its ruler at the time.

The nation has been united and ruled by a loose 'dynasty' of unrelated SHAPERS called IMPERATORS, since 3355 RM. It lies on the ruin of the FOURTH AGE empire of JORINDHIA. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

IMEGRIA: Set. Coastal settlement in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of CARIA⁽⁴⁾ (Pop. c. 13,000).

IMELEA: 1. Rvr. River in the north of the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of ALAMUT, and tributary of the river SAR.

2. Set. Settlement in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of ALAMUT known for its ruby quarries (Pop. c. 4,500).

IMELKA: His. Nm. Now-extinct nation that was founded by the woman BENA in 1191 RM who used the GODSTONE^(1.) PRONAOS TESSERA that she discovered in the tomb to unite the disparate people of the surrounding lands under her banner. She became empress and ruled until her death in 1216 RM, creating a solid foundation on which her descendants would continue to rule, using the Pronaos Tessera to exert their influence upon the people.

The fall of the Imelkan Dynasty in 1798 RM threw the region into disarray as individuals vied for control of the Pronaos Tessera, which eventually went missing. The nation itself collapsed in 1809 RM, leaving the region in disarray. The nation of MELKOT would emerge from this period in 1922 RM. See Vol III: Extinct States.

IMELKAN DYNASTY: Pol. His. Royal dynasty that ruled the nation of IMELKA from 1191 RM until its fall in 1798 RM, after which the nation itself would collapse in 1809 RM. It was founded by the lowborn woman BENA, who in c. 1180 RM found the GODSTONE (1.) PRONAOS TESSERA that granted her incredible powers, allowed her to subjugate the surrounding people, and establish the dynasty.

Her descendants continued using the Godstone, but found that continued use would drain their life-essence, weakening and eventually killing them before their time. They accepted this as the curse of their bloodline – a price that many of them were willing to pay for the powers it granted. The dynasty had a reputation for being sadistic and tyrannical with its subjects, and the Pronaos Tessera became a powerful symbol of their rule, featuring on their heraldry and flags, though they came to treasure the object, spending far too many resources in protecting it from being stolen or destroyed.

The dynasty descended into debauchery and decadence, erecting the great bastion of TEDRATEA on the shore of lake INGES between 1371 – 1423 RM, which became the centre of various grisly rumours and legends. In 1592 RM the dynasty descended into a civil war when empress NIALDA died unexpectedly, leaving her twin sons in contention of the throne. Their squabble escalated into a grim civil war that left the nation sundered, eventually to be reunited by the victory of EVVRED over his brother in 1595 RM.

Evvred's rule characterised the Imelkan Dynasty's continued descent into decadence, with the upper classes treating commoners as little more than cattle, with rumours in surrounding lands of princesses bathing in the blood of virgins and princes hunting rural folk for sport, knowing that they were above the law thanks to the ancestral Godstone. This culminated in 1779 RM when the population of an entire settlement was rounded up and taken to Tedratea, never to be seen again. This propagated a series of revolts across Imelka that slowly culminated in an assault on Tedratea in 1798 RM, ending with its destruction and the EXECUTION of the entire dynasty. The Godstone was never recovered, and the region descended into anarchy, though the nation of IMELKOT would eventually rise from its ruin in 1922 RM.

IMELKOT: Dem. 'Imelkotan'. Ntn. Nation in the south east of MENISCEA, along the equator. It is known for its many large sinkhole caves, particularly in the north west of the nation. Some of the more accessible caves have been converted into cities, though most are wild areas, with their own ecosystems. Some link into deep cave networks, though most are self-contained with their own isolated ecosystems.

It was tentatively founded in 1922 RM by an alliance of merchant towns to better protect against banditry and marauders, though most of the territories it professed to control remained independent for many decades. It emerged as the main power in the region in the following decades as the many disparate townships were slowly united under their leadership, and was officially recognised as a single entity in 2012 RM.

Its people are descended from the folk of the far older nation of IMELKA, whose sadistic IMELKAN DYNASTY was overthrown in 1798 RM following over 6 centuries of rule through abuse of the GODSTONE (1.) PRONAOS TESSERA that was discovered in a FOURTH AGE ruin by the commoner BENA, who went on to become the first empress of the Dynasty. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

IMELROR: Set. Cliff-side conurbation in the north eastern region of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES, at the foot of the HASHATH massif. Like most settled areas in the Soleyn Territories, it was once a web of small settlements which slowly grew into the conurbation of today. The KWEI philosophy not as prevalent here as in other settled areas, and the Ghashan school of thought is favoured (Pop. c. 25,500).

IMENAZZ: Geo. Expansive volcanic caldera in the south east of SOUTHERN SAMMAEA, in the south east of YSACYITHAIA, stretching across the border into the neighbouring states of XETEA in the east and GRAMMATER in the south. The caldera was the centre of a great natural disaster in 3876 RM that led to the eventual fragmentation of the nation of THYSHIA⁽²⁾, forcing most of its population to flee into surrounding lands as refugees.

The caldera is still active, and is surrounded by fumaroles, sulphur lakes, hot springs and geysers, which make the entire region sparsely populated.

IMERRIL, SEA OF: Sea. Shallow sea dominating the western-coast of CYHLAGHARR, around 300-miles long. It forms the southern-most part of the SEA OF DANAEL. Its south western-most reaches are at the contested area between Cyhlagharr and EREBETH.

IMETH: Geo. Plains in the c of KOLCHIS, east of the river VANDAHAR.

IMMATERIA: Ast. In the cosmogony of the KORACHANI EMPIRE and, increasingly, within spheres of astronomy and popular conception, the word most commonly used to denote the sky. Originating in PRE-IMPERIAL KORACHANI mythologies, where it was the home of sky-elementals.

IMMATERIAL LIFE: one of two broad categories applied to life, as per the studies of the polymath SUZIV. Immaterial life encompasses all forms of life born outside of the MATERIAL PLANE, forming part of the MATERIAL OMNA. Such life is relatively rare though not unknown, and includes such creatures as OTHERWORLDERS and EMPYREAN SPECTRES. Contrast with MATERIAL LIFE. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

IMMENTIA: Med. A mental illness associated with the MATERIA OMNA, where those suffering from it have violent and often painful visons and sensations thought to emanate from the raw Materia Omna. If not treated through sedation and other strong drugs, individuals suffering from immentia may find themselves losing their grip on the present, forgetting who they are, ultimately losing their identity. Others may sustain fatal injuries through fits and seizures while in the throes of a vision.

Some SHAPERS and scholars believe that those who suffer from immentia are particularly sensitive to the Materia Omna. However, sufferers of immentia are no more likely to be shapers than laymen, leading others to dispute this theory. See Vol II: Diseases and Illnesses.

IMMERIA: 1. Set. City in the c of RHEA, along the course of the river ENNOIA, at the fork where its tributary, the river TOROTOIA meets it, though there is no land crossing of the river Once famed for its shaper colleges, these were closed after the HIEROMONARCHS came to power in c. 3160 RM. The city as a hotbed of unrest, and alongside SOPARRA and DHERBA, was pivotal in supplanting the Hieromonarchs from Rhea, leading to the rise to power of the COURT OF DREAMS, which came to rule in 3242 RM.

It is a significant city today, with a long and storied history, and is best known amongst FIRMAMENTAL circles as the birthplace of EMPYREALOGY, which originated there between c. 900 – 1200 RM. Its Firmamental colleges were re-established in c. 3506 RM (Pop. c. 48,000).

2. Set. Coastal city in the west of IZABAL^(1.), overlooking the BAY OF ERET^(1.) (Pop. c. 45,000).

IMMERUTH: 1. Geo. Endorheic basin in the north west of LAASKHA. Until c 3600 RM it was a bay, though the retreat of the STRAIT OF SKAROS left it as a lake that slowly dwindled in size, becoming steadily saltier. The lake has dwindled in size and remains now as three separate bodies of water: lake Immeruth, in the west; lake SHAOMATH, in the c; and lake ERRTAH, in the east.

2. Lak. Lake in the Immeruth basin in the north west of LAASKHA. It is the largest of 3 lakes in the region, all of which are remnants of a large bay that until c. 2600 RM stretched 175-miles east of the Strait of Skaros, beyond the city of FAALAR. The other 2 lakes are the SHAOMATH and the ERRTAH.

IMMESH: Set. Small city in the far east of HABOT, along the course of the river ESHERIANDI. Its people are isolationist and take little part in the larger events of Habot. It lies close to the border with PHYRR, though maintains little contact with its people, though it does control a seasonal route between the two states (Pop. c. 14,000).

IMMET: Set. Small city in the c south of SERROK. It is situated in the region of BAULAUROCH and is noted for its diamond mines. The mines are government-owned and strict regulations and rules are in place safe-guarding the welfare of workers, yet working conditions remain difficult for relatively little-pay (Pop. c. 12,000).

IMMIMETH: Set. Well-protected cliffside settlement in the region of IBLIS, in the c west of LYRIDIA. The settlement is located in a large sinkhole that most easily accessible from a single cave. The place is populated by the descendants of refugees from the THREE-YEAR WAR. A large natural uninhabited cavern is located a few miles east of the city, and is populated by untold thousands of bats, whose guano is collected and used as fuel in IMMIMETH (Pop. c. 14,500).

IMMORTAL SEEDS: Myr. Mor. In the mythology and ancient history of ELYDEN, the seeds that were sown by THE SHAPER, from which would be born the IMMORTAL peoples after the DEMIURGES completed their SHAPING^(1.) of Elyden.

Due to the Demiurge's hubris and continued Shaping after the perfect realm was attained, the Immortal Seeds became corrupted, and ultimately gave birth to MORTALS – the imperfect simulacra of what the Immortals were intended to be. The seeds were arranged in Two-and-Twenty pods, each of which contained seven seeds from which emerged the first mortals – four men and three women, now known as the SEEDBORN – the first of their respective mortal tribes. These mortals would go on to spread across Elyden, becoming its primary inhabitants over the next ages.

To all intents and purposes, the $\underline{MORTAL\ PEOPLES}$ – and by extension, \underline{HUMANS} – are a mistake born of the Demiurges' vanity, unwanted and unneeded in a world that was unready for them.

IMMORTALS, the: 1. Myt. His. Mor. Intended to be the inheritors of the perfect realm once the DEMIURGES completed their SHAPING^(1.) of creation. The Demiurge's hubris and continued Shaping after the perfect realm was attained, the IMMORTAL SEEDS became corrupted, and ultimately gave birth to MORTALS – imperfect simulacra of what the Immortals were intended to be.

2. Mor. The descendants of the IFIRMIANS, the children of the DEMIURGE DURUTHILHOTEP. They are the guardians of the TRUE MENISCUS and keepers of the FIRMAMENTAL font at its heart. They are all accomplished FIRMAMENTAL SHAPERS in their own right and are believed by scholars to be closest of all mortals to THE SHAPER original design for the Immortal races. Their name originated from the great ritual known as the TAMING OF THE SPIRIT, that saw them forsake the creation of SPIRITS^(1.), returning to SOULSTONES of old.

IMMOUR: Set. Fortified settlement in the west of TAAN AN. Its main industry is the mining of SERPENTINE (Pop. c. 6,500).

IMOROR: Geo. Highland region between the river DAKHAN and MHALAR in the east of RHINOCOLOURA. The entire area is faintly Atramentally tainted and is replete with DUSTSTONE, which though forming beautiful and convoluted chasms and formations, has led to the region being barren and dangerous to large creatures, where the risk of the ground collapsing is increased. What life exists here is adapted to the harsh terrain, though this was not always the case. KORACHANI colonists settled the region between 430 and 750 RM, founding the fortress of MARCHOSIA in 752 RM, and it was their industry and mismanagement of resources that was partially to blame for its present condition. The tomb known as the SOTH HAMMOMAR HANIHIL is located to the far north east of the region.

The region is categorised as a LEAST CONCERN by the KORACHANI INSTITUTE OF ATRAMENTAL STUDIES.

IMONTH: Geo. Valley in EASTERN LLACHATUL, between the KOTHA INNACHARL and the HETHA GHUR Mountains. The RTHEI desert was originally located here, but it has steadily expanded to the south west throughout the FIFTH AGE. There is little of note here, and the region has not been inhabited since the FOURTH AGE, though there are few surviving ruins to attest to this.

IMOUN: Rvr. River-system in the far south east of LIDEA, flowing north for 110-ft. from sources in the N'KOCH Mountains before meeting its parent, the river SICERAN, at lake ESEA.

IMP: Sup. Fau. Diminutive creatures found in corrupted lands within SAMMAEA, particularly in KHARKHARADONTIS. They are thought to be descended from ancient form of HAGHOR possibly created by ARIMASPI or ACHAIAH, but which became corrupted by millennia of exposure to ATRAMENTAL TAINT and the bitter DREAMS of slumbering DEMIURGES.

They are dog-sized with prehensile feet like those of chameleons, with arms that have evolved into large prismatic wings. The have flat faces with mouths filled with tiny needle-like teeth that are used to filter the water nymphs and other insects that they feed on. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

IMPERATOR: Pol. Rnk. Royal title within IMEAL. It has been in use since 3355 RM, when the first Imperator, a SHAPER of considerable power, enslaved 3 neighbouring territories under his banner. He amassed a dedicated following of other shapers who became his governors, lieutenants and advisors, eventually outlawing the use of Firmamentism amongst the INGRAM classes as a means of oppression, which remains to this day.

New Imperators are elected from the ranks of present shapers upon the death of the current Imperator in a convoluted series of votes that are steeped in needless tradition and ceremony.

IMPERATOR TIZOPHON: Pol. Ancient ruler in present-day TULURKRYPH^(1.). The title is claimed by some rulers of the disparate peoples of the Tulurkryph^(2.), but it is largely unrecognised by others.

IMPERIAL ARCHIVES: Edu. Str. Major repository of knowledge belonging to the MINASTERIA OF ANNALS, beneath the BASTION OF STEEL in KHADON, capital city of KORACHAN. The structure is sprawling, with miles of corridors and subterranean repositories that stretch beyond the confines of the city above, with links to private vaults across the city, many of which have been forgotten by the MINASTERIA⁽¹⁾. Its deepest darkest reaches are said to link with the sewers of Khadon as well as deeper natural caverns, and scribes, driven mad by their work, have been known to get lost in the dark, never to be heard of again.

The Archives serve as the headquarters of the Minasteria of Annals, and contain all recorded IMPERIAL knowledge, with details ranging from census data, histories, calendar records, military dossiers, almanacs stretching back to the founding of the empire, ancient teachings, philosophical studies, poetry, scientific treatises, and much more. The Archives adhere to an archaic organizational system that intentionally hinders retrieval of information.

The positions of ARCHIVIST and CURATOR are hereditary, and generations have lived and died in the archives, with individuals rarely leaving the damp confines, outside of missions on behalf of the Minasteria. Rivalries and open hostilities exist between different families, which often proscribe to different tenets on how lore should be categorised and on what is deemed worthy of restoration and what should be discarded. Most of these archivists are pallid, with near-translucent skin and large eyes as a result of their many ancestors living in the same conditions.

IMPERIAL ARMY: Mil. Org. The army of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, based in the fortress of AGOSTAN in the south of the KORACHAN. The army is currently divided into 59 legions, each of which is led by a General, typically a patrician who studied at the IMPERIAL MILITARY ACADEMY before sending many years in the army. Above all the Generals is the WARMARSHALL OF THE LEGIONS, who is currently ABIGER KORIC.

IMPERIAL ATHENAEUM AND REPOSITORY: Edu. Str. Library, museum, and institute of higher learning, situated in the SUNTAN hills in the c west of NORTHERN SIMBARA. It was founded by the first Simaran empress Bellreava Prolgapea in 2823 RM as a place where knowledge and the arts could prosper, and it has been in constant use since then, added to and renovated throughout the years without marring its impressive pylon-like facade. It is home to many rare collections and also houses an exclusive college of SHAPING where a handful of competent candidates selected by the government every year further their studies, with an eye towards entering public service following their graduation.

IMPERIAL CALENDAR, the: see MACCABEAN CALENDAR.

IMPERIAL COLLEGE OF ATRAMENTISM: Edu. Str. Largest institution of higher learning related to ATRAMENTISM in the KORACHANI EMPIRE, based in the city of NEKODA, and all SPHERES are studied and taught here. Most shaping licences in Korachan are granted in Nekoda, and it has a reputation as being the centre of Atramental research in the HEARTLAND.

IMPERIAL COLLEGE OF FABRICATED INCEPTION: Ind. Sup. Org.

ATELIER and guild established by HOUSE SARCARN in the MHAROKKIN city of EBERUK in 732 RM, which orchestrated the first successful industrial-scale inception of HAEMONCULI in c. 740 RM the first, which garnered a lot of attention from other ateliers and fleshwrights across the KORACHANI EMPIRE, whose CLONERS rapidly reverse-engineered the process, allowing them to make their own versions of haemonculi that rapidly spread across the empire, paving the way for modern cloning techniques.

This eventually led to the period known as the Chemisters' War, in which the College clashed with other institutions as it attempted to safeguard its ownership of haemonculi designs. Over the next decades it sent agents across the Inner Sea Region, who infiltrated enemy ateliers, sabotaging them. This escalated into open conflict as gangs in the employ of various factions clashed with one another, first in the ateliers and manufactories, but eventually spilling into the streets of surrounding cities. A large street battle broke out in Eberuk in 818 RM, which led to the involvement of the Iron Guard and, eventually, The Council of Seven, who in 823 RM forced the various factions into an armistice and awarding the College of Fabricated Inception exclusive rights to issue licences to ateliers across the empire to manufacture haemonculi for 100-years.

The end of the Chemisters' War and the granting of these rights to the College propelled it to new heights, and by time its 100-year period of exclusivity ended in 923 RM, it had grown into a mighty institution with ateliers and offices across the MNER SEA. Its controlling houses had grown incredibly rich and its members had access to the best facilities and equipment, as well as vast working libraries of knowledge, including the MEDICAL ARCHIVES in Eberuk. Its field agents, responsible for exploring ELYDEN in the search of new flora and fauna that were of interest to the College's pursuits, carried out expeditions across Elyden, and had a particular interest in the various tainted regions of KHARKHARADONTIS, particularly the FLAESCUS.

The College remained in Mharokk following the SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE, as the nation remained under Korachani control, but increased conflict and political uncertainty saw the College eventually move north, to the Pelasgosi city of TEREKON in 3718 RM, where it remains to this day, though it has re-established various offices and ateliers in Mharokk since its return to Korachani control in 3930 RM.

IMPERIAL COLLEGE OF GOVERNANCE: Edu. Str. Finishing school for PATRICIANS located in the city of TANTAL, in the north of KORACHAN.

IMPERIAL COLLEGE OF MEDICINE: Edu. Med. Str. College of medicine and anatomy located in the city of UMAHACHAN in LAASKHA.

IMPERIAL DIWAN: see DIWAN, IMPERIAL.

IMPERIAL DOMAIN BANK: Com. Org. Major bank prevalent in the INNER SEA REGION, particularly within the KORACHANI EMPIRE. It emerged during a time of great expansion between c. 1200 – 1400 RM, when PATRICIAN HOUSES and the government alike were encouraged to expand their lands and found new settlements and industries, and the bank emerged as a conglomerate of Houses that bought and sold land at great profit, eventually becoming money lenders by c. 1520 RM, surviving to this day as one of the largest and wealthiest private enterprises in the Inner Sea Region.

Headed by Patrician House VIGILIUS and ATTAR, amongst others with more minor roles in operations, the Bank is based in the city of KORACHAN, though has branches in hundreds of imperial settlements, and offices in many foreign states, including KETESH⁽²⁾, TETHRA, the city of ALMAGEST and various cities in the LOW-EMPIRE of SARASTRO. It is in league with the THREE CHURCHES OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, acting as brokers to its members and private businesses, of which little is known to outsiders. It also holds much of the wealth of the Korachani empire, funding many of its wars and crusades.

Currently headed by the HALFBLOOD OPHEIASE DISI, the bank is known for its strict adherence to the law, its harsh interest rates, and its debt collectors and revenue agents, who are notorious across the cities of the Inner Sea Region.

