BACKSTORY

Born amongst a tribe of the the wild plains, Rhada gained great renown as a fierce warrior of her people. She was known for singing battle hymns while leading the charge during combat, her voice as radiant as her spear was deadly. Her life was changed the day tribe raided a caravan that had entered their territory. Upon opening a rune and gem encrusted chest that was amongst the spoils, Rhada was possessed by a demonic spirit that had been trapped inside. Now a prisoner in her own body, Rhada could only watch with horror, screaming silently in her mind as the demon used her to slaughter every member of her tribe before blacking out.

Upon awakening, Rhada was back in control of her body and the demon was gone but the damage was already done. Her entire tribe was destroyed. Drenched in the blood of her people, she vowed her eternal vengeance, with the spirits of her tribe by her side.
