

Social climber

JULY 2021

Ann was a college dropout who worked as a receptionist and made decent money. However, seeing the life of the wealthy customers of her hotel made her envious of them and their life of luxury.

One day, she met Nora, a young Saudi girl who was spending a semester abroad in the States. Her family accompanied her to make sure everything was ok as they are quite apprehensive about their daughter spending time in such a liberal society. Her family was staying in a suite in the hotel, so Nora often picked her family up from there when leaving to the city to show them around.

Ann eventually became friend with Nora, who was eager to meet new people as a newcomer.

Nora was a top-notch student in Economics and had a brilliant future in front of her. However, she was also bored with her life of hard work and would have liked to enjoy life a bit more if possible.

Ann couldn't make obvious to her how precarious her position was: sure, she also lived in New York but she lived pay check to paycheck and her friends were also in her same situation. However, she showcased her party lifestyle to Nora, who was eager to know more about such a different lifestyle from hers.

On the other hand, Ann couldn't but notice how the financial means of Nora were apparently endless: she was driven to college by a private personal chauffeur, she could easily afford any dress she saw in the most expensive boutiques in New York and much more.

Despite that, one day Nora opened up with her friend about the fact that she regretted having to follow such strict behavioural rules and not being able to enjoy college life to the fullest.

One day, Ann, who often visited Nora in her apartment, found on Nora's laptop some information about a body swapping device Nora's family had recently acquired. As soon as she noticed this, she began to think about it, until one day, when Nora was slightly tipsy, she opened up about her idea: she suggested the two swap bodies for the remainder of the semester and enjoyed living each other's life.

SOCIAL CLIMBER

Nora was initially against this plan as the idea seemed her too crazy but then she was slowly talked into her by Ann and finally agreed. She got the device delivered there by some accomplices back in Saudi Arabia, then the pair proceeded with the swap.

Nora was instantaneously amazed by the beauty of her new body and got lost contemplating herself in the mirror for some time after the swap. What kind of life could she have, with such a body and no inhibitions whatsoever? No judgemental parents and society to please, no grades, no pressure at all! She was also worried that Ann would totally ruin her academic scores but she had already given her all the assignments requested to complete the semester, so, in addition to her preexisting grades, there should be no problems there.

SOCIAL CLIMBER

On the other hand, Ann was also fascinated by her new exotic looks. She had always found dark hair and eyes intriguing, so seeing them on herself made her oddly excited.

Combining that with the enormous wealth she would have access to made her feel she got the best deal in the swap. Goodbye to cheap purses and dresses! She would never have to commute to her working place by public transportation anymore and new social circles would be accessible to her now!

Moreover, the body swapping device would be accessible to her only from now on, so she would have absolute control on the eventual date of their reversed body swap.

SOCIAL CLIMBER

So Ann started to give a new twist to the Arabic girl's life, spicing it up with more nightlife and dropping some classes, to the utter shock of her friends and classmates. However, given the previous work done by Nora and the essays she had previously prepared for Ann to send in, her grades did not drop for now so her family didn't suspect a thing about what had really happened.

The parties Ann was now attending belonged to completely different social circles thanks to Nora's wealth and connections. Combining Nora's wealth and social circles with Ann's social skills and party-like attitude always made the new girl the centre of attention in social situations. Moreover, Ann noticed how her exotic features were attracting more attention compared to the ordinary blonde, blue-eyed beauties that usually dominated the party scene.