IMPERIAL INVITATIONAL: Gam. Yearly tournament of the popular KU'KU NAL that takes place in the IMPERIAL KU'KU NAL ARENA in ARGEA, SARASTRO. As an invitational, it takes winners from ongoing tournaments from across the LOW-EMPIRE, and pits them against each other in the largest arena in all of Sarastro over a two-day tournament that traditionally takes place around the Spring Equinox festivals.

IMPERIAL KU'KU NAL ARENA: Str. Gam. Large arena located in the city of ARGEA in SARASTRO. It is the premier venue where matches of KU'KU NAL take place, and is the home of the IMPERIAL INVITATIONAL, where winners from ongoing tournaments from across the LOW-EMPIRE compete.

The arena seats some 100,000 bodies and is purposefully constructed to echo ancient arenas, though it has many hidden features, including subterranean training halls, personal chambers for all competitors, various food halls, baths, gymnasiums, and temples.

IMPERIAL LIBRARY: 1. Edu. Str. Large library in AGLAIA⁽²⁾, AZAZEM. The library is known as the resting place of the so-called METAL LIBRARY OF VITTIVAS.

2. Edu. Str. Large private library within the STEEL BASTION complex in KHADON, KORACHAN. It includes records of steel legionnaire inceptions going back many centuries, as well as death records of legionnaires in battle. It also has a large repository of books acquired through war and conflict. Some date back over 2000 years, and many of them are kept under lock and key.

IMPERIAL MILE: also 'Korachani Mile'. Standardised unit of measurement in the KORACHANI EMPIRE and its dependencies.

IMPERIAL MILITARY ACADEMY, the: Edu. Str. Boarding school and college within the fortress of AGOSTAN in the south of KORACHAN, where KORACHANI nobility is educated and groomed for future placements within the upper echelons of the Imperial military.

IMPERIAL MUSEUM OF ARCHEOLOGY: Edu. Str. Museum of archaeology in KHADON, KORACHAN.

IMPERIAL OPERA HOUSE: Str. Soc. Mus. Home to the PARTHISAN PHILHARMONIC ORCHESTRA in TETHRA, the Imperial Opera House was a marvel of PARTHISAN architecture and a hub of the arts and culture in the capital. It was bombed in 3999 RM in a terrorist attack that was claimed by the SABLED SUN, killing 37 and severely injuring hundreds more, destroying its main stage and led to half the structure collapsing. It was demolished following this and is currently being rebuilt.

IMPERIAL POSTAL OPERATIONS: Soc. The postal system of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, which is overseen by the MINASTERIA OF COMMUNICATIONS.

IMPERIAL THEATRE OF PENUMBRAL ARTS: Soc. Str. Large theatre and performing arts company based the city of KORACHAN, in KORACHAN. It is named after the region in KHARKHARADONTIS immediately surrounding the BLACK FOUNTAIN, and most of its performers are ATRAMENTISTS of varying degree, SHAPING during their performances, which attract audiences from across the empire.

IMPERIAL WAR ROOMS: Mil. Str. Series of subterranean bunkers in the city of KORACHAN in KORACHAN. The bunkers take the form of dedicated complexes with dorms, kitchens, barracks', and planning rooms that are all linked by a system of tunnels, with water pumps and air circulators.

The War Rooms are home of $\underline{\text{KORACHANI}}$ military intelligence, and it is believed that there are tunnels that lead directly to the city's docks as well as bastions far from the city itself

The War Rooms are famed for their command hall – a cavernous hall filled with a large-scale model of the INNER SEA REGION, and floor-to-ceiling maps of ELYDEN and other strategic regions. Bays of TELEGRAPH operators and CLAIRVOYANTS and CLAIRAUDIANTS work constantly, gathering information from operatives in the field, passing on information to serfs who update the maps and boards based on this new intelligence.

For security reasons those who work in the War Rooms spend their lives in the bunkers, never leaving the confines of their subterranean homes, and all use of telegraphy and SHAPING is heavily regulated and monitored to disparage abuse.

IMPERIARCH: Pol. Rnk. Title of the ruler of the Autocracy of PHYRR, HEDRAL IDRAVAYN.

IMPERIARCH, CULT OF THE: Rel. Mys. Tec. Org. Perverse cult of personality in PHYRR, in which its nobility and upper classes worship the IMPERIARCH as a living deity, whose obsession with augmenting their body with TECHNARCANE ORTHOSES is something to be worshipped as divine and emulated.

The cults' roots lie in a mystery cult that emerged in the city of KHIRITT in c. 3500 RM. It slowly grew more and more pervasive until most of the Technarchs and nobles were venerating the Imperiarch (whose body was less extreme at the time, with remnants of their mortality still visible). The cult spread over the next centuries, eventually becoming the main religion in Phyrr. The lower classes and slaves also worship the Imperiarch though they cannot afford to modify their bodies with technarcane orthoses. Some amputate their limbs as a sign of their devotion, replacing them with mundane orthoses instead. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

IMPERIUM REX: Art. Pol. Large mural located on the inside of a loggia within the primary greeting vestibule of the BASTION OF STEEL. It is a figurative painting whose figures are symbolic of various nations around the INNER SEA. The central figure is a powerful woman of regal bearing in a classical helmet and robes, representing KORACHAN. She is surrounded by an entourage of smaller figures, all bowing slightly in deference to her – the SEVEN NATIONS of the Inner Sea. Facing them are caricatured figures representing foreign states and nations, all with a defect or imperfection of some sort – the enemies of KORACHAN.

The mural is in a chiaroscuro style and was originally painted in 995 RM by an unknown artist, though it has been repainted and restored various times in history.

HELIOGRAPHS or portraits of diplomats, ambassadors or archpatricians are often taken in front of the mural, and as a result it has become infamous in political circles across ELYDEN, where it now associated it with the leadership of the nation and THE COUNCIL OF SEVEN.

IMPONDERA: Set. Major city in the tribe of ILLPHAGOS, in the west of MULCIBER, in the western-face of the GROWING MOUNTAINS. It is home to an ATRAMENTAL college, where SHAPERS train to study and nullify the ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED region of ENNUPHES (Pop. c. 96,500).

IMPRESSMENT: also 'press-ganging'. Soc. The taking of men and women into military or religious service against their will. The practice is most common in the HIGH-EMPIRE OF KORACHAN, REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO, SOCIALIST REPUBLIC OF ALMAGEST, and the SECULAR REPUBLIC OF PARTHIS, as well as other nations across ELYDEN.

The KORACHANI military and navy, as well as the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, are known to 'press-gang' individuals who are unable to present their PASSPORTS as proof of freedom. The Church would place such impressed men and women into the SHADOW MARCHES as forced pilgrims, designed to make up the numbers of pilgrims to the holy land in KHARKHARADONTIS. The army and navy would take impressed men and force them into SLAVE regiments for use as cannon fodder and other dangerous tasks.

Though the law within the Korachani empire is meticulous in the applicable manner of press-ganging, and the eligible targets for impressment, enforcement is lax and gangers are typically free to work as they please so long as they are targeting acceptable individuals – convicts, the homeless, and others who are living outside of the bounds of imperial culture. By law, escaped slaves are still the property of their owners, and should be returned if found. A ganger found in possession of an owned slave may face criminal charges, making them poor targets. CITIZENS who are unable to prove their freedom are fair game, and make up the highest volume of impressed individuals, many of them unjustly-so.

Once impressed, it is near impossible for an individual to secure release, even if they were FREEMEN, unless an influential individual can speak up on their behalf.

The Church of the Undying Machine has increased the numbers of press-gangers in its employ over the past years, in a bid to bolster the ranks of the Shadow Marches, in the hopes of attracting more individuals to its cause. Many PATRICIANS and magnates claim that the Church has been preying on their helots, and, receiving little aid from the empire, are organising raids on pilgrimages to regain their lost workers. They care little whether the pilgrims they take are honest freemen or impressed workers, so long as their workers' numbers are restored.

IMPRIMALA: Mil. Str. Major coastal fortress in the north east of BANT, overlooking the SEA OF KURKAL. It was originally a KORACHANI colony, found fortified to aid in the defence of the coastline against chorsairs and pirates. It remains a fortress to this day and is a base to naval forces.

IMPRINT: also 'Residual Dreams', 'Residual Memories', and 'Residual Thoughts'.
Mys. A common phenomenon amongst SHAPERS whose acts of shaping intrude on the thoughts or dreams of others. After completing such an act of shaping, after losing FOCUS^(1,2), the memories, thoughts, or dreams that they were seeing or interacting with will linger in their mind for a few moments superimposed over their material sight. This usually fades after seconds or minutes, taking longer the more intense the act of shaping was. This can leave the shaper somewhat disoriented for a while.
See Vol IV: the Materia Omna.

IMRARKHAL: Geo. Plateau to the south east of KHULL, forming part of the border south east with the VESPERTINE LEAGUE.

IMRARKAL: Set. City in the north west of NÁRTHEL along the course of the river LOBKIR, just preceding the delta. It is known for its harbour that exports vast volumes of narcotics (opiates and umbra) across THE INNER SEA (Pop. c. 17,000).

IMRUH: Set. Major coastal city in the south west of GYZHA. The city is a major influence in the SEA OF DAZHAT, and its satellite towns are major sources of LODESTONE and other FIRMAMENTALLY-reactive ores. As a result, the city's Firmamental tradition is stronger than in others in both Gyzha and neighbouring nations. It is also famed for its large shipyards (Pop. c. 140,000).

IMUET: Set. Small city in the south of BANT (Pop. c. 14,300).

IMYRI: Set. Large walled city in the west of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES. It is known for its large number of satellite settlements that stretch around it for around 100-miles. It is the nucleus of a large trading area shared between those settlements, and acts as a capital of sorts to them.

The city is known as the birthplace and hub of the NOAMAS pariahs – wandering merchants who travel across the Soleyn Territories, SUOR, MULCIBER and elsewhere in the north east of SAMMAEA and subscribe to the KWEI philosophy. It is home to the KWEI TABLETS, discovered in caves in the northern face of the ETHITUL Mountains in c. 2200 RM (Pop. c. 150,000).

IMYRI TRADE-ZONE: Com. Zone of economic influence around 100-miles around the IMYRI in the south west of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES. Settlements in this area have a close-knit trade network, with many of the smaller settlements having little contract outside the trade-zone. Imyri acts as a nucleus to all this trade, exporting it and trading it with Soleyni cities outside the trade-zone.

INA: Set. Coastal city in the south east of ETUL (Pop. c. 75,000).

INAATH: Geo. Dry prairies dominating the south east of SARAGOS. The waning of the IAPETAN SEA has seen the plains increasing in size and becoming dryer, leading to the waning of some settlements in the area. It is thought that this desertification will continue for some time.

INACHA: Lak. Lake in the far north of LYRIDIA.

INAKHADA: Set. Small coastal city on the north west of the island of IREN

BARA in the north of the CORAL BARONIES, off the south western coast of SAMMAEA(Pop. c. 14,200).

 $\underline{INAMMUTA}$: Set. Fortified city in the far south east of $\underline{CISNERIA}$ (Pop. c. 41,800).

INARAK: Geo. Island off the north western coast of SAMMAEA, west of the SANTOREAN Mountains.

INARIRN: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the east of CISNERIA, overlooking contested lands.

INAS RETH: Set. Small city in the south west of ALAM BETHYL, in the territory of BOTHUAR^(1.) (Pop. c. 8,000).

INATA: Set. Small coastal city in the far north west of the TEMPLAR STATES. It has a small harbour and is known for its oyster farms (Pop. c. 12,800).

INATEN: Set. City in the c south west of ETUL. It forms a part of the VALARI ROAD trade route and is known for its large amphitheatre-like market that is hewn from the foothills of the SABBARAN Mountains (Pop. c. 52,000).

INATTA HORHAU: Int. Myt. Rui. Arc. Decayed twisted monument in the wildernesses in the east of GNOTH. The monument is sprawling, covering an area of around 250-miles, with no discernible form or function. Its true form is difficult to describe, and it's more easily said to be amorphous, with twisting tunnels and windows that look upon nothing, and grotesque bifurcating towers, and angles that defy mortal comprehension. It is attributed to the DEMIURGE RYHASSHARAUCH, who, though stillborn, was known to have 'shaped' various nonsense effigies in his nightmare-laced torpor, of which this is possibly the largest, if not most well-known, example.

Those approaching the Inatta Horhau are said to get a dull headache, and even looking at it has been recorded to induce nosebleeds. To sleep under its influence is to invite senseless nightmares that may offer a glimpse into the darkness that was the life of Ryhassharauch.

INBET: Mil. Str. Fortress in KHAMID, to the south of the SEA OF IANA, west of the capital of IAHNEF. Together with fort Inbet, it guards entrance into the bay.

INCARCERATION: see PRISON.

INCENDIARIF: Nou. 'Incendear'. Plr. 'Incendiariin'. Also 'pyrokineticisr'. Sup. Org. Mil. Rnk. An order of SHAPERS in the KORACHANI EMPIRE, whose MINASTERIA^(2.) is based in the city of ORMES in the far north west of PELASGOS. They are ATRAMENTAL shapers whose SPHERE allows them to manipulate fire, smoke, and combustion.

Though many believe they can create fire from nothing, the vast majority are only able to manipulate existing fire or combustion. At best, most such shapers can trigger a spark to ignite kindling or other flammable materials that are already present.

Theirs is an important Minasteria and individual Incendiariin can cover a wide range of roles and jobs, including serving as firefighters, using their powers to stymie flames, stopping them from spreading. Others find their way in the military, working as saboteurs, engineers, sappers, and artillerists, all of which use their Atramental skill indirectly, often married with weapons and machinery. Rarer are individuals who are able to shape explosions and conflagrations, who are inducted into the military forces as elite, highly-regarded, living artillery.

Those without the stomach for battle (or who have retired from the armed forces) might turn to entertainment, using their skills to control smoke, creating pyrotechnic displays in the entertainment industry. Many Incendiariin find work in the manifold manufactories across the empire, working close with forges and foundries, as well as chemical plants, where their control of fire and heat is a much-needed asset in regulating temperatures. Many find work on ships and landships, using their abilities to help coal burn with a greater intensity, making less fuel last longer.

Their role is dangerous and many Incendiariin are scarred from their close brushes with flames and explosions over the years. See Vol IV: Spheres and types of Shaping.

INCEPTION: Med. Tec. In the creation of CLONES and other ARTIFICIALLY-BORN creatures such as UMBRANS, inception is used to denote the moment in which the VAT-BORN creature is 'born'

INCHION: m. His. Pol. Per. (D. 8 RM) The last ruler of the pre-imperial city KORACHAN — one of the SEVEN CITY-STATES of the KORACHANI PENINSULA. He is remembered now for having presented the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR with his SCEPTRE following the latter's unification of the peninsula in 0 RM. The sceptre eventually became a symbol of office to the Archpotentate.

INCHION, SCEPTRE OF: Pol. Obj. Historical object once wielded by the king of pre-imperial KORACHAN – one of the SEVEN CITY-STATES of the KORACHANI PENINSULA. The last king, INCHION, is remembered as having presenting the sceptre to a victorious mortal MALICHAR following his victory and unification of the city-states. It remained as a powerful symbol of Malichar's victories but he never wielded it personally until after his rebirth as an OTHERWORLDER and his return to KHADON in 331 RM. The moment when it was handed over to the Archpotentate was immortalised in the statues known as ST. MALICHAR RELINQUISHED.

INCIOS: 1. Sea. Narrow bay in the far north west of TISARA, forming the south westernmost part of the SEA OF IALCUS.

2. See. Small city in the far north west of $\overline{\text{TISARA}}$, overlooking the Bay of $\overline{\text{INCIOS}}^{(1)}$. Its main industry is fishing (Pop. c. 16,000).

INCORRUPTIBLES, the: Rel. Rnk. Lan. Common name given to those CENOBITES who return from their sojourns in ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED lands bereft of physical corruption. They are thought to be blessed by the UNDYING MACHINE with a power over the ATRAMENTA that few can match. They become celebrities within the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, with many being elevated to the status of living saint. Others go on to wield great political power quite different to anything else in KORACHAN, often becoming powerful demagogues and puppets of the church as well as the ARÂTHUAHI ORDER.

They are similar to the UNTOUCHABLES, with the only difference being that the latter becomes a cenobite only after learning that they can withstand the effects of the Atramenta.

INCUBA: Set. Independent fortified settlement in ETUA, on the north western edge of the DREAMSCAPE of SOMNIAL. Its location means that its inhabitants have a unique understanding of the dreamscape and its effects, and its scholars are experts on the subject and are sought out from far and wide (Pop. c. 10,000).

INCUBUS: see ONEIROI.

INCULCATOR: Rnk. Soc. Rnk. A menial rank in the KORACHANI EMPIRE amongst DEMIURNES. Inculcators are responsible for the introduction of UMBRA into the body, as well as the maintenance of OCCULSIONS and the body after such introductions. They work closely with BIOMECHANISTS and CHIRURGEONS.

INCUNABULIST: Edu. Soc. Rnk. Lore-collectors in THE SURRACH. They are jacks of all trades who travel throughout the Surrach, bringing with them recent new and lore, repairing objects, trading for exotic items, healing those in need and so-on. They are usually accomplished navigators and trackers, and tend to be accomplished individuals – which is needed to travel along in the hinterlands of the Surrach. They are commonly seen as larger-than-life characters and most people respect them for the lives they live.

INDAAR: Soc. Pol. Tribe in the c north east of MULCIBER, in the GROWING MOUNTAINS, in the north east of SAMMAEA. The northern-most expanse of the BOLILOT PEAKS form its western border, and the terrain levels out to the east, forming a shallow valley through which the seasonal river BANDUGH flows east into ANUBIA. The people of Indaar worship MYTHOLITHS that are carried on the back of INDRIKS, and NEPHTHALONT is seen as a prophet, heralding their discovery.

IND, LIBRARY OF: Edu. Str. Lighthouse and library overlooking the SEA OF KALAUN in VENTHIR. Its library contains books and antiquities from across the ARID TRIPTYCH region, including some SAOSTANAN and VENATHI treasures, and what is rumoured to be an inert GODSTONE.

Tales suggest this relic was once a conduit between the MATERIAL PLANE and the OTHERWORLD and that it may yet bear the vestige of a an ancient DEMIURGE'S power.

INDAG: Arc. His. Large monolith in the far south east of THE OLD FOREST, 190-miles north of RHAMIA. The monolith dates back to a primeval age, its incorruptible carvings believed to be the work of the DEMIURGES during the SHAPING OF CREATION.

INDAGATRIX: Oth. A type of HALFBLOOD HOUSE known, whose members are known for their investigative natures. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

INDAYA: Set. Small city in the east of KREM, in the far east of the BERASSIM BASIN (Pop. c. 16,500).

INDEFATIGABLE, the: War. Vch. A KORACHANI frigate that played a pivotal role in the BA'AKHI WAR FOR INDEPENDENCE, directly leading to the involvement of the Korachani empire and the start of the WAR OF SUNDERING.

The ship was captured and commandeered by BA'AKHI dissidents on the 8th of RACHALEN 3704 RM, who manoeuvred it into SARASTROAN waters in the DAARKEN GULF under the cover of fog. The Sarastroan fleet saw the aggressive movements of the Indefatigable and warned it turn back. The stolen ship answered by opening fire on the Sarastroan forces, leading to an engagement that saw true Korachani ships (still unaware of the Indefatigable's capture) enter the fray, leading to a massacre in which many Korachani and Sarastroan ships were damaged and destroyed, with hundreds dead and injured.

The actions in that encounter led to Korachan directly entering the war as an enemy of Sarastro, ending only with the signing of the SARASTROAN TREATY the next year, which led to the SUNDERING OF THE EMPIRE.

INDENTURED SERVITUDE: Soc. Law. Pre-determined temporary ENSLAVEMENT as a form of payment against a service, or, more commonly, a loan. It is a common practice in the HIGH-EMPIRE OF KORACHAN, the REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO, and the SOCIALIST REPUBLIC OF ALMAGEST.

The period of indenture varies based on the service or loan provided and, in some cases might see a young person grow into a spouse or a parent, all the while still an indentured worker.

The practice is most common amongst those who have recently purchased their FREEDOM from being a HELOT. Many find themselves unable to adjust to the change in their lives and, desperate, seek out indenturees to lend them money to help them settle down. The indenturees are typically PATRICIANS or money-lenders from the middle-classes who have made a business of offering this service to new freemen.

