

Scroll of Revelation #113

D12 MINORLY ENCHANTED SWORDS

This sword drains the color from whoever wields it, leaving them in shades of black, white, and grey.

Every time this sword clashes against another weapon or solid surface, it sends out a brilliant flash of sparks.

Snapping your fingers causes this sword to unsheath itself and fly to your hand or resheath itself if it's already drawn.

A new tally etches itself into the metal length of the blade every time the sword claims a life.

Speaking the sword's command word causes it to shrink down into a hair pin making it incredibly easy to conceal.

This blade's metal changes to match whatever solid natural element it's pressed against {ex. silver, wood, diamond, etc.}

You always know the cardinal direction you need to travel to find the last creature whose blood this blade tasted.

A spell can be stored within this blade, and the spell is unleashed the next time you score a critical hit with the weapon.

An archfey supposedly kissed this blade before gifting it to its first owner. Fey creatures fawn over whoever wields it.

If you are critically hit by a melee attack, you can sacrifice this blade to cause the attack to miss.

Speaking it's command word transforms it into a pair of large scissors to help in harvesting organs from slain monsters.

A halfling-sized clockwork squire carries, cleans, and fetches this sword for you. That's all the squire can do.

