

THE BARRE SINISTER

ABOUT

The Barre Sinister is a tavern frequented by spell-jamming pirates. Built in the palm of a giant, stone hand that orbits the sun, the Barre does not have formal docks. Ships paying a visit usually pull in along the side of the hand or the thumb, mooring their vessels in whatever way seems best.

A sea version of this map is also available, as is a version without the cannons.

NOTES

The origin of the hand is unknown, as is the reason why it is currently in orbit. If asked why they built a bar here, the tavernkeeper will reply that there was space for a bar on it. So I built a bar on it.

The tavernkeeper may refer to the Barre as “the finest tavern on this big, stone hand.” They may also refer to it as “the worst tavern on this big, stone hand.” Technically, both statements are true.

If the party inquires about the many stains on the tavern floor, the tavernkeeper will simply reply, “Blood.” In all likelihood, a surprising number of people have died here.

There are only three rooms for rent at the Barre. Most visiting crews will spend the night on their vessels.

The Barre has its upsides and downsides. The main downside is that it’s kind of a dump. On the other hand, they probably have the best selection of drinks most people will ever see. There’s liquor here the party has never heard of, most of which is from planets they’ve never heard of either.

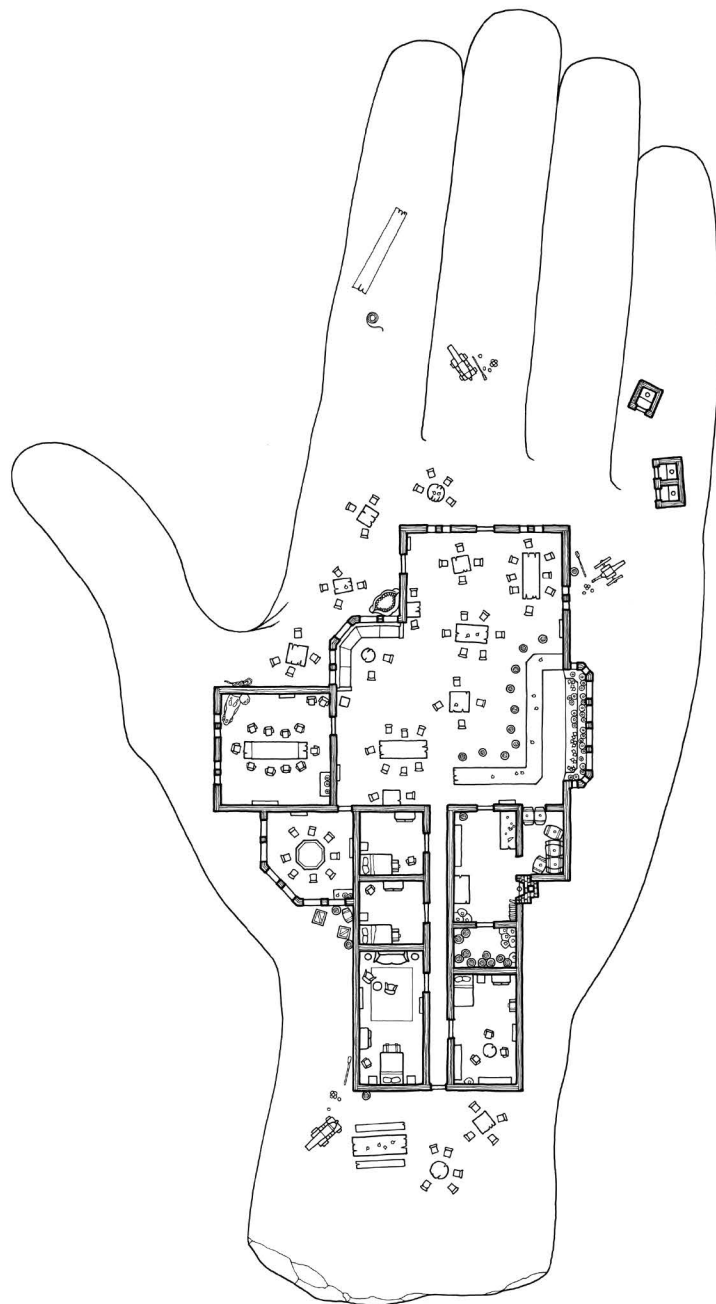

Since pirates make up most of the Barre’s patrons, several cannons are positioned around the tavern. These are meant to deter anyone looking to bring their customers to justice.

Someone supplies food, liquor, firewood and other necessities to the Barre. This may be the pirates themselves or it may be someone else.

Crews docking here may need to use a gangplank to disembark.

Various oddities around the Barre include a set of shark jaws near the entrance as well as a crocodile skull and a giant’s skull in one of the side rooms.