Individuals or families can also find themselves indentured in return for passage to new colonies, after which they work for a set time on the indenturees properties or loaned out to third parties.

Indentured servitude is typically seen as exploitative of those with no other choice, though indentured workers are usually treated better than other slaves and even helots in some cases, though indenturees have a reputation for being petty and deceitful, often tricking indentured workers into working longer than the original agreement, which is legally binding, but which powerless individuals are unlikely to contest.

INDERA AHAM SOLTA: (B. 2034 - D. 3126 RM) Mys. Sup. KREMI SHAPER and ANIMIST who in c. 2080 RM penned the MEGILLAR SCROLLS during many sessions of automatic writing, whilst ASTRALLY PROJECTING in the OTHERWORLD, where their words were imparted to her by a choir of spirits. The scrolls became the bases for the philosophy that became known as the WAY OF MEGILLAR, which became a guide for living a good life, and remains an important and pervasive part of culture in Krem to this day.

INDERACHAN: 1. Pol. His. Failed KORACHANI colony that was established in 2684 RM along the EHRENISIAN COAST in the north western coast of SAMMAEA, to the south west of the SEA OF ORRIDA. It followed in the wake of the EHRENISIAN CRUSADES that took place in the same area between 2534 – c. 2590 RM, though was unable to establish a stronghold. Following decades of native retaliation and, eventually, attack from PARTHIS, efforts at establishing the colony were abandoned in c. 2810 RM. The principal city of Inderachan^(2.) and the SHRINE OF THE SHADOW TRIUMPHANT survived the colonisation attempt, with most other colonists' settlements either destroyed, reclaimed by nature, or resettled by natives or followers of the TEMPLAR KNIGHTS^(2.).

2. Ser. Major city in the north west of the TEMPLAR STATES, and home of the CHURCH OF THE SHADOW TRIUMPHANT since its formation.

It emerged in c. 2595 RM as a small village surrounding the Shrine OF The Shadow Triumphant, which was erected a few years earlier by Templar Knights⁽¹⁾ during the Ehrenisian Crusades. Though the Crusade ended in c. 2590 RM, Templar knights willingly stayed behind to guard the temple. Most people of Inderachan, which by then had become a burgeoning fortified town, remained also, as did volunteers from the Church of the Undying Machine.

Years later, when the KORACHANI EMPIRE rekindled its interest in the region and began colonising the EHRENISIAN COAST, they discovered that Inderachan had continued to flourish under the aegis of the Templar knights(2.). A new fortified port was established in the city, which became the gateway for imperial settlers to move into SAMMAEA for many years to come, but KHULLAN natives were vehement in the defence of their lands and continued to harass settlers at every step. This, coupled with a long war with PARTHIS over SOULSTONES in the TRISKETHIAN DOMAINS, led to the colonising efforts being abandoned by c. 2810 RM. A small contingent of Templar knights stayed behind to protect the Shrine of the Shadow Triumphant following the signing of a treaty with the KHULLAN INQUISITION in 2809 RM that safeguarded their presence there under the conditions that they did not take offensive actions against surrounding areas and severed ties with Korachan. By c. 2815 RM Inderachan was the only foreign presence in the region, with most other colonists' settlements either destroyed, reclaimed by nature, or resettled by natives or followers of the Templar knights^(2.).

Following this, Inderachan became the centre of worship of the UNDYING MACHINE in the region, as well as the primary stronghold of the Templar knights⁽²⁾, from where their teachings would eventually spread to surrounding lands. During this time, Inderachan became a centre for itinerant monks who travelled across the Ehrenisian Coast, further spreading word of the Undying Machine amongst natives, including the SAN nomads. This allowed the Templar knights' influence to also spread across what would by 3402 RM become known as the Templar States.

Inderachan served as capital of the Templar States for many years, until the eventual absorption of the Triskethian Domains in 3746 RM led to the capital being moved to OBYRYTH in 3782 RM, though Inderachan remains both religiously and politically important to this day (Pop. c. 218,400).

INDERACHAN, COUNCIL OF: Pol His. Council that took place in 3402 RM in the north west of SAMMAEA, in which the status of the TEMPLAR STATES as a singular recognised political entity was ratified by its neighbours KHULL and KARGAMA.

INDERACHAN, MUMMY OF: Int. Obj. Per. An incorruptible mummy kept in the catacombs of ISHAR in the city of INDERACHAN in the TEMPLAR STATES, whose eyes have been observed to blink (or slowly open and close, always returning to their natural closed state). First documented in 3471 RM this has been corroborated dozens of times since then. Today the mummy is regarded as miraculous by the Church of The Shadow Triumphant, and attracts many pilgrims from across the Templar States.

INDEX, the: Pol. Soc. Law. List kept by the KORACHANI government of personages who are considered to be of interest or threat to the empire, from influential PATRICIANS to BASILEANS and other powerful SHAPERS or well-connected merchant-lords.

The SANCTIFIED ORDERS OF THE INQUISITION, as well as the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, and the ORDER OF LICTORS, amongst other imperial institutions, all have access to the Index, and keep a close watch over many of the people included in the list.

INDIRILL: Sca. Bay in the c of MENISCEA, along the border between the far south of IMEAL and the north west of SHAZGIN, and dividing WESTERN LARISH in two, and it forms the north western-most reaches of the SEA OF LARISH⁽¹⁾. Lowering sea levels are threatening to cut the bay off from the larger body of water. Engineering works carried out by Larishi workers have been deepening the strait linking the bay to the sea, though many claim it is simply a matter of time until the bay becomes a lake.

INDOR: Mil. Str. Fortress in the east of ACHERA, guarding the pass across far western CHACTHORNYS Mountains.

INDRA: Soc. His. Art. Large bas-relief carving covering a cliff-face in the region of ABYDDOS, in the north east of RHINOCOLOURA, believed to be a remnant of the ancient AIKLAH culture that was thought to have existed in the region thousands of years ago.

INDRIK: 1. Fau. Large THEROPS and distant relative of the monocerous, resembling a massive, bulky horse. They stand around 15-ft. tall at the shoulder and live in family groups of c. 4-7 adults and young, spending most of their days eating. They were once common throughout LLACHATUL, though remain now mostly in AHRISHEN, MALAN, southern of GNOTH, and THE HARÉSHK, as well as the west of TETHYSIA and in the hinterlands between nations. Similar creatures have been spotted by explorers in SAMMAEA and KHARKHARADONTIS, though most are ATRAMENTALLY-CORRUPTED, with individuals bearing distinct features making identification impossible. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

2. Ast. Con Constellation in the $\underline{\text{NORTHERN HEMISPHERE}}$. See Vol. Constellations.

INDROR: Set. Settlement in the south west of the PARTHISAN colony of ABDAKROS^(1.) on the island of IRUGNA^(1.). Its main industry is copper mining (Pop. c. 6,200).

INDROT: Rvr. River in the HENDECARCHY of AONIA in the west of MALAN. It flows north for around 300-miles from sources in the EGLAENT Mountains, before meeting its parent, the river ARILLIEN.

INDUA: Set. Settlement in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of CARIA⁽⁴⁾. The settlement was once coastal, though the retreat of ELYDEN'S seas, have left it much diminished, its harbours landlocked. These have since been converted into caravan yards (Pop. c. 4,500).

INDUSTRY: also 'Kingdom'. Pol. Geo. Name given to each of the seven territories of RAONGEN^(2.). They are commonly known as kingdoms outside of the empire, though the term is considered incorrect by Raongeni nobility, and those who use kingdom usually do so out of obstinance or a need to belittle.

Named after the manufactories and industries that each of the territories controls, the Industries each have their own distinctive character, shaped by the prevalent industry and resources in each.

The seven Industries are: $\underline{PRAESHENG}^{(l.)}$ in the far south west, $\underline{TAERIN}^{(l.)}$ in the south west, $\underline{IRICORA}^{(l.)}$ in the south, $\underline{YASH\ UYUN}^{(2.)}$ in the east, \underline{TAHUON} in the west, $\underline{SEPTENTRIA}^{(l.)}$ in the north, and $\underline{HEMAYANA}$ in the east.

The capital city, GAVADA, and its environs exist outside of these seven Industries and fall under the direct control of the EMPEROR-FACTOTUM, serving as the administrative centre of the empire.

INFERNAL REST, the: Rel. Mys. In the teachings of the THREE CHURCHES

OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, the Infernal Rest is a part of the WAKELESS

SLEEP designed to punish the SOULS of those who did not live selfless lives of obedience to their masters and the MACHINE until the RUINATION.

The writings of the SCRIPTURE OF SHADOW teach that a soul may, after enough time has been spent in atonement, migrate from the Infernal Rest to the CELESTIAL REST, where worthy souls dwell.

INFERNAL REST, GATEWAY TO THE: also 'the Gateway'. Int. Leg. Geo. Arc. Legends in eastern KORACHAN maintain that the expansive sewer system beneath the industrial metropolis of ZEPHANICHAN leads to ancient catacombs and vaults predating even the rise of the KORACHANI EMPIRE, which in turn connect to natural hollows and caverns that descend deep into the heart of ELYDEN, serving as a portal to the endless suffering of the INFERNAL REST.

People enter the sewers, some escaping capture or retribution, others just to leave the chaos of the surface behind. Others seek the rush of dark discovery, exploring cavernous sewer chambers and tunnels, hoping to encounter something supranatural. Some succeed and are never seen again. Disappearances are common and rarely investigated by the IRON GUARD - the people know the dangers of exploring these ancient tunnels and know not to escape help. Occasionally the idiot child of an influential PATRICIAN goes missing, forcing the Iron Guard to investigate, finding entire communities of the destitute and forgotten - all manner of mortal peoples mingling with other baser creatures in the cold and dark. They speak of endless corridors, some that change orientation and length, with new chambers discovered on a regular basis, at times in areas that were believed to have been well-documented. Some are rotten and filled with the decay of centuries, while others appear unrealistically clean. Vertical pits and shafts led to yet deeper levels of this underworld, where stranger phenomena take hold - rain in completely enclosed chambers, strange screams and braying in otherwise empty regions, and worse.

Some scholars believe that the tunnels in fact reach into an unresearched expanse of the PRISON CARCERI, though there have been scant few expeditions into the Gateway, so this is unknown. Various Patricians and august institutions formed a consortium in 4004 RM that intends to explore the Gateway fully, and plans on hiring those who live there as guides.

INGALAT: Sea. Enclosed sea in the north of MENISCEA, dividing the nation of THANO into two distinct territories – WESTERN and EASTERN THANO. It extends south into CEHOPHELA and sees many major sea trade routes cross it, linking disparate regions together.

INGASAR: Set. Small city in the south east of ZHARIAH^(2.). Its main industry is the cultivation of cotton plants and the production cotton fabrics. It is one of the major cities involved in the production of cotton in the region, with distant farmlands all loyal to it and providing it with cotton for its mills (Pop. c. 17,500).

INGES: Lak. Lake in the c south of the nation of IMELKOT, in the north western foothills of the MENEFIR Mountains

INGHULL: His. Ntn. Historic nation in the north west of SAMMAEA, from which the extant nation of KHULL would later emerge.

It was one of five distinct political and cultural regions that emerged from the collapse of the Therashian Empire in 902 RM. The north eastern-most of these territories, Inghull became a refuge to the OPENSTEMIC ESOTERY, some of whose members would become political advisors known as SUPHETS.

Inghull suffered from a series of devastating dry seasons that culminated in the collapse of the government in c. 1110 RM. In 1124 RM the warlord ASIPHYAL was able to muster a strong semi-professional militia from around ALTHITA and was able to make travel safe, eventually uniting the land, becoming the first king of Inghull in 1131 RM with the support of the AELORAN CHURCH, which legitimised his claim.

The suphets, through the Epistemic Order, established libraries within their monasteries across Inghull, which they filled with the spoils of their travels across ELYDEN. The suphets began to grow in influence during this period, gaining more clout than the monarch and weakening the church. Upon his coronation in 1263 RM king ASIPHYAL III restored a degree of power to the church and stripped the suphets and the Order of Epistemic Esotery of their influence. Within decades, the Esoteric Order began to falter in Inghull as it had decades earlier in the rest of OLD THERASH, and with it so too did the suphets, who had become propagandists for the king.

The EHRENISIAN COAST was invaded by the KNIGHTS OF ST. MALICHAR in 1434 RM, who were defeated by a combined effort from the various nations of the area, including the VESPERI BERSERKER-MAGES, who sacrificed themselves to repel the invaders. Taking advantage of the instability caused by the war, the suphets began to once more conspire against the crown and by the end of the war the king is their puppet and the Aeloran Church is once more ostracised, giving them and the Epistemic Order full power over Inghull. This period reaches its crux when, after centuries of study, scholars of the Order manage to translate an ancient ATRAMENTAL TREATISE, through which they were able to become powerful ATRAMENTISTS.

In 1473 RM a small group of suphets publicly declared their find, and in 1521 RM they established a new government in Inghull, known as the SOPHIC CONCLAVE, which was made up of a handful of those who had become shapers, who by then were calling themselves SORCERERKINGS^(3,). The monarch remained as a ceremonial rank that help little power. Within a century they had all but expelled the Aeloran Church from Inghull, and replaced it with a cult of personality in which they were elevated to mythic status. The monarchy was eventually dissolved completely in 2136 RM, with the remaining royal family remaining as a sycophantic upper class and a new capital was established in EMEK TA' two years later.

In 2534 RM the Church of the Undying Machine initiated a new crusade against the Ehrenisian Coast, and war consumed the region over the next six decades, which the neighbouring Vesper and Inghull battling each other following territorial disputes made by the former years earlier. Though ultimately driven from the region, the war was KORACHANI forces establish the settlement of INDERACHANI and the SHRINE OF THE SHADOW TRIUMPHANT, which would eventually lead to the spread of a new religion in the area that became known as the CHURCH OF THE SHADOW TRIUMPHANT.

In 2669 RM, the Sorcerer-king RASHAPH unintentionally sacrificed himself in an Atramental conflagration of his own making that left the land around him devastated in a 25-mile radius, obliterating the Vesperi armies, leading to the signing of a tenuous peace treaty. The construction of a massive monument was commissioned to honour the sacrifice of Rashaph, requiring vast amounts of granite.

In 2702 RM a rebellion emerged in the south east of the nation, where workers mining for granite were being mistreated. The KHULLAN INQUISITION would emerge from this movement, working under the cover of darkness and using subterfuge to attack the Sorcerer-kings and their allies. Their successes over the next decades forced the Sorcerer-kings into seclusion out of fear of their lives. This brought unrest to the region, allowing the Inquisitors to gain power and influence. This led to outright war between the two factions, amid another Korachani invasion of the Ehrenisian Coast that consumed the entire region in a complex multi-sided conflict that eventually ended with the defeat of Korachan in 2809 RM.

Throughout this period, the Khullan Inquisition continued hunting the Sorcerer-kings, who were finally eradicated in 2851 RM, ending the Sophic Conclave after 13 centuries of rule. The name of the region was changed to Khull by the Inquisition and following two years of martial law, a republic was founded, named the ETERNAL ASSEMBLY. See Vol III: Extinct States.

INGHULLAN MONARCHY: His. Pol. Royal family that ruled the north western SAMMAEAN nation of INGHULL between 1131 and 2136 RM.

The monarchy arose following the exploits of the regional warlord ASIPHYAL, who established a stronghold outside the city of ALTHITA to aid in his campaign against grain thieves that arose in the wake of a drought in Inghull. He had established close ties with the AELORAN CHURCH, seeking its support, and formed a strong semi-professional force of militiamen who made the land safe to travel.

He became an influential figure and, with the full support of the church, was declared the first king of Inghull, with Althita as his capital. This brought about a new age of prosperity for the land.

The monarchy ruled for just over a millennium, throughout which it gained the support of a caste of advisors known as the SUPHETS, who originated from the ORDER OF EPISTEMIC ESOTERY, and who were slowly attempting to oust power from the monarchy. ASIPHYAL III reduced the power of the suphets after being crowned, though years later a succession of weak monarchs, coupled with a foreign invasion by the KNIGHTS OF ST. MALICHAR, would lead to a time of uncertainty that culminates with the grand revelation that some of the suphets are powerful SHAPERS.. Declaring themselves SORCERER-KINGS(3-), they deposed the monarchy in 1521 RM, rendering the title of monarch little more than a ceremonial rank that lost all value. Members of the royal family were corrupted into sycophantic followers, though in 2136 RM even this was changed, with the monarchy dissolved completely. In its place they established a new ruling council known as the SOPHIC CONCLAVE, which was made up of a handful of Sorcerer-kings.

INGOL: Geo. Savannah dominating the c basin of TZALLRACH, from the Mountains of KHUN in the north, to the UNDARRAN hills in the south. It is known for its ancient FOURTH AGE ruins, most of which are sunken in the dry earth.

INGOR: Set. Settlement in the c of AZAZEM. It was once a major producer of refined UMBRA, though the industry died out in c. 3380 RM after which most people fled it. Its empty refineries still loom over the settlement, which is only kept alive by the RED ROUTE that brings traffic and trade to it from across the INNER SEA REGION (Pop. c. 2,800).

INGOUGDITHAN: Rui. Ancient metallic pylon in the c of ZHARIAH⁽²⁾, believed to date back to a THIRD AGE IROTHANI culture that is thought to have dominated the region. Though now dilapidated, enough of the original frame-like structure survives to give an idea of its original nature. It is believed to have been a TECHNARCANE structure, possibly providing power to a more important piece of machinery such as an as-yet undiscovered CANOPIC ENGINE.

INGRAM: Soc. Lan. Common term in MENISCEA for members of the lower classes, particularly in CEHOPHELA, IMEAL, SATARIEL and MEHITIEL.

INGUR: Ind. Set. Dross-MANUFACTORY settlement in the west of AZAZEM. It is a stronghold of HOUSE STEFANIA, and is a base to many pipeline guards, who patrol dross pipelines leading out of the settlement (Pop. c. 7,800).

INGYASAR: Sup. Tec. His. Ancient TECHNARCANE engine built into the southern face of the NIARNA Mountains in the south east of ZHARIAH⁽²⁾. Thought to date back to the late third age, it is believed to be an uncatalogued SOUL-ENGINE designed by the Demiurge Nyarloth or possibly a scion of his. Others believe it is more likely that the artefact is a lesser copy of a Soul-Engine known as a canopic engine that was probably made by the irothani during the wane of their people.

Little facts are known of the structure, which spans about a square mile, and it is now fused in place, the inner workings of its archaic machinery unknowable to modern MORTALS.

INHERITANCE LAWS: Law. Different nations treat inheritance differently, imposing different laws. Below are some examples from around ELYDEN:

1. Surprisingly, KORACHAN has laws in place that safeguard what all classes can inherit, including helots (but not slaves, as property cannot itself own property). In the case of HELOTS, they are protected by law so the people they are indebted to cannot claim what they may inherit, other than any taxes levied on them by the government, which lies at 40% of money, but not on material wealth (property, lands, vehicles, etc.) are not taxed. As a result, as many people grow old, they convert liquid assets into illiquid assets to avoid taxation. This is a loophole that is well known to the authorities but nothing has been done about it, since it would also affect the daily running od most PATRICIAN HOUSES, who would also be negatively affected by any changes.

INHUAN: Set. Settlement in the south west of RAONGEN⁽²⁾, to the west of the CHIAVALLE Mountains. It controls the pass east across the mountains and its rangers work tirelessly year-round to ensure the pass remains clear, even working in the harsh winter months. It is home to various caravanserais and hostels where travellers can stop to replenish before setting off east (Pop. c. 7,200).

INIXOS: Pol. Set. Ruling city in c north of the tribe of ATEVEGOS, in the c west of MULCIBER, in the western-face of the GROWING MOUNTAINS, along the course of the river BYSTRA (Pop. c. 88,000).

INKA: Set. Fortified settlement in the north west of the deserts of ANUBIA. It is known for its trade links with the tribe of Thlolot in the north east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 4,000).

INNER CHAUTULA: Geo. Common name for the southern half of CHAUTULA, which is known for its dense vegetation, which is likely encouraged by FIRMAMENTAL influence in the region.`

INNER GODS: Rel. One of two pantheons of the ETHER-ZOTHAZA religion of the ETHERI nomads of the UMBRA SOKHAR, the other being the OUTER PANTHEON. The Inner Gods consist of the unnumbered knowable entities that govern everyday facets of life. These gods are associated with common elements such as fire, lightning, dark, death, life, and so on.