SOCIAL CLIMBER

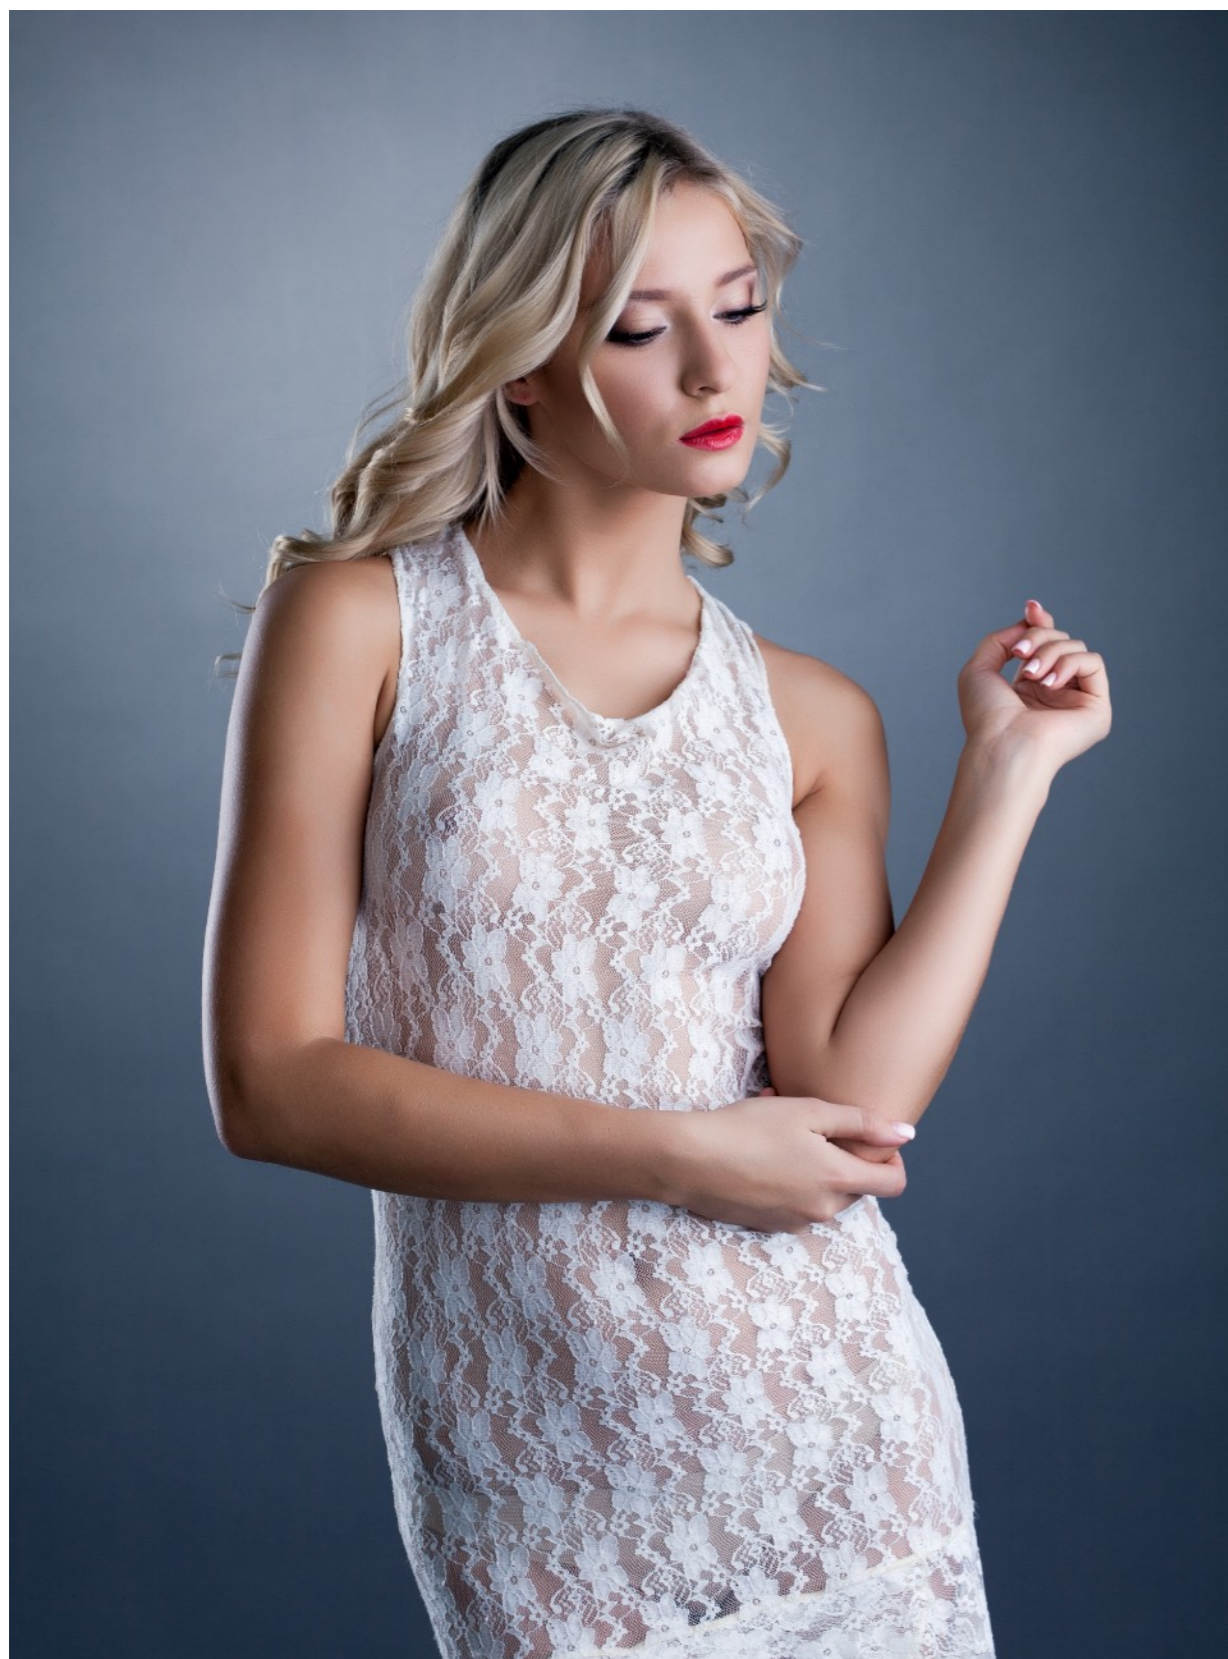

As Ann in Nora's body continued to project her persona onto Nora's life, her party life started to dominate her schedule as she stopped attending classes altogether, to the shock of her old friends, who started commenting on how the Western lifestyle was corrupting her good nature.

Her dresses got more and more revealing and flashy as Ann's taste and lack of modesty became less and less restrained by any attempts to pass more convincingly as Nora. People around her obviously noticed her quick change in personality but the physical resemblance was perfect so nobody suspected a thing.

Once, Ann was invited to a gala where all the wealthiest students of her faculty were present. There she learned to appreciate expensive wines compared to the cheap beer she was used to drink just to get wasted with her old friends. Her lack of inhibitions also got lots of attention, especially when she quickly got tipsy due to Nora's inherited metabolism, which wasn't used to alcohol at all. This drew to her some welcome attention from the boys, while alienated any sympathy from the classy, well-mannered girls attending the event, not that that bothered Ann in the least.

SOCIAL CLIMBER

Meanwhile, Nora was getting used to Nora'd body and readjusting herself to a simpler life made of long and dull working hours as a receptionists where no intellectual work was required, as she just had to put on a pretty smile and be nice to customers. She found it slightly degrading but found it surprisingly exciting to serve the same upper-class people she used to see as her peers and be deferential to them.

Her new job also gave her much more time and energy to go out and party in the evenings, which she never really managed to do before. Socialising was fun, she learned, and much more enjoyable than putting effort into her studies and assignments to be at the top of her class.

She was completely in love with her new hair and facial features as she had always secretly admired Caucasian beauty and loved fitting in so well in the local community. She also had to spend some time learning which makeup palettes fitted her better now with her lighter skin tone as her old, expensive makeup was unfortunately useless. She resorted to the cheap products she could afford with Ann's meagre salary and managed nevertheless a flawless look.

