There is someone else, though...

A patron of mine by the name of CodePurple had made an interesting connection that I'd like to note. If we head back over to that "Bruce Wayne" YouTube channel that I mentioned prior, we can notice that the channel URL doesn't line up with the name of it at all. In fact, it's pretty damn unique.

Our Daryl Prater here actually has a Myspace page with that same URL, and here, we can see various photos of this guy all over it. The URL lines up, the page name matches, and it seems that this, this just might be our guy.

This inevitably begs the question, though: what happened to him?

I also ended up finding a Twitter profile with the handle @darylpraterv3, [hah], ironically the name that we couldn't find on Reddit, with the same face as the guy from Myspace. This account was made in 2014, though, and unfortunately has no tweets dig into...

A beacon of life that I was able to stumble upon from him, though, falls in the Battlefield game forums of all places. Here, we can find posts from a darylpraterv3 that are from December of 2016, and more from darylpraterv2 that were posted in January of 2017. It seems to me that he's engaging in actual ordinary conversation with other people, which leads me to believe that he just might have halted his antics regarding Alanah...

Closing Remarks

Daryl Prater is a surprisingly common name. While we've dug through two of them, luckily, we've seemed to find the guy, and although I wasn't able to dig up anything past January of 2017, it seems as if he's doing alright. Seeing as Alanah has outright stated that he's stopped attempting to contact her, it's safe to assume that he'd either gotten help, or simply moved on with his life...

Nonetheless, u/darylprat will forever go down in history as a creepy Reddit account. What started as an overbearing obsession with an online personality had led to an incredibly dark online rabbit hole. While Daryl's online footprints seem to fade away after early 2017, it's, at the very least, comforting to know that he didn't snap in August of 2016, carrying out his grim plans as hinted at with u/darylpraterv4...

Thanks so much for watching, I'll see you in the next one. I love you all, and good night.