There are thousands of Inner Gods, each of which represents a very specific domain, and the etheri nomads pay tribute to specific gods depending on their needs at a particular time.

INNER HOGHSOTHOMON: see HOGHSOTHOMON.

INNER SEA, the: Sea. A narrow long sea of many inlets in the NEAR HEMISPHERE that separates the continents of LLACHATUL and SAMMAEA from each other. The sea leads west across the GATE OF ERBETH to the SEA OF SERPENTS and it once also led east into the MIROVEAN OCEAN via the DARK SEA, though the silting of the STRAIT OF NARTHEL has blocked off all access east since 3757 RM.

The Sea is home to many cultures and peoples, most notable amongst them the KORACHANI EMPIRE, the REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO, and the SECULAR REPUBLIC OF PARTHIS, whose cultures have ebbed and flowed throughout the millennia across its coastline. It was a hub of trade across various ages, as well as during the dawn of the FIFTH AGE, which saw the descendants from ancient civilisations emerge from the FADING of the FOURTH AGE to reclaim the ruin of civilisation. The Sea was the ancient cradle of civilisation in ELYDEN, where HUMAN life is said to have first flourished under the aegis of the DEMIURGE AVRAHAM, and it became so once again in the Fifth Age.

The Inner Sea has been inexorably shrinking throughout the course of the Fifth Age, alongside most other bodies of water in Elyden. Coastal settlements that witnessed the rise of the Korachani empire now lie ruined, miles inland and surrounded by salty earth. Ancient mysteries have been unearthed in this way, with antediluvian ruins brought to the surface by the seas' retreat, exposing riches and ruins that were better-left sunken.

INNER SEA BASIN, the: Geo. Drainage basin formed by various continental divides in the continents of LIACHATUL and SAMMAEA, including parts of the LIACHATUL DIVIDE. The basin comprises most of the south of CENTRAL LLACHATUL and NORTHERN SAMMAEA, and all rivers within it drain directly into the INNER SEA

Nations and territories that are at least partially within the Inner Sea Basin include: AETHIOS, AHKA, AHRISHEN, ALMAGEST, ALTHA⁽²⁾, ANDILUTH, AQUARIIA, ARKOS⁽¹⁾, ATARAXIA, AZAZEM, BA'AKH, CYHLAGHARR, EREBETH, EZASUH⁽²⁾, GNOTH, HITTA, HOLOLACH, THE INTERURBAN STATES, JURRAS⁽²⁾, KARAKHAS, KHURAUR, KORACHAN, LAASKHA, LIDEA, LYRIDIA, LYRIDIA DHAI, MHAROKK, NÁRTHEL, OPHAR, PARAIYA, PARTHIS, PELASGOS, RHAMIA, RHINOCOLOURA, SAGITTARIA, SARASTRO, SIRIPHAGOS, SUMA'YA, TARTAK, TRAKIA, IQ, TAHALL, and VAALK, amongst others.

INNER SEA COOPERATIVE, the: Int. Soc. Bus. Com. SLAVE-TRADING consortium that forms a part of the larger INNER SEA TRADE CONSORTIUM. It is made up of six PATRICIAN HOUSES, and operates with concessions and rebates from various governments, in return for providing them with slaves. It is the largest private slave corporation and maintains slave markets in most major coastal cities across the Inner Sea, including SARASTRO, KORACHAN and CYHLAGHARR.

INNER SEA CURRENT: Sea. Warm surface ocean current flowing east into the INNER SEA via the GATE OF EREBETH from the SEA OF ORRIDA, and circulates east along the southern coast of LLACHATUL, across the SEA OF MARDEN. This water flows south along the western coast of HOLOLACH, and deviates west into the SEA OF DANAEL along the southern coast of ALTHA, before turning south and east along the north western coast of CYHLAGHARR, where it divides at the EDECHOL ISLANDS, either going north, to circulate across the Danael once more; or heading east into the Inner Sea proper along the southern coast of Llachatul.

Here it either flows east and north at the STRAIT OF SKAROS; or heads south at the western coast of MECHABET⁽¹⁾ and PARTHIS, turning west and north at the INTERURBAN STATES, flowing north towards the Edechol Islands once more.

Here, it flows north along the eastern coasts of ATARAXIA and AHKA, reaching as far north as the STRAIT OF ANEON^(L), before turning south at the western coast of SKAROS and LAASKHA, where it gets caught in the MALETHI GYRE that surrounds the island of MALETHI^(L). Here waters flow either east along the northern coast of VAALK, where it turns north at the western coast of KORACHAN, before flowing west along the southern coast of AZAZEM, back to the Malethi Gyre; or south along the western coast of Vaalk into the SEA OF TARAMAR, heading west along the northern coast of JURRAS⁽²⁾ before turning north at the eastern coast of Parthis, where it circulates north back into the Strait of Skaros, or west back to the CAMARINAL.

Part of the eastern-flowing waters from Vaalk separate at the NUTHEN Islands south of the KORACHANI PENINSULA, flowing north into the SEA OF LISASSA along the eastern coast of Korachan, before turning east and south along the western coast of PELASGOS. The flow here divides, heading west and back north along the eastern coast of Korachani, and south east between Pelasgos and LIDEA. The waters split once more at the SYMENIAN peninsula, heading either west into the SEA OF DAARKEN where they turn back south; or north into the SEA OF SPIRES along the eastern coast of Pelasgos, turning east and south again down the western coast of LYRIDIA DHAI and NÁRTHEL, where it heads west into the SEA OF SÛN, and ultimately west and north again.

Other bodies of water adjacent to the Inner Sea have their own circulation patterns largely uninfluenced by the motions of the larger sea. An example of this is the SEA OF BYSSOS, which flows in a counterclockwise direction, flowing west along the southern coast of Parthis and the TARAHID ANNEXES before turning south at the western coast of TRAKIA and then east along the northern coast of ANDILUTH where in winter it is the cause of great surges and storms.

INNER SEA REGION: Geo. Pol. Common geopolitical term used to describe the nations that surround the INNER SEA, as well as lands directly to the west of it, around the SEA OF ORRIDA and east of it, around the DARK SEA, and their environs. The term is not precise and one persons' definition of the term may be different to another's but it is commonly understood to refer to nations in the immediate vicinity of the KORACHANI EMPIRE.

INNER SEA TRADE CONSORTIUM: Com. Bus. Major union of nations, merchant houses, and trade-companies from across the INNER SEA REGION and beyond. Most are already members of the SIRIPHAGAN ALLIANCE, though many other smaller local businesses are members of the Inner Sea Trade Consortium.

The Consortium attempts to regulate and facilitate trade between member entities, though the realities of this mission often make objectives difficult to achieve, and many states perceive the group as a union of plutocrats who only seek to protect their own interests rather than those of member nations and their economies. Non-member states, including CYHLAGHARR, SARASTRO and OPHIUSSA, find trade more difficult with member states, with higher taxes and levies imposed on imports and exports.

The Consortium also plays an important role in maintaining exchange rates between currencies, based on the value of gold in specific nations. As a result, many cities situated along the main courses of these traderoutes will have money changers, who can trade currencies against others based on the most recent exchange rates. In some cases, these rates may be outdated, though most money changers are shrewd and will lean towards deals that favour their pockets over those of visiting merchants, who in many cases may have little choice in the matter. See Vol II: Major Trade Routes.

INODHAN: Ser. Settlement in the north east of ZHARIAH^(2,). The region surrounding the city is peppered with ancient mechanical ruins, so old that they are fused into stone. They are believed to be of IROTHANI provenance (Pop. c. 10,000).

INONNAS: Set. southern-most settlement in SKAROS, in the south east of its lands, beyond the major influence of the ANOMOFERROH. It was founded in c. 2900 RM following the construction of vast SIPHON ENGINES in the region, which pump raw UMBRA to refineries to the west, which in turn pump it north to the capital in SKAROSIA.

INOTAHL: Geo. Basin dominating the south east of THE SURRACH, from the OSSOH ridge in the west to the IDOL OF ZINNOBRA in the east. Its deepest point is the SABARRAK depression, which is 120-ft. below sea level.

INQUIRER: Pol. Rnk. Rank within the SANCTIFIED ORDERS OF THE INQUISITION, above that of PROCURATOR, whose bearers are charged with investigative duties, which may differ from Order to Order based on their tenets. They are particularly common amongst the GRIGORIAN and CONCORDANTIST Orders.

INQUISITOR: Pol. Rnk. Ubiquitous middle leadership rank within the SANCTIFIED ORDERS OF THE INQUISITION, and so famous that it has become synonymous with them, in which they serve as highly-regarded members. The rank lies above that of INQUIRER, and is a leadership role, with individual Inquisitors spending much of their time in the field, investigating and following up on reports and sensitive cases.

They typically make use of small groups of retainers and adjutants with a diverse array of skills and backgrounds on whose expertise they can call upon during their investigations. Theirs is amongst the most regarded of ranks within the Orders and the majority of GRANDMASTERS were once Inquisitors.

INQUISITOR-GENERAL: Mil. Rnk. Rank within the SANCTIFIED ORDERS OF THE INQUISITION, denoting the highest rank amongst the hierarchal branch of the PROCURATORS.

An Inquisitor-general is in command of as many as seven HIGH-INQUISITORS, all of them within the same territory or precinct.

INSARA: Set. Settlement in the c of GNOTH, along the course of the river DABRA (Pop. c. 5,000).

INSEA: Edu. Set. City in the south east of KOMMEA, in the western foothills of the WENDRAEN Mountains. It emerged from ancient copper mines, though by the time the mines were spent, it had become an important city in the nations' internal trade-route and it is now a centre of commerce and trade.

It was originally the seat of power of the autocratic CUNOMAGLIO, an enigmatic SCIONIC creature of great power and influence, who ruled Kommea for 600-years between c. 1200 – 1800 RM and who established a foul dynasty that persisted until c. 3000 RM. His great citadel, located in Insea, was looted and destroyed by a coalition of MORTAL resistors whose descendants would found the kingdom of Kommea in 3172 RM.

The foundations of the great citadel remain to this day, though most of them have been built over, their blocks repurposed for other building projects in the ensuing centuries (Pop. c. 68,000).

INSEAR: Set. Settlement in the south west of OPHAR⁽²⁾. Its main industry is animal husbandry and shepherding (Pop. c. 4,200).

INSPECTORATE: Pol. Soc. Rnk. The lowest of the noble ranks and titles in the empire of RAONGEN^(2.), falling beneath the ORGANIZIERS. They either manage specific sections of the structures and territories under the control of the Organiziers, or act as tax-collectors and enforcers amongst vassals' lands, ensuring that tithes are collected in full and that nothing is left unaccounted for as it reaches GAVADA. They are also entrusted with protecting the lands and structures that are worked by vassals, who consider them to be similar figures to the knights of the INNER SEA REGION.

INSTITUTE OF SCIENCES: Edu. Str. Org. Scientific institute based in the city of NEKOR in NÁRTHEL, whose members are concerned with the study of astronomy and mathematics, particularly theoretical research, amongst others.

INTEGUMENT: Sup. Mys. The MATERIA OMNA as it is only visible to MORTALS who are FOCUSED^(1.), or certain animals or other creatures with an intrinsic ability to view the Materia Omna. Those who can observe the Integument are said to have TRUE SIGHT.

The Integument is not in itself a physical object but rather the way in which a SHAPERS mind, in its limited intellect, is able to interpret a force as incomprehensible as the Materia Omna.

Indeed, every SHAPER is thought to envisage the Integument in a unique manner. The reason for this is unknown, but scholars think that the manner in which the Integument is perceived is a reflection of a shapers' personality and upbringing. See Vol IV: Shaping.

INTELLIGENTSIA: Soc. Edu. Well-educated aristocratic PATRICIANS in the civilised lands around the INNER SEA, including the KORACHANI EMPIRE, set apart from other Patricians by truer bloodlines and old wealth, often dating back to before the creation of the empire. Their families form the upper echelons of imperial high-society, their individuals extremely powerful and influential, often becoming members of MYSTERY CULTS and other high-ranking exclusive organisations.

The name intelligentsia is derived from the typically high-level of LYCEUM education that most Patricians enjoy.

INTENDANT: Pol. Rnk. In Almagest, Skaros and Laaskha, holders of public administrative offices, most commonly patrician-born. The rank is hereditary and ranges from menial duties to ambassadorial responsibilities.

INTENT: 1. Rvr. Expansive delta of the rivers TAMANTI and VERTANDI, in the south of KEPHUAAN, overlooking the BAY OF COMMARA. It is very fertile and is home to vast tracts of farmland that use intricate systems of canals for irrigation, providing fresh water year-long, even when water from the rivers runs low.

2. Sea. Shallows in the north east of the $\underline{BAYOFLEPHET}$, just off the coast of the Intent^(1.) delta, in the far south of KEPHUAAN.

INTERAR: Mil. Str. Fortress in the south east of the SAMMAEAN nation of ENITH.

INTERCESSOR: Law. Rnk. Main rank within the COMMISSION OF INTERCESSORS, which is the primary policing force of PARTHIS.

INTERCESSORS, COMMISSION OF: Law. Rnk. Org. Main policing force of PARTHIS and many of its territories.

INTERDICTORS: Mil. Rnk. Elite troops in SARASTRO who are specialised in identifying and shooting down AIRSHIPS and exotic enemy troopers. They are expert snipers and adept sappers and spotters.

INTERMINABLE ONE, the: also 'Autocrat of Sagittaria'. Pol. After the AUTOCRAT OF SAGITTARIA'S death and internment within the TECHNARCANE engine known as the god-machine in 2163 RM, his powers remained valuable to his sorcerer followers and the KNIGHTS-EXILE who took over rulership of SAGITTARIA. Over time, he came to be worshipped as a slumbering deity, known as the Interminable One, his powers channelled through the actions and edicts of the sorcerers and eventually the Knight-exiles.

The Interminable Ones' sorcerers were able to manipulate the Knights-exile after Sagittaria was weakened by a PLAGUE in 2758 RM, turning them into their puppets. Construction of an artificial body was commissioned in KHALHAT in 3582 RM, to which the spirit of the Interminable One was transferred. Reborn in flesh after nearly 1400-years of rule from within a machine, his rule became absolute, and none doubted his divinity – until his body was mortally wounded in 3612 RM. Seeing the body of their god destroyed, and his life taken, the people lost faith in him. The church and the sorcerers waned in strength after this, and Sagittaria entered a period of strife, fracturing into rival states, which were brought together again in 3751 RM.

The body was taken back to SOGASSA and what remained of his consciousness was restored into the ancient technarcane engine that originally housed him. But his artificial body and mind were both greatly damaged, and he remained as a catatonic figure, only able to communicate to his sorcerers TELEPATHICALLY, who remained the rulers of Sogassa.

INTERREGES: Pol. Org. The administrators and caretakers of regions that have been abandoned by the KORACHANI EMPIRe'S industries, though whose territories still remain part of their borders (known as an INTERREGNUM). Not to be confused with DOMNITORS, which are instated in regions whose resources are close to spent or whose management has become too costly to support. The first Interreges were left in LYRIDIA DHAI Following the THREE-YEAR WAR in 219 RM, though they are most famous for their tenure in VÂRR between 3412 and 3791 RM. The Interreges were also left in RHINOCOLOURA, where their rule lasted from 1195 to 1403 RM, and in PARTHIS, where they ruled briefly from 934 to 967 RM.

Traditionally, the Interreges are used as temporary caretakers until the empire can fully abandon an area (typically leaving a single city-state or outpost under the leadership of the Interreges). Under their auspices nations that would otherwise have been left to rebuild the ruins left behind were kept within the Korachani empire, the chance for strife or opposition lessened.

INTERREGNUM: Pol. In the KORACHANI EMPIRE, name given to a city, region or nation that has been abandoned by the empire, with control handed over to a caretaker (an individual, consortium, a patrician family, or government representatives, generally with some cultural background in the area), known as an INTERREGES.

Politically, such regions remain part of the Korachani empire, though they are given little regard and are generally allowed to self-govern, as long as they meet any tithes imposed.

INTERROGATOR: Pol. Rak. Rank within the SANCTIFIED ORDERS OF THE INQUISITION, above that of COGENT, typically concerned with the questioning and catechising of captives.

Interrogators are particularly widespread within the AVÉNETHI ORDER, where they can often be ATRAMENTISTS.

INTERURBAN STATES, THE: Nm. A small collective of around a dozen major cities and their various smaller satellites that are located to the south west of PARTHIS, to the south of the CAMARINAL SEA, the Interurban States are of a dry temperate climate, whose coast is known for its mist, and whose inland hills districts are renowned for their vineyards. The States were founded by COUNT OTARAN from the city of GARES, to the west of the TARAHID ANNEXES in around 2895 RM.

The nation emerged from a conglomerate of disenfranchised merchants and nobles following the abandonment of the TARAHID STATES by the KORACHANI EMPIRE in 2974 RM. United by Count Otaran, they coalesced into a series of as many as a dozen neighbouring city-states, and were allowed to expand relatively unchallenged over the coming years. The many cities came to owe fealty to his capital, in the city of Gares.

Now known as the MARBLE COURT, the city of Gares has become a major trade-hub with large storage yards and caravanserai, as well as a long harbour, with its famed lighthouse and mile-long breakwater. The city is a link between land-trade from the west to sea-trade in the east and is famed for its private armies and powerful navy, which both work hard to defend the small territory from CYHLAGHARRI attacks and slave raids.

Today the Interurban States are divided into eleven territories, each of which has at its centre a capital city whose rulers form part of the plutocratic council that assembles within the Marble Court. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

INTH: Rui. Ruin in a GHALLETHA^(5.) the south west of BA'AKH, one of many scattered remnants of the ancient TYHMI civilization. It is believed that the city was destroyed during the WAR OF SCOURGING during the FOURTH AGE, though it was later resettled in c. -1500 RM by the descendants of Thym; the ITHOIAN people that had inherited its north eastern-most territories following the war.

Located north of the STERHBEL Mountains, the settlement became embroiled in a long conflict with the LACER of the region, becoming a fortress of sorts. Following the founding of DHAMATEA in c.-1280 RM it became part of that city's trade-route, steadily growing in size as a result, so-much so that following the outbreak of ATRAMENTAL TAINT in the trade-city in c. -850 RM, Inth found itself as the recipient of many refugees, further increasing its size. Conflict with the lacer increased greatly by c. -700 RM, leading to the abandonment of the city of LRIR to creatures in -586 RM, sending more refugees south to Inth.

An exponential increase in Atramental-corruption in Dhamatea reached Inth in c. -450 RM, with death and disease claiming the town within months. The Atramenta steadily took hold of the place over the coming years, with buildings collapsed into one another, the boundaries between them indistinguishable; the bodies of those claimed by the ATRAMENTA in a perpetual state of decay, their rotting bodies carpeting the ruin, barely alive, possibly sentient.

In 714 RM the KORACHANI EMPIRE uncovered a buried MESOCHTHON in the region of TASHATARAS, which went on a rampage throughout the nation. It was finally felled by a CHOIR of 343 ATRAMENTISTS atop the ruin of Inth. Its lifeless body, calcified and noxious, now rests on the ruin, where its form has become barely indistinguishable from the hills that surround it, an inimical aura surrounding it.

INTIMIDATOR OF KAELRATH: Pol. Ruler of KAELRATH'S KEEP in the southern bank of the NÁRTHELI STRAIT.

INTORALL: Rel. Str. SZIKALIAN monastery in the far east of THE SURRACH.

INTORREA: Set. City in the south east of NORTHERN SIMBARA. It was once coastal but now stands facing a large flat plain that was once submerged (Pop. c. 54,000).

INUGHARI: Set. Settlement in the c south west of METHUMN, in the north of Iragash valley (Pop. c. 8,000).

INURITT: Set. Major city in the south of PHYRR, along the course of the river URRABANA. It is the largest extant agricultural centre in the nation and the polluted waters of the river are treated in great refineries before they are pumped to the fields miles from the city proper (Pop. c. 162,000).