SOCIAL CLIMBER

Nora also learned to enjoy her newfound freedom and learned to express her sensuality more freely, without fears of being judged for the way she dressed or behaved. Ann's friends seemed friendly and absolutely not judgemental, although not highly educated or wealthy. With some hesitation she joined them and embraced the restricted choice of cheap pubs and clubs she could now afford to enter with her friends. Dating guys who worked as gym trainers and truck drivers was something different to what she was used to but also exciting in an intoxicated way. Being treated as a princess for all her life repressed the submissive side of her personality, so living as a low-class working girl made this, together with some natural lust for life come out all at once and make her enjoy her new lifestyle more than she could admit to herself.

The nightlife however was fantastic as this body seemed to attract lots of attention. Mixed with some of her old charm and good mannerisms she became even more popular than the old Ann. When asked why she got suddenly so polite, well-spoken and charming she smiled and told them it was the result of a behavioural class she was attending to improve her relationship with her wealthy customers.

She quickly learned how to dance and enjoyed going out for drinks regularly, also thanks to her body's old metabolism, which was already well adjusted to this lifestyle.

SOCIAL CLIMBER

After a few months, when the time was up and they were expected to meet again to swap bodies back, Ann didn't show up as expected but left Nora a hand-written note, which explained her how she had destroyed the body-swapping device and how her plan had been to keep Nora's body and life all along. However, she felt sorry for Nora and left her a check worth 10k $ to cover her rent and life expenses for a while if she needed a break from her job to recover from the shock.

Nora collapsed on her bed for the surprise and cried a lot. How could she have been so naive? Her old life was taken away from her for good now, with her heritage and her wealth! Being forced to live as a working class, uneducated Western girl was too much for her pride, despite how much this stirred her up.

After a while she went straight into the bathtub and took a warm bath, with her clothes still on. She tried to reflect more on her situation now. Ann had to be back to Saudi Arabia now that her visa had expired and she now had enough saved to get there and try to meet her again to hopefully make her change her mind.

SOCIAL CLIMBER

However, it took Nora much more than the savings she got from Ann and a few weeks to trace the real Ann as the girl had not returned to Saudi Arabia as expected, but rather withdrawn all the money she was able to get from Nora's bank account and was now enjoying a lavish lifestyle in Ibiza, Spain, far from her family and in a social environment where having fun was the only activity people had.

It took her several months to trace the American girl in her body and move to Ibiza. By that time she had run up of cash so the only way she could find to quickly raise some money in a foreign country with no higher education was to work as a stripper in a local club, crowded with horny tourists.

At this point, Nora's modesty was long gone and she had completely surrendered to the idea of using her body as a mere tool to get what she wanted, included pleasure. Her determination to resume her old, modest life as Nora was also fading, so she sometimes wondered what was she going to do now that she was close to meeting the cause of her troubles again.

One of the clients of the stripper club she was working for knew the fake Nora, so the blonde used all her charm to extract all the information she needed to find her that day.

SOCIAL CLIMBER

She left the stripping club right away, still wearing the skimpy outfit that now was her work uniform and found Ann in her old body chilling by the sea, sipping a cocktail. The brunette was wearing extremely short pants, such a shame for her respectable, modest persona!

"I've been tracing you" - she simply said to the real Nora - "I knew you'd come back to me. I see you have also changed, though. You're an exotic dancer now, right?". Ashamed, Nora didn't know what to say. "Your old life doesn't exist anymore anyhow" - Ann added, lighting up a cigarette - "I withdrew from college and devoted my life to having fun here!". "My good name, my family, that's such a shame, even worse than my destiny" - cried Nora in a last flash of her old personality.

"Come on, you're just like me now, aren't you?" - she asked to the blonde seductively - "all about feeling pretty and having fun, huh?".

Nora couldn't lie to herself anymore and nodded silently. Then Ann smiled and continued "Why don't you join me in my parties? I can help you out financially and we can have fun together? You know what, you're really hot in that outfit, how about you break another taboo, and we have some girl-on-girl action?". As she said that, she got closer to Nora and kissed her on the lips, sealing her fate while making out with the girl who had stolen her life.