INVIS IAFENG: (B. 2713 - D. 2872 RM) Per. Pol. His. King of RAONGEN⁽²⁾ who in 2792 RM appointing himself as the first EMPEROR-FACTOTUM, in a period now known as THE CULLING, in which the political system was reformed, during which many of the old ruling FIEFLORDS were either executed or replaced with industrialists and magnates who became known as FACTOTUMS⁽²⁾.

INVOCATION ENGINE: Int. Tec. Sup. Rel. Every place of worship within the Three Churches of the Undying Machine has at its heart a powerful TECHNARCANE engine known as an invocation engine that provides a psychic link between the altar and the LEADEN THRONE in the SEPULCHRAL PALACE. This link is made possible through a powerful HEART ENGINE in which is interred a powerful LARVA that projects the emotions and adulation of the laity across vast distances to the SEPULCHRAL PALACE, amplifying their beliefs, helping to sustain the Lord RACHANAEL. Their creation and upkeep are an expensive, but essential part of life in the empire, and the Church of the Undying Machine could not survive without their use.

These engines are tended to by sisters of the MAIDENS OF THE MACHINE who are skilled TECHNOLOGISTS and indoctrinated in the ways of their order. They do not speak of the purpose of the Invocation Engines, and they segregate themselves from the general populace to keep contact with others to a minimum. Indeed, few outside the order know the full details of the engines' true purpose, and even the clergy in charge of the individual churches know little other than that the Invocation engine is what allows the UNDYING MACHINE to receive the prayers of the laity.

These engines date back to the early rise of the Church of the Undying Machine, and the first examples were created by the DEMIURNE disciples who accompanied the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR to KORACHAN from this rebirth as an OTHERWORLDER in SAMMAEA. They passed on the secrets of their construction and maintenance, and today the Maidens of the Machine continue the tradition, though the ancient logic behind the engine's workings has become meaningless to them, with even the observances of maintenance becoming little more than thoughtless ritual to them, all part of the litany of celebration they utter as they work.

A large part of the machinery within the bowels of the Sepulchral Palace serves as a 'receiver' to the prayers and adulations of the laity, which serve as a psychic nourishment to the Undying Machine, allowing Rachanael to feed. While most believe that the Leaden Throne is what keeps Rachanael alive, the truth is more complex. While the Leaden Throne keeps the Undying Machine's body in stasis, preventing it from decaying, it is in truth a combination of the daily martyrdom of pilgrims at the gates of the Sepulchral Palace, and the Invocation Engines that broadcast the prayers of millions directly to the palace, that truly sustain the Demiurge.

INZIVA: For. Highland rainforest dominating the west of IMELKOT along the eastern face of the MENEFIR Mountains. It is home to crumbling FOURTH AGE ruins where in c. 1180 the prophet BENA discovered the mummified body of the \underline{SCION} BARAKAVRA, and the $\underline{GODSTONE}^{(1.)}$.

IO SGIROUT CULTS: Rel. Org. Cults of personality in ROMOREA⁽²⁾ that border on the religious. There are many such cults, each of which revolves around a monarch (past or present) or other prominent member of the royal family. The largest cult is typically associated with the reigning monarch, and idols and banners dedicated to the monarch are erected across the kingdom. The fanaticism that people devote into the monarch is largely enforced, though after many generations, it has become an institutionalised affair with most people truly believing that the monarch is a divine figure.

IO: Dem. 'Ionic'. Ntn. Vassal state currently under the control of SARASTRO, located in the far south east of the INNER SEA, east of the DAARKEN SEA. Its coast is damp, with moisture drawn east from the SEA OF ETHEA and the Daarken Sea along prevalent winds, with the inland areas being much dryer, particularly east of the GHOLA Mountains, where the climate is considered to be near-desert.

The state has a long and storied history dating back to the early years of the FIFTH AGE, when it first appeared in c. -500 RM around the SYMENIAN^(1.) peninsula following the rise of the IONIC PRIESTS in the HIGH-CITY OF GARAP. The priests were able to wrest control of the city of SALOROC following their successful unravelling of ancient FIRMAMENTAL texts in -648 RM, that later became known as the IONIC TALPA.

In c. -150 RM a caste of FIRMAMENTAL mystics known as the EXARCHS emerged from the Ghola Mountains Legend with ancient knowledge of how to construct and control GOLEMS.

The IONIC PRIESTS would later evolve into HEIRARCHS, under whose rule the nation would collapse into a decades-long conflict known as the APOSTATE WAR, which ended in -128 RM with the north east falling under the control of the city-state of BAESHA, which remains the regional capital of Io to this day. It also took as a prize a fabled golem which had guarded Io for decades.

The Exarchs re-emerged after the Apostate War in -111 RM and managed to animate a number of golems in the hollow-temple of $\underline{\text{THE}}$ $\underline{\text{VOID}}$ in the city of $\underline{\text{UR SITH}}$. This precipitated their uniting of Io.

In -47 RM they attacked the Baesha, taking it, and by -30 RM they had united the disparate regions of Io but $\underline{\text{SCYTHEA}}$, ending the rule of the Hierarchs.

Following the moving of their palace to Mirador in -23 RM, they established embassies with KORACHAN, formally opening the Ionic borders to Korachan in 174 RM. This would eventually lead to their capitulation to Korachan in 212 RM, after which they would remain its rulers under imperial guidance, becoming part of the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE by c. 900 RM.

The Exarchs ruled as regents until Sarastro was granted control of the territory in 3103 RM following the SARASTROAN SANCTION. Sarastro ousted the Exarchs and the Lichking Sathep forced the secrets of golem creation from them. Their remnants scattered around the northeast of Sammaea, and their descendants can be found around the Arid Triptych and beyond as itinerants who search for more knowledge regarding Ionic golems.

In 3703 RM Io was invaded by VENTHIR in the opening moves of what would escalate into the WAR OF SUNDERING. The SALOROCAN settlement of ZIUKBBAR became a staging post for its troops who marched south into Io in LIVIALEN, eventually taking Baesha, which was a blow to Sarastro in the early days of the war. Io continued to be a battleground until the end of the war, after which it remained a child state of Sarastro. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

IOBHOLPHOSS: Mil. Set. SERAPI conurbation in the far south east of HOGGOTHA ISZ, built atop a series of HANNAHAN fortresses that were overrun during an incursion in 3936 RM and resettled by serapis. The region is divided into dozens of warring territories, each ruled by warlords who spend more time squabbling amongst themselves than they do conducting slave raids against Hannah.

Escaped slaves claim the old fortresses have been dismantled and rebuilt in a foul mockery of human architecture, with large amphitheatres dominating each of the territories where human slaves are forced to fight for their amusement (Pop. unknown).

IODATHA: Set. Small fortified city in the south east of the DESOLATION
OF ASTUDAN. It is the easternmost major settlement in Astudan, and serves as a trade link with TEMUJA in the east. Indeed, Iodatha is what most Temujans who travel west of the TAHNOL MAER experience in Astudan (Pop. c. 15,000).

IODPHI: also 'City of Heralds'. Com. Set. Large merchant city in the middle of XYRPHAAT^(3.), in the west of EASTERN MENISCEA. It is the crossroads of cultures there, and until 3684 RM was the capital of the XYRPHANI empire that collapsed the next year. Propor to the wane of the shallow Sea of Xyrphaat^(1.) it was a coastal city, known for its busy ports. It dwindled in size and influence following its abandonment as capital, though later gained prominence once more as a hub of trade.

It is notable for its many caravanserais and embassies and bureaus, not only of Xyrphaati cities, but also others from across Meniscea. Its cultural importance is respected by most visitors, who see it as neutral ground, and those who disrupt the peace or offend its history are shunned and heavily punished. Similarly, wars and conflicts between surrounding regions are not allowed within its walls (Pop. c. 480,400).

IODUTH: Set. Major coastal city in the north of SHAZGIN, overlooking the SEA OF INDIRILL (Pop. c. 120,000).

IOKUDDUR: Mil. Str. Island fortress in the north east of the PANTHEON ISLES.

IOLLNAR: Rui. Abandoned settlement built under an overhanging cliff in the east of MADOUR. When inhabited the settlement would have housed close to 1,000 bodies.

IOMA: see YOMA.

IONAN STAIRS, the: Int. Art. Stairs carved into the side of an escarpment and series of mesas in the region of ED'AKET in the north east of the BALGED, in BA'AKH. the stairs are old, possibly dating to the early days of the FIFTH AGE, though their purpose remains unknown, whatever they once led to long-since gone or ruined.

IONIC HIERARCHS: Pol. His. Ancient rulers of IO prior to the rise of the EXARCHS OF MIRADOR in -111 RM. The Hierarchs were the successors of the IONIC PRIESTS who, through their unravelling of the secrets of the IONIC TALPA in -648 RM in the city of GARAP, were able to wrest power from the city-state of SALOROC and unite the region, renaming it Io. However, the appearance of the Exarchs of Mirador following the APOSTATE WARS and their creation of new GOLEMS in UR SITH in -111 RM led to their downfall.

IONIC PRIESTS: Rel. Rnk. Caste of priests within the cult of THE VOID that was revealed in the IONIC TALPA rediscovered by HAAGENI nomads in a cave in the KHO HAGAR mountain in c. -730 RM. The priests rose in the city of GARAP following the sacking of the Haageni city of IDAN in -693 RM and rapidly usurped power following their unravelling of the texts in -648 RM. They seized power in SALOROC in -587 RM and became the rulers of the nation that would, some decades later, become known as IO. The Ionic Priests would spread the Void and Void. They would later become known as the IONIC HIERARCHS, which would later be supplanted by the EXARCHS of MIRADOR in -111 RM.

IONIC TALPA: Rel. Obj. Stone tablets and three inert GOLEMS⁽²⁾ discovered by HAAGENI shepherds in a cave in the western face of the KHO HAGAR mountain in c. -730 RM in the west of present-day SARASTRO. The texts were FIRMAMENTAL in nature and were written in an ancient script that the people who inherited the region had adopted as their own, so they were at least partially translatable and detailed a philosophy that became corrupted into a religion known as THE VOID. The religion spread around HAAGEN, uniting its people, bringing wealth and prestige to the city of IDAN, which became the centre of the new faith.

To the north, the city-state of SALOROC became unsettled by this and attacked Idan in -693 RM. The city was razed, its populace taken north to the city of GARAP as SLAVES alongside the tablets and the three golems. The texts were fully translated in -648 RM, finally named as the IONIC TALPA. Its secrets were established and the 3 golems discovered with the texts were animated, becoming the centre of the cult of THE VOID, which grew substantially in the decades following the reawakening of the golems. In Garap, the priests of the Void used the golems as tools of propaganda, allowing them to rise to power there in c. -600 RM, and usurp power from SALOROC in -587. The city of Garap was razed in -192 RM during the onset of the APOSTATE WARS, and much of the Ionic Talpa was lost there.

In c. -150 RM a group of mystics calling themselves the EXARCHS OF MIRADOR emerged from the GHOLA mountain and searched the ruins of Garap from fragments of the Ionic Talpa. In -111 RM the EXARCHS were successful in creating and animating fresh golems, which allowed them to quickly rise to power.

IONNAS: Set. Conurbation in a low-lying area of the northern mainland of the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS. It is a major producer of food for the mainland region of the Free-Isles of Pelasgos, and forms a part of the RED ROUTE, providing food and provisions to caravans making the journey (Pop. c. 17,000).

IONOL: Set. Major city and capital of ROMOREA⁽²⁾, to the west of the VACIVA desert along the E shores of the HASAAZ ARAAT. It was founded in 3669 RM by the exiled GAAPI prince RAFFIN BARAQ and has been capital since then.

The flooding of the Hasaaz Araat in 3821 RM was engineered in such a way that saw the city lying along the waters' edge once complete, bringing sea trade that saw it grow considerably in size. Despite this the city always exists on the brink of collapse – should anything happen to its aqueducts or water reserves the city's people will suffer greatly.

Though not directly involved in IVORY ROAD trade, it reaps the benefits of taxes and profits earned across the road, which has allowed the royal family to grow wealthy as a result. Despite the dry climate and the desert environs to its east, the city and its satellites are well-watered, with deep cisterns collecting rare rainfall, and aqueducts that direct spring water and snowmelt to them. Ionol flaunts its mastery of water, with many large fountains dominating the city (Pop. c. 179,000).

IORO MUSSANTO: m. His. Ind. Per. (B. 1532 – D. 3568 RM) influential PARTHISAN industrialist, philanthropist and amateur historian who founded the CONCLAVE OF PRESBYTERS in 3587 RM.

IOSS: Rvr. River in the west of PELASGOS, acting as a border between it and the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS. It flows for 250-miles from many sources across the TEREKION Mountains. It is mildly ATRAMENTALLY TAINTED, leaving its water tasting bitter. Plants that grow near its waters have a flaky bark that prevents them from growing large, leaving them with bowed trunks and branches.

IOSSAS: Set. Major city in the north of the FREE-ISLES, along the RED ROUTE, and as a result trade with PELASGOS is common. It is also known for its embassies and diplomats (Pop. c. 69,400).

IPANAH: 1. Geo. Endorheic scrubland in the south west of IPANAH⁽²⁾, forming part of the ARPAROH^(1.).

2. Dem. 'Ipanathi'. Ntn. A small landlocked nation in the c of KORACHANI LLACHATUL, Ipanah is nestled between the nations of SKAROS, BASSORAH⁽²⁾, THE OLD FOREST, AZAZEM, and LAASKHA. It was populated by ALMAGESTI, Laaskhan, and Skarosi refugees fleeing the effects and aftermath of the WAR OF THE ARTIFEXES, between 3014 and 3030 RM. These refugees mingled with survivors of the nation of ASIBAIA, which had been annihilated by massed bombardments during the war. Many of its cities are built atop the ruins of Asibaian settlements, and in many cases were rebuilt from the very rubble of their predecessors.

Its people have long been the target of MPERIAL slavers, with uncounted thousands of individuals carried into Skaros and Laaskha in a bid to feed its ceaseless hunger for fresh bodies. It was invaded by Korachan in 3534 RM, and its people taken wholesale as slaves, leaving it largely deserted by the turn of the century.

It slowly recovered, and in the wake of the SUNDERING OF THE KORACHANI EMPIRE in 3705 RM, its lands were also resettled by those fleeing the chaos of the empire, many of which would go on to expand north into what would by 3800 RM become Bassorah. Some DVERG from CHTHYRID also settled Ipanah between c. 3730 – 3750 RM, and their numbers make up around 5 – 8% of the population of Ipanah today, mostly concentrated in ANISOS and ghettos in other major cities. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

 Mil. Art. Ancient cenotaph dedicated to an unnamed SCION cenotaph, located in present-day IPANAH^(2.). IPANAH NU: Geo. Mountain pass across the western CHACTHORNYS Mountains, linking AZAZEM with IPANAH⁽²⁾.

IPANATHI: Lan. The primary language spoken in IPANAH⁽²⁾. It emerged between c. 3000 – 3150 RM as a creole language made up of a mix of tongues, including the ASIBAIAN of its native populace, and ALMAGESTI and KORACHANI that were spoken by refugees and immigrants. See Vol II: Languages.

IPANATHI BIT: see BIT, IPANATHI.

IPERIA: Sea. Body of water in the south of WESTERN MENISCEA, leading into the SEA OF OGYGIA in TULURKRYPH^(2.). The sea, like much of the region is characterised by gigantic monoliths uplifting from the bedrock, in particular the Chorhyst Phenomenon, which sees sheet of land some 405,000 square-miles in area peeling upwards, allowing the sea to flow beneath it

The sea itself is characterised by the impressive region known as $\underline{\text{CHORHYST}}$, where tunnels and canyons lead deep into the west of $\underline{\text{ACHAA}}^{(2)}$. The sea is difficult to navigate and is also called the $\underline{\text{WRITHING SEA}}$.

IPHEIUS: Set. Fortified city in the north of SARAGOS and home to its DACATECH armies. In 3406 RM it withstood a particularly brutal siege against the forces of HETEPHERES THE STRANGLER. VENTHIR, rich from the slave-trade, turned its eyes to Saragos, whose technological advances were envied. It attacked in 3405 RM, with Ipheius one of the major targets. The siege lasted 7-months, though the city was prepared for such a conflict and its elite troops, the Dacatechs, were experts in siege defence. The city has stood since that time as the northern-most fortress of the Technocratic Republic of Saragos (Pop. c. 75,000).

IPHIADA: Lake in the c of AHRISHEN, forming part of the course of the river ARESH⁽²⁾.

IPHIGENA: 1. His. Ntn. Early FIFTH AGE state in the CENTRAL LLACHATUL, thought to have been located between the nations of ISHIDEN and SAEDISH. It was relatively short -lived, thought to have appeared in c. -1100 RM and fragmenting in c. -700 RM. Its people are known to have traded with the people of HÁRR and, later, AAMATH.

The state was centred around the eponymous city^(2.), which was located in the north west of present-day SAUA, 60-miles from the AHRISHENI border. The city was once a thriving trade centre, overseeing the GREAT ROAD that wound its way between Ahrishen and Saua, though it dwindled during the time of SA'WEH, though was later resettled.

2. Set. Small fortified city in the south of VIRAHAN, in the eastern-most reaches of the IBELIN RIDGE. The city was built with bricks pillaged from an ancient SAUAN wall that once crowned the ridge (Pop. c. 18,500).

IPOMEA: f. Myt. His. Daughter of the SCION DENDYDRIS, herself daughter of the DEMIURGES ACHAIAH and ARIMASPI. Ipomea is one of three known siblings (the others being OKSHANA and CASSIA^(4,)), who inherited their mother's divine affinity for trees, which granted them great strength and long-life so long as the sun shone on them and they were in the presence of trees.

Ipomea was noted for her beauty and after enduring the unwanted attentions of other scions and scion-born cousins, she turned to asceticism, training in the art of war, becoming a mighty warrior, and a defender of her people in the early Third Age. She gave her life defending her homeland against serapi attacks, allowing her people to gain the edge, ending the war. She was immortalised in a great statue that now stands in a dense part of the north eastern Kastra forest in the north of AQUARIIA. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

IPOS: 1. Rvr. Seasonal river in the far north east of KHARKHARADONTIS, west of the territories of ETHISTONITH in RHINOCOLOURA, and south of the UMBRA SOKHAR. It is a tributary of the river SHIBBOLETH⁽³⁾, though only flows occasionally, perhaps once or twice every decade after rare rains in the MAUGOGNOTH region that lead to flash floods and a massed inundation of the expansive canyons that lead to the river Shibboleth.
2. Geo. Massive system of canyons in the region of MAUGOGNOTH, in the far north east of KHARKHARADONTIS. It has a combined length of 1,700-miles and is dry for the vast majority of time, though the region is prone to massive storms that coalesce a few times every 10-years, that lead to massive floods that fill the base of the canyon in a massive temporary river that flows east to the river Shibboleth, whose own course is bolstered by this flooding.

IPOTANE: Int. Geo. Shunned region in the south of MHAROKK dominated by rootless plains, with scattered basins. The basins are filled with a fine dust from which emerge ancient equine-headed colossi, their origins unknown. Scholars postulate that the ruins might belong to ancient ancestors of the TIKBALA, though there is little evidence to support this and what tikbala communities are known (particularly in eastern LYRIDIA) care little for the region.

IPPARAN: Geo. Craggy hills in the western-face of the CARTIGA Mountains populated by scattered TIKBALA tribes, which are given a wide berth my most. The tikbala are insular and territorial.

IPSAM: 1. Geo. Pass in the north east of KOLCHIS, to the east of the KULL DARGA Mountains. It is busy, with meteore mined in the north of Kolchis being moved south via this road.

2. Mil. Str. Fortress in the north east of KOLCHIS, to the east of the KULL DARGA Mountains. It guards the trade-route that links the meteore-producing north of Kolchis to the south, where it is processed and sold to the south.

IPSISSIMA: 1. Pol. SARASTROAN colony established in the far south east of SAMMAEA in 3721 RM, just 16-years after the SUNDERING OF THE KORACHANI EMPIRE. Today it is famed for its mining of SOULSTONES, which are shipped north to Sarastro for use in technarcane industries there.

2. Pol. Set. Capital city in the above colony, established in 3721 RM (Pop. c. 46,400).

IPTO: 1. Sea. Bay in the north west of KHAMID, forming the northern-most part of the SEA OF IANA.

2. Mil. Str. Fortress in the north west of KHAMID.

IPURSALAH: Rvr. River in the south east of SUMA'YA, flowing east for 250-miles from sources in the STERHBEL Mountains before meeting the coast, at the DAARKEN SEA.

IQ TOO: Set. City in the c-south east of CHEIRA (Pop. unknown).

IQABAL: Set. Settlement in the west of AHRISHEN, just 5-miles south of the harbours of TAHIREN. The settlement is a major producer of food for the city (Pop. c. 8,000).

IQARHOT: (B. 3224 – D. 3291 RM) Pol. Founding prince of the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT, which was first recognised as a nation in 3259 RM.

IQEKHABRA: Geo. Mountain-range in the north west of the mainland of the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT.

IQHSHAV: Geo. Mountain-range in the PRINCIPALITY OF SEPAHAUNAT, running along the western-coast of its mainland. The region is volcanic and prone to earthquakes and is relatively uninhabited.

IQHUL: Set. Settlement in the region of ROBAT in the c of THE SURRACH. It is known for its arable farmland (Pop. c. 4,100).

IQUAHAITH: Geo. Mountain-range in the c of NOAVATUR, acting as a natural border to the north of the HA ATH wastelands.

IRA: Mil. Str. Square-sided granite fort in the west of AZAZEM, believed to be a relic from the FOURTH AGE. The fort is half-buried in the earth between lake AGLAIA^(1.) and lake SATTAR.

IRACHANDOL: also 'the Frozen Basin'. Geo. Endorheic basin in EASTERN THANO, part of which is below sea level. It lies along the northern POLAR CIRCLE and is known for its heavy mists and resultant wetlands that freeze over during winter months.

IRAGASH: Geo. Valley in the c of METHUMN, forming part of the drainage basin of the river GARAGIRA.

IRAIA: Set. Large city in KHAR NADUL. Its main industry is making SHADOWSTEEL, and it has three large foundries that form the backbone of its economy (Pop. c. 37,000).

IRALDIR: Set. Settlement in the c west of Tatar. Its main industry is agriculture, and it is famed for its amaranth fields and its bakeries. Grain and flour cultivated here is used across Tatar, and feeds the city of CARADAS (Pop. c. 8,400). IRAM: His. Set. Ancient city built along the foothills of a solitary peak in present-day SARASTRO, occupying the area now settled by the city of ODENA. Originally settled in c. -1050 RM by HAAGENI people over what were later discovered to be far older PLAGI ruins. It was, as befitted its people, a small insular place, with little contact with other settlements, though by c. -900 the growth of IDAN to the north necessitated a good supply of granite and rock, of which Iram was the most stable. This saw the settlement grow, attracting both Haageni nomads as well as some UHLSAATI people form the south, the latter of which remain largely as labourers in the mines and quarries that emerged west of the city. The emergence and growth of the CITADEL MOUNTS to the east saw Iram change from a supplier of raw materials to the north to a hub of trade, linking the Mounts with HAAGEN and SALOROC to the north; so much so that in -792 RM Iram became officially part of the Citadel Mounts following the signing of trade treaties.

The religion of THE VOID reached Iram by c. -700, leading to the construction of an intricate catacomb complex that was hollowed from the remnants of the old quarries and mines and roofed beneath stone vaults. By this time the city was thriving, a metropolis of upwards of 100,000-people, though it was not to last. By the time of the KORACHANI EMPIRE'S arrival to the Citadel Mounts in 352 RM, Iram had already begun to shrink. The presence of the empire only exacerbated its demise. Harsh laws there led to the storming of the imperial palace by dissenters in 380 RM, most of which were slain and countered through the enactment of a harsh martial law that stymied the mercancy that the city thrived on. Iram diminished as trade died down, moving to other settlements.

An on-going war with MULCIBER allowed Iram to become an independent city in 469 RM, trading peacefully with ARKOS⁽¹⁾, Sarastro and IO. A large earthquake in 603 RM left its legendary catacombs ruined, the majority of them caved. It remained a sovereign state until 704 RM, when a deep-rooted corruption allowed it to be consumed by Sarastro, which saw the value of its old mines and quarries and established new industries, renovating the old catacombs and establishing a large open-air market within them. By c. 740 RM the city had re-established itself as a hub of trade in the region and had become known by its Sarastroan name of Odena.

IRARET: Set. Small city in the north east of LIDEA, known for its cultivation of tea and the oppressive black cathedral, built of basaltic rock (Pop. c. 17,200).

IRASCENA: Dem. 'Irasceni'. 1. Geo. Region in the north of THE SURRACH, south of the NGHALLEAL Mountains.

2. Geo. Pass across the $\underline{\text{NGHALLEAL}}$ Mountains linking the north of $\underline{\text{THE}}$ $\underline{\text{SURRACH}}$ with the south of $\underline{\text{CYHLAGHARR}}$. The pass was for many years a well-used route south for Cyhlagharri slavers though following conflict with the Irasceni warriors who developed in the region in c. 3300 RM.

3. Set. Main city in the eponymous region in the north of THE SURRACH, just south of the main pass across the NGHALLEAL Mountains into CYHLAGHARR. It is known for is martial-based culture, possibly evolved through necessity from its many conflicts in the past with Cyhlagharri slavers moving south across the pass.

Today, their warriors form part of a religious sect that is known for its drug use, who in times of war force themselves into a deep rage. A major sport and pastime in the region is the tossing of stone pillars. The activity likely dates back to the repopulation of the region in the FIFTH AGE where ancient granite pillars were discovered, some of which are still used in the sport to this day (Pop. c. 50,000).

IRASSA: Eth. People in the north of SAMMAEA, descended from a FOURTH AGE people who dominated the region. Today they can largely be found in the ETUAN WASTES, and the DAENED SULRACH^(2.), as well as surrounding regions. They share common ancestry with the ETUANI nomads, though are not affiliated with them today.

Outside of their nomadic life, they are densest in the city of ETUA.

IRAT: Mil. Str. Large fortified lighthouse in the east of the SARASTROAN colony of IPSISSIMA^(1.). The lighthouse is situated south of the southern POLAR CIRCLE and experiences continuous days of day and night in summer and winter respectively. It is also known for its exhaustive nautical library that contains a wealth of history and knowledge pertaining to Sarastroan exploration and history.

IRDA: Law. Set. Prison-city in the far north of THE SURRACH, in the southern-face of the NGHALLEAL Mountains. It was originally a fortified KORACHANI monastery, though was abandoned in c. 1600 RM, where it remained deserted for some centuries before being converted into a prison in c. 1880 RM. It is now a high-security prison where powerful and influential figures are incarcerated (Pop. c. 2,200).

IREBOSK: Set. Coastal city in the east of the HENDECARCHY of HATON in the north of MALAN. Its main industry is fishing (Pop. c. 39,000).

IREEB: Set. Small independent city in the c of THE SURRACH, along the shores of lake ZARAZESH. Its primary industry is the collection of mineralrich mud from the shores of the lake which is used in pottery as well as cosmetic products that are used across the Surrach (Pop. c. 37,200).

IREL: Geo. Mountain-range in the south west of GNOTH, forming a border with OPHIUSSA.

IREN BARA: Geo. Island in the north of the CORAL BARONIES, in the south east of SAMMAEA, to the north of the IHEDROUR ITRUSH. It is the third largest island of the Coral Baronies, and is home to various settlements.

IRENARCH: Mil. Rnk. A special military rank in AHKA, traditionally known as peacekeepers who are stationed in its cities to aid lawkeepers in maintaining peace. With the advent of martial law following the outbreak of war with KORACHAN in 3994 RM, the Irenarchs were heavily bolstered and became the first line of defence for most settlements. They train in the city of SABATIA before being stationed across the nation. It has become a matter of honour to serve as an Irenarch, and in 4002 RM the post was opened to anyone wishing to volunteer, where previously the post had only been open to men between 16 − 40 years of age.

IRESCELLA: Mil. Str. Major fort in the north east of THE SURRACH, close to the border with CYHLAGHARR.

IRESTROL: Set. Major coastal city in the north east of KASIHAAL (Pop. c. 180,000).

IRETHET: Set. Coastal settlement in the west of WESTERN LARISH that emerged in c. 3780 RM from a fortified farmstead that itself was built on the site of an ancient FOURTH AGE cultist temple whose original purpose has since been forgotten. The settlement is an agricultural centre and is also known for its clam farms (Pop. c. 8,200).

IRETTER: Set. Major city in the c south west of ROMOREA^(2.). It is the centre of a large open cast coal mining industry, and oversees dozens of satellite settlements and mines (Pop. c. 102,750).

IRGAB: Set. City in c west of VENTHIR along the course of the river TEIRIS.
It is home to much of Venthir's eastern military forces that patrol is western border with ANUBIS (Pop. c. 31,500).

IRGYALOON: Sct. City in the c north west of CUTH, to the north west of the CUTHADDUAN Mountains. It is a major source of BLOODSTONE in the region (Pop. c. 40,000).

IRIADA: Set. Settlement in the c west of AMMESH. It is a major agricultural centre and produces beans and legumes. A large central citadel and surrounding town dominates the region and dozens of smaller settlements pepper its farmlands (Pop. c. 6,200).

IRIB: Mil. Str. Fortress in the north west of $\underline{\text{TARATI}}^{(1)}$, south of the $\underline{\text{KHO}}$ $\underline{\text{INNOR}}$ Mountains.

IRIBA: Set. Coastal settlement in the south east of VENTHIR, overlooking the IAPETAN SEA (Pop. c. 4,600).

IRICORA: 1. One of the seven INDUSTRIES of RAONGEN⁽²⁾, located in the south of the empire. It is home to the throne of the GOD WHO SPEAKS.
2. Pol. Set. One seven ruling cities in the empire of RAONGEN⁽²⁾, located in the east of the empire, in WESTERN LLACHATUL. It is in control of the southernmost territories of the nation, which include its more industrialised regions. The city is amongst the most holy in all of Raong, and is home to the Mouth of the GOD WHO SPEAKS, whose TECHNARCANE throne is a place of pilgrimage to thousands (Pop. c. 623,000).

IRID: Set. Coastal settlement in the west of THE VORANDINE, overlooking the SEA OF BYRIS. Its main industry is the harvesting of EVOLAM kelp that is vital to various modern ATRAMENTAL industries, including CLONING and FLESHWRIGHTING (Pop. c. 6,000).

IRIDESCENT CITY, the: see ABALON.

IRIDRA: Set. Coastal city in the c north of GREST^(1,) in the island-continent of BROR^(1,). It stands to the E of the STRAIT OF CYNNAVAR^(1,), guarding traffic in and out of the inner sea of RATASHAH (Pop. c. 48,000).

IRIDION: Set. Major city in the c south of AKANTHRA. It is a major industrial centre and is surrounded by ironworks, which for its main industry (Pop. c. 74,000).

IRIUD: His. Set. Old capital of the nation of JOAPHASAR, which I 2921 RM was destroyed by an act of HEXCRAFT that backfired, destroying its cities and slaying most of its population, leaving the rest deformed and maddened. It remains as a ruin today, its structures obliterated and blackened, and its old territories claimed by CEHOPHELA.

IRKALLA: 1. Geo. Historically, an island about 7-miles off the south western coast of CUTH, in the south east of LLACHATUL, that features in the MYTHOLOGIA ELYDEN. It is tied to the myth of the DEMIURGE NERGAAL and his children, who bear the same name^(2.).

The island was famed for its vast caverns that reach far below the sealevel. They are flooded, with large stalactites and rock pillars that bear testament to an age when the caves existed above the water line – something difficult to imagine, even excluding the receding sea-levels of ELYDEN. Large caverns with hewn walls contain calcified monoliths on which are carved lithographs that display a record of the irkalla people that once dwelt there. Despite these records, the island bears no other signs of previous habitation; no ruins or remains of any kind, and the islands first true signs of modern history began in c. 90 RM when humans from mainland KARKAUTH settled the island, beginning construction of the BLIND FORTRESS soon after.

The waning of Elyden's seas saw the island become part of the mainland by c. 3000 RM. Today the headland occupies around 5,000 square-miles.

2. Plr. 'irkalla'. Mor. One of the original Two-and-Twenty MORTAL PEOPLES, and the children of the DEMIURGE NERGAAL. Little is known of these mortals, save the tantalising clues left behind on subterranean monoliths in the land of Irkalla⁽¹⁾, itself once an island, off the south western coast of present-day CUTH.

They had a debased culture in which the sick and dying were viewed as blessed by Nergaal, commanding positions of respect and authority. Conversely, the strong were broken of their will and used as slaves. At the centre of irkalla culture was a pervasive sun cult that forced its people underground. Where other sun cults worshipped the sun and bathed in its light, the irkalla feared it and its destructive nature – drought, PLAGUE, war, heat – and lived underground out of reverence of its raw power.

Many of these traits were reborn millennia later in the land of KARKAUTH (now Cuth), with the rediscovery of the religious artifact known as the HAND OF NERGAAL in 2236 RM. See Vol II: Asicthai.

IRKALLAN: His. Lan. Ancient language spoken by the IRKALLA^(2,). Some say that the present-day religious language of CUTHI is partially descended from it, though the truth is impossible to ascertain. See Vol II: Languages.

IRMM: Set. City in the north of PNESSA, situated along a tributary of the river YAGNOTH PHTHAN. It was the centre of the HMMEN REGIME, which emerged there in c. 3925 RM before it went on to overthrow the CAIAN monarchy in 3959 RM. The city remains politically important, but the regime took over control of the capital in IRUT MARKA (Pop. c. 42,000).

IROHAAN: Pol. Set. Ruling city in the tribe of ITTRA, in the c east of MULCIBER, in the east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS. It is overlooking the DRAKAINAN valley (Pop. c. 100,000).

IROHAD: Ind. Set. Mining settlement in the c of ALMAGEST, in the north of the GAEFANG Mountain. It is one of few mines in the area that are still operational (Pop. c. 7,200).

IRON: Set. Small city in the c of IO, famed throughout the region for the quality of its OLIVE oil. The oil is used throughout Io in religious activities and is prized as the best of the nation, and it possesses the oldest working oil presses, which are thought to date back to before the time of KORACHANI occupation (Pop. c. 15,500).

IRON ANGEL, the: (B. 1241 RM) Med. Tec. An artificially constructed being, made through archaic TECHNARCANE and biomechanical methods, representing the pinnacle of artifice required to create SICTHAINEN TECHNA in the early centuries of the KORACHANI EMPIRE. The construct takes the form of a metallic angel, with expansive functional blade-like wings, built over the mutilated body of flesh, whose origins are unknown (though it is postulated that it might be an OTHERWORLDER). The angel is autonomous and has its own conscience. It wields the SWORD OF JUDGEMENT and carries the shield known as AEGIS.

Commissioned by the ARCHPOTENTATE MALICHAR following his return to power in 339 RM, the creation of the Iron Angel took over four centuries to complete, from conception to INCEPTION. Regarded as female by those who interact with her, she has been, at various points in her career, a champion of the ATRAMENTA, an ARCHLICTOR of the ORDER OF LICTORS, and a personal CARNIFEX of the Archpotentate himself. Today she is head of the Order of Carnifexes and answers only to Malichar, or, in his absence, the CONSULITE. Some even whisper that in the millennia since her inception, she has served the Archpotentate in other ways, though none would dare utter such things in public.

Her creation paved the way for the creation of more affordable Sicthainen techna across the Korachani empire, though no attempt since her inception has surpassed the near-perfection of her construction. Indeed, some techniques were lost soon after her inception, and present artificers have thus far been unable to replicate them. Many believe that her unique nature is inherited from whatever being exists in her core, details on which remain known to the Archpotentate alone.

IRON BULWARK, the: 1. Mil. Str. Citadel of the FROSTMARSHAL Rin Izotz. Located in the western reaches of the SANEM Mountain in SABIA.

2. Mil. Str. Fortified wall in the south west of DURCHAA⁽¹⁾, running for 900-miles from the MARAGHA Mountains in the west, to the south of the plains of MHORSINA in the east. The wall serves as a first line of defence against ALMAGESTI attentions. Once manned by thousands of soldiers, it is today served by a skeleton crew which can barely cover the length of the wall, let alone provide an adequate defence. Its main purpose is to serve as a symbol, and to stall any attack long-enough for warning to reach the Durchaan armies.

IRON CATASTROPHIES, the: also 'Iron blight'. His. Ind. Soc. Historical period in the east of EASTERN LLACHATUL, centred around what is now the nation of TETHYSIA, that occurred between c. 1030 – 1180 RM. It was first documented within the quarries of THEIA, where miners found the iron they were excavating to be brittle and of no industrial or commercial use. Over the next few years other mines across Tethysia and eventually Eastern Llachatul began to show similar degradation in their yields until, within a few decades, almost all iron mines in the subcontinent shared a similar fate.

This led to a stagnation of technological progress, and many industries suffered as a result. Some regions that were dependent on the iron industry suffered for the next century, with some reverting to near-stone age technology.

This period of so-called blight lasted until c. 1170 RM, when the first new source of iron discovered in well over a century displayed no signs of corruption. By c. 1180 RM all newly-documented sources of iron were likewise uncorrupted and the Iron Catastrophies were said to have passed.

Worst-affected was the HADEAN kingdom, in what is now LIMOTH^(1.), whose industries were dependant on iron mining. The people revolted against the monarchy as the region's economy collapsed, leading to a period of strife that culminated in 1154 RM with the fracture of the kingdom.

The period brought political, economic and cultural strife, and set the entire eastern coast of $\underline{LLACHATUL}$ back decades, allowing lands to the west – such as the $\underline{INNER\ SEA}$, and $\underline{DARK\ SEA\ REGION}$ – to thrive in their place, though the easing of the situation allowed the affected nations to eventually recover.

IRON CHAPLAIN: Rel. Rnk. In the KORACHANI EMPIRE, a rank within the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, its members devoted to the sanctifying of raw iron before its smelting in the great foundries of the empire. IRON DEITY, the: 1. His. Rel. Dei. Original deity worshipped in the KORACHANI EMPIRE who would by c. 30 RM become known as the UNDYING MACHINE.

- 2. Lan. Rel. Dei. In the free lands of the east, the name commonly attributed to the UNDYING MACHINE of the KORACHANI EMPIRE.
- 3. Rel. Dei. Deity worshipped in the city-state of MENATH. The deity is a corruption of the UNDYING MACHINE worshipped by KORACHANI colonists which in the 2nd millennium RM persecuted KARKADANNI across SAMMAEA, leading to their near-extinction. The iron idols carried by the Korachani fanatics left an impression on the karkadanni, and over the years the symbol became corrupted and developed into a deity that they worship to this day. This deity is vengeful and of a harsh temper that needs sating through constant worship, which fits the karkadanni need for reverence. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

IRON DEITY, CHURCH OF THE: His. Rel. Original name for the Church of the Undying Machine that emerged in the Korachani Peninsula under the aegis of the rule of the Archpotentate Malichar, whose main goal was the spreading of Shadow – its main tenet. By c. 30 RM it had become known as the Church of the Undying Machine following reforms.

IRON EMPIRE: Lan. Soc. Common vernacular for the KORACHANI EMPIRE in the free lands of the east of LLACHATUL and elsewhere. The name originates from the IRON DEITY worshipped in early Korachan (whose name would eventually become the UNDYING MACHINE) and the reference to iron stuck.

IRON FIELDS, the: Geo. Expanse of land in the south east of TETHYSIA where brittle sandstone has been eroded by harsh winds and soil depletion, leaving behind stalagmite-like iron deposits protruding from the ground, many of which are rusted, painting the surrounding lands in a thick orange patina. Much of the iron in this area is useless, oxidised beyond use, though some areas exist where the iron is excavated and smelted into pigs for use in forges or export.

The area was once noted for its many STEELSAGES, whose stronghold was the city of AZAH, though with most of the usable iron depleted and the region under the effects of severe oxidisation, poisoning the soil, they have moved on to larger more accommodating settlements to the north, their stronghold in Azah abandoned c. 3500 RM.

IRON GUARD, the: Soc. Law. Elite policing force in the KORACHANI

EMPIRE, formally recognised in 103 RM following the actions of the

KYONI ORDER of the SANCTIFIED INQUISITION in founding a formalised policing force across the empire (though independent policing forces across the empire predate this by many decades). The Iron Guard rapidly became a powerful force in the empire, working in close conjunction with other imperial institutions such as the ARBITERS, BUREAU OF CENSORS, and BORDERGUARD to maintain peace and enforce the laws of the empire across its territories.

Most cities, districts and territories have their own law-enforcement organisations, with their own hierarchies, customs and troopers, which exist outside the organisation of the Iron guard, which is universal across the empire and acts as an elite policing force with jurisdiction across all imperial territories, with a centralised leadership based in the city of Khadon.

Individual Iron Guardians are at the peak of HUMAN health and training, and are well-equipped. They are ATRAMENTALLY-augmented to better fulfil their roles, though unlike their brethren in the STEEL LEGION, they are not VAT-BORN.

The Iron Guard is divided into many groups and factions, each of which specialises in different areas of control, protection and investigation. Some cities, particularly the larger imperial metropolises often haven their own specialised departments, such as the SEWER GUARD of Khadon, of the DROSSWARDENS of AZAZEM, and so-on.

Whereas local law-enforcement typically wear unarmoured uniforms, the Iron Guard have access to HARDSUITS, SOFTSUITS, HALFSUITS, and other specialised equipment. Normally they wear high-collared uniforms on which insignia and other identifiers are located. They are also characterised by their thin steel shoulder guards and sallet-inspired helmets Typically, their leaders are drawn from the Military patrician-families of the empire, who have come to adopt the Iron Guard's symbol of the iron manifer as their own. They often work closely with the GATEWATCH of the Kyoni Order, and often have individuals PALADINS OF THE WALL on loan to their units acting as attachés and advisors.

IRON HORSE OF DEOCHAN, the: Int. Veh. Obj. Tec. A gigantic steam-powered machine in the guise of a horse, made from steel, wrought iron, brass, bronze and hardwood, it stands some 25 ft. high and is capable of locomotion under its own power with a single IOCKEY needed to direct it and operate the steam regulator controls.

It was constructed in DEOCHAN in c. 3270 RM by a pair of technologists and was never a pinnacle of technological arts – indeed it was created as a throwback to classical models and designs intended to showcase the promise of what steam power might one day allow. With no true function, it was sold to a travelling menagerie where it became a sideshow attraction, offering rides to paying patrons for a few decades. It was later appropriated by the IRON GUARD to aid in combatting local outlaws, though it was never designed for combat, and was retired less than a year later.

It was then sold to an eccentric VENTHIRI PATRICIAN, and eventually found its way taking part in the EGRET CRUSADES, where it saw battle for decades. It was badly damaged in battle in 3462 RM and was later abandoned, finding its way into a scrap yard, where it lay rusting for years. It was later bought and restored by a penitent Patrician, and taken on the SHADOW MARCH, reaching the SEPULCHRAL PALACE in 3521 RM, where it was blessed before undertaking the road back north.

It later disappeared from records for some 18 decades, returning in 3704 RM in \underline{IO} , where it was used by $\underline{SARASTROAN}$ forces against a $\underline{KORACHANI}$ fortress, helping to besiege its walls, leading to its capture. The centuries-long tale of the Horse reached the $\underline{LICHFORT}$ in \underline{ARGEA} , and it was taken there in 3706 RM, for an audience with the $\underline{LICH\ KING}$, after which it was lost again.

Many claim to have seen it in various places, both within and without the LOW-EMPIRE, though their veracity is dubious and few now know it by its original name.

IRON KING, the: (B. 3942 RM) Pol. Common name by which Isarnon, the Regent of LUTO, is known. He is insular and wears white robes and an adamantine mask. Some claim he is a SET, though his closest aides and confidantes are never seen propagating such rumours. The eunuchs and judges (advisors) that serve the Iron King are largely mute and few are those with direct access to him. His most trusted vizier is Katab the Many; the only judge to have full access to the Iron King (his status being the source of his name).

IRON MANIFER, the: Soc. Law. The symbol of the IRON GUARD in the KORACHANI EMPIRE. Originally a mounted force, the iron guard was known for its manifers and the full-armour their leaders wore in antiquity and the symbol remained long after the majority of the forces eschewed their mounts.

IRON MANTLE: 1. Rui. Largely-ruined fortified redoubt in the south east of present-day CYHLAGHARR. Originally constructed by engineers from ERON SOTH between c. 380 and 450 RM north of the badlands of ASCORYCA, in defence against increasing OGHUR attacks. The redoubt was instrumental in keeping the region free of oghur influence, though a major incursion in 703 RM left the wall ruined, and much of OPRET destroyed, its populace taken as slaves.

The wall fortification was partially restored and renovated following the rise of the CHILD'S REALM OF OPHAR in 3119 RM, but subsequent wars with Cyhlagharr forced Ophar to retreat south east of the river OPHAKR, leading to the abandonment of the wall in c. 3305 RM.

The redoubt was over 100-miles long during its peak in c. 420 RM, and consisted of deep trenches and, later, iron-clad walls and heavily armed fortresses placed at regular intervals.

2. Sup. Tec. A TECHNARCANE augmentative orthosis that is worn by SHAPERS to enhance and widen their range of powers. They are commonly manufactured and utilised by most post-industrial civilised lands around the INNER SEA, including the SOCIALIST REPUBLIC OF ALMAGEST, the REFORMED EMPIRE OF SARASTRO, the KORACHANI EMPIRE, and the SECULAR REPUBLIC OF PARTHIS.

The mantle usually takes the form of a technarcane engine that is worn on the back, covering the shoulders like a mantle (indeed, this is the origin of the common name) and which are integrated with the users via <a href="https://dx.com/dx.co

Though similar to an iron mantle, TECHNACHI, and HEART ENGINES can be distinguished in a few ways that are commonly understood within the technarcane fields:

An iron mantle normally takes the form of orthoses or technarcane grafts or a harness or HARDSUIT applied to a sapient womb-born mortal with an individual personality and full mobility.

A technachi is generally a series of orthoses or grafts based around a vat-born creature or a CLONE of artificial origin, bred and incepted specifically for the task at hand, and will, more often than not, perform like an automaton with little personality or individual characteristics.

A heart engine is a more extreme form of technachi, often encasing a mortal body (be it vat- or womb-born) within a technarcane engine that can at times encompass entire rooms and, which by default, is immobile and commonly catatonic. See Vol IV: Technarcana.

IRON MARKET, the: Com. Str. Large market in the city of KHADON, KORACHAN, enclosed beneath an expansive wrought iron framework encased in glass, to which it owes its name. It is known for its produce, much of which caters to the rich and powerful patricians and freemen of the capital. It is well-guarded and theft is harshly punished.

IRON MAZE OF DHARGUSHAN: Sup. Geo. Str. A monolithic geometric subterranean expanse deep beneath the nations of BELEGOR, LIEVTHRA, SYNCHTHONITHA, Dhargushan is a labyrinth of cubic hollows that range in size from a few feet across to thousands of feet, rivalling the size of some chambers of the PRISON CARCERI. The entire expanse stands within a great deposit of oxidised iron that covers every wall, floor and ceiling of this immeasurable pit. Attempts at extracting the iron have invariably failed, leading scholars to believe the metal walls of Dhargushan is something other than the iron that features in its common name. Some believe that it was the work of a demiurge long ago, and others claim it is an annex of the Prison Carceri, though there are no known links – physical or otherwise – between the two subterranean regions.

Flakes of rust bigger than a man tumble down the walls to be slowly eaten by RUST SLUGS. Outcrops of cubic growths, not unlike oversized bismuth formations, cover the larger expanses, on which grow strange lichens and mosses, which provide sustenance to colourless and eyeless vermin.

Various expeditions have been mounted into the depths of Dhargushan over the years. Many of the chambers closer to the surface are difficult to navigate, and even through the aid of shapers wish an affinity for metal, only a small portion of its expansive labyrinthine depth have been explored. Rumours abound of IRON ROAD, the: Com. Geo. Part of THE RED ROUTE, commonly held to be the part of the Route maintained by the HIGH-EMPIRE OF KORACHAN following the empire's SUNDERING in 3705 RM. The road passes through SKAROS, LAASKHA, AZAZEM, KORACHAN and PELASGOS, beginning in SKAROSIA and ending in TEREKON, for a total of around 3,500-miles.

IRON SHADOWS: Mil. Org. Famed mercenary company in Phyrr whose members are slaves heavily indoctrinated in the CULT OF THE IMPERIARCH, making them amongst the IMPERIARCH'S most devout worshippers. They are the children of slaves, recruited at a young age and trained for ten years before being sent on their first mission, in which many die.

They are known for their versatility and brutal effectiveness, and specialize in unconventional warfare, including assassination, sabotage, and guerilla tactics, most of which are considered suicide missions where only the most fanatical of individuals are expected to fight, if only to prove their loyalty to the Imperiarch.

IRON TREATY, the: Pol. His. Event in the history of the FOURTH AGE empire of IUJACHTHÉ that is remembered today for leading to the exiling of the VADJAAKIN, resulting in their slow decline into the wretched people that we know today.

IRON VALLATION: Mil. Arc. Line of fortifications in the south of HARITH⁽²⁾ in c. 3590 RM, in what was then the TETHYSIA, during the civil conflict that eventually saw Harith⁽²⁾ become an independent nation. The lines were expansive, covering some 120-miles, and are largely abandoned today.

IRONBACK: Mil. Tec. A type of REVOLVER, very heavy, typically of military service. The weapon has been manufactured by PATRICIAN HOUSE SOUAD for over 1,000-years, since 2923 RM from its manufactory in the east of LAASKHA, just outside the city of LAANA.

IRONHEART TREE: Int. Flo. Evergreen trees that grow in particular soils that are rich in iron in the east of EASTERN LLACHATUL, particularly temperate regions of THETIS and TETHYSIA. Its sap is white, but slowly turns brown or red on contact with air as the iron-rich liquid oxidises.

Ancient mortals were able to dry this sap and work it into a metal-like substance that was used in the creation of dangerous weapons with long flexible blades, similar to an URUMI. Though the techniques used in the construction of these blades is now largely lost, many of these weapons remain as relics in Thetis and Tethysia. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life.

IRONS: Lan. Slang term common in the KORACHANI EMPIRE and other lands that where POWDERGUNS are common, used to denote them. Though knowledge of powderguns is widespread throughout the more advanced parts of the empire, reference to them as irons is rarely made by HELOTS of work-slaves or even those of higher rank. It is generally lower-ranking members of the military castes and groups such as Iron Guards, irregulars, auxiliaries and mercenary forces like the WHITE LEAGUE that make use of the term.

It is unknown where the term originates, though it is commonly attributed to the White League, who are bullish and blunt with their words.

IRORA: Dem. 'Iroran'. Ntn. Nation in the c east of the island of ISEA, in the south of ELYDEN. The nation is largely populated by the descendants of HUMAN slaves from the nation of DATEPHA, to the south and east, who are in turn descended from KORACHANI invaders whose failed siege of Datepha in 3104 RM left thousands of Korachani soldiers and missionaries stranded there, taken as slaves by the VAPULIM.

Irora was, for a long time, shunned by the Datephan people. Though we do not know why, it is believed that the FOURTH AGE ruins of a great metropolis west of the ORMARIKH mountain are responsible for their 'aversion'. By c. 3400 RM the Datephan culture had evolved, with many of the human slaves granted their freedom, able to leave the lands. Most moved west and repopulated the ruins of the old metropolises, where they rapidly grew in number, becoming recognised as the nation of Irora by 3400 RM. Despite their Korachani heritage, they share little empathy with their northern ancestors and have refused contact and trade with either of the empires of THE INNER SEA, and have abandoned their ancestors' worship of the UNDYING MACHINE, turning instead to ABACINISM. See Vol III: Extant Nations and Realms.

IRORIEL: 1. also 'the King's Forest'. For. Wetland forest in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of PALUS⁽¹⁾. It is the favoured hunting grounds of the PALAN royal family.

2. Set. Farming settlement in the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of PALUS^(1.). It is known for its boar, pigs and truffles (Pop. c. 1,300).

IROT: Geo. South western arm of the IROTHA Mountains along the border between SARAGOS and NAARETH. Unlike the Irotha, the riches of Irot lie mostly beneath the surface and many small mines pepper its southern face. The ores are transported to the river DODRONTA, where they are then moved downstream to the city of MAARCH, where they are smelted and worked.

IROTHA: Geo. Main mountain-chain in NAARETH, around 600-miles long, running form the north west of the nation to the far east. Its south eastern face is rich in ores, many of which are at the surface, oxidised and corroded beyond use. It is named after the children of the DEMIURGE NYARLOTH, the IROTHANI, and is thought to feature in their ancient history in some form, though there are few if any ruins from this period of mythohistory, though there are some ancient ruins to its south, possibly dating back to the THIRD AGE.

IROTHAN: 1. PIr. & Dem. 'Irothan! Mor. One of the original Two-and-Twenty MORTAL PEOPLES, and the children of the DEMIURGE NYARLOTH. They were similar in build to humans though their skin was of a bluish tint, with red ridges down their backs and eyes that glowed as though with an inner light. Like their father they were masters of TECHNARCANA and were renowned for two materials that made them unique amongst the mortals — a quicksilver-like liquid that through SHAPING and the applications of magnetism could become rigid and take on one of various forms that it 'remembered'; and an artificial bone-like substance that was grown, and was the basis for much of their engineering. Some such artifacts are sometimes excavated in the PORPHYRI PENINSULA today, commanding mighty prices.

Little is known of the early years of the irothani people, but by the THIRD AGE they had grown into a populous and technologically advanced culture that dominated EASTERN SAMMAEA, in what was known as KATHAR BYAAT.

The lands of Kathar Byaat suffered towards the end of the THIRD AGE, first when Nyarloth became afflicted by a terrible wasting disease, and again when he was slain by his brother RACHANAEL while the two were attempting to craft a SOUL-ENGINE to save Nyarloth. Though Nyarloth's body had expired, his essence remained, interred within the Soul-Engine that became known as the PARYMESIA. Over time many irothani came to worship the Engine rather than the Demiurge's essence. This left Nyarloth weakened and in a state of torpor within the Engine. The irothani rulers, known as SEPTS, knew the error of this idolatry and tried to persuade the people that their god was the spirit in the machine and not the machine itself, but few would listen.

This schism led to a civil war that decimated the irothani, bringing to an end one of the largest and most long-lived mortal empires in Elyden. They later scattered and dwindled, eventually disappearing after mingling with the humans that had spread to their old lands. Indeed, the people that today inhabit the Porphyri peninsula are believed to be the descendants of such distant unions. See Vol II: Classification and Taxonomy of Life: Asicthai.

2. Lan. Language spoken in PORPHYR, named after the ancient irothani people^(I.) who once dwelt there in the THIRD AGE. It is unlikely that irothani is similar to the language spoken by the irothani, given the thousands of years that have passed, as well as outside influence from present-day nations. See Vol II: Languages.

IROTHANAN: His. Lan. Now-extinct language of the IROTHANI. The extant language of PORPHYR, PORPHYRI, has some links with ancient Irothani. See Vol II: Languages.

IROTUR: 1. Geo. Dry savannah region in the south east of THETIS, south of the KOTHA TYRAL Mountains, to the north of the city of the same name.

2. Set. Major city in the south of THETIS, to the south east of the SEA OF ERUTHEA. It is the largest permanently-settled city in Thetis, where the NEMIS nomads have little power and are rarely welcomed within its walls.

The city is watered by expansive vaulted cisterns that link to aquifers beneath the surface. The cisterns are thought to date back to the ancient FOURTH AGE city of HESIA, which was abandoned centuries before the founding of Irotur, due to the waning of the Sea of Eruthea. The ancient city is believed to have been a large metropolis, its ruined foundations stretching far from the present-day walls, and Thetishi archaeologists have been digging in the ruins for years, thought by many to be searching for something specific.

The city is home to many FIRMAMENTAL scholars, who sift through the marble tablets unearthed, gleaning insight into the life of the old city's culture, its beliefs, who the people of Irotur strive to emulate (Pop. c. 1,500,000).

IROTUR, STRAIT OF: Sea. Narrow strait in the south east of LLACHATUL, dividing the SEA OF ERUTHEA from the larger SEA OF MIROVEA, between the nations of RHEA and THETIS.

IRRADA: Set. City in the south east of the DESOLATION OF ASTUDAN, in the valley known as DHUTRA. The city claims to be the oldest free-city in ELYDEN, with proof of occupancy going back as far as the THIRD AGE. Local legend claims the city was liberated from tyranny by a SCION of the DEMIURGE AVRAHAM and later became the first free-city in Elyden. The city is secular, and though small, its residents are proud and strong (Pop. c. 15,200).

IRRAY: Set. Small coastal city in the west of CUTH. It is a major harbour in the region, and its transport ships link all the coastal cities in the region (Pop. c. 17,000).

IRREDIVIVA: Geo. Island 550-miles off the western-coast of SAMMAEA and part of the KORACHANI colony of TAVVADRA. The island and its neighbours were the site of major testing of ATRAMENTAL weaponry between c. 2700 – 3100 RM. This left the once-idyllic landscape twisted and tainted by an unnatural form of the Atramenta.

IRRERAN: Geo. Reef in the south of the SHIBBOTHA ISLES, in the south west of SAMMAEA, in the north of the waters of the IHEDROUR ITRUSH.

IRRI: Set. Coastal settlement in the south west of SAELEH^(1,). Its main industry is the production of AHUREDH wine (Pop. c. 8,000).

IRRIDESCENT CITY, the: see CHATOYANT.

IRRIGUEN: Geo. Region in the c-south east of AHRISHEN known for its tobacco production.

IRSALLIEL: For. Large region of sparse forest and scrub in the HARÉSHK, ranging from the south east of PALUS⁽¹⁾ to the south west of ALAMUT.

IRTAR: Set. Fortified settlement in the south east of the tribe of AUEREN in the far north of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER (Pop. c. 4,000).

IRTHA: Geo. Large flat expanse in the west of the PELASGOSI peninsula, along the border between Pelasgos and the FREE-ISLES OF PELASGOS, dominated by heaths, that has largely escaped the corruption, both 'natural' and man-made, of ELYDEN.

IRUEINA: Geo. Vertical rocky pinnacles in temperate/cold region of MENISCEA, acting as a border between the south east of IAISHA and the north west of CEHOPHELA.

IRUGNA: 1. Geo. Island off the north western coast of BROR. It is a dry land, though its coastal regions are humid and vegetated.

 Dem. 'Irugnan'. Ntn. Island-nation in the FAR HEMISPHERE, off the north western coast of BROR^(1.), 'discovered' by the explorer VREGL in 1304 RM.

Today it is ruled by the ANCIENT Arka Zebbrix, thought by others to be a late-generation SCION. Their second in command is Justiciar V'edd Aathrex, a HALFBLOOD of ominous persuasion. Together they conquered the Confederacy of Irugna, taking each of its sovereign states in 3401 RM, establishing a harsh rule that persists to this day. The state has been beleaguered by the MALEFACTOR HORDES of the south western plains since before this time, and has struggled to maintain full order along the peripheries of its territories.

Beginning in 3978 RM the north western coast of the island began to be colonised by PARTHISAN colonists, leading to a period of war that lasted until 3985 RM, after which a treaty was signed between the Ancient of Irugna and the colonists, declaring an end to hostilities and a united front against the Malefactor Hordes. The colony has been known as ABDAKROS since then. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

IRUHU: Rel. Geo. Spiritual rock in ancient KORACHANI myth. It remains, though has been forgotten by the advance of the Korachani empire.

IRUIIN: Soc. Cultural celebration and COMING-OF-AGE RITUAL in PERGOST and SABIA where young men, typically aged between 13 and 16 years head out to sea in large groups accompanied by a few guardians around the time of the winter solstice. Once in open sea they spear giant SERPENTFISH, which they then haul to shore and allow to freeze naturally. During this time, they camp together, sharing stories, with the guardians teaching the children valuable skills and lessons. Once the fish has frozen, they shave off strips and dip them raw in cooked whale fat and salt. Once everyone eats a slice they stand in a circle and bump heads, becoming 'family'.

IRUM: Mil. Str. Major fortress in the south of the PARTHISAN colony of ABDAKROS^(1.) on the island of IRUGNA^(1.). It guards against potential attacks from the MALEFACTOR HORDES.

IRUT MARKA: Pol. Set. Capital of PNESSA since 3243 RM. It is built on ancient THIRD AGE ruins that were exposed through the diminishing of the SEA OF SUPPA over the past centuries. The remains of the city were used as the foundations of a new Pnessian fortress in 3105 RM and a settlement appeared around it soon after that (Pop. c. 800,000).

IRVEA: Ser. Settlement in the south west of AZAZEM, that became famous in 3174 RM when it was widely reported that a statue of MALICHAR MARTYRED in a chapel was observed bleeding blood. It was later discovered that the blood is in truth an oily liquid tainted with rust, though its source is still unverified. It was eventually declared a miraculous event by the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE in 3388 RM and the housing chapel was subsequently expanded into a SANCTUARY where pilgrims can lodge.

The settlement has grown steadily since then, attracting pilgrims from the surrounding region en route to the SHADOW MARCH (Pop. c. 6,200).

IRY: see ISLAND STATES OF IRY.

IRY, ISLAND STATES OF: Geo. Pol. Federation of island states off the western-coast of SAMMAEA, centred on the peninsula (once-island) of ETARTES, though it includes many islands that form part of the greater COTRIAN archipelago, stretching south west into the BATHASHAL OCEAN. Its people worship a nihilistic deity known as the COSMIC JOKER. See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

IRYNAN CURRENT: Sea. Surface ocean current in the east of the SEA OF ABRAXA that flows to the north west along the western coast of SAMMAEA before dividing into three – west where it connects with the EASTERN BRORI CURRENT, north west towards the LARISHI CURRENT, and north where it joins the LYNNAEAN CURRENT.

ISAA-NEPHI: Pol. Soc. Bus. PATRICIAN HOUSE in the KORACHANI EMPIRE known for being a member of the ATROPI HOUSES. Its ancestral home is the city of BASILEA, and it is descended from the old ruling BASILEID DYNASTY. It is now based in the CAMASSIAN STRONGHOLD, with various garrison settlements across the south west of AZAZEM.

Its main role within the cooperative is ensuring that the cocktail of chemicals and ingredients that make up DROSS is correct. Its ATRAMENTISTS also oversee the volume of medicinal and antibiotic additives are correct. See Vol II: Patrician Houses.

ISA'TEH: Rui. Stepped city in the tribal territories of SUUR'KA in the north east of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. The city is built into a large stepped pyramid and dates to the early FIFTH AGE OF MORTAL LIFE, where it is documented by ancient traders as being tinted red and white from ochre and marble columns, respectively. Today it is a ruin.

ISABELLINE: 1. also 'Champion of the Scales'. f. Myt. His. Per. In the mythologies and ancient histories of ELYDEN, a 2nd generation SCION and daughter of AIU. She was chosen by her mother to be a champion of balance and had her face taken from her, becoming the Champion of the Scales, eking out justice to her cousins and others of scionic blood that have acted out of balance.

She was renowned for the bombastic cleaver-like sword she carried and the tattered leather robes she wore that were said to bear the faces of those she vanquished. Her fate is unrecorded. See Vol IV: Scions, Children of the Gods.

2. Set. Fortified settlement in the c of south east of the $\underline{\text{DESOLATION OF}}$ ASTUDAN. It is a dependency of $\underline{\text{GÂTHA}}$ and forms a part of the $\underline{\text{GÂTHAN}}$ $\underline{\text{ROAD}}$ trade-route (Pop. c. 8,200).

ISACCHIR: Rvr. River in the north of AYAD, flowing north for 375-miles from sources in the TALAL and LERASA Mountains, before reaching the coast at the BAY OF ORAT.

 $\underline{\textbf{ISAHAR}} : \textit{For.} Sparsely wooded region in the north of \underline{\textbf{LIDEA}}, north west of the \underline{\textbf{BURKAN}} Mountains.$

ISAHEA: Set. Settlement in the north of LIDEA. Its main industry is the cultivation of tea plants (Pop. c. 5,200).

ISAKRAS: Set. City in the c of SKAROS, known for its hides, vellum and mutton (Pop. c. 7,500) ISAMAS: Mil. Str. Fortress in the north west of ALMAGEST, overlooking the border with KOLCHIS. It is built atop a few older Kolchisi fort which dates back to a time when the area was part to Kolchis.

ISANTH: Sec. Small city in the c south of DURCHAA^(1.), north of the region of MHORSINA. It is at a crossroads of local trade-routes and distributes imports from the south with the rest of the nation. It is named after a THYTHIAN ruin on which its foundations were built (Pop. c. 14,000).

ISAPAHIS: Set. Small coastal city in the east of the PARTHISAN colony of IBANNEM⁽¹⁾. It has a deep harbour and much of the LODESTONE mined in the region is shipped to Parthis from here (Pop. c. 13,600).

ISAQ: Mil. Str. Major military stronghold in the far east of CHEIRA, on the west of the island of VAHALTHO.

ISARA: Set. Coastal city in the south west of SKAROS, owned by HOUSE AMBTOR. The city is centred around a series of drydocks and ship breaking yards, worked by SLAVES (Pop. c. 29,000).

ISARANNA: Rvr. Wetlands in the c south west of AQUARIIA, along the course of the river ISARRA.

ISARATU: Law. Ind. Set. Prison-manufactory-city in the north of SARASTRO. it lies along the RED ROUTE, and many goods produced in its prisons are sold to merchants travelling the trade-route (Pop. c. 36,000).

ISARIC AGHREGNIS EUDALEON: m. Alc. Mys. Edu. Per. (B. 999 RM – D. ?) ALMAGESTI polymath most recognised today as the ALCHEMIST who penned the EUDALEON CODICES. The Codices comprise notes, artwork, drawings, treatises and other musings that were never intended to be published or even be seen by others. The notes were found following Eudaleon's disappearance in 1438 RM and were collected together into six volumes, each of which had a specific subject and was given its own name, later changing hands across the centuries.

ISARIUS: 1. Set. Fortified settlement in the west of KOLCHIS, in the eastern foothills of the BAND⁽²⁾ Mountains (Pop. c. 4,300).

2. Mil. Str. Fortress in the west of KOLCHIS, in the c north of the BAND⁽²⁾ Mountains, guarding the pass of the same name⁽³⁾.

3. Geo. Pass across the c north of the $\underline{BAND}^{(2)}$ Mountains, once linking the east of $\underline{ALAM\ BETHYL}$ with the west of $\underline{KOLCHIS}$. The pass is ill-used these days and crossing it is considered dangerous in summer, and all but impossible in winter.

ISARRA: 1. Geo. The shallow dry valley that dominates the interior of AQUARIIA. The valley was, as recently as 3000 RM, a part of the then much-larger SEA OF ASTER (itself an extension of the SEA OF LIAKARRA), though the slow retreat ELYDEN'S seas led to an advance of its coastline, leaving much of the Aquariian coastal cities devastated and landlocked. This in turn led to the growth of the river Isarra, the course of which increased by around 200-miles.

2. Rvr. River flowing for 1,110-miles south west through AQUARIIA from sources in the BLACK MOUNTAINS, before emptying in the SEA OF ASTER.

ISATA: Set. Settlement in the c of VENTHIR. Its main industry is the cultivation of cotton (Pop. c. 6,000).

ISATHOT: Set. Small city in the tribal territories of LINARIS, in the south of the GROWING MOUNTAINS of MULCIBER. It is famed for its trained falxes, which are used as messengers throughout the Growing Mountains (Pop. c. 15,000).

ISATIN: Set. Settlement between the regions of IBLIS^(1.) and ESTIA in the c of LYRIDIA (Pop. unknown).

ISATZ: see ICE PRINCESS, THE.

ISATZ, TEMPLE OF: also 'Temple of the Ice Princess'. Rel. Str. Temple in the far north of the HENDECARCHY of DERAEIA, in MALAN, in which lies the perfectly preserved body of the princess ISATZ.

ISAWHAN: Oth. Lan. A common word used for OTHERWORLDER within the KORACHANI EMPIRE, a The word is somewhat derogatory, used by commoners and work-slaves in an off-handed way in reference to the beings, which to most are distant creatures, rarely ever seen.

ISA WHANIM: also 'Otherworlders'. Vol. Philosophical propagandist treatise penned by the historian ARRAM OZIO while he was governor of AZAZEM. It goes into detail on the physiognomy of OTHERWORLDERS and the philosophy behind their creation and existence, coming to the conclusion that they are a threat to MORTALS, who were the true heirs of the MATERIAL PLANE. The book was endorsed by the CHURCH OF THE UNDYING MACHINE, leading to around two millennia of bigotry towards otherworlders and HALFBLOODS, though this attitude began to lessen in the early fourth millennium, until the present status quo in which halfbloods are a common-enough sight in most urban areas and which are generally accepted. There is more racism towards otherworlders in general, particularly in Azazem, largely due to their unearthly nature and supranatural abilities, though attitudes have softened greatly since the dark days brought by the Isawhanim.

ISBAAHA AMNICIA: (B. 1593 – D. 1611 RM) Pol. His. Princess of the AMNICIAN DYNASTY in AHRISHEN, and daughter of queen SHEKZEIETH II. She was famed for her beauty and by the age of 16 was already beloved for her humanitarian work.

By the autumn of 1611 RM, the queens' health had deteriorated greatly and most members of the court were expecting her to die relatively soon and preparations were already being made, with Shekzejeth's consent, for Asbaaha's ascent to the throne.

This new attracted the attentions of her cousin AQEEL OF TANDENDER, who was a part of the Ebusheni nobility and who had never been to AHRISHEN in his life. He arrived in Amnica just as the queen died, and carried out a coup d'état, killing Isbaaha, and taking the throne for himself, beginning the rule of the House of Tandender in Ahrishen, which lasted over 350-years.

ISCALAN: Set. Small city in the north of LOEGRESS^(1,). Its main industry is agriculture and it is a major producer of persimmons, many of which are exported (Pop. c. 33,000).

ISCHIA: Pol. Set. Ruling city in the tribe of THOLOT, in the far north east of MULCIBER, in the GROWING MOUNTAINS. Ischia is a major source of rock salt, which finds its way across SAMMAEA, via the SALT ROAD (Pop. c. 52,000).

ISDRUH: Set. Settlement in the east of ELAT. Its main industry is the mining of tin (Pop. c. 4,000).

ISEA: also 'the Isle of Beast'. Geo. Large rocky island-continent in the south of ELYDEN, located between the south east of SAMMAEA and the west of BROR⁽¹⁾, dividing the MIROVEAN OCEAN in the north from the SAMMAIDU in the south.

It is relatively small (around 750-miles long and around 1,100-miles wide, with a large inland sea known as the ADHES further reducing its land area) and is located between the 39th and 48th parallels south giving it an idyllic climate and a thriving population composed mostly of humans and the largest known VAPULA population in ELYDEN, concentrated in the nation of DATEPHA, east of the ORMARIKH mountain. It is home to four nations, including the aforementioned Datepha, as well as IRORA, DHAT, and IDRIIS. It is also known for its many GRIFFINS and other exotic animals and beasts, most of which are believed to be remnants of the first ages of mortal life.

ISEDA: also 'the Flesh Tower'. Int. Str. Tower marking the eastern-most boundaries of the wastes of ELIPHAO in the south east of THE SURRACH. It is shaped like an obelisk, perhaps 50-feet high and is made of a singular flesh-like stone that is soft to the touch and on close inspection looks like skin, with pores and follicles, even scars in places. It is thought to have links to KHALHAT.

ISEKET: also 'the Horse'. Ast. Con. Constellation in the NORTHERN HEMISPHERE. See Vol II: Constellations.

ISESETH: Dem. 'Isesethi'. Ntn. Nation in the north west of BROR^(1.). See Vol III: Extant Realms and Nations.

ISFET: Rui. Ruins in the south of NAARETH, incredibly ancient, thought to date back to the dawn of the mortal races on ELYDEN. The place has been explored over the centuries, many artefacts and relics stolen from their resting places and, in many cases, exported. The ruins are weathered beyond recognition today and only a few pillars and tell-tale fragments of ancient colossi remain today.

ISH DRAPA: Rvr. River in the west of SUOR, flowing south for 240-miles from sources in the NARAMAS and ESHUNNA Mountains before reaching the BAY OF MEZRA.

ISH EBBEN: Rvr. River in the east of SUOR, flowing south from sources in the AYALA and DINIKARA Mountains for 235-miles before empty in into the BAY OF ABALA.

ISH HABBAR: Rvr. River in the c of SUOR, flowing west for 280-miles, from sources in the JHAPARA and MADHARA Mountains before joining its parent, the river LOTAN, at lake KALAR.

ISH RATA: Rvr. River in the north east of SAMMAEA, flowing south across the border between the north east of the SOLEYN TERRITORIES and the north west of SUOR for 405-miles, before meeting its parent, the river LOTAN.

ISHAHAAT: 1. Geo. Massif forming the southern-most part of the ASHER Mountains between the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of EDICULE^(1,1) and the far south of AHRISHEN.

2. Geo. Pass across the Ishahaat massif, linking the LEVANTINE region of south eastern AHRISHEN with the HARÉSHKI CITY-KINGDOM of EDICULE^(1.). The pass forms a part of a larger route that goes farther west, across the CARTIGA Mountains into LYRIDIA.

ISHAKAR: Set. Settlement in the far north east of KARAKHAS. It is known for its fine pottery which is sold to merchants passing by along their circuit of the Red Route (Pop. c. 6,300).

ISHAN: Pol. Set. Independent city in the c east of THE SURRACH, atop the highest mound of the ROSHHOT hills. The city is a major military presence in the region and is renowned for its well-crafted rifles and its cavalry (Pop. c. 30,000).

ISHAR: Set. Catacombs under the city of INDERACHAN in the TEMPLAR STATES, in which the famed MUMMY OF INDERACHAN is housed.

ISHARIK: Set. Small coastal city in the far north of ESHIR⁽²⁾, overlooking the Bay of Eshir⁽¹⁾. Its main industries are fishing and iron mining (Pop. c. 12,500).

ISHATA: Rel. Dei. Deity at the centre of the religion of ISHATISM, who is worshipped specifically in the region of CYHLAGHARR but also by other OGHURS in the north of SAMMAEA. She is a guardian-figure representing fertility and warfare; two traits that oghurs consider sacred (despite their barbaric reputations, oghur women are highly respected in their societies). They recognise the ATRAMENTA as the root of their artificially-crafted race, and pay tribute to the gift of fertility that many created races are denied.

Ishata bears many similarities with the proto-goddess of ancient KORACHANI culture that predates the KORACHANI EMPIRE. Ishata has matriarchal priestesses ordained with the authority to speak and act on her behalf. Each CLAND usually has a large physical depiction of Ishata (often built of metal or stone) which was traditionally transported with the cland in its nomadic lifestyle. Today the statue takes centre place in the temples of Ishatism, and is removed during festivals, when it is carried across the settlement. See Vol IV: Deities and Pantheons.

ISHATAL GULLA: (B. 3938 RM) Pol. Present queen of SALOROC.

ISHATISM: Rel. Religion observed by the OGHURS of CYHLAGHARR, centred around the divine figure known as ISHATA. See Vol IV: Religions and Cults.

ISHHIMMAT: Pol. Set. Capital city of XYRPHAAT⁽³⁾, situated in the c north east of the nation (Pop. c. 1,300,000).

ISHIDEN: His Ntn. Ancient FOURTH AGE nation that existed in the approximate area of present-day SAUA that was destroyed following the WAR OF SCOURGING. Remnants of Ishiden would linger into the early FIFTH AGE, becoming the HÁRRAN barbarians.

ISHINAL CULT: Mys. Sup. Org. Mystery SHAPER cults common in the north west of the AMMASHI⁽¹⁾ peninsula, particularly in TAAN AN, though they are also found in lesser numbers in METHUMN and northern KEPHUAAN. The cults serve as places where like-minded shapers can meet and share ideas with each other in the form of a club-like environment. They also train new generations of shapers, though some feel that their initiation practices are archaic and needlessly convoluted.

There are hundreds of different Ishinal cults scattered across the above territories, with the largest located in CUR APON in Taan An. Most are generalist, training all shapers regardless of SPHERE, though smaller cults might only accept shapers of a particular sphere. They are responsible for the training and, perhaps more importantly, the policing of shapers in their parent nations. Interestingly, the latter is not accomplished through formal or dedicated enforcement, but rather an honour system where individual shapers serve as watchdogs to their peers. Any shapers observed to be abusing their powers would be confronted by the leadership of the relevant cult and reprimanded, with more severe punishment reserved for repeat offenders. This system has served the shapers of the region well (some would say too well, with many outsiders believing they act in their own self-interest), though the system is open to corruption.

The cults originated in the early centuries of the Ammashi⁽³⁾ nation, in c. 1250 – 1350 RM, in the region of AMMAN RACHAS, and spread from there, though they became isolated from one another during the AMMASHI STRUGGLE, developing their own customs and traditions. After the signing of the AMMASHI TREATY saw order restored to the region and the territories of the once-expansive nation of Ammash divided into disparate independent states, the cults remained cut off from one another, sharing little other than a name and origins with each other.

In Taan An, it is believed that the Ishinal cults were responsible for propagating the now universal belief that the royal house of the EMPEROR is not a spiritual or religious birthright, but merely a material one. This is thought to preserve a sense of mysticism around the cults whose magickal nature would otherwise be secondary to that of the ruler. The shapers of the Ishinal Cults also often rise to positions of power, including the rank of Praefect, and it is not uncommon for an Arch-praefect to be a member of an Ishinal Cult.

ISHKAR: Set. Major city in the north of ESHIR^(2.), forming an administrative centre to the government on the mainland. It maintains many links with the capital city AGAIR to the north, and forms part of a great national trade-route, that leads south to JIRAIR^(2.), via ANAFA. It is larger than the capital, and is also considered more urbane by most outside the capital. Like many larger cities in drier areas of Eshir, it is known for the colourful canopies that criss-cross its streets and markets, providing shade

It is named after a now-landlocked island that was home to a fortress whose people once controlled the long peninsula of JOUKIR. The waning of ELYDEN'S seas (Pop. c. 321,000).

ISHMMARRA: Geo. Large peninsula dominating the south west of SAMMAEA, separating the SEA OF KRIHIEK from the larger BATHASHAL OCEAN. The nations of ACHRABAL, CEGANE, CENGUISSE, LHACCIDA^(2.), the SYCHTAN PREFECTURES, and VAUN are located in their entirety on the peninsula, and the south western-most territories of SIMBARA are also found there.

ISHMMARRAN TRAIL, the: Com. Geo. Major trade route in the south west of SAMMAEA, passing through the nations of SIMBARA, VAUN, LHACCIDA⁽²⁾, CEGANE, the SYCHTAN PREFECTURES, MULIEBRA, NIZZUM, and YSACYITHAIA, serving as an important link between them. See Vol II: Major Trade Routes.

ISHLASCAR: Geo. Expansive plains in the south west of SKAROS, stretching from the BAY OF ZENID in the north to the city of IKATHIA in the south.

ISTHMAJ: Geo. Island *-miles south of the island of ARCHAEDON^(1.), forming the second major island of the eponymous island-state^(2.). It is an unspectacular isle dominated by rough rocky terrain, pine and spruce forests, and a thriving variety of fauna, including various birds, for which it is known.

ISHORUTH: Set. City in the c of ALAM BETHYL, along the eastern bank of lake Grethel. It is a hub of culture and trade, and has large communal residences that are open to travellers, many of whom spend months there, spending the dark winter months as labourers and workers to support the city (Pop. c. 34,000).

ISHRAF: Geo. Scrubland basin dominating the far east of OPHIUSSA.

ISHTALAR: Set. City in the north west of the HENDECARCHY of AMILLAERE^(1.) in the c of MALAN. It is built within a small endorheic basin and is situated within a circular wall that separates it from the land without. A spring-fed river that naturally leads into a small lake in the basin is dammed along the wall, allowed to fall down into what is now a small artificial lake. Most of the water that would otherwise enter the endorheic basin is used in industry, watering its people, or to provide hydroelectricity (Pop. c. 78,000).

ISHTANA: Set. Coastal city in the c north east of SALOROC, overlooking the SEA OF SÛN. It is a stop along the course of the RED ROUTE (Pop. c. 27,800).
